A coming storm it forebodes—
Let us fly—let us fly.)

ROD: Remain here,
And quickly disclose to me
Who the assassin has saved—
Who has conveyed him to a place of safety?
Obey! or you shall die!
(The Soldiers surround the Swiss Peasantry.)

SOL: (Fear now overwhelms them.)

JEM: (What do I hear?—Alas!)

EDU: (Già m' ingombra il terrore!)

SVIZ: (Pietoso cielo accogli
Il voto, il priego nostro!
Dall' ira di quel mostro
Ne salva per pietà!
Di noi che mai sarà?)

MEL: Ciò ch' ei fece; ognum di noi
L' oserebbe. Ardir, amici.

ROD: Ah! tremate—Il reo svelate.

MEL: Sciagurato! questo suolo.

ROD: Quel ribaldo circondate;
(A Soldati, che afferrano Melchtal.)
E sia tratto al mio signor.
Su, via, struggete; tutto incendete:
Orma non resti d' abitator.
Strage e ruina sia la lor sorte.
Lampo di morte è il mio furor.

SOL: Lampo di morte è il suo furor.

JEM: Sì, sì, struggete; tutto incendete;
Ma in ciel v' ha un Nume vendicator.
Te forse un giorno farà perduto
L' arco temuto del genitor.

EDA MEL PES. E SVIZ: Sì, sì, struggete, tutto incendete;
Ma in ciel v' ha un Nume vendicator.
Verrà un gagliardo, il di cui dardo
Saprà punire un oppressor.
(Malgrado l' opposizione de' suoi Compagns, Melchtal è circondato e trascinato da' Soldati di Rodolfo.)

Fine Dell' Atto Primo.

EDW: I am now overcome with fear!)

SWISS: (Merciful Heaven! kindly listen
To our wishes—to our prayers!
From the vengeance of this monster
Graciously relieve us;
Or what will become of us?)

MEL: What he has done, so would each of us
Have done.—Take courage, friends.

ROD: Ah! tremble, or give up the guilty one.

MEL: Miscreant!—this fair land
Is not the seat of treachery!

ROD: Surround and seize that villain;
(To the Soldiers, who surround Melchtal)
And let him be taken before my lord.
Approach—destroy or burn all things
Leave no trace of living habitation;
Let slaughter and ruin of all be the lot;
My fury shall be like the breath of death!

SOL: His fury shall be like the breath of death!

JEM: Yes, yes,—destroy or burn all our chattels;
But above there is a God avenging,—
Justice may perhaps one day overtake you,
Through the trusty bow of my father!

EDW. MEL. FISH. & SWISS: Yes, yes, all our chattels destroy or burn;
But above there is a God avenging!
A man will arise whose arrow true shall carry punishment
To the tyrant.
(Notwithstanding the opposition of his companions, Melchtal is surrounded by the Soldiers of Rodolf, and made Prisoner.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Valle profonda tra le Montagne del Rutli—A sinistra si scorge parte del Lago de' Quattro Cantoni.—Crepuscole.

Entrano Cacciatori—Pastori sono scopriti in dietro recando le uccise belve.

CORO DI CACCIATORI: Qual silvestre metro intorno
Si congiunge al nostro corno?
Mesce il daino il suon morente
Al fragore del torrente;
Ed allor ch' estinto resta,
Chi il gioja può imitar?
Il furor della tempesta
Può quel giubbilo uguagliar.

CORO DI PASTORI: Dal raggiante lago intorno
Cade il giorno;
Il suo placido sereno
Sparve intorno;
La' campagna del villaggio
Di partenza è a noi messaggio.
Già cade il dì.
(Partono.)

CORO DI CACCIATORI: La molesta voce è questa
Del monotono pastor.
Di Gessler risuona il corno;
Ciascum riede al suo soggiorno
Già cade il dì.
(Partono.)

Entra Matilde, distaccandosi furtivamente da' Cacciatori.

MAT: S' allontanano alfine!
Io spero rivederlo,
E il cor non m' ha ingannato;
Ei mi seguia—Esser non dee lontano—
Io tremo!—Oimè!—Se qui venisse mai!
Che fia quel sentimento
Profondo, misterioso,
Di che nutro l' ardor, che amar pur oso?
Arnoldo amato, ah! vieni!
Te sol desia quest' alma!
Da te lontana non ritrovo calma!
Vieni, a spegner l' ardor,
Che mi accendesti in seno!
Dal dì che il braccio tuo
A me salvò la vita,
L' immagin tua scolpita
Nel core mi restò.
Ah! vieni; l' amor mio
Nasconder più non so.

MATILDA: Selva opaco, deserta brughiera, Qual piacer vostra vista mi da; Sovra monti ove il turbine impera, Alla calma, alla calma il mio cor s'aprira. Eco sol . . . . Eco sole . . . . mie pene udira, le . . . . mie . . . . pene udira. Tu bell'astro al cui dolce riflesso, Il mio . . . passo vagando sen va, Tu mi addita ove Arnoldo s'aggira, A lui solo, a lui so lo, il mio cor s'aprira. Eco sol . . . Eco sol le mie pene udira. Eco sol le mie pene udira, udira. Eco sol le mie pene udira, ... udira.
Eco . . . . sol, eco . . . . sol.
Entra Arnoldo

ACT II

SCENE I

A deep Valley among the lofty Mountains of Rutli—On the left is seen part of the Lake of the Four Cantons—Twilight.

Enter Huntsmen—Shepherds discovered in background carrying slain wild animals.

CHORUS OF HUNTSMEN: Hark! the rural sounds around us
Are blending with our mellow horns,
The death-cry of the gentle deer rings
With the torrent's roar
Yet, when the chamois dies
The hunter rends the skies with shouts
The raging of the tempest
Alone can equal this joy!

CHORUS OF SHEPHERDS: From the placid lake above us
The day is departing;
The mild rays of the setting sun
Are disappearing;
The village evening bell reminds us
That the hour of repose is nigh;—
Fast fades the day.
(Exeunt.)

CHORUS OF HUNTSMEN: These are the tedious hymnings
Of the shepherd so monotonous;
The stirring blasts of Gessler's horns
Should summon Huntsmen to their homes;
Let us depart.
(Exeunt.)

Enter Matilda, furtively, as they go off

MAT: At last they have departed!
To see him once more, I trusted,
And my heart cannot have deceived me;
He followed me—far off he cannot be.
How I tremble!—Alas!—should he hither come!
What means that inward sentiment,
So deeply felt, so incomprehensible,
With which my love I feed and cherish!
Arnold, my beloved, oh! hither speed!
My heart fondly pants for thee
Away from you I feel no joy!
Come, and appease the burning flame
That you've kindled in my breast!
Since the day your arm so lusty
Nobly snatched me from destruction,
The image of your form so manly
On my heart has been engraven.
Ah! come;—no longer can my fondness languish
In hopeless concealment.

MATILDE: Wild shady wood, whose deep shadow surrounds me, I prize you more than the pomp of a throne; here midst the storm that beats wildly around you, with the man that I love . . . . I would make you my home.
Echo, ... echo . . . . Alone you hear;
Echo . . . alone . . . . you hear these words I say. May some bright star, with a holy influence, Guide and direct me wherever I roam; Tell me, I ask in spirit so lowly, How . . . . I may reveal to him this heart's love? Echo . . . .
Echo, alone you hear me. Echo al-

ARN: Perdona il mio venir,
I passi miei,
Incauto, sino a te spingere osai.

MAT: A mutua colpe è facile il perdono.
Arnoldo, io t' attendea.

ARN: Comandami, Matilde;
Fuggir dagli occhi tuoi;
Che abbandoni l' Elvezia, il padre mio;—
Morte trovar sopra straniera terra
Sceglier per tomba inospital foresta;—
Parla,—pronunzia un solo accento.

MAT: Arresta.
Tutto apprendi, sventurato,
Il segreto del mio cor.
Per te solo fu piagato,
Per te palpita d' amor.

ARN: Se il tuo foco è uguale al mio,
Se per me ti parla amor,
Al piacer ch' io sento, oh Dio!
Non può reggere il mio cor.
Ma tra noi qual mai distanza,
Quali ostacoli vi sono!

MAT: Ah! non perder la speranza;
Tutto il ciel ti dette in dono.

ARN: Dolci affetti! grati accenti!
Di piacer colmate il cor.

MAT: (Posso amarlo!—Quai momenti Proverò di gioja e amor!)
Riedi al campo della gloria Nuovi allori a conquistar.
Potrai sol colla vittoria.
La mia destra meritar.

ARN: Riedo al campo della gloria
Nuovi allori a meritar,
Quanto in premio di vittoria
Cesserò di palpitar!

A 2: Il core che t' ama
Sol cerca, sol brama
Di viver con te.
Ah! questa speranza,
Che sola m avanza.
Fia sempre con me!
(S' ode un calpestio.)

MAT: Alcun vien—Separiamci.

ARN: Potrò vederti ancora?

MAT: Al nuovo giorno,
Quando sorga l' aurora,
Nell' antico tempietto,
Al cospetto di Dio,
Da te riceverò l' ultimo addio.

ARN: Oh! sorpresa bonta!
(Cadendole a pied i bacia la mano.)

one, you hear me, you hear me, ... you hear me.
Echo . . . . alone, echo alone.
Arnold enters.

ARN: Pardon my coming, I pray,
If my presence offend you;—
My steps have wended here unconsciously.

MAT: A mutual fault is easily pardoned.
Arnold, I have been expecting you,

ARN: Your commands, Matilda, give,
Thought they be to fly your presence
To abandon Helvetia, and my father dear;
In a strange land to meet an ignoble death,
Or in a forest to fill a nameless grave;—
Speak,—in one word my doom pronounce.

MAT: Stay,
And learn from me, unhappy man,
The secret of my trusting heart.
For you alone it grieves,
For you alone with love it beats.

ARN: If your love with mine be equal,
If for me your heart pleads,
The joy which I shall feel—oh, heaven!
My happy heart will scarce sustain!
But in our states what difference!
Think of the obstacle thus raised.

MAT: Ah! do not abandon hope—;
Heaven will favor our wishes.

ARN: Sweet avowal! welcome accents!
They suffuse my heart with delight.

MAT: (Then I may love him!—
What sweet hours
Shall I now have of joy and love!)
Now return to the field of glory,
Fresh laurels there to win and wear;
Returning victorious,
My hand will command your merit.

ARN: To the field of glory I'll return,
To win and wear fresh laurels there,
Returning victorious,
My merit may command your hand.

TOGETHER: Of this heart so loving
The great, the longing hope
Is to live with you.
Ah! that hope so cheering,
The only one fate yields me,
Will ever be with me.
(A footstep heard.)

MAT: Some one is coming—we must part.

ARN: When may I see you again?

MAT: At the earliest dawn
Of tomorrow's opening morn,
In the ancient tabernacle,
And in the Almighty presence,
I will receive your last adieu.

ARN: Oh! happiness unlooked for!
(Kneeling at Matilda's feet, and kissing her hand.)

MAT: Forza e lasiarti!

ARN: Ciel-Guglielmo!—Gualteno!—oh parti, parti.
(Matilde s' allont)

Entra Guglielmo Tell e Valter.

GUG: So o non eri in questo luogo.

ARN: Ebbene!

GUG: Un colloquio ben grato
A sturbar giunsi.

ARN: Eppure io non vi chiedo
A che mirate.

VAL: E forse,
Più che a ciascun, è a te mestieri udirlo.

GUG: No. Ad Arnoldo che importa
S' egli abbandona i suoi,
S' egli in segreto aspira
A servir quell' indegno?

ARN: E donde il sai?

GUG: Dal fuggir di Matilde e dal tuo stato.

ARN: E tu mi vegli?

GUG: In questo cor lasciasti
Sin da jeri il sospetto.

ARN: Ma se amassi?

VAL: Gran Dio!

ARN: Se amato fossi,
I supposti sarian—

GUG: Veri.

ARN: E il mio amore—

VAL: Empio saria.

ARN: Matilde—

GUG: Ella è nostra nemica.

VAL: Ha nelle vene un abborrito sangue.

GUG: E vilmente egli cade a' piedi suoi.

ARN: Ma di qual dritto il cieco furor vostro—

GUG: Un solo accento, e ti sarà palese.
Schietto, Arnoldo, rispondi:—
Ami l' Elvezia tu?

ARN: Voi parlate d' Elvezia?
Ah! più non v' è per noi.
Io lascio queste rive
Abitate dall' odio,
Dalla discordia, dal timor—fantasmi
Che le rendono orrende:
In arene men triste onor m'attende.

GUG: Allor che scorre—de' forti il sangue
Che tutto langue,—che tutto è orror,
La spada impugna,—Gessler difendi,
La vita spendi—pel traditor!

MAT: It is time I departed.

ARN: Heavens! William Tell! Walter!—Depart—oh, depart!
(Exit Matilda.)

Enter William Tell and Walter.

WIL: You have not been alone in your seclusion.

ARN: Well, what then?

WIL: I fear I have disturbed an agreeable tète-a-tète.

ARN: I ask no explanation
Of this intrusion.

WAL: Yet, perhaps,
More than any other you should ask it.

WIL: No. To Arnold what can it import
That he abandons his friends,
If in secret he aspires to serve
That unworthy man?

ARN: How do you know that?

WIL: By Matilda's flight and your confusion.

ARN: Then you have watched me?

WIL: In my bosom,
Suspicion has been excited since last night.

ARN: But suppose I love?

WAL: Great Heaven!

ARN: If my love should be returned,
Your supposition then would—

WIL: Be true.

ARN: And my attachment—

WAL: Would be ill placed.

ARN: Matilda—

WIL: She is our bitter enemy.

WAL: Abhorent the very blood that runs in her veins.

WIL: At her feet he meanly cast himself.

ARN: By what right does your fury blind—

WIL: One single question will explain all;
Truthfully now, Arnold, reply:—
Do you still love Helvetia?

ARN: Do you speak of Helvetia?
Ah! it no longer exists for us;
I am about to leave the land,
The abiding-place of hatred,
Discord, and cowardice—phantoms
Which to me make it odious;
Honor calls me to a less unhappy land.

WIL: When the blood of the brave is flowing freely,
When all is yielded to ruin,
The tyrant will defend your recreant sword;
You will risk your life for Gessler

ARN: Al campo solo—onor m' attende, Ardir m' accende,—m' accende amor Desio di gloria—m' invita all' armi, E di vittoria—ardente il cor.	ARN: To the camp my honor summons me, Valor and love divides my heart; The hope of glory invites me to arms. My heart now pants for victory.
VAL: Estinto un vecchio—Gessler facea; Quell' alma rea—svenar lo fe'. Da noi vendetta—l' estinto aspetta, E la domanda,—la vuol da te.	WAL: An aged man has been murdered by Gessler; Ruthlessly has his life been taken. On all of us his blood calls for vengeance— From you it more than all demands it.
ARN: O, qual mistero!— Un vecchio ei spense!—O, Dio!	ARN: What mystery is this? He put an old man to death!—Oh, Heaven!
VAL: Per te moria piangendo—	WAL: He expired while weeping for you.
ARN: Ed è?—	ARN: Name him.
VAL: Tacer, degg' io?	WAL: Shall I disclose his name?
GUG: S' ei parla, il cor ti squarcia.	WIL: If he speaks your heart will break with grief.
ARN: Mio padre!—	ARN: It was my father!
VAL: Sciagurato! Ei stesso fu svenato, Ei stesso cadde spento Per man del traditor.	WAL: Unhappy man! He was the victim; He was put to death By the hand of the traitor.
ARN: Ah, che sento!—O, delitto!—oimè—io moro— Troncar suoi dì quell' empio ardiva, Ed il mio acciar non si snudo? Il padre, oimè! Mi malediva! Ed io l' Elvezia allor tradiva!— Cielo! mai più lo rivedro?	ARN: Ah! what do I hear! What iniquity! I shall die! The tyrant wickedly has taken his life; And yet my sabre reposes in its sheath; Alas! my father was needing his son's aid, While I was even then betraying Helvetia, Heavens! never again shall I behold him!
GUG: (Quali smanie! egli appena respira. Il rimorso che il cor gli martira Dell' amore ogni nodo spezzo.)	WIL: (What agony! scarcely can he draw his breath! The remorse which his breast now lacerates Has broken the shackles of his mad love.)
VAL: (A quel duolo già cede e delira, Già la benda fatale strappò.)	WIL: (Grief has driven him to delirium! And has torn the fatal band from his eyes!)
ARN: E dunque vero?	ARN: Oh! can it be true?
VAL: Vidi il delitto, Il derelito vidi spirar.	WAL: I saw the deed done! I saw the unhappy old man expire.
ARN: Che far?—Gran Dio!	ARN: What shall I do?—Oh, God!
GUG: Il tuo dover.	WIL: Do your duty.
ARN: Morir degg' io—	ARN: Would you have me die?
GUG: Viver dei tu.	WIL: No: you must live.
ARN: Quell' empio al suole cadrà svenato; Io l' ho giurato pel genitor.	ARN: The miscreant shall fall by my own hand;— His son will avenge a father's murder.
GUG: Deh! frenz i tuei trasporti Calma quell' ira omai.	WIL: Ah! restrain this burst of passion— Your troubled mind to calm surrender.
VAL: E vendicar potrai L' Elvezia, il genitor	WAL: You shall have revenge For Helvetia and your murdered father.
ARN: E a che tardiam?	ARN: Why should we delay?
GUG: La notte, A' voti nostri amica, Già già distende un' ombra protettrice E tu vedrai tra poco Qui giunger cauti i generosi amici, Che udranno i pianti tuoi: E il vomere e la falce, Cangiati in brandi ed aste, Tentar con miglior sorte Alla vendetta o morte.	WIL: The night, Our designs kindly favoring, Her shades already spreads over us; And here speedily will you see Our noble friends cautiously approach to claim, Vengeance for your wrongs;— The ploughshare and the peaceful scythe converted Into spears and swords, In surer hope to make the attempt, Vowing to conquer or to die.
TRIO: La gloria infiammi—i nostri petti; Il ciel propizio—con noi cospira. L' ombra del padre—il cor e' ispira. Chiede vendetta—e non dolor. Nel suo destino—ei fortunato, Con la sua morte—par che ci dica Che del martirio—il serto è dato A coronare—tanta virtù.	TRIO: May glory exalt our hearts with courage Propitious Heaven will aid our cause The shade of your father will inspire our souls! It calls for vengeance and not lamentation; Although departed, he seems to say, he has been Happy in his destiny; His remains shall hallow a martyr's tomb, Of virtue such as his the fit recompense.
VAL: Confuso de quel bosco Sembrami udir fragor— Ascoltaimo.	WAL: What noise is that I hear, Proceeding from the wood! Listen, all of you.
ARN: Silenzio.	ARN: Silence.
GUG: Si ascoltiamo. Di numerosi passi Risuona la foresta.	WIL: Yes, let us all listen. The forest resounds with the footsteps of many persons.
ARN: Piu lo strepito appressa.	ARN: Nearer to us the sound approaches.
GUG: Chi s' avanza!	WIL: Who comes there?
Entrano abitanti d' Unterval.	Enter Inhabitants of the Unterwald.
CORO: Amici del Elvezia.	CHO: The friends of Helvetia.
VAL: O, sorte!	WAL: Good fortune
GUG: O, sorte!	WIL: Oh, welcome
ARN: O, mia vendetta! Onore al cor del forte.	ARN: Oh, vengeance is at hand! Honor to the bold of heart!
CORO: Con ardor—richiese il cor Di sfidar—di superar Ls distanza ed i perigli; E ogni core con ardor Brama vincere o morir. Il vigor de' tuoi consigli Nuovo in noi destava ardir	CHORUS: Our bosoms now throb with courage; With one accord we come to brave The march and its dangers dire; Every man, burning with ardor, Longs for death or victory;— The wisdom of your councillings renovate Our hopes within us.
GUG: O d' Unterval voi generosi figli! Questo nobile ardor non ne sorprende.	WIL: O, valiant sons of Unterwald, Your noble ardor does not surprise me.
VAL: Imitarlo sapremo. (Si ode una tromba.) Degli amici di Svitz Odo la tromba risuonar d'intorno. E surto, o Elvezia, di tua gloria il giorno!	WAL: We shall know how to imitate it (The sound of a trumpet heard.) Our honored friends of Switzerland! I hear the trumpets sound around us! Now, Helvetia, the day of your glory arises!
Entrano Abitanti di Switz.	Enter Swiss Inhabitants.

CORO: Domo, O ciel! da un vil straniero.
A' suoi mali il forte indura,
E celandosi all' altero,
E qui tratto a lagrimar.

GUG: E scusabil la tema
In chi qual noi si vive.
Alla mia speme v' affidate: amica
Ne airriderà la sorte.

TUTTI: Onore al cor del forte!

VAL: D' Urì mancan soltanto
I magnanimi amici.

GUG: Onde le tracce
Nasconder de' lor passi,
E per meglio celar la nostra impresa,
S' apron co' remi loro
Sul mobil elemento,
Il sol sentier che non tradisce mai.

VAL: De' prodi, ascolto, è già compito il patto.
Non odi tu?

GUG: Chi vien?

Entrano Abitanti d' Uri, dalla parte del lago, a detti.

CORO: Amici dell' Elvezia.

TUTTI: Onore, onor
D' Elvezia a' difensor.

CORO: Guglielmo, sol per te Tre popoli s' ùnir.
Il barbaro a punir
Ciascuno è presto.
Parla, e il tuo dir sarà
Di stimolo al codardo;
E, come acceso dardo,
Il come infiammerà.

GUG: Mostriamci degni alfine
Del sangue onde sortiamo;
Senza frapporre indugio.
S' armino i tre Canton' di lancia e spada
Domani fia che sorga
Il giorno di vendetta.
Ne reggerete voi?

CORE: Non lo temer. Sì, tutti.

GUG: Presti a vincer?

CORO: Sì, tutti.

GUG: Presti a morir?

CORO: Sù, tutti.

GUG: Ebben, serbate
Vigore ed ardimento.
Sia fermo il patto, e saldo il giuramento.

GUG. POI TUTTI: Giuriam, giuriamo pel nostro onor,
Pe' nostro dormi, per gli avi nostri, pe' nostri afanni
Al ciel ch' è giusto vendicator,
Di tosto abbattere l' empio oppressor.
Se qualche vile V' ha qui tra noi,
Lo privi il Sole de' raggi suoi,

CHA: Subdued by a vile foreigner,
The brave submits to his fate,
Patiently awaiting his day,
Bewailing his fortune in his tears.

WIL: Fear is excusable
In those who live as we have,
But, friends, like me repose in hope,
And Fate will smile upon us yet.

ALL: Honor to the brave of heart!

WAL: Our noble-hearted friends of Uri
Now alone are parted from us.

WIL: To conceal their track,
As also the enterprise embarked in—
Their scheme favoring night's darkness,
They are crossing the turbid lake,
By a path known but to themselves—
The only one which never can betray.

WAL: The compact of the brave is now completed.
Do you not hear?

WIL: Who comes there?

Enter Inhabitants of the Uri, from the Lake.

CHO: Friends of Helvetia.

ALL: Honor all honor
To the defenders of Helvetia.

CHO: William Tell, under you alone
Have three cantons united here;
The barbarian to punish,
Each and all are now prepared
Speak, and the words you utter
Will arouse the timid into action;
And, as with a burning arrow,
Their manly bosoms will be pierced.

WIL: Let us at least show ourselves
Worthy of the blood of our fathers.
Without a moment's more delay,
Let the three cantons be armed with sword and spear;
The long-sought day of vengeance
Will tomorrow dawn on us.
You will not then desert us?

CHO: Do not doubt us. We swear!

WIL: Prepared to conquer?

CHO: Yes, all of us!

WIL: Or ready to die?

CHO: Yes, all of us!

WIL: Well! keep up
Your courage and resolution.
Let our compact now be consecrated by oath.
Let us swear—let us all swear—
By our honor—by our wrongs—
By our forefathers—by our progeny—
By the avenging heaven above to Non oda il cielo la sua preghiera;

E giunto al fine di sua carriera,
Gli neghi tomba la terra ancor.

ARN: Già sorge il dì.

VAL: Segnal per noi dell' armi.

GUG: Di vittoria.

VAL: Qual grido
Corrisponder le deve?

GUG: All' armi!

TUTTI: All' armi!
(Partono.)

Fine Dell Atto Secondo.

ATTO III

SCENA I

Passaggio tra le Montagne.

Entrane Matilde e Arnoldo.

MAT: O ciel! sì torbido e perchè? E questo
Il dolce addio che tu mi dài ben mio?
Non temer:—al mio seno
Presto ti stringerò.

ARN: No, io resto. Onore
Me ne impone il dover, chè vendicare
Vo'il padre mio.

MAT: Che parli tu?

ARN: Vogl' io
Sangue e vendetta: è questo
L' unieo mio pensiero.
Alla gloria rinuncio,
Agli onori, all' amor, a te Matilde.

MAT: A me! Melchtal!

ARN: Che vuoi di più? mio padre
Empi cicarii han spento.
E sai chi lor giudò la man?

MAT: Io gelo!

ARN: Te lo dice il terror, Gessler.

MAT: O! cielo!
Pel nostro amor non v' ha più speme;
Ci aspettan solo affanni e pene
A noi la sorte è avversa ognor.
Oh! Matilde sventurata
Per te pace più non v' è.
Sdegnata l' ombra del padre tuo
S' oppone al nostro infausto amor,
Un gran dover crudel t' aspetta,
Arnoldo compi il tuo dover.
Oh! giorno di sciagure!
In odio io sono al ciel!
Ora che il padre tu dei vendicar, destroy,

This vile oppressor.
If there be a recreant among us
May he be shut out from heaven's light.
May God refuse to hear his prayers
May the end of his career be near,
And the earth deny a tomb to him.

ARN: Already the day is breaking

WAL: The signal of war for us.

WIL: And of victory.

WAL: What shall be
The watchword of our party?

WIL: To arms!

ALL: To arms!
(Exeunt.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

SCENE I

An open Space among the Mountains.

Enter Matilda and Arnold.

MAT: Oh, heavens! why are you so excited?
Is this the fond adieu you give me?
Doubt me not,—shortly
I'll take you lovingly to my bosom.

ARN: No, I must decline.
Honor and duty alike call on me to avenge.
My father's death.

MAT: What are you saying?

ARN: I pant
For blood and vengeance—the only passion
Which now may occupy my heart;
I renounce all glory and all honor—
Love, even—and you Matilda.

MAT: Me, Melchtal!

ARN: Ay—would you hear yet more?
My father has been slain by assassins,
And know you by whose orders?

MAT: I tremble.

ARN: Your terror plainly tells it was Gessler.

MAT: Oh! heavens
No hope remains now for our love so fond;
Sorrow and misery alone are left us;
Adverse Fate for ever waits on us!
Oh, most unhappy Matilda
For ever fled from this peace,
The angry shade of your sire departed
Our ill-assorted love interdicts
A duty stern and cruel calls on you,
My Arnold, and you must obey the call,
Oh! wretchedness unlooked for!

Più non ti lice a Matilde pensar.
Da te mio ben lontano
Traendo mesti i di
Farò le piagge invano
Del nome tuo suonar.
L' immago tua scolpita
Nel cor io porterò.
Chi mi salvò la vita.
Giammai scordar saprò.

ARN: Quai grida? qual rumor si sente?
Qual suon? che fia.

MAT: Gessler si sveglia.

ARN: Delitti nuovi ad eseguir.

MAT: No: d' una festa or militare
La gioia annuncia questo rumor
O! non t' esponi ai guardi lor.
Arnoldo, ah! credi all' amor mio,
Fuggi, o tremar per te degg' io.
Ah! se cara a te son' io,
Non tardar di più, ben mio,
Mi farai dal duol morir.
Ovunque ti trarrà la sorte
Ti seguiranno i miei sospir.

ARN: Invan tu tenti allontanarmi,
Quei canti m' empion d' alto furor.

MAT: Ah! per pietà, deh! non tardar.
Fuggi, o degg' io per te tremar.
Ah! se cara a te son 'io, etc.

MAT & ARN: O! quale istante di rio dolor!
Straziar mi sento in seno il cor.
Giammai scordar non ti saprò.
A te mai sempre io penserò.
(Partono.)

SCENA II

Gran Piazza d' Altorf—nel fondo scorgesi, il Castello di Gessler—Da una parte evvi un palco destinato al Governatore—Omano le Piazza alcuni alberi di tigli, melice—Nel mezzo sarà piantato un palo, al quale è sovrapposto un berretto, innanzi a cui tutti dovranno inchinare.

Gessler, Rodolfo, Guardie, Soldati, Svizzeri d' ambo i sessi, e Popolo.

CORO: Gloria a Gessler si renda, gloria,
Temasi Gessler
Del mondo il terror;
Si, si, nella rabbia estrema,
Ei lancia l' anatema,
Sul popolo e il guerrier.

I seem deserted by Heaven!
Now that you have your father to avenge,
No longer must you think of Matilda.
Transported far away from you,
My days passing in melancholy,
In vain regrets the wilds and shores
I'll make resound,
With your name.
Your image, engraven on my heart
Henceforth I shall for ever bear;
He who so nobly saved my life,
Must live ever in my memory!

ARN: Those cries! what tumult is it that I hear?
Those sounds—what mean they?

MAT: Gessler approaches

ARN: Some new crime to perpetrate.

MAT: No: of some military pageant
These are the joyous announcements;—
Oh, do not expose your dear life!
Arnold, depending on my fond love,
Fly, or for your safety I shall tremble.
Ah! if ever I was dear to you
Do not longer tarry, love,
Or I of grief shall perish;
Wherever fate your steps may guide, My sorrows will follow there.

ARN: In vain do you incite me to flight;—
Those cries with fury fell inspire me.

MAT: Ah! for pity's sake, do not delay
Fly, or I shall fear for your safety
Ah, if ever, &c.

MAT & ARN: Oh! the agony I now endure!
What conflict within my bosom rages!
Never can I forget my fond love
To my thoughts ever be present
(Exeunt.)

SCENE II

The Grand Square of Altorf—The Castle of Gessler in the background—On one side is erected a Throne for the Governor—Apple and Limetrees border the Square—Among them is a Pole erected, surmounted by a Cap, to which the Populace are required to bow.

Gessler, Rodolf, Guards, Soldiers, Swiss, and the Populace, Male and Female.

CHO: Glory to Gessler singing, glory,
We bow down to him,
Whose power we obey;
Yes, yes fearing this dread anger,
With awe his presence nearing,
We pay homage to him.

CORI DI SVIZZERS FRA LORO:
Ben altre leggi avremo,
O Nume, un dì per te.
Fa' che il poter supremo
Sei tutto amor a fè.

GES: No, l' orgoglio invan pretende
Di sfidar la mia vendetta,
Le mie leggi trasgredir.
Dee ciascun, come me stesso,
D' ogni grado, d' ogni sesso,
Quest' insegna riverir.
(Va a sedorss sul palco.)
Ch' io, reggitor d' Elvezia, oggi riceva
Dalla vostra obbedienza il scaro pegno—co' canti e in un co' giuochi
Di questo dì l' orgoglio
S' esalti. Udiste? Il voglio.

CORI: Quell'agil pie Ch'egual; non ha, Invan l'augel Seguir potra. Non ha l'aprile, Un fior piu gentile Che sia simile a tua belta, Quell'agil pie, Ch'egual non ha- invan l'angel Seguir potra, Egual non ha, Equal non ha, L'augell'in van Seguir potra, Non ha l'aprile, Un fior piu gentile, Che sia simile A tua belta.

Entrano Guglielmo e Jemmi, trascinats sul proscenio da Rodolfo e alcuni Soldati.

ROD: (A Guglielmo.) Inchinati, superbo!

GUG: Nella fiacchezza sua
Solo potrai tu, armato,
Questa gente avvilir; me no, che sprezzo,
Qualunque cenno che à viltà mi spinge.

ROD: (A Gessler.) Avvi chi tenta
Infranger le tue leggi.

GES: Qual' è, qual' è l' audace?

ROD: Quell' ardire, signor, me lo palesa:
Egli è guglielmo Tell, è quell' iniquo,
Che Leutoldo sottrasse all' ira tua.

GES: S' arresti, olà!
(Vien tolta la balestra e la faretra a Guglielmo.)

CORO DI SOLDATI: Egli è quello.
L' arcier temuto tanto,
L' ardito nuotator.

GES: Per lui non v' ha pietade:
Ei cadde in poter mio.

GUG: L' ultimo almen foss' io
Scherno del tuo furor!
(Di nascosto a il figlio.)
Corri alla madre, e fa' che tosto incenda

CHORUS OF SWISS: Wiser laws we shall yet have,
Oh God! through you some day;—
Then will the power supreme
Be better loved and trusted.

GES: No: vainly this insolence dares to provoke,
My vengeance,
And my sovereign laws transgress:
Each and all of you, as you bow to me,
Of whatever grade, shall reverence make
To this, of my authority the symbol.
(Pointing to the cap on the pole.)
Here, of Helvetia the lawful governor,
Will I receive upon my throne,
This sacred pledge of your allegiance;
And then in song, and dance, and merry sport,
Shall pass the day.—Hear you all?—This is my will!

TYROLEAN CHORUS: In vain we strive to reach unequalled heights, April has no flower sweeter or even similar to your beauty. In vain we strive to reach unequalled heights. There is no equal, no equal to the heights that we strive to reach, and April has no flower sweeter or even similar to your beauty.

Enter William and his Son, who are dragged forward by Rodolf and some Soldiers.

ROD: (To William.) Bow your head, proud man!

WIL: Your arms enable you
Upon the known weakness of the people
To perpetrate this wrong. You make them fear,
But not me;—the base order I despise,
As I despise all that can a man abase.

ROD: (To Gessler.) There is one here
Who dares infringe your laws.

GES: Who is the audacious man?

ROD: His audacity, my lord, betrays him:
He is William Tell, the miscreant
Who snatched Leuthold from your fury.

GES: Arrest him at once!
(Soldiers seize him, and take his bow and arrows.)

CHORUS OF SOLDIERS: Unarmed we have him!
The archer so feared by all,
The boldest of all swimmers!

GES: There shall be no mercy for him
He shall now feel my power!

WIL: I wish it were my lot to be
The last victim of your malice.
(In a low tone to this son.)
Quickly run to your mother,
And bid her raise a lighted torch

In sulla estrema cima
Colà de' nostri monti
La fiamma che segnale a' tre canton;
Sia di battaglia.

GES: (A Jemmi, che si allontana.)
Arresta:
(La loro tenerezza
La mia vendetta infiamma.) A te: rispondi,
D' questi il figlio tuo?

GUG: I! solo.

GES: Ebben, salvarlo vuoi?
(Scenaendo dal palco.)

GUG: Salvarlo!
Qual è il suo fallo mai?

GES: L' esserti figlio—
Il tuo parlar, l' incauto orgoglio tuo—

GUG: Me solo, io sol t' offesi:
Me solo, punir dei.

GES: Del suo perdono or tu l' arbitro sei.
Siccome abile arciero
Ti tiene ognun de' tuoi,
Sul capo di tuo figlio
Pongasi questo pomo, e d' un tuo dardo
Involarglielo dei sotto il mio sguardo.

GUG: Che chiedi mai!

GES: Lo voglio.

GUG: Qual orribil decreto!
Sul figlio mio!—mi perdo!
E tu, crudel, puoi domandarlo!
Ah, mai!—Troppo grande, è il delitto.

GES: Obbedisci.

GUG: Ma tu figli non hai?
V' è un Dio, Gessler: egli ne ascolta.

GES: Assai dicesti; cedi alfin.

GUG: Non posso.

GES: (A Soldati.) Pera,
Pera il suo figlio.

JEM: Ah! padre,
Pensa alla tua destrezza

GUG: Temo il troppo amor mio.

JEM: Dammi la mano,
Posala sul mio core;
Senti: di tema, no, batte d' amore.

GUG: Ti benedico, figlio mio, piangendo,
E il prisco ardir sul petto tuo riprendo.
La calma del tuo core
Ritorna in me il vigore.
(Affetti miei, tacete.)
A me l' armi porgete,— Io son Guglielmo Tell.
(Gli vien ristituita la balestra e la faretra, che vuota a terra, sceglie uno strale, e ne cela un altro sotto la sua vesta.)

GES: S' annodi il figlio suo.

JEM: Annodarmi!—Che ingiuria!
Ah! no, che almeno
Libero io mora. Espongo,
Senza tremare il capo al colpo orrendo.
E senza impallidir fermo l' attendo.

CORO DI SVIZZERI: (Ah! nemmeno l' innocenza Può calmar la sua vendetta.)

JEM: Coraggio, padre mio!

GUG: Alla sua voce, dalla man mi cadono
Quest' armi abbominate,
E le luci ho di pianto ottenebrate.
Ah! figlio! ch' io t' abbracci,
Un altra voltra ancora.
(Al cenno di Gessler, Jemmi ritorna presse il padre.)

GUG: Resto immobile, e ver la terra
Inchina un ginocchio a pregar.
Invoca Iddio, Invoca Iddio.
Che, sol pel suo favore,
Il figlio può salvare il genitore;
Fermo così; ma volgiti al ciel.
Fermo così; ma volgiti al ciel.
Nel periglio d' un capo a me sì caro;
Questa punta d' acciar può tradir la mia speme;
Al minor movimento, al minor movimento.
Jemmi, Jemmi, pensa a tua madre, chi ci attende
Insiem, Jemmi, Jemmi, Pensa a tua madre,
che ci attende insiem.
(Vien posto il pomo sul capo a Jemmi, ch' è tornato in fretta al suo luogo—Guglielmo con torbidi squardi scorre intorno la piazza, guarda Gessler e porta la mano dove ha colato il secondo strale—prende la mira, scocca, e coglie il pomo.)

SVIS: Vittoria!

JEM: O, padre!

SVIZ: Sua vita è salva.

GES: (Il pomo, O, rabbia!
Close!—O furor!)

SVIS: Dal capo glielo tolse, Guglielmo trionfò!

On the top of yonder mountain;—
By the three cantons' will be known
As the battle-signal.

GES: (To Jemmy, who is going.)
Stay here!
(By their tenderness so plain
I am the more incensed.) Answer me, you:
Is that a son of yours?

WIL: My only one.

GES: Well, would you wish to save him?
(Glancing at the pole)

WIL: Save him!
Why, what wrong can he have done?

GES: In being your son—
Your haughty words—your pride incautious—

WIL: In that I only have offended:
And I only must be punished.

GES: Of his fate the arbiter you shall be.
The most able archer you are reckoned
Amongst all your countrymen:
On the head of your son this apple place,
And with an arrow, before my eyes,
You shall strike if off.—This is my pleasure!

WIL: What do you ask?

GES: I will so have it.

WIL: What a horrible decree!
On my own son's head!—I am lost!
Oh, can you, cruel man, demand this deed!
Ah, never!—It is too great a crime!

GES: Obey at once.

WIL: But have you no children!
There is a God above who knows all things.

GES: You have already spoken too much: desist.

WIL: I cannot do it!

GES: (To the Soldiers.) Death, then:
I sentence to death his son.

JEM: Ah! father,
Remember your matchless skill.

WIL: My love will cause my skill to fail.

JEM: Give me your hand—.
Place it upon my heart: listen
Not with terror, but with love, it throbs.

WIL: With weeping eyes I bless you, my only son;
On your bosom I feel my nerve renewed.
The calm about your little heart
Brings my usual courage to me.
(Paternal love, be silent.)
Bring my bow and arrows here.—
I once again am William Tell.
(They restore him his bow and arrows—he empties the quiver on the ground, and selects two arrows, one of which he hides in his bosom.)

GES: Now let the son be bound and placed.

JEM: Bind me!—What indignity!—
Ah, no—to that I'll not submit.
Let me die unshackled!—Dauntlessly
To the fearful ordeal I will submit;—
The result without trembling I'll abide

CHORUS OF SWISS: (Ah! that even innocence like this Will not mitigate his fury

JEM: Have courage, my dearest father!

WIL: At hearing his sweet voice, within my hands
Scarcely can I hold the hated weapons;
And my sight grows dim with weeping!
Ah! my son, again let me embrace you,—
Once more—and yet again once more!
(At a signal from Gessler, Jemmy goes to his father.)

WIL: Firmly remaining, courage sustaining.
On bended knee raise your prayer!
In heaven above place your trust,—
Your only hope is there.
Be firm, my child; remember one beholds you,
Whose aid may save and protect you,
Whose aid may save and protect you from pain,
Ah! Your eyes should be uplifted to him;
His pity yet may set you free, free again;
Set you free, set you free,—yes, again set you free,
My child, my child, think of your mother dear, my child!
Oh! think of her, my child!
Bravely sustain you,
Heaven may yet befriend you.
(They place an apple on Jemmy's head, and he promptly takes his place—William casts a wild look around, gazing fiercely on Gessler, and feels for the second arrow, where he has concealed it—he then takes his aim, shoots, and strikes the apple from the boy's head.)

SWISS: Victory!

JEM: Oh, father!

SWISS: His life is saved!

GES: (He truly hit the apple!
Oh, rage!—Oh, fury!)

SWISS: He truly struck it from his head;
William has triumphant proved,

JEM: Ei mi salvò la vita. Un padre potea mai Spregnere un figlio? O ciel!	JEM: And he has preserved my life. Could a father kill his own son! Oh, heaven!
GUG: Io più non reggo! Io mi sostengo appena! Sei tu, mio caro figlio? Io soccombo alla gioja! (Sviene, abbracciando il figlio, e gli cade lo strale che avea nascosto.)	WIL: I can scarcely see! My trembling limbs my form can scarce support; My heart, from excess of joy, fails me! (He faints while embracing his son, and the arrow which he had concealed in his vest falls to the ground.)
JEM: Ah! soccorrete il padre.	JEM: Ah! to my father bring succour
GES: (Ei sfugge all' ira mia.) Che vedo! (Osservande il dardo caduto.)	GES: (From my vengeance he will escape.) What do I see? (Observing the dropped arrow.)
GUG: O cielo! il sol mio ben salvai.	WIL: (Recovering.) Oh, heavens! my dearest treasure I have saved!
GES: Quel dardo a che?	GES: Why had you this other arrow?
GUG: Per te, s' egli era setinto.	WIL: For you, if I had slain my child.
GES: Trema!	GES: Tremble!
GUG: Io tremar?	WIL: I tremble!
GES: Sia di catene avvinto. (I Soldati esequiscono.)	GES: Bind him with fetters.
Entrano Matilde, Rodolfo, e Damigelle.	Enter Matilda, Rodolf, and Attendants.
MAT: Fia ver? Delitto orrendo!	MAT: Can it be true? Horrid barbarity!
SOL: Entrambi den morir.	SOL: Both will now be put to death.
SVIZ: (E ancor dobbiam soffrir?)	SWISS: (Shall we look on and suffer this?)
GES: Che tosto sien troncati Lor giorni sciagurati. Io lo giurai; ma i rei Sfidaro i sdegni miei. Attendam quindi in ceppi L' ora del lor morir.	GES: To their traitorous existence A speedier termination I had intended: but my rage The wretches have ventured to brave Therefore, in chains let them await The hour of their approaching death.
MAT: Che! il figlio?—Ah, no!—t' arrests. Fiera sentenza è questa.	MAT: And the son, too?—Ah, no!—recall;— You will revoke that cruel sentence.
GES: Dato fu il segno e basti; Meco tu invan contrasti. Il figlio ancor.	GES: My orders are already given, And their fulfilment none shall prevent. The son, too, shall die.
MAT: Giammai! Giammai, finchè vivrò. In nome del sovrano, Suo figlio a me sia dato. Un popol vedi, insano, (A Gessler.) Contro di te sdegnato, E tu resisti ancor.	MAT: He shall not! He shall not, while there's life in me. In the name of our sovereign, That boy I here demand of you. You perceive a people enraged, (To Gessler.) Against you incensed one and all, And yet you resist their wishes.
ROD: Cedila; il padre almen ne resta. (Sotto voce a Gessler.)	ROD: Give up the boy: the father still remains. (In an undertone to Gessler.)
SVIZ: Ah! sì, bontade del cielo è questa Guglielmo!—O, sorte! (Vedendole incatenanto fra' soldati.) Atra! funesta! Tal premio ottiene la sua virtù?	SWISS: Ah! yes! it was a merciful interposition! William!—Oh, sad fate! (On seeing him chained and guarded.) Oh, sad spectacle! Is this the fitting reward of heroism?
ROD: Mormoran essi; (Sotto voce a Gessler) Non l' odi tu?	ROD: The people murmur; (Aside to Gessler.) Do you not hear?
GES: L' audacia dell' infido Nell' odio lor rivive. Verso Kusnacht il guido; Pel lago il condurrò.	GES: The audacity of the traitor Their rancour encourages; I will have him taken to Kusnacht,— He shall be borne across the lake.
ROD: Sul lago la bufera—deh! pensa.	ROD: The lake is impracticable—pray pause.
GES: Vanor timor! Chi, mai, chi mai dispersa dall' abil nuotator? (Deridendo Guglielmo.) A nuovo il traggo orribile Supplizio entro Kusnacht a cui fa cinta il lago.	GES: Needless fear. The best of swimmers he is thought—he shall now exhibit his skill. (Derisively to Wil.) Kusnacht is surrounded by the water, A fine feat, it will be for him to reach it.
SVIZ: Grazia!	SWISS: Mercy!
GES: Si: or or vedrete Come ciascun fo pago. Io l' abbandono a' rettili; La lor vorace fame gli schiuderà l' avello.	GES: Yes: speedily shall you see How I will fulfill your wishes I will abandon him to the beasts of prey, And trust to their voracity To make a fitting grave for him.
JEM: Ah, padre!	JEM: Ah, father!
GUG: O, figlio!	WIL: Oh, my son!
SVIZ: Grazia! Grazia!	SWISS: Mercy! Mercy!
GES: Giammai no, no!	GES: Never!—No, never!
GES, ROD & SOLDATI: L' ira solo che m' accende l' accende Il lor sanguè può placar.	GES, ROD & SOLDIERS: The wrath which rages in my/his breast By his blood alone can be appeased.
MAT: (E il suo destin segnato; Ma fia per me salvato Il figlio e il genitor.)	MAT: (His death he now thinks settled; But both of them will I yet save— The young son and his brave father.)
JEM: Quando mi vuol l' ingrato Da un padre separato, In voi sol spera il cor. (A Matilde)	JEM: Since the tyrant Harshly separates me from my father, In you alone I place my hopes. (To Matilda)
GUG: Compi il crudel mio fate; (A Gessler) Ma almeno il figlio amato Sia tolto a tant' orror.	WIL: My cruel fate may be fixed (To Gessler.) But my son you'll surely spare An early death so terrible.
SVIZ: (Misero! a qual mai fato Serbato, è il suo valor!)	SWISS: Unhappy man, how sad a fate Has his valor brought on him!
GES: Si sgombri olà recinto, O a' piedi vostri estinto Faccio costui cader.	GES: Let every one at once depart, Or, in the presence of you all, Forthwith he shall be put to death.
ROD E SOL: Il cenno ognun rispetta— Temon la tua vendetta.	ROD. & SOL: Your orders are obeyed by all— They all tremble at your vengeance.
CORO DI SVIZ: Silenzio!—E forza ancora Coprirsi nel mister.	CHORUS OF SWISS: Silence! the appointed hour Has not yet arrived!
GUG: Anatèma a Gessler!	WIL: May perdition fall on Gessler!
JEM: Udite la sentenza?	JEM: Did you hear the sentence?
ROD: E noi tanta insolenza Dovrem soffrir? tacer?	ROD: And insolence such as this Shall we suffer in silence?

GES: Se alcun di loro inoltrasi,
Si faccia al suol cader.

MAT: Ah! vieni meco,—affrettati:
Fuggiamo da Gessler.

JEM: GUG: O, padre! Oh! qual supplizio!, O, figlio! Oh! qual supplizio! Anàtema a Gessler.

CORO DI SOLDATI: Ah! viva ognor Gessler.

CORO DI SVIZ: Anàtema a Gessler. (Gessler, Rodolfo, ed i Soldati si schiudone cella forza un vassaggio fra il popolo, trascinando Guglielmo.

Fine Dell' Atto Tereo.

■ ATTO IV

SCENA I

Esterno di una rustica Abitazione.

Arnoldo solo.

ARN: Ah! non m' abbandonare,
O speme di vendetta—
Guglielmo è fra catene—Impaziente
L' istante aspetto di pugnar—In questo
Caro asil—qual silenzio!
Do mente—e de' miei passi odo soltanto
Il suono—O!—vada in bando
Il segreto terror—entriam!—Gran Dio!—
(Fermandosi dopo di aver fatto alcuni passi onde penetrare nelle stanza interne.)
Sul limitar, malgrado mio mi arreato,
Entrar colà non vo:—mio padre è morto!

ARNOLDO: O, muto asil del pianto, dove io sortiva il di. Iere felice, ahi quanto felice, Oggi fatal, fatal cosi. Il padre io chiamo, ahi sventurato, il padre io chiamo ahi sventurato, Invan, egli non m'ode piu, invan, egli non m'ode piu. Cari luoghi vi l'escie lestremo addio vido! Vi lascio, si vi lascio, si l'estremo addio vido. o muto asil del pianto, dove io sortiva il di. Cari luoghi cari luoghi, vi lascio l'estremo addio oggi vido l'estremo addio, si vi do l'estremo addio vido.

CORO: (Di dentro.) Vendetta!—

ARN: Oh! mia sperenza!
D' allarme io sento i gridi—
Che mai li guida a me?

Entra Coro di Svizzeri.

GES: If any one advances a foot here
Consign him to death on the instant.

MAT: Ah! come with me! Let us hasten from here,
From Gessler let us fly!

JEM. WIL: Oh father! Oh my son!
Oh! what a state of woe!
May perdition fall on Gessler!

CHORUS OF SOLDIERS: Ah! long life to Gessler!

CHORUS OF SWISS: May perdition fall on Gessler!
(Gessler, Rodolf, and Soldiers force a passage through the populace, dragging William with them.)

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

Exterior of a Rustic Habitation.

Arnold discovered, alone.

ARN: Ah! I will never abandon
My heart's thirsting for revenge!
William is imprisoned in chains!
I wait impatiently the hour of battle
What silence reigns!
I listen, I hear my own steps alone.
Oh! begone, all idle apprehensions
And secret terrors. I will enter.—
Great God!
(He advances some steps towards an adjoining room, and then stops suddenly.)
In spite of my boasted resolution,
I dare not enter!—My father is dead!

ARNOLDO: Oh! Blessed abode, within whose walls my eyes first saw light, Once so beloved, yet now your halls bring misery, misery to my aching sight, I call in vain: no father's greeting, which now is repeating to me, will ever again these meet ears. Then home once loved for ever more, ever more, farewell! Home once loved, yes home once loved, for ever more farewell. Oh! Blessed abode, once beloved now brings misery, misery to my aching sight, my aching sight, my aching sight.

CHORUS: (Within.) Vengeance!

ARN: Oh! my forebodings!
Cries of distress now meet my ear—
What brings these people after me?

Enter Chorus of Swiss.

CORO: Guglielmo è prigioniero.
E ognun ferro è privo.
Di farlo salvo è un vivo
In noi grande desir;—
Dell' armi aver vogliamo, e poi morir.

ARN: Dal pianto omai si resti!
L' ira al pensier si desti
Di mia fatalita.
Su chi mio padre ha spento,
Chi d' ogni mi priva,
La morte or scenderà.

CORO: Non temere in noi t' affida;
Già sul reo la morte sta.

ARN: Corriam, voliam, s' affretti
Lo scempio di quel vile che su noi trionfò.
Si vendetta dell' empio facciamo
Il sentiero additarvi saprò.
Sì, venite; delusa la speme
Renderem di chi vili ne brama.
Gloria, onore, vendetta ci chiama,
E Guglielmo per noi non morrà.

CORO: Sì, vendetta!—Delusa la speme
D' ogni tristo per noi resterà.
(Partono tutti.)

SCENA II

Il Lago de' Quattro Cantoni.—Denso nubi foriere di procella.

Entrano Eduige, a Donne Sviezzeri.

CORO: Resta omai; ti perde il duolo;
Vedi in ciel qual nembo freme.

EDU: Io Gessler veder vo' solo

CORO: Ma da lui che puoi sperar?
Morte? morte?

EDU: Io la bramo;
Chè qui trovarmi, e priva
D' ogni maggior mio ben non fia ch' io viva.

Entrano Matilde e Jemmi.

JEM: Ah, madre!—
(Di dentro.)

EDU: Chi parlo?—Questa soave
Voce a me cara?

JEM: (Di dentro.) Madre!

EDU: (escone Matilde e Jemmi.)
Udirlo parmi,
E desso! E desso.—Oh, sorte! Il figlio mio!
Ma, oimè—tuo padre, i passi tuoi non segue?

CHO: William has been made a prisoner;
Without assistance he must perish;
We have determined to set him free;
And we put our greatest hope in you!
With these arms we'll save him, or we'll die!

ARN: All present grief be now suspended,
And all my angry thoughts
Give way to this great enterprise.
He who murdered my father,
And did cause this grief to my heart,
Shall by me die, or I by him!

CHO: Do you rashly rush into danger,
Or your own life may be the forfeit!

ARN: Let us rush to the rescue,
And boldly seize on the tyrant
Who seeks our liberties to crush.
If you but fearlessly follow,
I will boldly lead you forward.
Yes, come;—delusive is all hope
Of justice from what vile tyrant.
Glory, honor, vengeance, alike demand,
That William may be saved by our prowess.

CHO: Yes, revenge! Of our foes the hopes delusive
Will be frustrated by our courage.
(Exeunt.)

SCENE II

The Lake of the Four Cantons—The sky denotes a coming storm

Enter Edwidge and Swiss Peasants.

CHO: Rest awhile, or you'll meet certain death;—
A storm in the heavens is gathering.

EDW: Alone would I encounter Gessler.

CHO: What do you hope to obtain from him?
Death? certain death?

EDW: That I wish for;
If all that is dear to me be lost,
Death for me can have no terrors.

Enter Matilda and Jemmy.

JEM: Ah, mother!
(Within)

EDW: Who speaks?—What sweet voice is that Which thus salutes my ear?

JEM: (Within.) Mother!

EDW: (Seeing Matilda and Jemmy) I thought I heard his voice, Oh, yes! It is he—
My own dear son is here.—Ah, happy lot!
But your father—why is he not with you?

JEM: Ai ferri ond' egli è cinto Togliersi alfin saprà, che da Matilde Tutto aspettar dobbiamo.	JEM: He will soon be freed from captivity; Matilda's good heart so watches over him That our hopes cannot be disappointed.
EDU: Tu, d' ogni ben capace, Esser l' angiol per noi potrai di pace?	EDW: You were as a blessing given to us— You have ever been our guardian angel!
MAT: A te ritorno il figlio, Sottratto a orribil nembo. Di bella pace in grembo, Nol giungerà il periglio. Matilde a voi predice Un termine al dolor. Con me la speme il dice, La speme ond' arde il cor.	MAT: To you your son now returns Escaped from the frightful storm, Restored to peace and quietness, No longer threatened by danger, Matilda predicates for you both. To your grief this happy ending; The same hope arises in me, A hope which my heart enlivens.
EDU E JEM: Vivrem di pace in grembo, N' è il labbro suo presago. Del ciel cessato il nembo, Essa è per noi l' imago; Se a noi lieta predice Un termine al dolor. La speme in essa il dice, col suono dell' amor.	EDW. & JEM: We may yet hope to live in peace Her lips as much for us presage. The clouds now are breaking above us, Her good genius watches over us; And she predicts to us A happy ending to our griefs Hope, blended with the voice of love, Sweetly speaks from her bright face.
Entrano Guglielmo e Arnold.	Enter William followed by Arnoldo
SVIZ: (Di dentro.) Vittoria e libertà!	SWISS: (Within.) Victory and liberty!
GUG: Eduige!	WIL: Edwidge!
EDW: O, mio Guglielmo!	EDW: O, my beloved William!
GUG: Gessler alfin soccombe. Eccoti il dardo Che gli trafisse il cor, e là in quel lago Egli trovò la tomba.	WIL: Gessler has fallen at last. Behold the arrow With which I've pierced his heart and the lake has Proved his burying-place
TUTTI: Onore al forte! Gloria al liberator!	ALL: All honor to the brave! Glory to our liberator!
ARN: Vei qui, Matilde?	ARN: You here, Matilda?
MAT: Per sempre!	MAT: And for ever!
ARN: Oh, qual contento! Ahi! che manchi tu solo, O genitore! All' Elvezia, a tuo figlio, al nostro amore!	ARN: Oh, what joy!—But my father— Alas! you are yet wanting To Helvetia—to your son—his love to bless.
TUTTI: I boschi, i monti, e la città, Alzin tonante un grido solo; Pe' cieli è tu spiegasti il volo. Vittoria e libertà!	ALL: Through the forest wild—over the mountains high Through the glad city, let the cry resound— Even to heaven above be exalted— Of victory and liberty!
GUG: Gloria ed onor al popol vincitor!	WIL: Glory and honor to the conquering people.
DONNE: Bello s' intrecci a lor Serte di mirto e allor!	LADIES: Now let us crown the victor's brow, With myrtle and laurel enwreathed!
The End	The End

Samson et Dalila (1877)

Sampson and Delilah

MUSIC BY CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS ■ LIBRETTO BY FERDINAND LEMAIRE

This three-act opera with four tableaux, set to a libretto by Ferdinand Lemaire (inspired by the Biblical chapter), premiered at the Hoftheater in Weimar on December 2, 1877. The curtain opens on a public square in Gaza, Palestine; it is 1115 BC, and the Israelites are cruelly oppressed by the Philistines. Sampson, an Israelite, tries to raise their spirits by recounting the story of the Red Sea crossing. He persuades them to have faith in God's mercy. Abimelech, satrap of Gaza, declares that belief in God will accomplish little. Sampson, inspired by God, grabs Abimelech's sword and kills him with it. He warns the Philistines that their end is near and leads a rebellion against them. In spite of the curse the High Priest of Dagon pronounces on the Israelites, Sampson and his followers take Gaza by nightfall.

Delila, a beautiful Philistine maiden, performs a dance, enticing Sampson. At the valley of Sorek, Delila agrees to help the High Priest overcome Sampson. She seduces Sampson, and he tells her his secret—his hair is the source of his strength. Delila cuts off his hair as he sleeps. The Philistines capture Sampson, now harmless, and blind him. They tie him to a mill wheel, which he turns with other Jewish prisoners who chide him for betraying them to a woman. Sampson pleads for God's forgiveness. In the temple of Dagon the High Priest is surrounded by Philistine princes. Delila mocks Sampson and challenges him to participate in their holy orgy. In the center of the temple he is forced to his knees and made to humiliate himself before Dagon. He is led between two pillars that support the roof of the temple; the High Priest commands him to make a sacrifice to Dagon. He prays to God that his strength be renewed, if only for a moment; his prayer is answered and he pushes the pillars apart. The temple collapses, killing everyone, including Sampson.

■ ACTE 1

Une place publique dans la ville de Gaza en Palestine. A gauche le portique du Temple de Dagon. Au lever du rideau une foule d'Hebreux, hommes et femmes, sont rèunis sur la place dans l'attitude de la douleur et de la priére. Samson est parmi eux.

SCENE I

CHOEUR: (Derriere la toile.)
Dieu! Dieu d'Israël!!
Dieu d'Israel!
Ecoute la prière de tes enfants,
De tes enfants t'implorant à genoux,
T'implorant à genoux!
Prends en pitié ton peuple
Et sa misère!
Que sa douleur désarmé ton courroux!
Un jour, de nous tu détournas ta face,
Et de ce jour ton peuple fut vaincu!
Quoi! veux tu donc qu'à jamais on efface
Des nations, celle qui t'a connu!
Mais vainement tout le jour
Je l'imment tou le jour l'implore;
Sourd à ma voix, il ne me répond pas!
Et cependant, du soir jusqu'à l'aurore,
J'implore ici le secours de son bras!

■ ACT I

A public square in the city of Gaza, in Palestine. At the left the portico of the Temple of Dagon. When the curtain rises, a crowd of Hebrews, men and women, are assembled in attitudes of grief and prayer. Samson is among them.

SCENE I

CHORUS: (Behind the scenes.) Oh God! gracious God of Israel,
O, listen we implore you!
Your children cry, your children cry,
"Save us from our dark fate,
Save us from foes that hate!"
O, pity grant to us who kneel before you!
May our deep grief disarm your wrath on high!
When you turned your face from us, your people,
From that sad day our victory was lost!
Would you behold us, your people, now vanquished,
The only nation that you might have known?
Shall we in vain forever beseech thee?
(Deaf to our voice He heeds not our alarm!)
Does our united prayer, then, fail to

Nous avons vu nos çités renversées,
Et les Gentils profanant ton autel;
Et sous leur joug nos tribus dispersées
Ont tout perdu, jusqu'au nom d'Israel!
Ne's tu donc plus ce Dieu delivrance
Qui de l'Egypte arrachait nos tribus?
Dieu! Astu rompu cette sainte alliance
Divins serments par nos aïeux recus?

SAMSON: (Sortant, de la foule, à droite.) Arrêtez, ô mes frères!
Et benissez le nom du Dieu saint de nos pères!
Car l'heure du pardon est peu être arrivée!
Oui, j'entends dans mon coeur une élevée!
C'est la voix du Seigneur, qui parle ma bouche
Ce Dieu plein de bonté, que la prière touche, Promet la liberte!
Frères! brisons nos chaines
Et revelons l'autel du seul Dieu d'Israel!

reach you,
Our hearts sore cry for the aid of your arm?
We have beheld our cities' destruction,
And Gentile foes your blest altars profane.
Beneath their yoke our tribes are scattered widely;
O Israel, does your name not remain!
Are you no more the God of our salvation,
Who saved from Egypt our tribes long ago?
Lord! Did you forget your word, pledged to our nation
In those sad days when Israel mourned in woe?

SAMPSON: (Coming out from the throng. R.)
Stop, O my brothers,
And bless the holy name of the God of our fathers!
For now the hour is here when pardon shall be spoken.
Yes, a voice in my heart of this hope is the token.
'Tis the voice of the Lord, who by my mouth thus speaks.
On us his goodness showers.
Our prayers to him have risen,
And liberty is ours.
Brothers! we'll break from bondage!
Our altars raise once more
To our God, as before!

CHOEUR: Hélas! paroles vaines!
Pour marches aux combats
Où donc trouver des armes?
Comment armer nos bras?
Nous n'avons que nos larmes!

SAMSON: L'astu donc oublié,
Celui dont la puisance
Se fit toi: allié?
Lui qui, plein de clèmence,
A si souvent pour toi
Fait parler ses oracles,
Et rallumé ta foi
Au feu de ses miracles?
Lui, qui dans l'Océan
Sut frayer un passage
A nos pères fuyant
Un honteux esclavage?

CHOEUR: Ils ne sont plus, ces temps
Où le Dieu de nos pères
Protégeait ses enfants.
Entendait leurs prières!

SAMSON: Malheureux, taisez vous!
Le doute est un blasphème!
Implorons à genoux
Le Segigneur qui nos aime!
Remettons dans ses mains
Le soin de notre gloire,
Et puis ceignons nos reins,
Certains de la victoire!
C'est le Dieu des combats!
C'est le Dieu des armées!
Il armera vos bras d'invincibles épées!

CHOEUR: Ah! le souffle du Seigneur a passé dans some âme!
Ah! chassons de notre coeur
Une terreur infame!
Et marchons avec lui
Pour notre délivrance!
Jéhovah le conduit
Et nous trend l'esperance!

SCENE II

Les memes. Abimélech, satrape de Gaza. Il entre par la gauche, suivé de plausieurs guerriors et soldats Philistins.

ABIMÉLECH: Qui donc élÈve ici la voix?
Encor ce vil troupeau d'esclaves,
Osant toujours braver nos lois
Et voulant briser leures entraves!
Cachez vos soupirs vos pleurs
Qui lassent notre patience;
Invoquez plutôt la clémence
De ceux qui furent vos vainqueurs!
Ce Dieu que votre voix implore
Est demuré sound à vos cris,
Et vous l'osez prier encore,
Quand il vous livre à nos mépris?
Si sa puissance n'est pas vaine,
Qu'il montre sa divinité!
Qu'il vienne briser votre chaîne;
Qu'il vous rende la liberté!
Croyez vous ce Dieu comparable à Dagon,
Le plus grand des Dieux,
Guidant de son bras redoutable
Nos guerriers victorieux?

CHORUS: Alas! You speak vainly,
For marching into combat,
Where are our weapons?
How will we arm ourselves?
We have nothing but our tears!

SAMPSON: In the Lord still abide.
Have you so soon forgotten
That to us he's allied,
Whatsoever may betide?
His blessed help divine
Has to us been plighted.
In wonder of his might
Our faith has been re-lighted.
When we came through the sea,
Then a passage he made,
So that safely might flee
All our fathers from bondage.

CHORUS: Those wondrous days are past.
Now our God has ceased heeding
Tears or cries from our hearts,
Or his children's sore pleading.

SAMPSON: Wretched ones, silence keep!
Nor doubt that God loves you!
Contrite fall on your knees,
For the Lord reigns above you.
Leave your glory to him.
His might will uphold you.
To him yield up the reins;
His mercy will enfold you.
He's the god of combat!
He's the god of armies!
He will endow you with invincible swords!

CHORUS: Ah! his words are from the Lord!
With might divine they bless us.
Ah! we'll chase from our hearts
All fear that doth possess us!
We'll march at his side,
For he is our salvation,
And our God is his guide;
He will save our whole nation!

SCENE II

(The same. Abimelech, satrap of Gaza, enters at the left, followed by many warriors and Philistine soldiers.)

ABIMELECH: Ah! who that's here dares raise his voice?
In this vile troop who dares to defy us?
Who dares against our rigid laws
Strive for freedom, and vainly try us?
Conceal all your groans and your tears.
We are your conquerors forever,
And compassion we'll never show you,
We shall not heed your grief nor fears.
That God whom you are now imploring
Is deaf to your pains and your cries.
For beneath our scorn he lets you languish,
Paying no heed to all your sighs.
Ah! vain is all his boasted power!
That he's divine, then let him show.

Votre divinité craintive,
Tremblante fuyait devant lui,
Comme la colombe plaintive
Fuit le vautour qui la poursuit!

SAMSON: (Inspiré.) C'est toi que sa bouche invective,
Et la terre n'a point tremble?
O Seigneur, l'abime est comblé!
Je vois aux mains des anges
Briller l'arme de feu,
Et du ciel les phalanges
Accourent venger Dieu! Oui, l'ange des ténèbres,
En passant devant eux,
Pousse des cris funèbres
Que font frémir les cieux!
Enfin l'heure est venue,
L'heure du Dieu vengeur,
Et j'eutends dans la nue
Eclater sa fureur.
Oui, devant sa colère
Tout s'épouvante et fuit!
On sent trembler la terre,
Aux cieux la foudre luit!

CHOEUR: Oui, devant sa colère
Tout s'épouvante et fuit!
On sent trembler la terre,
Aux cieux la foudre luit!

ABIMÉLECH: Arrête! Insensé téméraire,
Ou crains d'exciter ma colère!

SAMSON: Israël! romps ta chaîne! O peuple, lève toi! Viens assouvir haine! le Seigneur est en moi! O toi, Dieu de lumière, Comme jours d'autre fois. Exance ma prière, Et combats pour tes lois! Oui, devant sa colère, Tout s'é pouvante et fuit, On sent trembler terre; Aux cieux la foudre luit! Il déchaîne l'orage, commande a le gan; On voit sur son passage Reculer l'Ondes.
(Abimélech se précipite sur Samson l'épée à la main pour le frapper; Samson loi arrache l'épée des mains et le frappe. Abimélech en tombant, "A moi!" Les Philistins qui accompagnant le Satrape veulent le secourir; Samson brandissant son épée, les èloigne. Ils occupent la droit de la scene, la plus grande confusion règne parmi eux. Samson et les Hebreux sortent à droite.)
(Les Portes du temple de Dagon s'ouvrent, le Grand Prêtre suivi de nombreaux serviteurs et gardes descend les degrés du portique; il

If he will but free you from bondage
Then his might and glory we'll know.
Can your God compare with Dagon,
Who's greater than all your powers,
Who guides so bravely in battle
Till all glorious victory is ours?
Your Jehovah, so weak and fearful,
Flies when he sees our leader
Trembling like the dove so timid,
When it flees from the vulture.

SAMPSON: (Inspired.) It is you, O my God, he defames!
Let the earth tremble beneath his feet!
Make his fall and destruction complete!
I see in hands of angels
Sharp swords gleaming with fire.
All the brave ranks of heaven
Sound forth their righteous ire.
And even the souls of darkness,
As the foe they pass by,
Howl forth such cries of anger
As rise to vaulted sky.
At last now is the hour
When God's just wrath is nigh,
And I hear in the clouds
Thunder-claps from on high.
Yes, resounds his vengeance;
Pallid with fear they fly!
The earth trembles in anger,
Bright flashes light the sky!

CHORUS: Yes, resounds his vengeance
Pallid with fear they fly!
The earth trembles in anger,
Bright flashes light the sky.

ABIMELECH: But hold! in your course rushing madly,
For I would avenge me, most gladly.

SAMPSON: Israel! break thy chain! O people arise! Nourish thy righteous vengeance, For the Lord is with me! O thou God of light, us uphold with thy might, As in the days gone by, When we fought for the right!
Yes, resounds his vengeance, In cringing fear they fly, The earth now quakes in anger, Bright flashes light the skies. He the tempest commandeth, And holdeth storms and the tide. His hand, if He but pass it Makes the waves stand aside.
(Abimelech, sword in hand, attacks Samson. Samson wrests his sword from him and stabs him. Abimelech, falling, cries for help. The Philistines rush to help him. Samson brandishes his sword and keeps them off. They fill the stage at the right. Great confusion reigns among them. Samson and the Hebrews pass off.)
(The gates of Dagon's Temple open. The High Priest, followed by a throng of attendants and s'arrête devant le cadavre d'Abimélech's; les Philistins s'ecartent devant lui.)

SCENE III

LE GRAND PRÊTRE: Que vois-je? Abimelech! Frappe par des esclaves!
Pourquoi les laisser fuir?
Courons! courons, mes braves!
Pour venger votre Prince, écrasez sous vos coups
Ce peuple révolté bravant votre courroux!

IER PHILISTIN: J'ai senti dans mes veines
Tout mon sang se glacer;
Il semble que des chaines
Soudain vont m'enlacer.

2E PHILISTIN: Je cherche en vain mes armes,
Mes bras sont impuissants,
Mon coeur est plein d'alarmes,
Mes genoux sont tremblants!

GRAND PRÊTRE: Lâches! plus lâches que des femmes!
Vous fuyez devant des combats!
De leur Dieu craignez vous les flammes,
Qui doivent desécher vos bras!

SCENE IV

UN MESSAGER PHILISTIN: Seigneur! la troupe furiese
Que conduit et guide Samson,
Dans sa révolte audacieuse,
Accourt ravageant la moisson.

IER ET 2E PHILISTINS ET MESSAGER: Fuyons un danger inutile!
Quittons au plus vite ces lieux.
Seigneur, abandonnons la ville,
Et cachons honte aux yeux.

GRAND PRÊTRE: Maudite à jamais soit la race
Des enfants d'Israël!
Je veux en effacer la trace,
Les abreuver de fiel!
Maudit soit celui qui les guide
J'écraserai du pied
Ses os brisés, sa gorge aride,
Sans frémir de pitié!
Maudit soit le sein de la femme
Qui lui donna le jour!
Qu'enfin une compagne infâme
Trahisse son amour!
Maudit soit le Dieu qu'il adore,
Ce Dieu, son seul espoir!
Et dont ma haine insulte encore
L'autel et le pouvoir!

IER AND 2E PHILISTINS ET MESSAGER: Fuyons dans les montagnes, Abandonnons ces lieux,
Nos maisons, nos compagnes,
Et jusques à nos Dieux!

guards, descends the steps of the portico; he pauses before Abimelech's body. The Philistines draw back from him.)

SCENE III

HIGH PRIEST: What see I? Abimelech!
Struck down and low before me!
Let not the slaves escape!
But, fly, I implore you,
To avenge your prince!
Now in haste cut them down,
These rebels in revolt,
Who brave your very crown!

1ST PHILISTINE: Then with horror seemed frozen
All the blood in my veins;
My limbs seemed as heavy
As they were bound in chains.

2D PHILISTINE: My weapon sought I vainly,
My arm no power lent;
My heart fainted within me,
And my knees trembling bent.

HIGH PRIEST: Cowards! More cowardly than women!
You have fled in your vain alarms!
From their god you fear that anger
Would scorch and wither you arms!

SCENE IV

A PHILISTINE MESSENGER: My Lord, the band, in their fury,
With Samson strong at their head,
Are all revolting and audacious,
Ravaging where they are led.

1ST AND SECOND PHILISTINES: We'll flee, then, exposure that's useless,
We'll leave to more fleet ones this place;
My lord, we'll leave this fearful village,
Concealing our face with shame.

HIGH PRIEST: Cursed be your nation forever!
O Israel's hated band!
Fall! and leave no trace behind;
Be swept from off the land!
Cursed, also, he who guides you!
I will grind him beneath my heel;
His anguish keen could I behold
And no remorse would I feel!
Cursed ever be the woman
Who brought him forth to light!
On all who may in love adore him
Now let there fall a blight!
Cursed be the God that he worships,
That God, his hope and delight!
My hate would sweep away his nation,
His altar and his might!

IST AND 2ND PHILISTINE AND MESSENGER: We'll fly to yonder mountains, Nor leave behind a track;
To our homes and companions,
And gods, we will go back.

(Ils sortent par la gauche, emportant le cadavre d'Abimélech, suivis, le Grand Prêtre. Entrent les Hébreux, viellards et femmes, droit.)

SCENE V

Les femmes et les vieillards Hébreux. Puis Samson suivi des Hébreux victorieux.

VIEILLARDS HÉBREAUX: Hymne de joie, hymne de délivrance, Montez vers l'eternal!
Il a daigné dans sa toute puissance
Secourir Israël!
Par lui le faible est devenu le maitre,
Du fort qui l'opprimait!
Il a vaincu l'orgueil lieux et le traître
Dont la voix l'insultait!
(Les Hébreux, conduits par Samson, entrent à droite.)

UN VIEILLARD HÉBREU: Il nous frappait dans sa colère,
Car nous avions bravé ses lois.
Plus tard, le front dans la poussière.
Vers lui nous élevions la voix.
Il dit à ses tribus aimées:
Lèvez vous marchez aux combats!
Je suis le Seigneur des armées,
Je suis la force de vos bras!

VIEILLARDS HÉBREUX: Il est venu vers nous dans la détresse,
Car ses fils lui sont chers.
Que l'univers tressaille d'allégresse!
Il a rompu nos fers!
Hymne de joie, etc.

SCENE VI

Les portes du temple de Dagon s'ouvrent. Dalila entre suivie des femmes Philistins tenant dans leurs mains des guirlandes de fleurs.

CHOEUR DES FEMMES: Voici le printemps portant des fleurs
Pour orner le front des guerriers vainqueurs!
Mêlons nos accents au parfum des roses,
A peine écloses!
Avec l'oiseau chantons, mes soeurs!
Beauté, don du ciel, printemps de nos jours,
Doux charme des yeux, espoir des amours.
Pénètre les coeurs verse dans les âmes,
Tes douces flammes!
Aimons, mes soeurs, aimons toujours.

(They go off at left, bearing the body of Abimelech, followed by High Priest. At the same time the Hebrews, old men and women, enter at right. Sun rises)

SCENE V

(Hebrews, women and old men. Afterwards, Samson and victorious Hebrews.)

OLD HEBREW MEN: Rise, hymn of joy, hymn of deep thanksgiving,
And tell our eternal truths!
For he who reigns is deliverer all powerful,
He aids Israel.
By him the weak have become so mighty
Against tyranny strong:
He overcomes the pride of the traitor,
Who does battle for the wrong.
(The victorious Hebrews, led by Samson, enter at the right.)

AN AGED HEBREW: He censured us in rage and anger,
For we his righteous laws had braved.
When bowed before him we entreated
That from his wrath we might be saved.
He said to all his tribe beloved,
"Rise in arms! to combat now fly!
For I, your God, will bless your weapons,
And in the strife be at your side."

OLD HEBREW MEN: He came to save his sons, who else had perished.
Now no sorrow remains;
Let all the universe sound his praises!
He hath broken our chains!
Hymn of joy, etc.

SCENE VI

(The gates of Dagon's Temple open. Delilah enters, followed by Philistine women with garlands of flowers in their hands.)

CHORUS OF WOMEN: With flowers the spring comes forth gladly now, Bright garlands to make for brave conqueror's brow.
And cheerful our tones as the glow of roses that spring discloses,
We sing our glad triumphant song,
As sing the birds that round us throng.
The springtime of youth—a gift from above,
Imparts a grace to our early love.
All soft as the breeze in its lightest motion is our devotion.
Then let us love while all is bright,
While nature sports in delight.

DALILA: (À Samson) Ja viens célébrer la victoire
De celui qui règne en mon coeur.
Dalila veut pour son vainqueur
Encor plus d'amour que de gloire!
O mon bien aimé, suis mes pas
Vers Soreck la douce vallée,
Dans cette demeure isolée
Où Dalila t'ouvre ses bras!

SAMSON: O, Dieu! toi qui vois ma faiblesse,
Prends pitié de ton serviteur!
Ferme mes yeux, ferme mon coeur
A la douce voix qui me presse!

DALILA: Pour toi j'ai couronné mon front
Des grappes noires du troëne,
Et mis des roses de Saron
Dans ma chevelure d'ébène!

VIEILLARD HEBREU: Détourne-toi, mon fils, de son chemin!
Evite et crains celle fille étrangère;
Ferme l'oreille a'sa voix mensongère,
Et du serpent évite le venin.

SAMSON: Voile ses traits dont la beautié
Trouble mes sens, trouble mon âme
Et de ses yeux éteins la flamme
Qui me ravit la liberté!

DALILA: Doux est le muguet parfumé;
Mes baisers le sont plus encore:
Et le suc de la mandragore
Est moins suave ô bien aimé!
Ouvre tes bras à ton amante
Et dèposela sur ton coeur
Comme un sachet de douce odeur,
Dont la senteur est enivrante!
Ah! viens!

SAMSON: Flamme ardente qui me dévore,
Et qu'elle ravive en ce lieu,
Apaise toi, apaise toi devant mon Dieu,
Pitié, Seigneur, pour celui qui l'implore!

VIEILLARD HEBREU: Jamais tes yeux n'auron assez de larmes
Pour desamer la colére du ciel!
(Danse des Prêtresses de Dagon.)
(Les jeunes filles qui ont accompagné Dalila dansent en agitant des guirlandes de fleurs, et semblent provoquer les guerriers Hébreux qui accompagnent Samson. Ce dernier, profondément trouble, cherche en vain à éviter les regards de Dalila; ses yeux, malgré lui, suivent au milieu des jeunes Philistins, prenant part à leurs poses et à leurs gestes voluptueux.)

DELILAH: (To Samson.) I come to resound the brave story
Of the one who reigns in my heart,
And to whom I would joy impart,
Giving more of love than glory.
My beloved one, follow me!
Unto fair Soreck will I guide you,
And there with sweet comfort provide you.
With open arms I'll welcome you.

SAMSON: (Apart.) O God! in your might all sufficing,
Grace to your poor servant impart!
Close my eyes, close my heart
Against that dear voice so enticing!

DELILAH: For you I have crowned my own brow
With the fairest springtime possesses.
The rose of Sharon I have culled
And twined among my dark tresses.

OLD HEBREW MAN: O turn, my son, from dark temptation's harm;
Avoid and fear the wiles of this stranger.
Close now your eyes and avoid this great danger,
Flee in terror from the serpent's charm.

SAMSON: O, veil those eyes whose faintest ray
My sense doth blind, my soul possessing;
Conceal that face so all obsessing
That now my freedom takes away.

DELILAH: Sweet the lilies' soft, grateful breath,
But far sweeter the fond caresses
Of the one whom your heart possesses—
Of she who loves you unto death.
Then open your arms, for I adore you.
And let me rest on your heart—
Joy of the angels thus impart.
List to my prayer, I now implore you!
Ah! come!

SAMSON: O ardent flame that does devour,
Of which this place revives the zest,
Appease my pain, appease my pain,
And ease my breast!
Have pity, Lord, now in my trial's hour!
O Lord!

OLD HEBREW MAN: A curse on you if heed her pleading,
Or by that voice so strangely sweet be led,
Those eyes could never wash away with weeping
All heaven's rage that would fall on your head!
(Dance of the Priestesses of Dagon.)
(The young girls accompanying Delilah dance, waving garlands of flowers; and try to entice the Hebrew warriors that are with Samson. He tries, but in vain, to avoid Delilah's glances. In spite of him his eyes follow the movements of the enchantress, as she takes part in the voluptuous poses and gestures of the young Philistine maidens.)

DALILA: Printemps qui commence,
Portant l'espérance,
Aux coeurs amoureux,
Ton souffle qui passe.
De terre efface
Les jours malheureux.
Tout brûle en notre âme,
Et ta douce flamme
Vient se cher nos pleurs;
Tu rends à la terre,
Par un doux mystère,
Les fruits et les fleurs.
Et vain je suis belle!
Mon coeur plein d'amour,
Pleurant l'infidèl.
Attend son retour!
Vivant d'espérance,
Mon coeur desolé
Garde souvenance
Du bonheur passé!
A la nuit tombante
J'irai, triste amante,
M'asseoir autorent.
L'attendre en pleurant!
Chassant ma tristesse,
S'il revient un jour,
A lui ma tendresse
Et la douce ivresse
Qu'un brûlant amour.
Garde à son retour!

LE VIEILLARD HEBREU: L'esprit du mal a conduit cette femme
Sur ton chemin pour troubler ton repos.
De ses regards fuis la brülante flamme!
C'est un poison qui consume les os!

DALILA: Chassant ma tristesse, etc. (Dalila regague en chantant les degrés du temple, et provoque Samson du regard. Il hésite, il lutte, et trahit le trouble de son âme.)

■ ACTE II

Le theâtre représente la vallée de Soreck en Palestine. A gauche, la demeure de Dalila, précédée d'un léger portique et entourée de plantes Asiatiques et de lianes luxuriantes.
Au lever du Rideau la nuit commence et se fait plus complète pendant toute lu durée de l'acte.

SCENE I

(Dalila, seule. Elle est plus parée qu'au premier acte. Au lever du rideau elle est assise sur une roche près du portique de sa maison, et semble rêveuse.)

DELILAH: Spring voices are singing,
Bright hope they are bringing,
All hearts making glad.
And gone sorrow's traces,
The soft air effaces
All days that are sad.
Our hearts warm are glowing,
When sweet winds are blowing
They dry our every tear.
The earth glad and beaming,
With freshness is teeming,
While fruits and flowers are here.
In vain all my beauty:
I weep my poor fate.
My heart filled with love,
The faithless wait.
In vain am I striving?
Can hope never last?
I must then remember
Only joys now past.
When night is descending,
With love all unending,
Bewailing my fate,
For him will I wait.
I'll banish all sadness,
Though deeply I may yearn,
When fond love returning,
In his bosom burning
May enforce his return.

OLD HEBREW MAN: This woman, guided by some evil power
Comes in his path to beguile him to shame.
Oh, let him fly from her enticing glances!
For only poison does consume his frame.

DELILAH: I'll banish all sadness, etc. (Delilah continues her song on the steps of the Temple. She succeeds in securing Samson's regard by enticing glances. He hesitates and otherwise betrays his trouble and emotion.)

■ ACT II

(The theatre represents the valley of Soreck in Palestine. At the left Delilah's dwelling, which has a graceful portico, surrounded with Asiatic plants and luxuriant vines.)
(At the rising of the curtain night begins and wholly comes on during the course of the act.)

SCENE I

(Delilah, alone. She is more richly attired than in Act I. At the rising of the curtain she is seated on a rock near the entrance of her dwelling, and seems in a reverie.)

DALILA: Samson, recherchant ma présence,
Ce soir doit venir en ces lieux.
Voici l'heure de la vengeance
Qui doit satisfaire nos dieux!
Amour! viens aider ma faiblesse!
Verse le poison dans son sein!
Fais que, vaincu par mon adresse,
Samson soit enchaîné demain!
Il voudrait en vain de son âme
Pouvoir me chasser, me bannir!
Pourraitil éteindre la flamme
Qu'alimente le souvenir?
Il est à moi! c'est mon esclave!
Mes frères craignent son courroux;
Moi, seule entre tous, je le brave,
Et le retiens à mes genoux!
Amour! viens aider, etc.
Contre l'amour sa force est vaine;
Et lui, le fort parmi les forts,
Lui, qui d'un peuple rompt la chaîne,
Sucombera sous mes efforts!
(Eclairs lointains)

SCENE II

Dalila et le Grand Prêtre de Dagon.

LE GRAND PRÊTRE: J'ai gravi la montagne
Pour venir jusqu'à toi;
Dagon qui m'accompagne
M'a guidé vers ton toit.

DALILA: Salut à vous, mon père!
Soyez le bienvenu,
Vous qu'ici l'one revère!

LE GRAND PRÊTRE: Notre sort t'est connu,
La victoire facile
Des eclaves Hébreux
Leur a livré la ville,
Nos soldats devant eux
Ont fui, pleins d'epouvante
Au seul nom de Samson,
Dont l'audace effrayante
A troublé leur raison.
Fatal à notre race,
Il recut de son Dieu
La force avec l'audace,
Enchaîné par un voeu,
Samson, dès sa naissance,
Fut marqué par le ciel
Pour rendre la puissance
Au peuple d'Israël.

DALILA: Je sais que son courage
Brave votre courroux,
Et qu'il n'est pas d'outrage
Qu'il ne garde pour vous.

GRAND PRÊTRE: A tes genoux sa force un jou l'abandonna;
Mais depuis, il s'efforce d'oublier Dalila.

DELILAH: To-night Samson comes to greet me;
He'll hasten my sorrows to ease.
For behold, strikes the hour of vengeance
When we blessed gods shall appease.
O Love! in my weakness give power!
Poison Samson's brave heart for me!
Beneath my soft sway may he be vanquished;
To-morrow let him captive be!
Every thought of me he would banish,
And from his tribe he would swerve.
Could he only drive out the passion
That remembrance does now preserve.
But he is under my dominion;
In vain his people may entreat.
I alone can hold him—
I'll have him captive at my feet.
O love, in my weakness, give power, etc.
Against his deep love he battles vainly,
And he, the strongest of the strong!
He'll break the tie to his own nation,
And to my people he'll belong.
(Distant flashes of lightning.)

SCENE II

(Delilah and the High Priest of Dagon.)

HIGH PRIEST: I have climbed lofty mountains,
And I have safely reached you.
Good Dagon came to guide me,
Till your roof we might see.

DELILAH: I now salute you, father,
Be welcome, though it's late;
Even here you have honor.

HIGH PRIEST: Known to you is our fate.
And the victory was easy,
For, by treachery led,
Our slaves gave up our cities,
And our brave soldiers fled.
In terror they were scattered;
At Samson's name they fly;
For of his deeds they know—
They to madness were nigh.
It was fatal to our nation.
He received from his God
The force and skill to conquer—
he but serves his Lord.
On him at birth, from heaven
This most holy mission fell,
To aid his chosen people,
The tribe of Israel.

DELILAH: I know his mighty courage
Braves even your direst hate,
And that he deems no outrage
Can for you be too great.

HIGH PRIEST: His courage and his mighty force Vanished away
At the feet of Delilah,

On dit que, dans son âme
Oubliant ton amour,
Il se rit de la flamme
Qui ne dura qu'un jour!

DALILA: Je sais que de ses frères
Ecoutant les discours,
Et les plaintes amères
Que consent nos amours,
Samson, malgré lui-même,
Combat lutte en vain;
Je sais combien il m'aime,
Et mon coeur ne craint rien.
C'est en vain qu'il me brave;
Il est fort aux combats,
Mais il est mon esclave
Et tremble dans mes bras.

GRAND PRÊTRE: Sers-nous de ta puissance,
Prête-nous ton appui!
Que, surpris dans défense,
Il succombe aujourd'hui!
Vends-moi ton esclave Samson!
Et pour te payer sa rancon,
je ne ferai point de promesses;
Tu peux choisir dans mes richesses.

DALILA: Qu'importe à Dalila ton or!
Et que pourrait tout un trésor,
Si je ne rèvais la vengeance!
Je t'ai trompé par cet amour.
Samson sut vous dompter un jour;
Mais il n'a pu mé vaincre encore,
Car, autant que toi,je l'abhorre!

GRAND PRÊTRE: J'aurais dû deviner ta haine
Et ton dessein!
Mon coeur en t'ecoutant tressaille d'allegresse,
Mais sur son coeur dé ja n'aurais tu en vain
Mesuré ta puissance, essayé ton addresse?

DALILA: Oui, déjà, par trois fois deguisant mon projet,
J'ai voulu de sa force éclaircir le secret.
J'allumai cet amour, espérant qu'à sa flamme
Je lirais l'inconnu dans le fond de son âme.
Mais, par trois fois aussi déjouant mon espoir,
Il ne s'est point livré, ne m'a rien laissé voir.
En vain d'un fol amour j'imitai les tendresses!
Espérant amollir son coeur par mes caresses
J'ai vu ce fier captif. enlacé dans mes bras
S'arracher de ma couche et courir combats!
Aujour d'hui cependant il subit ma puissance
Car je l'ai vu pâlir, trembler en ma presence;

Where he fell, on that day.
They say, within his bosom
Love for you now is past,
And he laughs at a passion
That but a day can last.

DELILAH: I know that his near kindred Bitterly all discourse
On his ardent emotion,
And would destroy its force.
But Samson will not fail me,
He combats all in vain;
My fearless heart assures me
That his love will remain.
He is powerful in battle,
And can brave fortune's chance;
But a slave, when I am near him,
And trembles beneath my glance.

HIGH PRIEST: For us employ your power,
And to us lend your aid!
Unto you shall a ransom
For the captive be paid.
This Samson, your slave, sell to me,
And, high though the price may be,
Only name to what you aspire
I'll grant you whatever you desire.

DELILAH: What value to me your gold,
If my vengeance had I sold?
Though you gave me your richest treasure,
With hatred it never could measure!
You are deceived; you know not me.
Though you by him may vanquished be,
He yields to me—I've long possessed him,
Yet more than you I detest him.

HIGH PRIEST: Your design and your hatred I might well have read;
For words but make my trembling heart now thrill with pleasure.
Though counting on his love, do not in vain be led;
Try as you might to ensnare him, but your powers ever measure.

DELILAH: Yes, disguising my motive I've thrice made appeal
That the secret of strength he to me might reveal.
I have kindled his love so, that with its confession,
Of the knowledge I seek he might give me possession.
Thus three times I have hoped; but, alas! all in vain,
For closed within his breast does his secret remain.
In vain with all the ardor my tried art possesses
His proud heart I've tried to render soft by my caresses.
I've seen this haughty slave from my arms break away,
And with zeal only warlike rush to thickest of the fray.
This day he will fall;
I need no more dissemble;
He now again will blanche
And in my presence tremble.

Et je sais qu'à cette heure abandonnant les siens,
Il revient en ces lieux resserrer nos liens.
Pour ce dernier combat j'ai préparé mes armes:
Samson ne pourra pas résister à mes larmes.

GRAND PRÊTRE: Que Dagon, notre Dieu, daigne étendre son bras!
Tu combats pour sa gloire et par lui tu vaincras!

DALILA: Il faut, pour assouvir ma haine,
Il faut que mon pouvir l'enchaîne!
Je veux que, vaincu par l'amour,
Il courbe le front a son tour!

GRAND PRÊTRE: Je veux, pour assouvir ma haîne,
Je veux que Dalila l'enchaîne;
Il faut que, vaincu par l'amour,
I courbe le front à son tour!
En toi seule est mon espérance,
A toi l'honneur de la vengeance!

DALILA: A moi l'honneur de la vengeance
A moi l'honneur! A moi!

GRAND PRÊTRE ET DALILA: Je veux, pour assouvir ma heine, etc.
Unissons nous tous deux!
Mort au chef des Hébreux!

GRAND PRÊTRE: Samson, me disais-tu, dans ces lieux doit se rendre?
Je m'éloigne, il pourrait nous surprendre.
Bientôt je reviendrai par de secrets chemins.
Les destin de mon peuple, ô femme, est dans tes mains!
Dechire de son coeur l'invenèrable écorce,
Et surprends le secret qui nous cache au force.
(Il sort.)
(Dalila se rapproche de la gauche de le scène vers le portique de sa maison, et s'appuie rêveuse à un des piliers.)

DALILA: Se pourrait-il, que sur son coeur L'amour eut perdu sa puissance?
La nuit est sombre et sans lueur
Rien ne peut trahir sa présence.
Helas! Il ne vient pas!
(Samson arrive par la droit; il semble emu, troublé, hésitant; il regarde autour de lui. La nuit s'assombrit de plus en plus.)

SCENE III

(Éclairs lointains.)

SAMSON: En ces lieux, malgré moi, m'ont ramené mes pas
Je voudrais fuir, hélas. et ne puis pas!
Je maudis mon amour et pourtant j'aime encore,
Fuyons, fuyons ces lieux que ma faiblesse adore!

DALILA: (S'élance vers Samson.) C'est toi!
C'est toi, mon bien aimé!
J'attendais ta présence!
J'oubie, en te voyant,
Des heures de souffrance!
Salut! salut! ô mon doux maitre!

SAMSON: Arrètes ces transports!
Je ne puis t'écouter sans honte et sans remords!

DALILA: Samson! ô toi! mon bien aimé,
Pourquoi, repousser ma tendresse?
Pour-quoi, de mon front parfumé,
Pour-quoi détourner tes caresses?

SAMSON: Tu fus toujours chère à mon coeur,
Et tu n'en peux être bannie!
J'aurais voulu donner ma vie
A l'amour qui fit mon bonheur!

DALILA: Près de moi, pres de moi pour-quoi ces alarmes?
Auraistu douté de mon coeur?
N'estu pas mon maître et seigneur?
L'amour at-il perdu ses charmes?

SAMSON: Hélas! esclave de mon Dieu,
Je subis sa volonté sainte;
Il faut, par un dernier adieu,
Rompre sans murmure et sans crainte
Le doux lien de notre amour,
D'Israël renaît l'espérance!
Le Seigneur a marqué le jour
Qui verra notre délivrance!
Il a dit à sone serviteur:
"Je t'ai chois parmi tes frères,
Pour les guider vers le Seigneur
Et mettre un terme à leurs miseres!"

DALILA: Qu'importe à mon coeur désole
Le sort d'Israël et sa gloire!
Pour moi le bonheur envolé
Est le seul fruit de la victoire.
L'amour égarait ma raison
Quand je coyais à tes promesses,
Et je n'ai bu que le poison
En m'enivrant de tes caresses!

SAMSON: Ah! ces se d'affliger mon coeur!
Je subis une loi suprême,
Tes pleurs ravient ma douleur!
Dalila! Dalila! Je t'aime!
(Éclairs lointains.)

Yes, I know he will leave his very own, and fly
To this most hallow'd place, to renew our blest tie.
For this last combat my surest weapons I'm keeping,
For he can ne'er withstand my feign'd grief and weeping.

HIGH PRIEST: Oh, may Dagon, our god, ever sustain thee in right!
You fight for his glory, and conquer by his might!

DELILAH: Let hatred in disguise now gain him!
Let love with gilded links enchain him!
May passion his reason enthrall,
That lowly his proud head may fall!

HIGH PRIEST: Let hatred in disguise now gain him!
Let love with gilded links enchain him?
May passion his reason enthrall,
That lowly his proud head may fall?
Thou ever shall be with honor invested.

DELILAH: On me alone his hope is rested,
On me alone!

BOTH: Let hatred in disguise, etc.
Our forces we'll unite!
Death to that Israelite!

HIGH PRIEST: We'll see that the brave Hebrew no more defies us;
I'll depart, lest he come and surprise us.
I'll soon return, and by a secret passage-way:
You hold in your hand my people's fate this day.
Employ your arts till Samson, all his soul revealed,
Tear out from his heart the secret he concealed.
(Exit High Priest.)
(Delilah goes slowly to the entrance of her house, where she remains leaning against one of the pillars, in pensive attitude.)

DELILAH: Can it be true, that in his heart
My love no longer has power?
His presence can betray nothing
For the dark night is lowering on all.
Alas! he is not coming.
(Samson enters from right, hesitatingly and troubled. The night grows darker.)

SCENE III

(Lightning in distance.)

SAMSON: To this place I am led,
Vanquished again am I!
To fly from here, alas!
I fain would try.
Yet, when I would depart—
Would haste from before her,
Then more and ever more
In weakness I adore her.

DELILAH: (Coming to him quickly.) It's you!
It's you, my best beloved!
Long for thee have I waited.
I now forget my woes;
To happiness we're fated!
To you a welcome sweet from me!

SAMSON: Oh, cease your transports wild!
For without deep remorse my heart is not beguiled!

DELILAH: O Samson, my own! my best beloved!
Your heart your fond love now represses.
Why do you turn away your dear face?
Ah! why withhold from me your caresses?

SAMSON: My fatal love I can never destroy.
From out my heart you will never be banished,
Or happiness would all be vanished.
In my ardent love is my joy!

DELILAH: By my side why do you fear?
Ah, why so faint-hearted?
Is it doubt that seizes your heart?
You ever are the Lord of my life.
Have all love's charms for you departed?

SAMSON: Alas! I'm pledged to my own God.
To his will do I yield me gladly.
I'll tell you a last sad farewell,
And loose the tie that binds me madly.
I'll break the bond of our false love—
Love that on Israel's freedom encroaches
For the day of release is nigh,
Our deliverance even now approaches.
Our blessed Lord to his servant said,
"I've chosen you from out your nation
To guide your people unto me,
To lead in working their salvation."

DELILAH: What joy to my desolate heart,
Though Israel's' fate may be glorious?
From me would all gladness depart,
Should your own people be victorious.
By love is my reason dethroned,
For lost the hope the soul possesses!
All vain your promises to me;
Like poison all your fond caresses!

SAMSON: Ah! cease to wound my anguished heart!
I but yield to the powers above you!
Thy tears increase my bitter grief—
Woe is me! woe is me! I love you!
(Lightning.)

DALILA: Un dieu plus puissant que le tien,
Ami, te parle par ma bouche;
C'est le dieu d'amour, c'est le mien!
Et, si ce souvenir te touche,
Rapelle à ton coeur beaux jours
Passés aux genoux d'une amante
Que tu devais aimer toujours,
Et qui seule, hélas! est constante!

SAMSON: Insensée! oser m'accuser!
Quand pour toi tout parle à mon âme!
Oui! dût la foudre m'écraser!
Dussé je perir de sa flamme!
(Éclairs plus rapprochés.)
Pour toi si grand est mon amour,
Que j'ose aimer malgré Dieu même!
Oui! dussé-je en mourir un jour,
Dalila! Dalila! je t'aime!

DALILA: Mon coeur d'ouvre à ta voix Comme s'ouvrent les fleurs, Aux baisers de l'aurore! Mais, ô mon bien ai mé Pom mieux secher mes pleurs Avec ta voix parle encore! Dis mon qu'à Dalila Tu reviens pour jamais, Redis à ma tendresse Les serments d'autre fois, Ces serments que j'ai mais! Ah! réponds a ma tendresse, Ver se moi, ver se moi, l'i vres se! Réponds à ma tendresse, Réponds à ma tendresse! Ah! ver se moi, ver se moi l'i vres se!

SAMSON: Dalila! Dalila! Je t'aime.

DALILA: Ainsi qu'on voit des blés Les é pis enduler Sous la brise légère, Ainsi frémit mon coeur, Prêt à se consoloer. A ta voix qui m'est chè re! La flèche est moins rapide À parter le trépes, Que ne l'est tou a mau te À voler dans tes bras, A voler dans tes bras. Ah! réponds à ma tendresse, Ver se moi, ver se moi lédresse! Reponds à ma tendresse, Réponds à ma tendresse, ah! Ver se moi, Ver se moi l'i vres se SAMSON: Par mes baisers Je veux sècher tes larmes Et de ton coeur Eloigner les a larmes, Je veux sè cher tes larmes, Je veux sècher tes larmes Dalila! Dalila! Je t'aime!

(Éclairs.)
(Violent coup de tonnerre.)

DALILA: Mais! non! que disje, hélas!
La triste Dalila doute de tes paroles!
Egarant ma raison, tu me trompas déja
Par des serments frivoles!

DELILAH: A god more despotic than yours
By my own lips to you is speaking,
It is the god of Love, that is mine;
He brings the bliss all are seeking!
Recall I the joys that are past,
When you at my feet then were kneeling,
Vowing to love me evermore!
Now, alas! It is I who has feeling!

SAMSON: You ingrate! You dare accuse!
Only you alone do I cherish,
or strike me, bolts from on high,
Or let me in fierce flames now perish!
So mighty is my love for you,
I brave the God that reigns above me,
Though his vengeance may strike me down!
Woe is me! woe is me! I love you!

DELILAH: My heart at your dear voice Does unfold and rejoice, Like a flower when dawn is smiling. You can my weeping stay. My sadness charm away With your tones so beguiling Then, oh! to me but say you have returned for always Repeat your vows so tender, your vows of the past, That I dreamed ever would last! Ah! once more your vows so tender, And your heart, and your heart surrender, Once more your vows so tender, Once more your vows so tender, Ah! and your heart, and your heart, surrender!

SAMSON: Woe is me! woe is me! I love you!

DELILAH: As when a field of grain, Like the waves on the main, In the breeze is swaying, bounding, So all my heart is swayed, In deepest chords are played, When your voice is resounding. The arrow in its flight, Though so soon gone from sight, Moves more slowly than I, If, to you I may fly! Yes, if to your I fly. Ah! once more your vows so tender, And your heart and your heart surrender Once more your vows so tender, Once more your vows so tender, ah! and your heart, and your heart surrender

SAMSON: Fondly my kiss Each tear of thine represses I in thy heart Joy restore with caresses Though smite the God above you Though smite the God above thee Woe is me! woe is me! I love you (Lightning and violent crash of thunder.)

DELILAH: But no! I speak in vain!
Delilah is distraught,
My sad heart is bereaving
You've struck me down in despair!
You've ensnared my soul!
With your traitorous vows.

SAMSON: Quand pour toi j'ose oublier Dieu,
Sa gloire, mon peuple et mon voeu!
Ce Dieu qu marqua ma naissance
Du sceau divin de sa puissance!

DALILA: Eh bien! connais donc mon amour!
C'est ton Dieu même que j'envie!
Ce Dieu qui te donna le jour,
Ce Dieu qui consacra ta vie!
Le voeu qui t'enchaîne à ce Dieu
Et qui fait ton bras redoutable,
A mon amour faisen l'aveu,
Chasse le doute qui m'accable!

SAMSON: Dalila! que veux tu de moi?
Crains que je ne doute de toi!

DALILA: Si j'ai conservé ma puissance,
Je veux l'essayer en ce jour!
Je veux éprouver ton amour,
En réclamant ta confiance!
(Eclairs et tonnerre plu en plus rapprochés.)

SAMSON: Hélas! qu'impore à ton bonheur
Le lien sacré qui m'enchaîne?
Ce secret que garde mon coeur—

DALILA: Par cet aveu soulage ma doleur.

SAMSON: Pour le ravir ta force est vaine!

DALILA: Oui! vain est mon pouvoir,
Car vaine est ta tendresse!
Quand je veux le savoir,
Ce secret qui me blesse,
Dont je veux la moitié,
O sestu, ans ton âme
Sans honte et sans pitié,
M'accuser d'être inflâme!

SAMSON: D'un immense douleur
Ma pauvre âme accablée
Implore le Seigneur
D'une voix désolée!

DALILA: J'avais paré pour lui
Ma jeunesse et mes charmes!
Je n'ai plus au jour d'hui
Qu'à répandre des larmes!

SAMSON: Dieu tout-puissant, j'invoque te m'appui!

DALILA: Pour ces derniers adieux
Ma voix est impuissante!
Fuis! Samson, fuis ces lieux
Où mourra ton amante!

SAMSON: Laisse moi!

DALILA: Ton secret!

SAMSON: Je ne puis!

DALILA: Ton secret? ce secret qui cause mes alarmes!

SAMSON: L'orage sur ces monts
Déchaîne sa colère!
Le Seigneur sur nos fronts
Fait gronder son tonnerre!

SAMSON: Now I bow to you in worship,
Forgetting my people and vow!
Forgetting my God and his dower,
The seal that marked me with his power!

DELILAH: Alas! You've forgotten my love!
I envy him whom I have hated,
Your God who has given you birth,
To whom you, consecrated your life.
The vow that has chained you to him,
Making you victorious in battle,
Oh, give to me and my poor heart!
Your love's reward will then be glorious!

SAMSON: Delilah, what would you do with me?
Do you doubt my mad love for you?

DELILAH: If I'm presiding over your heart,
I'd prove it a truth on this day.
A ray of your love then betray
In secrets dark to me confiding.
(Thunder and lightning nearer.)

SAMSON: Alas! What do sacred ties, or power vested in me, matter to you?
That great secret closed in my heart—

DELILAH: Open your heart, and impart joy to me—

SAMSON: By your vain might never can be wrested!

DELILAH: Oh, vain all my sad strife!
In vain your love surrounds me,
If I can never divine
That dark secret that wounds me.
When your thoughts I would share
Do you dare to refuse me?
and pitiless, cold,
Would in your heart accuse me?

SAMSON: Great the anguish I feel!
O, my God, be near me!
My soul is rent with pain—
I implore you to hear me!

DELILAH: For him have I displayed
All my beauty, nothing reaping!
To me only is left
Sorrow and anguished weeping!

SAMSON: All powerful God!
Oh, hear me, my Lord!

DELILAH: To try to speak farewell
Is vain; my soul defies me!
Samson, fly! fly from here
Where your own love now dies!

SAMSON: Leave me!

DELILAH: Tell me, then!

SAMSON: Ask me not!

DELILAH: Tell to me the secret
For which my heart now dies!

SAMSON: O tempest, on these heights
Let loose, on us descending,
All the wrath of the Lord
Our guilty souls now rending!

DALILA: Je le brave avec toi! Viens!

SAMSON: Non!

DALILA: Viens!

SAMSON: Laisse Mois!

DALILA: Que m'importe la foudre!

SAMSON: Je ne puis m'y résoudre—
C'est la voix de mon Dieu!

DALILA: Lâche! coeur sans amour!
Je te meprise! Adieu!
(Eclairs et tonnerre.)
(Dalila court vers sa demeure; l'orage est dans toute sa feurer. Samson levant les bras au ciel, semble invoquer Dieu. Il s'élance à suite Dalila, hésite, et entre enfin dans sa demeure.)
(Par la droite arrivent des soldats Philistins, qui s'approchent de la demeure.)
(Violent coup de tonnerre.)
(Dalila paraissant à sa feuêtre.)

DALILA: A moi! Philistins! à moi!

SAMSON: Trahison!
(Les soldats se précipitent dans la demeure de Dalila. Rideau.)

DELILAH: I will brave all with you! Come!

SAMSON: No!

DELILAH: Come!

SAMSON: Leave me!

DELILAH: I care nothing for what awaits me!

SAMSON: I can never settle myself!
It's the voice of my God!

DELILAH: Coward! Loveless heart,
I despise you! Farewell!
(Thunder and lightning.)
(Delilah hastens to her house; the storm breaks furiously. Samson raises his arms, as if to call upon God; then hastily follows Delilah—hesitates, but finally enters the dwelling.)
(Philistine soldiers are seen at right, approaching the house.)
(Music of the scene continues. Finally a violent crash of thunder. Delilah re-appears, on the terrace.)

DELILAH: Philistines! your aid!

SAMSON: (Within.) I am betrayed!
(The soldiers rush into Delilah's house.)
(Curtain.)

■ ACTE III

La prison de Gaza. Samson enchaine avengle, les cheveux coupes tourne la meule. Dans la coulisse, choeur des Hebreux captifs.

SAMSON: Vois ma misère, hélas! vois ma détresse!
Pitié, Seigneur! pitié pour ma faiblesse!
J'ai détourné mes pas de ton chemin:
Beintôt de moi tu retiras ta main.
Je t'offre, ô Dieu, ma pauvre âme brisée!
Je ne suis plus qu'un objet de risée!
Ils m'ont ravi la lumière du ciel;
Ils m'ont versé l'amertume et le fiel!

CHOEUR: Samson, qu'astu fait de tes frères?

SAMSON: Hélas! Israël dans les fers,
Du ciel allirant la vengeance,
A perdu jusqu'à l'espérance
Par tous lex maux qu'il a soufferts!
Que nos tribus tes jeux trouvent grâce!
Daigne à ton peuple èpargner la douler!
Apaise toi devant leurs maux, Seigneur!
Toi, dont jamais la pitié ne se lasse!

■ ACT III

(A prison at Gaza. Samson, in chains, blinded and shorn, is grinding at a mill.)
(Chorus of Hebrew captives behind the scenes.)

SAMSON: Sore my distress, alas! my guilt and anguish!
Have pity, Lord, in misery I languish.
Away from your most righteous laws I've gone,
And now is your protecting hand withdrawn.
I offer you a heart that is broken;
Of my most bitter repentance the token.
From me all light they have taken away.
To gall is turned every hour of day.

CHORUS: Ah! why have you, Samson, taken false pledges?

SAMSON: Behold! Israel now in chains!
God's wrath from high heaven descends,
And our hearts, all deserted, rend.
Not even a ray of hope remains.
To our grief, O gracious Sovereign, awaken!
Deign to hear when we cry unto you!
Your ire appeasing, your grace we would see.
Have pity! let not our tribe be forsaken!

CHOEUR: Dieu nous confiait à ton bras
Pour nous guider dans les combats;
Samson! qu'astu fait de tes frères?

SAMSON: Frères! votre chant douloureux
Pénétrant dans ma nuit profonde,
D'une angoisse mortelle inonde
Mon coeur coupable et malheureux!
Dieu! prends ma vie en sacrifice
Pour satisfaire ton courroux.
D'Israël détourne tes coups,
Et je proclame ta justice!

CHOEUR: Pour une femme il nous vendait,
De Dalila payant les charmes.
Fils de Manoah, qu'astu fait
De notre sang et de nos larmes?

SAMSON: A tes pieds brisé, mais soumis,
Je bénis la main qui me frappe.
Fais, Seigneur, que ton peuple échappe
A la fureur des enemis!

CHOEUR: Samson! qu'astu fait de tes frères?
Qu'astu fait du Dieu de tes pères?
(Les Philistins entrent dans la prison. Ils entraines Samson. Changement.)

SCENE II

Interieur du Temple de Dagon. Statue du Dieu. Table des sacrifices. Au milieu du sanctuaire deux colonnes de marbre semblant supporter l'edifice.

La Grande Prêtre de Dagon entouré des princes Philistins. Dalila, suivie des jeunes femmes Philistins, couronnées de fleurs, des côupes à la main. Une foule de peuple remplit le Temple. Le jour se lève.

CHOEUR: L'aube qui blanchit déjà les coteaux,
D'une nuit si belle étaint les flambeaux;
Prolongeons la fête, et malgré l'aurore,
Aimons encore;
L'amour verse au coeur l'oubli de nos maux.
Au vent du matin, l'ombre de la nuit
Comme un léger voile à l'horizon fuit.
L'orient s'empourpre, et sur les montagnes
Le soleil luit,

CHORUS: Be once again at our side
In danger's strife, and combat guide!
Why, Samson, has taken false pledges,
Or let our blessed tribe be forsaken?

SAMSON: Brothers! your sad strains, like a dart
Penetrate through the night that is over me.
Bring not all my guilt before me,
Or rend still more my anguished heart!
My life in sacrifice I offer, O God, your holy wrath to stay;
Turn not your face from Israel away!

CHORUS: He sold us for a woman's charms,
With only love's false pleasure reaping!
You, Manoah's son, what will you do
With blood that's shed and bitter weeping?

SAMSON: Take this atonement that I offer!
At your feet I fall in despair,
But I bless the hand that's oppressing.
Gracious Lord, give my tribe your blessing—
My gloomy fate let them not share!

CHORUS: Ah! Why have you taken false pledges?
(The Philistines enter the prison and take Samson out. Change of scene.)

SCENE II

(Interior of the Temple of Dagon. Statue of the idol; altars, etc. Two marble pillars which seem to support the building.)

(The High Priest stands surrounded by the chief Philistines. Delilah appears, followed by young women bearing wine-cups in their hands. Day is dawning; a great throng is in the Temple.)

CHORUS: Dawn now on the hilltop sheds rosy light,
And before its gleam stars vanish from sight.
We'll rejoice although now comes the morning,
And day is dawning.
Sorrows of the heart vanish with the night.
Fast before the odorous morning breeze,
Like a fleecy veil gloomy darkness flees.
In the east the sun its clear face is showing,
In splendor's might, over all the Dardant ses rayons au sein des campagnes,

Au sein des campagnes.
(Danse.)

SCENE III

Samson—conduit par un enfant.

LE GRAND PRÊTRE: Salut! Salut au juge d'Israël,
Qui vient par sa presence égayer notre fête!
Dalila! par tes soins qu'une coups soit prête;
Verse à ton amant l'hydromel!
Il videre sa coupe en chantant sa maitresse
Et sa puissance enchanteresse!

CHOEUR: Samson! nous buvons avec toi!
A Dalila ta souveraine!
Vide la coupe san effroi:
L'iversse dissipe la peine.

SAMSON: (À part.) L'ame triste jusqu'a la mort,
Devant toi, Seigneur, je m'incline;
Que par ta volonté divine
Ici s'accomplisse mon sort!

DALILA: (S'approchant de Samson une coupe a la main.) Laisse moi prendre ta main Et te montrer le chemin,
Comme dans la sombre allée
Qui conduit à la vallée,
Le jour où suivant mes pas
Tu m'enlacais de tes bras!
Tu gravissais les montagnes
Pour arriver jusqu'à moi,
Et je fuyais mes compagnes
Pour être seule avec toi.
Souviens-toi de nos ivresses!
Souviens-toi de mes caresses!
L'amour servait mon projet!
Pour assouvir ma vengeance
Je t'arrachai ton secret:
Je l'avais vendu d'avance!
Tu croyais à cet amour,
C'est lui qui riva ta chaine!
Dalila venge en ce jour
Son dieu, son peuple et sa haine!

CHOEUR: Dalila venge en ce jour
Son dieu, son peuple, et sa haine.

SAMSON: (À part.) Quand tu parlais, je restais sourd;
Et dans le trouble de mon âme,
Hélas! j'ai profané l'amour,
En le donnant à cette femme.

GRAND PRÊTRE: Allons, Samson, divertis nous,
En redisant à ton amante
Les doux propos, les chants si doux
Dont la passion s'alimente.

land its bright rays are glowing.
(Dance.)

SCENE III

(Samson enters,—led by a child.)

HIGH PRIEST: All hail! the judge of Israel,
Who by his presence, lends joy to our festival!
Hail to you whom Delilah in love ever tends!
The cup we'll fill with hydromel!
We'll let him drink to her glory and power,
And on her name his praises shower.

CHORUS: We'll drink, Samson, we'll drink with you!
Drink, and leave care until tomorrow!
Drink to Delilah with all joy
For the cup drowns every sorrow.

SAMSON: (Aside.) All my soul is sad unto death,
At your throne your servant kneel!
Your holy will your law reveals.
Here you will receive my last breath!

DELILAH: (Approaching Samson with a wine-cup in her hand.)
Give me your hand, come by my side,
I will your uncertain footsteps guide
As, upon that day, soon ended,
To the vale our steps we wended,
And you, free from love's alarms,
Did twine around me your arms.
You did ascend lofty mountains,
Only to fly to me,
And I deserted companions
To be alone with you.
Your past love your heart confesses.
Do you recall your fond caresses?
Your passion furthered my plan
My vengeance your love impelling;
I tore your secret from you,
In my hate the knowledge selling!
You, all trustful, did confide
In her who now enchains you.
Yes, Delilah's vengeance comes,
And her god, her people, now arraign you.

CHORUS: On this day her vengeance comes,
Her God, her people, arraign you.

SAMSON: (Aside.) When you did speak, I heard you not,
Transgressing law when well did I know it.
Alas! your servant loved profaned—
On this false woman did bestow it!

HIGH PRIEST: Oh, cease your strain, and turn to her,
And tell again the oft-told story.
Rehearse your love in sweetest strain,

Que Jéhovah compatissant
A les yeux rende la lumière!
Je servirai ce Dieu puissant,
S'il peut exaucer ta prière!
Mais incapable à servir,
Ce Dieu, que tu nommes ton père.
Je puis l'outrager, le haïr,
En me riant de sa colère!

SAMSON: Tu permets, ô Dieu d'Israël!
Que ce prêtre imposteur outrage,
Dans sa fureur dans sa rage,
Ton nom, à la face du ciel!
Que ne puis je venger ta gloire,
Et par un prodige éclatant
Retrouver pour un seul instant
Les yeux, la force et la victoire!

CHOEUR: Ha! ha! ha! Rions de sa fureur!
Dans ta rage impuissante, Samson tu s'y vois pas!
Prends garde à tes pas! Samson!
Sa colère est plaisante!
Ha! ha! ha!

GRAND PRÊTRE: Viens, Dalila, rendre grâce à nos dieux
Qui font trembler Jéhovah dans les cieux!
Du grand Dagon consultons les auspices:
Versons pour lui le vin des sacrifices.
(Dalila, et the Grand Prêtre se dirigent vers à la table des sacrifices, sur laguelle se trouvenet les coupes sacres. Un feu brûle sur l'autel qui est orne des fleurs. Dalila et le Grand Prêtre, prenant les coupes, font une libatium sur le feu sacré qui s'active, puis disparait, pour repartire au 3e couplet d l'invocation.)
(Samson est resté au milieu de la scène, ayant prés de lui l'enfant qui le conduit; it est accablé par la doleur ensemble prier.)

GRAND PRÊTRE: Gloire à Dagon vainqueur!
Il aidait ta faiblesse,
Inspirant à ton coeur
Et la force et l'adresse.
O toi! le plus grand entre tous!
Toi qui fis la terre où nous sommes,
Qui ton esprit soit avec nous,
O maître des dieux et des hommes!

DALILA: Gloire à Dagon vainqueur!
Il aidait ma fablesse,
Inspirant a mon coeur
Et la force et l'adresse.
O toi! le plus grand entre tous!

Softly chant her praises and glory!
Let Jehovah show his might,
And in his mercy cure your blindness.
I will adore your boasted god,
If he will show you his kindness!
But if he fail in this extreme,
His mercy on you now to shower,
He merits but hatred and scorn—
I laugh at all his might and power!

SAMSON: Ah! do you permit this, my God?
This false priest in revenge engaging,
Who in his fury and his raging
Blasphemes even your name, O, my Lord?
To avenge you, my Father glorious,
Grant me but one proof of your might,
For a moment give me back my sight!
Hear my cry—make me victorious!

CHORUS: Ah! ah! ah! Your rage does vain appear!
You can not rouse our fear,
Even though your words are frightful,
For never will you see!
Well guarded then be!
Your anger is delightful!
Ah! ah! ah!

HIGH PRIEST: Thank you Delilah, our gods upon high,
Who shake Jehovah's weak throne in the sky!
We'll now consult the agents of Dagon;
For Samson we'll pour wine from every flagon.
(Delilah and High Priest approach the table on which are placed the sacred bowls. On the altar which is ornamented with flowers, a fire burns. Delilah and High Priest take up the bowls and pour the libation upon the sacred flame, which flashes up, then disappears, but again flames up at the third couplet of the invocation.)
(Samson stands in the center of the scene, with the child who led him. He is grief-striken, and appears to be devoutly praying.)

HIGH PRIEST: (To Delilah.) Glory forever more to Dagon the victorious,
Who inspired your weak heart with his might so all-glorious!
(To Dagon.)
O greatest of all the great,
Who the heavens and earth have created!
Ruler of gods as well as men,
With your spirit we'd be inflated!

DELILAH: Glory for evermore
To Dagon the victorious,
Who inspired my weak heart
With his might so all-glorious!
O greatest of all the great,
Who the heavens and earth have

Toi qui fis la terre où nos sommes,
Que ton esprit soit avec nous,
O maître des dieux et des hommes!

CHOEUR: Marque d'un signe
Nos longs troupeaux;
Mûris la vigne
Sur nos coteaux;
Rends à la plaine
Notre moisson
Que, dans sa haine,
Brûla Samson!

DALILA ET GRAND PRÊTRE: Recois sur nos autels
Le sang de nos victimes,
Qu t'offrent des mortels
Pour expier leurs crimes.
Aux yeux de tes prêtres divins,
Pouvant seuls contempler ta face,
Montre l'avenir qui se cache
Aux regards des autres humains!

CHOEUR: Dieu, sois propice
A nos destins!
Que ta justice
Aux Philistins
Donne la gloire
Dans les combats;
Que la victoire
Suive nos pas!

DALILA ET GRAND PRÊTRE: Dagon se révèle
La flamme nouvelle
Sur l'autel
Renaît de la cendre:
L'immortel
Pour nous va descendre!
C'est le dieu
Qui par sa présence
Montre sa puissance!
Ah!
L'immortel, pour nous va descendre!
C'est le dieu qui par sa presence
Montre sa puissance.
En ce lieu.
Sur l'autel, renaît de la cendre!
Dagon se révèle!

CHOEUR: C'est le dieu qui par sa présence
Montre sa puissance
En ce lieu.

GRAND PRÊTRE: (A Samson.)
Pour que le sort soit favorable
Allons, Samson, viens avec nous
A Dagon, le dieu redoutable, created!

Ruler of gods as well as men,
With your spirit we'd be inflated!

CHORUS: Mark with your blessing our flock and field;
Make our vineyards with richness yield!
Give, in our harvest, good unalloyed,
For all our substance foes have destroyed!

DELILAH AND HIGH PRIEST:
Upon your altar blessed
A victim's blood we offer;
To expiate our sins
Our gifts in love we proffer.
May thy priests who all humbly kneel,
See your face so divinely lighted;
Even though we are not so clear-sighted,
To their eyes our future reveal!

CHORUS: O listen, our god, when thus we cry!
May your blessed aid be ever near!
You are so mighty; gird us with power,
Make us victorious in combat's hour!

DELILAH AND HIGH PRIEST: Dagon's might surprising!
Flames anew are rising
From the ashes of the sacred altar!
God makes the flames upward tower.
Thus he shows his power.
Ah!
From the ashes of the sacred altar!
God makes the flames upward tower.
Thus he shows his power.
Bless his name!

CHORUS: Let our hearts with fear never falter!
Dagon's might surprising!
Ah! God makes the flames upward tower;
Thus he shows his power,
In this flame.

HIGH PRIEST: (To Samson.) O may our fate be all propitious!
Come, Samson, come, our gods to please!

Offrir ta coupe à deux genoux!
(A l'enfant.)
Guidez ses pas vers le milieu du temple,
Pour que de loin le peuple le contemple.

SAMSON: Seigneur, inspire moi, ne m'abandonne pas!
Vers les piliers de marbre, enfant, quide mes pas!
(L'enfant conduit Samson.)

CHOEUR: Dagon se révèle,
La flamme nouvelle,
Sur l'autel renaît de la cendre;
C'est le dieu,
Qui par sa presence
Montre sa puissance
Ence lieu!
Dieu, sois propice
A nos destins!
Que ta justice
Aux Philistins
Donne la gloire
Dans les combats!
Que la victoire
Suive nos pas!
Devant toi d'Israël
Disparait l'insolence!
Nos bras guidés par ton esprit
Dans les combats.
Ou par tes charmes.
Ont vaincu ce peuple maudit,
Bravant ta colère et tes armes
A nos destins
Dieu, sois propice, etc.
Gloire à Dagon!
Gloire à Dagon!
(Samson placé entre les deux pilars et charchant a les ébranler.)

SAMSON: Souviens-toi de ton serviteur!
Qu'ils ont privé de la lumière!
Daigne pour un instant, Seigneur,
Me rendre ma force première!
Qu'avec toi je me venge, Ô Dieu!
En les écrasant en ce lieu!
(Le Temple s'écroule au milieu des cris.)
(Rideau.)

And to Dagon mighty and direful
Present your offering on your knees!
(To the child.)
Out to the middle of the temple guide him,
That all beholding may in scorn deride him!

SAMSON: Inspire me with your might,
With me, O Lord, abide!
On to the marble pillars,
My child, my footsteps guide.
(The child leads Samson between the two pillars.)

CHORUS: Dagon's might surprising!
Flames anew are rising!
From the ashes of the sacred altar
God makes the flames upward tower:
Thus he shows his power.
Bless his name!
O listen, our God, when thus we cry!
May your blessed aid be ever near
You are so mighty! Gird us with power!
Make us victorious in combat's hour!
Before you Israel is all bereft of power!
Guide our arm; gird us with power.
Make us victorious; give us victory in combat's hour!
May this cursed tribe in this hour
Feel your direful anger and power.
O listen, our god, etc.
Glory! glory!
(Samson has placed himself between the pillars and attempts to remove them.)

SAMSON: Lord, your servant remember now!
You made him blind your just wrath showing.
For one sole moment make him strong,
His power of old on him bestowing!
To avenge me, O lend your might!
Let the foe be destroyed in your sight!
(The Temple falls.)
(Cries and shrieks of the people.)

(Curtain descends.)

The Bartered Bride (1866)

Music by Bedrich Smetana ■ Libretto by Karel Salbina

The Bartered Bride is a comic opera in three acts. Set to a libretto by Karel Sabina, it was first performed at the Provisional Theatre in Prague on May 30, 1866. In a Czech village during a spring holiday, Marenka and Jeník are unhappy because her parents want her to marry a wealthy man instead of Jeník. No one knows anything about Jeník's parentage. The village marriage broker, Kecal, convinces her parents that Vasek, the younger son of Tobias Mícha, a rich landlord, would make a suitable son-in-law. Marenka refuses Vasek. When he arrives in the village, Marenka tells him terrible things about his intended. She suggests that he marry someone much prettier and nicer. Kecal asks Jeník to give up Marenka for money and Jeník agrees on the condition that her groom be Vasek. Kecal gathers the villagers to witness Jeník's signing of the agreement; everyone is horrified that Marenka has been bartered! Vasek cannot find the strange young woman he has met, but he comes upon a traveling circus and falls for Esmeralda, a ballerina. He dresses up as a dancing bear when the real performer is too drunk to go on. Marenka, deeply upset by Jeník's arrangement, agrees to marry Vasek, who is delighted when he discovers who she really is. Tobias Mícha arrives and recognizes Jeník as his long-lost eldest son. Jeník shows him the document containing Kecal's promise to give him 700 florins when Marenka marries Mícha's son. Everyone is highly amused, especially when a dangerous roaming bear is discovered to be Vasek, still in costume!

■ ERSTER ACT

(Der Hauptplatz des Dorfes mit Wirthshaus zur Zeit des Kirchweihfestes in Frühling.)

ERSTE SCENE

Chor der Landleute. MARIE und HANS.

CHORUS OF VILLAGERS
Seht am Strauch die Knospen springen, Hört die munter'n Vögel singen! Glanz und Jubel weit und breit, weit und breit! O du schöne Frühlingszeit, Frühlingszeit! O du schöne Frühlingszeit, Frühlingszeit!
Jeder leicht ein Schätzlein findet In der Jugend heissen Jahren, Doch bevor man fest sich bindet, Soll man keine Vorsicht sparen.

CHOR: Ehe, Wehe
Sind gar nah' verwandt!
Mög' uns Gott bewahren!
Mancher hat's erfahren.
Liebe lockt uns in die Falle,
Das ist leider weltbekannt!
Darum nehmt in Acht Euch Alle,
Ihr Verliebten rings im Land!

HANS: Sprich, mein liebes Herz, warum
Du so schweigsam bist und traurig!

■ ACT I

(Main square in the village, with an inn at the side, at the time of the church fair in spring.)

SCENE I

Marie and Hans. Chorus of Villagers.

CHORUS OF VILLAGERS:
1. Why should we not be rejoicing? Why should we not be rejoicing When we have the best of health, best of health, When we have the best of health, best of health?
Those who married should have tarried, For to them all joys are ended. Husband out to seek his pleasure, Wife at home, no moment's leisure.
2. Only he is truly happy, Who possesses this great wealth, this great wealth, Who possesses this great wealth.
Those who married should have tarried, For to them all joys are ended. Husband out to seek his pleasure, Wife at home, no moment's leisure.

CHORUS: Woe is me!
Woe is me!
Pleasure at an end;
Cares their bosom rend,
Troubles and vexations.
Why should we not be rejoicing
When we have the best of health?
Only he is truly happy
Who possesses this great wealth.

HANS: Why are you so downcast
And so sad, my darling?

MARIE: Wie auch sollte ich's nicht sein!?
Hat die Mutter doch gesagt,
Dass er, der für mich Erwählte,
Heute zu uns kommen würde!
Weisst Du keine Hilfe?

HANS: Höre!
Wenn der Freier Dir verhasst,
Mög' er immer kommen nur.
Bleibe standhaft! Glaube mir:
Niemand zwingt ein starkes Herz!

CHOR: Nur nicht klagen, nicht verzagen!
Liebe lehrt uns Leid ertragen,
Alles, Alles darf sie wagen!
Seht am Strauch die Knospen springen,
Hört die munter'n Vögel singen!
Glanz und Jubel weit und breit!
O, du schöne Frühlingszeit!
Aber nehmt in Acht Euch Alle,
Ihr Verliebten, rings im Land:
Liebe lockt uns in die Falle,
Das ist leider weltbekannt!
Nun zum Tanze! Rührt die Glieder!
Lustig geht es auf und nieder!
Hei, da zeige Jedermann,
Was er kann!
(Chor ab.)

ZWEITE SCENE

MARIE und HANS.

MARIE: Zum Tanze rufen sie mich heut' umsonst....
O, mir ist weh' um's Herz.

HANS: Mein Liebchen, wie? Noch immer trübe Augen?
Was kann es helfen?

MARIE: Sadness is my fate!
My dear mother told me
That the man chosen to be my husband
Is to meet me here to-day.
O God! How will all this end?

HANS: Listen!
Have no fear, and trust in me;
Then all will be well. If your will
Is strong and firm, to their wishes
You'll not incline. Then you'll be mine.

CHORUS: Stop your sighing, stop complaining.
Your true love will sure be gaining
Its reward for ever remaining.
Why should we not be rejoicing
If we have the best of health?
Why should we not be rejoicing
If we have the best of health?
Only he is truly happy
Who possesses this great wealth.
Only he is truly happy
Who possesses this great wealth.
O come with us, dance and warble;
Do not let anger fill your bosom.
Come then! To music lightly step.
Sing and dance.
(Exit Chorus.)

SCENE II

Marie and Hans.

MARIE: Then is it really all to happen?...
Unhappy me!

HANS: Why! my darling! What makes you so very sad?
What has happened?

MARIE: Kaum zu denken wag' ich's! Bald werden kommen sie zur Brautschau Micha, Vater und Sohn, und um mich werben!	MARIE: Do not be surprised! Today Micha and his son are to visit us And ask for my hand.
HANS: Nun gut. . . Was willst Du thun?	HANS: And you! What will be your answer?
MARIE: Was soll ich thun? Ja, wollte Gott, dass ich etwas wüsste! Eins nur weiss ich, Dass ich für alle Zeiten bin die Deine! Wenn nur die Eltern mich nicht zwingen werden!	MARIE: What will be my answer? How can you ask me such a question? Can I belong to any one but you, Hans, my darling? But my father is under obligations.
HANS: Das wäre freilich traurig.	HANS: That is really awful.
MARIE: Doch Dich scheint Es wenig zu bekümmern. . . Gar so ruhig, Freund? . . . Wenn Dir der widrige Fall gelegen käme? . . . Ich bin verzweifelt, voller Angst und Sorgen, Und Dich berührt dies Alles kaum! . . . Ach, wenn Mein treues Herz Du hintergingest, wenn heimlich Du eine Andere geliebt!?	MARIE: You seem timid, Hans! or even bashful, As if you were afraid of something, or somebody, Swear to me, Hans, that you have no other love, Nor obligation, that binds you. Believe me, More than once I had an idea That you had another sweetheart.
HANS: O niemals!	HANS: No, never!
MARIE: Gern ja will ich Dir vertrauen, Gläubig blicken auf zu Dir! Ach, worauf noch könnt' ich bauen, Wärst Du, Liebster, untreu mir! Der von fern Du hergekommen, Wer Du bist, ich weiss es nicht, Habe Dich zum Schatz genommen Auf Dein ehrliches Gesicht! O sage, was Dich fort von Hause in Die Fremde trieb? Von Deiner frühen Jugend Sprachst Du noch nie zu mir!	MARIE: If I ever should find out That such a thing is really so, I would turn against you, Hatred take the place of love's pure glow. Tell me now, my dearest lover, How came you to such a pass, As to leave your home in anger, And perhaps give up a lass? Tell me now, as your past is shrouded in deep mystery, So that my father even noticed it, and spoke of it.
HANS: Nur ungern red' ich Davon, es ist zu schmerzlich! . . . Wohl bin ich Aus einem reichen Hause, doch es starb Mir die geliebte Mutter. Bald darauf Nahm sich der Vater eine zweite Frau. Voll Falschheit hat sie mir des Vaters Herz Entwendet, . . . aus dem Hause jagt' er mich! Bei fremden Leuten dien' ich nun um's Brot. Mit der Mutter sank zu Grabe Meiner Jugend ganzes Glück, Was ich früh verloren habe, Bringt kein Sehnen mir zurück!	HANS: My! history is really a painful subject. I am a son of comfortably well off parents. But I lost my mother very early. Unfortunately my father married a second time, And my stepmother soon drove me out of the house. I went out into the world, And made my living among strangers. A mother is a sweetest blessing, A curse who takes her place! With no feeling for another, But only hatred in her face.
MARIE: O Du guter, armer Knabe, Wie beklag' ich Dein Geschick! Doch getrost nur: freundlich labe Dich ein warmer Liebesblick.	MARIE: A mother is sweetest blessing, A curse who takes her place, With no feeling for another And only hatred in her face.
HANS: Nun wirst Du länger wohl nicht zweifeln Heimath Und Vaterhaus ist Deine Liebe für Den Frühverwaisten!	HANS: There may happen what will, True and pure affection Will resist all force To bring about defection.
MARIE: Nun in Lust und Leide, Nun in Schmerz und Freude sind vereint wir Beide! Wollen miteinand' durch's Leben Wie ein Schwalbenpärchen schweben, Hoffen und vertrauen, und uns ein Nestchen bau'n. Heimlich, und leise nur unser Glück verkünden, hoffen und ver trau'n, uns ein Nestchen bau'n . . . Beide Beide wollen wir vertrau'n! Beide, beide, beide, beide vertrau'n, wollen wir vertrau'n,	MARIE: True and pure affection Will resist all force To bring about defection. We have sworn eternal love, And our word shall be above All time and change. We will be faithful forever Love, love, And our word is, is above all time and change. We will be faithful forever, ever, Faithful forever. We will be ever faithful, faithful, Faithful, we will be faithful for ever.
HANS: Nun in Lust und Leide, Nun in Schmerz und Freude sind vereint wir Beide! Wollen mit ei-nand' durch's Leben Wie ein Schwalbenpärchen schweben, Hoffen und vertrauen uns ein Nestchen bauen, Hoffen und vertrauen, uns ein Nestchen bau'n, Heimlich uns, verstohl'ner Weise Unser Glück verkünden leise! Hoffen und vertrauen, Uns ein Nestchen bauen, Hoffen und vertrauen, Uns ein Nestchen bau'n, Sind vereint wir Beide, nun in Lust und Leide Beide, beide, beide vertrau'n, wollen wir vertrau'n,	HANS: True and pure affection Will resist all force To bring about defection We have sworn eternal love, And our word is above All time and change. We will, we will, We will be faithful for ever. We have sworn eternal love, And our word is above All time and change. We will, we will, We will be faithful for ever, Faithful for ever, Faithful for ever
MARIE: Doch still! Man kommt! O, grosser Gott, der Vater! Man sucht mich schon!	MARIE: Here they are! Father is coming with them. They are looking for me.
HANS: Dann ist's Zeit wohl, dass ich geh'! Scheiden! Scheiden! Das thut weh. Lebwohl, bis ich Dich wiederseh'! (Ab.) (Marie verbirgt sich.)	HANS: They must not see me. Farewell, my love Think often of me. (Hans exits.) (Marie hides.)

DRITTE SCENE

SCENE III

Kruschina, Kathinka und Kezal.	Krushina, Kathinka, and Ketsal.
KEZAL: Alles ist so gut wie richtig, Und das Eine nur ist wichtig: Euer Wort gabt Ihr zum Pfande. Und somit ist Alles gut. Ja, was glücklich ist im Lande, Bracht' ich Alles unter'n Hut. Denn auf Scharfblick und Verstande Der Erfolg allein beruht. Kommt das Pärchen erst zusammen, Ei, so soll mich Gott verdammen, Stehen beide nicht in Flammen, Lodern beide nicht in Gluth!	KETSAL: Now I say, with great assurance, You gave your word and promise To uphold your pact and bargain, Then everything is done. Only trust to my experience And my great wisdom. For many a doubtful case, Which to others was a problem, I brought to a happy close. And perhaps if your dear daughter Should refuse to marry, Then you'll see how I'll teach her to yield and to obey you. So trust me.
KRUSCHINA: (zu Kathinka.) Nun, so sag', was meinst Du, Alte? Steh' ich doch schon halb im Wort!	KRUSHINA: (To Kathinka). Well! what do you think, mother? I—I am satisfied.
KATHINKA: Eines ich mir vorbehalte: Soll es sein, dann nicht sofort! Ohne uns'rer Tochter Beirath Kommt zu Stande keine Heirath; Bin zu fragen gern erbötig, Ob sie schon entschlossen sei!	KATHINKA: This is so sudden, and too much for one day, For we must stop to consider, and ask the bride, If there is no impediment Or some other objection in the way.
KEZAL: Gar nicht nöthig, gar nicht nöthig! Euer Wort . . . es bleibt dabei.	KETSAL: What objection! What objection! Your decision and my craft Will overcome every obstacle.
KATHINKA: Doch erst seh'n muss sie den Freier	KATHINKA: It depends on who is the bridegroom.

KEZAL: Auch noch sehen? Ei, zum Geier!
Nichts da giebt es zu bekritteln!
Würd' ich sonst wohl hier vermitteln?
Bin ich denn zum Spasse da?
Micha's lieber Sohn wird Allen,
Gleich dem Vater, wohlgefallen!
Nun, Ihr kennt ihn ja!
Hochgeehrt!
Sein Besitz ist unter Brüdern
Volle dreissig Tausend werth.
Alles ist so gut wie richtig,
Und das Eine nur ist wichtig:
Euer Wort gabt Ihr zum Pfande,
Und somit ist Alles gut.

KATHINKA: Doch man will erst wissen, was man thut.

KRUSCHINA: (für sich). Ihr zu widersprechen, fehlt der Muth.

KEZAL: Ja, was glücklich ist im Lande,
Bracht' ich Alles unter'n Hut.

KRUSCHINA: Nun freilich! Den Tobias Micha kannte
Als Kind ich schon, doch wenig habe ich Erfahren noch von seinen beiden Söhnen,
Kaum, dass ich ihrer Namen mich erinn're

KEZAL: Wie seltsam! Denn vor wenig Jahren habt
Ihr ihm versprochen Euer Töchterlein
Dem Sohn zur Frau zu geben!

KATHINKA: Sagt doch, sagt:
Für welchen von den beiden denn bewerbt
Ihr Euch?

KEZAL: Könnt Ihr noch fragen? Hat er ja
Nur Einen, der heisst Wenzel. Denn der Sohn
Von seiner ersten Frau ist längst verschollen,
Ja, wie man glaubt, gestorben.

KRUSCHINA: Und was ist
Mit unserm Wenzel? Wohl nicht ohne Grund
Hält er sich fern, versteckt?

KEZAL: Gekommen wär' er mit, wie gerne!
Doch zarte Rücksicht hält ihn ferne,
Er sieht auf Anstand, feinen Ton.
Ja, seine Tugenden und Sitten,
Sie machen überall ihn wohlgelitten,
Wohl jede Mutter wünscht sich solchen Sohn
's ist kein Schlemmer und kein Säufer,
Spätausgeher, Kneipenläufer,
Auch kein Prahler und kein Pracher,
Kartenspieler, Schuldenmacher,
Kein verweg'ner Messerträger,
Pascher, Schwärzer, wilder Jäger,
Auch kein Zänker
Und kein Stänker,

KETSAL: Who the bridegroom?
In vain is such a question.
You can see that he is proper,
If security go I.
Tobias Micha you know surely.
But perhaps not. Then I say,
For his farm and buildings
I'll give forty thousand cash.
Now I say with great assurance,
You gave your word and promise,
To uphold your pact and bargain,
Then everything is done.

KATHINKA: This is so sudden, and too much for one day.

KRUSHINA: (to himself). I—I am satisfied.

KETSAL: Only trust to my experience
And my great wisdom, . . . happy close.

KRUSHINA: Surely! I knew Tobias Micha when he was a child.
He had two sons,
Hans by the first wife
And Wenzel by the second.
Of these, I know neither one nor the other.

KETSAL: That is true. Many years ago,
Before witnesses, you promised
To give your daughter
To his son for a wife.

KATHINKA: But say! for which of the sons are you speaking?

KETSAL: For which one? He has only one,
And his name is Wenzel.
The other one, by the first Wife, is a tramp and good for Nothing. Nobody knows where he is.

KRUSHINA: Well, what kind of a fellow is this Wenzel?
Why didn't you bring him with you at once?

KETSAL: He did not come now because he is bashful.
He is not flighty but thoroughly in earnest.
He is as gentle as gentlest lamb,
though of high condition.
Faults he has not any, nor vices.
Every mother would be proud to have a son
With such a lovely disposition.
He is neither tall nor little,
Nor's his health so very brittle.
Neither proud, nor very naughty,
Neither loud, nor rough, nor haughty,
Neither lavish, nor too stingy.
Well, in short, he is as normal
As a human being can be.
With a farm worth thirty thousand.
Well then! Well then!

Läst'rer, Flucher,
Händelsucher!
Er ist wohlabgeschliffen,
Er ist leicht von Begriffen,
Nüchtern,
Schüchtern,
Fein im Ton . . .
Doch, das sagt' ich schon.

KRUSCHINA und KATHINKA:
Wär' er nur gleich mitgekommen!
Staunend haben wir's vernommen,
Und sind sehr erstaunt davon.

VIERTE SCENE

Marie und die Vorigen.

KEZAL: Seht, da kommt sie sonder Ahnung!
Zeit jetzt wär 'es zur Vermahnung!

MARIE: Lieber Vater, liebe Mutter,
Was wollt Ihr mir sagen?

KEZAL: Darf ich, schönstes Kindchen,
Dich wohl fragen:
Hast Du nicht daran gedacht,
Dass ich Dir was mitgebracht?
Rathe schnell, wer rathen kann!
Einen jungen Mann.

MARIE: Was geht mich an Ein fremder Mann?

KRUSCHINA: Sollst sein Weibchen sein,
Liebes Töchterlein!

KATHINKA: (leise zu Marie).
Willst Du aber ihn nicht haben.
Nun, so sagst Du nein!

MARIE: Ich sein Weibchen sein?
Ei, was fällt Euch ein!?
Er mag ruhig weiter traben
Und wo anders frei'n!

KATHINKA: Sollst sein Weibchen sein,
Liebes Töchterlein!
Willst Du aber ihn nicht haben,
Nun, so sagst Du nein!

KRUSCHINA und KEZAL: Sollst sein Weibchen sein,
Liebes Töchterlein!
Diesem feinen jungen Knaben
Deine Liebe weih'n!

KEZAL: Nicht lange mehr sich zieren!
Nur keine Zeit verlieren!
Ein fröhlich Ja gesprochen,
Und Hochzeit giebt es in vier Wochen!

MARIE: Fein langsam! Denn es eilt nicht sehr
Ein Umstand ist dagegen
Gewichtig, voll und schwer.

KEZAL: Umstand hin . . . Umstand her . . .
Was ist daran gelegen!
Nein, Hindernisse giebt's nicht mehr,
Wo meine Kräfte sich regen!

MARIE: So muss ich bekennen?
Muss meinen Liebsten nennen?

Who can ask for more!
He did not come now because he is bashful.
He is not flighty but thoroughly in earnest.
He is as gentle as gentlest lamb,
Though of high condition.

KRUSHINA AND KATHINKA:
Your description is sufficient,
Your description is sufficient.
We trust your honesty.

SCENE IV

Marie and the preceding.

KETSAL: Now we have her, now we have her.
Seriously, we now can take her.

MARIE: My dear father, my dear mother!
Are you looking for me?

KETSAL: I just asked them if you love somebody,
If you have not any swain
Who to your love would attain.
I can bring you a young man
Who will be to your gain.

MARIE: What! who will be to my gain?

KRUSHINA: You will see him
And can judge for yourself.

KATHINKA: (whispers to Marie).
If you do not like him,
Why, he can go by himself.

MARIE: I shall see him,
And can judge for myself.
If I do not like him,
Why, he can go by himself.

KATHINKA: You will see him,
And can judge for yourself,
If you do not like him,
Why, he can go by himself.

KRUSHINA AND KETSAL: You will see him,
And can judge for yourself.
If you do not like him,
Why, he can go by himself.

KETSAL: Then let us at once
The contract put together.
Let Marie give her consent now,
And all will be fixed forever.

MARIE: That—that cannot be done as quickly as you think. No, really not,
For there is a something which will prevent it.

KETSAL: Something this, something that,
No obstacle can ever stop me.
To whatever I put my mind
A complete success will surely be.

MARIE: I love another
More than a brother.

KEZAL: Pah! Von solchen Kindereien
Will ich Dich gar bald befreien!

MARIE: Treue hab' ich ihm geschworen . . .

KEZAL: Damit ist noch nichts verloren!

MARIE: Der zur Gattin mich erkoren!

KEZAL: Laufen lass den armen Thoren!

MARIE: Ihm gehören Herz und Hand.

KEZAL: Das war eitel Spiel und Tand!
Wozu hätte ich Verstand?
Dafür bin ich ja bekannt!
Und zum Ziele wird gelangen,
Wer die rechte Strasse fand.

MARIE, KRUSCHINA, KATHINKA: Ja, zum Ziele wird gelangen,
Wer die rechte Strasse fand.

MARIE: Mit Hans bin ich vereinigt, denn wir haben
Uns ew'ge Treue heute noch gelobt!

KRUSCHINA: (mit gewaltsamer Energie). Was? Ohne Vorspruch und Bewilligung?
Ich, als der Vater, sage: Nein! Ich steh'
Dem Micha doch im Wort, sie seinem Sohn
Zu geben.

KATHINKA: O, wie ungeschickt von Dir,
Dass Du's versprochen hast!

KEZAL: (zieht ein Papier hervor). Ja, schwarz auf weiss!
Hier steht es Alles deutlich, unterschrieben
Von den Parteien und den Zeugen auch.

MARIE: Nur bin ich nicht dabei! (Schlägt ihm das Papier aus der Hand.)
Und also gilt
Es nichts! Was ich gesagt, ist meine Meinung
Und soll es bleiben!
(Ab.)

KEZAL: Darauf war ich nicht gefasst!

KRUSCHINA: Von Euch war es ein grosser Fehler, Allein zu kommen! Warum habt Ihr uns
Den Wenzel nicht gleich mitgebracht? Er hätte
Bei seiner Braut sich vorgestellt zum Mind'sten.

KEZAL: Ja freilich! Doch er war nicht zu bewegen.
Er ist verzagt und schüchtern, des Verkehres
Mit Weibern gänzlich ungewohnt.

KRUSCHINA: Dann wird es schwerlich etwas werden.

KETSAL: Give him up as you'll be no pair,
Let him seek his fortune elsewhere.

MARIE: My word I gave him, and my troth.

KETSAL: Word and troth are of no value.

MARIE: Our contract also has been signed.

KETSAL: We shall tear it into pieces.

MARIE: Just you try, just you try.

KETSAL: Trust all to my ready wit.
All will be well if you have grit.
And my massive brain,
My mind, my mind,
Will soon conquer the whole world.
What no one can unravel
That my great mind can achieve.

MARIE, KRUSHINA, KATHINKA: What no one can unravel
That his great mind can achieve.

MARIE: My Hans will never give me up,
I can stake my life on it.

KRUSHINA: (with forceful energy). Give you up, or not give you up,
That is not the question.
I put myself under obligation
To Tobias Micha before witnesses.

KATHINKA: But pray, dear husband!
What obligation?

KETSAL: (drawing out a paper). Here it is! Black on white!
Signed by Micha, Krushina, and witnesses.

MARIE: What does that amount to? (Knocks the paper out of his hand.)
That is of no value.
Hans and I know nothing of it, and we never can yield.
(Exit.)

KETSAL: Oh, what a perverted world this is.

KRUSHINA: Where did you leave Micha, and his son, that honored and respected bridegroom?
It would have been proper for him to speak to Marie.

KETSAL: Oh well! of course he is not accustomed to speak to women.
He is a bashful as a country maiden.

KRUSHINA: Then the courting will be hard.

KEZAL: Hört, Was ich Euch rathen will: Das Beste wäre,
Ihr sprächet Euch jetzt einmal gründlich aus.
Mit Vater Micha in dem Wirthshaus dort!
Man stört Euch nicht, denn Alles läuft zum Tanze.
Mit Hans will ich inzwischen reden, ich Krieg' ihn herum!
(Sie gehen nach verschiedenen Seiten ab.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

(Das Landvolk versammelt sich vor dem Wirthshause, die ältlichen setzen sich an die Tische und trinken; die Jüngeren bereiten sich zum Tanz vor.)

CHOR: Durch die Reihen Hinzufliegen!
Sich zu Zweien Anzuschmiegen!
Herz am Herzen
Fühlt man schlagen.
Unter Scherzen.
Fortgetragen!
Frohe Weise,
Laut und leise
Sollst Du geben
Neues Leben!
Ging'es, wie es uns gefällt,
Tanze mit die ganze Welt!
Violin' und Clarinette
Jauchzen trillernd am die Wette
Selbst dem alten Rumpelbass
Macht das tolle Wesen Spass.

ENDE DES ERSTEN ACTES.

■ ZWEITER ACT

Wirthsstube.

ERSTE SCENE

(Hans, mit jungen Landleuten, sitzt am Tisch auf der einen, Kezal auf der anderen Seite der Stube. Sie trinken Bier.)

CHOR: Wie schäumst Du in den Gläsern, edler Gerstensaft!
An Dir trinkt sich ein Jeder Feuer und Kraft!
Dich preisen die Jungen und Alten. Heissassa!
Wenn wir bei'm Biere sitzen, Mann gereiht an Mann,
Was geht uns das Andere weiter noch an?
In Gnaden wird uns Gott erhalten!
Heissassa!

HANS: (steht auf). Ihr Freunde, wohl stimm' ich von Herzen mit ein, Doch denk' ich dabei auch an das Liebchen mein.
Denn das allein ist Himmelslust auf Erden:
Zu lieben und geliebt zu werden!

KETSAL: And, now, my dear sir, I think it best for you to go over
To the other inn, and meet Micha and his son as if by chance.
It will be noisy here;
They are going to dance.
Meanwhile, I'll look up Hans and convince him
That it's for the best
(They go off in different directions.)

SCENE V

(The villagers come in. The older ones seat themselves at the tables and drink. The younger ones prepare to dance.)

CHORUS: Come, my darling!
Start the bounding
While the Polka
Still is sounding.
Hands entwining,
Eyes in trance,
Let the whole world
Join the dance.
Hear the basses
Set in motion,
All the band
In great commotion.
All the earth
Is moving fast.
Let us dance
While life does last.

End of Act I.

■ ACT II

Interior of the inn.

SCENE I

(Hans, with young villagers, sits at a table on the one side and Ketsal on the other side of the room. They drink beer.)

CHORUS: Oh, beer a blessing really is to all;
For troubles and worries it drives to the wall,
And gives us the strength to bear our fate. Hurrah!
A man who does not drink is a solemn guest.
The world full of troubles is even at its best.
So let us partake and not come late.
Hurrah!

HANS: (gets up). Well, boys, believe me, I say it from my heart,
That love really is above all wine and beer
The only thing that makes life worth living.
And makes us hopefully look to the future.

CHOR: (Tenöre.) Aus Liebe verlierst Du den Kopf noch, Du Thor!
(Basse.) (auf Kezal anspielend). Sich' lieber beizeiten vor Dem da Dich vor!

KEZAL: (steht ebenfalls auf). Was hilft die Liebe Dem, der Hab' und Gut verlor'!?
Zuverlässig ist nur Eines,
Und das ist das baare Geld!
Armer Schlucker, hast Du keines
Dann verlacht Dich alle Welt!
(Erhebt das Glas.)
Hoch das baare Geld!

HANS: (erhebt das Glas). Mein Mädchen ist's die mir gefällt!
(Mädchen treten nach und nach herein und betheiligen sich an dem Tanze nach dem Trinkliede.)

CHOR: Wie schäumst Du in den Gläsern, edler Gerstensaft,
An Dir trinkt sich ein Jeder Feuer und Kraft!
Dich preisen die Jungen und Alten. Heissassa!
(Tanz Furiant). (Nach dem Tanze ziehen die Mädchen die jungen Leute aus dem Wirthsstube. Alle ab.)

ZWEITE SCENE

WENZEL: (schüchtern eintretend). Theu' ... theurer Sohn, Sprach Mütterlein,
Zeit ist es schon
Für Dich zu frei'n!
Fa ... fass' Dir Muth
Und sei ein Mann:
Was Jeder thut,
Ist wohlgethan.
Si ... sicherlich,
Kehrt' ich nach Haus,
La ... lachte mich.
A ... alles aus.

DRITTE SCENE

MARIE und WENZEL.

(Beide lachen laut, wie sie sich erblicken.)

MARIE: Seid der Verlobte Ihr von Kruschina's Mariechen nicht?

WENZEL: (erst erschreckt, dann zutraulicher). A ... allerdings, mein schö ...
Schö ... schönes Kind, der bin ich.

MARIE: Hab' ich's Euch Doch angesehen ... Nein, wie hübsch Ihr seid!
Die Mädchen alle hier im Dorfe schon Beklagen Euch.

WENZEL: (ängstlich). Beklagen mich? Warum?

MARIE: Euere Braut–ich sag's Euch–meint's nicht ehrlich.
'nen Andern liebt sie!

CHORUS: (Tenors). Hans, you are in love, we see with half an eye.
(Basses) (alluding to Ketsal). Look, that one his finger may put in your pie!

KETSAL: (also stands up). No, if it should be so, he thereby will be no loser.
Good advice and real sound money
Are the greatest powers in this world.
He who uses them with wisdom
Cannot, cannot ever go astray.
(Raises his glass.)
Here's to sound money.

HANS: (raises his glass). Here's to love the best of all.
(Girls enter one by one, and take part in the dance, after the drinking song.)

CHORUS: Oh, beer a blessing really is unto us all;
For troubles and worries it drives to the wall,
And gives us strength to bear our fate. Hurrah!
(Dance Furiant, a Bohemian national dance. After the dance the girls drag the young men out of the room.)
(Exeunt.)

SCENE II

WENZEL: (enters timidly) Momother dear Said to me
That she would like soon to see Me get happily Married.
So long had I tarried
That they all Round about,
Do think me A great big lout.

SCENE III

Marie and Wenzel

(Both begin to laugh, when they catch sight of one another.)

MARIE: Are you not the one chosen to become Marie Krushina's husband?

WENZEL: (first afraid, then more trustingly). Ye-ye-yes, of course.
But ho-how did you know it?

MARIE: Why! Cannot every one see it?
How dressed up you are!
The whole town is talking about you
And is sorry for you.

WENZEL: (anxiously). So-so-sorry for me! and why?

MARIE: Because she will deceive you.
She loves another.

WENZEL: (einfältig). Ka ... ka ... kann sie lieben
Denn einen Anderen? Ich bin ja da!

MARIE: (lacht). Haha! Kennt sie Euch denn, und kennt Ihr sie?

WENZEL: Ke ... kennen? Nein. Do ... doch sie weiss, dass ich Ihr Ga ... Ga ... Gatte werde!

MARIE: Mag wohl sein,
Und eben d'rum lacht sie Euch aus!
Sie wird
Euch schmäh'n, Euch hintergeh'n,
Euch quälen bis
Zu Tode.

WENZEL: (entsetzt). Wa ... was sagst Du da? Doch wenn
Die Mutter haben will, dass ich sie nehme!
Heirathen mu ... mu ... muss ich nun einmal!

MARIE: Ei, freilich, warum nicht?
Das sollt Ihr auch!
(Kokett.)
Es giebt ja hier noch and're Mädchen! –Sucht
Euch eine aus!

WENZEL: (erleichtert). Ich will's.

MARIE: Ich weiss Euch einen lieben Schatz,
Den Mancher schon begehrt,
Ein schönes Mädchen, hier am Platz,
Die lange Euch verehrt.

WENZEL: (froh).
Wär's möglich wohl? Versteh' ich recht?
Ein schönes Kind? Das wär' nicht schlecht!
Jedoch Mariechen wird sich grämen.

MARIE: (immer überlegen und doppelsinnig). Die wird sich schon den Andern nehmen.

WENZEL: Doch mein Mütterlein,
Das wird Zeter schrei'n.

MARIE: Sie wird mit Eurer Wahl zufrieden sein.

WENZEL: Ist schön die Andre?

MARIE: Gerade wie Mariechen.

WENZEL: Und jung an Jahren?

MARIE: Gerade wie Mariechen.

WENZEL: Doch will sie mich denn auch zum Mann?

MARIE: Wenn ohn' Euch sie nicht leben kann!
Verzichtet auf Marie,
Sonst geht zu Grunde sie,
Die Tag und Nacht
An Euch gedacht!
(Sie thut, als ob sie weine.)

WENZEL: (gerührt). Wei ... wei ... weinen seh' ich Dich?

MARIE: Ach, ihr Loos bekümmert mich!

WENZEL: (schwankend). Ich darf es ja nicht,
Mich bindet die Pflicht!

WENZEL: (stupidly). Ho-how can she love another
If she's to have me?

MARIE: (laughs). Ha ha! You?
Does she know you? Or you her?

WENZEL: She-she does not. But she knows
That I am to be her hu-hu-husband.

MARIE: Of course she does,
And that is why she enjoys the prospect of teasing you, deceiving
You, and worrying you to death.

WENZEL: (horrified). Wh-why, that's awful!
Bu-but my mo-mother told me
That I must marry,
So-so marry I must.

MARIE: Of course! Why not? Such a fine fellow!
(Coquettishly.)
There are lots of fine girls here.
Pick one out yourself!

WENZEL: (relieved). I will

MARIE: I know a charming maiden
Wants you with all her might.
With love her heart is laden,
Without you all is night.

WENZEL: (joyously). Oh, oh, what ecstasy!
When such a girl really loves me.
Oh, oh, what ecstasy!
Bu-but, Marie! What will she say?

MARIE: (decidedly). Nothing! For surely After marrying you
She'll run away.

WENZEL: Bu-but my mother!
She will raise a row.

MARIE: As soon as she'll see the bride
A smile will light her brow.

WENZEL: Is she then so lovely?

MARIE: Just the same as Marie.

WENZEL: A-and is she young, too?

MARIE: Just the same as Marie.

WENZEL: A-a-and that one would really take me?

MARIE: If you would not want her Grief sure would make her rave, and water be her grave.
Charcoal would end her days and she would weep always, if she could not get you.
(She pretends to be crying.)

WENZEL: (touched.) Wh-why do you weep?

MARIE: Oh, because you do not want her.

WENZEL: (undecided). I, I do not dare.
My mother is there.

MARIE: (vorwurfsvoll). So grausam fand ich Keinen!
Vor Gram um Euch zehrt sie sich auf,
Ihr aber lasst sie weinen.

WENZEL: (rathlos). Wer sagt mir, was ich thu'?
(schüchtern.)
Ja, wäre sie wie Du,
Dann . . .
(entschlossen.) nur immerzu

MARIE: (kokettirend). So wie ich?
Wollt Ihr sie so?

WENZEL: Ja, Ja, gerade so.

MARIE: Macht' Euch meine Liebe froh?

WENZEL: Ja, sie macht mich froh.

MARIE: (Innig). Dem halt' ich Treue bis an's Grab,
Den ich in's Herz geschlossen hab'!
(bestimmt.)
Was ich jetzt Euch sage, höret:
Ihr beschwöret,
Dass Ihr fest entschlossen seid,
Von Marie Euch loszusagen,
Jetzt und alle Zeit!

WENZEL: (misstrauisch). Nu . . . nu . . . nur nicht schwören!
Da . . . das geht zu weit!

MARIE: (scheinbar gekränkt). Ihr wollt nicht? Gut, lasst es sein!
Eure Lieb' ist wahrlich klein.
Möget Ihr es nie bereuen,
An Marien's Seite Euch
Eures Lebens freuen!
(Thut, als wollte sie gehen.)

WENZEL: (sie zurückrufend). Ha . . . ha . . . halt! Ich schwöre ja!

MARIE: (den Schwur vorsprechend). "Was geschieht und was geschah," WENZEL: (nachstammelnd). Ge . . . geschieht und ge . . . geschah. .

MARIE: "Niemals komm' ich mehr ihr nah,"

WENZEL: Me . . . mehr ihr na . . . na . . . nah . . .

MARIE: "Und für mich ist sie nicht da!"

WENZEL: Sie . . . sie . . . sie nicht da . . . da . . . da.

MARIE: Ich weiss Euch einen lieben Schatz,
Den Mancher schon begehrt,
Ein schönes Mädchen hier am Platz,
Die lange Euch verehrt!

WENZEL: Wär's möglich, und versteh' ich recht?
Du ha . . . ha . . . hast mein Herz bekehrt.
(Er will sie umarmen; sie entzieht sich ihm und läuft lachend davon. Wenzel hinter ihr her.)

MARIE: (reproachfully). You only make excuses,
And she who loves you dearly
You let grieve so sorely.

WENZEL: (puzzled). No, no, no. I do not.
(Timidly.)
If she is just like you, then,
(Decidedly.)
I'll love her.

MARIE: (coquettishly). You would love me all your life?

WENZEL: My-my life.

MARIE: Make me your own darling wife?

WENZEL: My-my wife.

MARIE: (affectionately). Then you I'll love with all my heart,
And from you never part.
(Determinedly.)
Put your hand in mine, here.
You must swear now.
You must swear you are in earnest and sincere,
To resign and give up Marie
From now, for evermore.
You must swear that.

WENZEL: (suspiciously). Must I swear? That makes me sore.

MARIE: (apparently grieved.)
Well, I see you are a fool.
You will only be her tool,
And she'll treat you awfully.
So for the worst prepare,
Unless you will now swear.
(Pretends to go away.)

WENZEL: (holds her back.) Wa-wait. I'll swear.

MARIE: "I solemnly give up Marie."

WENZEL: I-I gi-give up.

MARIE: Never hope to see her again.

WENZEL: S-s-see her again.

MARIE: Never hope to hear of her, then.

WENZEL: He-he-hear of her, then.
I'll give her up for evermore.

MARIE: I know a charming maiden
Wants you with all her might.
With love her heart is laden,
Without you all is night.

WENZEL: O-oh, ecstasy and joy!
You have fully conquered this boy!
(He tries to embrace her, but she dodges him, and laughing runs away; he after her.)

VIERTE SCENE

Hans und Kezal.

KEZAL: (zieht Hans herein). Komm', mein Söhnchen, auf ein Wort
Will Dir was vertrauen!

HANS: (sträubt sich). Lasst mich gehen, ich muss fort,
Auf die Felder schauen!

KEZAL: Weisst Du denn nicht, wer ich bin?

HANS: Ja, man sagt' es mir vorhin;
Und wonach steht Euer Sinn?

KEZAL: Bist gescheidt, flink und gewandt,
Magst zu Vielem taugen,
Einem Mädchen, wie bekannt,
Stachst Du in die Augen.
Hast Du auch Vermögen?

HANS: Meinetwegen Sorgen gar?
Steht in Gottes Segen
Doch ein jedes treue Paar!

KEZAL: Thorheit! Das lieget auf der Hand;
Dass Dein Glück nicht von Bestand!
Ohne Geld ist alles Tand.
Drum ein Sümmchen sparen! . . .
Hab' es selbst erfahren
Einst in jungen Jahren.
(Verlegenheitspause.)
Eines noch
Sag' mir doch:
Gern hätt' ich vernommen,
Wo Du hergekommen?

HANS: Weit von hier
Wohnen wir.
Von der Moldau Wogen
Bin ich hergezogen.

KEZAL: Dort sollst Du Dein Weibchen finden!
In der Fremde sich zu binden,
Thut nicht gut, das glaube mir!

HANS: Was ich in der Fremde fand,
Bietet mir kein Heimathland.
Einen Engel nenn' ich mein,
Und der soll mein Weibchen sein!

KEZAL: Wer in Lieb' entbrannt,
Hält aus Unverstand
Weiber für Engel,
Meint in Schwärmerei
Dass sein Mädchen sei.
Ganz ohne Mängel.
Ja, so manches Schätzchen,
Ist ein Schmeichelkätzchen,
Das mit Sammetpfötchen Dich umspielt:
Aber, wie entsetzlich,
Wenn man später plötzlich
Ihre scharfen Tigerkrallen fühlt!
Einer sorgt und sinnt
Um ein schönes Kind,
Bis er sie gewinnt,
Und das Glück ist gross;
Leider hinterher
Seufzt er bang und schwer:
Du, mein Gott und Herr,
Wär' ich sie erst los!
Doch ein Praktikus

SCENE IV

Hans and Ketsal

KETSAL: (drags Hans in). Come, my friend, don't make a row!
I'll tell you something good.

HANS: (struggling). Let me go,
I'm busy now,
Else I'd not repel you.

KETSAL: Don't you know then who I am?

HANS: I have not that honor, sir!
Neither do you, who I am.

KETSAL: You are quick, and smart and bright;
They tell me you're a wonder.
But beyond this, you're beloved
By a maiden yonder.
Have you enough of money?

HANS: No, but many a happy pair
So got along, it seems.
Honest maidens, blithe and fair,
Love men and not their means.

KETSAL: Believe me, I have knowledge great
And tell you that to shun.
Without cash, marriage is only confusion.
Tell me now whence you come,
And perhaps something you'll hear
To your advantage.

HANS: I come from afar,
From a distant country.
My childhood's home is
Where the Moldau rolls

KETSAL: Then at once to it return.
To love a stranger our
Maidens never learn.

HANS: All may think that way but one.
That one I have surely won.
She to me is all my life,
And her I'll make my wife.

KETSAL: Every one like you
Thinks his love is true;
In her only
Goodness he believes.
But how dreadful
When she him deceives!
Then he sighs and weeps,
And so quietly reaps
When he cannot cure.
Then he sighs and weeps,
And so quietly reaps
What he must endure.
But a man of sense
Will well prepare,
And before the time
All things weigh with care.
He will count
The profit
All the same.
And if none,
Why he will
Quit the game.

Stets sich wohl bewahrt;
Vielerlei Verdruss
Bleibt ihm dann erspart.
Nichts schlägt ihn darnieder,
Weil das Für und Wider
Er zuvor sich weislich überlegt.
Der kann heiter scherzen,
Der nicht blos in Herzen
Seinen Schatz, nein, auch im Beutel trägt
Was ist Dir geblieben?
Freund, hab' Acht!
Froher Sinn und Lieben
Gute Nacht!

HANS: (unwirsch). Bin ich dafür
Dank Euch schuldig?
Treibt mit Andern Euren Spass!

HANS: (impatiently). What do you mean with all this?
I do not understand you.

KEZAL: Freundchen, nur nicht ungeduldig
Dir zu bieten hab' ich 'was.

KETSAL: That I know a better bride, for you, my dear boy.

HANS: Weiss er doch eine die hat Dukaten, hat Dukaten. Wer die kleine nennt die Seine der ist gut berathen. Nicht zu verschweigen, Was noch ihr Eigen, was ihr Eigen. Jedes hoffen er sagt's offen willes übersteigen. Häuschen und Garten, Vieh aller Arten! Milchende Kühe lohnender Mühe, Schweinchen im Koben, hoch zu loben! Hühner, Tauben kaum zu glauben! Tröge, Wannen, Krüge, Kannen, in der Truhe Kleider Schuhe, und ein nagelneuer Schrank. Ich seh' es ein, doch sag ich nein, ich seh' es ein doch sag ich nein, Ich seh' es ein doch sag ich nein, Ich seh' es ein doch sag ich nein. Ja, ich ech' es ein, doch sag ich nein . . . ja, ja, ich seh' es ein doch sag ich nein.

HANS: He knows a maiden, She has the money, has the money, she will also get a house from pa, you bet, my honey. He knows a maiden, she has the money, has the money. She will also get a house from Pa, you bet, my honey. She has two cows, And one calf to match them. fowls by the dozen, Pigs you can't watch them, A great big farm, And well filled, well filled brand new till, and well filled, well filled brand new till; A great big farm, a great big farm, A great big farm, and well filled, well filled brand new till. Too well I know, still I say no, Too well I know, still I say no, He knows, he knows a maiden, She has, she has the money, Yes, too well I know, still I say no,
Yes, yes, too well I know, still I say no!

KEZAL: Weiss ich doch eine die hat Dukaten! Wer die kleine nennt die Seine, der ist gut berathen. Nicht zu verschweigen, was noch ihr Eigen, was ihr Eigen, Jedes hoffen, ich sag's offen willes übersteigen, Häuschen und Garten Vieh aller Arten! Milchende Kühe, lohnender Mühe Schweinchen im Koben hoch zu loben, Hühner, Tauben kaum zu glauben, Tröge, Wannen, Krüge, Kannen, in der Truhe Kleider, Schuhe! Häuschen und Garten, Vieh aller Arten! Milchende Kühe lohnender Mühe, Schweinchen im Koben, hoch zu loben! Hühner, Tauben kaum zu glauben! Tröge, Wannen, Krüger, Kannen, in der Truhe Kleider, Schuhe, obendrein ein nagelneuer Schrank. Dürfte kein Prinz sich schämen, hörst Du! sondern sich bald bequemen, hörst Du! solch eine Braut zu nehmen würde wohl gar mit ihr zufrieden sein, dürfte sich ein Prinz nicht schämen, hörst Du! sondern sich gleich bequemen, hörst Du, solch eine Braut zu nehmen würde gar wohl mit ihr zufrieden sein Weiss ich doch eine die hat Dukaten, und wer sie nimmt der ist gut berathen, wird gar wohl mit ihr zufrieden sein, . . . der wird gar wohl mit ihr zufrieden sein, zufrieden sein.

KETSAL: I know a maiden, She has the money, has the money! She will also get a house from pa, you bet, my honey. I know a maiden, She has the money, has the money. She will also get a house from Pa, you bet, my honey, She has two cows, And one calf to match them; fowls by the dozen, pigs you can't watch them; A great big farm and well filled brand new till, a well filled, well filled brand new till, A great big farm, a great big farm. And well filled, well filled brand new till. She has two cows, And one calf to match them. Fowls by the dozen, Pigs you can't watch them, A great big farm, And well filled brand new till. And well filled, well filled brand new till. A great big farm, And well filled, well filled brand new till, A great big farm, And well filled, well filled brand new till. Now that would be a something, something, Now that would be a something, something, that would be a something, something, something, Now that would be a something, something, Now that would be a something, Now that would be a something which would thrill, I know a maiden, She has the money, I know a maiden, She has the money, that would be a something which would thrill, Which would thrill.

KEZAL: Gieb doch die dumme Liebschaft auf! Es soll
Dich nicht gereuen! . . . Willst Du? . . . Ohne Faxen:
Ich lass' es hundert Gulden kosten mich.

KETSAL: If you will stop this flirtation,
I shall pay you something.
Will you? Here I give you my promise,
A hundred florins,
If you'll give up your love.

HANS: Nur hundert Gulden? So viel also gälte
Ein solches Opfer Euch!? Nein, lieber Herr,
Das nehm' ich nicht!

HANS: One hundred only?
That is little money for such an Amount of love;
I cannot sell it so cheaply.

KEZAL: (eifrig). Mein'thalb' das Doppelte!

KETSAL: (eagerly). I will give you twice as much.

HANS: Was Euch nicht einfällt!

HANS: Even that is too little.

KEZAL: Na, dreihundert Gulden!
Doch eilig zugegriffen, dass die Sache
Einmal zum Ende kommt! . . . Wie? Du zögerst
Noch immer?
(Drohend.)
Hüte Dich! Ich habe hier
Sehr gute Freunde; sag' ich nur ein Wort,
Bringt man Dich weg von hier der Schub! Sodann
Hast weder eine Braut Du, noch'nen Kreuzer!

KETSAL: then, three hundred florins.
I do it only because I want the thing over with.
But if you do not consent now,
(Threateningly.)
I will do my very, very best to have
You finally sent away from Here in disgrace. And then
You will neither have the girl
Nor the three hundred florins.

HANS: Und wer giebt die versproch'ne Summe her?

HANS: Well, well! but who is going to give me the promised sum?

KEZAL: Ich! Ich!

KETSAL: I! I!

HANS: (stellt sich erstaunt und ungläubig). Ihr? Etwa für Euch selbst? Euch liess'ich Das Mädchen nicht, um keine Million!

HANS: (surprised and distrustful). You? Surely not for yourself?
I would not give her to you for a million!

KEZAL: Was für ein Einfall! Ich bin längst versehen,
Hab' an der Meinen auch genug schon!—Weisst
Du nicht, dass ich vermittele für den Sohn
Tobias Micha's nur? Wir setzen auf
Ein kleines Schriftstück, Du bekommst Dein Geld . . .
Dann aber, mach' Dich auf den Weg!

KETSAL: Don't be silly! I don't want her for myself. I have one of My own, up to the neck. Don't
You know that I am arranging
This for the son of Tobias Micha?
As soon as the contract is Signed, you will get your Money, and then away with you!

HANS: Nun, also,
Sei's d'rum! Es ist ein schönes Geld
Habt Ihr.
Gezahlt. dann ist in Ordnung Alles.
(Zögernd.)
Doch noch Eins beding' ich aus:
Kein Anderer
Darf sie bekommen, die Marie, als
Der Sohn Tobias Micha's! Andernfalls
Gilt der Vertrag für nichts!

HANS: Well, then, I consent.
Money is money!
Put down the cash, and all
Will be settled.
(Hesitatingly.)
Under one condition,
That nobody else will get
My Marie, but the son of Tobias Micha! Otherwise,
This contract will be null and void.

KEZAL: Ganz selbstverständlich!
Das will ja ich! Kein And'rer soll sie haben
Als Micha's Sohn.

KETSAL: Why, of course, most assuredly!
That nobody else gets her, or
Will be allowed to take her, but Micha's son.

HANS: Nur unter der Bedingung
Setz' ich den Namen hin; denn keinem Andern
Tret' ich sie ab. So laut' es deutlich im Vertrage!

KEZAL: Gleich will ich schreiben den Vertrag und auch Die Zeugen schnell beschaffen!

HANS: Ferner bitt' ich,
Ausdrücklich sei vermerkt: sobald
Als meine früh're Braut und Micha's Sohn
Die Hände sich gereicht zum Ehebunde,
Darf Micha von Mariens Vater nicht
Des Geldes Rückbezahlung mehr verlangen.
Er trägt des Kaufes Preis allein!

KEZAL: Das ist Sehr klug und wohlbemerkt.
(Er geht vergnügt ab.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

HANS: (allein). Armer Narr, Du glaubtest mich zu fangen?
Bist nun selber in das Netz gegangen! Es muss gelingen! Alles soll Nach Wunsch und Willen gehen! So feine Schlingen, Kann Liebeslust nur drehen. Schlau und toll,
Dir, Treue, Süsse, Viel tausend Grüsse'
In wenig Stunden
Ist es gescheh'n,
Dass wir, verbunden,
Uns wiederseh'n!
Nach Wetterschlägen,
Nach Angst und Pein,
Nach Sturm und Regen
Lacht Sonnenschein,
Himmlischer Segen.
Bald bist Du mein!

SECHSTE SCENE

Hans, Kezal, Kruschina und Volk.

KEZAL: (die Neugierigen abwehrend). Nicht zu hitzig! Ihr werdet hören Alles, was wir abgemacht!
Den Verlauf der Sache nicht zu stören
Haltet Ruhe, gebet Acht!

CHOR: Ja, wir wollen's endlich hören!

KEZAL: Denkt daran: Ihr müsst beschwören
Ob es richtig zu Papier gebracht!
Was hier steht, lasst mich berichten;
(Liest.)
"Auf die Braut will ich verzichten"

CHOR: (sich um Kezal drängend). Ja, so steht's! Was für Geschichten!?
Auf die Braut will er verzichten!?

HANS: And I shall leave her to no
Other than Micha's son.
That must specially be stated
When you draw up the contract.

KETSAL: I shall write out the contract at once and call the witnesses together.

HANS: Still another word.
It shall also be stated, that
As soon as Marie and Micha's son have joined hands
In wedlock, then shall
The elder Micha cease from
Insisting on the payment of Krushina's debt.
It shall be regarded as wiped out.

KETSAL: Yes, I agree to that.
(Exit, contented.)

SCENE V

HANS: (alone). When you'll see who by the bargain has profited,
You'll return quite discomforted.
Who could believe
That I'd sell
My darling Marie!
The angel of my life,
My crowning glory when
She'll be my wife.
Not for a thousand would I her exchange.
In the whole world
There's none like her, I know.
She loves but me, and I too love her so.

SCENE VI

Hans, Ketsal, Krushina and people.

KETSAL: (holding off the curious ones). Not so wildly there Without tension!
Follow the contract
With attention.

CHORUS: We'll follow that contract with attention.

KETSAL: Bear in mind that this document
Is of the whole transaction a record true.
All therein let me know proclaim,
(Reads.)
"To my bride I give up all claim."

CHORUS: (crowding in around him). All therein let him, now proclaim,
To his bride he gives up all claim.

HANS: (zeigt auf das Papier und liest). "Doch zu Gunsten keines Andern, Als der Sohns des hochverehrten,
Wackeren Tobias Micha!"

KEZAL: Ja, des Sohns Tobias Micha's.

HANS: (wie oben). "Wenn er sie von Herzen liebt,
Wenn er treu sich ihr ergiebt,
Wenn vor Zeugen er beschwört,
Dass nur ihr sein Herz gehört."

KEZAL: Ganz genau so steht's geschrieben,
Ueberzeugt Euch, meine Lieben!
(Er lässt die Umstehenden in den Vertrag sehen).

CHOR: Nicht versteh'n wir, was geschehen!

KRUSCHINA: (zu Hans). Dankbar sollst Du stets mich sehen!
Gott sei Lob, wir sind so weit!
Weg ist jede Schwierigkeit.

KEZAL: Ja, Gottlob, wir sind im Reinen! Etwas noch will wichtig scheinen!
(Zu Kruschina.)
Braucht ihm weiter keinen Dank zu schulden,
Denn ich zahl' ihm baar dreihundert Gulden
Um diesen Preis, so steht's allhier,
Verkauft er die Marie!

CHOR: Ha, wie schändlich, zu verschachern seine Braut!

KRUSCHINA: Dass er auf das Geld nur schaut–
Frei will ich es Euch gestehen,–
Hätt' ich ihm nicht zugetraut!

KEZAL: Punctum, satis. So geschehen Nach Gesetzeslaut.
Unterschreibt nun!
(Zu Hans.)
Du zuerst.
Hier, mein Lieber! Dann die Zeugen!

HANS: Hier mein Nam';
(unterschreibt.)
Hans Ehrentraut.

CHOR: Er verkaufte seine Braut!
O Schande.

ENDE DES ZWEITEN ACTES.

DRITTER ACT

(Dekoration wie im ersten Act.)

ERSTE SCENE

WENZEL: (allein. Sehr niedergeschlagen). Wa . . . was ich mich betrübe!
Schwie . . . schwierig ist die Liebe!
Kä . . . Kämpfe mich bedrohen!
Mä . . . Mädchen ist entflohen!
Sche . . . Schelten wird die Mutter!

HANS: (points to the paper and reads). "But to none other than the honorable and honored son of Sir Tobias Micha."

KETSAL: Yes, son of sir Tobias Micha.

HANS: (as above). If indeed he truly loves,
And to her devotes his life,
And before the people swears
That he freely makes her his wife.

KETSAL: Here it's written, as he said it.
See, it's all here.

CHORUS: We cannot grasp now what has happened.

KRUSHINA: (to Hans). I would never have believed
That you have such a noble heart,
And so quickly us relieved
Of great trouble, on your part.

KETSAL: This affair is almost ended,
But with other matter blended.
(To Krushina.)
You to him are under no great obligations.
I agreed to pay three hundred florins.
And for this price you here behold,
His Marie he has sold.

CHORUS: What a shame. Oh, what a shame.
To sell his bride, to sell his bride.

KRUSHINA: What! Have you been guilty of such an act?
Then I must say you are a rascal for a fact.

KETSAL: Punctum, satis. Let all things go on as in the pact.
Now affix your names.
(To Hans.)
First of all you, Hans,
Then the witnesses.

HANS: Here it is written.
(Signs.)
Hans Ehrentraut.

CHORUS: He has sold his bride,
Oh, what a shame!

END OF ACT II.

ACT III

(Stage setting the same as for Act II.)

SCENE I

WENZEL: (alone. Very downhearted.) It wo-won't go out of my head,
Tha-that I soon may be dead!
She wi-will worry me; I'll die;
The-then will bury me, oh, my!
She wi-will tease me, she says,

He . . . Herz ist weich wie Butter!
We . . . Wenzel, weh Dir, Armer!
Hi . . . hilf, Du, mein Erbarmer!

ZWEITE SCENE

Wenzel, Springer und Esmerelda, Statisten.

SPRINGER: (ruft aus). Dem nie genug verehrten Publikum
Wird unterthänigst bekannt gemacht,
Dass heut' Nachmittag eine Vorstellung
Zwei-und vierbeiniger Celebritäten
Von seltener Niedagewesenheit
Schlag drei Uhr pünktlich vor sich gehen wird,
Theils auf der Erde, theils auch in der Luft.
Besond're Zierden der Gesellschaft sind:
(Fanfare.)
Vorerst die wunderschöne Esmeralda,
Gebor'ne Spanierin aus Napagedos,
"Die Königin des Drathseils,"
"Tochter der Luft"–
Springt auf Verlangen über ihren Schatten.
(Fanfare.)
Sodann der Indianerhäuptling Murru,
Gefangen auf der Insel Bummerang,
Die hunderttausend Meilen weit entfernt
Waschecht und braun bei Sonnenschein und Regen,
Von Haus aus Kannibal' und Menschenfresser.–
Er thut Euch nichts!–Jetzt frisst er nur noch Hühner
Und Tauben–die man mitzubringen hat!–
Mit Haut und Haar und schluckt nebstbei auch Gabeln.
(Fanfare.)
Doch das Erstaunlichste von Allem kommt
Zuletzt, "Das Wunder der Dressur!" Ein grosser
Lebend'ger Landbär aus Amerika,
Den ich mir selbat gezähmt. Mit Esmeralda
Tanzt er ein Pas de deux wie im Ballet,
Geht auf den Zeh'n und hüpft auf einem Bein.
Damit man sehe, dass ich nicht zuviel
Gesagt, so finde gleich die Probe statt.
Das Weit're folgt dann . . . He! Hollah. Fangt an!
(Tanz und Production der Komödianten, die dann abziehen, das Volk hinter ihnen her.)

WENZEL: (der Esmeralda mit Entzücken bewundert hat). Ei, ei, ei, ei, wie rei . . . rei . . . reizend! Was Die Spa . . . pa . . . panierin für Füsschen hat!

And de-deceive me, I guess.
It wo-won't go out of my head,
Tha-that I soon may be dead!

SCENE II

Wenzel, Ringmaster and Esmeralda, Acrobats

RINGMASTER: (announces). We hereby announce to the Honored audience here assembled,
That we shall give them a performance
In the air and on the ground,
Never before witnessed by mortal eyes.
First of all we present
(Flare of trumpets.)
Senorita Esmeralda Salamanka,
The celebrated Spanish dancer,
Queen of the tight-rope,
Daughter of the air, who will Perform numerous graceful,
Daring and hazardous feats.
Then will appear
(Flare of trumpets.)
A real Indian from the Fiji
Islands, especially brought over at an enormous
Expense of money and trouble.
Although he must now
Content himself with ordinary
Fare, he is really a man-eating cannibal.
He will swallow wives—I mean
Knives and swords with great alacrity.
Then will appear the most wonderful number of the whole programme.
(Flare of trumpets.)
A real American Grizzly Bear,
Whom I tamed myself.
After performing many astonishing
Feats, such as walking and hopping
On his hind legs and front paws,
He will dance a Ballet with Esmeralda in the most approved
Graceful and artistic manner.
That you may not think that
I too highly praised this collection,
I will give you a small production.
But more hereafter.
And now! Let's begin.
(Dance and performance of acrobats, who then retire, and the people after them.)

WENZEL: (casting admiring glances at Esmeralda). Oh my, oh my! How lovely!
And that Spanish dancer, what beautiful legs she has!

ESMERALDA: (zu Wenzel). Kommt wohl der schöne Herr heut' Mittag auch?

WENZEL: Versteht sich! Wenn Ihr auf dem Seile tanzt,
So will ich kommen!

MUFF, DER INDIANER: (kommt eilig und erschreckt). Direktor! Herr Direktor!
Sagt' ich es doch: ein Unglück giebt's! Der Michel
Hat sich betrunken, vollständig betrunken!
Im Wirthshaus liegt er unterm Tische da
Und rührt sich nicht! Und Keinen sonst der uns
Den Bären spielt, besitzen wir!

SPRINGER: Den Teufel! 's ist unsre beste Nummer!
(Für sich.)
Was zu thun?
Nein, ohne Bären geht's nun einmal nicht.
Sonst prügeln uns am End' die Bauern durch . . .
Mein Künstlerruf steht auf dem Spiel dabei.
(Laut.)
Lauf' nur und such' mir einen Andern Irgend
Ein Bursche find't sich schon.

MUFF: Es ist vergebens,
Besehen hab' ich Alles. Keiner ist,
Der passte: Der zu dick und der zu dünn,
Einer zu gross, ein Anderer zu klein!
In's Fell will Niemand auch hinein, und Zeit
Ist weiter nicht mehr zu verlieren, sollen
Wir fertig sein!

SPRINGER: Was meinst Du, Esmeralda?

WENZEL: (der die ganze Zeit über Esmeralda mit verliebten Blicken betrachtet hat). Das wär 'ein Mädchen, die . . . die mir gefällt,
So schön! We . . . wenn ich die zur Frau bekäme!
Beneiden sollte mich das ganze Dorf!

ESMERALDA: (ihn ermuthigend). Was seht Ihr mich so an?
Gelt ja, Ihr habt
Noch eine Frage?

WENZEL: (verschämt). Kö . . . kö . . . könntet Ihr
Mich lieben wohl?

MUFF: (der den Wenzel mit Kennerblicken gemustert hat, zu Springer.) Ei, seht mir doch: dem sässe
Das Bärenfell so trefflich, dass man schwört'
Es sei für ihn gemacht!

SPRINGER: So geh' und ruf' die Vorstellung aus! Und Den da nehm' ich gleich Hier in die Arbeit.
(Der Indianer ab.)

ESMERALDA: (to Wenzel). And is this fine gentleman coming to our show?

WENZEL: Why, of course. I would love
To see you dance on the tight-rope.

MUFF, THE INDIAN: (rushes in excitedly). Ringmaster! Ringmaster!
A great misfortune has happened.
Mike got drunk in the other
Inn, and there he lies under
The table, and I cannot Induce him to play the bear,
Try as I may.

RINGMASTER: The deuce! the deuce! It is our best number.
(Aside.)
If the bear cannot appear, we cannot perform
The celebrated ballet. No, no, no, that cannot be! That must not be!
(Aloud.)
We will have to look for somebody else—
Any old youngster out of the town.

MUFF: He would give it away,
And the people would ridicule us.
Where could we find somebody?
He must be fully grown;
Otherwise the bear's skin will not fit him.
The people are coming in, and
We really have no time left to look around.

RINGMASTER: What can we do, Esmeralda?

WENZEL: (who during all this time has been casting loving glances at Esmeralda). What a fine girl she is!
Her I like! Well, well, if
She should become my wife,
The whole town would admire, and envy me.

ESMERALDA: (encouraging him). I like you very much, and would like to marry you.

WENZEL: (bashfully.) Ma-marry me?

MUFF: (who took Wenzel in with the eye of a connoisseur, to Ringmaster.) That one the bear's skin would fit like a glove,
As if expressly made for him.

RINGMASTER: Well, then, go and announce the performance!
This young man I will look after myself.
(Exit Muff.)

(Zu Wenzel.)
He, mein Theuerster!
Liebt Ihr sie, meine Esmeralda, dann
Den Segen geb' ich Euch! Ihr tretet gleich
Bei meiner Truppe ein; mit Esmeralda
Sollt Ihr noch heute tanzen!

WENZEL: (froh bestürzt). Ta . . . ta . . . tanzen!?
(Traurig.)
Ach, tanzen ka . . . ka . . . kann ich nicht!

ESMERALDA: Lehrt Euch die Liebe, was Euch etwa fehlt.

WENZEL: (beglückt). Die Liebe! Lasst doch hören!

SPRINGER: Euch erwartet
Vergnügtes Leben: immer frisch und lustig!
Von früh bis Abends singen, scherzen, springen!
Heut' hier und morgen dort! Und angeseh'n
Sind allenthalben wir als Künstler! Ja,
Den Stand der Komödianten nennt man wohl
Den Stand der Stände auch, malum malorum,
So heisst es auf Lateinisch!
Komödie wird
Gespielt allüberall, nicht im Theater nur,
Ja, manchmal besser noch und täuschender
Im Leben, aber nicht so heiter, harmlos,
Als wie bei uns.

ESMERALDA: Wie? Ihr bedenkt Euch noch?
Fasst Euch ein Herz! Die Liebe reiche Euch
Den ersten Lorbeer!

SPRINGER: Was kann Euch geschehen?
Ihr seid ja nicht gebunden! Eine Probe
Und heute nur!

ESMERALDA: Lasst Ihr umsonst mich bitten?
Ach, mein Geliebter, thätet Ihr's, ja dann
Wär' ich die Eure!

WENZEL: (bekommt Lust). Wa . . . was soll ich machen?

ESMERALDA: Tanzen!

WENZEL: Ta . . . tanzen, kann ich's denn?

ESMERALDA: Ich will's Euch zeigen: beide tanzen wir zusammen.

WENZEL: Doch die Mu . . . Mutter!

ESMERALDA: Die erkennt Euch nicht.

ESMERALDA und SPRINGER:
Alles geht am Schnürchen,
Da man Dich nicht quält,
Hab' ein hübsches Thierchen
Für Dich ausgewählt,

(To Wenzel.)
Well, my dear sir! If you really love
Esmeralda, then you
Can easily get her.
Become one of the members of my troupe,
And you shall yet dance to-day with Esmeralda.

WENZEL: (joyfully). I da-dance?
(Sadly.)
I do not know how!

ESMERALDA: My love will teach you how to do everything.

WENZEL: (happily). Love! Well, that's worth hearing.

RINGMASTER: You will always have a happy time with us.
Bright and lively,
Late and early,
Dancing, singing,
Joking, springing,
Here to-day and gone to-morrow.
Well, as you see, we are honored as actors,
Yes, the profession of actor is called the art of all arts;
Malum malorum, as they call it in Latin.
We know all the world is a stage;
And the people actors more or less.
Only their play is important and more serious,
But not as entertaining as ours,
Nor as gay.

ESMERALDA: Well, then, my dear!
Come and join us.
My love shall be to you the sweetest of rewards.

RINGMASTER: What can happen to you!
You are not bound as yet.
Try it for once,
You can now.

ESMERALDA: Yes, to-day you can try it.
Come, my darling, only once!
And then
I shall be yours forever.

WENZEL: What must I do?

ESMERALDA: Dance the ballet.

WENZEL: Dance the ballet?
What it that?

ESMERALDA: We are to dance together;
You with me, and I with you.

WENZEL: Bu-but my mother!

ESMERALDA: She will not know you.

ESMERALDA AND RINGMASTER: A most charming creature
We will make of you.
It will be a feature
Only known to few.

Prinz im Märchen,
Braunes Bärchen
Sollst Du sein!
Das verstehst Du,
Artig gehst Du,
Schmuck und fein!
Freundlich musst Du nicken,
Denn Du bist in mich verliebt!
Hold und zärtlich blicken . . .
's wird ein Spass, wie's keinen giebt!
Alles geht am Schnürchen,
Da man Dich nicht quält,
Hab' ein hübsches Thierchen
Für Dich ausgewählt.
(Esmeralda und Springer ab (weil sie die neu Auftretenden von Weitem sehen). Sie winken Wenzel nachzukommen.)

DRITTE SCENE

Wenzel. Gleich darauf Micha, Agnes und Kezal.

WENZEL: A . . . ach, wie wird es mir ergehen? Alle
Die schönen Mädchen, sie entbe . . . be . . . brennen Für mich in Liebe.
(Er übt sich im Tanzen.)

AGNES: Endlich sieht man Dich!
Was treibst Du denn? Bist Du von Sinnen? Komm'
Jetzt mit uns, damit wir zu dem niedlichsten
Bräutchen des Dorfs Dich führen!

WENZEL: Lasst mich gehen!

AGNES: Nimm doch Vernunft an!
Vater und ich wir haben
Geordnet Alles. Zeit wird es nun endlich,
Dir 'ne verständ'ge Frau zu geben!

KEZAL: Wenzel Wird das hier unterschreiben, abgethan
Ist dann die Sache.

WENZEL: Wo . . . wozu verpflichtet
Mich das Papier?

MICHA: Dass Du Maria Kruschina
Zum Weibe nehmen wirst!

WENZEL: Nei . . . nein! Die will Ich gar nicht haben.

AGNES, MICHA und KEZAL: Ha, das trifft wie ein Donnerschlag!
Ich weiss nicht, trau' ich meinen Ohren?
So sage mir doch, Wenzel, sag',
Wo hast Du den Verstand verloren?

WENZEL: Das Schicksal kenn' ich, das mir droht;
Sie will mich quälen bis zum Tod!

AGNES, MICHA und KEZAL:
Woher stammt diese Kunde?
O sprich, aus wessen Munde?

WENZEL: Je . . . jemand, der sein Herz mit bot . . .

We will put a lovely mask over face and nose,
And the softest shoes upon your feet and toes.
You will be a cherub
Who will all entrance,
And the people
Will hasten to see you dance,
A most charming creature
We will make of you.
It will be a feature
Only known to few.
(Esmeralda and Ringmaster go because they see the people approaching. They motion to Wenzel to follow.)

SCENE III

Wenzel, then Micha, Agnes and Ketsal.

WENZEL: (sadly). Oh, poor unfortunate me!
All the girls want to marry me, and then kill me.
(He practices dancing.)

AGNES: O why are you so sad, my dear boy!
Brace up and be joyful!
You get married and all
Your troubles and sorrows will Quickly be ended.

WENZEL: I-I am afraid.

AGNES: What are you afraid of, my darling?
Nothing bad can ever happen to you.
You will get a wife,
And that is the finest thing in the world.

KETSAL: Yes, just so! Wenzel will here sign the contract.
And everything will be settled.

WENZEL: What-what kind of a contract is this?

MICHA: That you promise to make Marie Krushina your wife.

WENZEL: I-I do not want her!

AGNES, MICHA AND KETSAL:
What, really, not want her!
What can it be that makes him waver?
Speak, speak, Wenzel!
What nonsense were you led
To take into your head?

WENZEL: I'm-I'm afraid she'll tease me all my life,
And will deceive me, and worry me to death.

AGNES,MICHA AND KETSAL:
Oh, what a foolish notion!
Speak, where did you get it?

WENZEL: Someone told me and warned me to-day.

AGNES, MICHA und KEZAL: Der feindlich Deinem Bunde.

WENZEL: O nein, O nein!
Ein rei . . . rei . . . reizend Mägdelein.

AGNES, MICHA und KEZAL: Was machte Dir das Mädchen weis?

WENZEL: Sie sagt' es mir, sie liebt mich heiss!

AGNES: Und kennst Du sie?

WENZEL: Ach nein!
(Läuft davon.)

AGNES, MICHA und KEZAL: Das sind verwünschte Dinge!
Man legt' ihm eine Schlinge!
Drum, wie ich zur Vernunft ihn bringe,
Soll meine Sorge sein.

AGNES, MICHA AND KETSAL: Who was that villainous person?

WENZEL: A beautiful girl.

AGNES, MICHA AND KETSAL: And what did she say to you?

WENZEL: She said to me, she loves me so!

AGNES: And do you know her?

WENZEL: No, not I!
(He runs away.)

AGNES, MICHA AND KETSAL: This is a pesky matter.
Someone has spoken to him,
And turned his trusting mind.
I'll the culprit find.

VIERTE SCENE

Marie, Kruschina, Kathinka und die Vorigen. Später Wenzel.

MARIE: (stürzt herein, Kruschina und Kathinka hinter ihr her).
Nein, nein, nein!
Es ist erlogen!
Sie lästern, schreien,
Uns zu entzweien!
Sie lästern, schreien,
Mein Liebster habe mich betrogen.

KRUSCHINA: Die Arme zweifelt noch!

KEZAL: Komm' her und schaue doch.

KRUSCHINA: Er gab Dich schämlos preis.

KEZAL: Hier steht es schwarz auf weiss!
(Zeigt das Papier.)
Ja, um dreihundert Gulden
Verkauft' er seine Braut.

MARIE: Wer hätte das ihm zugetraut!?
(Weinend.)
Gott mög' es ihm verzeih'n!
Hab' ich verdient so tiefe Schmach?
Noch immer klingt es in mir nach:
"Ja, Dein bin ich allein!"

KRUSCHINA: Sei ruhig, armes Kind,
Vergiss den Sausewind!
Nimm einen Besser'n Dir,
Der rein und treu gesinnt!

KEZAL: Hier unterschreib' geschwind!
(Wenzel ist im Hintergrunde wieder sichtbar.)
Nun, Wenzel, schnell herbei!

KATHINKA: Mein Kind, Du musst Dich fassen,
Es sei nun, wie es sei!

MARIE: Und hat er mich verlassen,
Ich bleibe dennoch frei!
Vertrauern will ich meine Zeit
In stiller Einsamkeit!

SCENE IV

Marie, Krushina, Kathinka, and the foregoing, later Wenzel

MARIE: (rushes in, followed by Krushina and Kathinka). No, no, no!
I cannot believe that!
It is a mere trick put up to deceive me.
My love can never be a rascal.

KRUSHINA: And still it is the truth.

KETSAL: What, is she still in doubt?

KRUSHINA: Hans gave you up!

KETSAL: Here it is in black and white!
(Shows her the paper.)
For three hundred florins
Hans sold to us his bride.

MARIE: Oh, what an awful blow this is!
(Weeping.)
O men, you are deceitful!
His solemn word he gave to me,
That all the world he'd brave for me.

KRUSHINA: Take comfort, my dear child.
Though you on him relied,
You will now another find,
who will be always kind.

KETSAL: Now you will sign, my hearty!
(Wenzel appears in the background.)
And our Wenzel, where is he?

KATHINKA: Just see him on the common.
What is he staring at?

MARIE: I'll never sign this contract,
For Wenzel I'll not take!
I'd rather, rather live alone and all my friends forsake.

DIE ANDERN: Wohl in Vergessenheit
Wird Dir entschwinden bald Dein Leid.

KEZAL: (erblickt Wenzel und ruft). He, Wenzel! He, mein Wenzelchen!
Lass fahren Deine Blödigkeit!

WENZEL: (kommt hervor, ärgerlich). Was giebt es denn schon wieder?
(Erblickt Marie, freudig erstaunt.)
Die-die-die sprach ich heute Morgen!
Nu . . . nun ist nichts mehr zu besorgen.

KATHINKA, AGNES, KRUSCHINA, MICHA, KEZAL: Weiss ich doch nicht wo und wie?
Sprach er wirklich mit Marie?

WENZEL: Ja, heut' Morgen in der Früh'!
Ich gefiel' ihr, sagte sie.

KATHINKA, AGNES, KRUSCHINA, MICHA, KEZAL: Das ist ja das Bräutchen, Das Dir zugedacht!

WENZEL: Dann ist's abgemacht!

KEZAL: Nicht lange mehr geplaudert,
Gezweifelt und gezaudert,
Jetzt sind am Ziele wir!

MARIE: Ich bitte, nur ein Weilchen
Lasst noch allein mich hier!

KATHINKA, KRUSCHINA, KEZAL; AGNES, MICHA, KEZAL: (then all together.): Noch ein Weilchen, Marie, bedenk es dir, Noch ein Weilchen, Marie, bedenk es dir, Aber bald dann kommen wieder wir! Deinen Willen zu erfüllen lassen wir dich hier. Bleibt doch dein Lebensglück in deiner Hand, Bleibt doch dein Lebensglück in deiner Hand, O weis' es, weis' es nicht zurück wenn du's erkannt. O weis' es nicht zurück wenn du's erkannt. noch ein Weilchen Marie bedenk' es dir! Deinen willen zu erfüllen lassen wir dich hier, Deinen willen zu erfüllen, lassen wir Dich hier, wir Dich hier. . .

MARIE: Ja, es bleibt in meiner Hand, bleibt . . . in meiner Hand ja, es bleibt in meiner Hand, meiner Hand. . .
(All exeunt but MARIE.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

MARIE: (allein). Endlich allein!
Allein mit mir, mit meinem Grame!
Noch immer kann ich es nicht glauben,
Steht auch dabei sein Name! . . .
Was hier noch leise für ihn spricht,
Ich darf es hören nicht.
War seine Liebe nur ein Wahn?
Wehe mir Armen!
Was hab' ich ihm gethan?

THE OTHERS: You cannot do that now!
The moments hasten!
You must decide.

KETSAL: (catches sight of Wenzel and calls him). Hey, Wenzel, hey, Wenzel dear!
Come and drop your bashfulness.

WENZEL: (comes up angrily).
Well, what is now the matter?
(Notices Marie, agreeably surprised.)
She-she-she spoke to me this morning.

KATHINKA, AGNES, KRUSHINA, MICHA, KETSAL: Was it really Marie then
Who did scare him thus?

WENZEL: She told me that all apart,
Me she loved with all her heart.

KATHINKA, AGNES, KRUSHINA, MICHA, KETSAL: Well, this is the lady we picked to be your wife.

WENZEL: Yes, yes, her do I like

KETSAL: Then let us not wait longer,
For that won't make it stronger,
But sign the contract now.

MARIE: Leave me here a moment all alone to think.

KATHINKA, KRUSHINA, AND KETSAL (repeat) AGNES, MICHA, AND KETSAL: (then all together) Think it over, Marie dear, yes, think it over, Think it over, Marie dear, yes, think it over; It is for your good we you implore, It is for your good, is for your good, we you implore. You will gain happiness to us it's plain, You will gain happiness to us it's plain, Do not, O do not miss your chance, nor give us pain. O do not miss your chance nor give us pain. Think it over, Marie dear, oh think it over, It is for your good, is for your good we you implore, It is for your good, is for your good we you implore, you implore.

Marie: Fully I will think it over, I will think it over fully, fully think it over, think it over ..
(All exeunt but Marie.)

SCENE V

MARIE: (alone). What shall I do?
Deserted now, and weighed down by my sorrow.
Still I cannot understand it.
His name is there most plainly.
How can he countermand it?
Perhaps, I doubt him vainly!
Would to God that out of all
This confusion no harm my love befall.

(Träumerisch.)
Wie fremd und todt ist Alles umher,
Und war so traut, voll Leben!
Die Welt hat keine Freuden mehr,
Ich muss mich d'rein ergeben.
O Lenz, Dein buntes Blumenkleid,
Wie welk ist es geworden!
Der böse Herbst kam vor der Zeit
Einhergeweht von Norden . . .
(Wie erwachend.)
Nein! Alles ist noch, wie es war
Und will nur anders scheinen,
Weil trübe ward mein Augenpaar
Vom Weinen.
Du Maienzeit, wie warst Du schön
Mit Deinen frischen Trieben!
Ade nun, helles Lustgetön!
Ade, Du junges Lieben!

SECHSTE SCENE

MARIE und HANS.

HANS: (stürmt fröhlich herein). So find 'ich Dich, Feinsliebchen, hier, Mein Sehnen, mein Verlangen?
O sprich, erzähle, wie es Dir
Inzwischen ist ergangen!

MARIE: Hinweg! Nicht bin ich mehr Dein Lieb
Lass' Deinen schlechten Scherz!
Erst stahlst Du mir, ehrloser Dieb,
Und dann verkauftest Du mein Herz!
Sag', ist es Wahrheit oder nicht?
Ein Wort allein:
Ja oder nein!

HANS: (übermüthig). So einfach geht es schwerlich an!

MARIE: Ich will nur Antwort, falscher Mann
Sag', war's Du so abscheulich?

HANS: (wie vorher). Nun ja doch, freilich, freilich

MARIE: Von Reue zeigst Du keine Spur,
Genug hab' ich vernommen!

HANS: (zärtlich, schalkhaft). O Du Geliebte, lass' mich nur Einmal zu Worte kommen!

MARIE: Mit uns'rer Liebe
Ist's aus nun, merk Dir das!
Ich nehme mir den Wenzel!

HANS: (lacht). Ha, ha, ha, ha!
Das ist wahrhaftig
Ein höchst gelung'ner Spass!

MARIE: (zornig). Ha, Spott ist meiner Liebe Lohn?

HANS: (immer lachend). Ich muss Dir was erzählen,
Zwar stimmt's nicht zu dem Trauerton.

MARIE: (unterbricht). Ich lass' mich nimmer quälen.

HANS: Mein lieber Schatz, nun aufgepasst.
Ich geb' Dir was zu hören!
Nur gönne mir ein wenig Rast

(Dreamily.)
My dream of love how fair it was,
So full of rapture and hope.
It shone so brightly in my heart
It seemed we would never part.
What happy life I pictured here
With Hans, to live together;
But love is killed, I greatly fear
It's killed by wintry weather.
(As if awakening.)
No, can there happen such deceit,
Can love live on unfulfilled?
The world would shed a tear, indeed,
Over love that's so cruelly killed.
My dream of love how fair it was,
It shone so brightly in my heart;
It seemed we would never part.
My dream of love, how fair it was!

SCENE VI

Marie and Hans

HANS: (rushes in joyfully). How I sought you,
My darling Marie!
Star of my being!
O speak, do you still know of anything,
That might prevent our marriage?

MARIE: Away! I am your star no more,
Our dream of love is over.
You stole my heart and lowered yourself
By selling it for worthless pelf.
Speak, is it true, or is it not?
But yes or no, one word alone!

HANS: (teasingly). So simply—that cannot be done!

MARIE: I want no explanations, now!
Speak, is it true as written?

HANS: (the same). Yes, then, yes, then, yes, then!

MARIE: Now go away, and never more
Let me behold your features.

HANS: (affectionately, playfully).
O let me all explain before
I go, you loveliest of creatures!

MARIE: Our love is ended, bear in mind,
And I am going to marry Wenzel.

HANS: (laughs). Ha, ha, ha, that would truly be
A stupendous joke!

MARIE: (angrily). What, is this all so very gay?

HANS: (still laughing). I want to tell you something.
Then listen, only let me say—

MARIE: No, you can tell me nothing.

HANS: You are an awful stubborn case
For you'll not let me tell you.
How could I look into your face

Und wolle mich nicht stören!
Mein lieber Schatz, nun aufgepasst,
Ich geb' Dir was zu hören!

MARIE: Ein Märchen wohl, von Dir verfasst,
Um Dich herauszuschwören?
Ich weiss, was Du verbrochen hast
Du wirst mich nicht bethören
Ein Märchen wohl, von Dir verfasst
Um Dich herauszuschwören?

SIEBENTE SCENE

Kezal und die Vorigen.

KEZAL: He, Hans? Du möchtest wohl Dein Geld schon haben?
Warte nur noch ein Bischen hier!
Giebt die Marie mir ihre Unterschrift,
Erhälst Du, was Dir zukommt!

MARIE: Ha! Der glatte Heuchler!

KEZAL: (zu Marie.) Nun, und Du? Nimmst Du Dafür zu Deinem Mann des Micha Sohn?

HANS: Ja, das verbürg' ich Euch!
Sie wird ihn nehmen.
Kein Anderer als er soll sie bekommen.
So ward es abgemacht!

KEZAL: (scherzend). Und so ist's recht.
Du Heirathsmittler!

MARIE: Nichts da! Er lügt Euch an!
Nein, sag' ich, nein, nein! Nun und nimmermehr!
Und stürb' ich d'rum hier auf der Stelle!

HANS: Was wollt Ihr wetten, dass sie's dennoch thut?
Wenn ich es will, so nimmt sie Micha's Sohn!

MARIE: Wie? Hans? Und dazu wollest Du
Im Ernst mich bringen? Solch' ein' Ungeheuer Hab's auf der Welt noch nie! Du Teufel, Du!

HANS: Gesegnet, wer da liebt und auch vertraut!
Kein Zweifel trübt sein Glück.
Bald kehret Dir, verkaufte Braut,
Was Du verlorst, zurück!
Es liebt Dich jenes Micha Sohn
Wie keiner sonst auf Erden,
Für Deine Treue Dank und Lohn
Kann Dir von ihm nur werden!

MARIE: Ein Schmeichler und ein Heuchler
Macht hier sein Meisterstück!

KEZAL: Das ist ein zweiter Salomo!
(Für sich.)
Oder ein Galgenstrick!
Jetzt rufen wir die Eltern her,
Dazu die andern Zeugen!
Nun kommt mir nichts mehr in die

If really I did sell you.
You are an awful stubborn case
For you'll not let me tell you.

MARIE: You are an awful wicked case,
The devil cannot beat you.
I'll never look into your face,
And never want to meet you,
You are an awful wicked case,
The devil cannot beat you.

SCENE VII

Ketsal and the foregoing.

KETSAL: Here, Hans! You, I suppose, wait for your money?
Well, have a little patience!
As soon as Marie signs the contract
You will get every penny.

MARIE: Ha, how disgraceful!

KETSAL: Well, and you? Will you take for your husband Micha's son?

HANS: Of course she will, I say!
That he will get her and nobody else, is fixed by the contract,
And to that, I swear.

KETSAL: You're a good boy, with good understanding.

MARIE: You're a villainous liar!
No, no, now surely not!
I will not take him
If I die on the spot for it.

HANS: What will you give if I induce her
That she will take Tobias Micha's son?

MARIE: What! Hans, you want to induce
Me to do such a thing!
No, such a bold proceeding
The world never did see nor ever hear.

HANS: Have patience, and do not give up hope,
But trust to me as you did never before.
You hardly know what happiness
For you there is in store.
He loves you more than anything
In this wide world of ours, and Micha's son will brighten your life
With bliss and all its powers.

MARIE: O heavens, O heavens, how these Words are racking my poor heart!

KETSAL: I never heard a wiser word.
(Aside.)
He is indeed a glorious bird.
(Aloud.)
Now let us call the parents here

Quer
Der Himmel hängt voll Geigen.
(Geht ab.)

MARIE: (ergeben). Ich habe keine Wünsche mehr
Und will in's Joch mich beugen,
Mein Sinn ist trüb', mein Herz ist schwer
Was kann ich thun als schweigen?

HANS: Die Alten, ja, das freut mich sehr!
Willkommen sind die Zeugen,
Und käme gleich ein ganzes Heer
Was mein ist, bleibt mein Eigen!
(Zu Marie.) Des Micha Sohn wird doch Dein Mann!

MARIE: Nur fort! Ich schaue Dich nicht an!

ACHTE SCENE

Agnes, Kathinka, Kruschina, Micha, Kezal, Chor und die Vorigen.

CHOR: Kommen wir gerne, so kommen wir gleich
Aber Mariechen, weshalb so bleich?

MARIE: (für sich). So räch' ich mich für den Verrath!
Er soll mich nimmer äffen!
Um was er höhnisch erst mich bat,
Ich thu's, um ihn zu treffen!
(Laut, mit Anstrengung.)
Was Ihr gewollt, das thu' ich gern!

CHOR: Das Brautpaar soll leben!
Mariechen kriegt nun einen Herrn!
Der Tag der Hochzeit ist nicht fern!

HANS: (vortretend). Ja, lustig wird es werden da,
Denn solch' ein Paar noch Keiner sah!

AGNES und MICHA: Was seh' ich?
Das ist ja der Hans!

HANS: Herr Vater und Frau Mutter auch,
Da bin ich wieder, heil und ganz!
Bin aus der Fremde heimgekehrt,
Zu gründen einen eig'nen Herd!

KEZAL: Ei! Soll ich's glauben oder nicht,
Was dieser Flausenmacher spricht?
Er wäre, Micha, Euer Sohn?
Der ist ja wohl gestorben schon!

HANS: Erkannten mich die Eltern doch!
Und schätzt mich auch nicht jeder hoch.
(mit Beziehung auf Kezal und die Stiefmutter.)
Das Beste ist: ich lebe noch!

AGNES: Hier bist Du nicht am rechten Ort
Mit Deinen alten Ränken!

And witnesses together,
As nothing more will interfere
To end this joyous matter.
(Exit.)

MARIE: (resigned). Now I will call my parents here
And all my friends together,
As nothing more will interfere
To end this painful matter.

HANS: Yes, you may call the parents here
And witnesses together,
As nothing more will interfere
To end this ludicrous matter.
(To Marie.)
What, do you still not understand?

MARIE: Go! What do you want here?

SCENE VIII

Agnes, Kathinka, Krushina, Micha, Ketsal, Chorus and the preceding.

CHORUS: Have you decided and thought out with care,—
Speak—what you shall do in this mixed up affair?

MARIE: (aside). I'll have revenge, and I shall do,
What he is trying to prevent.
O sadly and mournfully
He'll be eyeing me.
(Aloud with exertion.)
I shall do all that you desire.

CHORUS: Good luck, to you, Marie!
All discontent must emigrate.
The marriage feast we'll celebrate.

HANS: (stepping to the front). The marriage feast we'll celebrate,
And all the world will think it great.

AGNES AND MICHA: What do I see? Is this really Hans?

HANS: Yes, father! Many a long and weary day
From you I've been away.
I have no wish again to roam,
And so shall found my own sweet home.

KETSAL: What, is it truth or only fun?
That simple chap, old Micha's son,
The elder, is that truly so?
I thought he'd gone to fight the foe.

HANS: I am truly old Micha's son,
From foreign part; and not for fun
But no real earnest battles fought,
(Referring to Agnes and Ketsal.)
Against adverse foes my fortune sought.

AGNES: And you have time enough on hand
To do it more! You understand?

HANS: Ich kann es mir wohl denken,
Gern schicktet Ihr mich wieder fort!
Doch wenn ich geh', dann nicht allein!
Mit Micha's Sohn die Liebste sein
Marie, die nun für ewig mein!

AGNES: Das gilt nicht, weil Betrug es ist!

HANS: Betrug nicht, nein, nur eine List;
Geschrieben ist geschrieben!
Ihr bleibt die Wahl: Den Wenzel oder mich!
(Zu Marie.)
Triff die Entscheidung nun und sprich:
Wen von uns willst Du lieben?

MARIE: Hab' ich doch längst entschieden!
(Eilt Hans in die Arme.)
Ja, Dein bin ich, ja, Dein bin ich!

KEZAL: Wer hätte das von ihm gedacht!
Mir schwillt vor Zorn die Galle!
Um Einfluss, um Gewicht und Macht
Hat der Hallunke mich gebracht,
Ich ging ihm in die Falle!

MICHA: (höhnisch zu Kezal).
Lasst Euch bewundern! Ja, das habt
Ihr wirklich gut gemacht!

AGNES: (ebenso). Der Wichtigthuer, hochbegabt
Nun wird er ausgelacht.

MARIE, HANS, KATHINKA, KRUSCHINA: Lasst Euch bewundern! Ja, das habt
Ihr wirklich gut gemacht!

CHOR: Ha, ha, ha, ha! Er wird verlacht!
(KEZAL läuft wüthend fort.)

LETZTE SCENE

(Grosser Lärm hinter der Bühne. Knaben rennen über die Bühne. Ein Knabe schreit: "Rettet Euch, der Bär ist los!" Ein Anderer, "Es rennt geradenwegs hierher!")

Wenzel und die Vorigen.

WENZEL: (als Bär verkleidet).
Seid ohne Furcht! Ich bin kein Landbär, nur
Der We . . . We . . . Wenzel!

AGNES: (erbost). Du Gimpel, was hast Du gethan? O Schande!
Schere, Du Narr, Dich weg von hier! Denn man
Verlacht uns und verspottet uns!
(Sie zieht Wenzel mit sich fort.)

KRUSCHINA: Gevatter Micha werdet selbst begreifen
Wohl, dass sein Kind man ihm verweigert Ja,
Da ist der Hans mir lieber!
(Begütigend.)
's ist Euer Blut
Ihr seid der Vater!

HANS: I know, that goes without saying,
I am not a welcome guest.
But never mind we'll pass the rest,
Since to my love I have a claim,
I, Micha's son by blood and name.

AGNES: That is not fair, that's cheating quick!

HANS: Not cheating, but only a trick.
It's written here, it's written.
See, we are two, put it to her.
Let her say whom she'll prefer!
(To Marie.)
Whom do you want to marry?

MARIE: Now, at last, I understand.
(Throws herself into Hans' arms.)
You my darling Hans!
I'm yours, I'm yours!

KETSAL: This fellow is a tricky scamp,
He's beaten me all over.
A great big blot upon my name,
My reputation gone, my fame,
How can I them ever again recover?

MICHA: (sarcastically to Ketsal).
Your wisdom has just left you,
Truly and for a fact.

AGNES: (the same). And may we mention, made you
Do and perform a very stupid act.

MARIE, HANS, KATHINKA, AND KRUSHINA: Your wisdom has just left you,
Truly and for a fact.

CHORUS: Ha, ha, ha, ha, a stupid act.
(Ketsal runs away.)

LAST SCENE

(A loud noise behind the scenes. Boys run across the stage. One boy cries: "Run for your life! The bear got loose." Another, "He's coming this way, run!')

Wenzel and Foregoing.

WENZEL: (disguised as a bear)
Don't be afraid! I am not a wild bear! I am Wenzel!

AGNES: (enraged). You donkey, what are you doing?
Oh, what a disgrace! Get away from here, You ninny, and get out of that rank disguise.
(She drags Wenzel away.)

KRUSHINA: Now, my dear friend Micha, you Yourself must acknowledge that
There can be no talk of Wenzel.
Why, he hasn't his reason yet.
(Coaxingly.)
But bear in mind that Hans is, too,
Your son and you're his father.

KATHINKA: Ja, Gnade hat Euch Gott verlieh'n,
Dass Ihr ihn noch bekommen,
An Eurer Stelle hätt' ich ihn
Mit Freuden aufgenommen!

MICHA: Nun meinetwegen, meinetwegen!
Da habt Ihr meinen Vatersegen!
(Er segnet das vor ihm niederknieende Paar.)

KATHINKA: You should be glad that your son
Has returned from a foreign land.
Receive him joyfully with love,
And extend to him your hand.

MICHA: Well, well, so be it, so be it!
I'll give you now my blessing.
(He blesses the pair kneeling before him.)

ALLE UND CHOR: So ist's recht, es freut uns Alle!
Stimmet ein mit Jubelschalle!
Und von Herzen tön' es laut:
Vivat die "verkaufte Braut"!

ENDE DER OPER.

ALL AND CHORUS: Let us sing and shout and rattle,
For true love has won the battle.
We now wish with joy and pride
Happiness to the "Bartered Bride."

END OF THE OPERA

La Vestale (1807)

The Vestal

MUSIC BY GASPARE SPONTINI ■ LIBRETTO BY ÉTIENNE DE JOUY

This three-act tragédie lyrique, set to a libretto by Victor Joseph Étienne de Jouy, premiered at the Paris Opéra on December 16, 1807. The story opens in Rome, at the forum near the temple of Vesta. The Romans are preparing for the triumphant return of the young general Licinio, who has been the winner in battle against Gaul. Licinio tells his friend Cinna that he is in love with Giulia. However, Giulia has obeyed the wishes of her dying father and is now a priestess of Vesta and sworn to remain a virgin. The chief priestess persuades Giulia to resist physical love and chooses her to crown Licinio with the symbolic laurel wreath. As he is crowned, Licinio tells Sappho that he loves her. Giulia, alone at the temple of Vesta, is guarding the sacred flame which must never go out. She prays for the strength to resist Licinio, but when he comes they sing of their passionate love. While doing so they forget about the holy flame, which goes out. Cinna warns them that the priests and Vestals are coming. Licinio escapes in order to get help, and Giulia refuses to tell the pontifex maximus who her lover is. She prays that he will be spared the fate which awaits her—she is to be stripped of her priesthood and buried alive. Licinio, near the tomb where her burial is about to take place, confesses his culpability to the pontifex maximus, but to no avail. Giulia's black veil, a symbol of her shame, is put on the altar as she says good-bye to life. The sky suddenly darkens and lightning strikes the altar upon which Giulia's scarf rests. The sacred flame is ablaze once again, a sign that the goddess Vesta has granted Giulia forgiveness. The lovers are now free to marry, and a chorus of Vestals welcome them in a grove of roses before the temple of Venus Erycina.

■ ATTO PRIMO

(Foro.)

A destra l'atrio del tempio di Vesta che comunica, per mezzo d'un intercolonnio, col soggiorno delle Vestali. In fondo, e dal medesimo lato, il palazzo di Numa e parte del Bosco sacro che lo circonda. In lontano il Monte Palatino.—Si vedono sulla piazza i preparativi di un trionfo.—Il giorno spunta appena.

LICINIO E CINNA: (Durante il ritornello, Licinio è appoggiato ad una delle colonne dell'atrio. Cinna esce dal bosco.)

CINNA: Presso il sublime tempio a Vesta sacro,
A che Licinio mai previene il giorno?
D'ambascia e di languore
Divorato è il tuo cuore. All' amistade,
Quel segreto che ignora, deh! confida.
(Licinio vuole allontanarsi.)
Ivan fuggir mi vuoi:
Io seguo i passi tuoi.

LICINIO: (accennando l'atrio).
Queste mura perchè sul capo mio
Or crollar non vegg'io? Tanto infelice Sarò!
E che giovano a me gli onori vani
D'importune grandezze
E di sterili allori? A me che giova
Roma tutta, la gloria e la mia vita?

CINNA: Quali voti, o Licinio,
Puoi tu formare ancora?
La trïonfal tua pompa
Forse non vedo? e d' oro
Cingerti al crin l' alloro
La giovane Vestal non vedo omai?

LICINIO: Taci: dicesti assai . . .

CINNA: perchè fremi? Onde han fonte
Il trasporto e l'affanno
Che la ragione abbandonar ti fanno?
Tu nascondi a un fido core
La cagion del tuo dolore . . .
Il vedermi a te dispiace . . .
Qual compenso alla mia fè!
Soffrirei l'oltraggio in pace
Se vedessi il tuo contento:
Ma l'affanno, ma il tormento
Vo' dividere con te.

LICINIO: Ebbene, il mio delitto, il mio furore
Meco adunque dividi:
L'estreme vïolenza
Della fiamma che m' arede
Partecipa con me; quella Vestale

■ ACT I

(The Forum.)

To the right the atrium of the Temple of Vesta, communicating by means of a colonnaded passage with the house of the Vestals. At the back, on the same side, King Numa's palace and part of the Sacred Wood surrounding it. The Palatine Hill in the distance. On the piazza preparations for the celebration of a triumph are in evidence. It is the grey dawn of day.

LICINIUS AND CINNA: (During the instrumental prelude Licinius leans against one of the columns of the atrium. Cinna issues from the Wood.)

CINNA: Here, near this noble temple, Vesta's shrine,
Why does Licinius await the dawn?
Is by some gnawing grief or anguish
His heart devoured? To friendship's ear
The secret which it does not know confide!
(Licinius makes as though to disappear.)
In vain you would elude me;
Your footsteps I will follow!

LICINIUS: (nodding toward the atrium). These walls, how is it they refuse to fall
And crush me? Would I then be more wretched
Than I am?
Ah, what are they to me, those empty honors
Importunate grandeur gives?
What mean the useless laurels? Of what avail to me
Are Rome, glory and life itself?

CINNA: What wish, O my Licinius,
What wish is left for you to make?
Do you not see the splendors of your coming triumph?
The wreath of gold
Which soon will bind your hair
Will not the youthful Vestal see it, say?

LICINIUS: Silence! You have said enough.

CINNA: Why do you tremble? From where spring
These transports, and this anguish
Which threatens to deprive you of your reason?
Something you're hiding from this heart so faithful.
The reason of your preying sorrow . . .
Even the sight of me annoys you . . .
What a return for my fidelity.
I have shared contentment with you;
And your anguish and your suffering
I would also share with you.

LICINIUS: So be it then, my rage, like my delight
I will divide with you.
The violence exalted
Of the flame within me burning
I will reveal to you. The Vestal

Ch' amo, contendi al cielo. T'e noto il mio destin.	whom I love I will defy the heavens to gain. Mark me, it is my fate!
CINNA: D'orrore io gelo!	CINNA: Now horror chills me!
LICINIO: Giulia . . . sì, quest'oggetto Di terrore e d'affetto. Fu dalla madre un tempo Promesso alla mia fè. Ma il Capo altero, D' un' illustre famiglia A donarmi la figlia, allor che gloria La mia stirpe ignorava e il nome mio. Poteva indursi mai? Al campo alfin volai. Nobile ambizione, Col mezzo de' felici miei sudori, Segnalò la mia vita. Dopo un lustro Vincitore alla patria io fo ritorno, E la speranza di quel ben che attendo Il cor m' inebria . . . Ahi barbara sciagura! Terribil Fato! Giulia Agli altari obbligata, Ohimè! dal moribondo genitore, Tradito i giuramenti ha dell'amore.	LICINIUS: Julia, yes, she is aim and end Of all my fears and fondness. Once on a time her mother Blessed our betrothal, yet could I hope The lordly head of an illustrious family Would give the girl to me the while My race and name to fame were quite unknown? He was intractable. At last I sought the camp Urged by high ambitions. Through mine own efforts, to command I rose And made my name illustrious. Five years have passed; I came back to my native land a victor, But that fond hope on which so long I'd waited With heart exalted . . . Ah, barbarous disaster! Terrible fate! Julia Bound to the Vestal altar, Alas, by mandate of her dying father, She had betrayed our love's most solemn vows!
CINNA: Io ti compiango.	CINNA: I sympathize with you.
LICINIO: È poco Il compiangermi.	LICINIUS: It is little, To sympathize with me.
CINNA: E speri?	CINNA: And still you hope?
LICINIO: Nulla; ma stanco di temer son io.	LICINIUS: I do not hope, yet weary of my fears.
CINNA: Ad un fatal trasporto Non darti in preda; pensa Alle leggi, agli Dei Che offende l'amor tuo: tremende in loro Son l'ira e la vendetta.	CINNA: See that you do not yield To some wild burst of passion. Think of the laws, the gods Whom your mad love offends. They are all powerful in wrath and vengeance.
LICINIO: La vïolenza Di questa fiamma rea È tale, che de' Numi il poter tutto Oppor solo potrebbe all' amor mio Il mio morir.	LICINIUS: The violence Of this my lawless passion Is such the power of all the gods above Could not extinguish it. My love Yields only to death.
CINNA: Vogl' io Indicarti i perigli a cui t'espone Il furor che t'invade. Amor vuole affrontarli: Amistade saprà parteciparli.	CINNA: Would that I Could make you see the perils you invite With this mad love that sways you. Yet if your love dares to brave them My friendship shall share these dangers.
LICINIO: Quando amistà seconda il mio ardimento Di quai perigli io proverò l' orror? Sgombra da te sì rio presentimento: Amato io son: felice è questo cor.	LICINIUS: Should your friendship second the ardor I am feeling, And in the perils it provokes take part, Renounce presentiments of guilt that may be stealing over you, I am beloved. Joy dwells within my heart.
CINNA: Ah! sgombri il ciel sì rio presentimento, Che fa penar quest'agitato cor.	CINNA: Ah, heaven bid fly forebodings that are stealing To carry suffering to your throbbing heart.
LICINIO: No, del mio colpevol foco Nulla può smorzar l'ardor. A te che nel periglio Compagno esser ti piace, Nel mio disegno audace Soccorso io chiederò. Teco è quest' alma unita In un eterno nodo: Da chi poteva aita, Senza di te, sperar?	LICINIUS: No, these guilty fires within me I cannot quench their mounting flame. To you, who now in danger's hour Would be my comrade, bravely sharing With me my projects mad and daring, I turn to you for aid. With your soul mine own united, Forms friendship's deathless chain, On your assistance counting, Without you were hope not vain?
CINNA: Se del tuo colpevol foco Nulla può smorzar l'ardor, In sì fatal periglio Compagno esser mi piace: Nel tuo disegno audace Soccorso io ti darò. Teco è quest' alma unita In un eterno nodo In me potevi aìta Soltanto ritrovar. Oggi sopporta almen che la prudenza Ti rammenti la gloria, E l'onor che t'attende. Mi sequi, poichè l'ora In cui tu devi trionfar s'avanza.	CINNA: I know those guilty fires within you, You cannot quench their mounting flame. And I will now, in danger's hour, Be your true comrade, bravely sharing With you the perils you are daring. With your soul mine own united, Forms friendship's deathless chain, And my assistance count on To restore your hopes again. Today at least, yield to what prudence counsels. The claims of glory seek not to deny, And all those honors which await you. Follow me, for the hour is near When you must appear in the triumph.
LICINIO: Invigorisce amor la mia costanza. (Partono. Durante questa scena si è fatto giorno.) (La Gran Vestale, Giulia, Le Vestali escono dall' atrio e cantano l' inno seguente prima di condursi al Tempio. Inno mattutino.)	LICINIUS: Faith makes my love more strong and dear. (Exeunt. During the scene day has fully dawned.) (The Chief of the Vestals, Julia and other Vestals, passing from the atrium, sing the following hymn before entering the Temple.)
LA GRAN VESTALE: Alma Vesta del ciel pura figlia, Splendon qui le divine tue faci, E conserva a noi fide seguaci Quella fiamma destata da te.	CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Vesta, divine, pure daughter of the heavens, Your torches in the sky, burning in splendor On your adorers refrain from turning, The flame which you irradiate.
VESTALI: Alma Vesta, ecc. (Durante quest' inno, Giulia mostrasi nella più profonda meditazione, e non si scuote che per appropriare a sè stessa le minaccie che l'inno contiene contro le Sacerdotesse infedeli.)	VESTALS: Vesta divine, pure daughter of the heavens, etc. (While the hymn is sung Julia is absorbed in profoundest meditation which she shakes off only to apply to herself the menaces which the hymn voices with regard to the priestess faithless to her trust.)
GIULIA: Fremo al nome di Vesta, e le ciglia, Di reo pianto mi sento inondar!	JULIA: I tremble at Vesta's name. My eyes With guilty tears I now feel overflow!
LA GRAN VESTALE: Casto nume, alla sola innocenza Degli altari affidasti il pensier; Vota impuri, tua diva presenza, Rei desiri non san sostener.	CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Virgin goddess, chaste innocence shall ever In thought and deed your altars here attend; Impure longings in your presence never Nor base desires offend your cult divine.

VESTALI: Alma Vesta, ecc.

LA GRAN VESTALE: Quel delubro
ove il mondo t'adora
L'empia Vergine accoglier ricusa;
La smorzata tua fiamma l'accusa
Poi la terra la chiude nel sen.

VESTALI: Alma Vesta, ecc.

LA GRAN VESTALE: Vestali, in questo giorno
Roma vittorïosa
Al Prode suo presenta
Il premio del valore;
A voi spetta l'onore
D'ornar di lauro il glorioso crine.
Vedrete al vostro piede,
Sotto quest' archi di trïonfo, tutto
Il popol di Quirino radunato,
E lo stesso Senato
La maestà suprema
Dei Consoli prostrarsi anche vedrete
Innanzi a' vostri fasci. Ite nel tempio,
E i vostri sagrifizi
Rendan Giano ed Astrea numi propozi.
Giulia, rimanti.
(Le Vestali vanno al tempio per via dell' intercolonnio che ivi conduce.)

LA GRAN VESTALE: È questa
L'ultima volta che de' tuoi perigli
L'immagin ti presento, che ravvivo
Il tuo coraggio, e del dover la voce
Udir ti fo. Ti nuoce
La catena che cingi,
E fino a piè dell'Ara
Quegli sguardi piangenti
Provano il grave duol che in petto senti.
Di Vesta il culto e i sacri suoi misteri
Non ponno dileguar l'orror che provi.
Ne' sensi tuoi smarriti un' altra furia
Di sacrilega brama
Il veleno versò, che a' lumi tuoi
Cela l'abisso in cui piombar tu vuoi.

GIULIA: Che si vuole da me? Le vostre leggi,
Vittima sventurata
Dalla forza obbligata,
Obbedisco, piangendo il mio destino.

LA GRAN VESTALE: Forse d'invidia degno
Maggior ve n' ha sopra la Terra? Roma
Del sacro suo Palladio a noi confida

VESTALS: Vesta divine, pure daughter of the heavens, etc.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Within your temple, where the world adores you,
The impious Vestal, faithless to duty found,
Who lets your sacred fire die on the altar
She shall be buried, living, underground!

VESTALS: Vesta, divine, pure daughter of the heavens, etc.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Vestals, this very day Victorious Rome
Awards the conquering hero
The premium of valor.
And yours shall be the honor
To deck his glorious brow with laurels.
You shall see at your feet
Beneath the great triumphal arch
The people of the Quirinal assembled,
With the whole Senate
The majesty supreme
Of the Consuls you shall see bow down
Before the fasces. While in the temple
Your sacrifices shall be made
In Janus and Astrea's the propitious names,
Julia, do you remain.
(The Vestals proceed to the Temple by way of the colonnaded passage leading to it.)

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: This is
The last time I shall call up before you
The image of your danger, bid you steel
Your heart, and lend an ear
To duty's voice. Do not forget
The chain that binds you
Is welded to the altar's foot;
For your sorrowful glances
Prove the deep grief which you hide in your breast.
The worship of Vesta and her holy mysteries
Have not dispelled dread thoughts you harbor,
Your senses throb with other ardors,
With sacrilegious desires.
The venom poured with which you flame
Hides the abyss wherein I see you falling.

JULIA: What do you ask of me? Of your laws
The unfortunate victim,
Compelled by main force
I obey while I am lamenting my fate.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Even envy is forced to admit it,
Has earth ever seen an empire that is greater? Rome
Its sacred Palladium* leaves in our

Il prezïoso arredo: omaggio, onori
Di nostra vita fan lieta la sorte.

GIULIA: E un istante d'error ci danna a morte.

LA GRAN VESTALE: In vera pace immerse,
E nel sen del soggiorno il più felice,
I tributi del mondo riceviamo,
E i perigli d'amor sprezzar possiamo.
(Giulia sospira.)
È l'Amore un mostro, un barbaro;
È nemico a Vesta Amor:
Gli diè vita un di Tisifone
Dell' Averno fra l'orror.
Per lui sol di colpe e lagrime
L'empia terra s'innondò;
Sugli abissi il trono orribile,
Sulle tombe egli piantò.
Il tuo cor si perde, o figlia,
E per te tremar dovrò.

GIULIA: (spaventata). In nome degli Dei
E di Vesta che adoro,
Quella grazia che imploro a me concedi;
Soffri che in queste mura
Celata a ognum, senza di me disposta
La cerimonia del trïonfo sia.

LA GRAN VESTALE: Invan sottrarti vuoi
Alle cure devote
Che la legge t'impone. Tu sei quella
Che viglia fra l'ombre della notte
L'eterna fiamma; l'immortal corona
Oggi ricever deve a' piedi tuoi
Il vincitor; invan sottrarti puoi.
(La Gran Vestale entra nel tempio.)

GIULIA: O di funesta possa
Invincibil comando!
Speme non v'è; da' Numi
Mi veggo abbandonata.
Ribelle all' amor mio, volli, ma invano,
Al mio fato sottrarmi
Non solo, ma privarmi
Di mia sorte maggiore,
Licinio vincitore
Rimirando al mio piè: di compier seco
Dell' impero il dovere . . . Oh Diva! questo
Sforzo dell' alma mia
Bastante al tuo rigore esser dovria.
Ti vedrò fra momenti o mio bene!
La soave tua voce udirò!
Ravvivar la primiera mia speme,
Al tuo sguardo, nel petto saprò.
D'una misera vita,
Condannata da' Numi,
quell'istante

keeping,
Its most precious jewel. Homage and honors
To our lives their glory are lending.

JULIA: (aside). Death ending a moment of error!

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: A great peace us surrounding,
In an abode beyond others delightful;
The world's tribute borne to us,
We may look at love's perils with scorn.
(Julia sighs.)
Ah, love is a brute and a monster,
The foe of chaste Vesta. In error
Conceived by Tisiphone from Avernus
He rose, spreading terror.
He has called forth the tears and the anguish
That flood earth with woes unavailing,
He rules deep abysses of horror
And the tombs where his poor victims wail.
You will lose your heart, O my daughter,
And I shudder lest you, too, may fail!

JULIA: (terrified). In the name of the gods
And of Vesta whom I adore,
Grant me the favor that I ask of you:
Let me within these walls,
Hidden from all, now be excused
From taking part in this day's triumph.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: In vain you seek to escape
From the sacrosant duties
Our law imposes. You are the one
Who shall keep vigil when night's shadows fall,
Over the deathless flame. The crown of glory
Today the victor kneels at your feet
To receive! It is your place to obey!
(The Chief of the Vestals enters the Temple.)

JULIA: Ah, dread and fateful power!
Mandate I dare not resist!
I see no hope. The gods themselves
Now have abandoned me.
Rebelling against my love I sought,
Not only to escape fate's spell,
But also rob myself as well
Of my last chance of happiness.
Licinius, victor in the battle's press,
To see him at my feet, see his perfection
At duty's strict behest. Oh, goddess,
Where is the strength of soul
That will suffice to carry out your stern command?
A moment I'll see you, O my beloved,
My ear caressed by your sweet voice!
It will recall the hopes that once I cherished,
When first I saw you, hidden in my

Potrò almen consecrare al caro amante.
Ove mai l'error fatale
Ti trasporta, empia Vestale?
Ahi! qual nome a te sfuggì!
Grazia, clementi Dei . . .

VESTALI: (sui gradini del tempio). Ministra vieni;
L'assenza tua sospende il sagrifizio.
A questa volta il cocchio
Del trïonfante Duce
Seque il corteggio, il qual qui si conduce.

CORO: (di dentro). Pace richiama alfine
Or de' Romani il vindice,
De' Galli il domator.

GIULIA: O affanno! . . . ahi! che terrore!
Oh! di funesta possa
Invincibil comando!
Gelare il cor mi sento.
Di me che fia in sì fatal momento.
(entra ne tempio.)
(Da varie parti si avanza sulla piazza il corteggio preceduto dal popolo che riempie il fondo della scena, vengono quindi i Sacerdoti di varii templi, alla cui testa sono il Sommo Sacerdote, il Capo degli Aruspici, il Senato, i consoli, le Matrone ed i Guerrieri. Dopo che questa prima parte del corteggio ha pigliato posto, escono dal tempio le Vestali: la Gran Vestale porta il Palladio. Vien recata innanzi a Giulia (come Vestale addetta alla custodia del fuoco) un' Ara accesa. Le Vestali passano davanti alle schiere che loro fanno gli onori supremi, il Popolo s' inginocchia, il Senato s' inclina, i fasci de' Consoli si abbassano innanzi a quelli delle Vestali, portati da quattro Littori: elleno vanno a situarsi in cima ad un palco eretto vicino all' atrio; e sotto il medesimo si fermano i Consoli ed il Senato. Comparisce il carro del Trionfatore, precenduto da suonatori e tirato dagli schiavi in catene. Alcuni duci, nemici e prigionieri, seguono il cocchio. Licinio è in abito trionfale e tiene il bastone del comando. Cinna è alla testa delle schiere.)

CORO GENERALE: Di lauri il suol spargiamo
Di Vesta il tempio orniamo;
Pace richiama alfine

breast.
To lead a wretched life
The gods condemn me. That moment, swiftly flying,
To loves's dear memory vainly were I denying.
Where will this fatal error
Lead you, poor impious Vestal?
Alas, what infamy will weight your name!
Have mercy, gracious gods!

VESTALS: (on the steps of the Temple). Behold, he draws near.
Your absence retards the sacrifice.
This very moment the chariot
Of the triumphant leader
Follows the cortège whose steps are turning here.

CHORUS: (within). Now peace at last has crowned our hopes
Won by the avenging Roman sword,
The dominator of the Gauls!

JULIA: Oh, grief and woe! Alas, I tremble!
Ah, dread and fateful power!
Mandate I dare not resist!
My heart is chill with terror.
What, when the fateful moment comes, will happen to me?
(Julia enters the Temple.)
(The triumphal processional enters the piazza from various points, preceded by the populace which fills the background of the stage, and followed by the priests of the different temples, the Pontifex Maximus at their head, the Chief of the Augurs, Senators, Consuls, Matrons and Soldiers. When this first section of the processional has taken its place the Vestals enter, coming from the Temple, the Chief of the Vestals bearing the Palladium. Immediately after Julia, the custodian of the sacred fire, is carried a portable altar on which it flames. The Vestals pass before the ranks of the legionaries, who pay them the supreme military salute, while the populace kneels, the Senate bows and the fasces of the Consuls are inclined before those of the Vestals, borne by four lictors. The Vestals take their places on a scaffold erected near the atrium, and the Consuls and Senators establish themselves below them. The chariot of the triumphator appears, preceded by trumpeters and drawn by slaves in chains. Various enemy leaders, prisoners, follow the chariot. Licinius is arrayed in the robes of a triumphator and holds the baton of command in his hand. Cinna is at the head of the legionaries.)

GENERAL CHORUS: Let victory's laurels deck the ground.
Let Vesta's temple be adorned.
Now peace at last our hopes has

Nelle latine mura
Or de' Romani il vindice,
De' Galli il domator.

POPOLO: La morte,—le ritorte
Già di Quirino ai figli
Il fato minacciò.
Ma da un Eroe guidata,
L'aquila i feri artigli
A danni altrui spiegò.

CORO GENERALE: Di lauri il suol spargiamo, ecc.

POPOLO: Arbitro egli è di guerra,
A lui si presti onor.

DONNE: Riposo ottien la Terra
Per lui; si adori ancor.

LICINIO: Trïonfan le armi nostre.
Marte guidar ci volle
Al campo di vittoria;
E, figli della gloria,
Tuttor noi siam dei popoli l' onore,
De' nemici il terrore. A' sommi Numi
Grazie rendiam di quanto
La mano lor concede,
E di riconoscenza ognun prepari
Puri incensi votivi sugli altar
(I Consoli assistono Licinio mentre scende dal cocchio, e lo conducono sotto un trofeo innalzato a destra del proscenio.)

LA GRAN VESTALE: (a Giulia).
Tu dell' immortal face
Vigil custode, in la solenne notte
Che annunzia al mondo un giorno glorïoso,
Consacra, o Giulia, il serto prezïoso.
(Le dà il lauro d' oro.)

LICINIO: (piano a Cinna). Ascolti? . . . questa notte . . .
ella . . . nel tempio.

CINNA: (piano a Licinio). Taci: ciascun osserva i nostri moti.

LA GRAN VESTALE: (a Giulia).
All'Ero dei Romani il guiderdone
Porgi della vittoria, e sia per lui,
Mentre è d'onore il pegno,
Dell' amor nostro un segno.

GIULIA: (prendendo la corona e passandola sul fuoco sacro).
Sostenetemi, o Numi!

LICINIO: È dessa . . . Al cor mi sento
L' ebbrezza del contento.
(Durante le cerimonie, alle quali Giulia presiede, il popolo canta il seguente.)

CORO GENERALE: Della dea pura, seguace,
Cingi a lui l'illustre fronte,
Mentre il cantico di pace crowned,

Within the walls of Latium,
Won by the avenging Roman sword
The dominator of the Gauls!

THE PEOPLE: With death, death and chains
Fate's menace once disheartered
The Quirinal's sons;
Yet by a Roman hero led,
The eagle its talons spread,
And on the foe darted!

GENERAL CHORUS: Let victory's laurels deck the ground, etc.

THE PEOPLE: Arbiter of glorious war
To him is honor due!

WOMEN: Through him the earth once more knows peace
Acclaim him then anew!

LICINIUS: Our arms in battle triumphed,
Mars their fierce onset guiding
To the goal of victory;
And, sons of glory, we
Whom all the people honor
Are the terror of the foe. The gods,
With thanks we praise their name
For what their hand has given,
To show the gratitude they claim,
Let us cast incense in the altar-flame!
(The Consuls aid Licinius as he descends from the chariot and lead him under a trophy erected at the right side of the proscenium.)

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: (to Julia). You, who are the immortal light's Custodian and attendant, through the solemn night
Heralding the dawn of glory's day elate,
O Julia, this garland to the victor consecrate!
(Gives her the golden laurel wreath.)

LICINIUS: (softly, to Cinna).
What do I hear? tonight . . .
She? . . . In the temple?

CINNA: (softly to Licinius). Silence! All observe our movements.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: Give to the hero of the Roman people
The guerdon of this victory, now his due;
For it is honor's noble token,
A pledge in which our love is spoken.

JULIA: (taking the wreath and passing it above the altar-flame).
Aid and support me, O ye gods!

LICINIUS: Yes, it is she. Over my heart I feel Joy's mad intoxication slowly steal.
(During the ceremony, over which Julia presides, the People chant the following hymn.)

GENERAL CHORUS: Priestess of the pure, chaste goddess,
With laurel crown his noble head;
While canticles of peace resound-

Il suo nome innalza al ciel.

GIULIA: (Durante il precedente coro attraversa la scena, e con piede vacillante ascende dov'è Licinio; questi s'inginocchia innanzi a lei, che nel porgli in capo la coronoa, canta con voce alterata.) Giovin prode, in sì bel giorno Prendi il pegno della gloria;
Monumento è di vittoria,
E lo sia del nostro amor.

CORO: Giovin prode, in si bel giorno, ecc.

LICINIO: (piano a Giulia). Ascolta . . . Giulia . . . ascolta . . .
Qui . . . sotto questa volta . . .

LA GRAN VESTALE: (osservando Giulia). Quanto agitato ha il cor!
Sopra quel mesto ciglio
I segni del dolor,
Veder si fanno.

CINNA: (piano a Licinio).
Tradisce il tuo pensier
Quello smarrito ciglio
Che puote esser forier
Di duol, d'affanno.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: (in tuono profetico fissando gli occhi sull'altare dell libazioni). Nel seno di splendor
Qual nube tetra appare!
Di fosca luce ancor
Langue l'altare.

GIULIA: (con ismarrimento). Oh! istante che temer
Tanto mi fece e tanto!
Altro non so veder
Che lutto e pianto.

GIULIA: (piano a Giulia). Ascolta . . . o Giulia . . . ascolta . . .
Qui . . . sotto questa volta . . .
Della vicina notte
Intra gli orrori amici, T'involerò.

GIULIA: (spaventata). Che dici? . . .

UNO DE' CONSOLI: (approssimandosi a Licinio). La pace in questo giorno
E il frutto del valor;
Godi del tuo sudor
A lei nel seno.
E qual presiedi al fato
De' cittadini ognor,
Al giubilo di lor
Presiedi appieno.

ing, His name in glory's echoes spread.
(During the preceding chorus Julia crosses the stage and ascends with wavering steps to the place where Licinius is waiting. He bows before her and she places the laurel crown on his head, singing with an agitated voice.)

JULIA: Youthful hero, on this day so glorious,
Accept the token that bespeaks your fame;
An emblem of your deeds of might victorious,
And of the love you have a right to claim.

CHORUS: Youthful hero, on this day so glorious, etc.

LICINIUS: (aside, to Julia). Listen! . . . Julia . . . listen!
Here . . . from beneath this roof! . . .

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: (watching Julia). How wildly her heart now beats!
I know that in her eyes
Soon sorrow's tears will meet
And show themselves.

CINNA: (aside, to Licinius). Your every thought you show
In your unhappy glances;
Harbingers of the woe
That you are feeling!

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: (in prophetic tones, fixing his eyes on the sacrificial altar). In the fire's heart of light
What dark cloud now appears!
A blackness veils the flame so bright,
It dies upon the altar.

JULIA: (in consternation). Ah, moment which I dread!
Almost beyond all bearing.
Non can suspect the strife
My soul with anguish tearing.

LICINIUS: (aside, to Julia). Listen, O Julia! . . . listen!
Here . . . from beneath this roof . . .
This coming night,
From among your horrified friends,
I shall carry you off!

JULIA: (alarmed). What do you say?

A CONSUL: (approaching Licinius). We gain the peace this day,
Valor's fruit is the best;
Due to your heroic toil
It fills our breasts with joy.
Whatever fate in time
May betide this people,
You share their jubilee,
And preside over their joy.

CORO: La pace in questo giorno, ecc.
(Giulia va a riprendere il suo luogo presso il fuoco sacro, E Licinio fra' due Consoli. I giuochi, le danze, i combattimenti de' lottatori seguono successivamente.)

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: (terminati i giuochi). Omai cessi il tripudio: al sommo Giove
Nel Campidoglio andiamo
Le vittime a immolar. D'opime spoglie spoglie
Adorni il vincitor le sacre soglie.
(Il corteggio va al Campidoglio nell'ordine con cui è venuto.)

CORO GENERALE: Di lauri il suol spargiamo, ecc.

■ ATTO SECONDO

Interno del tempio di Vesta in forma circolare. Sovra un vasto altare di marmo, eretto nel centro del santuario, arde il fuoco sacro. Sedile per la Vestale.

VESTALI: (cantano l'Inno della Sera intorno all'altare). Divin foco, alma del mondo, Della vita immortal segno,
Il tuo ardor,—vivo e fecondo,
Splenda ognor, su questo altar.

LA GRAN VESTALE: (consegnando a Giulia la verga d'oro che serve ad attizzare il fuoco). Del più gran ministero
Il venerato segno,
Che depongo in tua mano, in questa notte
Te fa custode del favor de' Numi,
E della sorte de' Romani ancora.
O Giulia, è questa l'ora
Solenne, augusta, che de' sommi Dei
T'espone alla presenza, deh! rifletti.
Che un infedel sospiro
Punir da lor vedrai,
Eh che ciechi non son questi archi mai.

VESTALI: (nel ritirarsi). Divin foco, alma del mondo, ecc.

GIULIA: (In atto del più profondo abbattimento s'inginocchia sui gradini dell'altare, dove per un istante rimane prosternata.) Tu che invoco con orrore,
Dea tremenda, alfin m'ascolta;
Questo misero mio core

CHORUS: We gain the peace this day, etc.
(Julia reoccupies her place beside the sacred fire, and Licinius his before the two Consuls. Games, dances and gladiatorial combats now take place in succession.)

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: (when the games are concluded). And now let cease the dance. To Jove supreme,
Throned in the Capitol our footsteps turn,
To slay the victims. The victor shall dower with rich spoils
The altars in the godhead's seat of power.
(The triumphal processional moves off toward the Capitol in the order of its entrance on the stage.)

GENERAL CHORUS: Let victory's laurels deck the ground, etc.

■ ACT II

Interior of the Temple of Vesta, circular in form. Upon a vast marble altar rising in the middle of the shrine burns the sacred fire. There are seats for the Vestals.

VESTALS: (singing the Evening Hymn around the altar). Divine fire, soul of all things terrestrial,
Symbol of life's immortal yearning,
May your bright flame, radiant celestial,
Ever be burning upon your altar.

CHIEF OF THE VESTALS: (delivering to Julia the rod of gold used to stir the fire). Of this, greatest of ministries,
The venerated symbol,
Which I lay in your hand, throughout the night
Makes you custodian of the great gods' favor,
And of the fate of Rome and every Roman!
O Julia, this is the hour,
The solemn hour when the fire-priestess elect Stands in the gods' presence! Ah, reflects,
That but a single faithless sigh
May call forth punishment,
That no roof bars Vesta's all-seeing eye!

VESTALS: (as they withdraw). Fire divine, soul of all things terrestrial, etc.
(Julia kneels on the altar steps in an attitude of the profoundest dejection, and remains prostrate there for some moments.)

JULIA: You whom I invoke with terror,
O fearsome goddess, deign to hear me.
Each breath of mine is effort claiming.
Since wretchedness so fills my

Fa che possa respirar.
Or che vedi il mio tormento,
Le mie smanie, i miei contrasti,
Deh! ti basti—In me l'ardore
Puoi tu sola dissipar.
(Si alza, ascende sull'altare e vi attizza il fuoco.)
Su questo sacro altare,
Che oltraggia il mio dolor, fremendo io porto
La sacrilega mano. L'odïoso
Aspetto mio pallida rende questa
Immortal fiamma: Vesta
Ricusa i voti miei;
E m'urta il braccio suo lungi da lei.
(Smarrita si aggira per la scena.)
Amor, tu il vuoi, m'arrendo . . .
Ma dove io porto il piè?
E qual delirio, ohimè!
Miei sensi invade?
Invincibil potere
A' danni miei cospira;
Mi stringe, mi trasporta . . .
T'arresta: hai tempo ancor; sotto i tuoi passi
La morte, o Giulia, stassi,
La folgor sul tuo capo . . .
(Delirando.)
Ma Licinio è colà . . . posso mirarlo,
Favellargli, ascoltarlo,
E il timor mi trattiene? . . .
Non più; del mio delitto
Furore, amor, la pena han già prescritto,
Sospendete qualche istante
La vendetta, o crudi Numi,
Finchè possa il caro amante
Coll'aspetto e i vaghi lumi
Queste soglie consolar.
Poi sommessa alla vostra possanza
Quella vita fatal che m'avanza
Sia l'oggetto del vostro furor.
La mia sorte è decisa.
La carriera ho compita:
Vieni, amato mortal, t'offro la vita.
(Apre la porta del tempio, e va ad appoggiarsi all'altare.)

LICINIO: (in fondo alla scena). Giulia!

GIULIA: È la voce sua . . .

LICINIO: Giulia!

GIULIA: Trema l'altar!

LICINIO: Pur ti rivedo!

GIULIA: In qual tempo, in qual loco!

LICINIO: Quel Dio che ci riunisce,
Or vigila d'intorno a queste mura,
E de' tuoi giorni ha cura.

GIULIA: Io tremo sol per te . . .

heart!
Now that you see me suffering torture,
The mad desires that rend and sear me,
Ah it is enough!—my ardor flaming
You only, you, can bid depart!
(She rises, ascends the altar steps and feeds the flame.)
Your sacred altar,
Outraged by my woe, trembling I touch
With sacrilegious hand. Ah, such
A guilty pallor, such a face of shame
I show in the accusing flame! Vesta,
Reject the vow that made me thine,
And cast me out, far from your holy shrine!
(She strays across the stage as though dazed.)
Love, you have willed it, I yield;
Yet where, ah, where shall I go?
What fell delirium, ah, woe,
Invades all my senses?
O power invincible,
Vainly against you I conspire,
Vainly rebel and flout you!
Stop, for there is still time! Underfoot, as you stray,
O Julia, death's way lies open.
May lightnings blast you!
But Licinius will come . . . and I would see him,
Talk to him and listen to him.
Is it fear that stays my hand?
I cannot from my own offense win free,
Nor flee the punishment the fates decree.
Hold in abeyance for another hour
Your vengeance, gods so merciless;
Until my dear love's sight,
Here in the temple's shadowy light,
Solaces my distress,
Then, yielding to your power,
That fated life you gave me
Shall be subject to your rage.
My fate is now determined,
I am through with fear.
Come, mortal lover, I offer you my life!
(She opens the temple door, then returns and rests against the altar.)

LICINIUS: (at the back of the stage). Julia!

JULIA: It is his voice!

LICINIUS: Julia!

JULIA: The altar trembles!

LICINIUS: Once more I behold you!

JULIA: At what a time, in what a place!

LICINIUS: Which god brings us together here.
And over these walls broods in the air,
And has your passing days in care?

JULIA: I tremble only for you!

LICINIO: De' tuoi perigli
L'immagin disprezzai.
Da sforzo sì terribile, conosci
Il mio coraggio.

GIULIA: Ah, Licinio!

LICINIO: (avanzandosi). Ricevi
Il giuramento mio:
Vivere sol vogl' io
Per amarti, difenderti, servirti.

GIULIA: Posso aspirare almeno
D'un istante al piacer?

LICINIO: Forse non hanno
Asilo le foreste,
Sotto altro cielo, in qualche antro selvaggio?
Parla: da un rio servaggio
Involarti saprò.

GIULIA: No, mai non fia.
Di questa vita mia, caro, disponi:
La sacrifico a te; ma della tua
Son debitrice a Roma ed agli Dei,
E tra' perigli miei,
Che m'è dolce affrontare,
Penso alla gloria tua; la vo' serbare.

LICINIO: Avran pietà gli Dei
Di tante nostre pene;
Un raggio vibran già d'amica spene.
Figlia del cielo, idolo del cor mio!
Arbitra te vogl' io—della mia vita;
Fan quegli sguardi tuoi
La mia felicitade. Invidi i Numi
Fian del nostro destino.
La Dea d'amor che invoco
Uni giorno ci unirà.

GIULIA: Cielo! . . . da questo
Altar, per noi funesto,—t'allontana;
Langua la fiamma.
(Giulia accorre all'altare e vi attizza il fuoco. Licinio, atterrito, ritirasi in fondo al tempio.)

LICINIO: Oh casta Diva! sgombra
Il funesto presagio.
La mia colpa è d'amar chi ti somiglia,
E nasce il nostro amore
Tutto dal tuo candore.

GIULIA: Di Saturno la figlia
I nostri prieghi ascolta;
Dell' infocato altar la viva fiamma
Il celeste favor chiaro ci mostra.

LICINIO: Chi dubitar potea
Del favor della Dea?
Qual Dio, se tu l'implori,
Ascoltarti potria,
E non impietosirsi, anima mia!

LICINIUS: These perils
Whose picture dread you paint, I scorn
Their power terrific, for I know
The courage that is mine.

JULIA: Ah, Licinius!

LICINIUS: (coming forward).
Bear witness to
This solemn oath I swear:
That I will only live
To love, defend and serve you.

JULIA: And may I look forward
To such a joyous moment?

LICINIUS: Can we not find
A refuge in the forests,
Beneath another sky, in some great wilderness?
Speak, tell me I may bear you,
Far from servitude's distress.

JULIA: No, for I cannot Dispose of my life, my beloved.
I can die for you, but your own life
Is dedicated to Rome and the gods.
Amid dangers to dare which I am fated
And which I take joy in defying,
Your glory to save I am trying.

LICINIUS: The gods, taking on us pity
Because of the torments that rend us,
A ray of encouraging hope will send us.
Daughter of heaven, dear idol of my heart,
You shall decide my life for me.
And with the glance of your dark eyes
Make my felicity! The gods are jealous,
But revoking the ills of fate
Love's goddess, whom I am invoking,
Will unite us some day.

JULIA: Ye gods! From yonder
Altar, for us so fateful, withdraw.
The flame burns dimly.
(Julia hastens to the altar and stirs the fire while Licinius, alarmed, withdraws to the rear of the Temple.)

LICINIUS: O goddess chaste, recall
Your dread and fateful omen!
My crime has been the love you're now confronting,
This love by which we are torn,
Of your own purity was born.

JULIA: Stern Saturn's glorious daughter
Ah, listen to our prayers!
Let a bright flame upon your burning altar
Show that you accord us your grace!

LICINIUS: Who can doubt that the goddess
Her favor will concede you?
What god when you implore
Would ever refuse to heed you,
Not take pity on you, soul of mine?

GIULIA: Ah! ch' io ritorno in vita!
Del passato a me resta
Una debol memoria; un fosco velo
Sull'avvenir si stende,
E un punto tutto l'esser mio comprende.
Che smania!

LICINIO: Quai trasporti!

GIULIA: Son teco, mio tesor!

LICINIO: Di quegli sguardi teneri
S'inebra questo cor.
Vieni: colà sull'ara
Ricevi la mia fè.

GIULIA: Brillar mi sento l'anima!
Vieni: colà sull'ara
Ricevi la mia fè.
Nell'eccesso del contento
Terra e Numi—a un tratto obblio,
In quei lumi—idolo mio,
Tutto accolto è il ciel per me.

LICINIO: All'amore io m'abbandono:
Altro ben per me non v'è.

LUCINIO E GIULIA: Sol per te viver vogl' io.
Voglio vivere per te.
Vieni: colà sull'ara
Ricevi la mia fè.
(Mentre i due amanti si avviano all' altare, il fuoco, che a grado a grado si è indebolito, in un tratto si smorza, e la scena non rimane illuminata che da un barlume, supponendosi che venga di fuori.)

GIULIA: Qual notte!

LICINIO: Giusti Dei!

GIULIA: (sull'altare). Perduta io sono!
Ah! più non v'è speranza!
La fiamma si smorzò; vissi abbastanza.

LICINIO: Che dici?

GIULIA: Io morirò . . .

LICINIO: Gelar mi fia.

CINNA: (entra precipitosamente). Licinio!

GIULIA: Ciel, qual voce!

CINNA: Il tempo vola:
Là, nel primo recinto,
Strepito s'ode. Andiamo:
Involarci possiamo

LICINIO: (con voce smarrita). Ebben seguimi . . . andiam . . .

CINNA: Ferma: al suo fato
Così schiudi la via.

LICINIO: Ah! disperato io son. Giulia! . . .

CINNA: Oh follia!

GIULIA: Se ti son cara, senti
Pietà di te, mio bene!
Quest'anima ha presenti
Solo i perigli tuoi . . .
Tel chiedo per l'amore
Che ad ambo avvinse il core:

JULIA: Ah, a new life let me be gaining!
Of the past all that is remaining
Is a faint memory. A veil of shadows
The future is hiding from me,
In one hope all my soul is abiding,
What madness!

LICINIUS: Ah, what emotions!

JULIA: You motive them, my treasure!

LICINIUS: With your tender, ardent glances
Fill my heart with rapture,
Come, here before the altar,
You shall receive my vow.
(Together).

JULIA: With joy my soul is leaping!
Come, here before the altar
My vow you shall receive.
In the excess of our rapture
Heaven and earth a moment forgot,
With joy's glory, beloved, this spot
Irradiate, the gods will favor me.

LICINIUS: To love all my soul I abandon
No treasure but love can I see!

LICINIUS AND JULIA: For you, you alone I would live.
For you my own life I would give.
Come, here at this altar,
Receive my vow of love.
(While the two lovers approach the altar the fire which, little by little, has been dying down, suddenly goes out, and the stage is illuminated only by a glimmer of light which seems to come from without.)

JULIA: What a night!

LICINIUS: Ye gods divine!

JULIA: (at the altar). I am undone!
Ah, no gleam of hope is left me!
The fire has gone out, and of life has bereft me!

LICINIUS: What do you say?

JULIA: That I must die.

LICINIUS: You chill my blood!

CINNA: (entering precipitately).
Licinius!

JULIA: Ye gods, who speaks?

CINNA: Time's on the wing!
From yonder, in the first courtyard
Now voices echo. Let us go,
We can bear her off with us.

LICINIUS: (in a discouraged tone). Then follow me. We will go.

CINNA: Be steadfast. Perhaps your fate
Will protect you from death.

LICINIUS: Ah, desperation fills me!
Julia!

CINNA: What madness!

JULIA: I am dear to you, I know, and riven
By pity for you, my beloved!
My soul thought alone has given
To the dangers which threaten you.
I plead because of the fondness

Se tu salvarmi vuoi
T'invola per pietà.

LICINIO: Finir tra questo orrore
La vita mia dovrà.

CINNA: Fuggi da questo orrore
E cedi all'amistà.
Vieni . . .
(Lo prende per mano.)

LICINIO: Lasciarla! . . . oh Dio!

CINNA: È d' uopo.

LICINIO: Nol poss' io.

CINNA: Se tardi un solo istante
La perdi.

LICINIO: (con furore, a Cinna).
Andiam. La voce
Sol dell'ardir m'invita.
Se l'amor mio ti nuoce
(a Giulia.)
Proteggerti saprà.
Licinio alla tuo sorte
T'involerà, mia vita;
O teco almen da forte
Ei la dividerà.
(Odonsi le grida del Popolo al di fuori.)

CORO: (di dentro). Il ciel vendetta grida
Contro la Coppia infida,
Che coll'indegno aspetto
L'are contaminò.

CINNA: (tendendo l'orecchio).
Lontane grida
Udir si fanno . . .
Affretta il piè.

LICINIO: In tanto affanno
Che farmi? ohimè!

GIULIA: Fuggite . . .

CINNA: Fuggasi.

LICINIO: (a Giulia). Di te che fia!

GIULIA: Pel nostro amore,
Anima mia! . . .
(Si odono nuovamente le grida del Popolo.)
Odo ripetere
Le grida orribili . . .

GIULIA: Vanne a difendermi . . .

CINNA: Vieni a difenderla . . .

LICINIO: Vado a difenderti;
Morrò per te.
(Parte con Cinna.)

CORO: (di dentro). Il ciel vendetta grida
Contro la Coppia infida,
Che coll' indegno aspetto
L'are contaminò.

Which binds our two hearts together:
If it is your wish to save me,
Out of compassion I follow.

LICINIUS: Let it end, this dread oppressing us,
Your life now is mine by right.

CINNA: Fly from this horror obsessing,
With confidence friendship requite.
Come! . . .
(Seizing his hand.)

LICINIUS: Leave her! O ye gods!

CINNA: To what purpose?

LICINIUS: No, I cannot.

CINNA: If you wait a moment longer
She is lost.

LICINIUS: (furiously, to Cinna).
Let us go! Now is tearing
At my heart-strings the voice of my yearning.
And if you endanger my love
(To Julia.)
I'll know how to protect you!
Licinius, his fate with you sharing,
Will bear you off, danger spurning,
And whatever betide us
Together with you he will dare.
(The cries of the People are heard without.)

CHORUS: (within). The vengeful heavens clamor,
Decry the faithless lovers,
Whose face their guilt uncovers
By the desecrated shrine!

CINNA: (listening). Cries
Makes themselves heard in the distance.
Let us hasten to go!

LICINIUS: Grief is hounding us.
What to do? Woe is me!

JULIA: Do you flee!

CINNA: We must flee!

LICINIUS: (to Julia). Now make your will known.

JULIA: I trust in our love,
My lover, my own!
(The cries of the People are heard again.)

JULIA, LICINIUS, CINNA: Once again lend your ear
To the terrible cry!

JULIA: Hasten and defend me!

CINNA: Hasten to defend her!

LICINIUS: I hasten to defend you,
For you to die!
(He leaves with Cinna.)

CHORUS: (within). The vengeful heavens clamor,
Denounce the faithless lovers,
Whose face their guilt discovers
By the desecrated shrine!

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Oh delitto! oh sventura!
Oh colmo di sciagura!
Il divin foco estinto . . .
La Ministra spirante . . . i sommi Dei
Immergono di nuovo,
Per segnalar lo sgegno lor severo,
Nel cãos primo l' Universo intero!
(Alcune Vestali si affollano intorno a Giulia.)

GIULIA: Che! . . . vivo ancora? . . .

VESTALI: Misera donzella!

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Il tempio è profanato,
I Numi, e insiem le genti,
Il misfatto perseguitan; reclamasi
La vittima da lor. Forse sei quella
(A Giulia.)
Ch' espiar deve la colpa? Olà, favella.

GIULIA: Mi si rechi la morte: io già l'aspetto,
Io la voglio, ed è questa
La speme che mi resta:
De' lunghi affanni miei
Orribil ricompensa. Almen mi toglie
Dei vostri lacci al peso.
Sacerdote di Giove, amo: il paleso.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: In questo sacro asilo, oh! quale ascolto
Esecranda bestemmia!
Nell'oltraggiare i dritti
Del tempio augusto, la più santa legge
Tradisti, infida a' voti,
A tuoi giuri spergiura.

GIULIA: Fui colpevole, è ver, vinse natura.

CORO DI SACERDOTI: Pronunziato—ha l'indegna—il suo fat:
Abbia morte condegna—all'error.

GIULIA: O Nume tutelar degli infelici,
Latona; odi i miei prieghi;
L'ultimo voto mio ti mova. Pria
Che al destino io soccomba,
Fa che dalla mia tomba
S'allontani l'oggetto
Per cui morte m'attende.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: A noi svela l'indegno,
Che, di Vesta lo sdegno
Per attirarti, in questo sacro albergo
Osò portare il piede:
Il suo nome palesa.

GIULIA: Invan si chiede.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: O fatal crime! O mischance vaster
Than any other dread disaster!
Extinguished is the fire divine,
Its priestess dying . . . gods supreme,
To show your scorn and rigor
Once more immerse
In chaos primeval the entire universe!
(Some of the Vestals crowd about Julia.)

JULIA: What! Am I still alive?

VESTALS: Wretched maiden!

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: The Temple has been desecrated,
And gods and mortals offended
The evil done will punish, will claim
The victim due them. Can it be that she
(To Julia.)
Whom here I see is guilty?
Hearken to my words!

JULIA: I am prepared for death and I await it,
I crave it. Of all else fate bereaves me,
This hope alone is left me!
Of all my lasting sorrows
The dreadful recompense. Now free from the distress
Of those deceits which weighed me,
Highpriest of Jove, freely I confess my love.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Within this holy shrine, alas, what must I hear!
Accursed blasphemy!
Outraging its sacred rights,
This temple revered, its law most holy
You have flouted. Faithless to your vow,
You have foresworn your solemn oath!

JULIA: I am guilty, it is true, betrayed by Nature!

CHORUS OF PRIESTS: This maid judges her own case unworthy.
Death and death only can efface her fault.

JULIA: O tutelary god of those unhappy,
Latona, hear the prayer I offer:
May the last plea I utter move you. I pray
When I succumb to fate,
When I have vanished from earth,
Far from my tomb be banished
The one to whom my death is due.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Name the scoundrel unworthy
Who, chaste Vesta's anger compelling,
To snare you in this sacred dwelling
Dared to set foot.
Reveal his name to us!

JULIA: In vain you ask it.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Interprete supremo
Dell'ira degli Dei,
L'anatema terribile
Vibro sopra di te.

GIULIA: Non v'è più speme!
Son tronchi i giorni miei,
E la gelida mano della morte
Mi sento in fronte.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Perfida Ministra,
Ti prepara ad uscir da queste mura:
Va nel sen della Terra;
Le tue colpe esecrande ivi rinserra.
Da quel fronte—che ha l'onte—scolpite
(Alle Vestali.)
Le togliete le bende avvilite,
Dei littori alle mani cruente
L'empia testa dovete lasciar.
(Si tolgono a Giulia gli ornamenti di Vestale, e le vengono fatti baciare.)

CORO GENERALE: Da quel fronte—che ha l'onte—scolpite,
Le togliamo le bende avvilite;
Dei littori alle mani cruente
L'empia testa dobbiamo lasciar.
(Il Sommo Sacerdote getta un velo nero sul capo a Giulia, la quale è condotta dai littori fuori del tempio. Le Vestali ed i Sacerdoti si ritirano.)

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: As the supreme interpreter
Of the ire of the offended gods,
I duly lay upon you,
Their dread and awful curse.

JULIA: No hope is left to me!
My days cut short in their flower,
I feel death's chilly hand this hour
Upon my brow!

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Priestess foresworn,
Make ready then to leave these holy walls!
Within the earth's dark bosom
Your crime accursed we'll hide away,
From your brow, dishonored now, by guilt defaced
(To the Vestals.)
Be it removed the veil she has defiled!
The lictors' hands shall tear from impious head
That veil it is not fit to wear.
(Julia is stripped of her Vestal insignia, which are saluted and carried away.)

GENERAL CHORUS: From that brow, dishonored now, defaced by guilt,
Be it removed, the veil she has defiled!
The lictors' hands from impious head shall tear
The Vestal veil it is not fit to wear!
(The Pontifex Maximus casts a black veil over Julia's head and when two lictors have led her from the Temple, the Vestals and Priests withdraw.)

ATTO TERZO

(Campo scellerato.)

Confinante a sinistra colla porta Collina, sulla quale sta scritto: Scelleratus Ager. Si vedono tre tombe in forma piramidale: due delle quali son chiuse da nera pietra, su cui si legge il nome della Vestale ivi rinchiusa, e l'epoca della sua morte. La terza, destinata a Giulia, è aperta: una scala introduce nella parte interna.)

LICINIO: (solo e nel massimo disordine). Ohimè! quale apparato! . . .
Spettacolo d'orrore!
L'alma mia s'abbandona al suo furore . . .
Cieco sdegno mi guida . . . freme il suolo
(Andando verso la tomba aperta.)
Sotto i miei passi, e pronto è già l'avello
A ingoiar quanto il mondo ha di più bello.
Giulia fia ver che mora! . . .
Ah! no, s' io vivo ancora;

ACT III

(The Field of Infamy.)

On the left it is bordered by the Colline Gate, on which are inscribed the words: Scelleratus Ager (The Field of Infamy). It reveals three pyramidal tombs chiseled in black stone, on two of which may be read the names of the Vestals reposing within them, and the date of their interment. The third tomb, meant for Julia, is open and a flight of steps lead down into it.

LICINIUS: (alone, with greatest agitation). Woe is me! What preparations!
What a spectacle of horror!
My soul now itself abandons to its rage.
Blind anger is my guide. Let the earth tremble!
(Approaching the open tomb.)
Already the grave is yawning under my very feet
To swallow the loveliest flower of beauty's dawning.
Julia, must I behold her dying!
Ah, no, my chance awaiting,
Of her dear life and beauty

Di così bella vita
Vo' farmi difensor.
Contro il destin severo
Che invan placare io spero,
Dovrà prestarmi aita
Un disperato amor.
(Cinna e detto.)

LICINIO: Cinna, l'arme che fan?

CINNA: Speriamo invano;
Geme ognun; ti compiange,
Ma non osa difenderti.

LICINIO: Codardi!

CINNA: Le schiere tutte lo spavento agghiaccia;
Ma per morirti al fianco
Di amici e di guerrier numero scelto
Seguita i passi miei, e là celati
Stansi sul Quirinal, gli ordini tuoi
Seco attenderò.

LICINIO: Fido nell'amico.

CINNA: Fida nell'ardir mio;
Ma pria d'avventurar l'inegual pugna
Del Supremo Pontefice il potere
Da te s'invochi.

LICINIO: Ogni speranza esclude
Del Grande Sacerdote
La fatal cecità.

CINNA: L'ira de'Numi
Ei sol può deviare,
La Vestale involando al suo destino.

LICINIO: Qui giacer deve.

CINNA: Alla Collina porta
Appunto eccolo innanti
Fra questi orrori ei vien, seco rimanti.
(Parte.)

LICINIO: D'un sacrifizio orrendo
Disposto è l'apparato,
Vittima d'altra legge la beltade,
La giovinezza in preda
De' carnefici, viva nella tomba Discenderà?

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Tal' è il voler de' Numi.

LICINIO: Per disarmare l'ira
A te pur lascia i modi
La somma lor clemenza:
Vengo per Giulia a chiederti assistenza.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Che ardisci domandar, mentre lo Stato, La salvezza di Roma
D'una vittima han d'uopo?
Giulia deve morir.

LICINIO: Da un delitto
Il bene degli Stati non dipende.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Que' tetri monumenti assai ti mostrano
Che mai tali orror mai perdonò la Dea.

I shall be the defender!
Against a fate so cruel,
Beyond hope of placating,
I shall be seeking support
In a love born of despair!
(Cinna enters.)

LICINIUS: Cinna, what of the legionaires?

CINNA: Vain to rely on them
Some sigh and others pity,
They dare not try to defend you!

LICINIUS: The cowards!

CINNA: The soldiers are all congealed with terror;
Yet at your side, prepared to die,
A chosen group of friends and legionaries
Have followed my steps, and are hidden
Nearby, on the Quirinal.
They now are waiting for your commands.

LICINIUS: My trust is in my friend!

CINNA: Trust in the ardor that fills me,
Yet until you dare the unequal struggle,
Invoke the power of the Supreme Pontiff
In your behalf.

LICINIUS: Every hope is excluded
By the Pontifex Maximus's
Immovable blindness.

CINNA: Yet the ire of the gods
He alone can assuage,
The Vestal maiden rescue from her dread fate.

LICINIUS: He must avert that fate.

CINNA: At the Colline Gate,
They assemble to keep death's tryst
Stay with her amid these horrors that make us tremble!
(Exeunt.)

LICINIUS: The preparations have been made for a repellant sacrifice
A victim of cruel laws, must beauty
And youth, the executioners'
Unhappy spoil, alive into the tomb
Descend?

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: It is the will of the gods.

LICINIUS: Their anger to disarm
To you I leave the methods
Their mercy best commanding.
For Julia your aid I am demanding.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: What dare you ask of me, when for the State,
For Rome's salvation,
The victim must meet her fate?
Julia will have to die!

LICINIUS: There is no state
That from a crime derives advantage.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Yon monuments funereal to you should prove
Such horrid guilt the goddess never pardons.

LICINIO: Romolo deridea allor che nacque
La tua legge fatal: d'una Vestale
Gli diede in sen Marte la vita.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Giulia
Deve morir . . .

LICINIO: No, no . . . non fia mai vero! . . .
Suo complice son io.
O salvarla, o morir con lei desìo.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Morrai senza salvarla.
Contro il divin poter, che insultar osi,
Debole scudo è il tuo valore istesso;
La Tarpèa Rupe è al Campidoglio appresso.

LICINIO: Tu sol dovrai tremare
In fra gli sdegni e l'ira;
Il tuo crudele Altare
Col brando scuoterò.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: La folgore piombare
Sopra di te vedrò.

LICINIO: Provar dovrai il mio sdegno
Se Giulia perirà.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: L'iniquo tuo disegno
Il ciel confonderà.

LICINIO: Co' miei fidi, chi' io sproni al furore, Coprirò questi campi d'orrori,
E la vittima illesa sarà.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Trema, trema, son vani i furori,
E la vittima estinta cadrà.
(Licinio parte.)

ARUSPICE: Differir vi consiglio il sacrifizio;
È vittima possente.

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Venerabile Aruspice,
Non temete di lui;
Sarà mia cura gl'impeti arrestar
D'un giovin folle.

ARUSPICE: De' soldati e del popolo se la turba
Sdegnata . . .

IL SOMMO SACERDOTE: Degli altari è la gloria sicura;
Or si compia il dover nostro, e del resto
Si lasci al ciel la cura.
(Giulia, condotta di' littori, è circondata da' suoi congiunti e da un numero di Donzelle. Innanzi a lei viene portata un'ara spenta. Le Vestali recano gli ornamenti della Vestale condannata.)

CORO DI POPOLO: (durante la marcia della comitiva). La Vestale infida mora, Che in orrore è degli Dei:

LICINIUS: Romolus laughed to scorn at very birth
Your fateful law. To a Vestal
He granted life upon the Martian Field.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Julia
Will have to die.

LICINIUS: No, no, this cannot be the truth!
I am the sharer of her guilt, even I!
O save her or else let me die with her!

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: She shall die and nothing can save her.
Against the powers divine which you have dared insult Vainly your feeble valor strives. Remember Near Campidoglio's field towers the Tarpeian Rock.

LICINIUS: The sun himself must tremble
At these fierce scorns and hatreds;
Your sanguinary altar
Beneath its brand should quake.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: The lightning's bolt shall strike you
Before my waiting eyes.

LICINIUS: My just wrath I shall prove anon,
If hapless Julia dies.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: The wickedness you have in mind
The heavens will frustrate.

LICINIUS: The faithful followers
I'll rouse to fury
Will turn these fields into a place of horror,
The victim rescue from her fate.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Tremble, tremble, your rage is useless,
It is too late to save the victim!
(Licinius off.)

AN AUGUR: Do you advise that we defer the sacrifice;
The victim's friend has power.

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Venerable Augur,
Be not afraid of him;
Mine is the task to curb the ardor
Of a mad youth.

AUGUR: I know we are defying
The soldiers and the people . . .

PONTIFEX MAXIMUS: Upon our altars and their sanctity relying,
With our stern duty let us be complying,
All else we'll trust to heaven's care!
(Julia, conducted by lictors, is surrounded by her colleagues and a group of Maidens. Before her is carried an altar on which the fire has been extinguished. The other Vestals carry the ornaments of the condemned Vestal.)

CHORUS OF THE PEOPLE: (sung during the processional march).
The recreant Vestal must perish,
Outraged gods have decreed her

E la morte serva a lei
Il misfatto ad espiar.

CORO DI DONZELLE E DI VESTALI: Sul fior degli anni—tanta beltade,
Tra crudi affanni—perir dovrà!
Numi, perdono, se la pietade
Amare lagrime spander ci fa!

GIULIA: (alle Vestali). Tenere suore addio!
(Alla Gran Vestale.)
E tu, che ancor degg' io
Venerar, tu disarma
Per me l'ira del ciel; d'essermi madre
In questi estremi istanti
Non isdegnar; la figlia
Benedici or che abbraccia
Le tue ginocchia.
(Le cade ai piedi.)

fate;
And death will serve its purpose to expiate
Her error.

CHORUS OF MAIDENS AND VESTALS: In her youth's flower this maid so lovely,
Who such grief has suffered, must seek death's bed!
Ye gods forgive her, have mercy on her.
Behold the bitter tears we shed for her!

JULIA: (to the Vestals). Beloved sisters, farewell!
(To the Chief of the Vestals.) And you, you whom I still Must venerate, do you disarm
Heaven's rage against me! Do not disdain
In these last moments of my life, to be
A mother to me; your daughter
Blessing, and granting her parting plea,
That she may clasp your knee!
(She falls at her feet.)

GIULIA: Oh! clemenza del ciel! La spenta face
De' miei dì si riaccende,
Ed a novella vita amor mi rende.
(Il Sommo Sacerdote, la Gran Vestale, e seco loro i littori partono, portando seco il fuoco sacro.)
(A Licinio.)
Per amarti io vivrò.
(La scena si cambia e rappresenta il tempio di Venere in mezzo al bosco di rose.—Da un lato la statua di Flora.)

CORO DI VESTALI: Lieti concenti,
Dolci momenti,
Regnar fra noi
Possiate ognor.

LICINIO E GIULIA: Vieni: colà sull' ara
Ricevi la mia fè.
Viver per te, ben mio,
Morir vogl' io per te.
Lieti concenti, ecc.

FINE.

JULIA: O divine grace! The dying spark
Of life takes fire and soars in me again.
Love restores a new existence to me!
(The Pontifex Maximus, the Chief of the Vestals, followed by their attendants and lictors, depart, carrying the sacred fire.)
(To Licinius.)
I will live to love you!
(A change of scene represents the Temple of Venus, rising amid a garden of roses. At one side is a statue of Flora.)

CHORUS OF VESTALS: Sweet hours of pleasure,
To music's measure,
May their joy nevermore
Pass you by!

LICINIUS AND JULIA: Come, at the altar here,
Now I will make my vow,
To live for you alone
To die for you!
Sweet hours of pleasure, etc.

THE END.

Salome (1905)

Music and Libretto by Richard Strauss

This one-act musical drama, set to a text by Hedwig Lachmann (based on Oscar Wilde's play), was first performed at the Königliches Opernhaus in Dresden on December 9, 1905. Herod, Tetrarch of Judea, is celebrating at a banquet at his palace in Tiberias, next to the Sea of Galilee. Narraboth, the Captain of the Guard, moons over Herod's beautiful stepdaughter, Salome. He is in love with her despite his friend the Page's warnings. When Salome goes outside to get away from the banquet she hears the voice of John the Baptist, who is being held prisoner by Herod. He speaks of the coming of the Messiah. She requests permission to visit him, but the guards are afraid of Herod's wrath. She promises to give her love to Narraboth if he will grant her this wish. John the Baptist is brought up from his dungeon; he denounces not only Herod but also Herodias, Salome's mother, for marrying her dead husband's brother. Salome thinks that John the Baptist is beautiful and sings of her wish to kiss him on the mouth. Finding this unbearable, Narraboth commits suicide. Salome barely notices. John the Baptist curses her too when he realizes that she is Herodias' daughter. Herod and Herodias quarrel over Herod's desire for Salome, and Herodias demands that John the Baptist die for having insulted her. But Herod, who is in awe of the holy man, refuses to harm him. Herod asks Salome to dance for him. But she will fulfill his wish only if he promises to give her whatever she wants when she is done. He gives in, and she performs the dance of the seven veils. She demands the head of John the Baptist as fulfillment of Herod's promise. The executioner hands her the head on a silver platter, and she grabs it in mad joy. She may now kiss him on the mouth as many times as, and for as long as, she wants. Herod is disgusted by her behavior and calls for his guards to kill her. They crush her to death with their shields.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
SCÈNE I	SCENE I
Une grande terrasse dans le palais d'Hérode donnant sur la salle de festin. Des soldats sont accoudés sur le balcon. A droite, il y a un énorme escalier. A gauche, au fond une ancienne citerne entourée d'un mur de bronze vert. Clair de lune.	A great terrace in the palace of Herod, set above the banqueting-hall. Some soldiers are leaning over the balcony. To the right there is a gigantic staircase, to the left, at the back, an old cistern surrounded by a wall of green bronze. The moon is shining very brightly.
NARRABOTH: Comme la princess Salomé est belle ce soir!	THE YOUNG SYRIAN: How beautiful is the Princess Salome tonight!
LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Regardez la lune. La lune a l'aire très étrange. On dirait une femme qui sort d'un tombeau.	THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: Look at the moon. How strange the moon seems! She is like a woman rising from a tomb. She is like a dead woman. One might fancy she was looking for dead things.
NARRABOTH: Elle a l'aire très étrange. Elle ressemble à une princesse, qui a des pieds comme des petites colombes blanches . . . On dirait qu'elle danse.	THE YOUNG SYRIAN: She has a strange look. She is like a little princess who wears a yellow veil, and whose feet are of silver. She is like a princess who has white doves for feet. One might fancy she was dancing.
LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Elle est comme une femme morte. Elle va très lentement. (Bruit dans la salle de festin.)	THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: She is like a woman who is dead. She moves very slowly. (Noise in the banqueting-hall.)
PREMIER SOLDAT: Quel vacarme! Qui sont ces bêtes fauves qui hurlent?	FIRST SOLDIER: What an uproar! Who are those wild beasts howling?
SECOND SOLDAT: Les Juifs. Ils sont toujours ainsi. C'est sur leur religion qu'ils discutent.	SECOND SOLDIER: The Jews. They are always like that. They are disputing about their religion.
NARRABOTH: Qu'elle est belle, la princess Salomé, ce soir! Qu'elle est belle!	THE YOUNG SYRIAN: How beautiful is the princess Salome tonight!
LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Vous la regardez toujours. Vous la regardez trop! Il ne faut pas regarder les gens de cette façon . . . . Il peut arriver un malheur.	THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: You are always looking at her. You look at her too much. It is dangerous to look at people in such fashion. Something terrible may happen.
NARRABOTH: Elle est très belle ce soir.	THE YOUNG SYRIAN: She is very beautiful tonight.
PREMIER SOLDAT: Le tétrarque a l'air très sombre.	FIRST SOLDIER: The Tetrarch has a sombre aspect.
SECOND SOLDAT: Oui, il a l'aire sombre.	SECOND SOLDIER: Yes; he has a sombre aspect.
PREMIER SOLDAT: Qui regarde-t-il?	FIRST SOLDIER: At whom is he looking?
SECOND SOLDAT: Je ne sais pas.	SECOND SOLDIER: I cannot tell.
NARRABOTH: Comme la princesse est pâle! Jamais je ne l'ai vue si pâle. Elle ressemble au reflet d'une rose blanche dans un miroir d'argent.	THE YOUNG SYRIAN: How pale the Princess is. Never have I seen her so pale. She is like the shadow of a white rose in a mirror of silver.
LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Il ne faut pas la regarder. Vous la regardez trop! Je vous prie de ne pas la regarder.	THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: You must not look at her. You look too much at her.
LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: (dans la citerne). Après moi viendra un autre encore plus puissant que moi. Je ne suis pas digne même de délier la courroi de ses sandales. Quand il viendra, la terre déserte se réjouira. Quand il viendra, les yeux des aveugles verront le jour. Quand il viendra, les oreilles des sourds ser-	THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: (from the cistern.) After me shall come another mightier than I. I am not worthy so much as to unloose the latchet of his shoes. When he comes the solitary places shall be glad. They shall blossom like the rose. The eyes of the blind shall see the day, and the ears of the deaf ont ouvertes.

SECOND SOLDAT: Faites-le taire. Il dit toujours des choses absurdes.

PREMIER SOLDAT: Mains non: c'est un saint homme. Il est très doux. Chaque jour, je lui donne à manger; il me remercie toujours.

UN CAPPADOCIEN: Qui est-ce?

PREMIER SOLDAT: C'est un prophète.

UN CAPPADOCIEN: Quel est son nom?

PREMIER SOLDAT: Iokanaan.

UN CAPPADOCIEN: D'où vient-il?

PREMIER SOLDAT: Du désert. Une grande foule de disciples le suivait.

UN CAPPADOCIEN: De quoi parle-t-il?

PREMIER SOLDAT: Il est impossible de le comprendre.

UN CAPPADOCIEN: Peut-on le voir?

PREMIER SOLDAT: Non. Le tétrarque ne le permet pas.

NARRABOTH: Mais la princesse se lève! Elle quitte la table! Elle a l'air très ennuyée. Elle vient par ici.

LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Ne la regardez pas.

NARRABOTH: Ah! Elle vient par ici, vers nous!

LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Je vous prie, ne la regardez trop.

NARRABOTH: Elle est comme une colombe qui s'est égarée.

SCÈNE II

Entre Salomé.

SALOMÉ: Je ne resterai pas. Je ne peux pas rester. Pourquoi le tétrarque me regarde-t-il toujours avec ses yeux de taupe sous ses paupières tremblantes?..C'est étrange que le mari de ma mère me regarde comme cela. Comme l'air est frais ici! Enfin, ici on respire! Là dedans, il y a des Juifs de Jérusalem qui se déchirent à cause de leurs ridicules cérémonies, des Egyptiens, subtils, shall be opened. The suckling child shall put his hand upon the dragon's lair, he shall lead the lions by their manes.

SECOND SOLDIER: Make him be silent. He is always saying ridiculous things.

FIRST SOLDIER: No, no. He is a holy man. He is very gentle, too. Every day when I give him food to eat he thanks me.

THE CAPPADOCIAN: Who is he?

FIRST SOLDIER: A prophet.

THE CAPPADOCIAN: What is his name?

FIRST SOLDIER: Iokanaan.

THE CAPPADOCIAN: Where does he come from?

FIRST SOLDIER: From the desert where he fed on locusts and wild honey. He was clothed in camel's hair and round his loins he had a leather belt. He was very terrible to look upon. A great multitude used to follow him. He even had disciples.

THE CAPPADOCIAN: What is he talking of?

FIRST SOLDIER: We can never tell. Sometimes he says things that make one afraid, but it is impossible to understand what he says.

THE CAPPADOCIAN: May one see him?

FIRST SOLDIER: No. The Tetrarch has forbidden it.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: The Princess is getting up! She is leaving the table! She looks very troubled. Ah, she is coming this way.

THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: Do not look at her!

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Ah, she is coming towards us.

THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: I pray you not to look at her.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: She is like a dove that has strayed . . . She is like a narcissus trembling in the wind . . . She is like a silver flower.

SCENE II

(Enter SALOME.)

SALOME: I will not stay. I cannot stay. Why does the Tetrarch look at me all the while with his mole's eyes under his shaking eyelids? It is strange that the husband of my mother looks at me like that. How sweet the air is here! I can breathe here! Within there are Jews from Jerusalem who are tearing each other to pieces over their foolish ceremonies, and Egyptians si-silencieux, des Romains avec leur lourdeur, leur brutalité, leurs gros mots. Ah! que je déteste les Romains!

LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Oh! Il va arriver un malheur. Pourquoi le regarder?

SALOMÉ: Que c'est bon de voir la lune. On dirait une toute petite fleur d'argent, froide et chaste. Elle a la beauté d'une vierge . . . Je suis sûre, qu'elle est vierge.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Il est venu, le Seigneur! Il est venu le fils de l'Homme.

SALOMÉ: Qui a crié cela?

SECOND SOLDAT: C'est le prophète, princesse.

SALOMÉ: Ah! le prophète . . . celui dont le tétrarque a peur?

SECOND SOLDAT: Nous ne savons rien de cela, princesse. C'est le prophéte Iokanaan.

NARRABOTH: Voulez-vous que je commande votre litière, princesse? Il fait très beau dans le jardin.

SALOMÉ: Il dit des choses monstrueuses, à propos de ma mère, n'est-ce pas?

SECOND SOLDAT: Nous ne comprenons jamais ce qu'il dit, princesse.

SALOMÉ: Oui, il dit des choses monstrueuses d'elle.

UN ESCLAVE: (Entrant.). Princesse, le tétrarque vous prie de retourner au festin.

SALOMÉ: Je n'y retournerai pas. (L'esclave sort.)
Est-ce un vieillard, le prophète?

NARRABOTH: (toujours plus insistant). Princess il vaudrait mieux retourner. Permettez-moi de vous reconduire.

SALOMÉ: Le prophète . . . est-ce un vieillard?

PREMIER SOLDAT: Non, princesse, c'est un tout jeune homme.

LA VOIX C'IOKANAAN: Ne te réjouis point, terre de Palestine, parce que la verge de celui qui te frappait a été brisée. Car de la race du serpent il sortira un basilic, et ce qui en naîtra dévorera les oiseaux.

SALOMÉ: Quelle étrange voix! Je voudrais bien lui parler.

lent and subtle, and Romans brutal and coarse, with the uncouth jargon. Ah! how I loathe the Romans!

THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: Why do you speak to her? Oh! something terrible will happen. Why do you look at her?

SALOME: How good to see the moon! She is like a little piece of money, a little silver flower. She is cold and chaste. I am sure she is a virgin. She has the beauty of a virgin. Yes, she is a virgin. She has never defiled herself. She has never abandoned herself to men, like the other goddesses.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Behold! the Lord has come. The Son of Man is at hand.

SALOME: Who was that who cried out?

SECOND SOLDIER: The prophet, Princess.

SALOME: Ah, the prophet! He of whom the Tetrarch is afraid?

SECOND SOLDIER: We know nothing of that, Princess. It was the prophet, Iokanaan, who cried out.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Is it your pleasure that I bid them bring you litter. Princess? The night is fair in the garden.

SALOME: He says terrible things about my mother, does he not?

SECOND SOLDIER: We never understand what he says, Princess.

SALOME: Yes; he says terrible things about her.
(Enter a slave.)

THE SLAVE: Princess, the Tetrarch prays you to return to the feast.

SALOME: I will not return.
(The slave goes out.)
Is he an old man, this prophet?

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: (insisting.) Princess, it were better to return. Suffer me to lead you in.

SALOME: This prophet . . . is he an old man?

FIRST SOLDIER: No, Princes, he is quite young.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Rejoice not, O land of Palestine, because the rod that smote you is broken. For from the seed of the serpent shall come a basilisk, and that which is born of it shall devour the birds.

SALOME: What a strange voice! I would speak with him.

SECOND SOLDAT: Princesse, le tétrarque ne veut pas qu'on lui parle. Il a même défendu au grand prêtre de lui parler.

SALOMÉ: Je veux lui parler.

SECOND SOLDAT: C'est impossible, princesse!

SALOMÉ: (toujours plus violente). Je le veux. Faites sortir le prophète.

SECOND SOLDAT: Nous n'osons pas, princesse.

SALOMÉ: (s'approchant de la citerne et y regardent). Comme il fait noir, là-dedans! Cela doit être terrible d'être dans un trou si noir! Cela ressemble à une tombe . . . (aux soldats, féroce). Vous ne m'avez pas entendue? Faites-le sortir. Je veux le voir.

PREMIER SOLDAT: Je vous prie, princesse, de ne pas nous demander cela.

SALOMÉ: (regardant le jeune Syrien). Ah!

LE PAGE D'HÉRODIAS: Oh! qu'est ce qui va arriver? Je suis sûr qu'il va arriver un malheur.

SALOMÉ: (s'approchant du jeune Syrien.) Vous ferez cela pour moi, n'est -ce pas, Narraboth? Pour vous, j'ai toujours été très douce. Vous ferez cela pour moi? Je veux seulement le regarder, cet étrange prophète. On a tant parlé de lui. Je pense qu'il a peur de lui, le tétrarque.

NARRABOTH: Le tétrarque a formellement défendu qu'on lève le couvercle de ce puits.

SALOMÉ: Vous ferez cela pour moi, Narraboth; et demain quand je passerai dans ma litière sous la porte des vendeurs d'idoles, je laisserai tomber pour vous une petite fleur, une petite fleur verte.

NARRABOTH: Princesse, je ne peux pas, je ne peux pas.

SALOMÉ: Vous ferez cela pour moi, Narraboth (plus décidément) Vous savez bien, que vous ferez cela pour moi. Et demain je vous regarderai à travers les voiles de mousseline, Narraboth, je vous regarderai, peut-être je vous sourirai. Narraboth, regardez moi! Ah! vous savez vien que vous allez faire ce que je vous demande. Vous le savez bien . . . Moi je le sais bien.

NARRABOTH: (faisant un signe au second soldat). Faites sortir le prophète . . . La princesse Salomé veut le voir.

SECOND SOLDIER: I fear it may not be, Princess. The Tetrarch does not allow any one to speak with him. He has even forbidden the high priest to speak with him.

SALOME: I desire to speak with him.

SECOND SOLDIER: It is impossible, Princess.

SALOME: (violently). I will speak with him.

SECOND SOLDIER: We dare not, Princess.

SALOME: (Approaching the cistern and looking down into it.) How black it is down there! It must be terrible to be in so black a hole! It is like a tomb . . . (To the soldiers.) Did you not hear me? Bring out the prophet. I would look on him.

FIRST SOLDIER: Princess, I beg you, do not require this of us.

SALOME: (Looking at the young Syrian.) Ah!

THE PAGE OF HERODIAS: Oh! what is going to happen? I am sure that something terrible will happen.

SALOME: (Going up to the young Syrian.) You will do this thing for me, will you not, Narraboth? You will do this thing for me. I have ever been kind towards you. You will do it for me. I would but look at him, this strange prophet. Men have talked so much of him. Often I have heard Tetrarch talk of him. I think he is afraid of him, the Tetrarch.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: The Tetrarch has formally forbidden that any man should raise the cover of this well.

SALOME: You will do this thing for me, Narraboth, and tomorrow when I pass in my litter beneath the gateway of the idol-sellers I will let fall for you a little flower, a little green flower.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Princess, I cannot, I cannot.

SALOME: (smiling). You will do this thing for me, Narraboth. You know that you will do this thing for me. And tomorrow when I shall pass in my litter by the bridge of the idol-buyers, I will look at you through the muslin veils, I will look at you Narraboth, it may be I will smile at you. Look at me, Narraboth, look at me. Ah! You know that you will do what I ask of you. You know . . . I know that you will do this thing.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: (To the third Soldier.) Let the prophet come forth . . . The Princess Salome desires to see him.

SALOMÉ: Ah!
(Le prophète sort de la citerne.)

SCÈNE III

(Salomé le regarde et recule.)

IOKANAAN: Où est celui, dont la coupe d'abominations est déjà pleine? Où est celui qui en robe d'argent mourra un jour devant tout le peuple? Dites-lui de venir afin qu'il puisse entendre la voix de celui qui a crié dans les déserts et dans les palais des rois.

SALOMÉ: De qui parle-t-il?

NARRABOTH: On ne sait jamais, princesse.

IOKANAAN: Où est celle ayant vu des hommes peints sur la muraille, qui s'est laissée emporter à la concupiscence de ses yeux, et a envoyé des ambassadeurs en Chaldée?

SALOMÉ: C'est de ma mère qu'il parle.

NARRABOTH: Mais non, princesse.

SALOMÉ: Si, c'est de ma mère.

IOKANAAN: Où est celle qui s'est abandonnée aux capitaines des Assyriens? Où est celle qui s'est abandonée aux jeunes hommes d'Egypte qui sont vêtus de lin et d'hyacinthe, et portent des boucliers d'or et des casques d'argent, et qui ont de grands corps. Dites-lui de se lever de la couche de son impudicité, de sa couche incestueuse, afin qu'elle puisse entendre les paroles de celui qui prépare la voie du Seigneur; afin qu'elle se répente de ses péchés. Quoiqu'elle ne se repentira jamais, dites-lui de venir, car le Seigneur a son fléau dans la main.

SALOMÉ: Mais il est terrible, il est terrible.

NARRABOTH: Ne restez pas ici, princesse, je vous en prie.

SALOMÉ: Ce sont les yeux surtout qui sont terribles. On dirait des cavernes noides lunes fantastiques . . . Pensezres où demeurent des dragons. On dirait des lacs noirs troublés par vous qu'il parlera encore?

NARRABOTH: Ne restez pas ici, princess! Je vous prie de ne pas rester ici.

SALOMÉ: Comme il est maigre aussi! Il ressemble à une mince image d'ivoire. Je suis sûre qu'il est chaste, autant que la lune. Sa chair

SALOME: Ah! (The prophet comes out of the cistern.)

SCENE III

(Salome looks at him and steps slowly back.)

IOKANAAN: Where is he whose cup of abominations is now full? Where is he, who in a robe of silver shall one day die in the face of all the people? Bid him come forth, that he may hear the voice of him who has cried in the waste places and in the houses of kings.

SALOME: Of whom is he speaking?

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: No one can tell, Princess.

IOKANAAN: Where is she who saw the images of men painted on the walls, even the images of the Chaldaens painted with colors, and gave herself up to the lust of her eyes, and sent ambassadors into the land of Chaldaea?

SALOME: It is of my mother that he is speaking.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Oh no, Princess.

SALOME: Yes: it is of my mother that he is speaking.

IOKANAAN: Where is she who gave herself unto the Captains of Assyria? Where is she who has given herself to the young men of the Egyptians, who are clothed in fine linen and hyacinth, whose shields are of gold, whose helmets are of silver, whose bodies are mighty? Go, bid her rise up from the bed of her abominations, from the bed of her incestuousness, that she may hear the words of him who prepares the way of the Lord, that she may repent of her iniquities. Though she will not repent, but will stick fast in her abominations, go bid her come, for the fan of the Lord is in His hand.

SALOME: Ah, but he is terrible, he is terrible!

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Do not stay here, Princess, I beseech you.

SALOME: It is his eyes above all that are terrible. They are like the black caverns where dragons live, the black caverns of Egypt in which the dragons make their lairs. They are like black lakes troubled by fantastic moons . . . Do you think he will speak again?

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Do not stay here, Princess. I pray you do not stay here.

SALOME: How wasted he is! He is like a thin ivory statue. He is like an image of silver. I am sure he is chaste, as the moon is. He is like a doit tre très froide . . . froide comme l'ivoire . . . Je veux le regarder de près.

NARRABOTH: Non, non, princesse!

SALOMÉ: Il faut que je le regarde de près.

NARRABOTH: Princesse! Princesse!

IOKANAAN: Qui est cette femme qui me regarde? Je ne veux pas qu'elle me regarde. Pourquoi me regarde-t-elle avec ses yeux d'or sous ses paupières dorées? Je ne sais pas qui c'est. Je ne veux pas le savior. Dites-lui de s'en aller. Ce n'est pas à elle que je veux parler.

SALOMÉ: Je suis Salomé, fille d'Hérodias, princesse de Judée.

IOKANAAN: Arrière! Fille de Babylone! N'approchez pas d l'élu du Seigneur. Ta mère a rempli la terre du vin de ses iniquités, et le cri de ses péchés est arrivé aux oreilles de Dieu.

SALOMÉ: Parle encore Iokanaan. Ta voix m'enivre.

NARRABOTH: Princesse! Princesse! Princesse!

SALOMÉ: Mais parle encore, Iokanaan, et dis-moi ce qu'il faut que je fasse.

IOKANAAN: Fille de Sodome, ne m'approchez pas! Mais couvrez votre visage avec un voile, mettez des cendres sur votre tête, et allez dans le désert chercher le fils de l'Homme.

SALOMÉ: Qui est-ce, le fils de l'Homme? Est-il aussi beau que toi, Iokanaan?

IOKANAAN: Arrière! Arrière! J'entends dans le palais le battement des ailes d l'ange de la mort.

SALOMÉ: Iokanaan!

NARRABOTH: Princesse, je vous supplie de rentrer!

SALOMÉ: Iokanaan! Je suis amoureuse de ton corps, Iokanaan. Ton corps est blanc comme le lis d'un prè que le faucheur n'a jamais fauché. Ton corps est blanc comme les neiges sur les montagnes de Judée. Les roses du jardin de la reine d'Arabie ne sont pas aussi blanches que ton corps. Ni les roses de la reine d'Arabie, ni les pieds de l'aurore sur les feuilles, ni le sein de la lune quand elle couche sure le sein de la mer . . . Il n'y a reint au monde d'aussi blanc que ton corps . . . Laisse-moi toucher ton corps!

moonbeam, like a shaft of silver. His flesh must be very cold, cold as ivory . . . I would look closer at him.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: No, no Princess!

SALOME: I must look at him closer.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Princess! Princess!

IOKANAAN: Who is this woman who is looking at me? I will not have her look at me. Why does she look at me, with her golden eyes, under her gilded eyelids? I do not know who she is. I do not desire to know who she is. Bid her begone. It is not to her that I would speak.

SALOME: I am Salome, daughter of Herodias, Princess of Judaea.

IOKANAAN: Back! daughter of Babylon! Do not come near the chosen of the Lord. Your mother has filled the earth with the wine of her iniquities, and the cry of her sinning has come up even to the ears of God.

SALOME: Speak again, Iokanaan. Your voice is as music to my ear.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Princess! Princess! Princess!

SALOME: Speak again! Speak again, Iokanaan, and tell me what I must do.

IOKANAAN: Daughter of Sodom, Do not come near me! But cover your face with a veil, and scatter ashes upon your head, and get to the desert, and seek out the Son of Man.

SALOME: Who is he, the Son of Man? Is he as beautiful as you are, Iokanaan?

IOKANAAN: Get behind me! I hear in the palace the beating of the wings of the angel of death.

SALOME: Iokanaan!

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Princess, I beseech you to go within.

SALOME: I am amorous of your body, Iokanaan! Your body is white, like the lilies of the field that the mower has never mowed. Your body is white like the snows that lie on the mountains of Judaea, and come down into the valleys. The roses in the garden of the Queen of Arabia are not so white as your body. Neither the roses of the garden of the Queen of Arabia, the garden of spices of the Queen of Arabia, nor the feet of the dawn when they light on the leaves, nor the breast of the moon when she lies on the breast of the sea . . . There is nothing in the world so white as your body. Allow me to touch your body.

IOKANAAN: Arrière, fille de Babylone! C'est par la femme que le mal est entré dans le monde. Ne me parlez pas. Je ne veux pas t'écouter. Je n'écoute que les paroles du Seigneur Dieu.

SALOMÉ: Ton corps est hideux. Il est comme le corps d'un lépreux. Il est comme un mur de plâtre où les scorpions ont fait leur nid. Il est comme un sépulcre blanchi, qui est plein de choses dégoûtantes. Il est horrible, il est horrible ton corps! . . . C'est de tes cheveux que je suis amoureuse, Iokanaan. Tes cheveux ressemblent à des grappes de raisins, des raisins noirs qui pendent des vignes d'Edom dans le pays des Edomites. Tes cheveux sont comme les cèdres, les grands cèdres du Liban; les cèdres qui donnent de l'ombre aux lions et aux voleurs. Les longues nuits noires, les nuits où la lune ne se montre pas, où les étoiles ont peur, ne sont pas aussi noires, ni le silence dans les forêts. Il n'est rien au monde d'aussi noir que tes cheveux . . . Laisse-moi toucher tes cheveux.

IOKANAAN: Arrière, fille de Sodome! Ne me touchez pas. Il ne faut pas profaner le temple du Seigneur Dieu.

SALOMÉ: Tes cheveux sont horribles. Ils sont couverts de boue et de poussière. On dirait une couronne d'épines qu'on a placée sur ton front. On dirait un noeud de serpents noirs qui se tordent autour de ton cou. Je n'aime pas tes cheveux . . . C'est de ta bouche que je suis amoureuse, Iokanaan. Ta bouche est comme une bande d'écarlate sur une tour d'ivoire. Elle est comme une pomme de grenade coupée par un couteau d'ivoire. Les fleurs de grenade dans les jardins de Tyr, plus rouges que les roses, ne sont pas aussi rouges. Les cris rouges des trompettes qui annoncent l'arrivée des rois et font peur à l'ennemi, ne sont pas aussi rouges que ta bouche. Ta bouche est plus rouge que les pieds de ceux qui foulent le vin dans les pressoirs. Elle est plus rouge que les pieds des colombes qui demeurent dans les temples. Ta bouche est comme une branche de corail dans le crépuscule de la mer. Le vermillon que les rois prennent dans les mines de Moab . . . Il n'y a rien d'aussi rouge que ta bouche. Ta bouche, laisse-moi la baiser.

IOKANAAN: Back! daughter of Babylon! By woman came evil into the world. Speak not to me. I will not listen to you. I listen but to the voice of the Lord God.

SALOME: Your body is hideous. It is like the body of a leper. It is like a plastered wall, where vipers have crawled; like a plastered wall where the scorpions have made their nest. It is like a whited sepulchre, full of loathsome things. It is horrible, your body is horrible. It is of your hair that I am enamoured, Iokanaan. Your hair is like clusters of grapes, like the clusters of black grapes that hang from the vine-trees of Edom in the land of the Edomites. Your hair is like the cedars of Lebanon, like the great cedars of Lebanon that gave their shade to the lions and to the robbers who would hide them by day. The long black nights, when the moon hides her face, when the stars are afraid, are not so black as your hair. The silence that dwells in the forest is not so black. There is nothing in the world that is so black as your hair . . . Allow me to touch your hair.

IOKANAAN: Back, daughter of Sodom! Touch me not. Do not profane the temple of the Lord God.

SALOME: Your hair is horrible. It is covered with mire and dust. It is like a crown of thorns placed on your head. It is like a knot of serpents coiled round your neck. I do not love your hair . . . It is your mouth that I desire, Iokanaan. Your mouth is like a bank of scarlet on a tower of ivory. It is like a pomegranate cut in twain with a knife of ivory. The pomegranate flowers that blossom in the gardens of Tyre, and are redder than roses, are not so red. The red blasts of trumpets that herald the approach of kings, and make afraid the enemy, are not so red. Your mouth is redder than the feet of those who tread the wine in the wine-press. It is redder than the feet of the doves who inhabit the temples and are fed by the priests. It is redder than the feet of he, who comes from a forest where he has slain a lion, and seen gilded tigers. Your mouth is like a branch of coral that fishers have found in the twilight of the sea, the coral that they keep for the kings! . . . It is like the vermilion that the Moabites find in the mines of Moab, the vermilion that the kings take from them. It is like the bow of the King of the Persians, that is painted with vermilion, and is tipped with coral. There is nothing in the world so red as your mouth . . . Allow me to kiss your mouth.

IOKANAAN: Jamais! fille de Babylone! Fille de Sodome, jamais!

SALOMÉ: Je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan. Je baiserai ta bouche.

NARRABOTH: Princesse, princesse, toi qui es comme un bouquet de myrrhe, toi qui es la colombe des colombes, ne regarde pas cet homme. Ne lui dis pas de telles choses. Je ne peux pas les souffrir.

SALOMÉ: Je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan. Je baiserai ta bouche . . .

NARRABOTH: Ah!
(Il se tue et tombe entre Salomé et Iokanaan.)

SALOMÉ: Je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: N'avez-vous pas peur, fille d'Hérodias?

SALOMÉ: Laisse-moi baiser ta bouche, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: Fille d'adultère, il n'y a qu'un homme qui puisse te sauver. Allez le chercher. C'est celui dont je t'ai parlé, il est dans un bateau sur la mer de Galilée, et il parle à ses disciples. Agenouillez-vous au bord de la mer, et appelez-le par son nom. Quand il viendra vers vous, et il vient vers tous ceux qui l'appellent, prosternez-vous à sés pièds et demandez lui la rémission de vos péchés.

SALOMÉ: Je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: Soyez maudite, fille d'une mère incestueuse, soyez maudite.

SALOMÉ: Je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: Je ne te regarderai pas. Tu es maudite, Salomé. Tu es maudite.
(Il descend dans la citerne.)

SCÈNE IV

Entré D'Hérode, D'Hérodias et de toute la cour.

HÉRODE: Où est Salomé? Où est la princesse? Pourquoi n'est-elle pas retournée au festin, comme je le lui avais commandé? Ah! la voilà!

HÉRODIAS: Il ne faut pas la regarder. Vous la regardez toujours!

HÉRODE: La lune a l'air très étrange, ce soir. N'est-ce pas, très étrange? On dirait une femme hystérique, qui va chercher des amants partout. N'est-ce pas, qu'elle chancelle comme une femme ivre?

IOKANAAN: Never! daughter of Babylon! Daughter of Sodom! never!

SALOME: I will kiss your mouth, Iokanaan. I will kiss your mouth.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Princess, Princess, You who are like a garden of myrrh, you who are the dove of all doves. Do not look at this man, do not look at him! I cannot endure it . . . Princess, do not speak these things.

SALOME: I will kiss your mouth, Iokanaan.

THE YOUNG SYRIAN: Ah!
(He kills himself, and falls between Salome and Iokanaan.)

SALOME: Allow me to kiss your mouth, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: Are you not afraid, daughter of Herodias? Did I tell you that I had heard in the palace the beatings of the wings of the angel of death, and hasn't it come, the angel of death?

SALOME: Allow me to kiss your mouth.

IOKANAAN: Daughter of adultery, there is but one who can save you. It is He of whom I spake. Go seek Him. He is in a boat on the sea of Galilee, and He talks with His disciples. Kneel down on the shore of the sea, and call to Him by His name. When He comes to you and to all who call on Him He comes, bow at His feet and ask of Him the remission of your sins.

SALOME: Allow me to kiss your mouth.

IOKANAAN: Be accursed, daughter of an incestuous mother, be accursed!

SALOME: I will kiss your mouth, Iokanaan.

IOKANAAN: I will not look at you. You are accursed, Salome, you are accursed.
(He goes down into the cistern.)

SCENE IV

(Enter Herod, Herodias, and all the Court.)

HEROD: Where is Salome? Where is the Princess? Why did she not return to the banquet as I commanded her? Ah! there she is!

HERODIAS: You must not look at her! You are always looking at her!

HEROD: The moon has a strange look tonight. Has she not a strange look? She is like a mad woman, a mad woman who is seeking everywhere for lovers. She is naked too. She is quite naked. The clouds are seeking to clothe her nakedness, but she will not let them. She shows herself naked in the sky. She reels through the clouds like a drunken woman . . . I am sure she is looking for lovers. Does she not reel like a drunken woman? She is like a mad woman, is she not?

HÉRODIAS: Non. La lune ressemble à la lune, c'est tout. Rentrons.

HÉRODE: Je resterai! Manassé, mettez des tapis là. Allumez des flambeaux. Je boirai encore du vin avec mes hôtes. Ah! j'ai glissé! j'ai glissé dans le sang! C'est un mauvais présage. Pourquoi y a-t-il du sang ici? . . . Et ce cadavre? Que fait ici ce cadavre? Enfin qui est-ce? Je ne veux pas le regarder.

PREMIER SOLDAT: C'est notre capitaine, Seigneur.

HÉRODE: Je n'ai donné aucun ordre de le tuer.

PREMIER SOLDAT: Il s'est tué lui-même, Seigneur.

HÉRODE: Cela me semble étrange. Le jeune Syrien, il était beau. Je me rappelle que je l'ai vu regardant Salomé d'une façon langoureuse . . . Emportez-le . . .
(On emporte le cadavre.)

HÉRODE: Il fait froid icic.Il y a du vent ici. N'est-ce pas qu'il y a du vent?

HÉRODIAS: (sèchement). Mais non. Il n'y a pas de vent.

HÉRODE: Mais si,il y du vent . . . Et j'entends dans l'air quelque chose comme un battement d'ailes, d'ailes gigantesques. Ne l'entendez-vous pas?

HÉRODIAS: Je n'entends rien.

HÉRODE: Je ne l'entends plus moi-même. Mais je l'ai entendu. C'était le vent sans doute. C'est passé. Mais non, je l'entends encore. Ne l'entendez-vous pas? C'est tout à fait comme un battement d'ailes . . .

HÉRODIAS: Vous êtes malade. Rentrons.

HÉRODE: Je ne suis pas malade. C'est votre fille qui a l'air très malade. Jamais je ne l'ai vue si pâle.

HÉRODIAS: Je vous ai dit de ne pas la regarder.

HÉRODE: Versez du vin. (On apporte du vin) Salomé, venez boire un peu de vin avec moi: un vin très exquis. C'est César lui-même qui me l'a envoyé. Trempez là dedans vos petites lèvres, vos petites lèvres rouges et ensuite je viderai la coupe.

SALOMÉ: Je n'ai pas soif, tétrarque.

HÉRODE: Vous entendez comme elle me répond, votre fille.

HERODIAS: No; the moon is like the moon, that is all. Let us go within . . . We have nothing to do here.

HEROD: Yes; the air is very sweet. Come, Herodias, our guests await us. Ah! I have slipped! I have slipped in blood! It is an ill omen. It is a very ill omen. Why is there blood here? . . . and this body, what does this body here? Do you think I am like the King of Egypt, who gives no feast to his guests but that he shows them a corpse? Whose is it? I will not look on it.

FIRST SOLDIER: It is the captain, sire.

HEROD: I issued no orders that he should be slain.

FIRST SOLDIER: He slew himself, sire.

HEROD: That seems strange to me. I had thought it was but Roman philosophers who slew themselves. Is it not true, Tigellinus, that the philosophers at Rome slay themselves.
(They take away the body.)

HEROD: It is cold here. There is a wind blowing. Is there a wind blowing?

HERODIAS: No; there is no wind.

HEROD: I tell you there is a wind that blows . . . And I hear in the air something that is like the beating of wings, like the beating of vast wings. Do you not hear it?

HERODIAS: I hear nothing.

HEROD: I hear it no longer. But I heard it. It has passed away. But no, I hear it again. Do you not hear it? It is just like a beating of wings.

HERODIAS: I tell you there is nothing. You are ill. Let us go inside.

HEROD: I am not ill. It is your daughter who is sick to death. Never have I seen her so pale.

HERODIAS: I have told you not to look at her.

HEROD: Pour me some wine. (Wine is brought.) Salome, come drink a little wine with me. I have here a wine that is exquisite. Caesar himself sent it to me. Dip into it thy little red lips, that I may drain the cup.

SALOME: I am not thirsty, Tetrarch.

HEROD: You hear how she answers me, this daughter of yours?

HÉRODIAS: Je trouve qu'elle a bien raison. Pourquoi la regardez-vous toujours?	HERODIAS: She does right. Why are you always gazing at her?
HÉRODE: Apportez des fruits. (On apporte des fruits.) Salomé, venez manger des fruits avec moi. J'aime beaucoup voir dans un fruit la morsure de tes petites dents. Mordez un tout petit morceau de ce fruit, un tout petit morceau, et ensuite je mangerai ce qui reste.	HEROD: Bring me ripe fruits. (Fruits are brought.) Salome, come and eat fruits with me. I love to see in a fruit the mark of your little teeth. Bite but a little of this fruit, that I may eat what is left.
SALOMÉ: Je n'ai pas faim, tétrarque.	SALOME: I am not hungry, Tetrarch.
HÉRODE: (à Hérodias). Voilà comme vous l'avez élevée, votre fille.	HEROD: (to Herodias). You see how you have brought up this daughter of yours.
HÉRODIAS: Ma fille et moi, nous descendons d'une race royale. Quant à toi, ton grand père gardait des chameaux! Aussi, c'était un voleur!	HERODIAS: My daughter and I come of a royal race. As for you, your father was a camel driver! He was a thief and a robber to boot.
HÉRODE: Salomé, viens t'asseoir près de moi. Je te donnerai le trône de ta mère.	HEROD: Salome, come and sit next to me. I will give you your mother's throne.
SALOMÉ: Je ne suis pas fatiguée, tétrarque.	SALOME: I am not tired, Tetrarch.
HÉRODIAS: Vous voyez bien ce qu'elle pense de vous.	HERODIAS: You see in what high regard she holds you.
HÉRODE: Apportez . . . Qu'est-ce que je veux? Je ne sais pas. Ah! Ah! je m'en souviens . . .	HEROD: Bring me—-What is it that I desire? I forget. Ah! ha! I remember.
LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Ce que j'ai prédit est arrivé. Voici le jour dont j'avais parlé.	THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Behold the time is come! That which I foretold has come to pass. The day that I speak of is at hand.
HÉRODIAS: Faites-le taire. Cet homme vomit toujours des injures contre moi.	HERODIAS: Bid him be silent. I will not listen to his voice. This man is for ever hurling insults against me.
HÉRODE: Il n'a rien dit contre vous. Aussi, c'est un très grand prophète.	HEROD: He has said nothing against you. Besides, he is a very great prophet.
HÉRODIAS: Je ne crois pas aux prophètes. Je sais bien que vous avez peur de lui.	HERODIAS: I do not believe in prophets. I know well that you are afraid of him.
HÉRODE: Moi, je n'ai peur de personne.	HEROD: I am not afraid of him. I am afraid of no man.
HÉRODIAS: Si, vous avez peur de lui. Pourquoi ne pas le livrer aux Juifs qui depuis six mois vous le demandent?	HERODIAS: I tell you, you are afraid of him. If you are not afraid of him why do you not deliver him to the Jews who for these six months past have been clamouring for him?
PREMIER JUIF: En effet, Seigneur, il serait mieux de nous le livrer.	FIRST JEW: Truly, my lord, it were better to deliver him into our hands.
HÉRODE: Assez sur ce point. Je ne veux pas vous le livrer. C'est un saint homme. C'est un homme qui a vu Dieu.	HEROD: Enough on this subject. I have already given you my answer. I will not deliver him into your hands. He is a holy man. He is a man who has seen God.
PREMIER JUIF: Cela, c'est impossible. Personne n'a vu Dieu depuis le prophète Elie. Lui, c'est le dernier qui ait vu Dieu. En ce temps-ci, Dieu ne se montre pas. Il se cache. Et par conséquent il y a de grands malheurs dans le pays, de grands malheurs.	FIRST JEW: That cannot be. There is no man who has seen God since the prophet Elias. He is the last man who saw God face to face. In these days God does not show Himself. God hides Himself. Therefore great evils have come upon the land.
SECOND JUIF: Enfin, on ne sait pas si le prophète Élie a réellement vu Dieu. C'était plutôt l'ombre de Dieu qu'il a vue.	SECOND JEW: Verily, no man knows if Elias the prophet did indeed see God. Perhaps it was just the shadow of God that he saw.
TROISIÈME JUIF: Dieu ne se cache jamais. Il se montre toujours et dans toute chose. Dieu est dans le mal comme dans le bien.	THIRD JEW: God is at no time hidden. He shows Himself at all times and in all places. God is in what is evil even as He is in what is good.
QUATRÌEME JUIF: Il ne faut pas dire cela. C'est une idèe très dangereuse d'Alexandrie. Et les Grecs sont des gentils.	FOURTH JEW: You should not say that. It is a very dangerous doctrine. It is a doctrine that comes from Alexandria, where men teach the philosophy of the Greeks. And the Greeks are Gentiles. They are not even circumcised.
CINQUIÈME JUIF: On ne peut pas savoir comment Dieu agit, ses voies sont très mystérieuses. Le nécessaire c'est de se soumettre à tout. Dieu est très fort.	FIFTH JEW: No man can tell how God works. His ways are very dark. It may be that the things which we call evil are good and that the things which we call good are evil. There is no knowledge of anything. We can only bow our heads to His will, for God is very strong. He breaks in pieces the strong together with the weak, for He regards no one.
PREMIER JUIF: C'est vrai cela. Dieu est terrible. Mais cet homme, cet homme n'a jamais vu Dieu Personne n'a vu Dieu depuis le prophete Elie. C'est le dernier, qui ait vu Dieu. En ce temps ci, Dieu ne se montre pas. Dieu se cache. Il y a de grands malheurs dans le pays. C'est le dernier, qui ait vu Dieu.	FIRST JEW: You speak truly. Verily, God is terrible. He breaks in pieces the strong and the weak as men break corn in a mortar. But as for this man, he has never seen God. No man has seen God since the prophet Elias.
HÉRODIAS: (à Hérode). Faites les taire. Ils m'ennuient.	HERODIAS: (to Herod). Make them be silent. They tire me.
HÉRODE: Mais j'ai entendu dire qu'Iokanaan lui-même est votre prophète Élie.	HEROD: But I have heard it said that Iokanaan is in very truth your prophet Elias.
PREMIER JUIF: Cela ne se peut pas. Depuis le temps du prophète Elie, il y a plus de trois cents ans.	FIRST JEW: That cannot be. It has been more than three hundred years since the days of the prophet Elias.
PREMIER NAZARÉEN: Moi, je suis sûr que c'est le prophète Élie.	FIRST NAZARENE: I am sure that he is Elias the prophet.
PREMIER JUIF: Ca ne se peut pas. Depuis le temps du prophète Élie, il y a plus de trois cents ans.	FIRST JEW: No, but he is not Elias the prophet.
SECOND, TROISIÈME, QUATRIÈME, ET CINQUIÈME JUIF: Mais non, ce n'est pas le prophète Élie.	SECOND, THIRD, FOURTH, AND FIFTH JEWS: No, he is not Elias, the prophet.
HÉRODIAS: Faites les taire.	HERODIAS: Make them be silent.
LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Le jour est venu, le jour du Seigneur, et j'entends sur les montagnes les pieds de celui qui sera le Sauveur du monde.	THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Behold the day is at hand, the day of the Lord, and I hear upon the mountains the feet of Him who shall be the Savior of the world.
HÉRODE: Qu'est ce que cela veut dire? Le Sauveur du monde?	HEROD: What does that mean? The Savior of the world?
PREMIER NAZARÉEN: Le Messie est venu.	FIRST NAZARENE: Concerning Messiah, who has come.
PREMIER JUIF: (criant). Le Messie n'est pas venu.	FIRST JEW: Messiah has not come.
PREMIER NAZARÉEN: Il est venu, et fait des miracles partout. A l'occasion d'un mariage qui a eu lieu dans une ville de Galilée, il a changé de l'eau en vin. Il a guéri des aveugles. On l'a vu sur une	FIRST NAZARENE: He has come, and everywhere He works miracles! This Man works true miracles. Thus, at a marriage which took place in a little town of Galilee, a town of some importance, He montagne parlant avec des anges.

SECOND NAZARÉEN: Aussi il a guéri deux lépreux, seulement en les touchant.

HÉRODIAS: Oh! Oh! Je ne crois pas aux miracles. J'en ai vu trop.

PREMIER NAZARÉEN: La fille de Jaïre était morte. Il l'a ressuscitée.

HÉRODE: (effrayé) Ah! Il ressuscite les morts?

PREMIER ET SECOND NAZARÉEN: Oui, Seigneur. Il ressuscite les morts.

HÉRODE: Je ne veux pas qu'il fasse cela. Ce serait terrible, si les morts revenaient. Où est-il à présent cet homme?

PREMIER NAZARÉEN: Il est partout, Seigneur, mais est il très difficile de le trouver.

HÉRODE: Mais il faut le trouver.

SECOND NAZARÉEN: On dit qu'il est à Samarie à présent.

PREMIER NAZARÉEN: Il a quitté Samarie il y a quelques jours. Moi, je crois qu'en ce moment-ci il est dans les environs de Jérusalem.

HÉRODE: Enfin, je ne permets pas qu'il ressuscite les morts . . . Ce serait terrible, si les morts reviennent.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Ah! l'impudique!—la prostituée! La fille de Babylone! Voici ce que dit le Seigneur. Faites venir contre elle une multitude d'hommes. Que le peuple prenne des pierres et la lapide . . .

HÉRODIAS: (furieuse). Mais c'est infâme. Faites-le taire! C'est infâme.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Que les capitaines de guerre la percent de leurs épées, qu'ils l'écrasent sous leurs boucliers!

HÉRODE: Faites le taire!

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: C'est ainsi que j'abolirai les crimes de dessus la terre, et que toutes les femmes apprendront à ne pas imiter les abominations de celle-là.

HÉRODIAS: Vous entendez ce qu'il dit contre moi? Vous le laissez insulter votre épouse?

HÉRODE: Mais il n'a pas dit votre nom.

changed water into wine. Certain persons who were present related it to me. Also He healed two lepers that were seated before the Gate of Capernaum simply by touching them.

SECOND NAZARENE: No, they were lepers. But He has healed blind people also, and He was seen on a mountain talking with angels.

HERODIAS: Ho! ho! miracles! I do not believe in miracles. I have seen too many.

FIRST NAZARENE: The daughter of Jarius was dead. This Man raised her from the dead.

HEROD: How! He raises people from the dead?

FIRST AND SECOND NAZARENE: Yea, sire; He raises the dead.

HEROD: I do not wish Him to do that. I forbid Him to do that. I suffer no man to raise the dead. This man must be found and told that I forbid Him to raise the dead. Where is this man at present?

FIRST NAZARENE: He is in every place, my Lord, but it is hard to find Him.

HEROD: But He must be found!

SECOND NAZARENE: It is said that He is now in Samaria.

FIRST NAZARENE: He left Samaria a few days since. I think that at the present moment He is in the neighborhood of Jerusalem.

HEROD: No matter! But let them find Him, and tell Him, said Herod the King, 'I will not suffer you to raise the dead.'

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Ah! The wanton one! The harlot! Ah! the daughter of Babylon with her golden eyes and her gilded eyelids! Thus said the Lord God, Let there come up against her a multitude of men. Let the people take stones and stone her . . .

HERODIAS: Command him to be silent!

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Let the captains of the hosts pierce her with their swords, let them crush her beneath their shields.

HERODIAS: Nay, but it is infamous.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: It is like this that I will wipe out all wickedness from the earth, and that all women shall learn not to imitate her abominations.

HERODIAS: You hear what he says against me? You allow him to revile your wife!

HEROD: He did not speak your name.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: (solennel). En ce jour là, le soleil deviendra noir comme un sac de poil, et la lune deviendra comme du sang, et les étoiles du ciel tomberont sur la terre comme les figures vertes tombent d'un figuier. En ce jour là, les rois de la terre auront peur.

HÉRODIAS: Ah! Ah! Ce prophète parle comme un homme ivre . . . Mais je ne peux pas souffrir le son de sa voix. Je déteste sa voix. Ordonnez qu'il se taise.

HÉRODE: Salomé, dansez pour moi.

HÉRODIAS: (violent). Je ne veux pas qu'elle danse.

SALOMÉ: (tranquille). Je n'ai aucune envie de danser, tétrarque.

HÉRODE: Salomé, fille d'Hérodias, dansez pour moi.

SALOMÉ: Je ne danserai pas, tétrarque.

HÉRODIAS: (riant). Voilà comme elle vous obéit.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Il sera assis sur son trône. Il sera vêtu de pourpre et d'écarlate. Et l'ange du Seigneur Dieu le frappera. Il sera mangé des vers.

HÉRODE: Salomé, Salomé, dansez pour moi. Je suis triste ce soir. Ainsi, dansez pour moi, Salomé. Je vous supplie. Si vous dansez pour moi, vous pourrez me demander tout ce que vous voudrez et je vous le donnerai.

SALOMÉ: (se levant). Vous me donnerez tout ce que je demanderai, tétrarque?

HÉRODIAS: Ne dansez pas, ma fille.

HÉRODE: Tout, tout ce que vous voudrez je vous le donnerai, fût-ce la moitié de mon royaume.

SALOMÉ: Vous le jurez, tétrarque?

HÉRODE: Je le jure, Salomé.

SALOMÉ: Sur quoi jurez-vous, tétrarque?

HÉRODE: Sur ma vie, sur ma couronne, sur mes dieux. Oh Salomé, Salomé, dansez pour moi.

HÉRODIAS: Ne dansez pas, ma fille.

SALOMÉ: Vous avez juré, tétrarque.

HÉRODE: J'ai juré, Salomé.

HÉRODIAS: Ne dansez pas, ma fille.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: In that day the sun shall become black like sackcloth of hair, and the moon shall become like blood, and the stars of the heaven shall fall upon the earth like unripe figs that fall from the fig-tree, and the kings of the earth shall be afraid.

HERODIAS: Ah! ha! I should like to see that day of which he speaks, when the moon shall become like blood, and when the stars shall fall upon the earth like unripe figs. This prophet talks like a drunken man . . . but I cannot stand the sound of his voice. I hate his voice. Command him to be silent.

HEROD: Dance for me, Salome.

HERODIAS: I will not have her dance.

SALOME: I have no desire to dance, Tetrarch.

HERODIAS: Salome, daughter of Herodias, dance for me.

SALOME: I will not dance, Tetrarch.

HERODIAS: (Laughing). You see how she obeys you.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: He shall be seated on his throne. He shall be clothed in scarlet and purple. In his hand he shall bear a golden cup full of his blasphemies. And the angel of the Lord shall smite him. He shall be eaten by worms.

HEROD: Salome, Salome, dance for me. I pray you, dance for me. I am sad tonight. Yes, I am passing sad tonight. Dance for me, Salome, I beseech you. If you dance for me, you may ask of me what you will, and I will give it to you. Yes, dance for me, Salome, and whatever you shall ask of me I will give to you even up to the half of my kingdom.

SALOME: (Rising). Will you indeed give me whatever I shall ask of you, Tetrarch?

HERODIAS: Do not dance, my daughter.

HEROD: Whatever you shall ask of me, even up to the half of my kingdom.

SALOME: You swear it, Tetrarch?

HEROD: I swear it, Salome.

SALOME: By what will you swear this thing, Tetrarch?

HEROD: By my life, by my crown, by my gods O Salome, Salome, dance for me!

HERODIAS: My daughter, do not dance.

SALOME: You have sworn an oath, Tetrarch.

HEROD: I have sworn an oath, Salome.

HERODIAS: My daughter, do not dance.

HÉRODE: Fût-ce la moitié de mon royaume. Comme reine, comme reine, tu serais très belle. (frémissant), Ah! il fait froid ici! il y a un vent, très froid, et j'entends . . . pourquoi est-ce que j'entends dans l'air ce battement d'ailes? Oh! On dirait qu'il y a un oiseau, un grand oiseau noir qui plane sur la terrasse. Pourquoi est-ce que je ne peux pa le voir, cet oiseau? Le battement de ses ailes est terrible. C'est un vent froid . . . Mais non, il ne fait pas froid du tout. Il fait trop chaud. Versez-moi de l'eau sur les mains. Donnez-moi de la neige á manger. Dégrafez mon manteau. Vite! Vite! Non. Laissez-le. C'est ma couronne qui me fait mal. Ces fleurs sont faites de feu. (Il arrache de sa tête la couronne et la jette sur la table.) Ah! enfin, je respire. Maintenant je suis heureux. N'est-ce pas que vous allez danser pour moi, Salomé?

HÉRODIAS: Je ne veux pas qu'elle danse.

SALOMÉ: Je danserai pour vous, tétrarque.

LA VOIX D'IOKANAAN: Qui est celui qui vient d'Edom, qui est celui qui vient de Bosra avec sa robe teinte de pourpre qui éclate dans la beauté de ces vêtements, et qui marche avec une force toute puissante? Pourquoi vos vêtements sont ils teints d'écarlate?

HÉRODIAS: Rentrons. La voix de cet homme m'exaspère. Je ne veux pas que ma fille danse pendant qu'il crie comme cela. Je ne veux pas qu'elle danse pendant que vous la regardez comme cela. Enfin, je ne veux pas qu'elle danse.

HÉRODE: Ne te lève pas, mon épouse, ma reine, c'est inutile. Je ne rentrerai pas avant qu'elle ait dansé: Dansez, Salomé, dansez pour moi.

HÉRODIAS: Ne dansez pas, ma fille.

SALOMÉ: Je suis prête, tétrarque.

LA DANSE DE SALOMÉ

Les musiciens commencent à jouer une danse effrénée. Salomé, d'abord immobile, se redresse et fait un signe aux musiciens, qui par une transition rapide changent le rythme impétueux en une mélodie doucement berçante. Salomé exécute "la danse des sept voiles."

HEROD: Even to the half of my kingdom. You will be passing fair as a queen, Salome, if it pleases you to ask for the half of my kingdom. Will she not be fair as a queen? Ah! it is cold here! There is an icy wind, and I hear . . . wherefore do I hear in the air this beating of wings? Ah! one might fancy a huge black bird that hovers over the terrace. Why can I not see this bird? The beating of its wings is terrible. The breath of the wind of its wings is terrible. It is a chill wind. No, but it is not cold, it is hot. I am choking. Pour water on my hands. Give me snow to eat. Loosen my mantle. Quick! quick! loosen my mantle. Nay. but leave it. It is my garland that hurts me, my garland of roses. The flowers are like fire. They have burned my forehead. (He tears the wreath from his head, and throws it on the table.) Ah! I can breathe now. How red those petals are! They are like stains of blood on the cloth. That does not matter. Now I am happy. I am passing happy. Have I not the right to be happy? Your daughter is going to dance for me. Salome? You have promised to dance for me.

HERODIAS: I will not have her dance.

SALOME: I will dance for you, Tetrarch.

THE VOICE OF IOKANAAN: Who is this who comes from Edom, who is this who comes from Bozra, whose raiment is dyed with purple, who shines in the beauty of his garments, who walks mightily in his greatness? Wherefore is your raiment stained with scarlet?

HERODIAS: Let us go within. The voice of that man maddens me. I will not have my daughter dance while he is continually crying out. I will not have her dance while you look at her in this fashion. In a word, I will not have her dance.

HEROD: Do not rise, my wife, my queen, it will avail you nothing. I will not go within till she has danced. Dance, Salome, dance for me.

HERODIAS: Do not dance, my daughter.

SALOME: I am ready Tetrarch.

THE DANCE OF SALOME

The musicians begin to play a furious dance. Salome, at first motionless, straightens herself and makes a sign to the musicians who, by a rapid transition, change the impetuous rythm to a sweetly lulling melody. Salome executes the 'Dance of the seven veils.'

Elle semble affaiblir un moment, puis recommence avec une fougue nouvelle. Elle reste un moment comme en extase au bord de la citerne dans laquelle Iokanaan est emprisonné, puis elle se précipite en avant aux pieds d'Hérode.

HÉRODE: Ah! Ah! C'est magnifique, c'est magnifigue! (à Hérodias) Vous voyez qu'elle a dansé pour moi, votre fille. Approchez, Salomé! Approchez, afin que je puisse vous donner votre salaire. Toi, je te paierai bien. Je te donnerai tout ce que tu voudras . . . Que veux-tu, dis?

SALOMÉ: (doux) Présentement, dans un bassin d'argent . . .

HÉRODE: (riant) Dans un bassin d'argent? mais oui, . . . dans un bassin d'argent . . . certainement. Elle est charmante, n'est-ce pas? Qu'est-ce que voulez qu'on vous apporte dans un bassin d'argent, ma chère et belle Salomé, vous qui êtes la plus belle de toutes les filles de Judée? Qu'est-ce que vous voulez qu'on vous apporte dans un bassin d'argent? Dites-moi. Quoi que cela puisse être, on vous le donnera. Mes trésors vous appartiennent. Qu'est-ce que c'est, Salomé?

SALOMÉ: (se levant). La tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: Non, non.

HÉRODIAS: Ah! c'est bien dit, ma fille. C'est bien dit.

HÉRODE: Non, non. Salomé. Vous ne me demandez pas cella. N'écoutez pas votre mère. Elle vous donne toujours de mauvais conseils. Il ne faut pas l'écouter.

SALOMÉ: Je n'écoute pas ma mére. C'est pour mon propre plaisir que je demande la tête d'Iokanaan dans un bassin d'argent. Vous avez juré, Hérode. N'oubliez pas que vous avez juré.

HÉRODE: Je le sais. Je le sais bien. J'ai juré par mes dieux. Mais je vous supplie, Salomé, de me demander autre chose. Demandez-moi la moitié de mon royaume, et je vous la donnerai. Mais ne me demandez pas ce que vous m'avez demandé.

SALOMÉ: Je vous demande la tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: Non, non je ne veux pas.

SALOMÉ: Si! Vous avez juré, Hérode.

HÉRODIAS: Oui, vous avez juré. Tout le monde vous a entendu.

HÉRODE: Taisez-vous. Ce n'est pas à vous que je parle.

She appears to weaken for a moment, then begins again with renewed passion. She remains for an instant as in ecstacy at the edge of the cistern in which Iokanaan is imprisoned, then rushes forward to Herod's feet.

HEROD: Ah! wonderful! wonderful! You see that she has danced for me, your daughter. Come near, Salome, come near, that I may give you your fee. Ah! I pay a royal price to those who dance for my pleasure. I will pay you royally. I will give you whatever your soul desires. What would you have? Speak.

SALOME: (Kneeling) I would like that they presently bring me in a silver charger . . .

HEROD: (Laughing) In a silver charger? Surely yes, in a silver charger. She is charming, is she not? What is it you would have in the silver charger, O sweet and fair Salome. you that are fairer than all the daughters of Judaea? What would you have them bring you in a silver charger? Tell me. Whatever it may be. You shall receive it. My treasures belong to you. What is it that you would have, Salome?

SALOME: (Rising). The head of Iokanaan.

HEROD: No, no!

HERODIAS: That is well said, my daughter.

HEROD: No, no Salome. It is not that you desire. Do not listen to your mother's voice. She is ever giving you evil counsel. Do not heed her.

SALOME: It is not my mother's voice that I heed. It is for my own pleasure that I ask the head of Iokanaan in a silver charger. You have sworn an oath, Herod. Forget not that you have sworn an oath.

HEROD: I know it. I have taken an oath by my gods. I know it well. But I pray you, Salome. ask of me something else. Ask of me the half of my kingdom, and I will give it to you. But do not of me what your lips have asked.

SALOME: I ask you for the head of Iokanaan.

HEROD: No, no, I will not give it to you.

SALOME: You have sworn an oath, Herod.

HERODIAS: Yes, you have sworn an oath. Everybody heard you. You swore it before everybody.

HEROD: Peace, woman! I do not speak to you!

HÉRODIAS: Ma fille a bien raison de demander la tête de cet homme. Il a vomi des insultes contre moi. On voit qu'elle aime beaucoup sa mère. Ne cédez pas, ma fille, ne cédez pas. Il a juré, il a juré.

HÉRODE: Taisez vous. Ne me parlez pas . . . Voyons, Salomé, il faut être raisonnable, n'est-ce pas? Salomé, je vous ai toujours aimée . . . Peut-être je vous ai trop aimée. Ainsi, ne me demandez pas cela. La tête d'un homme décapité, n'est-ce pas, c'est une chose laide? Écoutez-moi un instant. J'ai une émeraude. C'est la plus grande émeraude du monde. N'est-ce pas que vous la voulez? Demandez-moi cela et je vous la donnerai, la plus grande émeraude.

SALOMÉ: Je demande la tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: Vous ne m'écoutez pas, vous ne m'écoutez pas. Enfin, laissez-moi parler, Salomé.

SALOMÉ: La tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: Vous me dites cela seulement pour me faire de la peine, parce que je vous ai regardée toute la soirée. Votre beauté m'a terriblement troublé. Oh oh! du vin! j'ai soif. Salomé, Salomé, soyons amis. Enfin, voyez . . . Ah! qu'est-ce que je voulais dire? Qu'est-ce c'était? Ah! je m'en souviens! . . . Salomé, vous connaissez mes paons blancs, mes beaux paons blancs quise promènent dans le jardin entre les myrtes. Il n'y a pas dans le monde d'oiseaux si merveilleux. Il n'y a aucun roi du monde qui possède des oiseaux aussi merveilleux. Je n'en ai que cent. Je vous les donnerai tous.

SALOMÉ: Donnez-moi la tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODIAS: C'est bien dit, ma fille! Vous, vous êtes ridicule avec vos paons.

HÉRODE: Taisez-vous. Vous criez toujours comme une bête de proie. Votre voix m'ennuie.Taisez-vous, je vous dis . . . Salomé, pensez à ce que vous faites. Cet homme vient peut-être de Dieu. Je suis sûr; c'est un saint homme. Le doigt de Dieu l'a touché. Eh bien! Salomé, vous ne voulez pas qu'un malheur m'arrive? Enfin, écoutez-moi.

SALOMÉ: Donnez-moi la tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: Ah! vous voyez, vous ne m'écoutez pas. Soyez calme. Moi, je suis tres calme. Ecoutez: J'ai des bijoux cachés ici que même votre mère n'a jamais vus, des bijoux tout à fait extraordinaires. J'ai un collier de perles à quatre rangs. J'ai des topazes jaunes commes les yeux des tigres, des topazes roses comme les yeux des pigeons, des topazes vertes comme les yeux des chats. J'ai des opales qui brûlent toujours avec une flamme qui est très froide. Je vous les donnerai tous, mais tous (toujours plus excité) Moi, j'ai des chrysolithes et des béryls, j'ai des chrysoprases et des rubis. J'ai des sardonyx et des hyacinthes, et des calcédoines. Je vous les donnerai tous, mais tous, et j'ajouterai d'autres choses. J'ai un cristal qu'il n'est pas permis aux femmes de voir. Dans un coffret de nacre j'ai trois turquoises merveilleuses. Quand on les porte sur le front, on peut imaginer des choses qui n'existent pas. Ce sont des trésors de grande valeur. Enfin, que veux-tu,Salomé? Je te donnerai tout ce que tu demanderas, sauf une chose. Je te donnerai tout ce que je possède, sauf une vie. Je te donnerai le manteau du grand prêtre. Je te donnerai le voile du sanctuaire.

LES JUIFS: Oh! oh! oh!

SALOMÉ: (féroce). Donnez-moi la tête d'Iokanaan.

HÉRODE: (épuisé s'affaissant sur son siège.) Qu'on lui donne ce qu'elle demande! C'est bien la fille de sa mère! (Hérodias prend de la main du tétrarque la bague de la mort et la donne au premier soldat qui l'apporte immédiatement au bourreau.) Qui a pris ma bague? (Le bourreau descend dans la citerne) Il y avait une bague à ma main droite. Qui a bu mon vin? Il y avait du vin dans ma coupe. Elle était pleine de vin. Quelqu'un l'a bu? Oh! je suis sûr qu'il va arriver un malheur à quelqu'un.

HÉRODIAS: Je trouve que ma fille a bien fait.

HÉRODE: Je suis sûr qu'il va arriver un malheur.

SALOMÉ: (elle se penche sur la citerne et écoute.) Il n'y a pas de bruit. Je n'entends rien. Pourquoi ne crie-t-il pas cet homme? Ah! si quelqu'un cherchait à me tuer, je crierais, je me débattrais, je ne voudrais pas souffrir . . . Frappe, frappe, Naaman. Frappe, je te dis . . . Non, je n'entends rien. Il y a un silence affreux. Ah! quelque chose est tombé par terre. J'ai entendu quelque chose tomber. C'était l'épée du bourreau. Il a peur, cet esclave! Il a laissé tomber son épée. Il n'ose pas le tuer. C'est HERODIAS: My daughter has done well to ask for the head of Iokanaan. He has covered me with insults. He has said unspeakable things against me. One can see that she loves her mother well. Do not yield, my daughter. He has sworn an oath, he has sworn an oath.

HEROD: Peace! Do not Speak to me! . . . Salome. I pray you don't be stubborn. I have ever been kind toward you. Therefore, do not ask this thing of me. The head of a man that is cut from the body is ill to look upon, is it not? No, no, it is not that that you desire. Listen to me. I have an emerald, a great emerald and round, that the minion of Caesar has sent to me. When you look through this emerald you can see that which happens far away. It is the largest emerald in the whole world. Ask it of me and I will give it to you.

SALOME: I demand the head of Iokanaan.

HEROD: You are not listening. You are not listening. Allow me to speak, Salome.

SALOME: The head of Iokanaan!

HEROD: No, no, you would not have that. You say that to trouble me, because I have looked at you and not ceased this night. Your beauty has grievously troubled me, and I have looked at you too much. Oh! oh! bring wine! I thirst . . . Salome, Salome, let us be friends. Just think, Salome, you know my beautiful white peacocks, that walk in the garden between the myrtles and the tall cypress trees . . . I have got a hundred. But I will give them all to you Only you must loose me from my oath, and must not ask of me that which your lips have asked me.

SALOME: Give me the head of Iokanaan!

HERODIAS: Well said, my daughter! As for you, you are ridiculous with your peacocks.

HEROD: Peace! You cry like a beast of prey. Your voice wearies me. Peace, I tell you! . . . Salome, think on what you are doing. It may be that this man comes from God. He is a holy man. The finger of God has touched him. God has put terrible words into his mouth. If he dies also, perhaps some evil may befall me. You would not that some evil should befall me, Salome? Listen to me again.

SALOME: Give me the head of Iokanaan!

HEROD: Ah! You are not listening to me. Be calm. As for me, am I not calm? Listen. I have jewels hidden in this place–jewels that your mother even has never seen; jewels that are marvellous to look at. I have a collar of pearls, set in four rows. I have topazes yellow as the eyes of tigers, and topazes that are pink as the eyes of a wood-pigeon, and green topazes that are like the eyes of cats. I have opals that burn always, with a flame that is cold as ice, opals that make sad men's minds, and are afraid of the shadows. I have chrysolites and beryls, and chrysophrases and rubies; I have sardonyx and hyacinth stones, and stones of chalcedony, and I will give them all to you all, and other things I will add to them. I have a crystal, into which it is not lawful for a woman to look, nor may young men behold it until they have been beaten with rods. In a coffer of nacre I have three wondrous turquoises. He who wears them on his forehead can imagine things which are not, and he who carries them in his hand can turn the fruitful woman into a woman that is barren. These are great treasures above all price. What do you desire more than this, Salome! Tell me the thing that you desire and I will give it to you. I will give you all that is mine, save only the life of one man. I will give you the mantle of the high priest. I will give you the veil of the sanctuary.

THE JEWS: Oh! oh!

SALOME: Give me the head of Iokanaan!

HEROD: (Sinking in his seat.) Let her be given what she asks! She is her mother's child! (The first soldier approaches. HERODIAS draws from the hand of the Tetrarch the ring of death, and gives it to the Soldier, who straightway bears it to the Executioner. The Executioner looks scared.) Who has taken my ring? There was a ring on my right hand. Who has drunk my wine? There was wine in my cup. It was full of wine. Some one has drunk it. Oh! surely some evil will befall some one. (The executioner goes down in the cistern.)

HERODIAS: My daughter has done well.

HEROD: I am sure that misfortune will happen.

SALOME: (She leans over the cistern and listens.) There is no sound. I hear nothing. Why does he not cry out, this man? Ah! if any man sought to to kill me, I would cry out, I would struggle, I would not suffer . . . Strike, strike, Naaman. No, I hear silence, a terrible silence. Ah! something has fallen upon the ground. I heard something fall. It was the sword of the executioner. He is afraid, this slave. He has dropped his sword. He is a coward, this slave! Let soldiers be sent. (*She sees the Page of Hero-un lâche, cet esclave! Il faut envoyer des soldats. (Elle voit le page d'Hérodias et s'adresse à lui.) Viens ici. Tu as été l'ami de celui qui est mort, n'est-ce pas? Eh bien, il n'y a pas eu assez de morts. Dites aux soldats qu'ils descendent et m'apportent ce que je demande, ce que le tétrarque m'a promis, ce qui m'appartient. (Le page recule. Elle s'adresse aux soldats.) Venez ici, soldats. Descendez dans cette citerne, et apportez-moi la tête de cet homme. (Les soldats reculent.) Tétrarque, tétrarque, commandez à vos soldats d'apporter la tête d'Iokanaan. (Un grand bras noir, le bras du bourreau, sort de la citerne portant sur un bouclier d'argent la tête d'Iokanaan. Hérode se cache le visage avec son manteau . . . Hérodias sourit et s'évente. Les Nazaréens s'agenouillent et commencent à prier. Salomé saisit la tête.)

Ah! tu n'as pas voulu me laisser baiser ta bouche, Iokanaan. Eh bien! je la baiserai maintenant. Je la mordrai avec mes dents. Je la mordrai avec mes dents comme on mord un fruit mûr. Oui, je baiserai ta bouche, Iokanaan. Je te l'ai dit, n'est-ce pas? je te l'ai dit? Ah! Ah! Je la baiserai maintenant . . . Mais pourquoi ne me regardes-tu pas, Iokanaan? Tes yeux si terribles, si pleins de colère et de mépris, ils sont fermés maintenant. Pourquoi sont-ils fermés? Ouvre tes yeux! Soulève tes paupiéres, Iokanaan. Pourquoi ne me regards-tu pas? As-tu peur de moi, Iokanaan, que tu ne veux pas me regarder? . . . Et ta langue, elle ne remue plus, Iokanaan, cette vipère rouge qui a vomi son venin sur moi. C'est étrange, n'est-ce pas? Comment se fait-il que la vipère rouge ne remue plus? Tu m'as traitée comme une courtisane, moi, Salomé, la fille d'Hérodias, Princesse de Judée! Eh bien, Iokanaan, moi je vis encore, mais toi tu es mort et ta tête, ta tête m'appartient. Je puis en faire ce que je veux. Je puis la jeter aux chiens et aux oiseaux de l'air. Ce que laisseront les chiens, les oiseaux de l'air le mangeront.. Ah! Ah! Iokanaan, Iokanaan, tu étais beau. Ton corps était une colonne d'ivoire sur un socle d'argent. C'était un jardin plein de colombes et de lis, de lis d'argent. Riend' aussi blanc que ton corps, rien n'était aussi noir que tes cheveux. Dans le monde tout entier il n'y avait rien d'aussi rouge que ta bouche. Ta voix était un encensoir qui répandait d'étranges parfums, et quand je te regardais, j'entendais une musique étrange! Oh! pourquoi ne m'as-tu pas regardée, Iokanaan? Tu as mis sur tes yeux le bandeau de celui qui veut voir son Dieu. Eh bien! tu l'as vu, ton Dieu, Iokanaan, mais moi, moi . . . tu ne m'as jamais vue. Si tu m'avais vue, tu m'aurais aimée. J'ai soif de ta beauté. J'ai faim de ton corps. Et ni le vin, ni les fruits ne peuvent apaiser mon désir. Que ferai-je, maintenant, Iokanaan? . . . Ni les fleuves ni les grandes eaux, ne pourraient éteindre ma passion. Ah! pourquoi ne m'as-tu pas regardée? Si tu m'aurais regardée, tu m'aurais aimée. Je sais bien que tu m'aurais aimée, et le mystère de l'amour est plus grand que le mystère de la mort.

HÉRODE: (à voix basse à Hérodias.) Elle est monstrueuse, ta fille, elle est tout à fait monstrueuse.

HÉRODIAS: J'approuve ce que ma fille a fait, et je veux rester ici maintenant.

HÉRODE: Ah! l'épouse incestueuse qui parle! Viens! Je ne veux pas rester ici. (Violent.) Viens, je te dis. Je suis sûr qu'il va arriver un malheur. Cachons-nous dans notre palais, Hérodias. Je commence à avoir peur.
(Un grand nuage noir passe sur la lune et la cache complètement.) Manassé, Issachar, Ozias, éteignez les flambeaux. Cachez la lune, cachez les étoiles. (La scène devient tout à fait sombre.) Il va arriver un malheur.

SALOMÉ: (épuisée). Ah! j'ai baisé ta bouche, Iokanaan. Ah! j'ai baisé ta bouche. Il y avait une âcre saveur sur tes lèvres. Etait-ce la saveur du sang? . . . Mais peut-être, est-ce la saveur de l'amour. On dit que l'amour a une âcre saveur . . . Mais qu'importe? Qu'importe? J'ai baisé ta bouche, Iokanaan. J'ai baisé ta bouche, Iokannan.
(Un rayon de lune tombe sur Salomé et l'éclaire.)

HÉRODE: (se retournane et voyant Salomé). Tuez cette femme!
(Les soldats s'élancent et écrasent Salomé sus leurs boucliers.)

FIN.

dias and addresses him.) Come here you were a friend of the dead man weren't you? Well, I tell you, there are not dead men enough. Go to the soldiers and bid them go down and bring me the thing I ask, the thing the Tetrarch has promised me, the thing that is mine. (The Page recoils, She turns to the soldiers.) Come here, soldiers. Go down into this cistern and bring me the head of this man. Tetrarch, Tetrarch, command your soldiers that they bring me the head of Iokanaan. (A huge black arm, the arm of the Executioner comes forth from the cistern, bearing on a silver shield the head of Iokanaan. Salome seizes it. Herod hides his face with his cloak. Herodias smiles and fans herself. The Nazarenes fall on their knees and begin to pray.)

Ah! You would not allow me to kiss your mouth, Iokanaan. Well! I will kiss it now. But why do you not look at me, Iokanaan? Your eyes that rage and scorn, are shut now. Are you afraid of me, Iokanaan, that you will not look at me? . . . And your tongue, that was like a red snake darting poison, it moves no more, it speaks no words, Iokanaan, that scarlet viper that spat its venom upon me. It is strange, is it not? you did bear yourself toward me as to a harlot, as to a woman that is a wanton, to me, Salome, daughter of Herodias, Princess of Judaea! Well, I still live, but you are dead, and your head belongs to me. I can do with it what I will. I can throw it to the dogs and to the birds of the air . . . Ah, Iokanaan, Iokanaan, you were the man that I loved alone among men! Your body was a column of ivory set upon feet of silver. It was a garden full of doves and lilies of silver. It was a tower of silver decked with shields of ivory. There was nothing in the world so white as your body. There was nothing in the world so black as your hair. In the whole world there was nothing so red as your mouth. Your voice was a censer that scattered strange perfumes, and when I looked on you I heard a strange music. Ah! why didn't you look at me, Iokanaan? You put on your eyes the covering of him who would see his God. Well, you have seen your God, Iokanaan, but me, me, you did never see. If you had seen me you had loved me. I saw you, and I loved you . . . I am thirsty for your beauty; I am hungry for your body; and neither wine nor apples can appease my desire. What shall I do now, Iokanaan? Neither the floods nor the great waters can quench my passion. Ah! ah! Why didn't you look at me? If you had looked at me you had loved me. Well I know that you would have loved me, and the mystery of Love is greater than the mystery of Death.

HEROD: (in a low voice to Herodias.) She is monstrous, your daughter! I tell you; she is monstrous.

HERODIAS: I am well pleased with my daughter. She has done well. And I would stay here now.

HEROD: (Rising). Ah! There speaks my brother's wife! Come! I will not stay in this place. Come, I tell you. Surely some terrible thing will befall. (A great cloud crosses the moon and conceals it completely.) Manasseh, Issachar, Ozias, put out the torches. Hide the moon. Hide the stars! Let us hide ourselves in our palace, Herodias. I begin to be afraid.

SALOME: (exhausted). Ah! I have kissed your mouth, Iokanaan, I have kissed your mouth. There was a bitter taste on your lips. Was it the taste of blood? No; but perchance it was the taste of love . . . They say that love has a bitter taste. But what does it matter? I have kissed your mouth, Iokanaan. I have kissed your mouth.
(A ray of moonlight falls on SALOME and illumines her.)

HEROD: (Turning around and seeing SALOME.) Kill that woman!
(The soldiers rush forward and crush beneath their shields SALOME, daughter of HERODIAS, Princess of Judaea.)

THE END.

Elektra (1909)

MUSIC BY RICHARD STRAUSS ■ LIBRETTO BY HUGO VON HOFMANNSTHAL

A tragedy in one act, Elektra is set to a libretto by Hugo von Hofmannsthal after Sophocles. It was first performed at the Königliches Opernhaus in Dresden on January 25, 1909. In the courtyard of the palace of the Atridae in Mycenae, serving women make fun of Elektra, disgraced daughter of King Agamemnon. Elektra remembers her father's murder—her mother, Klytaimnestra, helped her lover, Aegisth, stab him. Klytaimnestra herself delivered the fatal blow with an ax. Dreaming of revenge, Elektra calls upon her deceased father for help. Chrysothemis, her sister, comes to tell her that their mother and Aegisth are planning to imprison her.

Klytaimnestra is preparing for a sacrifice. She will ask the gods to free her from nightmares that plague her sleep. On seeing Elektra, she lashes out at her, then speaks calmly, thinking she can obtain a cure for her nightmares once and for all. She will sacrifice whatever or whomever is demanded. Elektra takes Klytaimnestra to see Orest, her son—the spirit in Klytaimnestra's dreams that is seeking vengeance. But Klytaimnestra threatens to imprison Elektra unless Elektra tells her what the offering is to be. Elektra answers that Klytaimnestra herself is the chosen sacrifice. The Queen's confidante enters with news that Orest is dead. Elektra asks her sister to help, but Chrysothemis, horrified, runs off. Elektra digs for a hidden ax, chastising the messenger for surviving his master's death. The messenger, Orest, tells his sister that Orest lives. Although the servants recognize him at once, Elektra refuses to accept him until he makes a statement that undeniable identifies him. Blessing him, she mourns her lost beauty in the quest for revenge. Orest, eager for vengeance, enters the palace with his tutor; Elektra waits in front. From inside, Klytaimnestra screams. Aegisth tries to go to her but Elektra detains him. Orest succeeds in avenging Agamemnon's death. Elektra and Chrysothemis sing a duet in celebration of their freedom. Elektra dances on her father's grave in triumph, then collapses lifeless on the ground.

(Une cour intérieure formée par l'ardière-palais et les communs où logent les serviteurs.—Des servantes sont groupées autour du puits, sur le devant et la côte gauche de la scène. Parmi elles La Surveillante.)	(An interior court formed by the rear of the palace and the servants' quarters.—The maids are grouped around the well, which is at the left side of stage, near front.—Among them is the Surveillante.)
PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: (soulevant sa cruche). Où est Elektra?	FIRST MAID: (lifting her jug) Where is she Elektra?
DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: C'est pourtant son heure, C'est l'heure où le nom De son père hurlant, Elle en ébranle les murs. (Elektra sort en courant d'une galerie déjà pleine d'ombre. Toutes se tournent vers elle.—Elektra, le bras levé devant sa figure, fait un saut en arrière, comme un animal regagnant son terrier.)	SECOND MAID: It is now the hour when She shouts aloud her father's name, The walls echoing her noise. (Elektra rushes from a gallery hidden in shadow.—All turn towards her.—Elektra, her arm raised before her face, springs backwards, like an animal regaining its burrow.)
PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Avez-vous vu? quels regards sur nous?	FIRST MAID: Did you see? Oh, how she looks at us!
DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: Telle une sauvage chatte.	SECOND MAID: Like a wild cat, no less.
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: Là, je l'ai vue hier, geignante . . .	THIRD MAID: I saw her there yesterday, moaning . . .
PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Toujours, au soleil couchant, là, prostrée, elle geint.	FIRST MAID: At sunset there she always kneels and moans.
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: A deux nous l'approchâmes, Peut-être de trop près . . .	THIRD MAID: We both approached her, Perhaps too closely.
PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Elle a horreur qu'on la regarde.	FIRST MAID: She dislikes to be watched.
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: Oui, nous vinmes un peu près; Soufflant alors comme une chatte vers nous: "Hou! mouches" fit-elle "Hou!"	THIRD MAID: Yes, we came too near; Breathing like a cat towards us: "Shoo! flies," she cried, "Shoo!"
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: "Hou! mouches, hou!"	FOURTH MAID: "Shoo! flies, shoo!"
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: "Fuyez loin de mes plaines!" Et son balai de loin menace.	THIRD MAID: "Far from my plains begone!" And with her broom menaced us.
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: "Hou! mouches, hou!"	FOURTH MAID: "Shoo! flies, shoo!"
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: "Ne venez pas ici vous gaver de mes pleurs. Ne pompez pas l'écume de ma bouche amère."	THIRD MAID: "Don't come here to mock my tears, "Don't suck the foam from my bitter mouth."
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: "Fuyez, cachez-vous," nous cria-t-elle; "Mangez gras, et bouvez doux, Allez au lit avec vos hommes, allez!" Mais elle . . .	FOURTH MAID: "Go, hide yourself," she cried to us: "Eat meat, and drink but little, Go to bed—begone!" But she . . .
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: J'eus bientôt fait . . .	THIRD MAID: I would soon . . .
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: . . . sût lui répondre!	FOURTH MAID: Know how to answer her!
TROISIÈME SERVANTE: "Mais, lorsque tu as faim," Lui répondis-je, 'tu mang' aussi!" Elle bondit, darda quels affreux regards,	THIRD MAID: "But when you are hungry," I told her, "you also eat!" She sprang at me, her eyes ablaze, Her fingers clawing, and she shout-

Et, comme des griffes, crispa ses doigts vers nous, criant:
"C'est un vautour qui de moi même ai nourit!"

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: Et toi?

TROISIÈME SERVANTE: "Tu aimes t'accroupir," dis-je,
"Où t'attire l'odeur de pourriture,
Tu grattes après un vieux cadavre."

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: Alors qu'a-t-elle dit?

TROISIÈME SERVANTE: Hurlante, dans son coin elle s'est rejetée.

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Pourquoi donc la Reine
Laisse-t-elle pareil demon aller,
Venir, dans la maison?

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: Sa propre enfant!

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Ah! fut-elle ma fille,
Moi, par dieu!
Je la mettrais sous grilles!

QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: Sont-ils pas pour elle assez barbares?
Son émelle, sa pâtée, voisinent avec celles des bêtes!
(Soupirant:)
N'as-tu pas vu le Maitre la frapper?

CINQUIÈME SERVANTE: (toute jeune, avec une voix tremblante et émue). Je veux me jeter à genoux devant
Elle et baisser ses pieds nus!
Na'a-t-elle pas un Roi pour père,
Celle qui souffre tels outrages?
Ses pieds je veux les oindre,
Et que mes cheveux les sèchent.

LA SURVEILLANTE: (la poussant) Veux-tu rentrer!

CINQUIÈME SERVANTE: Il n'est rien, sachez-le,
De royal autant qu'elle en ce monde
Elle git en haillons devant la porte,
Mais personne, personne ici n'oserait
N'oserait braver son regard.

LA SURVEILLANTE: (la poussant du côté de la porte basse, ouverte, à gauche de la scène). Allons!

CINQUIÈME SERVANTE: (s'accrochant la porte). Comment osez-vous respirer
Cet air qu'elle même respire!
Toutes, puisse-je un jour,
Toutes, vous voir pendues
Dans une grange obscure,
Oui, pendues, juste salaire
Des maux par Elektra soufferts!

LA SURVEILLANTE: (ferme la porte sur elle). L'entends-tu?
Nous, nous qu'Elektra,
Dès qu'on l'invite à notre propre table.
Ose insulter insolemment;
Elle crache vers nous, de chiennes nous traite.

ed:
"It is a vulture whom I nourished!"

SECOND MAID: And you?

THIRD MAID: "You love to squat," I said,
"Where the odor of dust attracts you,
You scratch at graves!"

SECOND MAID: What did she say then?

THIRD MAID: Yelling, she fled to her corner.

FIRST MAID: Why does the Queen
Allow a demon such as she,
To come and go about the house?

SECOND MAID: Her own child!

FIRST MAID: Ah! were she my daughter,
Rest assured, I'd place her
Well behind the bars!

FOURTH MAID: Are they not cruel enough to her?
Feeding her with food for beasts!
(Sighing):
Have you not seen the Master beat her?

FIFTH MAID: (very young, in a trembling voice). I fain would kneel before her,
And kiss her naked feet!
Has she not a King as father,
She who suffers these insults?
Her feet, I would anoint them,
And dry them with my hair.

THE SURVEILLANTE: (pushing her away). Will you go in!

FIFTH MAID: There is nothing, you know,
As royal as she in this world.
She lies in rags before the door,
But no one here would dare to face her.

THE SURVEILLANTE: (pushing her towards the low door, which is open, at the left of stage). Go!

FIFTH MAID: (laying hold of the door). How dare you breathe
This air she breathes!
May I see you all some day
Hung in a darksome barn,
Ah, hung, and justly, too.
For the evils Elektra suffers!

THE SURVEILLANTE: (closing the door upon her). Do you hear her?
We, who Elektra dares insult.
When to our own table she is asked,
We are treated, well, like dogs.

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Oui, elle a dit:
Pas un chien ne veut s'abaisser
À cet ouvrage qui est le vôtre:
En vain vous voulez effacer
Avec de l'eau l'eneffaçable sang du meurtre
Qui toujours suinte."

TROISIÈME SERVANTE: "Mais opprobre," ajouta-t-elle,
"L'opprobre, qui nuit et jour se renouvelle, Quelle eau l'efface?"

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: "Votre corps semble raidi par la crasse Dont il est l'esclave!"
(Les servantes portent les cruches dans la maison, à gauche.)

LA SURVEILLANTE: (qui leur a ouvert la porte). Quand elle nous voit avec nos enfants, elle s'écrie:—
"Rien n'est plus immonde, rien, que ces enfants, qu'en chiennes, Sur les marches de sang glissantes, là, dans la maison,
Vous avez conçus et enfantés."
Oui ou non, le dit-elle?

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Le dit-elle, oui ou non?
(La Surveillante rentre, la porte se ferme.)

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: (s'en allant). Oui, oui.

TOUTES: (l'intérieur). Oui, oui.

TROISIÈME et QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: Oui, oui, oui, oui.

LA CINQUIÈME SERVANTE: Oui, oui.
(De l'intérieur:)
On m'a battue!
(Elektra sort de la maison.)

ELEKTRA: Toute seule!
Ah! toute seule!
Le père mort, roulé au fond du noir et froid abîme . . .
(Tout contre le sol:)
Agamemnon! Agamemnon!
O mon père!
N'as tu pas la force de trainer
Jusqu'à moi ton cher visage?
(A voix basse:)
C'est juste l'heure, c'est notre heure,
Oui, c'est l'heure où jadis ils te frappèrent,
Ta femme et Lui, celui qui, dans ta couche,
Dans ta royale couche, avec elle dort.
Ils te frappèrent nu dans ton bain, ton sang
Giola sur tes paupières,
Et le bain fut rouge de sang fumant.
Il te prit, lui, lui le lâche, aux épaules,
Te tirant ainsi hors de la chambre! tête en avant;
Tes jambes balayaient la têrre.
Tes yeux paraissaient béants, regardaient la maison.
Tu reviendras de même, pas à pas,

FIRST MAID: Yes, she has often said:
A dog wouldn't stoop
To work like yours;
In vain you seek with water to efface
The ineffaceable blood of murder,
Which always oozes and remains.

THIRD MAID: "But the sin," she added,
"The sin which night and day renews itself,
What water shall efface?"

FIRST MAID: "Your body seems stiff with dirt,
Of which it is the slave."
(The maids carry the jugs into the house, at left.)

THE SURVEILLANTE: (who has opened the door for them). When she sees us with our children,
Then she cries:—
"Nothing is more unclean than these children, who like dogs,
Upon the slippery, bloodstained steps of yonder house,
You have conceived and nursed."
Yes or no, this did she say?

FIRST MAID: Did she say this, yes or no?
(The Surveillante goes in, the door is closed.)

SECOND MAID: (going). Yes, yes.

ALL: (within). Yes, yes.

THIRD and FOURTH MAIDS: Yes, yes, yes, yes.

THE FIFTH MAID: Yes, yes.
(From within:)
They have beaten me,
(Elektra comes out of the house.)

ELEKTRA: All alone!
Ah! All alone!
The father dead, consigned to the dark, cold, desolate depths . . .
Agamemnon! Agamemnon!
O my father!
Can't I behold again
Your countenance so dear to me?
(In a low voice:)
It is the hour, yours and mine,
Yes, it is the hour when they struck you,
Your wife and he who in thy couch,
Your royal couch, sleeps with her.
They struck you naked in your bath,
That bath was red with foaming blood.
He took you, he the coward, by the shoulders,
And dragged you thus, head foremost, from the room;
Your feet trailing the ground.
Your eyes, wide open, looked around you.
You shall return like this, step by step, and suddenly.
And your eyes shall be wide open staring.
And the royal circlet shall again adorn thy brow—

Là, tout à coup, debout,
Et tes deux yeux seront grands ouverts,
Et le bandeau royal ciendra de nouveau ton front
Le pourpre bandeau de ta plaie.
Agamemnon! Père!
Je veux te voir, aujourd'hui parais encor!
Comme tu fis hier, comme une ombre,
La, dans l'ombre,
Viens vers ton enfant!
Père! Agamemnon, que ton jour vienne.
Comme tombe des astres une pluie de feu,
Qu'ainsi le sang, jailli des gorges tombe sur la tombe!
Et comme d'urnes renversées
Puisse-t-il s'écouler du flanc des meurtriers;
Ainsi qu'un ruisseau gonflé qu'um fleuve qui se précipite,
Tu vas sortir, ô vie des défuntes vies . . .
(Solonnellement pathétique.)
Et tes cheveaux de guerre, ô mon Père,
Tous, seront trainés vers ta tombe.
Dans l'air ils hennirout, pressentant leur sort,
Et que c'est l'heure où il faut qu'il meurent.
Nous t'immolerons tes chiens,
Ceux qui léchaient les pieds
Qui suivaient tes chasses, que te mains aimaient repaître,
Leur sang coulera vers toi, pour to servir encor,
Et nous, nous, ton sang, ton fils Orest.
Et des deux filles, tous trois, la tâche accomplie,
Sous la voûte empourprée des vapeurs,
De sang pareilles à celles que traine le soleil
Nous danserons, tous trois autour de ta tombe.
(Encore plus inspiré et pathetique.)
Et les genoux levés, bondissant, haut,
Je franchirai les morts,
Et tous ceux-là qui me verront,
Pareille a quelqu'ombre dansante,
Ainsi ceux-là me voyant pourront se dire:
"C'est un grand, un grand roi,
Qu'en ces lieux aujourd'hui célèbrent
Sa propre chair, son sang,
Heureux le père de tels enfants qui près
De sa haute tombe dansent si gaiement
Ces royales danses.
Agamemnon! Agamemnon!"

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (sa soeur, plus jeune, debout devant la porte.—A voix basse). Elektra!
(Elektra sursaute de frayeur, et comme sourtant d'un rêve, regarde du côté de Chrysothémis.)

The purple circlet of your wound
Agamemnon! O my father!
I would see you once again today!
And yesterday you came like a shadow.
In the shadow yonder,
Approach your child!
O my father! O my father!
Agamemnon! May your day be born,
As a rain of fire descends from the stars.
And may the blood from severed throats fall upon your tomb!
And like urns upturned,
May it flow from out the assassin's side;
Like a swollen brook or like a river in flood,
You shall come forth, O life of dead lives . . .
(Solemnly pathetic:)
And your war horses, O my father,
They also shall be led to your tomb.
They shall neigh aloud, foreseeing their fate,
And knowing their hour of death has come.
We shall offer up to you your dogs,
The dogs that licked your feet,
That went with you to hunt, that your hands caressed,
Their blood shall be before you to save you again.
And we, your offspring, your son Orestes
And your two daughters, their duty done,
Under the purple vault of vapors,
Like those of the sun when it burns red,
We three shall dance around your tomb.
(More inspired and pathetic:)
Skipping high, I shall leap over the dead,
And all who there behold me,
Dancing like a shade, shall say:
"It is a mighty monarch
Who is here extolled today
By those who are his kin and offspring.
Ah! happy parent, whose children thus
Do honor at his tomb, and dance the royal dances.
Agamemnon! Agamemnon!"

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (her younger sister, standing before the door; in a low voice). Elektra!
(Elektra, frightened, and as if awaking suddenly from a dream, looks towards Chrysothemis.)

ELEKTRA: Ah! ce visage!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (toujours sur le pas de la porte). Est-il pour toi si haïssable?

ELEKTRA: (brusquement). Que veux-tu?
Parle, dis explique toi, puis va, va-t-en, va!
(Chrysothémis lève ses mains comme pour se défendre.)

ELEKTRA: Que veut dire ce geste?
Ainsi le Père levait ses mains le jour
Que la hache horrible s'abbattit sur sa chair.
Que veux-tu?
Fille de ma mère,
Fille de Klytaimnestra?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (à voix basse). Ils trament une affreuse trahison!

ELEKTRA: Les deux femelles?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Qui?

ELEKTRA: Qui, notre mère avec cette autre femme,
Le lâche, cet Aegisth, cet assassin si brave,
Dont le coeur, l'audace ne se voient qu'au lit.
Et quel est leur dessein?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: De te jeter dans une tour,
Où sans voir lune ni soleil, tu gémiras.
(Elektra rit.)
C'est vrai, te dis-je, l'entendis.

ELEKTRA: Comment fis-tu pour les entendre?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (à voix basse). A la porte, Elektra!

ELEKTRA: (éclatant). Il ne faut pas ouvrir de porte ici!
Des râles rauques, oui, des plaintes qu'on étrangle,
S'exhalent sans cesse de ces murailles,
Il ne faut pas ouvrir!
Mais, immobile, à mes côtés t'assceoir,
En appelant à haute voix la'mort sur elle et lui.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Rester assise, immobile, dans l'ombre?
Non, non! Car j'ai du feu dans ma poitrine;
Et c'est pour quoi toujours je vais et viens;
Pas une chambre où rester, de l'une a l'autre
Jerre course folle ah! monter, descendre . . .
Na'a-t-on pas dit mon nom?
J'accours bien vite
C'est une chambre vide qui me regarde!
Et mon angeoisse est telle,
Que mes genoux tremblent jour et nuit;

ELEKTRA: Ah! that countenance!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (still at the door.) Is it so hateful to you?

ELEKTRA: (sharply). What do you wish?
Speak, explain yourself, then go!
(Chrysothemis raises her hands as if to defend herself.)

ELEKTRA: What does that gesture mean?
Thus my father raised his hands that day
When the terrible axe felled him dead.
What do you wish?
Daughter of my mother,
Daughter of Klytaimnestra?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (in a low voice). They plot treason!

ELEKTRA: The two?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Who?

ELEKTRA: Who but our mother and that other,
The wicked Aegisthes, the daring assassin,
Whose heart, whose audacity are but seen in private.
And what is their design?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: To throw you into a dark tower,
Where you shall moan, deprived of sun and moon.
(Elektra laughs.)
It is true—I heard them.

ELEKTRA: How did you learn this?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (in low tones). At the door, Elektra.

ELEKTRA: (blazing up). There is no need to open a door here!
The hoarse death rattles, ah, and they stifle their cries,
All re-echo ceaselessly from these walls,
There is no need to open!
But, motionless, beside me sit
And call aloud for death to strike her and him.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: In the shadow remain motionless?
No, no! there's fire in my breast;
This is why I always come and go;
In no chamber can I rest, now here, now there,
I wander madly, up and down . . .
Did they not call my name?
I hasten there, but, alas!
I see nothing more than an empty chamber,
And my anguish is such
That my strength forsakes me;
And my breath seems choked
So no tears can flow,
All turned to stone!
My sister, I beseech you!

Cela m'étreint la gorge si fort
Que je n'ai plus de larmes,
Tout est de pierre!
Soeur, je t'en prie!

ELEKTRA: Hé bien?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Toi c'est toi qui me riv-au sol
Avec des crampons de fer!
Je pourrais, sans toi m'évader.
N'était ta haine que rien n'endort,
Que rien ne dompte et qu'ils redoutent,
Ah! Ah! ils nous laisseraient sortir
De notre geôle, Soeur!
Je veux sortir!
Je ne veux pas, ici,
Jusqu'au trépas dormir!
Que je meure mais d'abord vivre!
Avant d'être vieille,
Je veux de doux enfants,
Chers petits êtres dussé-je même
Les enfanter d'un rustre;
Des enfants que mes bras,
Sur mon sein réchaufferaient
Quand l'orage gronde
Et secoue les portes!
Me comprends-tu?
Réponds moi . . . Soeur!

ELEKTRA: Corps misérable!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (toujours excessivement exaltée). Ah! grâce, pour toi-même et pour moi!
A qui sert ce tourment?
Le Père, il est mort.
Le Frère, ne vient pas!
Telles deux oiseaux sur la branche,
Nous attendons inquiètes;
Regardant de tous côtés . . .
Personne ne vient . . . ni Frère . . .
Ni même un message, ni l'annonce
De ces message . . . rien . . .
Avec son stylet le temps s'en vient sur nous
Creuser nos traits; dehors le ciel rayonne
Ou s'éteint, des femmes hier encore sveltes,
Deviennent grosses, à la fontaine lourdement
Se trainent, puis soudain de leur fardeau délivrées,
Puisent joyeuses l'eau claire
Et d'elles même s'épanche un breuvage ivrant;
Une autre vie à leur sein est suspendue,
Et l'enfant va grandissant.
Non, non, je suis femme et veux le sort des femmes!
Plutôt la mort que vivre hors la vie!
(Elle éclate en profonds sanglots.)

ELEKTRA: Tu hurles?
Va! rentre! C'est là ta place!
Mais quel tumulte?
(Ironiquement:)
Est-ce qu'on prépare déjà tes noces?
J'entends courir.
Et là-dedans on crie.
On tue, ou l'on enfante!
Pour oreiller s'il manque un cadavre,
Il faut bien qu'on tue!

ELEKTRA: Well?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: It is you who bound your sister to the earth
As with bands of steel!
But for you, I could escape.
Were it not your hate which never sleeps,
Which nothing lessens, which they all suspect,
Ah! they would let us leave our jail, my sister!
I wish to go!
I would not stay here, perhaps to die!
Let me die, but let me, ah! live first!
Before age approaches me,
I would know a child's caress,
I would clasp it in my arms,
I would hold it against my breast
Laughing, while the tempest roars around us,
And shakes the doors in rage!
Do you understand, my sister?
Answer then, I pray . . .

ELEKTRA: Most miserable body!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (still greatly exalted). Ah, mercy, for you and for myself!
What use this torment?
Our father is dead,
Our brother is absent!
Like two birds upon a branch,
We anxiously await;
On all sides we look . . .
But no one comes . . . nor brother . . . .
Nor message even, nor the hint of a message . . .
Nothing!
Time with its brush draws near to us,
To line our features; outside, the skies are bright
Or overcast, the women still slender yesterday,
Are grown stout, to the fountain they drag
Wearily their steps, then suddenly of their burden freed,
Draw joyously the sparkling water—
Another life is nestling at their breasts.
And the child begins to grow in stature.
No, no, I am a woman, I crave a woman's lot!
Better death than mere existence!
(She sobs bitterly.)

ELEKTRA: You howl?
Go in! Your place is there!
What tumult is this?
(With irony:)
Do they prepare for your wedding?
I hear steps running,
And within they shout.
It is death, or else a child is born!
If for a pillow they are short a corpse,
Then it is necessary that they kill!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Va-t'en, bien vite! qu'elle ne te voie.
Ne te mets pas sur son chemin:
La mort vieille en ses regards!
Elle a revé.
(Le bruit de nombreux arrivants, a l'intérieur, se rapproche.)
Va-t'en d'ici!
On marche dans l'entrée . . .
On va passer ici.
Elle a rêvé.
Elle a rêvé, je ne sais quoi
Je l'ai entendu dire aux servantes:
Ou dit qu'elle a rêve d'Orest,
Oui, l'Orest lui-même,
Elle a crié cette nuit en rêvé
Comme quelqu'un que l'on étrangle.
(Des torches et des ombres remplissent l'entrée, à gauche de la porte.)
Les voici tous,
Voici le long troupeau des porteuses de torches,
Poussant des bêtes, portant des glaives.
Soeur l'épouvante la rend terrible!
(Pressante:)
Eloigne toi, ne reste pas au travers de sa route!

ELEKTRA: J'ai le très-vif désir de lui parler à ma mère, aujourd'hui.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: J'ai peur d'entendre!
(Chrysothémis s'enfuit par la porte de la cour.—Devant les baies, violemment illuminées, un cortège tumultueux passe rapidement; bruit d'animaux que l'on traîne et que l'on fouaille, grondements sourds, cris aussitôt réprimés, claqument d'un fouet.—Klytaimnestra parait dans l'encadrement de la large baie. Son visage blême et bouffi est plus pâle encore, à cause du feu des torches et de la couleur pourpre de sa tunique. Elle s'appuie d'un côté sur une confidente vêtue de violet foncé, de l'autre sur une canne d'ivoire incrustée de pierres précieuses. Une forme jaune, dont la figure aux cheveux noirs rejetés en arrière semble celle d'une Egyptienne, et dont l'allure semble celle d'un serpent qui se dresse, porte la traîne. La Reine est couverte de pierres précieuses et de talismans, ses brus disparaissent sous les bracelets, ses doigts sont raidis par les bagues. Les paupières de ses veux sont extrèmement grandes et elle parait ne pouvoir, sans effort, les tenir ouvertes.—Elektra se dresse de tout son haut.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (ouvre tout à coup les yeux, et tremblants de colère, se penche en dehors de la baie, en menaçant Elektra de sa canne). Que veux-tu?
Voyez, la!
Mais voyez done!
Quelle attitude ce long coutendu,

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Go, go quickly! she must not see you.
Do not cross her path!
Death watches through her eyes!
She had a dream.
(The noise of many footsteps approaching is heard within.)
Come here!
They are marching this way.
She has dreamed,
I do not know of what.
I heard her tell the servants:
They say she dreamed of Orestes,
Yes, Orestes himself,
She cried aloud in her dream,
As though she were being strangled.
(Torches and shadows fill the entrance, at right of door.)
Behold them all!
Behold the long line of torch bearers!
Driving beasts before them, bearing spears.
Sister, fear has made her terrible.
(Urging:)
Go, remain not in her path.

ELEKTRA: I must speak to my mother today.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: I fear to wait.
(Chrysothemis makes her escape through the door of the court.—Before the windows, brilliantly illuminated, a noisy procession passes rapidly; sounds of animals which are being led and driven, harsh cries that are immediately suppressed, the cracking of a whip.—Klytaimnestra appears in the large bay window. Her sallow, bloated countenance is paler on account of the fire of the torches and the purple color of her tunic. She leans on one side upon the arm of a companion dressed in dark violet, on the other upon an ivory cane encrusted with precious stones. A yellow figure, whose black hair, drawn back from the face, suggests an Egyptian, and whose posture recalls that of a serpent raising itself, supports her train. The Queen is covered with precious stones and talismans, her arms are hidden under bracelets, her fingers sparkle with rings. Her eyelids are unusually large and she seems unable to keep them open without effort.—Elektra raises herself to her full height.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (suddenly opens her eyes, and trembling with anger, leans out of the window, threatening Elektra with her cane.) What do you wish?
Behold her, there!
That neck extended,
That pointed tongue,

Cette langue qui pointe!
Et dire que ça librement,
Chez moi circule!
(Respirant avec peine:)
De ses yeux que ne peut-elle me détruire!
O Dieux, d'où vient que sa vue m'oppresse;
Pourquoi vous même m'accabler?
Pourquoi faut-il que ma force soit brisée?
Pourquoi? Pourquoi mon corps, bien qu'il vive.
N'est-il plus qu'un desert.
Et cette partie, qui naquit de lui,
Pourquoi ne l'ai-je pas sarclée?
D'ou vient ce qui m'arrive.
Dieux vénérables?

ELEKTRA: (très calme). Les Dieux!
Mais toi-même, n'es-tu pas Déesse,
Oui tout comme eux!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (à ses suivantes). Qu'a-t-elle dit?
Avez-vous compris ses paroles?

LA CONFIDENTE: Que tu es de souche divine aussi.

LA PORTEUSE DE TRAINE: (d'une voix sifflante). Elle se moque!
(Klytaimnestra laisse retomber ses lourdes paupières.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (doucement). O douce voix perdue,
De qui le timbre resonne loin si loin.
Elle lit en moi.
Mais qui pourrait savoir sa vraie pensée.
(La Confidente et La Porteuse de Traine chuchotent ensemble.)

ELEKTRA: (s'approche lentement de Klytaimnestra). Toi, tu n'es plus la même.
La vermine se suspend à toi!
A ton oreille elle siffle,
Et partage en deux ta pensée,
Violà pourquoi tu es toujours
Dans l'ivresse et dans le rève.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Je veux descendre,
Seule, seule pour qu'elle me parle.
(Elle quitte la baie et parait avec ses suivantes sur le pas de la porte.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (du seuil). Aujourd'hui elle est moins farouche
Et parle comme un mage.

LA CONFIDENTE: (à voix basse). Elle ne dit pas sa pensée.

LA PORTEUSE DE TRAINE: Ses mots sont tous mensonges.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (s'emportant). Vous deux, silence!
Ce qui sort de vous toutes
N'est que l'haleine d'Egisthe.
Quand je m'eveille la nuit,
Etes-vous d'accord sur mes souffrances?
Toi tu cris:
Que mes paupières sont par trop pesantes,
Et que mon foie gonfle.
Tu me susurres, toi, à l'autre oreille:
Que tu as vu des demons affreux,
Avec des becs en pointe.
Qui viennent sucer mes veines.
Et ne m'as-tu pas montré.
Sur moi, leurs traces?
Et sur tes conseils je frappe,
Frappe, frappe, tant de victimes.
Voulez vous donc me harceler
De vos avis contraires jusqu'à la mort?
Je suis lasse d'entendre:
"Je dis vrai et l'antre trompe.
Ou es-tu, Vérité?
Pas un homme ne te commit.
Quand elle me parle
(Toujours très oppressée.)
De ce que j'aime entendre.
Je suis heureuse et je l'écoute . . .
Devant qui sait me dire ce qui m'agrée.
Fut-ce même ma fille, oui, même elle,
Ah! qu'il m'est doux de mettre
A nu mon torturée,
De laisser la brise tiède,
D'ou qu'elle vienne, souffler
Sur elle.
Les malades, quand vient le soir,
Assis au bord des ondes, offrent leurs ulcères
Et leurs affreuses plaies aux fraiches caresss
Des brises nocturnes . . .
Et tous ne pensent qu'à ceci:
Ne plus souffrir!
Laissez-moi seule près d'elle!
(D'un geste impérieux de sa canne, elle fait rentrer dans la maison La Confidante et La Porteuse de Traine. En hésitant, celles-ci franchissent la porte. Les torches s'éclipsent aussi, et c'est seulement une faible lueur, venue de la maison, qui éclare les visages des deux femmes, dans la cour.—Klytaimnestra s'avance.) KLYTAIMNESTRA: (à voix basse). Mes nuits ne sont plus jamais bonnes.

A tous rèves, quel remède?

ELEKTRA: (se rapprochant). Rèves-tu, Mère?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Lorsqu'on vieillit, l'on rève.
On peut trouver un remède.
Il existe.
Il est pour chaque mal un remède juste.
Tu vois, je me suis couverte de pierres,
En chacune d'elles réside une force.
Ce qu'on ignore, c'est leur exact emploi.
Mais toi si tu voulais,
Toi, en ceci tu peux m'être utile.

ELEKTRA: Moi, Mère, moi?

And say that she is free
To live beside me!
(Breathing with difficulty:)
With her eyes she would destroy me!
O Gods, why does her look oppress me so,
Why overwhelm me, why rob me of my strength?
Why is my body, though it is living,
Like unto a desert place,
And this one here, begot of him,
Why have I not removed her?
From where comes this affliction, most venerable Gods?

ELEKTRA: (very calm). The Gods!
But are you, too, not a Goddess,
Yes, like unto them?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (to her maids). What did she say?
Did you understand her words?

THE COMPANION: That you also are of divine origin.

THE TRAIN BEARER: (in a hissing voice). She mocks!
(Klytaimnestra closes her heavy eyelids.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (softly). O lost sweet voice,
Whose tones resound so far, so far.
She reads my thoughts,
But who could know her own?
(The Companion and the Train Bearer whisper together.)

ELEKTRA: (slowly approaching Klytaimnestra). You who are not still the same,
The vermin hangs on to you!
At your ear it hisses,
And shares with you your thoughts.
Hence you are always
Either drunk or dreaming!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: I would descend,
That she may speak to me, alone.
(She leaves the window and appears with her maids at the door.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (from the threshold). Today she is less ferocious.
She speaks, too, like a sage.

THE COMPANION: (smiling maliciously). She does not speak her thoughts.

THE TRAIN BEARER: Her words are lies.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (flying into a passion). You two, be silent.
You are but the breath of Aegisthes.
When I am awake at night,
Are you agreed as to my suffering?
You cry:
That my eyelids are too heavy,
And that my liver is swollen.
You whisper at the other ear:
That you have seen awful demons,
With pointed beaks,
That suck my veins.
And have you not shown me
The marks it left behind?
And by your counsel I struck them down,
Struck, yes, struck those numberless victims.
Will you still torment me,
And cross me even to death?
I am weary of hearing:
"It is the truth I speak, the other lies."
Where are you, O Truth?
No one knows you
When it speaks to me—
(Still much oppressed:)
Of what I love to hear,
I am happy and I listen . . .
To what is pleasing to me,
Were it even my daughter, yes, even she,
Ah! How sweet to free my tortured soul,
That the warm breeze, from wherever it comes
May blow upon it.
The sick, when evening falls,
Seated by the shore, their sores expose,
And their grievous wounds,
To the sweet caresses
Of the evening breezes . . .
And they think of this alone:
To suffer no longer.
Leave me alone with her.
(With an imperious gesture of her cane, she sends The Companion and The Train Bearer into the house. They go in reluctantly. The torches also go out, and but a faint light remains, coming from the house, which lights up the faces of the two women in the court. Klytaimnestra comes forward.)

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (in a low voice). No longer happy are my nights.
What remedy is there to all dreams?

ELEKTRA: (approaching). You dream, my mother?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: When one is wakeful, one dreams.
There is a remedy—it exists.
For every evil, there's a remedy.
I am covered with precious stones;
In each one resides a force.
We are only ignorant of how to use them.
But you, if you wish,
May serve me in this matter.

ELEKTRA: I, my mother?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (avec éclat).
Oui, oui.
Tu es lucide.
Tu as la tête très solide.
En tout ceci tu peux m'être utile.
Si rien qu'un mot est peu de chose . . .
Qu'est-ce donc qu'un souffle?
Apprends done que du crépuscule à l'aube,
Quand je m'agite sur mon lit un rien rampe sur moi.
Pas même un mot, pas même un mal c'est quelque chose D'imponderable; rien dis-je . . .
Pas même un cauchemar, et pourtant,
C'est si terrible que mon âme.
A cette approche, aimerait se pendre.
Que chaque membre en moi hurle à la mort!
Et je puis vivre, sans même être malade:
Regarde moi: semblai-je être malade?
Peut-on dissoudre vivante,
Comme pourriture?
Et s'écrouler, lors qu'on n'est pas malade,
Semblable à quelque robe qui s'emiette,
Rongée par les mites?
Si je dors, je rève, rève,
Que toute la moelle de mes os s'enfuit,
Et lorsque je me lève, rien qu'un dixième,
A peine, coula de la lente clepsydre.
Derrière le rideau un réilet.
Mais ce n'est pas la bleme aurore,
Non, c'est encor la torche de la porte qui frissonne.
Et qui semblable à quelqu'eyre vivant, m'epie.
Tous ces rèves, il faut qu'ils finissent il faut . . .
Qui me les apporte, l'étrange Démon.
Va s'enfuir dès que le juste sang aura coulé.

ELEKTRA: Etrange!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (sauvage).
Quand je devrais à tout ce qui rampe.
Et vole ouvrir les veines,
Dans la rouge vapeur du sang marcher
Et puis dormir,
Comme font les enfants de Thule aux brumes pourpres:
Je veux ne plus rèver.

ELEKTRA: Quand le juste sang sous la hache jailira,
Mourront tous tes rèves!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (vivement).
Quel est-il, ce sang, et de quel animal pur?

ELEKTRA: (riant mystérieusement). Sang d'une bête impure.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (with fervor).
Yes, yes.
You are sensible,
You understand readily.
In all this you may be useful to me.
A word is but a little thing . . .
It is only a breath!
Learn then that from sunset to dawn,
When I toss restless on my bed,
A trifle keeps me wakeful.
Not even a word, nor yet an ill, is a thing imponderable;
A trifle, did I say? . . .
Not even a nightmare, and yet it is so terrible,
That my soul, at its approach, is terrified,
And my being is paralyzed with dread!
And I can live despite this;
Behold me, am I ill?
Can one yet live and rot,
Like dirt?
Can one decay, and yet be not ill,
Like a robe worm-eaten?
If I sleep, I dream, ah! dream,
That the marrow in my bones has melted;
And when I awake (the hour glass scarcely indicating ten),
Behind the curtain I behold a reflection,
But not the golden dawn of day,
No, it is still the torch that flares,
Like a human eye watching me.
All these dreams must end—they must . . .
The strange demon shall flee from where they come.
So soon as the right blood shall flow.

ELEKTRA: Strange!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (savagely).
When I shall open the veins of a body
To all that creep about me
In the red vapor of blood, I shall march
And then sleep,
As do the children of Thule in the purple mist:
I wish to dream no more.

ELEKTRA: When the right blood flows under the hatchet
All your dreams shall end.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (quickly).
What is this blood, of what pure animal?

ELEKTRA: (laughing mysteriously). The blood of an impure animal.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: D'un de mes prisonnièrs?

ELEKTRA: Non, un homme libre.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Et quels remèdes?

ELEKTRA: Merveilleux remèdes qu'il faut strictement prendre.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (impatientée). Parle donc!

ELEKTRA: Ne peux-tu me comprendre?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Non, vite éxplique.
(Elle adjure solemnellement Elektra).
Dis-moi le nom de l'holcauste!

ELEKTRA: Une femme!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (avec ampatience). Est-elle au nombre de mes suivantes, Enfant? Est-elle vierge encore?
Ou femme, ayant connu le mâle?

ELEKTRA: (tranquillement).
Oui, connu, c'est ça!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (pressante).
Ce sacrifice, dis-m'en donc l'heure, le lieu!

ELEKTRA: (avec calme).
Qu'importe le lieu, qu'importe l'heure, le jour ou la nuit.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Dis-moi le rite!
Que dois-je faire?
Faut-il moi-même . . .

ELEKTRA: Non, non tu n'iras pas cette fois à la chasse filet, hache au poing.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Qui donc? Qui doit agir?

ELEKTRA: Un homme!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Aegisth?

ELEKTRA: (riant). J'ai dit pourtant: un homme!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Qui? Mais réponds vite.
Quelqu'un des nòtres?
Ou bien sera-ce un étranger?

ELEKTRA: (fixant le sol, l'esprit ailleurs). Oui, oui, étrange,
Et malgré tout de la maison.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Explique-moi l'enigme.
Elektra, continue.
Je suis heureuse, pour cette fois,
De te trouver moins rude . . .

ELEKTRA: Vas-tu laisser rentrer le Frère, Mère?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: J'ai fait defense que de lui l'on parle.

ELEKTRA: As-tu donc peur de lui?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Qui l'a dit?

ELEKTRA: Mère, pourquoi trembler?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Qui aurait peur d'un misérable insensé!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: One of my prisoners?

ELEKTRA: No, a free man.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: And what remedies?

ELEKTRA: Marvelous remedies that must be strictly taken.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (impatiently). Then speak!

ELEKTRA: Can you not understand me?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: No, explain quickly.
(She solemnly adjures Elektra.)
Tell me the name of this holocaust!

ELEKTRA: A woman.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (with impatience). Is she among my servants?
Is she still a virgin?
Or a woman who has mated?

ELEKTRA: (quietly). Ah! has mated—that is it!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (urging). Tell me the place and hour of this sacrifice!

ELEKTRA: (calmly). What does time or place matter, day or night?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Tell me the rites!
What must I do?
Shall I myself . . .

ELEKTRA: No, you shall not go to the chase, net and axe in hand—
Not on this occasion.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Who then shall act?

ELEKTRA: A man!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Aegisthes?

ELEKTRA: (laughing). I said—a man!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Who? Answer quickly.
Is he one of ours?
Or must he be a stranger?

ELEKTRA: (her eyes on the ground, her thoughts elsewhere).
Ah, a stranger.
And yet of this house.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Explain your enigma.
Go on, Elektra.
I am pleased to see you
Less rude than usual . . .

ELEKTRA: Will you allow my brother to return here, my mother?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: I have forbidden that his name be mentioned.

ELEKTRA: Are you, then, afraid of him?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Who said so?

ELEKTRA: Why tremble, my mother?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Who could be afraid of a poor fool!

ELEKTRA: Quoi?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Le pauvre, bégaie, couche auprès des chiens de garde,
Et confond la bête et l'homme, âme chétive.

ELEKTRA: L'enfant était très sain.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: C'est que, on lui donna mauvais gite
Et les chiens de la cour pour compagnie.

ELEKTRA: Ah!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (baissant ses paupieres). En vain j'envoyai de l'or, de l'or.
Pour qu'on le traitát comme doit l'etre un fils de Roi!

ELEKTRA: Tu mens!
L'or envoyé, c'était pourqu'on l'étrangle.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Qui te l'a dit?

ELEKTRA: Je le vois dans tes yeux.
Et à ton tremblement je dévine qu'il vit encor.
Et que le jour, la nuit, sans cesse tu pense à lui.
Et que ton coeur se sèche de peur quand tu te dis: il vient!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Ceux du dehors je n'en ai curé.
Je suis ici la souveraine.
J'ai des servants assez qui veillent à ma porte,
Et, s'il me plait, je place jour et nuit,
Devant ma chambre, trois guetteurs
Armés et qui, l'oeil ouvert, me gardent.
Quelque jour, de facon ou bien d'autre je saurai te faire parler.
Déjà tu l'avouas que tu connais la victime juste,
Et le remède que je cherche.
Si tu te tais, libre,
Tu parleras enchainée.
On fait parler ceux qu'on affame.
Rèves sont choses qu'on supprime.
Qui les souffre, sans en jamais trouver
Le vrai remède, n'est rien qu'un sot!
Mais je saurai qui doit saigner et mourir
Ici pour qu'enfin, moi, je dorme!
(Elektra fait un bond hors de l'ombre, vers Klytaimnestra, dont elle se rapproche de plus en plus. Elle lui parle avec une exaltation croissante.)

ELEKTRA: Qui doit saigner?
Ta gorge elle même quand le chasseur t'aura prise!
J'entends qu'il entre dans ta chambre.
J'entends les rideaux de ton lit qu'il tire:
Mais qui tuerait la victime endormie.
Il te reveille, hurlante tu t'en fuis,
Sur tes pas il s'élance, te traque en ta maison!

ELEKTRA: What?

KLYTAIMNESTRA: The poor wretch lies with the watch dogs,
And, mean soul, confounds the beast with man.

ELEKTRA: The child was very healthy.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: It is why they gave him a sorry lodging,
And the dogs for company.

ELEKTRA: Ah!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: (lowering her eyelids). In vain I sent them gold,
That they might treat him as befits a king's son!

ELEKTRA: You lie!
The gold was sent to tempt his death.

KLYTAIMNESTRA: Who told you so?

ELEKTRA: I see it in your eyes.
And by your trembling I divine he lives.
And that you think of him day and night.
And that your heart stands still
When they say: he comes!

KLYTAIMNESTRA: I have no fear of those outside.
I am mistress here.
I have servants, too, who watch,
And, if it please me, I can set
Night and day before my door three sentries armed,
Who shall guard me with watchful eye.
Some day I'll find the means to make you speak.
You have already owned, you know the proper victim
And the remedy I need.
If you keep silent, free,
Then you shall speak in chains.
Those who starve shall speak.
Dreams can be suppressed.
Those who suffer them, never finding
The true remedy, are simply fools!
But I shall know who must bleed and die,
So I may sleep at last!
(Elektra springs out of the shadow toward Klytaimnestra, whom she approaches gradually. She speaks to her with increasing exaltation.)

ELEKTRA: Who must bleed?
Your throat, when the hunter has taken you
I hear him entering your chamber,
I hear the curtain of your bed drawn back:
But who would slay the sleeping victim!
He awakens you. Screaming, you flee
He follows after, tracking your footsteps through your house!

Cours-tu à droite, là est le lit!
A gauche, là fume le bain sanglant,
Et l'ombre et les torches t'enveloppent
De leur filet noirâtre et rouge . . .
(Klytaimnestra est secouée d'un frisson muet.)
Au bas des marches, sous des voutes.
Des voutes et des voutes il te poursuit . . .
Et moi, moi, moi, moi, moi, qui te l'en voyai,
Moi, je suis le chien forçant la bête
Si tu veux te terrer; d'un saut je te relance.
Et-nous irons ainsi, jusqu'à un mur qui nous arrète, et là . . .
Dans les ténèbres, vois-tu pas déjà une ombre,
Oui, là, une forme vague où le blanc des yeux reluit?
Ah! c'est le Pere, indifférent,
Sachant que cela doit être;
C'est à ses pieds que tu t'écrouleras.
Tu voudrais crier mais l'air étrangle alors ton cri
Et il retombe, muet, par tèrre.
Inconsciente, tu tends déjà le cou,
Et le froid du fer te semble attaque déjà ta vie.
Mais non, il convient d'attendre.
Le rite doit être observé.
Tout se tait, tu n'entends que ton coeur en ta poitrine battre;
Cet instant se creuse sous toi comme un grand trou noir d'années
Cet instant on te l'accorde pour ceci:
Que tu souffres l'angoissante horreur
Des naufragés dont les clameurs s'éfforcent
En vain de traverser la tempête.
Cet instant on te l'accorde ce que tu envies
Tous ceux qu'on a rivés aux murs des geolés,
Ceux qui du fond des puits, invoquent le trépas,
Et comme un sauveur l'appellent . . .
O toi, toi qui en toi même est encagée
Ainsi qu'au ventre ardent d'un animal d'airain,
Tu ne pourras, toi non plus, crier!
Je suis devant toi, tu peux lire de tes yeux
Hagards l'horrible mot qui sur mon visage
Est écrit: Aux lacs posés par toi-même ton âme s'étrangle.
Elle tombe la hache, et je suis là,
Je te vois, je te vois morte!
Finis tous tes rèves, et ceux qu'on m'obligerait à faire;
Et qui lors vivra, gaiment pourra jouir de sa vie!

(Elles se tiennent l'une devant l'autre, les yeux dans les yeux. Elektra pleine d'une farouche ivresse, Klytaimnestra baletante de peur.)

You run to the right, there stands the bed!
To the left, there foams the bath of blood,
And the shadow and the torches envelope you
In their black and scarlet net . . .
(Klytaimnestra shivers as with a chill.)
Down the stairs, below the arches,
From arch to arch, he chases you . . .
And I, I, I, I, who sent him to you,
I shall be the dog hunting the beast;
If you seek cover, I hurl myself on you.
And we shall go thus to the wall before us, and there . . .
In the darkness, do you see already a shadow,
Ah, a vague form whose eyes are brilliant?
It is my father, heedless, indifferent,
Knowing that this must be;
'Tis at his feet that you shall fall.
You seek to call aloud,
But the air shall choke your breath
And your voice shall sink, soundless, to the earth.
Unconscious, you already stretch your neck,
And fancy the cold steel that already attacks your life.
But no, the time is not,
The rite must be observed.
You are silent, you await me, your heart beating wildly;
Before you yawns a pit, black with age,
May you suffer the most awful horrors,
Like shipwrecked sailors whose shouts
In vain are raised against the tempest.
Now you are granted what you seek.
As those who have been bound in jails,
Who from the depths of wells, invoke the end,
And see in it their savior . . .
O you who are encaged in yourself,
You, too, shall have no power to cry!
I am before you, you can read in your haggard eyes
The awful word which is written on your face:
In the lakes you dug yourself, your soul is strangled,
The axe falls and I am there,
I see you, I see you die!
Ended are your dreams, and those that were forced on me;
And he who then shall live shall know the joy of life!

(They stand facing each other, gazing into each other's eyes—Elektra, filled with an intense anger; Klytaimnestra, breathing with difficulty.—At this instant)

(A ce moment le vestibule s'illumine.)
(La Confidante accourt.—Elle chuchotte quelque chose à L'oreille de Klytaimnestra.—Celle-ci semble d'abord ne pas comprendre.)
(Petit a petit elle revient à elle.—Elle fait un signe: "De la lumiere."—Des servantes avec des torches arrivent en courant et se placent derrière Klytaimnestra.—Klytaimnestra fait encore signe: "Plus de lumière."—La Porteuse de traine.—Maintenant ses traits se detendent peu à peu, et une expression mauvaise, de triomphe vient remplacer son air d'angoisse.—Des servantes arrivent, de plus en plus nombreuses, et se placent derrière Klytaimnestra.—Maintenant la cour est toute plaine de lumières et des lueurs rougeâtres courent sur les murs.—Sans perdre Elektra de vue un seul instant, Klytaimnestra se fait redire la nouvelle.)
(Et saturée d'une joie sauvage, dans un geste de menace, elle étend ses deux mains vers Elektra.—La Confidente lui ramasse sa canne, et s'appuyant sur l'une et l'autre, vivement, voracement, retroussant sa robe pour franchir les marches, elle rentre en courant dans la maison.—Les servantes avec les lumières la suivent, comme si on les poursuivait.)

ELEKTRA: Que lui ont elles dit?
D'ou vient sa joie?
Ma tête!
Rien ne me dit ce qui égaye cette femme!
(Chrysothémis hurlant comme une bête blessée, arrive en courant par la porte de la cour.)

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (en criant). Orest! Orest est mort!
(Elektra, tout à ses pensées, lui fait signe de s'éloigner.)

ELEKTRA: Tais-toi!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Orest est mort.
(Elektra rémue les lèvres.)
Quand je sortais, tous savaient déjà!
Tous, en cercle, parlaient . . .
Oui, tous déjà le savaient, tous sauf nous.

ELEKTRA: (sourdement). Nul ne sait ça!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Tous le savent.

ELEKTRA: Nul ne peut savoir.
Car ce n'est pas vrai.
(Chrysothémis, désésperée, se jette à tèrre.)

ELEKTRA: (relevant de force Chrysothémis). Ce n'est pas vrai!
Ce n'est pas vrai.
Je te le dis, ce n'est pas vrai!

the vestibule is illumined.—The Companion hastens in. She whispers something in Klytaimnestra's ear. The latter seems at first not to understand. Suddenly she recovers herself. She makes a sign for light. The servants enter, running, with torches, and place themselves behind Klytaimnestra.—Klytaimnestra makes another sign for more light. The Train Bearer enters. Her features now relax gradually, and an evil expression of triumph replaces her looks of anguish. Servants continue to enter in larger numbers and stand behind Klytaimnestra. The court is now brilliantly illumined and the lurid light is reflected from the walls. Without losing sight of Elektra for an instant, Klytaimnestra has the news repeated. Then, permeated with a savage joy, she extends both her hands menacingly towards Elektra.—The Companion picks up her cane and, supporting herself on both, she quickly gathers up her robe to mount the steps. She enters the house running. The servants, carrying the lights, follow her, as though they were pursued.)

ELEKTRA: What did they tell her?
From where came her joy?
My head!
Nothing tells me what has pleased that woman!
(Chrysothemis, screaming like a wounded animal, rushes in by the door of the court.)

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (crying). Orestes! Orestes is dead!
(Elektra, engrossed in thought, signs her to go).

ELEKTRA: Be silent!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Orestes is dead!
(Elektra moves her lips.)
When I came out, they all knew already!
All were speaking of it . . .
Yes, all knew it, save we two.

ELEKTRA: (in a hollow voice). No one knows that!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: They all know.

ELEKTRA: No one can know,
For it is not true.
(Chrysothemis, despairingly, casts herself on the ground.)

ELEKTRA: (raising Chrysothemis by force). It is not true!
It is not true,
I tell you, it is not true!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Les hôtes, les deux étrangers.
Les hôtes envoyés pour porter la nouvelle:
Deux, un vieux et un jeune,
Se tenaient dans l'entrée debout
Et tout le monde, en cercle,
Les écoutait, et tous et tous,
Savaient déjà.

ELEKTRA: (avec la plus grande énergie). Cé n'est pas vrai!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: A nous deux nul ne pense.
Mort, Elektra, mort!
En tèrre étrangère!
Mort! très distant,
Tout là-bas.
Par ses chevaux,
Qui s'emportèrent, écrase.
(En proie à un désespoir sauvage, elle s'écroule sur le seuil de la maison, aux côtés d'Elektra.)
(Un jeunne serviteur sort précipitamment de la maison, et bute contre celles qui sont étendues devant le seuil.)

LE JEUNE SERVITEUR: Place! qui done épie, devant le seuil?
Ah! Encore elle! Hé quelqu'en! hô!

VIEUX SERVITEUR: (à la figure triste, se montre à la porte de la cour). Qu'est-ce donc? Que veux tu?

LE JEUNE SERVITEUR: Qu'on selle bien vite aussi vite que possible,
Cheval, ou mule, ou bien même s'il le faut, une vâche, vite!

VIEUX SERVITEUR: Pour qui?

LE JEUNE SERVITEUR: Pour qui te le commande.
M'entends-tu? Vite, pour moi!
Oui, oui, pour moi! Hop! hop!
Il me faut joindre, aux champs,
Le Maitre même, c'est un message que je lui porte
Un message qui mérite que pour le porter vite
Je crève une bête!
(Le Vieux sort aussi.)

ELEKTRA: (à elle même, d'une voix basse, mais avec beaucoup d'énergie). C'est donc à nous d'agir ici.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (l'intèrrogeant, anxieuse). Elektra?

ELEKTRA: (à voix precipitée).
Nous, c'est nous qui devons le faire.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Quoi, Elektra?

ELEKTRA: (à voix basse). Aujourd'hui même,
Ce sera mieux ce soir.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Quoi, Soeur?

ELEKTRA: Quoi? La tâche
Qui nous échoit à toutes deux,
(Très douloureusement.)
Puisque hélàs il ne peut venir!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: The guests, the two strangers,
Sent to bring the news:
An old man and a youth,
Are standing in the entrance,
All around them gathered,
Listening, and all, yes all, now know.

ELEKTRA: (with the greatest energy). It is not true!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: No one thinks of us.
Dead, Elektra, dead!
In a strange country!
Dead! so far away,
Down yonder.
His horses ran away, they trampled on him.
(Overcome by savage despair, she falls prone upon the threshold of the house, beside Elektra.—A young servant comes hurriedly out of the house, and collides with the two girls, who are lying before the threshold.)

YOUNG SERVANT: Give place!
Who spies on the threshold?
Ah! She again! Eh! Some one! Eh!

OLD SERVANT: (sad of countenance, appearing at the door of the court). What is it? What do you wish?

YOUNG SERVANT: Let a horse be saddled at once,
Or a mule, or if necessary a cow—make haste.

OLD SERVANT: For whom?

YOUNG SERVANT: For him who commands you.
Do you hear me? Quick, for me!
Yes, yes, for me! Make haste,
I must join the master at once,
I bear a message to him—
A message to be carried quickly,
And on horseback.
(The old man also goes out.)

ELEKTRA: (to herself in a low voice, but with great energy). It's for us to act here now.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (questioning her anxiously). Elektra?

ELEKTRA: (precipitately). Yes, we must act.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: What is it, Elektra?

ELEKTRA: (in a low voice). Even today,
Later this evening.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: What is it, sister?

ELEKTRA: What? The task
Which falls to us,
(Very mournfully:)
Since, alas! he cannot come.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (de plus en plus angoissée). Quelle est cette tâche?

ELEKTRA: Il nous faut toi et moi, aller, abattre
Et la femme et son homme!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (d'une voix basse et frissonante). Soeur, parles-tu de la Mère.

ELEKTRA: (farouche). D'elle et de lui.
Sans hésiter il nous faut agir.
Tais-toi. Parler n'est rien.
Nous ne devons songer qu'à ceci:
Comment ferons nous.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Moi?

ELEKTRA: Oui, toi et moi.
Quel autre?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (épouvantée).
Nous, nous deux tenter la chose
Nous, nous deux, avec ces mains-là?

ELEKTRA: Répose toi sur moi seule.
(Mystérieusement.)
La hache . . .
(plus fort).
La hache dont le Père . . .

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Toi, c'est toi qui l'as!
Toi, ma soeur.

ELEKTRA: Je la gardais pour le Frère.
Mais que nos bras la lèvent.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Toi?
Se peut-il que tu frappes cet Aegisth?

ELEKTRA: (sauvage). Ou elle, puis lui, ou lui,
Puis elle, qu'importe!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Ah! que j'ai peur!

ELEKTRA: Nul ne veille devant sa porte.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Frapper qui dort!

ELEKTRA: Qui dort est la victime liée.
S'ils ne dormaient tous deux ensemble seule j'irais.
Mais j'ai besoin de toi.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (se défendant).
Elektra!

ELEKTRA: De toi!
De toi! car tu es forte.
Si forte tu es!
Ah! combien tes nuits
Virginales t'out faite robuste.
Tout ton etre plein de vigueur frémit.
Vive comme une pouliche,
Svelte est ta démarche.
Flexible ta taille et si souples
Tes deux frèles hanches.
Tu peux glisser par chaque fente,
Passer par les fenêtres!
Et combien tes tras que je tate sont frais
Et forts ma soeur.
Quand tu te débats, ah!
Quelle force est dans tes bras!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (more and more distressed). What is this task?

ELEKTRA: We, you and I, must overcome
The woman and that man!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (in a low voice and shuddering). Sister, do you speak of our mother?

ELEKTRA: (fiercely). Of her and of him.
Without hesitating we must act.
Be silent. Words are useless.
We must think of this alone:
How shall we act?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: I?

ELEKTRA: Yes, you and I.
What other?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (frightened).
We, we two, to attempt this thing?
We, we two, with these hands of our?

ELEKTRA: Trust in me alone.
(Mysteriously:)
The axe . . .
(Louder:)
The axe with which my father . . .

CHRYSOTHEMIS: You, you have it!
You, my sister!

ELEKTRA: I kept it for my brother.
But let us grasp it now!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: You?
Do you mean to strike this man Aegisthes?

ELEKTRA: (savagely) Or her, then him, or him,
Then her, what matters it!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Ah! I am afraid.

ELEKTRA: No one watches at the door.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: To strike the sleeper!

ELEKTRA: Who sleeps is the victim bound,
If they sleep not together, alone I'll go,
But should I need you—

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (in self defence). Elektra!

ELEKTRA: Should I need you.
For you are strong—(Approaching Chrysothemis:)
You are so strong
Ah! How your peaceful nights have made you robust.
All your being is full of vigor.
Your spirit is like a young colt
Your limbs so slender
Your body so flexible and so supple
You can slip
Your two frail hips through any opening
Or enter by the window!
And how strong, my sister, are your arms
Whey you struggle, ah! What force is in your arms—

Et ce qu'ils étreignent,
Ils l'étoufféraient.
Oui tu pourrais, moi-même ou un homme,
Nous étouffer d'une etreinte,
Ton être plein de vigueur frémit.
Ainsi qu'une eau jaillissante coule d'un rocher,
Ainsi coule la force en tes longs cheveux denoueés.
A travers la fraicheur ta chair ton jeune sang me brule.
Avec ma joue je sens le duvet
Si fin des bras robustes.
Ah! que tu es forte, forte et belle,
Pareille à quelque fruit que l'été murit.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Laisse-moi!

ELEKTRA: Non je te garde à moi!
Avec mes tristes bras, mes bras si frèles,
J'entoure ton corps, plus tu résistes,
Plus je te serre et me noue,
Et je te lierai aprement,
Je plongerai mes racines en toi
Pour que mon vouloir s'infiltre en ton sang.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Laisse-moi!
(Elle s'écarte de quelques pas.)

ELEKTRA: (poursuit sauvagement et la rétient par sa robe).
Non, n'y compte pas.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Elektra, grace!
O toi, si sage,
Tache que nous fuyions.
Ah! fais nous libres!
Elektra, grace,
Ah! fais-nous libres . . .

ELEKTRA: C'est maintenant que je veux être ta soeur,
Mais une soeur que je fus jamais!
Je veux, à tes côtés assise dan ta chambre,
Attendre ton fiancé.
Pour lui j'oindrai ton corps
Et mes mains dans un bain parfume te longeront, doux cygne,
Et c'est la tête sur mon sem cachée.
Qu'émue tremblante, tu recevras l'hommage de l'époux,
Avant qu'au lit des noces ses bras robustes t'attirent.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (fermant les yeux). Non, Soeur, non!
De telles choses, ici, ne les dis pas.

ELEKTRA: Oh! oui, bien mieux.
Bien mieux qu'une soeur serai-je pour toi désormais:
Je veux, pour toi être une esclave!
Quand viendront tes couches, prés de toi
Je serai sans tréve jour et nuit,
Chassant les mouches, te versant l'eau fraiche
Et lorsque, tout à coup de ton flane,
Qui saigne un être vivant sortira,
Si frèle et nu, je veux l'éléve bien haut.
Pour que son sourire qui rayonne
Doucement jusqu'au plus profond de ton âme tombe.

What they seize, they crush.
Yes, you could crush me or a man
With but little effort,
Your being is so full of vigor.
Like a foaming stream falling from a rock,
So flows the strength in your long hair untied.
Through your fresh skin, your young blood boils.
I feel it, with my cheek I feel
The velvet texture of your robust arms.
Ah! How strong you are strong and beautiful,
Like some fruit which ripens in summer.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Leave me!

ELEKTRA: No; I keep you here!
With my poor weak arms
I hold your body, and if you resist
I clasp you closer, linking you to me.
I'll even root myself in you
So my will may reach your blood.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Leave me!
(She moves away a few paces.)

ELEKTRA: (following her, and seizing hold of her dress). No; think not of it.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Elektra, please!
Oh you are so wise,
Let us escape.
Ah! Let us be free!

ELEKTRA: It is now I wish to be your sister,
But such a sister as I never was before!
I wish to sit beside you in your chamber.
To await your lover,
To anoint your body for him,
And plunge my hands in a perfumed bath, sweet swan,
And, your head upon your breast, trembling,
You will receive the homage of your spouse.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (closing her eyes). No, sister, no!
Such things do not here.

ELEKTRA: Oh! Yes, even more than a sister
I shall be to you from now on:
I wish to be your slave
To wait upon you night and day,
Pouring your water,
And when your child is born,
I would raise it in my arms
So that its smile should reach you
And your soul be filled with joy.
Then, your anguish banished by this new light,
O, my sister, your happy tears would flow.

Alors, sentant l'ancienne angoisse par ce soleil chassée.
O ma soeur, en claires larmes fondront tes yeux.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Emporte-moi!
Je meurs entre ces murs!

ELEKTRA: (aux genoux de Chrysothémis). Ta bouche est belle lorsqu'elle S'ouvre et crie avec colère!
De cette bouche forte un cri terrible,
Un cri devra sortir, terrible,
Ainsi qu'un cri de Thanato;
C'est quand, à tes pieds ils giront là où je gis.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Que veux-tu dire?

ELEKTRA: (se relevant). Avant de fuir et la maison et moi,
Il fant que tu agisses.
(Chrysothémis vent parler, Elektra lui ferme la bouche.)

ELEKTRA: Voici le seul chemin qui mène hors d'ici.
Si tu veux qu'il te soit ouvert jure moi que tu vas agir.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (se détachant). Laisse moi!

ELEKTRA: (la saisissant de nouveau). Jure de venir, Cette nuit même,
Au pied des marches.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Laisse-moi!

ELEKTRA: (la tenant par sa robe). Ne crains pas, enfant,
De conserver la moindre tache de sang.
Vite, au sortir des vètements rougis,
Tu vétiras le voile nuptial!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Laiss-moi!

ELEKTRA: (toujours plus préssante). Ne sois pas lâche!
Et surmonte l'horreur de cet instant
Que paieront tant de joies durant de longues nuits.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: N'y compte pas!

ELEKTRA: Dis que tu vas venir!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: N'y compte pas!

ELEKTRA: Vois, je sus couchée à tes pieds que j'embrasse!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: N'y compte pas!
(S'enfuyant par la porte de la maison.)

ELEKTRA: Je te hais!
(Avec une résolution sauvage.)
Allons s toute seule!
(Silencieusement, à la façon d'une bête, elle va creuser le long du mur de la maison, à côté du seuil de la porte.—Elektra s'arrête de creuser, regardant autour d'elle.—Elle creuse de nouveau.—Une nouvelle fois Elektra regarde autour d'elle et écoute.—Elektra se remet à creuser.—Orest se dresse dans l'encadrement de la porte de la cour, et sa silhouette se découpe en noir sur les dernières clartés du jour—Orest s'avance.—Elektra lève les yeux sur lui, il se tourne lentement de son côté, et son regard tombe sur elle.—Elektra se redresse vivement.)

ELEKTRA: (tremblante). Que veux-tu done, étranger?
Que cherches-tu ô noir rodeur de l'ombre,
Pourquoi m'epier ainsi?
Je fais ici ma tâche.
Et que t'importe?
Laisse-moi seule!

OREST: Je dois attendre.

ELEKTRA: Attendre?

OREST: Mais, n'es-tu pas du logis?
Serais-tu pas servante en ce logis?

ELEKTRA: Oui, je sers en ce logis.
Toi meme, qu'ici rien n'appele, sois heureux, va-t'en!

OREST: Je te l'ai dit:
Je dois attendre que l'on m'appele.

ELEKTRA: Qu'on t'appelle? Tu mens.
Je sais bien que le Maitre est absent.
Et elle, que pourrait-el-te vouloir?

OREST: Moi, et un autre qui m'accompagne,
Nous portons un message à la Reine.
Vers elle on nous envoie pour temoigner ensemble
Que son fils Orest à succombe à notre vue,
Ecrase par ses coursiers eux-mêmes.
J'étais de son âge, et son ami de chaque instant.

ELEKTRA: Oses-tu paraitre, ramper devant moi
En ma lugubre retraite, Heraut funeste!
Ton affreux message va le trompeter la où l'on s'égaye!
Si ta paupiere luit la sienne n'est close.
Ta bouche à toi se meut, la sienne est immobile, emplie de terre.
Tu vis, et lui, cent fois meilleur que toi,
Cent fois plus noble aussi,
Et qui pour cent raisons aurait du vivre, il est mort!

OREST: (avec calme). Laisse Orest
Il se rejouissait par trop de vivre.
Les Dieux, la-haut n'aiment guèrre le cris de l'humaine joie.
Il meritait la tombe.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Take me away, I die between these walls.

ELEKTRA: (at the knees of Chrysothemis). Your mouth is beautiful when it opens,
And it cries with anger.
From that strong mouth a cry most terrible
Shall be heard, as terrible as Thanato's cry!
It is when they lie at your feet, as I do now.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: What do you mean?

ELEKTRA: (rising). Before you leave the house and me,
You must act.
(Chrysothemis tries to speak.—Elektra closes her mouth.)

ELEKTRA: Behold, just one road leads here.
If you find it open, swear that you will act.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (freeing herself). Leave me!

ELEKTRA: (seizing her again).
Swear that you will come,
This very night,
To the foot of the stairs.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Leave me!

ELEKTRA: (holding her dress).
Fear not, child,
To keep the least spot of blood,
When you lay aside the reddened garments,
You shall put on the nuptial veil.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Leave me!

ELEKTRA: (still more urgingly).
Don't be a coward!
Overcome the horror of this moment.
Long nights of pleasure shall repay you.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Don't count on it!

ELEKTRA: Say that you will come!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Don't count on it!

ELEKTRA: See, I am at your feet, which I embrace!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Don't count on it!
(Escaping through the door of the house.)

ELEKTRA: I hate you!
(With savage resolution:)
Let us go alone!
(Silently, in the manner of a wild animal, she creeps along the wall of the house, to the threshold of the door.—Elektra stops creeping, looking around her.—She creeps forward again.—Again she looks around her and listens.—Elektra begins to creep forward again.—Orestes appears in the doorway of the court, and his silhouette is clearly defined in black by the dying light of the day.—Orestes comes forward.—Elektra raises her eyes and sees him; he turns slowly towards her, and his eyes fall upon her.—Elektra gets up quickly.)

ELEKTRA: (trembling). What do you wish, stranger?
What do you seek, oh, shadow,
Why spy on me like this?
I here accomplish my task.
And what is it to you?
Leave me alone!

ORESTES: I must wait.

ELEKTRA: Wait?

ORESTES: But are you not of the house?
Perhaps a servant here?

ELEKTRA: Yes, I serve in this house.
Be happy that nothing calls you here.
Begone!

ORESTES: I have told you.
I must wait here until they call me.

ELEKTRA: Till they call you? You lie.
I know full well that the Master is absent.
And she, what could she want of you?

ORESTES: I and another who accompanied me,
We bring a message to the Queen.
They send us to her as witnesses
That her son Orestes died before our eyes,
Crushed by his chargers.
I was the same age as he and his dearest friend.

ELEKTRA: Do you dare appear before me
In my dark retreat, sad Herald!
Your awful message, go announce it
To those who now divert themselves!
If your eyelid shines hers is not closed.
Your mouth is silent, hers is motionless, filled with earth.
You live, and he, a hundred times better than you,
A hundred times more noble also,
And who for a hundred reasons would have lived, is dead!

ORESTES: (calmly). Let Orestes be.
He loved to live.
The gods above love not the shouts of human joy.
He deserved the tomb.

ELEKTRA: Mais moi! Etre là, et me dire que l'enfant Ne reviendra pas, jamais, plus jamais Que l'enfant, là-bas, dans les ombre du Styx se traine . . . Tandis que ces gens-la vivent se réjouissent, Que leur engeance en cette bauge vit et mange et boit et dort . . . Et moi-même, plus misérable que bête dans les bois, Moi je vis seule, toujours!	ELEKTRA: But I! To be there and say the child Will not come, never, never again. That the child, below, amid the shadow of Styx is drawn . . . While these people live rejoicing, May their brood, in this lair, live and eat and drink and sleep . . . Ah, more miserable than the forest beasts, I live alone, always!
OREST: Qui donc es-tu?	ORESTES: Who, then, are you?
ELEKTRA: Et que t-importe qui je suis?	ELEKTRA: What does it matter to you who I am?
OREST: Tu dois être d'un sang très-proche de ces morts: Agamemnon et Orest.	ORESTES: You must be of kinship with the dead—Agamemnon and Orestes.
ELEKTRA: Très-proche? Je suis ce sang. Je suis le propre sang du roi des roi Agamemnon. Elektra même.	ELEKTRA: Kinship? I am of their blood. I am the true blood of the king of kings, Agamemnon. Elektra, even.
OREST: Non.	ORESTES: No.
ELEKTRA: Il me dément. Il souffle sur moi et veut me prendre mon nom.	ELEKTRA: He contradicts me. He breathes upon me and would take away my name.
OREST: Elektra!	ORESTES: Elektra!
ELEKTRA: Enfant sans père . . .	ELEKTRA: A child without a father . . .
OREST: Elektra!	ORESTES: Elektra!
ELEKTRA: Sans Frère, et ce gamin me raille!	ELEKTRA: Without a brother, and this boy jeers at me!
OREST: Elektra! Elektra! Vous, je vous vois? Je vous vois vraiment, toi? Est-ce ainsi que l'on t'a traitée? Peut-être . . . ils out osé te battre?	ORESTES: Elektra! Elektra! Do I see you? Do I really see you, yourself? Have they, then, treated you like this? Perhaps . . . they have dared to beat you?
ELEKTRA: Laisse-moi! Des yeux ne fouille pas ma robe.	ELEKTRA: Leave me! Remove your gaze from off my dress.
OREST: Ah! qu'on ils donc fait de tes nuits, les traitres? Oh! tes regards terribles!	ORESTES: Ah! what have they made your nights, the traitors? Oh! Your terrible looks!
ELEKTRA: Laisse-moi!	ELEKTRA: Leave me!
OREST: Oh! tes pauvres joues!	ORESTES: Oh! Your poor cheeks!
ELEKTRA: Entre là, tu verras ma soeur qui se garde Pour de joyeuses fêtes!	ELEKTRA: Go in there, you will see my sister who prepares For a joyous festival!
OREST: Ecoute, Elektra!	ORESTES: Listen, Elektra!
ELEKTRA: Que m'importe qui tu es? Qu'on me laisse en paix!	ELEKTRA: What is it to me who you are? Let me be in peace!
OREST: Le Temps presse, écoute moi, écoute! (à voix basse.) Orest vit! (Elektra se retourne vivement.) Tais-toi, ou sinon tu le trahis!	ORESTES: Time presses, listen to me, listen! (In a low voice:) Orestes lives! (Elektra turns round quickly.) Hush, or you betray him!
ELEKTRA: N'est-il pas libre? Où est-il?	ELEKTRA: Is he not free? Where is he?
OREST: Il est sain et sauf comme moi.	ORESTES: He is safe and sound, as I.
ELEKTRA: Sauve-le donc avant qu'ils ne l'étranglent.	ELEKTRA: Save him, then, before they slay him.
OREST: Par le corps de mon Père, Pour cela je viens!	ORESTES: By my father's body, It is that brings me here!
ELEKTRA: (frappée de son accent). Mais, qui donc es-tu? (Le vieux serviteur à la figure triste, suivi de trois autres serviteurs, sort silencieusement de la cour. Il se prosterne devant Orest, dont il baise les pieds, tandis que les autres embrassent et les mains et le bas de la robe d'Orest.)	ELEKTRA: (struck by the accent). But who, then, are you? (The old servant with the sad countenance, followed by three other servants, comes silently from the court. He prostrates himself before Orestes, whose feet he kisses, while the others embrace the hands and the skirts of Orestes' robe.)
ELEKTRA: (se maitrisant avec peine). Qui donc, qui donc es-tu? Ah! j'ai peur!	ELEKTRA: (recovering herself with difficulty). Who, then, are you? Ah! I am afraid!
OREST: (doucement). Les chiens du logis me reconnaissent . . . (plus haut.) Mais non ma propre soeur!	ORESTES: (softly). The dogs of the house knew me— (Louder:) But not my own sister!
ELEKTRA: (dans un cri). Orest! (Tout bas, tremblant.) Orest! Orest! Orest! Non, rien ne bouge. Oh! ton chèr regard que je le voie. Vision retrouvée, plus douce encor. Que le plus doux rève. Adorable, adoré visage d'un frère, C'est bien toi! Ah! ne va pas t'évanouir, Ah! reste devant mes yeux, Ne t'enfuis pas si ce n'est pour m'emportes. Avec toi ou pour me dire qu'il me faut mourir: La mort je l'aime, venant par toi! Orest! Orest! Orest! (Orest se penche vers Elektra, et ils s'embrassent.)	ELEKTRA: (with a cry). Orestes! (Very low, trembling:) Orestes! Orestes! Orestes! No, nothing moves. Ah! Your dear countenance which I behold, Your looks of old, sweeter than the sweetest dream. Beloved, adored countenance of a brother, It is you indeed! Ah! vanish not from me, Ah! remain before my eyes, Go not unless it is to take me With you or to tell me that I must die: I love death, coming to me through you! Orestes! Orestes! Orestes! (Orestes stoops towards Elektra, and they embrace.)
ELEKTRA: (avec violence). Non, tu ne dois pas m'étreindre! Va-t'en! J'ai honte devant toi. Que vois-tu quand tu me fixes? Je suis l'affreux cadavre de ta soeur, Mon pauvre enfant. Je sais tu trembles devant moi, Pourtant d'un très grand Roi j'étais fille. Je crois que j'étais belle: Quand je jetais le yeux sur mon miroir, Quelque chose me le disait tout bas. De même, lorsque, sur la blancheur de mon corps nu Se réflétaient les froids rayons nocturnes, Ainsi qu'en un lac pale. Mes cheveux étajent de ceux. Devant qui l'homme tremble. Ceux-ci, mêlés, souillés, informes, Me comprends-tu, Frère? Ce que j'avais, jadis, il fallut Que je l'abandonne. Ma pudeur fut immolée, vertu Meilleure que tout au monde, vertu Enveloppante et frèle, qui tisse autour Des femmes un rayonnant manteau d'argent Et protège leur âme chaste des	ELEKTRA: (violently). No, you must not embrace me! Go! I am ashamed before you. What do you behold in me? I am the awful shadow of your sister, My poor child. I know you tremble before me, Although I was the daughter of a mighty king. I believe that I was beautiful: When I look now within my mirror, What does it whisper to me? So, too, when the cold night rays upon the whiteness of my naked body reflect, As in a pale, calm lake. My hair was once like those Before whom all men tremble. These, knotted, soiled, disordered, Do you understand, my brother? What was mine I had to leave behind. My modesty was sacrificed, Virtue, better than all else, virtue Enveloping yet frail, which clothes All womanhood as with a silver mantle And protects their pure, white souls from stain, Do you understand, my brother? This sweet thing, I had to offer up in homage to my father.

souillures,
Comprends-tu, non Frère?
Cette douce chose, j'ai dû, au Père en faire hommage.
Crois-tu donc, qu'au temps ou mon corps
Enchantait mes yeux que ses plaintifs soupirs
Que ses gémissements ne troublaient pas mes nuits?
Ils sont jaloux les trépassés, et lui,
A la seule haine, la haine aux yeux creux il m'a fiancée.
De moi il fit prophétesse toujours inspirée,
Et rien n'est plus sorti de moi-même.
Non, plus rien que cris de vengeance.
Pourquoi tressailles-tu donc?
Parle-moi! Parle!
Pourquoi trembler de tout ton corps?

OREST: Il tremble tout ce corps,
Sachant quel chemin je le mène.

ELEKTRA: Tu vas agir? Tout seul?
Toi, pauvre enfant?

OREST: Ceux qui la veulent cette action . . .

ELEKTRA: Tu veux agir!

OREST: . . . Les Dieux viendront en aide à ma faiblesse.

ELEKTRA: Bien heureux qui peut agir!

OREST: Je veux agir, et je le veux sur l'heure.

ELEKTRA: L'action est comme un lit sur lequel l'âme repose.

OREST: Je veux, je veux agir!

ELEKTRA: Comme un lit de baume,
Ou notre âme repose,
Elle qui est la plaie,
Le brandon, la purulence et la flamme!

OREST: Je veux agir!

ELEKTRA: Bienheureux qui vient parfaire l'oeuvre,
Bienheureux qui l'attendit,
Bienheureux qui l'aperçoit!
Bienheureux qui connait l'homme,
Bienheureux qui l'approche.
Bienheureux qui lui déterre la hache
Bienheureux qui lui tient la torche;
Bienheureux, bienheureux qui lui ouvre la porte.
(Le Précepteur, d'Orest, vieillard robuste, aux veux étincelants, parait sur le seuil de la porte de la cour.)

LE PRÉCEPTEUR: (courant vivement à eux). Insensés, dont la bouche bavarde, Quand un souffle, un cri, un rien
Peuvent nous briser, nous et notre oeuvre?
(A Orest, avec précipitation:)
Elle t'attend.
Ses servantes sont à ta recherche.
Pas un homme au logis.
Orest!
(Orest se redresse, réprimant, un frisson.—La porte de la maison s'éclaire. Une servante parait, une torche à la main, derrière elle La Confidente. Elektra qui s'est rejetée en arrière, se tient dans l'ombre.—La Confidente s'incline devant les deux étrangers, et leur fait signe de la suivre, Orest et Le Précepteur vont pour entrer.—La servante fixe la torche à un anneau de fer, dans le montant de la porte.—Orest, pris d'un etourdissement, ferme un instant les yeux, Le Précepteur est tout contre lui, ils échangent un regard rapide, la porte se ferme sur eux.—Elektra seule, dans une horrible attente. Tête baissée, pareille à une bête fauve dans sa cage, elle passe et repasse devant la porte.)

ELEKTRA: (s'arrêtant tout à coup) Je n'ai pas eu le temps de donner la hache!
Ils sont partis et je n'ai pas en le temps
De donner la hache
Il n'est pas de Dieux au ciel!
(Encore un terrible moment d'attente.—Du loin, dans le palais, un cri aigu de Klytaimnestra.)

ELEKTRA: (hurlant comme un Demon). Frappe, frappe encor!
(Second cri dans le palais.—Elektra se place devant le seuil, adossée à la porte.—Chrysothémis et une foule de suivantes, sortent du corps de batiment de gauche.)

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Quelque chose a du se passer?

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Elle crie comme en dormant.

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: Il est entré des hommes.

TROISIÈME SERVANTE: Toutes les portes sont verrouillées!

DEUXIÈME SERVANTE: J'ai vu entrer des hommes, certes.

QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: (criant). Des assassins! Des assassins sont la!

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: (criant). Oh!

DEUXIÈME ET TROISIÈME SERVANTE: Quoi donc?

PREMIÈRE SERVANTE: Voyez-vous pas, là, quelqu'un se tient à la porte!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Mais c'est Elektra!
Oui, c'est bien Elektra! Elektra,
Pourquoi ne parles tu pas?

Do you believe that when my body
My eyes enchanted, his plaintive sighs
His groans did not disturb my nights.
The dead are jealous, and he
To a single hate—the hate with hollow eyes—affianced me.
He made me prophetess inspired,
And nothing else was heard from me,
But cries of vengeance—nothing else.
Why shudder, then, my brother?
Speak! Speak to me!
Why does your body tremble so?

ORESTES: It trembles, every member,
Knowing well the path before it.

ELEKTRA: You will act? You alone?
Poor child?

ORESTES: Those who wish this action . . .

ELEKTRA: You wish to act!

ORESTES: . . . The gods shall aid my weakness.

ELEKTRA: Thrice happy he who can act!

ORESTES: I wish to act and now.

ELEKTRA: Action is like a bed on which the soul reposes.

ORESTES: I wish, I wish to act.

ELEKTRA: Like a bed of balm,
Where our soul reposes,
She who is the sore,
The purulence and the flame!

ORESTES: I wish to act!

ELEKTRA: Happy he who comes to end the work,
Happy he who awaited it,
Happy he who saw it!
Happy he who knows the man,
Happy he who approaches him.
Happy he who unearths the axe,
Happy he who hands him the torch;
Happy, thrice happy he who opens for him the door!
(Orestes' Preceptor, a robust old man, with keen eyes, appears upon the threshold of the door of the court.)

THE PRECEPTOR: (running quickly to them).
You are fools to chatter like this,
When a breath, a cry, a trifle,
May undo us, ah, and our work!
(To Orestes, precipitately:)
She awaits you.
Her servants are seeking you, Orestes!
(Orestes gets up, repressing a shudder.—The door of the house is illumined. A maid appears, a torch in her hand, behind her The Companion.—Elektra, who has shrunk back, keeps in the shadow.—The Companion bows low before the two strangers, and makes a sign to them to follow her.—Orestes and The Preceptor move forward to enter.—The Maid fastens the torch in an iron ring in the facing of the door.—Orestes, suddenly seized with dizziness, closes his eyes for an instant.—The Preceptor is opposite him, they exchange a rapid glance, the door closes upon them.—Elektra, alone, waits in terrible anxiety. Her head lowered, like a wild beast in its cage, she walks up and down before the door.)

ELEKTRA: (stopping suddenly) I did not have the time to give him the axe!
They have gone and I did not have the time
To give him that axe,
There are no gods in heaven!
(Another moment of terrible, anxious waiting.)
(In the distance, within the palace, a sharp, piercing cry from Klytaimnestra.)

ELEKTRA: (screaming like a demon). Strike, strike again!
(Another cry within the palace.)
(Elektra places herself before the threshold, leaning against the door.)
(Chrysothemis and a crowd of servants come out of the building at left.)

CHRYSOTHEMIS: What is happening?

FIRST MAID: She screams as in her sleep.

SECOND MAID: Men have gone in.

THIRD MAID: All the doors are locked!

SECOND MAID: I saw men go in, believe me.

FOURTH MAID: (shouting). Assassins! Assassins are there!

FIRST MAID: (crying). Oh!

SECOND AND THIRD MAID: What then?

FIRST MAID: Look! there's some one at the door!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: It's Elektra.
Yes, Elektra! Elektra!
Why do you not speak?

PREMIÈRE et DEUXIÈME SERVANTES: Elektra! Elektra! Pourquoi ne parles tu pas?	FIRST AND SECOND MAID: Elektra! Elektra! Why do you not speak?
TROISIÈME et QUATRIÈME SERVANTES: Elektra! Elektra!	THIRD AND FOURTH MAID: Elektra! Elektra!
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: (seule). Je veux dehors chercher des hommes! (Elle sort en courant par la droite.)	FOURTH MAID: (alone). I must go and look for men! (She runs out at right.)
CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Ouvre nous la porte, Elektra!	CHRYSOTHEMIS: Open the door for us, Elektra!
SIX SERVANTES: Elektra, ouvra la porte!	SIX MAIDS: Elektra, open the door!
CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Elektra!	CHRYSOTHEMIS: Elektra!
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: (revenant). Arrière! Aegisth! Arrière! Vite, en nos chambres, vite! Aegisth viene par ici.	FOURTH MAID: (returning). Stand Back! Aegisthes! Back! Quick, to your rooms! Here Aegisthes comes.
SIX SERVANTES: Aegisth!	SIX MAIDS: Aegisthes!
I, I, III, SERVANTE: Aegisth!	FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD MAID: Aegisthes!
QUATRIÈME SERVANTE: Et s'il nous trouve, si quelque chose s'est passé dedans, il nous tueras!	FOURTH MAID: And if he finds us here, if anything has happened He will slay us.
CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Arrière!	CHRYSOTHEMIS: Get back!
I, II, III SERVANTE: Arrière!	FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD MAID: Back!
SIX SERVANTES: Arrière! (Elles disparaissent dans le maison, à gauche.)	SIX MAIDS: Back! (They disappear into the house, at left.)
I, II, III SERVANTE: Arrière! (Aegisth entre, de droite, par la porte de la cour.)	FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD MAID: Back! (Aegisthes enters, at right, through the door of the court.)
AEGISTH: (s'arrétant sur la seuil). Des torches! Des torches! Pour m'éclairer, personne? Pas un seul coquin ici ne remue? Est-ce là comme on sert, canailles? (Elektra sort la torche de l'anneau, déscend à sa rencontre en courant, et s'incline devant lui.—Aegisth recule, éffrayé par cette apparition confuse qu'il entrevoit à la lueur tremblante de la torche.)	AEGISTHES: (stopping short on the threshold). Torches there! Torches! To light me! Not even a varlet stirs! Is that how they serve, the rascals! (Elektra takes the torch from the ring, descends to meet him running, and bows low before him.) (Aegisthes shirks back, startled by the confused apparition which he discerns by the trembling light of the torch.)
AEGISTH: Ah! quelle est donc cette éffrayante femme? J'ai fait defense à tout étranger, Quel qu'il soit, de s'approcher de moi! (Il la reconnait:) Toi! Toi? Qui donc à ma rencontre t'envoie?	AEGISTHES: Ah! who is this frightful woman? I forbade them to admit a stranger, Whoever you are, do not approach! (he recognizes her.) You! You? Who sent you to meet me?
ELEKTRA: Faut-il que j'éclaire?	ELEKTRA: Shall I light you?
AEGISTH: Mais, j'y pense la nouvelle t'intéresse fort. Où sont-ils donc ces étrangers Qui disent qu'Orest ést mort?	AEGISTHES: But, I think the news must greatly interest you. Who are these two strangers Who say Orestes is dead?
ELEKTRA: Entre. Une aimable hotesse les a reçus, Ils se divertissent avec elle.	ELEKTRA: Enter. An aimable hostess has received them, They are now engaged with her.
AEGISTH: Est-il vrai qu'ils annoncent, Qu'Orest est mort, bien mort? Et de façon qu'on n'en saurait douter?	AEGISTHES: Is it true what they announce, That Orestes is really dead? In such a way that no doubt remains?
ELEKTRA: O Maitre ce n'est pas qu'en paroles, Qu'ils affirment ce qu'ils disent, Devant leur preuves nul doute n'est possible.	ELEKTRA: O Master, it is not by word alone That they affirm their speech, With such proofs as theirs no doubt is possible.
AEGISTH: Qu'y a-t-il dans ta voix? Et que t'arrive-t-il pour me parler ainsi? Pourquoi chancelles-tu ainsi avec la torche?	AEGISTHES: What is there in your voice? What has happened that makes you speak like this? Why do you waver with the torch?
ELEKTRA: C'est facile à comprendre, C'est qu'à present plus sage, plus prudente, Au parti du plus fort je me range. Permets que j'éclaire ici ta marche.	ELEKTRA: It is easy to understand, Simply that, being now wiser and more prudent, I take the side of the strongest party. Allow me to light thy steps.
AEGISTH: (un peu hésitant). Jusqu'à la porte. (Elektra, l'enveloppe d'une danse inquietante, puis s'incline profondement tout à coup.) Que danses-tu? Prends garde!	AEGISTHES: (hesitating a little). To the door. (Elektra envelopes him with a disquieting dance, then suddenly bows low before him.) Why do you dance? Take care!
ELEKTRA: Voici les marches, ne tombe pas!	ELEKTRA: Here's the stairs, don't fall!
AEGISTH: (sur le pas de la porte). D'où vient que tout est sombre? Et qui sont ces gens?	AEGISTHES: (on the threshold). Why is it so dark? And who are these people?
ELEKTRA: Ceux-là mêmes qui en personne de sirent te saluer, Maitre. Et moi, qui souvent par mon importune présence t'exasperai, je saurai bien cette fois. Quand il le faudra, Maitre, rentre dans l'ombre. (Aegisth entre dans la maison. Silence.—Bruit à l'intérieur.)	ELEKTRA: Those who wish to salute you in person, Master. And I, who often by my awkward presence, exasperated you, now know When the Master must enter within the shadow. (Aegisthes enters the house.—Silence.—Noise within.)
AEGISTH: (apparait à une petite fenêtre dont il arrache le rideau). A l'aide! Au meurtre! Au meurtre! À moi! à moi! N'est-il personne qui m'entende? (On l'enlève.)	AEGISTHES: (appearing at a small window, the curtain of which he tears down). Help! Murder! Murder! Help! Help! Does no one hear me? (He is dragged away.)
ELEKTRA: (haut dressée). Agamemnon t'entend! (Le visage d'Aegisth apparait encore une fois à la fenêtre.)	ELEKTRA: (raising herself high). Agamemnon hears you. (Aegisthes' face appears again at the window.)
AEGISTH: Ah! malheur! (Il est emporté.—Elektra, debout face à la maison, halète horriblement—Les femmes accourent de gauche, Chrysothémis est au milieu d'elles. Comme inconscientes, elles se précipitent vers la porte de la cour, et la, soudain s'arrètent, et se retournent.)	AEGISTHES: Ah! misfortune! (He is borne away.—Elektra, standing facing the door, pants horribly.—Women rush in from the left, Chrysothemis amongst them.—As if bewildered, they hurl themselves towards the door of the court, then suddenly they stop and turn around.)
CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Elektra, Soeur! Viens avec nous! Oh! viens avec nous! C'est notre Frère qui est là! Oui, c'est Orest qui nous delivre!	CHRYSOTHEMIS: Elektra! Sister! Come with us! It is our brother who is there! Yes, it is Orestes who delivers us!
HOMMES: (dans la maison). Orest! Orest!	MEN: (in the house). Orestes! Orestes!

DEX VOIX DERRIÈRE LA SCENE:
Orest!
(Tumulte dans la maison, éclats de voix parmi lesquels on distingue de loin l'appel des choeurs: "Orest!")

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Viens! Il est dans la salle,
Tous autour de lui sont là,
Et baisent ses genoux,
Ceux qui pour Aegisth cachaient leur haine,
Ont assailli les partisans du traitre,
Et partout, dans chaque cour, gisent des cadavres,
Même ceux qui vivent sont couverts de sang,
Et criblés de blessures.
(Le tumulte de la bataille, de la bataille mortelle entre les esclaves partisans d'Orest et les tenants d'Aegisth s'est etendu peu à peu aux cours intérieures, avec lesquelles, à droite, communique la porte de la cour.)

CHOEUR: (derrière la scène.—Femmes et hommes). Orest! Orest!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Mais ils sont en joie! en joie!
Tous s'embrassent, crient de joie.
(Tumulte croissant au dehors, qui lorsqu'Elektra commencera, s'éteignant de plus en plus, à droite et au fond, du côté des cours éxtérieures. Les femmes sont sorties en courant.)

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Mille torches, s'embrasent et brillent, Entends-tu? Entends-tu?
(Chrysothémis seule est restée, lumière vient du dehors.)
Ah! n'entends-tu pas?

FEMMES et HOMMES: (plus loin). Orest! Orest!

ELEKTRA: (accroupie sur le scull). Si je n'entends pas?
Si je n'entends pas la musique!
Elle sort de moi-même.
Ces mille porteurs de torches dont j'entends les pas dont j'entends sonner par myriades les pas.
Tout outour de moi, oh! douce harmonie,
Tous, je le sais, m'attendent;
Je sais bien ce que tous attendent.
Et que je dois mener leur danse.
Et je ne puis; un Océan, un prodigieux
Un incommensurable Océan enlize tous mes membres
En ses ondes, me lever m'est impossible!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: N'entends-tu donc pas?
Ils le portent tous, le portent sur leurs mains tromphantes!
(Elle se lève.)

VOICES BEHIND THE SCENES:
Orestes!
(Tumult in the house; noise of voices, amongst which is distinguished the distant call of the Chorus: "Orestes!")

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Come! He is in the hall,
All around him are gathered,
Embracing his knees.
Those who hid their hate of Aegisthes,
Have attacked the traitor's partisans,
And everywhere, in each court, lie corpses,
Even those who live are covered with blood
And marked by many wounds.
(The tumult of battle, a mortal struggle between the slaves who side with Orestes and those who remain faithful to Aegisthes, has gradually spread to the interior courts, with which, at right, the door of the court communicates.)

CHORUS: (behind the scenes—men and women). Orestes! Orestes!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Their joy is supreme!
They all embrace each other, shouting with joy.
(Increasing tumult within, which, when Elektra begins, grows gradually fainter, to right and at rear, on the side of the exterior courts.—The women have rushed out.)

CHRYSOTHEMIS: A thousand torches burn and intermingle;
Do you hear? Do you hear?
(Chrysothemis, alone, remains.—Light comes from without.)
Ah! do you not hear?

WOMEN and MEN: (farther away). Orestes! Orestes!

ELEKTRA: (crouched on the threshold). If I do not hear?
If I do not hear the music,
It comes from me, myself.
These thousand torch bearers whose steps I hear,
Whose myriad steps I hear re-echoing
All around me, O sweet harmony,
All, I know await me;
Full well I know why they await me:
I must lead them in the dance.
And I cannot. A vast ocean,
Immeasurable, surrounds my body,
I cannot rise from it!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Do you not hear?
They all bear him in their triumphant arms!
(She rises.)

ELEKTRA: (elle se parle à elle-même, sans preter attention à Chrysothémis). Nous sommes chez les Dieux, Nous, les tacherons.
(Avec enthousiasme:)
Nos corps sont transpercés par la glaive d'or des Dieux,
Mias toute leur gloire ce n'est pas trop pour nous!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Toutes figures sont transformés.
On voit briller dans les yeux
Sur les joues, de douces larmes.
Tout le monde pleure.
N'entends-tu pas?

ELEKTRA: Ce sont les ténèbres que j'ai semées, je récolte joie sur joie.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Ah! que les Dieux sont bons!

ELEKTRA: J'étais un noir cadavre parmi les vivants,
Et à cette heure je suis le feu de la vie
Et ma flamme dévore les noires ténèbres du monde.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Une autre vie commence pour nous,
Pour tous les hommes.
Ce sont les Dieux dans leur bonté infinie qui nous l'accordent.

ELEKTRA: Mon visage semble pale plus que le pale visage de la lune.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Qui nous a jamais aimées?

ELEKTRA: Celui qui me regarde on doit mourir soudain
Ou si-non defaille de joie.

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Qui nous a jamais aimées?

ELEKTRA: Voit-on pas mon visage?
Voit-on pas la flamme qui des moi s'exhale?

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Notre cher Frère est là, et l'Amour
Coule sur nous comme l'huile et la myrrhe.
C'est notre Maitre! Qui peut vivre sans l'Amour?

ELEKTRA: Ah! L'Amour nous tue,
Mais personne ne s'en va sans connaitre l'Amour!

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Elektra, je veux au-près du Frère aller!
(Elektra descend du seuil, Elle rejeté sa tête en arrière comme une menace. Elle plie les genoux, étend les bras, et ses pas sont ceux d'une danse sans nom.—Chrysothémis reparait à la porte, derrière elle des torches, la foule, visages l'hommes et de femmes.)

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: Elektra!
(Elektra s'arrète, la regarde fixement.)

ELEKTRA: (speaking to herself, without paying attention to Chrysothemis). We are with the Gods.
(With enthusiasm:)
Our bodies are transfixed by the golden sword of the Gods,
But all their glory is not too much for us!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: All faces are transformed.
In each eye, upon each cheek,
The happy tears we see.
All weep with joy.
Do you hear?

ELEKTRA: Shadows I have sown,
I reap now joy upon joy.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Ah! how good the Gods are!

ELEKTRA: I was a corpse amid the living,
And now I am the fire of life,
And my flame devours the blackness of the world.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Another life begins for us,
For all men here.
It is the Gods in their infinite goodness,
Who have granted it to us.

ELEKTRA: My countenance seems paler than the pale face of the moon.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Who has always loved us?

ELEKTRA: He who sees me must either die suddenly
Or if not, faint with joy.

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Who has always loved us?

ELEKTRA: Don't you see my countenance?
Don't you see the flame which I exhale?

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Our dear brother is there, and love
Flows over us as oil and myrrh.
He is our Lord! Who can live without love?

ELEKTRA: Ah! Love kills us,
But none can live without knowing love!

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Elektra, I must go to our brother!
(Elektra descends from the threshold. She has thrown back her head like a bachanal. She bends her knees, extends her arms and her steps are those of some unknown dance.—Chrysothemis re-appears at the door; behind her are torch bearers, a crowd of men and women.)

CHRYSOTHEMIS: Elektra!
(Elektra stops, looks at her fixedly.)

ELEKTRA: Tais toi et danse!
Tous, que tous ici viennent!
Formez la ronde!
Le porte le faix du bonheur
Et je danse devant vous.
Qui est heureux autant que nous m'imite:
Se taise et danse . . .
(Elle fait encore quelque pas d'une danse triomphale.—Elektra s'écroule.—Chrysothémis court vers elle.—Elektra est couchée, toute raide.)

CHRYSOTHÉMIS: (court à la porte de la maison et frappe). Orest! Orest!
(Un silence.)

FIN.

ELEKTRA: Be silent and dance!
All who come here!
Form the ring!
I bear the burden of happiness,
And I dance before you.
Let he who is as happy as we are, imitate me:
Be silent and dance!
(She again dances a few steps in a triumphant dance.—Elektra falls prone.—Chrysothemis runs to her.—Elektra lies, prostrate and rigid.)

CHRYSOTHEMIS: (rushing to the door of the house and knocking). Orestes! Orestes!
(Silence.)

END.

Der Rosenkavalier (1911)

The Rose-Bearer

MUSIC BY RICHARD STRAUSS ■ LIBRETTO BY HUGO VON HOFMANNSTHAL

This three-act "comedy for music," set to a libretto by Hugo von Hofmannsthal, premiered at the Königliches Opernhaus in Dresden on January 26, 1911. The place is Vienna during the reign of the Empress Maria Theresa. The Feldmarschallin, Princess of Werdenberg, trysts with her young lover, Count Octavian Rofrano (performed by a mezzo-soprano), while her husband is away. Her cousin Baron Ochs von Lerchenau pays an unexpected visit to ask her help with his betrothal to Sophie, Herr von Faninal's daughter. Ochs enters the bedroom before Octavian, dressed in some the Marschallin's clothes, can get away. The Baron flirts with "her" while asking the Marschallin if she can recommend someone to carry the traditional silver rose to his beloved. The Marschallin names Count Octavian and shows the Baron his picture. Though the chambermaid resembles the portrait, Ochs decides that she must be a bastard sister. The Marschallin's retainers enter. Ochs discusses his wedding plans with the notary and hires Valzacchi and Annina to find out whatever they can about Sophie. Finally alone, the Marschallin bemoans her age and that Octavian will leave her for someone younger. Octavian assures her of his love, but after he leaves she realizes they haven't even kissed good-bye. At Herr von Faninal's palace, Sophie eagerly awaits the Rosenkavalier, with whom she immediately falls in love. Ochs and Sophie's father, Faninal, negotiates the marriage contract; Octavian swears that the marriage will never happen. Ochs' two spies come upon Octavian and Sophie. Octavian challenges Ochs to a duel and wounds him. Sophie refuses to marry him, and Octavian decides to hire Valzacchi and Annina himself. Sophie gives Ochs a note from the Marschallin's chambermaid, "Mariandel," which says that she will meet him on the following night. In a private room in a tavern, the spies are laying a trap for Ochs. Octavian, dressed in women's clothing, pays them and leaves, returning arm-in-arm with Ochs, who settles in for an evening to remember. But "Mariandel" still reminds him of Octavian. Annina, dressed and veiled in mourning attire, appears, claiming that Ochs is her husband and has deserted her. Valzacchi, the innkeeper and the waiters shout their encouragement as children run in yelling "Papa." A police commissar investigates the noise. Ochs protests that he is merely trying to enjoy dinner with Sophie, his betrothed. Faninal and Sophie, who have been notified by Valzacchi, arrive and are shocked to find the Baron with "Mariandel." The Marschallin enters and sends the commissar, a former employee of her husband, away, saying that the affair is "just a farce and nothing more." On hearing this, Sophie wonders if this is how Octavian feels about her. The Marschallin brings Sophie and Octavian together; they sing of their love for each other as she adds her voice to theirs in a magnificent trio. At last she accepts that her youth is gone forever. She takes Faninal's arm and invites everyone to return to Vienna in her coach.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG

Das Schlafzimmer der Feldmarschallin. Links im Alkoven das grosse zeltförmige Himmelbett. Neben dem Bett ein dreiteiliger chinesischer Wandschirm, hinter dem Kleider liegen. Ferner ein kleines Tischchen und ein paar Sitzmöbel. Auf einem Fauteuil links liegt ein Degen in der Scheide. Rechts grosse Flügeltüren in das Vorzimme. In der Mitte kaum sichtbar kleine Türe in die Wand eingelassen. Sonst keine Türen. In dem Alkoven rechts steht ein Frisiertisch und ein paar Sessel an der Wand. Fauteuils und zwei kleine Sofas. Die Vorhänge des Bettes sind zurückgeschlagen. Octavian kniet auf einem Schemel vor dem Sofa links und hält die Feldmarschallin, die in der Sofaecke liegt, halb umschlungen. Man sieht ihr Gesicht nicht, sondern nur ihre sehr schöne Hand und den Arm, von dem das Spitzenhemd abfällt. Durch das halbgeöffnete Fenster strömt die helle Morgensonne herein. Man hört im Garten Vöglein singen.

■ ACT I

The bedroom of the Princess. In the alcove to the left the large, tent-shaped fourposter. Next the bed a threefold screen, behind which clothes are scattered to the ground. A small table, chairs, etc. To the right, folding doors leading to the bedchamber. In the center, scarcely visible, a little door let into the wall. No other doors. Between the alcove and the small door, a toilet table and some armchairs against the wall. The curtains of the bed are half drawn. Through the half-open window the morning sun streams in. From the garden sounds the song of birds. Octavian kneels on a footstool, half embracing the princess who is reclining in the bed. Her face is hidden, only her beautiful hand is seen, and her arm peeping from out the sleeve of her night gown of lace.

OCTAVIAN: Wie du warst!
Wie du bist!
Das weiss niemand, das ahnt keiner!

MARSCHALLIN: (richtet sich in den Kissen auf): Beklagt Er sich über das, Quinquin?
Möcht' Er, dass viele das wüssten?

OCTAVIAN: (feurig): Engel! Nein!
Selig bin ich,
Dass ich der Einzige bin, der weiss, wie du bist.
Keiner ahnt es! Niemand weiss es!
Du, du—was heisst das "Du"? Was "du und ich"?
Hat denn das einen Sinn?
Das sind Wörter, blosse Wörter, nicht? Du sag'!
Aber dennoch: Es ist etwas in ihnen,

OCTAVIAN: (rapturously): All your soul, all your heart—
Who can measure their perfections?

PRINCESS: Why grieve so sorely at that, Mignon,
Should they be known on the housetops?

OCTAVIAN: (passionately): Angel!
No!
Blessed am I that it is I, I alone who know their secrets.
Who can measure such perfection?
You, You, You! What does this mean, "You'?
That "You and I,"
Have they meaning or sense?—
They are merely empty nothings.
What? O say.

ein Schwindeln, ein Ziehen, ein Sehnen und Drängen, ein Schmachten und Brennen: Wie jetzt meine Hand zu deiner Hand kommt, Das Zudirwollen, das Dichumklammern, das bin ich, das will zu dir; aber das Ich vergeht in dem Du . . . Ich bin dein Bub', aber wenn mir dann Hören und Sehen vergeht— wo ist dann dein Bub?	Yet have they something, Yet a something is in them That craved, that urged, strived, That fainted and yearned. To yours my hand thus has found: And this quest for you and this clinging— That am I, who seek you out Mingling with you and lost in that "You." I am your Boy; but when reft of all senses I lie in your arms. Where then is your Boy?
MARSCHALLIN: (leise): Du bist mein Bub', du bist mein Schatz! (Sehr innig). Ich hab' dich ieb!	PRINCESS: You are my Boy. You are my love. I love you so.
OCTAVIAN: (fährt auf): Warum ist Tag? Ich will nicht den Tag! Für was ist der Tag! Da haben dich alle! Finster soll sein! (Er stürzt ans Fenster, schliesst es und zieht die Vorhänge zu. Man hört von fern ein leises Klingeln. Marschallin lacht leise). Lachst du mich aus?	OCTAVIAN: Why dawns the day? How hateful is day. What avails the day? Then all men can see you. Let it be dark. (He rushes to the window and closes it. A bell is heard ringing softly in the distance. The Princess smiles to herself.) Are you smiling at me?
MARSCHALLIN: (zärtlich): Lach' ich dich aus?	PRINCESS: I smile at you?
OCTAVIAN: Engel!	OCTAVIAN: Angel!
MARSCHALLIN: Schatz du, mein junger Schatz! .. (Wieder ein Leises Klingeln.) Horch!	PRINCESS: Dearest, my dearest Boy! (Bell again.) Listen!
OCTAVIAN: Ich will nicht.	OCTAVIAN: I will not!
MARSCHALLIN: Still, pass auf!	PRINCESS: Hush, beloved!
OCTAVIAN: Ich will nichts hören! Was wird's denn sein? (Das Klingeln näher.) Sind's leicht Laufer mit Briefen und Komplimenten? Vom Saurau, vom Hartig, vom portugieser Envoyé? Hier kommt mir keiner herein. Hier bin ich der Herr! (Die kleine Tür in der Mitte geht auf und ein kleiner Neger in Gelb, behängt mit silbernen Schellen, ein Präsentierbrett mit der Schokolade tragend, trippelt über die Schwelle. Die Tür hinter dem Neger wird von unsichtbaren Händen geschlossen.)	OCTAVIAN: I am deaf and blind. What can it be? (The tinkling grows more distinct.) Is it couriers with letters and declarations? From Sauvan and Hartig or the Portuguese Ambassador? I hold the door against the world. I am master here. (The little door in the center is opened and a small black boy in yellow, with silver bells, carrying a silver salver with chocolate, enters with mincing steps. The door is closed behind him by unseen hands. Octavian slips behind the screen.)
MARSCHALLIN: Schnell, da versteck' Er sich! Das Frühstück ist's. (Octavian gleitet hinter den vorderen Wandschirm):	PRINCESS: Quick! Go conceal yourself. My chocolate!
MARSCHALLIN: Schmeiss' Er doch Seinen Degen hinters Bett. (Octavian fährt nach dem Degen und versteckt ihn): (Marschallin: verschwindet hinter den Battvorhängen, die sie fallen lässt.) (Der Kleine Neger stellt das Servierbrett auf das kleine Tischchen, schiebt dieses nach vorne, neben das linksstehende Sofa, verneigt sich dann tief gegen das Bett, die kleinen Arme über die Brust gekreutzt. Dann tanzt er zierlich nach rückwärts, immer das Gesicht dem Bette zugewandt. An der Tür verneigt er sich nochmals und verschwindet). (Marschallin tritt swischen den Bettivorhängen hervor. Sie hat einen leichten mit Pelz verbrämten Mantel umgeschlagen). (Octavian kommt zwischen der Mauer und dem Wandschirm hervor).	PRINCESS: Foolish Boy! Hide your sword and do not stir! (Octavian reaches after the sword and hides it.) (The boy puts the salver on one of the small tables, moves it to the front of the stage and places the sofa next to it, bows to the Princess with his hands crossed over his breast, then dances away backward with his face always towards his mistress; at the door he bows again and disappears.) (The Princess appears from behind the curtains of the bed. She has wrapped round her a light dressing gown edged with fur.) (Octavian reappears from behind the screen.)
MARSCHALLIN: Er Katzenkopf, Er Unvorsichtiger! Lässt man in einer Dame Schlafzimmer seinen Degen herumliegen? Hat Er keine besseren Gepflogenheiten?	PRINCESS: You featherhead! You careless Good for nothing! Is it allowed to leave a sword lying in the room of a lady of fashion? Where have you learned to show such lack of breeding?
OCTAVIAN: Wenn Ihr zu dumm ist, wie ich mich benehm', und wenn Ihr abgeht, dass ich kein Geübter in solchem Sachen bin, dann weiss ich überhaupt nicht, was Sie an mir hat!	OCTAVIAN: Well, if my breeding be not to your taste, If it displeases you that in scenes like this my skill is far to seek Then truly it were better to bid you farewell.
MARSCHALLIN: (zärtlich, auf dem Sofa): Philosophier' Er nicht, Herr Schatz, und komm Er her. Jetzt wird gefrühstückt. Jedes Ding hat seine Zeit.	PRINCESS: (tenderly from the sofa): Cease your philosophizing, Sir, and come to me. Now let us eat breakfast. Everything in its own time. (Octavian seats himself close to her. They breakfast. He puts his head on her lap; she strokes his hair.)
OCTAVIAN: (setzt sich dicht neben sie. Sie frühstücken sehr zärtlich. Octavian legt sein Gesicht auf ihr Knie. Sie streichelt sein Haar. Er blickt zu ihr auf. Leise): Marie Theres'!	OCTAVIAN: Marie Theres'!
MARSCHALLIN: Octavian!	PRINCESS: Octavian!
OCTAVIAN: Bichette!	OCTAVIAN: Bichette!
MARSCHALLIN: Quinquin!	PRINCESS: Mignon!
OCTAVIAN: Mein Schatz!	OCTAVIAN: Beloved.
MARSCHALLIN: Mein Bub'! (Sie früstücken weiter.)	PRINCESS: My Boy!
OCTAVIAN: (lustig): Der Feldmarschall sitzt im krowatischen Wald und jagt auf Bären und Luchsen. Und ich, ich setz' hier, ich junges Blut, und jag' auf was? Ich hab' ein Glück, ich hab' ein Glück!	OCTAVIAN: The Field Marshal stays in far Croatian wilds, hunting for brown bears and black boars, And I in the flower of my youth, stay here, hunting for what? I am happy! I am happy!
MARSCHALLIN: (indem ein Schatten über ihr Gesicht fliegt): Lass Er den Feldmarschall in Ruh'! Mir hat von ihm geträumt.	PRINCESS: (a shadow passing over her face): But, let the Marshal be in peace. I dreamed a dream of him this night.
OCTAVIAN: Heut nacht hat dir von ihm deträumt? Heut Nacht?	OCTAVIAN: This night you dreamed a dream of him? This night?
MARSCHALLIN: Ich schaff' mir meine Träume nicht an.	PRINCESS: My dreams are not mine to command.
OCTAVIAN: Heut Nacht hat dir von deinem Mann geträumt? Heut Nacht?	OCTAVIAN: You dreamed a dream this very night of him? The Prince?
MARSCHALLIN: Mach' Er nicht solche Augen. Ich kann nichts dafür. Er war auf einmal wieder zu Haus.	PRINCESS: Why look so sad and angry? It is no fault of mine . . . My husband was at home again.

OCTAVIAN: (leise): Der Feldmarschall?	OCTAVIAN: Your husband here?
MARSCHALLIN: Es war ein Lärm im Hof von Pferd' und Leut' und er war da, Vor Schreck war ich auf einmal wach, nein, schau' nur, schau' nur, wie kindisch ich bin: ich hör' noch immer den Rumor im Hof. Ich bring's nicht aus dem Ohr. Hörst du leicht auch was?	PRINCESS: There was a noise outside of horse and man—and he was here. For fright I started up in haste— Now look you, Now look what a child I am—still I can hear it, all the noise without. It is a ringing in my ears, do you not hear it?
OCTAVIAN: Ja freilich hör' ich was, aber muss es denn dein Mann sein!? Denk' dir doch, wo der ist: im Raitzenland, noch hinterwärts von Esseg.	OCTAVIAN: Yes, truly, I hear sounds: but why think it must be your husband? Think just of where he's hunting—far away, At Esseg or a score of leagues beyond.
MARSCHALLIN: Ist das sicher sehr weit? Na, dann wird's halt was anders sein. Dann ist's ja gut.	PRINCESS: Is he so far, do you think?
OCTAVIAN: Du schaust so ängstlich drein, Theres!	OCTAVIAN: Then it is something else we hear, and all is well, You look so full of fear, Theres'.
MARSCHALLIN: Weiss Er, Quinquin—wenn es auch weit ist— Der Feldmarschall ist halt sehr geschwind. Einmal— (Sie stockt.)	PRINCESS: But see, Mignon, though it be distant, The Prince at times can travel wondrous fast; for once—
OCTAVIAN: (eifersüchtig): Was war einmal? Was war einmal? Was war einmal? Bichette! Bichette! Was war einmal?	OCTAVIAN: What did he, once? What did he, once? What did he, once? Bichette, Bichette! What did he, once?
MARSCHALLIN: Ach sei Er gut, Er muss nicht alles wissen.	PRINCESS: Oh, let him be—why should I tell you all things?
OCTAVIAN: (wirft sich verzweifelt aufs Sofa rechts): So spielt Sie sich mit mir! Ich bin ein unglücklicher Mensch!	OCTAVIAN: See how she flouts my love! (Throws himself in despair on to the sofa.) Why will you drive me to despair?
MARSCHALLIN: (horcht): Jetzt trotz' Er nicht. Jetzt gilt's: es ist der Feldmarschall. Wenn es ein Fremder wär', so wär der Lärm da draussen in meinen Vorzimmer. Es muss mein Mann sein, der durch die Garderob' herein will Und mit den Lakaien disputiert. Quinquin, es ist mein Mann! (Octavian fährt nach seinem Degen und läuft gegen rechts). Nicht dort, dort ist das Vorzimmer. Da sitzen meine Lieferanten und ein halbes Dutzend Lakaien. Da! (Octavian läuft hinüber zur kleinen Türe). Zu spä! Sie sind schon in der Garderob'! Jetzt bleibt nur eins! Versteck' Er sich! (Nacht einer kurzen Pause der Ratlosigkeit.) Dort!	PRINCESS: Command yourself. It is true. It is the Prince indeed. For were a stranger here, the noise would surely be there in the antechamber. It is my husband. I hear his footsteps in the closet. In vain the lackeys bar his way. Mignon, it is the Prince. (Octavian draws his sword and runs to the right.) Not there, there is the antechamber. There, sure, a crowd with wares to offer, and a score of lackeys are in waiting. There! (Points to the small door. Octavian runs in that direction.) Too late! I hear them in the closet now. There's but one chance. Conceal yourself! (After a brief pause of helplessness.) There!
OCTAVIAN: Ich spring' ihm in den Weg! Ich bleib' bei dir.	OCTAVIAN: I will not let him pass: I stay with you!
MARSCHALLIN: Dort hinters Bett! Dort in der Vorhäng! Und rühr' dich nicht!	PRINCESS: There—by the bed—there in the curtains! And do not move!
OCTAVIAN: (zögernd): Wenn er mich dort erwischt, was wird aus dir, Theres'?	OCTAVIAN: (hesitating): Should I be caught, what a fate is yours, Theres'!
MARSCHALLIN: (flehend): Versteck' Er sich, mein Schatz.	PRINCESS: (pleading): Conceal yourself, beloved. (Stamping her foot impatiently.)
OCTAVIAN: (beim Wandschirm): Theres! (Er verschwindet zwischen dem Wandschirm und der Alkovenwand.)	OCTAVIAN: (by the screen): Theres'—
MARSCHALLIN: (ungeduldig aufstampfend): Sei Er ganz still! (Mit blitzenden Augen.) Das möcht' ich sehn, Ob einer sich dort hinüber traut, wenn ich hier steh'. Ich bin kein napolitanischer General: wo ich steh', steh' ich. Sind brave Kerl'n, meine Lakaien, wollen ihn nich herein lassen, sagen, dass ich schlaf'. Sehr brave Kerl'n! (Aufhorchend.) Die Stimm'! Das ist ja gar nicht die Stimm' vom Feldmarschall! Sie sagen "Herr Baron" zu ihm! Das ist ein Fremder. (Lustig.) Quinquin, es ist ein Besuch. (Sie lacht.) Fahr' Er schnell in seine Kleider, aber bleib' Er versteckt, dass die Lakaien Ihn nicht seh'n. Die blöde grosse Stimm' müsste ich doch kennen. Wer ist denn das? Herrgott, das ist der Ochs. Das ist mein Vetter, der Lerchenau, der Ochs auf Lerchenau, Was will denn der? Jesus Maria! (Sie muss lachen.) Quinquin, hört Er, Quinquin, erinnert Er sich nicht? Vor fünf oder sechs Tagen—den Brief— Wir sind im Wagen gesessen, und einen Brief haben sie mir an den Wagenschlag gebracht. Das war der Brief vom Ochs. Und ich hab' keine Ahnung, was drin gestanden ist. (Lacht.) Daran ist Er allein schuld, Quinquin!	PRINCESS: Quick now, be still! Now let me see who dares to stir one inch towards the door While I am here. I'm no faint-hearted Italian brigadier. Where I stand, stand I. (She walks energetically towards the little door and listens.) They're worthy fellows, keeping guard outside, vowing they'll not make way for him, Vowing I sleep—most worthy fellows— (The noise in the anteroom grows louder.) That voice (Listens.) That is not, truly, no, it is not my husband's voice. It is Baron that they're calling him: It is a stranger! (Laughing.) Mignon, it is someone else. Now escape will be quite easy. But remain in hiding, That the footmen do not see you. That loutish, foolish voice, surely I know it too well— Mon Dieu! It is Ochs, I do protest, my cousin of Lerchenau. It is Ochs of Lerchenau. What can he seek? But stay: I have it— (Bursts into a laugh.) Listen, Mignon, you cannot have forgot (Going a few steps towards the left.) The league-long letter that they brought When I was in my coach (you were with me)— Some five days since, starting for Court, and I scarcely looked at it. That letter came from Ochs. And now I have no inkling what my Cousin said. See to what evil ways, Mignon, you lead me!

STIMME DES HAUSHOFMEISTERS: (draussen): Belieben Euer Gnaden in der Galerie zu warten! (Die kleine rückwärtige Türe wird während des Folgenden mehrmals bis zum Spalt geöffnet und wieder geschlossen, als wollte von aussen jemand eindringen, dem von anderen der Eintritt verwehrt wird.)	VOICE OF THE MAJOR-DOMO: (without): Will your Lordship be pleased to attend in the gallery?
STIMME DES BARONS: (draussen): Wo hat Er seine Manieren gelernt? Der Baron Lerchenau antichambrieret nicht.	VOICE OF THE BARON: (without): Where did you learn to treat a nobleman like this? A Baron Lerchenau cannot be waiting.
MARSCHALLIN: Quinquin, was treibt Er denn? Wo steckt Er denn?	PRINCESS: Mignon, where are you hid? What tricks are these?
OCTAVIAN: (in einen Frauenrock und Jäkchen, das Haar mit einem Schnupftuch und einem Bande wie in einem Häubchen tritt hervor und knickst): Befehl'n fürstli' Gnad'n i bin halt noch nit recht lang in fürstli'n Dienst.	OCTAVIAN: (in a skirt and a short jacket, with his hair tied with a kerchief and ribbon to look like a cap, comes from behind the screen and curtseys): An't please you, your Highness, I've not long been of your Highness' household here.
MARSCHALLIN: Du, Schatz! Und nicht einmal mehr als ein Busserl kann ich dir geben. (Küsst ihn schnell. Neuer Lärm draussen.) Er bricht mir ja die Tür ein, der Herr Vetter. Mach' Er, dass Er hinauskomm'. Schleich Er frech durch die Lakaien durch. Er ist ein blitzgescheiter Lump! Und komm' Er wieder, Schatz, aber in Mannskleidern und durch die vordre Tür, wenn's Ihm beliebt. (Setzt sich auf das Sofa links mit dem Rücken gegen die Tür und beginnt ihre Schokolade zu trinken. Octavian geht schnell gegen die kleine Tür und will hinaus. Im gleichen Augenblick wird die Tür aufgerissen, und Baron Ochs, den die Lakaien vergeblich abzuhalten suchen, tritt ein. Octavian, der mit gesenktem Kopf rasch entwischen wollte, stösst mit ihm zusammen. Dann drückt er sich verlegen an die Wand links von der Tür. Drei Lakaien sind gleichzeitig mit dem Baron eingetreten, stehen ratlos.)	PRINCESS: Sweetheart, and only one kiss may I give you, One only, my dearest. (Kisses him quickly.) My noble kinsman's battering all the doors down. Now as quickly as may be March boldly past the footman there. It is sport for brazen rogues like you! And come back soon, beloved, In your own habit, and through the main door, as a gentleman should. (The Princess sits down with her back to the door and begins to sip her chocolate. Octavian goes quickly towards the little door and tries to go out, but at that moment the door is flung open, and Baron Ochs, whom the footmen vainly try to keep back, forces his way in. Octavian, who attempts to escape, hiding his face, runs into him. Then, in confusion, he stands aside against the wall, to the left of the door. Three footmen enter with the Baron and stand hesitating what to do.)
BARON: (mit Grandezza zu den Lakaien): Selbstverständlich empfängt mich Ihre Gnaden. (Er geht nach vorn, die Lakaien zu seiner Linken suchen ihm den Weg zu vertreten.) (zu Octavian mit Interesse). Pardon, mein hübsches Kind! (Octavian dreht sich verlegen gegen die Wand). (mit Grazie und Herablassung) Ich sag': Pardon, mein hübsches Kind. (Marschallin sieht über die Schulter, steht dann auf und kommt dem Baron entgegen). (galant zu Octavian). Ich hab' Ihr doch nicht ernstlich weh getan?	BARON: (pompously to the footmen): Why, never doubt her Highness will receive me. (To Octavian, who in confusion turns his face to the wall.) Forgive, my pretty child. (With gracious condescending.) I said, forgive, my pretty child. (The Princess looks over her shoulder, rises and goes to meet the Baron.) (gallantly to Octavian). I hope I did not incommode you much.
LAKAIEN: (zupfen den Baron, leise): Ihre fürstlichen Gnaden! (Sie rangieren sich beim Nahen der Marschallin zu einer dichtgeschlossenen Front hart vor der kleinen Türe.) (Baron macht die französische Reverenz mit zwei Wiederholungen).	THE FOOTMEN: (nudging the Baron): Yonder, Sir, is her Highness. (The Baron makes an obeisance in the French manner and repeats it twice.)
MARSCHALLIN: Euer Liebden sehen vortrefflich aus.	PRINCESS: Faith, my dear cousin, you're in looks today.
BARON: (verneigt sich nochmals, dann zu den Lakaien): Sieht Er jetzt wohl, dass Ihre Gnaden entzückt ist, mich zu sehn. (Auf die Marschallin zu, mit weltmännischer Leichtigkeit, indem er ihr die Hand reicht und sie vorführt.) Und wie sollten Euer Gnaden nicht! Was tut die frühe Stunde unter Personen von Stand? Hab' ich nicht seinerzeit wahrhaftig Tag für Tag unserer Fürstin Brioche meine Aufwartung gemacht, da sie im Bad gesessen ist, mit nichts als einem kleinen Wandschirm szischen ihr und mir. Ich muss mich wundern, (zornig umschauend) Wenn Euer Gnaden Livree— (Octavian wäre währenddessen gern hinausgeschlüpft; die befremdeten Blicke und Gesichter der Lakaien nötigen ihn zur äussersten Vorsicht, und er zieht sich mit gespielter Unbefangenheit an der Wand gegen dem Alkoven hin zurück).	BARON: (to the footmen): Did I not say to you, her Highness would most surely welcome me? (Goes to the Princess with the grace of a man of the world, offers her his hand and leads her to her chair.) You will not deny yourself to me? Of early hours, we take no account of the quality. Did I not, every morning without fail, repair To the Princess you wot of? Did I not pay my respects As she took her ease in her bath, And there was nothing to divide us but a tiny screen? (Octavian has made his way along the wall towards the alcove and is busying himself, trying to escape observation, by the bed. In obedience to a sign from the Princess, the footmen carry a little sofa and an armchair to the front and retire.) Indeed I wonder (Looking around angrily.) That any lackey should have dared.
MARSCHALLIN: Verzeihen Sie! Man hat sich betragen, wie es befohlen war. Ich hatte diesen Morgen die Migräne. (Auf einen Wink der Marschallin haben die Lakaien die beiden kleinen Sofas mehr nach vorn gebracht und sind abgegangen.) (Baron sieht öfters nach rückwärts). (Octavian macht sich möglichst unsichtbar beim Bett zu schaffen). (Marschallin setzt sich auf das Sofa rechts, nachdem sie dem Baron den Platz auf dem Sofa links angeboten hat).	PRINCESS: Forgive them, Coz. They did but obey me—for it was I that bade them, (Seats herself on the sofa, after offering the Baron the armchair.) I suffered much this morning from the vapors. (The Baron tries to sit and is much distracted by the presence of the pretty waiting maid.)
BARON: (versucht sich zu setzen, äusserst okkupiert von der Anwesenheit der hübschen Kammerzofe. Für sich): Ein hübsches Ding! Ein gutes saub'res Kinder!! (Marschallin aufstehend, ihm zeremoniös aufs neue seinen Platz anbietend).	BARON: (to himself): A pretty wench, egad! She's vastly pleasing.
MARSCHALLIN: Ich bin auch jetzt noch nicht ganz wohl. Der Vetter wird darum vielleicht die Gnade haben— (Baron setzt sich zögernd und bemüht sich, der kübschen Zofe nicht völlig den Rücken zu kehren. Im folgenden wendet er sich	PRINCESS: (rising and again ceremoniously offering a seat to the Baron): And even now I'm not quite well. (The Baron takes his seat with hesitation and tries his utmost not to turn his back to the pretty waiting maid.) bald nach der Marschallin, also nach seiner Linken, bald nach Octavian, also nach seiner Rechten).

BARON: Natürlich.
(Er dreht sich nach seiner Rechten um, um Octavian zu sehen.)

MARSCHALLIN: Meine Kammerzofe, ein junges Ding vom Land.
Ich muss fürchten, sie inkommodiert Euer Liebden.

BARON: (nach seiner Rechten):
Ganz allerliebst!
(Nach seiner Linken.)
Wie?
Nicht im geringsten!
Mich?
Im Gegenteil!
(Er winkt Octavian mit der Hand, dann zur Marschallin.)
Euer Gnaden werden vielleicht verwundert sein, dass ich als Bräutigam.
(sieht sich nach seiner Linken um.)
indes—inzwischen—

MARSCHALLIN: Als Bräutigam?

BARON: (nach seiner Linken): Ja, wie Euer Gnaden denn doch wohl aus meinem Brief genugsam—
(Nach seiner Rechten.)
Ein Grasaff', appetitlich, keine fünfzehn Jahr!

MARSCHALLIN: (erleichtert):
Der Brief, natürlich, ja, der Brief, wer ist denn nur die Glückliche?
Ich hab' den Namen auf der Zunge.

BARON: (nach seiner Linken):
Wie?
(Nach rückwärts.)
Pudeljung!
Gesund!
Gewaschen!
Allerliebst!

MARSCHALLIN: Wer ist nur schnell die Braut!?

BARON: Das Fräulein Faninal.
Ich habe Euer Gnaden den Namen nicht verheimlicht.

MARSCHALLIN: Natürlich!
Wo hab' ich meinen Kopf?
Bloss die Famili ist mir nicht bekannt.
Sind's keine Hiesigen?
(Octavian macht sich mit dem Servierbrett zu tun, wodurch er mehr hinter den Rücken des Barons kommt).

BARON: Jawohl, Euer Gnaden, es sind Hiesige.
Ein durch die Gnade Ihrer Majestät Geadelter.
Er hat die Lieferung für die Armee, die in den Nieder landen steht.
(Marschallin bedeutet Octavian ungeduldig mit den Augen, er solle sich fortmachen).
(missversteht ihre Miene durchaus). Ich seh', Euer Gnaden runzeln Dero schöne Stirn ob der Mesalliance.

And so, dear Cousin,
Bear me no ill will that I do deny myself . . .

BARON: No, truly
(He turns round, so as to look at Octavian.)

PRINCESS: My own waiting-woman . . . come freshly from the country,
And I fear that her untaught ways cause you displeasure.

BARON: Charming, I vow Displeasure?
Do not think it, I like such ways.
(Makes a sign to Octavian, then says to the Princess): But your Highness may have felt surprise to learn that I design to take a wife.
(Turns round.)
But yet, the reason . . . .

PRINCESS: To take a wife?

BARON: As your Highness knows without a doubt, for in my recent letter . . .
A novice . . . how enticing—barely fifteen years!

PRINCESS: (relieved): You wrote, why surely . . .
And who has been so fortunate?
The name was on my tongue this instant.

BARON: How?
And how fresh! egad! how dainty!
What a waist!

PRINCESS: Pray tell me who's the bride?

BARON: Young Mistress Faninal.
(With slight vexation.)
Yet of her name and mercy I made no secret.

PRINCESS: Forgive, I beg, my memory plays me false.
What of her family, pray, is it native here?
(Octavian busies himself with the tray and gradually tries to get behind the baron.)

BARON: Indeed, your Highness, it is native here—
One which Her Majesty of late has raised to the nobility.
The whole provisioning of the armies in the Netherlands is in his hands.
(The Princess impatiently makes signs to Octavian that he should withdraw.)
I see your Highness' pretty lips express disdain at such a misalliance.

Allein dass ich sag', das Mädchen ist für einen Engel hübsch genug.
Kommt frischweg aus dem Kloster.
Ist das einzige Kind.
(Stärker.)
Dem Mann gehören zwölf Häuser auf der Wied'n nebst dem Palais am Hof.
Und seine Gesundheit
(schmunzelnd) soll nicht die beste sein.

MARSCHALLIN: Mein lieber Vetter, ich kapier' schon, wieviel's geschlagen hat.
(Winkt Octavian, den Rückzug zu nehmen.)
(Octavian will mit dem Servier brett rückwärts zur Tür hin).

BARON: Warum hinaus die Schokolade?
Geruhen nur!
Da!
Pst, wieso denn!
(Octavian steht unschlüssig, das Gesicht abgewendet):

MARSCHALLIN: Fort, geh' Sie nur!

BARON: Wenn ich Euer Gnaden gesteh', dass ich noch so gut wie nüchtern bin.

MARSCHALLIN: (resigniert):
Mariandel, komm' Sie her.
Servier' Sie Seiner Liebden.
(Octavian kommt, serviert an der Rechten des Barons, so dass dieser sich wieder zwischen der Marschallin und Octavian befindet.)

BARON: (nimmt eine Tasse, bedient sich): So gut wie nüchtern, Euer Gnaden.
Sitz' im Reisewagen seit fünf Uhr früh.
Recht ein gestelltes Ding!
(Zu Octavian.) Bleib' Sie dahier, mein Herz.
Ich hab' Ihr was zu sagen.
(Zur Marschallin, laut.)
Meine ganze Livree, Stallpagen, Jäger, alles—
(Er frisst.)
Alles unten im Hof zusamt meinen Almosenier.

MARSCHALLIN: (zu Octavian):
Geh' Sie nur.

BARON: (zu Octavian): Hat Sie noch ein Biskoterl?
Bleib' Sie doch!
(Leise.)
Sie ist ein süsser Engelsschatz, ein saubrer.
(Zur Marschallin.)
Sind auf dem Wege zum "Weissen Ross", wo wir logieren, heisst bis übermorgen—
(Halblaut zu Octavian.)
Ich gäb' was Schönes drum, mit Ihr—(zur Marschallin, sehr laut.)
bis übermorgen—
(schnell zu Octavian.)
unter vier Augen zu scharmutzier-

But then, although I say it, the girl is pretty as an angel and as good,
Comes straight from out a convent, is an only child.
The man has half a score of houses in the city and has a mansion too.
His health is failing too.
(Chuckles.)
So the physicians say.

PRINCESS: It needs no glasses to discover what hour of day it is.
(Repeats her signs to Octavian to retire.)
(Octavian tries to back to the door with the tray.)

BARON: Why leave the chocolate unfinished?
(To Octavian, who stands undecided with averted face.)
Hey!
Pst!
Pst!
What ails you?

PRINCESS: Quick, get you gone!

BARON: Grant me permision, your Highness,
To say that I am faint for food.

PRINCESS: (resigned): Mariandel, bring it back and wait upon his Lordship.

BARON: As good as fasting, my dear cousin—sitting in my post-chaise since the early dawn
(Octavian brings the tray to the Baron, who takes a cup and fills it.)
Gad, what a strapping wench!
(To Octavian.)
Do not go yet, my child,
There's something I would tell you.
(To the Princess.)
All my suite I have brought—footmen and grooms and couriers—
They are all down below together with my almoner.

PRINCESS: (to Octavian): You may go.

BARON: (to Octavian): Have you another biscuit?
Do not go—
It is the daintiest morsel, sweet and adorable.
(To the Princess.)
I halted here, but we are lodging at an inn, the White Horse, (Softly to Octavian.)
I'd pay a heavy price to court you . . .
(To the Princess, very loud.)
But till tomorrow.
(To Octavian.)
Where there is no one by to mar our pleasure.
(The Princess cannot refrain from en!

Wie?
(Marschallin muss lachen über Octavians freches Komödienspiel.)
Dann ziehn wir ins Palais von Faninal.
Natürlich muss ich vorher den Bräutigamsaufführer—(wütend zu Octavian.) will Sie denn nicht warten?—
an die wohlgeborne Jungfer Braut deputieren,
Der die silberne Rosen überbringt nach der hochadeligen Gepflogenheit.

MARSCHALLIN: Und wen von der Verwandtschaft haben Euer Liebden für dieses Ehrenamt ausersehn?
wen denn nur?
den Vetter Jörger?
Wie?
Den Vetter Lamberg?
Ich werde—

BARON: Dies liegt in Euer Gnaden allerschönsten Händen.

MARSCHALLIN: Ganz gut.
Will Er mit mir zu Abend essen, Vetter?
Sagen wir morgen, will Er?
Dann proponier' ich Ihm einen.

BARON: Euer Gnaden sind die Herablassung selber.

MARSCHALLIN: (will aufstehen): Indes—

BARON: (halblaut): Das Sie mir wiederkommt!
Ich geh' nicht eher fort!

MARSCHALLIN: (für sich): Oho!
(Laut.)
Bleib' Sie nur da!
Kann ich dem Vetter für jetzt noch dienlich sein?

BARON: Ich shäme mich bereits:
An Euer Gnaden Notari eine Rekommandation
wär mir lieb.
Es handelt sich um den Eh'vertrag.

MARSCHALLIN: Mein Notari
kommt öfters des Morgens.
Schau' Sie doch, Mariandel,
ob er nicht in der Antichambre ist und wartet.

BARON: Wozu das Kammerzofel?
Euer Gnaden beraubt sich der Bedienung um meinetweillen.
(Hält zie auf.)

MARSCHALLIN: Lass Er doch, Vetter, Sie mag ruhig gehn.

BARON: (lebhaft): Das geb' ich nicht zu, bleib' Sie dahier zu Ihrer Gnaden Wink.
Es kommt gleich wer von der Livree herein.
Ich liess ein solches Goldkind, meiner Seel', laughing at Octavian's impudent by-play.)

Then I and mine will be the guest of Faninal.
But first, I must despatch the bridegroom's Ambassador,
(Angrily to Octavian.)
Will you not have patience?
To my highly-born and beauteous bride, one who shall bring to her
As a pledge of love a silver Rose,
As is the custom in all noble families.

PRINCESS: On whom of all our kinsmen has your Lordship's choice
Fallen for this grave Embassy?
Who is fit? Our cousin Preysing? Or Kinsman Lambert . . .
I'll tell you . . .

BARON: All this I gladly leave in your sweet hands, your Highness.

PRINCESS: It is well.
Will you not sup with me tonight, dear kinsman?
Or else tomorrow?
I'll not fail then with proposals.

BARON: No, your Highness' condescension overwhelms me.

PRINCESS: (rising): But yet . . .

BARON: (aside): You must come back again.
I stay till you are here!

PRINCESS: (aside): Oho!
(To Octavian.)
Stay where you are. Will you command me dear Cousin, now?

BARON: No, truly, I'm ashamed
A word or two to commend me to your Highness's attorney
I would crave.
A conference, touching settlements.

PRINCESS: My man of law is often here early.
Go to seek Mariandel,
(To Octavian.)
If he's by chance yet waiting in the anteroom.

BARON: Why send your waiting-woman?
Your Highness might be needing her help—
It is too much kindness.
(Holds Octavian back.)

PRINCESS: Let her be, Cousin, she's not needed here.

BARON: (eagerly): That will I not allow.
(To Octavian.)
Stay you here, at her Highness's beck and call,
It will not be long before a footman comes.

nicht unter das infame Lakaienvolk.

MARSCHALLIN: Euer Liebden sind allzu besorgt.
(Haushofmeister tritt ein).

BARON: Da, hab' ich's nicht gesagt?
Er wird Euer Gnaden zu melden haben.

MARSCHALLIN: (zum Haushofmeister): Struhan, hab' ich meinen Notari in der Vorkammen warten?

HAUSHOFMEISTER: Fürstliche Gnaden haben den Notari, dann den Verwalter, dann den Kuchelchef, dann von Excellenz Silva hegeschickt ein Sänger mit einem Flötisten.
(Trocken.)
Ansonsten das gewöhnliche Bagagi.

BARON: (hat sein Sofa hinter den breiten Rücken des Haushofmeisters geschoben, ergreift zätlich die Hand der vermeintlichen Zofe):
Hat sie schon einmal mit einem Kavalier im tête-à-tête zu Abend g'essen?
(Octavian tut sehr verlegen).
Nein?
Da wird Sie Augen machen.
Will Sie?

OCTAVIAN: (leise, verschämt): I weiss halt nit, i dös derf.
(Marschallin dem Haushofmeister unaufmerksam zuhörend, beobachtet die beiden, muss leise lachen).
(Haushofmeister verneigt sich, tritt zurück, wodurch die Gruppe für den Blick der Marschallin frei wird).

MARSCHALLIN: (lachend zum Haushofmeister): Warten lassen.
(Haushofmeister ab.)
(Baron setzt sich möglichst unbefangen zurecht und nimmt eine gravitätische Miene an).
Der Vetter ist, ich seh' kein Kostverächter.

BARON: (erleichtert): Mit Euer Gnaden
(aufatmend) ist man frei daran.
Da gibt's keine Flausen, keine Etikette, keine spanische Tuerei!
(Er küsst der Marschallin die Hand.)

MARSCHALLIN: (amusiert): Aber wo Er doch ein Bräutigam ist?

BARON: (halb aufstehend, ihr genähert): Macht das einen lahmen Esel aus mir?
Bin ich da nicht wie ein guter Hund auf einer guten Fährte?
Und doppelt scharf auf jedes Wild: nach links nach rechts?

I should not let this sweet child, on my soul,
Go mix with all the scurvy men below.
(Stroking Octavian's hands.)

PRINCESS: There's no need for such fear, my dear Coz.
(Enter the Major-Domo.)

BARON: There, is it not as I said?
He comes with some news that concerns your Highness.

PRINCESS: Struban, tell me, is my attorney waiting in the antechamber?

MAJOR-DOMO: Yes, the attorney waits without, your Highness,
Then there's the Steward, next to Head Cook—
Then, the Duke of Silva commends
To your Highness a singer and a flute-player, (Drily.)
And lastly all the usual petitioners.

BARON: (to Octavian): Say, have you ever, with any gentleman
Been tête-à-tête to supper, Mariandel?
(Octavian simulates embarrassment.)
No?
It will make you stare, I warrant.

OCTAVIAN: (softly, confused):
Her Highness won't let me, I'm sure.
(The Princess listens inattentively to the Major-Domo, while watching the Baron and Octavian with much amusement.)

PRINCESS: (to the Major-Domo):
Let them wait then.
(Exit Major-Domo.)
(To the Baron, who tries to regain his composure.)
My cousin takes, I notice, pleasure where he finds it.

BARON: (relieved): Your Highness puts me at my ease at once.
With you we have no nonsense and no Spanish affectations.
(Kissing her hand.)
No airs, no buckram, and no compliments.

PRINCESS: (amused): But a man of birth, who's just betrothed. . .

BARON: (approaching her): Must I, because of that, live like a monk?
Do I not well, like a hound of breed, keen on the quarry ever.
To follow hot-foot every scent to right or left?

MARSCHALLIN: Ich seh', Euer Liebden betreiben es als Profession.

BARON: Das will ich meinen.
Wüsste nicht, welche mir besser behagen könnte.
Ich muss Euer Gnaden sehr bedauern, dass Euer Gnaden nur—wie drück' ich mich aus—
die verteidigenden Erfahrungen besitzen.
Parole d'honneur!
Es geht nichts über die von der anderen Seite.

MARSCHALLIN: (lacht): Ich glaube Ihm, dass die sehr mannigfaltig sind.

BARON: Soviel Zeiten das Jahr, soviel Stunden der Tag, da ist keine—

MARSCHALLIN: Keine?

BARON: Wo nicht—

MARSCHALLIN: Wo nicht—

BARON: Wo nicht dem Knaben Cupido ein Geschenkerl abzulisten wär!

BARON: (lässt von Octavian ab und nimmt wieder würdevolle Haltung an): Geben mir Euer Gnaben den Grasaff' da zu meiner künftigen Frau Gemahlin Bedienung.

MARSCHALLIN: Wie, meine Kleine da? Was sollte die?
Die Fräulein Braut wird schon versehen sein und nicht anstehn auf Euer Liebden Auswahl.

BARON: Das ist ein feines Ding!
Kreuzsakerlot!
Da ist ein Tropfen guten Bluts dabei!

OCTAVIAN: (für sich): Ein Tropfen guten Bluts!

MARSCHALLIN: Euer Liebden haben ein scharfes Auge!

BARON: Geziemt sich.
(Vertraulich.)
Find' in der Ordnung, dass Personen von Stand in solcher Weise von adeligem Blut bedient werden.
Führ' selbst ein Kind meiner Laune mit mir.

OCTAVIAN: Ein Kind Seiner Laune?

MARSCHALLIN: Wie?
Gar ein Mädel?
Das will ich nicht hoffen.

PRINCESS: I see now that my cousin pursues his sport quite seriously.

BARON: And why deny it?
For what sport more becomes a man of birth and breeding?
I vow, I do condole with you sincerely
That you can only know—it is hard to express—
From experience the sensations of defenders—
Parole d'honneur—nothing can equal those which inspire the attacking party.

PRINCESS: I doubt not they are vastly various.

BARON: Though the months of the year, though the hours and the minutes by many . . .

PRINCESS: Many?

BARON: There's none . . .

PRINCESS: There's none?

BARON: In which sly Master Cupido
Will not smile upon him who woos him aright.

BARON: (suddenly resumes his dignified bearing): Pray will your Highness permit me to take this wench
To be my Baroness's chosen attendant!

PRINCESS: What, my favorite girl?
What could you gain?
And sure, your bride will have no need of her,
Such a choice she would wish to make unaided.

BARON: That is a splendid wench,
Gadzooks, she is!
I dare be sworn, she has blue blood in her.

OCTAVIAN: (aside): Yes, blue blood indeed.

PRINCESS: What a keen discernment is yours, my cousin.

BARON: It is needful.
(Confidentially.)
Is it not right, that a man of birth
Should have those about his person
Who also are of pedigree unblemished?
I have a lackey as well-born as I.

OCTAVIAN: (still much amused): As well-born as he is!

PRINCESS: What?
I am curious.
How vastly diverting!

BARON: Son of a Prince . . .

PRINCESS AND OCTAVIAN: Of a Prince?

BARON: So like, that none can mistake him, are the two.
He is my body-servant.

PRINCESS AND OCTAVIAN: (laughing): His body-servant!

BARON: Nein, einen Sohn.
Trägt lerchenauisches Gespräge im Gesicht.
Halt' ihn als Leiblakai.
Wenn Euer Gnaden dann werden befehlen, dass ich die silberne Rosen darf
Dero Händen übergeben,
wird er es sein, der sie herauf bringt.

MARSCHALLIN: Soll mich recht freuen.
Aber wart' Er einmal.
(Octavian winkend.)

BARON: Geben mir Euer Gnaden das Zofel!
Ich lass nicht locker.

MARSCHALLIN: Ei! Geh' Sie und bring' Sie das Medaillon her.

OCTAVIAN: (leise): Theres!
Theres, gib acht!

MARSCHALLIN: (ebenso): Bring's nur schnell!
Ich weiss schon, was ich tu.

BARON: (Octavian nachsehend): Könnt' eine junge Fürstin sein.
(Dann, im Konversationston.)
Hab' vor, meiner Braut eine getreue Kopie meines Stammbaumes zu spendieren—nebst einer Locke vom Ahnherrn Lerchenau, der ein grosser Klosterstifter war und Oberst-Erblandhofmeister in Kärnten und in der winischen Mark.
(Octavian bringt das Medaillon aus dem Bettalkoven).

MARSCHALLIN: Wollen Euer Gnaden leicht den jungen Herrn da als Braüutigamsaufführer haben?

BARON: Bin ungeschauter einverstanden!

MARSCHALLIN: (etwas zögernd): Mein junger Vetter, der Graf Octavian.

BARON: Wüsste keinen vornehmeren zu wünschen!
Wär in Devotion dem jungen Herrn sehr verbunden!

MARSCHALLIN: (schnell): Seh' Er ihn an!
(Hält ihm das Medaillon hin.)

BARON: (sieht bald auf das Medaillon, bald auf die Zofe): Die Aehnlichkeit!

MARSCHALLIN: Ja, ja.

BARON: Aus dem Gesicht geschnitten!

BARON: Whenever your Highness shall deign to command me
To give to your keeping the Rose of Silver
(He is without now—in the courtyard)
It will be from him I shall receive it.

PRINCESS: I understand—but one instant, I beg,
(Beckoning to Octavian.)
Mariandel!

BARON: Once more I beg your Highness—the waiting maid for My Lady!

PRINCESS: Ah!
(To Octavian.)
Go bring the miniature set in jewels

OCTAVIAN: (softly): Therese, Therese, beware!

BARON: (looking after him): Gad, she might be a young Princess.
(To the Princess.)
Do you think it would be well if I gave to my bride
My pedigree, fairly copied—
Or even a lock of the first of the Lerchenaus—a pious founder of convents he
And First Hereditary Grand Warden
Of the Karinthian Domains?
(Octavian brings the medallion.)

PRINCESS: Would your Lordship choose to have this gentleman
To take the Rose of Silver to your mistress?
(All in an easy tone of conversation.)

BARON: Without a glance I trust your Highness.

PRINCESS: (hesitating): It is my young cousin, Count Octavian—

BARON: (still very courteous): Who could wish for a nobler or more gallant?
And vastly to your kinsman should I be indebted.

PRINCESS: (quickly): Look at him well.
(Shows him the miniature.)

BARON: It is wonderful.
(Looking first at the portrait, then at Octavian.)
Like two copies from one model!

MARSCHALLIN: Hab' mir auch schon Gedanken gemacht. (Auf das medaillon deutend.) Rofrano, des Herrn Marchese zweiter Bruder.	PRINCESS: It has caused me myself no small surprise. (Pointing to the portrait.) Rofrano, the younger brother of the Marquis.
BARON: Octavian Rofrano! Da ist man wer, wenn man aus solchem Haus, (mit Beziehung auf die Zofe.) Und wär's auch bei der Domestiktür!	BARON: Octavian? Rofrano? It is no small thing, such a relationship, (Pointing to Octavian.) Even if it be not quite . . . canonical.
MARSCHALLIN: Darum halt' ich sie auch wie was Besonderes.	PRINCESS: For that same cause have I advanced her over all the rest.
BARON: Geziemt sich.	BARON: It is fitting—
MARSCHALLIN: Immer um meine Person.	PRINCESS: Always in waiting on myself.
BARON: Sehr wohl.	BARON: It is well.
MARSCHALLIN: Jetzt aber geh' Sie, Mariandel, mach' Sie fort.
BARON: Wie denn? Sit kommt doch wieder.
MARSCHALLIN: (überhört den Baron absichtlich): Und lass Sie die Antichambre herein. (Octavian geht gegen die Flügelthür rechts).	PRINCESS: Now get you gone, you, Mariandel. (Octavian goes towards the folding door on the right.)
BARON: (ihm nach): Mein schönstes Kind!	BARON: (following him): My sweetest child!
OCTAVIAN: (an der Tür rechts): Derft's eina geh'! (Läuft nach der andern Tür.)	OCTAVIAN: La! Naughty man! (At the door.)
BARON: (ihm nach): Ich bin Ihr Serviteur! Geb' Sie doch einen Augenblick Audienz!	BARON: I am your most obedient servant—Only let me speak.
OCTAVIAN: (schlägt ihm die klein Tür vor der Nase zu): I komm' glei. (In diesem Augenblick tritt eine alte Kammerfrau, die Waschbecken, Kanne und Handtuch trägt, durch die gleiche Türe ein. Der Baron zieht sich enttäuscht zurück. Zwei Lakaien kommen von rechts herein, bringen einen Wandschirm aus dem Alkoven, die alte kammerfrau, mit ihr, zwei Lakaien tragen den Sessel und den Frisiertisch nach vorne in die Mitte. Zwei Lakaien öffnen die Flügeltüren rechts. Es treten ein der Notar, der Küchenchef, hinter diesen ein Küchenjunge, der das Menübuch trägt. Dann die Modistin, ein Gelehrter mit einem Folianten und der Tierhändler mit winzig kleinen Hunden und einen Aeffchen. Valzacchi und Annina, hinter diesen rasch gleitend, nehmen den vordersten Platz links ein, die adelige Mutter mit ihren drei Töchtern, alle in Trauer, stellen sich in den rechten Flügel. Der Haushofmeister führt den Tenor und den Flötisten nach vorne. Baron rückwärts winkt einen Lakaien zu sich, gibt ihm den Auftrag, zeigt: "Hier durch die Hintertür.")	OCTAVIAN: (slams the door in the Baron's face): Yes, shortly. (At this moment an old tirewoman enters by the same door. The Baron starts back disappointed. Two Footmen enter from the right and bring a screen from the recess. The Princess steps behind the screen, attended by her tirewoman. The toilet table is moved to the center. The footmen open the folding doors through which enter the Attorney, the Head Cook, followed by an assistant, carrying the book of Menus. Then a Milliner, a Scholar, carrying a ponderous folio, and the Vendor of Animals with tiny lap-dogs and a small monkey. Valzacchi and Annina slipping in behind the last-named, take their places on the extreme left. The noble Mother with her three Daughters all in deepest mourning take position on the right wing. The Major-Domo leads the Tenor and the Flute Player to the front. The Baron, in the background beckons to a footman, gives him an order, pointing "Here through the small door.")
DIE DREI ADELIGEN TÖCHTER: (schreiend): Drei arme adelige Waisen— (Die Adelige Mutter bedeutet ihnen, nicht so zu schreien und niederzuknien).	THE THREE NOBLE ORPHANS: (shrilly): Three poor and highborn orphan children . . . (Their Mother makes signs to them to kneel and not to sing so loudly.)
DIE DREI WAISEN: (niederkniend): Drei arme adelige Waisen erflehen Dero hohen Schutz!	THE THREE ORPHANS: (kneeling): Three poor and highborn orphan children, Implore your Grace to grant our prayer.
MODISTIN: (laut): Le chapeau Paméla! La poudre à la reine de Golconde!	THE MILLINER: (loudly): Le Chapeau Paméla—La Poudre à la Reine de Golconda!
DER TIERHÄNDLER: Schöne Affen, wenn Durchlaucht schaffen, auch Vögel hab' ich da aus Afrika.	THE VENDOR OF ANIMALS: For your pleasure In hours of leisure Of tricksy apes a score From Afric's shore.
DIE DREI WAISEN: Der Vater ist jung auf dem Felde der Ehre gefallen, ihm dieses nachzutun, ist unser Herzensziel.	THE THREE ORPHANS: My father dies in youth a glorious death for his country, It is my heart's one desire to be his worthy child.
MODISTIN: La chapeau Paméla! C'est la merveille du monde!	THE MILLINER: Le Chapeau Paméla! C'est la merveille du monde!
DIE TIERHÄNDLER: Papageien hätt' ich da, aus Indien und Afrika. Hunderln, so klein und schon zimmerrein. (Marschallin tritt hervor, alles verneigt sich. Baron ist links vorgekommen.)	THE VENDOR: Parrots too of plumage gay From India and Africay. Lap-dogs so wise Very small in size. (The Princess appears. All bow low. The Baron, on the left, steps forward.)
MARSCHALLIN: (zum Baron): Ich präsentier' Euer Liebden hier den Notar. (Notar tritt mit Verneigung gegen den Frisiertisch, wo sich die Marschallin niedergelassen, zum Baron links. Marschallin winkt die jüngste der drei Waisen zu sich, lässt sich vom Haushofmeister einen Geldbeutel reichen, gibt ihn dem Mädchen, indem sie es auf die Stirne küsst. Gelehrter will vortreten, seine Folianten überreichen, Valzacchi springt vor, drängt ihn zur Seite.	PRINCESS: (to the Baron): I here make known to you, dear Kinsman, my attorney. (The Attorney, with many obeisances towards the toilet table at which the Princess has seated herself, advances to the Baron on the right. The Princess signs to the youngest of the three Orphans to approach her, and takes a purse from the Major-Domo and gives it to the girl, whom she kisses on the forehead. The Scholar attempts to approach the Princess and hand her his volumes, but Valzacchi rushes forward and pushes him aside.)
VALZACCHI: (ein schwarzgerändertes Zeitungsblatt hervorziehend): Die swarze Seitung! Fürstlike Gnade: Alles 'ier ge'eim gesrieben! Nur für 'ohe Persönlikeite. Die swarze Seitung! Eine Leikname in 'Interkammer von eine gräflike Palais! Eine Bürgersfrau mit der amante vergiften der Hehemann diese Nackt um dreie Huhr!	VALZACCHI: (drawing from his pocket a black-edged news sheet): Ze latest scandals! True news, your 'Ighness! Learnt from secret information! Meant only for ze Quality! Ze newest Scandals! A dead body in a secret chamber In ze town 'ouse of a Count! A rich merchant's wife poisons 'er 'usband Viz ze 'elp of her lover Soon after sree o'clock zis night.
MARSCHALLIN: Lass er mich mit dem Tratsch in Ruh'!	PRINCESS: Fudge! Let me hear no more of it!
VALZACCHI: In Gnaden: tutte quante Vertraulikeite aus die grosse Welt!	VALZACCHI: Your pardon, your 'Ighness Tutte quante. Ze hidden secrets Of ze elegant world!

MARSCHALLIN: Ich will nix wissen!
Lass er mich mit dem Tratsch in Ruh'!
(Valzacchi mit bedauernder Verbeugung springt zurück).

DIE DREI WAISEN: (zuletzt auch die Mutter, haben der Marschallin die Hand geküsst): Glück und Segen allerwegen Euer Gnaden hohem Sinn!
Eingegraben steht erhaben er in unsern Herzen drin.
(Gehen ab samt der Mutter.)
(Der Friseur tritt hastig auf, der Gehilfe stürzt ihm mit fliegenden Rockschössen nach. Der Friseur fasst die Marschallin ins Auge verdüstert sich, tritt zurück, er studiert ihr heutiges Aussehen. Der Gehilft indessen packt aus am Frisiertisch. Der Friseur schiebt einige Personen zurück, sich Spielraum zu schaffen. Nach einer kurzen Ueberlegung ist sein Plan gefasst, er eilt mit Entschlossenheit auf die Marschallin zu, beginnt zu frisieren. Ein Läuffer in rosa, schwarz und Silber tritt auf, überbringt ein Billet. Hausbofmeister mit Silbertablett ist schnell zur Hand, präsentiert es der Marschallin. Friseur hält inne, sie lesen zu lassen. Gehilfe reicht ihm ein neues Eisen. Friseur schwenkt es: ist zu heiss. Gehilfe reicht ihm nach fragendem Blick auf die Marschallin das Billet, die nickt, worauf er es lächelnd verwendet, um das Eisen zu kühlen. Gleichzeitig hat sich der Sänger in Position gestellt, hält das Notenblatt. Flötist sieht ihm, begleitend, über die Schultern. Die Lakaien haben rechts ganz vorne Stellung genommen, andere stehen im Hintergrund.)

DER TENOR: Di rigori armato il seno
Contro amor mi ribellai
Ma fui vinto in un baleno
In mirar due vaghi rai.
Ahi! che resiste puoco
Cor di gelo astral di fuoco.
(Der Friseur übergibt dem Gehilfen das Eisen und applaudiert dem Sänger. Dann fährt er im Arrangement des Lockenbaues fort. Ein Bedienter hat indessen bei der kleinen Tür den Kammerdiener des Barons, den Almosenier und den Jäger eingelassen. Es sind drei bedenkliche Gestalten. Der Kammerdiener ist ein junger grosser Lümmel, der dumm und frech aussieht. Er trägt unterm Arm ein Futteral aus rotem Saffian. Der Almosenier ist ein verwildeter Dorfkooperator, ein vier Schuh hoher, aber stark und verwegen

PRINCESS: What is that to me?
Let me be with your vicious talk!
(Valzacchi retires with a deprecatory bow. The three Orphans prepare to withdraw, after they and their Mother have kissed the Princess's hand.)

THE THREE ORPHANS: (whining): May Heaven joy send you, may bliss attend you Wherever you may be.
We shall praise ever, forgetting never
Your great generosity!
(Exeunt with their Mother.)
(The Hairdresser hurriedly steps forward, his assistant follows him with flying coat-tails. The Hairdresser gazes at the Princess, looks solemn and steps back a few paces, the better to study her appearance. In the meantime the assistant unpacks his paraphernalia at the toilet table. The Hairdresser pushes several persons back, so as to make more room for himself.)
(The Flute Player now steps forward and begins his Cadenza. Some Footmen have taken up positions at the front to the right. Others remain in the background.)
(After brief deliberation, the Hairdresser has made up his mind and with an air of determination goes to the Princess and begins to dress her hair. A Courier in a livery of pink, black and silver, enters carrying a note. The Major-Domo is quickly at hand with a silver salver and presents it to the Princess. The Hairdresser pauses to allow her to read. The assistant hands him a fresh pair of curling tongs. The Hairdresser swings it: it is too hot. The assistant gives him, after a questioning glance at the Princess, who nods assent, the note, which he smilingly uses for cooling the tongs. The Singer has taken up his position.)

THE TENOR: (reading from a sheet of music): Di rigori armeto il seno
Contro amor mi ribellai
Ma fui vinto in un baleno
In mirar due vaghi rai
Ahi! Che resiste poco
Cor di gelo a stral di fuoco!
(The Hairdresser hands the tongs to his assistant and applauds the singer. Then he continues to work at the coiffure of the Princess. In the meantime a Footman has admitted through the small door the Body Servant, the Almoner and the Chasseur of the Baron. They are three strange apparitions. The Body Servant is a tall young fellow of foolish insolent mien. He carries under his arm a leather jewel case. The Almoner is an unkempt village councillor, a stunted but strong and bold-looking imp.

aussehender Gnom. Der Leibjäger mag, bevor er in die schlechtsitzende Livree gesteckt wurde, Mist geführt haben. Der Almosenier und der kammerdiener scheinen sich um den Vortritt zu streiten und steigen einander auf die Füsse. Sie steuern längs der linken Seite auf ihren Herrn zu, in dessen Nähe sie Halt machen.)

BARON: (auf dem Faninal links ganz vorne zum Notar, der vor ihm steht, seine Weisungen entgegennimmt. Halblaut): Als Morgengabe—ganz separatim jedoch—und vor der Mitgift—bin ich verstanden, Herr Notar?—
kehrt Schloss und Herrschaft Gaunersdorf an mich zurück!
Von Lasten frei und ungemindert an Privilegien, so wie mein Vater selig sie besessen hat.

NOTAR: (kurzatmig): Gestatten hochfreiherrliche Gnaden die submisseste Belehrung, dass eine Morgengabe wohl vom Gatten an die Gattin, nicht aber von der Gattin an den Gatten (tief aufatmend.)
bestellet oder stipuliert zu werden, fähig ist.

BARON: Das mag wohl sein.

NOTAR: Dem ist so—

BARON: Aber im besondern Fall—

NOTAR: Die Formen und die Präskriptionen kennen keinen Unterschied.

BARON: (schreit): Haben ihn aber zu kennen:

NOTAR: (erschrocken): In Gnaden!

BARON: (wieder leise, aber eindringlich und voll hohen Selbstgefühles): Wenn eines hochadeligen Blutes blühender Spross sich herablässt im Ehebette einer so gut als bürgerlichen Mamsell Faninal —bin ich verstanden?—acte de présence zu machen vor Gott und der Welt und sozusagen angesichts kaiserlicher Majestät—(Flötist beginnt wieder zu präludieren).
Da wird, corpo di Bacco! von Morgengabe als geziemendem Geschenk dankbarer Devotion für die Hingab' so hohen Blutes sehr wohl die Rede sein!
(Sänger macht miene wieder anzufangen, wartet noch, bis der Baron still wird.)

NOTAR: (zum Baron, leise): Vielleicht, dass man die Sache separatim—

The Chasseur looks as if, before being thrust into his ill-fitting livery, he had worked in the farm. The Almoner and the Body Servant seem to be fighting for precedence, and trip each other up. They steer a course to the left, towards their master, in whose vicinity they come to a halt.)

BARON: (seated, to the Attorney, who stands before him, taking his instructions): As compensation, as a separate gift,
Before the dowry, Master Attorney, understand,
I shall receive the title-deeds of Gaunersdorf,
Released from all encumbrances and all claims whatsoever.
With privileges intact, just as my father held them.

ATTORNEY: (asthmatic): Your Lordship—with dutiful submission—has not been pleased to remember
That a donatio ante nuptias may be given by the husband
But cannot ever come from wife to husband—
(Fetching a deep breath.)
Such contracts are unprecedented quite.

BARON: That may be so.

ATTORNEY: It is so.

BARON: But in this special case—

ATTORNEY: That statutes are precise, no way is known of circumventing them.

BARON: (shouts): But I insist that you shall know one.

ATTORNEY: (alarmed): Your pardon.

BARON: But, do you see, when a noble race's chief condescends to a union
With a young person, a Mistress Faninal,
Whose father has no pedigree—upon whose patent of nobility
The ink is scarcely dry—if then I choose in face of Heaven
And of the Empress thus to honor her.
(The Flautist begins another Prelude.)
I think, corpo di Bacco, that such is clearly
A case where an exception can be made, and that the bride
Should have full leave to show her gratitude
For the honor done to her.

ATTORNEY: (to the Baron, softly): Perhaps by means of purchase and conveyance . . .

BARON: (leise): Er ist ein schmählicher Pedant: als Morgengabe will ich das Gütel!

NOTAR: (ebenso): Als einen wohl verklausulierten Teil der Mitgift—

BARON: (halblaut): Als Morgengabe!
Geht das nicht in Seinen Schädel!

NOTAR: (ebenso): Als eine Schenkung inter vivos oder—

BARON: (schlägt wütend auf den Tisch, schreiend): Als Morgengabe:

DER SÄNGER: (während des Gesprächs der beiden): Ma si caro è'l mio tormento
Dolce è si la piaga mia,
Ch' il penare è mio contento
E'l sanarmi è tirannia
Ahi! Che resiste puoco—
Cor . . . .
(Hier erhebt der Baron seine Stimme so, dass der Sänger jäh abbricht, desgleichen die Flöte.)
(Notar zieht sich erschrocken in die Ecke zurück).
(Marschallin winkt den Sänger zu sich, reicht ihm die Hand zum Kuss).
(Sänger Nebst Flötist ziehen sich unter tiefen Verbeugungen zurück).
(Baron tut, als ob nichts geschehen wäre, winkt dem Sänger leutselig zu, tritt dann zu seiner Dienerschaft, streicht dem Leiblakai die bäurisch in die Stirn gekämmten Haare hinaus; geht dann, als suchte er jemand, zur kleinen Tür, öffnet sie, spioniert hinaus, argert sich, dass die Zofe nicht zurückkommt; schnüffelt gegen's Bett, schüttelt den Kopf, kommt dann wieder vor).

MARSCHALLIN: (sieht sich in dem Handspiegel, halblaut): Mein lieber Hippolyte, Heut haben Sie ein altes Weib aus mir gemacht:
(Der Friseur mit Bestürzung wirft sich, fieberhaft auf den Lockenbau der Marschallin und verändert ihn aufs neue. Das Gesicht der Marschallin bleibt traurig.)
(über die Schulter zum Haushofmeister): Abtreten die Leut'!
(Die Lakaien, eine Kette bildend schieben die aufwartenden Personen zur Tür hinaus, die sie dann verschliessen. Nur der Gelehrte, vom Haushofmeister ihr zugeführt bleibt noch im Gespräch mit der Marschallin, bis zum Schluss des Intermezzos zwischen Valzacchi, Annina und dem Baron. Valzacchi, hinter ihm Annina, haben sich im Rücken aller rings um die Bühne zum Baron hinübergeschlichen und präsentieren sich ihm mit übertriebener Devotion).

BARON: (to himself): The wretched pettifogging fool!
As compensation I must have it!

ATTORNEY: Or in the marriage settlement, with special clauses . . .

BARON: No—compensation.
Can you not get that into your thick skull?

ATTORNEY: Or as donatio inter vivos—or else.

BARON: (in a fury, thumping the table, shouts): No, compensation.

THE TENOR: (during this conversation): Ma si caro è il mio tormento
Dolce è si la piaga mia,
Che il penare è mio contento
E'l sanarmi è tirannia
Ahi che resiste poco
Cor . . . . .
(At this point the Baron raises his voice so that the Singer ends abruptly, likewise the Flute Player.)
(The Princess beckons the Singer and gives him her hand to kiss. The Singer and the Flute Player retire with deep obeisances. The Attorney withdraws into a corner in alarm. The Baron does as if nothing had happened, and makes a sign of condescending approval to the Singer, then goes across to his servants; straightens the towzled hair of his body servant; then goes, as if looking for somebody, to the small door, opens it, peers out, is annoyed, looks by the bed, shakes his head and comes forward again.)

PRINCESS: (looking at herself in a hand mirror, aside): My good friend Hippolyte, this will not do, You've made me look a very fright.
(The Hairdresser in consternation falls on the Princess's headdress with feverish energy and changes it again. The Princess continues to wear a pensive expression. Valzacchi, followed by Annina, has, behind the back of everybody else, slunk to the other side of the stage, and they present themselves to the Baron with exaggerated obsequiousness.)
(over her shoulder to the Major-Domo): They are all dismissed.
(The Footmen, taking hands, push them all out by the door, which they then close. Only the Scholar, whom the Major-Domo presents to the Princess, remains in conversation with her till the close of the episode between the Baron, Valzacchi and Annina.)

VALZACCHI: (zum Baron): Ihre Gnade sukt etwas. Ik seh, Ihr Gnade at eine Bedürfnis.
Ik kann dienen. Ik kann besorgen.

BARON: (tritt zuruck): Wer ist Er, was weiss Er

VALZACCHI: Ihr Gnade Gesikt sprikt ohne Sunge.
Wie ein Hantike: come statua do Giove.

BARON: Das ist ein besserer Mensch.

VALZACCHI: Erlaukte Gnade, attachieren uns an Sein Gefolge
(Fällt auf die Knie, desgleichen Annina)

BARON: Euch?

VALZACCHI: Onkel und Nikte.
Su sweien maken alles besser.
Per esempio: Ihre Gnade at eine junge Frau—

BARON: Woher weiss Er denn das, Er Teufel Er?

VALZACCHI: (eifrig): Ihre Gnade ist in Eifersukt: dico per dire
Eut oder morgen könnte sein. Affare nostro!
Jede Sritt die Dame sie tut,
jede Wagen die Dame steigt, jede Brief die Dame bekommt—
wir sind da!
An die Ecke, in die Kamin, 'inter die Bette—in eine Schranke, unter die Dache,
wir sind da!

ANNINA: Ihre Gnaden wird nicht bedauern
(Halten ihm die Hände hin, Geld heischend, er tut, als bemerke er es nicht.)

BARON: (halblaut): Hm: Was es alles gibt in diesem Wien?
Zur Probe nur: kennt Sie die Jungfer Mariandel?

ANNINA: (ebenso): Mariandel?

BARON: (ebenso): Das Zofel hier im Haus bei Ihrer Gnaden?

VALZACCHI: (leise zu Annina): Sai tu, cosa vuole?

ANNINA: (ebenso): Niente!

VALZACCHI: (zum Baron): Sicker!
Sicker!
Mein nickte wird besorgen.
Seien sicker, Ihre Gnade?
Wir sind da!
(Hält abermals die Hand hin, Bar-

VALZACCHI: (to the Baron): Is your Lords'ip lacking aught?
I see zat your Lords'ip is looking for somezing.
I can help you, I can be useful.

BARON: (drawing back): And who may you be, pray?

VALZACCHI: Zough your Lords'ip say nozzing
Ve understand from your Lords'ip expression.

ANNINA: Vat your Lords'ip wishes . . .

VALZACCHI: Come statua di Giove.

BARON: He might be useful, I think.

VALZACCHI AND ANNINA: (kneeling): May't please your Lords'ip we declare ourselves your 'umble servants.

BARON: You?

VALZACCHI AND ANNINA: Uncle and niece
In couples our vork is easier.
Per esempio?
'As your Lords'ip married a youzful bride . . .

BARON: How come you to know so much, you dog?

VALZACCHIE AND ANNINA: (eagerly): 'As your Lords'ip cause for jealousy?
Dico per dire.
Now or tomorrow?
Who can tell?
Affare nostro!
Every step ze lady may take,
Every coach zat ze lady 'ires,
Every billet doux zat she 'as—
Ve are zere
At ze corner, or by ze fire
Or in a cupboard, or in ze attic,
Or by ze bedside, under ze table,
Ve are zere!

ANNINA: Sure your Lords'ip vill not regret it.
(They hold out their hands as if for money. The Baron pretends not to notice them.)

BARON: (aside): Hm! What things we see and hear in this great town!
To try your skill, do you perchance know Mariandel?

VALZACCHI: Mariandel?

BARON: Her Highness's waiting maid that's always with her!

VALZACCHI: (aside to Annina): Sai tu? cosa vuole?

ANNINA: Niente.

VALZACCHI: (to the Baron): Trust us, trust us: ve vill soon 'ave information—
Put your trust in us, your Lords'ip—
Ve are zere!

on tut, als sähe er es nicht. Marschallin ist aufgestanden. Friseur nach tiefer Verbeugung eilt ab. Gehilfe hinter ihm.)

BARON: (die beiden Italiener stehen lassend, auf die Marschallin zu): Darf ich das Gegenstück.
(diskret.)
zu Dero sauberm Kammerzofel präsentieren?
(Selbstgefällig.)
Die Ahnlichgeit soll, hör ich, unverkennbar sein.
(Marschallin nickt):
Leupold, das Futteral.
(Der jung Kammerlakai präsentiert linkisch das Futteral.)

MARSCHALLIN: (ein bischen lachend): Ich gratulier' Euer Liebden sehr.

BARON: (nimmt dem Burschen das Futteral aus der Hand und winkt ihm zurückzutreten). Und da ist nun die silberne Rosen!
(Will's aufmachen.)

MARSCHALLIN: Lassen nur drinnen.
Haben die Gnad' und stellen's dort hin.

BARON: Vielleicht das Zofel soll's übernehmen?
Ruft man ihr?

MARSCHALLIN: Nein, lassen nur.
Die hat jetzt keine Zeit.
Doch sei Er sicher: den Grafen Octavian bitt' ich ihm auf, er wird's mir zulieb schon tun und als Euer Liebden Kavalier vorfahren mit der Rosen bei der Jungfer Braut.
(Leichthin.)
Stellen indes nur hin.
Und jetzt, Herr Vetter, sag' ich Ihm Adieu.
Man retiriert sich jetzt von hier:
Ich werd' jetzt in die Kirchen gehn.
(Lakaien öffnen die Flügeltür.)

BARON: Euer Gnaden haben heut durch unversiegte Huld mich tiefst beschämt.
(Macht die Reverenz; entfernt sich unter Zeremoniell. Der Notar hinter ihm, auf seinen Wink. Seine drei Leute hinter diesem, in mangelhafter Haltung. Die beiden Italiener lautlos und geschmeidig, schlissen sich unbermerkt an. Lakaien schliessen die Tür. Haushofmeister tritt ab. Marschallin allein.)

MARSCHALLIN: (allein): Da geht er hin, der aufgeblasene schlechte Kerl, und kriegt das hübsche junge Ding und einen Pinkel Geld dazu.
(Seufzend.)
Als musst's so sein.
Und bildet sich noch ein, dass er es ist, der sich was vergibt.

BARON: (leaving the two Italians, to the Princess): May I now introduce, in all discretion,
The counterpart of your young servant to your Highness?
The likeness is wonderful, my friends all tell me.
(Princess nods.)
Leopold, the jewel-case!

PRINCESS: (smiling): He does great honor to his ancestry.
(The young body servant awkwardly hands over the jewel-case.)

BARON: (taking his seat and signing to the young man to withdraw): The Silver Rose is here, in this casket.
(Opening it.)

PRINCESS: Do not disturb it.
Pray, place it yonder, I'll be obliged.

BARON: Or shall I call your waiting-maid
And give it to her—

PRINCESS: Not to her.
She is now occupied.
But this I promise—I will at once make known your wishes to the Count,
For me he will consent, I know—
And all proper usage observing,
Duly to your bride the Rose of Silver bear,
Meanwhile I'll keep it here.
And now, your Lordship, I bid you adieu—
It is high time that I should go
Else I shall be too late for church—
(The Footmen open the folding door.)

BARON: The most gracious courtesy your Highness renders me
Overwhelms me quite—
(He makes an obeisance and ceremoniously withdraws. At a sign from him, the Attorney follows; and after him the Baron's three servants shuffle out awkwardly. The two Italians silently and obsequiously join the train without his observing them. The Major-Domo withdraws. The Footmen close the door. The Princess is left alone.)

PRINCESS: Now go your ways.—
Go, vain pretentious profligate!
And what is your reward?
An ample dowry and a pretty bride—
He takes it all, thinking it is but his due—
And boasts that he has greatly honored her.

Was erzürn' ich mich denn?
Ist doch der Lauf der Welt.
Kann mich auch an ein Mädel erinnern, die frîsch aus dem Kloster ist in den heiligen Ehestand kommandiert word'n.
(Nimmt den Handspiegel.)
Wo ist die jetzt? Ja,
(seufzend.)
such' dir den Schnee vom vergangenen Jahr:
Das sag' ich so:
(Ruhig.)
Aber wie kann das wirklich sein, dass ich die kleine Resi war
und dass ich auch einmal die alte Frau sein werd'.
Die alte Frau, die alte Marschallin!
"Siegst es, da geht's die alte Fürstin Resi!"
Wie kann denn das geschehen?
Wie macht denn das der liebe Gott?
Wo ich doch immer die gleiche bin.
Und wenn er's schon so machen muss, warum lasst er mich denn zuschaun dabei
mit gar so klarem Sinn!
Warum versteckt er's nicht vor mir?
Das alles ist geheim, so viel geheim.
Und man ist dazu da, (seufzend)
dass man's ertragt.
Und in dem "Wie"
(sehr ruhig.)
da liegt der ganze Unterschied—
(Octavian tritt von rechts ein, in einem Morgananzug mit Reitstiefeln).

MARSCHALLIN: (ruhig, mit halbem Lächeln): Ach, du bist wieder da!

OCTAVIAN: (zärtlich): Und du bist traurig!

MARSCHALLIN: Es is ja schon vorbei.
Du weisst ja, wie ich bin.
Ein halb Mal lustig, ein halb Mal traurig.
Ich kann halt meinen Gedanken nicht kommandier'n.

OCTAVIAN: Ich weiss, warum du traurig bist, du Schatz.
Weil du erschrocken bist und Angst gehabt hast.
Hab' ich nicht recht?
Gesteh' mir nur:
du hast Angst gehabt,
du Süsse, du Liebe,
um mich, um mich!

MARSCHALLIN: Ein bissel vielleicht, aber ich hab' mich erfangen und hab' mir vorgesagt: Es wird schon nicht dafür stehn.
Und wär's dafür gestanden?

OCTAVIAN: (heiter): Und es war kein Feldmarschall, nur ein spassiger Herr Vetter, und du gehörst mir,
du gehörst mir:

(Sighs.)
But why trouble myself? The world will have its way
Did I not know a girl, just like to this one,
Who straight from out her convent was marched off
Into the Holy Estate of Wedlock?
Where is she now!
(Sighs.)
Go seek the snows of yesteryear!
But can it be—can it be—though I say it so,
That I was that young Tess of long ago
And that I shall be called, ere lone, "the old Princess,"
"The Old Field Marshal's lady."—
"Look you
There goes the old Princess Theresia"—
How can it come to pass?
How can the Powers decree it so?
For I am I, and never change.
(Gaily.)
And if indeed it must be so,
Why then must I sit here, a looker on,
And see it all and grieve?
Were it not better we were blind?
These things are still a mystery—a mystery—
And we are here below to bear it all.
(Sighs)
But how? But how?
(Very quietly.)
In that lies all the difference.
(Enter Octavian, from the right, in riding dress with riding boots.)

PRINCESS: (quietly, smiling): Ah! You are back again—

OCTAVIAN: And you are pensive!

PRINCESS: The mood has flown again.
You know me, how I am—
A brief awhile merry—a brief while mournful—
My thoughts fly here and there, I know not how.

OCTAVIAN: I know why you have been so sad, beloved,
You were beside yourself with fear for us both.
Is it not so?
Confess to me.
You were sore afraid,
My angel, my dearest,
For me—for me!

PRINCESS: A little at first,
But soon my courage had come back, and to myself I said—
"It cannot be—It is not yet."
And if it had been fated?

OCTAVIAN: (gaily): And it was not the prince at all, It was only your comical kinsman.
And you are mine own!
You are mine own.

MARSCHALLIN: (erhebt sich, ihn abwehrend): Taverl, umarm' Er nicht zu viel.
Wer allzuviel umarmt, der hält nichts fest.

OCTAVIAN: (leidenschaftlich): Sag' dass du mir gehörst!
Mir!

MARSCHALLIN: Oh, sei Er jetzt sanft, sei Er gescheit und sanft und gut.
(Octavian will lebhaft erwidern).
Nein, bitt' schön, sei Er nicht, wie alle Männer sind!

OCTAVIAN: (misstrauisch auffahrend): Wie alle Männer?

MARSCHALLIN: (schnell gefasst): Wie der Feldmarschall und der Vetter Ochs.

OCTAVIAN: (nicht dabei beruhigt): Bichette!

MARSCHALLIN: (mit Nachdruck): Sei Er nur nicht, wie alle Männer sind.

OCTAVIAN: (zornig): Ich weiss nicht, wie alle Männer sind.
(Plötzlich sanft.)
Weiss nur, dassich dich lieb hab',
Bichette, sie haben mir dich ausgetauscht.
Bichette, wo ist Sie denn!

MARSCHALLIN: (ruhig): sie ist wohl da, Herr Schatz.

OCTAVIAN: Ja, ist Sie da?
Dann will ich Sie halten,
dass Sie mir nicht wieder entkommt!
(Leidenschaftlich.)
Packen will ich Sie, packen, dass Sie es spürt, zu wem Sie gehört—zu mir: Denn ich bin Ihr und Sie ist mein!

MARSCHALLIN: (sich ihm entwindend): Oh, sei Er gut, Quinquin.
Mir ist zumut,
dass ich die Schwäche von allem Zeitlichen recht spüren muss, bis in mein Herz hinein,
wie man nichts halten soll,
wie man nichts packen kann,
wie alles zerlauft zwischen den Fingern,
alles sich auflöst, wonach wir greifen,
alles zergeht wie Dunst und Traum.

OCTAVIAN: Mein Gott, wie Sie das sagt.
Sie will mir doch nur zeigen, dass Sie nicht an mir hängt.
(Die Tränen kommen ihm.)

MARSCHALLIN: Sei Er doch gut, Quinquin!
(Octavian weint stärker):
Jetzt muss ich noch den Buben dafür trösten,
Dass er mich über kurz oder lang wird sitzen lassen.
(Sie streichelt ihn.)

OCTAVIAN: Ueber kurz oder lang?
(Heftig.)
Wer legt Ihr heut die Wörter in den Mund, Bichette?

MARSCHALLIN: Das Ihn das Wort so kränkt!
(Octavian hält sich die Ohren zu).

MARSCHALLIN: Die Zeit im Grund, Quinquin,
Die Zeit, die ändert doch nichts an den Sachen.
Die Zeit, die ist ein sonderbar Ding.
Wenn man so hinlebt, ist sie rein gar nichts.
Aber dann auf enimal, da spürt man nichts als sie.
Sie ist um uns herum, sie ist auch in uns drinnen.
In den Gesichtern rieselt sie,
im Spiegel da rieselt sie,
in meinen Schläfen fliesst sie.
Und zwischen mir und dir
da fliesst sie wieder, lautlos, wie eine Sanduhr.
(Warm.)
Oh, Quinquin!
Manchmal hör' ich sie fliessen—unaufhaltsam.
Manchmal steh' ich auf mitten in der Nacht und lass die Uhren alle, alle stehn.
Allein man muss sich auch vor ihr nicht fürchten.
Auch sie ist ein Geschöpf des Vaters, der uns alle erschaffen hat.

OCTAVIAN: (mit ruhiger Zärtlichkeit): Mein schöner Schatz, will Sie sich traurig machen mit Gewalt?
wo Sie mich da hat.
wo ich meine Finger in Ihre Finger schlinge, wo ich mit meinen Augen Ihre Augen suche, Wo sie mich hat—
gerade da ist Ihr so zumut?

MARSCHALLIN: (sehr ernst): Quinquin, heut oder morgen geht Er hin und gibt mich auf um einer andern willen, (etwas zögernd.)
die schöner oder jünger ist als ich.

OCTAVIAN: Willst du mit Worten mich von dir stossen, weil dir die Hände den Dienst nicht tun?

MARSCHALLIN: (ruhig): Der Tag kommt ganz von selber.
Heut oder morgen kommt der Tag, Octavian.

PRINCESS: (pushing him aside): Dearest, embrace me not so much!
Who tries to grasp too much, holds nothing fast.

OCTAVIAN: (passionately): Tell me that you are mine—mine!

PRINCESS: Oh, be not so wild! Be gentle and tender and kind.
No, pray you now—
(Octavian is about to answer excitedly.)
Do you not be like all the other men.

OCTAVIAN: (suspiciously): Like all the others?

PRINCESS: (quickly recovering herself): As the Marshal is, and as my kinsman Ochs.

OCTAVIAN: (still dissatisfied): Bichette!

PRINCESS: (emphatically): No—do not be like all the other men.

OCTAVIAN: (angrily): The others?
How can I know what they are—
(With sudden tenderness.)
Only I know I love you.
Bichette, there surely is some changeling here.
Bichette, it is not you.

PRINCESS: No, it is I, my dear.

OCTAVIAN: Yes, it is you?
I will clasp you closer,
That you'll never, never escape me,
I will cling to you tightly,
That in truth you will know whose you are.

PRINCESS: (freeing herself from him): Command yourself, Mignon.
I feel I know
That all things earthly are but vanity, but empty dreams.
Deep in my heart I know
How we should grasp at nothing,
How we can cling to nothing
How the world's joys cheat and elude us—
How empty all things are that we deem precious,
All things must pass, like mists—like dreams.

OCTAVIAN: Oh Heaven!
Why so distraught,
You do but want to tell me that your love is dead.
(Weeps.)

PRINCESS: Be not so sad, Mignon.
(Octavian weeps more passionately.)
(Quietly.)
And now must I for him find consolation—
And for what?
Because—sooner or later—one day he'll leave me.
(Strokes his hair.)

OCTAVIAN: I will leave you one day?
(Angrily.)
Who is it prompted you to talk of this?

PRINCESS: Do my words hurt you so?

OCTAVIAN: Bichette!

PRINCESS: What fate decrees must come, Mignon.
(Octavian stops his ears.)
And time—how strangely does it go its ways—
First we are heedless—Lo! It is as nothing!
Then a sudden waking, and we feel nothing else but it,
All the world tells of it, all our souls are filled with it,
No face but shows the maker of it,
No mirror but shows it us—
All my veins feel its throbbing,
And there—between you and me—
It flows in silence,
Trickling—like sands in the hourglass—
(Earnestly.)
Oh! Mignon!
But sometimes I hear it flowing Ceaselessly.
(Softly.)
Sometimes I arise at the dead of night
And take the clocks and stop them every one—
And yet—to be afraid of it—what boots it?
For, mindful of its creatures all.
Heaven in its own wisdom has ordained it so.

OCTAVIAN: (quietly and tenderly): And why let such dark forebodings cloud your soul, beloved?
Now that I am here,
With my fingers like tendrils round your fingers twining,
Now that mine eyes are plunged in yours and blaze with rapture,
Now that I am here,
At such time can you think of grief?

PRINCESS: (very serious): Mignon, now or tomorrow, surely,
You will go from me, leave me and choose another.
(Hesitates.)
A younger or a prettier than I.

OCTAVIAN: Is it with words with which you would drive me,
Thinking your hands will not serve your turn?

PRINCESS: (quietly): The day will come unbidden—
Now or tomorrow it must come,
Octavian.

OCTAVIAN: Nicht heut, nicht morgen! ich hab dich lieb.
Nicht heut, nicht morgen!
Wenn's so einen Tag geben muss, i denk' ihn nicht!
So einen hässlichen Tag!
Ich will den Tag nicht sehn
Ich will den Tag nicht denken.
Was quälst du dich und mich, Theres'?

MARSCHALLIN: Heut oder morgen oder den übernächsten Tag.
Nicht quälen will ich dich, mein Schatz.
Ich sag' was wahr ist, sag's zu mir so gut als zu dir.
Leicht will ich's machen dir und mir.
Leicht muss man sein,
mit leichtem Herz und leichten Händen halten und nehmen, halten und lassen . . .
Die nicht so sind, die straft das Leben, und Gott erbarn sich ihrer nicht.

OCTAVIAN: Sie spricht ja heute wie ein Pater.
soll dass heissen, dass ich Sie nie mehr
werd' küssen dürfen, bis Ihr der Atem ausgeht?

MARSCHALLIN: (sanft): Quinquin, Er soll jetzt gehn, Er soll mich lassen.
Ich werd' jetzt in die Kirchen gehn,
und später fahr' ich zum Onkel Greifenklau,
der alt und gelähmt ist,
und ess' mit ihm: das freut den alten Mann.
Und Nachmittag werd' ich Ihm einen Laufer schicken, Quinquin, und sagen lassen,
ob ich in' Prater fahr'.
Und wenn ich fahr'
und Er hat Lust,
so wird Er auch in' Prater kommen
und neben meinem Wagen reiten.
Jetzt sei Er gut und folg' Er mir.

OCTAVIAN: (leise): Wie Sie befiehlt, Bichette.
(Er geht. Eine Pause.)

MARSCHALLIN: (allein, fährt leidenschaftlich auf): Ich hab' Ihn nicht einmal geküsst.
(Sie klingelt heftig. Lakaien kommen von rechts.) Lauft's dem Herrn Grafen nach und bittet's ihn noch auf ein Wort herauf.
(Lakaien schnell ab).
Ich hab' ihn fortgehn lassen und ihn nicht einmal geküsst.
(Sie sinkt auf den Sessel am Frisiertisch. Die Lakaien kommen zurück ausser Atem.)

ERSTER LAKAI: Der Herr Graf sind auf und davon.

ZWEITER LAKAI: Gleich beim Tor sind aufgesess.

OCTAVIAN: Not now, not tomorrow—it will never come,
Though Fate have decreed it must come, I will not think
Nor see such a day,
I will not think such a day,
(With growing passion.)
I will not see nor think it!
Why torture me and yourself, Therèse?

PRINCESS: Now or tomorrow—if not tomorrow, very soon—
It is not to torture you, my dearest,
It is truth that I'm speaking—to myself no less than to you.
Let us then lightly meet our fate.
Light must we be,
With spirits light and grasp light-fingered,
Hold all our pleasures—hold them and leave them.
If not, much pain and grief await us, and none in earth or heaven will pity us.

OCTAVIAN: You speak today like a confessor—
Does it mean that never again—no, never,
I shall kiss you—kiss you in endless rapture?

PRINCESS: Mignon, now you must go. It is time to leave me.
I now must go to Church, and then
It may be, visit my dear uncle Greifenklau,
Who's old and bedridden,
And dine with him: It will please the old man much.
Then to your house I'll send a courier,
Mignon, and he will tell you
Whether I shall take the air;
And if I drive,
And if you please,
You will meet me in the Prater, riding,
And stay awhile beside my carriage.
Do what I ask—and be not rash.

OCTAVIAN: (softly): As you command, Bichette.
(He goes. A pause.)
(The Princess starts up violently.)

PRINCESS: And he has gone, and not one kiss!
(She rings violently. Footmen enter hurriedly from the right.)
Run and overtake the Count
And say I beg a word with him.
(Exeunt Footmen quickly.)
I have let him go from me. No farewell—not one kiss!
(The four Footmen enter breathless.)

FIRST FOOTMAN: The young Count is off and away.

SECOND FOOTMAN: At the door he mounted quickly.

DRITTER LAKAI: Reitknecht hat gewartet.

VIERTER LAKAI: Gleich beim Tor sind aufgesessen wie der Wind.

ERSTER LAKAI: Waren um die Ecken wie der Wind.

ZWEITER LAKAI: Sind nachgelaufen.

DRITTER LAKAI: Wie haben wir geschrien.

VIERTER LAKAI: War umsonst.

ERSTER LAKAI: Waren um die Ecken wie der Wind.

MARSCHALLIN: Es ist gut, geht's nur wieder.
(Die Lakaien ziehen sich zurück.)

MARSCHALLIN: (ruft nach): Den Mohammed!
(Der kleine Neger herein, klingelnd, verneigt sich.)

MARSCHALLIN: Das da trag'.
(Neger nimmt eifrig das Saffianfutteral).
Weisst ja nicht wohin. Zum Grafen Octavian.
Gib's ab und sag':
Da drin ist die silberne Ros'n.
Der Herr Graf weiss ohnehin.
(Der Neger läuft ab.)
(Marschallin stützt den Kopf auf die Hand und bleibt so während des ganzen Nachspiels).

End of Act I.

ZWEITER AUFZUG

Saal bei Herrn von Faninal. Mitteltüre nach dem Vorsaal. Tür links. Rechts ein grosses Fenster. Stühle an der Wand. In den Ecken jederseits grosse Kamine. Zu beiden Seiten der Mitteltüre je ein Lakai.

FANINAL: (im Begriffe, von Sophie Abschied zu nehmen): Ein ernster Tag, ein grosser Tag!
Ein Ehrentag, ein heiliger Tag!
(Sophie küsst ihm die Hand).

MARIANNE: Der Josef fahrt vor mit der neuen Kaross', hat himmelblaue Vorhäng', vier Apfelschimmel sind dran.

HAUSHOFMEISTER: (nicht ohne Vertraulichkeit zu Faninal): Ist höchste Zeit, dass Euer Gnaden fahren.
Der hochadelige Bräutigamsvater, sagt die Schicklichkeit,
muss ausgefahren sein
bevor der silberne Rosenkavalier vorfahrt.
Wär nicht geziemend,
das sie sich vor der Tür begegneten.

THIRD FOOTMAN: Servants had been in waiting—

FOURTH FOOTMAN: At the gate he mounted like the wind—

FIRST FOOTMAN: Galloped round the corner like the wind—

SECOND FOOTMAN: We all ran after—

THIRD FOOTMAN: We cried ourselves hoarse—

FOURTH FOOTMAN: It was too late.

FIRST FOOTMAN: Galloped round the corner like the wind—

PRINCESS: Very well.
You may leave me.
(The Footmen withdraw.)

PRINCESS: (calling after them): Send Mahomet.
(Enter the Black Boy, with tinkling bells. Bows.)

PRINCESS: Carry that—
(The Boy quickly takes the jewel case.)
Stop till I say where—To Count Octavian
And say he'll find
Within it the Silver Rose
It is enough—the Count will know.
(The Black Boy runs off. The Princess bows her head on her hand and remains so—deep in thought—till the curtain falls.)

END OF ACT I.

ACT II

A room in the house of Herr von Faninal. Center door leading to the antechamber. Doors right and left. To the right a large window. At either side of the center door chairs against the wall. In the rounded corners at either side large fireplaces.

HERR VON FANINAL: (in the act of saying goodbye to Sophia): A solemn day, a day of no
A festal day, a sacred day
(Sophia kisses his hand.)

MARIANNE: There's Joseph at the door with the new equipage,
With curtains of blue satin.
And four fine greys to draw it.

MAJOR-DOMO: (a little confidentially to Faninal): Now by your leave, Sir, it is high time for starting,
For the most noble father of the bride,—
So etiquette prescribes—
Must not be found within,
When the bridegroom's messenger appears who brings the Silver Rose.
Well then, so be it.

(Lakaien öffnen die Tür.)

FANINAL: In Gottes Namen. Wenn ich wiederkomm', so führ' ich deinen Herrn
Zukünftigen bei der Hand.

MARIANNE: Den edlen und gestrengen Herrn von Lerchenau!
(Faninal geht).
(Sophie vorgehend, allein, indessen Marianne am Fenster).

MARIANNE: Jetzt steigt er ein. Der zaver und der Anton springen hinten auf.
Der Stallpag' reicht dem Josef seine Peitsch'n.
Alle, Fenster sind voller Leut'.

SOPHIE: (am Fenster): In dieser feierlichen Stunde der Prüfung, da du mich, o mein Schöpfer, über mein Verdienst erhöhen und in den heiligen Ehestand führen willst, (sie hat grosse Mühe, gesammelt zu bleiben)
opfere ich dir in Demut, mein Herz in Demut auf.
Die Demut in mir zu erwecken,
muss ich mich demütigen.

MARIANNE: Die halbe Stadt ist auf die Füss'.
Aus dem Seminari schaun die Hochwürdigen von die Balkoner
Ein alter Mann sitzt oben auf der Latern'.

SOPHIE: (sammelt sich mühsam): Demütigen und recht bedenken: die Sünde, die
Schuld, die Niedrigkeit, die Verlassenheit, die Anfechtung!
Die Mutter ist tot und ich bin ganz allein.
Für mich selbst steh' ich ein.
Aber die Ehe ist ein heiliger Stand.

MARIANNE: (wie oben): Er kommt, er kommt in zwei Karossen.
Die erste ist vierspännig, die ist leer.
In der zweiten, sechsspännigen, sitzt er selber, der Rosenkavalier.

SOPHIE: (wie oben): Ich will mich niemals meines neuen Standes überheben—(die Stimmen der Läufer zu dreien vor Octavians Wagen unten auf der Gasse: Rofrano, Rofrano!) —mich überheben.
(Sie hält es nicht aus.)
Was rufen denn die?

(Footmen open the doors.)
It would be unseemly
If at the door you should encounter him.

FANINAL: When I return again,
I bring your bridegroom with me,
holding him by the hand.

MARIANNE: The virtuous and noble Lord of Lerchenau.
(Exit Faninal.)
(Sophia advances to the front by herself, while Marianne is at the window.)

MARIANNE: Now he's got in. Now Antony and Francis have climbed up behind,
And Joseph cracks his whip and now they've started,
And all the windows are filled full of folk.

SOPHIA: In this most sacred hour,
my God, O my Creator,
When Thy great blessings lift me high above my worth, I thank you,
That I am led to the Holy Estate by your will.
(She controls herself with difficulty.)
A contrite heart unto your Throne—Your Throne—I bring.
Oh! Grant that the sin of vainglory
May ever be far from my soul.

MARIANNE: (very excited): Half the Town is now afoot!
From the Seminary all the reverend men look on dumb founded,
And high up on a lantern there is one old man.

SOPHIA: (collects her thoughts with difficulty): Be far from my soul . . .
From all temptations, Lord, preserve me of the pomps and vanities
Of this world here below, by your great mercy—
My Mother, she is dead and all alone am I,
For me there's none to plead but I alone,
But wedlock is in truth a holy estate.

MARIANNE: (at the window): He is here! He's here! I see two coaches.
The first one has four horses—it is empty. In the second,
(Six horses it has)
I see him, the bridegroom's messenger.

SOPHIA: (as above): Let me not be puffed up with pride unduly by the honors,
(The servants followed by three couriers, who are running after Octavian's carriage, cry in the street below "Rofrano! Rofrano!")
(She loses her self-control.)
Of my new station.
What is it they cry?

MARIANNE: Den Namen vom Rosenkavalier und alle Namen
von deiner neuen fürstlich'n und gräflich'n Verwandtschaft rufen's aus.
Jetzt rangieren sich die Bedienten.
Die Lakaien springen rückwärts ab!
(Die Stimmen der Läufer zu dreinen näher: Rofrano, Rofrano!)

SOPHIE: Werden sie mein'
Bräutigam sein Namen
auch so ausrufen, wenn er angefahren kommt!?
(Die Stimmen der Läufer dicht unter dem Fenster: Rofrano, Rofrano!)

MARIANNE: Sie reissen den Schlag auf!
Er steigt aus!
Ganz in Silberstück' ist er angelegt,
von Kopf zu Fuss.
Wie ein heil'ger Engel schaut er aus.
(Sie schliesst eilig das Fenster. Zwei Faninalsche Lakaien haben schnell die Mitteltür aufgetan.)

SOPHIE: Herrgott im Himmel!
Ich weiss, der stolz ist eine schwere Sünd'.
Aber jetzt kann ich mich nicht demütigen.
Jetzt seht's halt nicht!
Denn das ist ja so schön, so schön!
(Währenddem ist Octavians Dienerschaft in seinen Farben; weis. mit blassgrün rasch eingetreten. Die Lakaien, die Haiducken mit kurmmen ungarischen Säbeln an der Seite, die Läufer in weissem sämischem Leder mit grünen Straussenfedern. Dicht hinter diesen ein Neger, der Octavians Hut, und ein anderer Lakai. der das Saffianfutteral für die silberne Rose in beiden Händen trägt. Dann Octavian, die Rose in der Rechten. Er geht mit adeligem Anstand auf Sophie zu, aber sein Knabengesicht ist von seiner Schüchternheit gespannt und gerötet. Sophie ist vor Aufregnung über seine Erscheinung und die Zeremonie leichenblass. Sie stehen einander gegenüber, und machen sich wechselweise durch ihre Verlegenheit und Schönheit noch verwirrter.)

OCTAVIAN: (etwas stockend): Mir ist die Ehre widerfahren, dass ich der hoch- und wohlgeborenen Jungfer Braut, in meines Herrn Vetters Namen, dessen zu Lerchenau,
die Rose seiner Liebe überreichen darf.

MARIANNE: They're shouting the name of him that's come and all the titles
Of this your high-born new relation, and his noble name.
(With excited gestures.)
Look! Now our footmen take position,
And all his servants have alighted now!
(The voices of the couriers, drawing nearer: "Rofrano! Rofrano!")

SOPHIA: And when my future husband comes, pray tell me,
Will they call out then?
Will his name be shouted too?
(The voices of the couriers immediately under the window: 'Rofrano! Rofrano!")

MARIANNE: (enthusiastically): They open the door now! He alights!
All in silver he glitters from head to foot,
A holy angel might he be—

SOPHIA: Oh Saints in Heaven, I know that pride is a most deadly sin;
But this day all my prayers are vain—I cannot Be duly meek—
For it is all so fair! so fair!
(The Footmen quickly open the center door. Enter Octavian bareheaded, dressed all in white and silver, carrying the Silver Rose in his hand. Behind him his servants in his colours—white and pale green, the Footmen, the Heyducks, with their crooked Hungarian swords at their side; the Couriers in white leather with green ostrich plumes. Immediately behind Octavian a black servant carrying his hat, and another Footman carrying the case of the Silver Rose in both hands. Behind these, Faninal's servants. Octavian taking the Rose in his right hand, advances with highborn grace towards Sophia; but his youthful features bear traces of embarrassment and he blushes. Sophia turns pale with excitement at his splendid appearance. They stand opposite each other—each disconcerted by the confusion and beauty of the other.)

OCTAVIAN: (with slight hesitation): I am much honored by my mission
To say to you, most noble lady, high-born bride,
That my dear kinsman, whose ambassador I am,
Baron Lerchenau, begs you
To take from me, as token of his love, this Rose.

SOPHIE: (nimmt die Rose)
Ich bin Ener Liebden sehr verbunden.
Ich bin Ener Liebden in aller Ewigkeit verbunden.
(Einer pause der verwirrung.)
(Sophie indem sie an der Rose riecht). Hat einen starken Geruch.
Wie Rosen, wie lebendige.

OCTAVIAN: Ja, ist ein Tropfen persischen Rosenöls darein getan.

SOPHIE: Wie himmelische, nicht irdische, wie Rosen vom hochheiligen Paradies.
Ist Ihm nicht auch?
(Octavian neight sich über die Rose, die sie ihm hinhält; dann richtet er sich auf und sieht auf ihren Mund).
Ist wie ein Gruss vom Himmel.
Ist bereits zu stark, als dass man's ertragen kann.
Zieht einen nach, als lägen Stricke um das Herz.
(Leise.)
Wo war ich schon einmal
und war so selig?

OCTAVIAN: (zugleich mit ihr wie unbewusst und noch leiser). Wo war ich schon einmal und war so selig?

SOPHIE: (mit Ausdruck): Dahin muss ich zurück! und müsst ich völlig sterben auf dem Weg!
Allein ich sterb' ja nicht.
Das ist ja weit. Ist Zeit und Ewigkeit in einem sel'gen Augenblick,
den will ich nie vergessen bis an meinen Tod.

OCTAVIAN: (zugleich mit ihr):
Ich war ein Bub',
da hab ich' die noch nicht gekannt.
Wer bin denn ich?
Wie komm' denn ich zu ihr?
Wie kommt denn sie zu mir?
Wär' ich kein Mann, die Sinne
möchten mir vergehn.
Das ist ein seliger Augenblick,
den will ich nie vergessen bis an meinen Tod.
(Indessen stand die Livree Octavians rückwärts regungslos. Ebenso die Faninalschen Bedienten mit dem Haushofmeister. Der Lakai Octavians übergibt jetzt das Futteral an Marianne. Sophie schüttelt ihre Versunkenheit ab und reicht die Rose der Marianne, die sie ins Futteral schliesst. Der Lakai mit dem Hut tritt von rückwärts an Octavian heran und reicht ihm den Hut. Die Livree Octavians tritt ab, während gleichzeitig die Faninalschen Bedienten drei Stühle in die Mitte tragen, zwei für Octavian und Sophie, einen rück- und seitwärts für die Duenna. Zugleich trägt der Faninalsche Haushofmeister das Futteral mit der Rose durch die Tür links ab. Sofort treten auch die Faninalschen Bedienten durch die Mitteltür ab. Sophie und Octavian stehen einander gegenüber, einigermassen zur gemeinen Welt zurückgekehrt, aber befangen. Auf einer Handbewegung Sophies nehmen sie beide Platz, desgleichen die Duenna, im gleichen Augenblick, wo der Haushofmeister unsichtbar die Tür links von aussen zuschliesst.)

SOPHIE: Ich kenn' Ihn schon recht wohl, mon cousin!

OCTAVIAN: Sie kennt mich, ma cousine?

SOPHIE: Ja, aus dem Buch, wo die Stammerbäume drin sind, Dem Ehrenspiegel Oesterreichs.
Das nehm' ich immer abends mit ins Bett und such' mir meine künftige Verwandtschaft drin zusammen.

OCTAVIAN: Tut Sie das, ma cousine?

SOPHIE: Ich weiss, wie alt Euer Liebden sind:
Siebzehn Jahr' und zwei Monat'.
Ich weiss all Ihre Taufnamen: Octavian, Maria, Ehrenreich, Bonaventura, Ferdinand, Hyacinth.

OCTAVIAN: So gut weiss ich sie selber nicht einmal.

SOPHIE: Ich weiss noch was.
(Errötet.)

OCTAVIAN: Was weiss Sie noch, sag' Sie mir's, ma cousine.

SOPHIE: (ohne ihn anzusehen): Quinquin.

OCTAVIAN: (lacht) Weiss Sie den Namen auch?

SOPHIE: So nennen Ihn halt seine guten Freund' und schöne Damen, denk' ich mir, mit denen er recht gut ist.
(Kleine Pause.)
(mit Naivität)
Ich freu' mich aufs heiraten!
Freut er sich auch darauf?
Oder hat Er leicht noch gar nicht dran gedacht, mon cousin?
Denk' Er: Ist doch was andres als der ledige Stand.

OCTAVIAN: (Leise, während sie spricht): Wie schön sie ist!

SOPHIE: Freilich, Er ist ein Mann, da ist Er, was Er bleibt.
Ich aber brauch' erst einen Mann,
dass ich was bin.
Dafür bin ich dem Mann dann auch gar sehr verschuldet.

OCTAVIAN: (wie oben): Mein Gott, wie schön und gut sie ist.
Sie macht mich ganz verwirrt.

SOPHIE: Und werd' ihm keine Schand nicht machen und meinen Rang und Vortritt.
Tät' eine, die sich besser dünkt als ich,
ihn mir bestreiten
bei einer Kindstauf' oder Leich',

SOPHIA: (taking the Rose): I am to your Honor much indebted—
I am to your Honor to all eternity indebted—(A short pause of confusion.)
(Sophia smelling the rose). It is a fragrance entrancing—like roses—yes, like living ones. . . .

OCTAVIAN: Yes—some few drops of Persian attar have been poured thereon.

SOPHIA: A celestial flower, it seems not of earth.
A blossom from the sacred groves of Paradise.
Think you not so?
(Octavian bends over the Rose, which she holds out to him; then raises his head and gazes at her lips.)
It is like a heavenly message.—Oh! how strong the scent
I scarcely can suffer it,
(softly.)
Drawing me on—like something tugging at my heart.

OCTAVIAN: (Together with her—as in a reverie—still more softly): Where did I taste of old
Such rapture celestial?

SOPHIA: Though death await me there, to that fair scene I must betake me once again.
But yet, why think of death?
It is far from here!
In one blest moment dwells all life and all eternity—
Never may its memory fade!

OCTAVIAN: I was a child
Till her fair face I saw this day!
But who am I?
What fate brings her to me?
What fate brings me to her?
Feeling and sense would leave me,
Were I not a man.
Day blest to all eternity—
Never may its blessing fade.
(During this, Octavian's servants have taken up their position on the left at the back, Faninal's with the Major-Domo to the right. Octavian's footman hands the jewel case to Marianne. Sophia wakes from her reverie and gives the Rose to Marianne, who encloses it in the case. The Footman with the hat approaches Octavian and gives it to him. Octavian's servants then withdraw, and at the same time Faninal's servants carry three chairs to the center, two for Sophia and Octavian, and one for Marianne further back, at the side. Faninal's Major-Domo carries the jewel-case with the Rose through the door to the right. The other servants immediately withdraw through the center door.)
(Sophia and Octavian stand opposite each other almost restored to the every day world—but still a little embarrassed. At a sign from Sophia, both seat themselves, and the Duenna does likewise at the same moment as the door on the right is locked from without.)

SOPHIA: You're quite well known to me, mon cher Cousin.

OCTAVIAN: You know me, ma Cousine?

SOPHIA: Yes, your great House I have read of in a book,
"The Mirror of Nobility."
I take it of an evening to my room,
And seek for all the Princes, Dukes and Counts
Who are to be my kinsfolk.

OCTAVIAN: Is it so, ma Cousine?

SOPHIA: I know how old, to a week, you are—
Seventeen years and a quarter—
I know all your baptismal names—
Octavian—Maria—Ehrenreich—
Bonaventura—Fernand—Hyacinth.

OCTAVIAN: Faith, I have never known them half as well.

SOPHIA: I know also—

OCTAVIAN: And what is it you know besides, ma Cousine?

SOPHIA: (without looking at him): Mignon—

OCTAVIAN: (Laughing): Do you know that name too?

SOPHIA: So all your best friends are allowed to call you,
Court beauties also, more than one,
Who are with you most friendly
(A short pause.)
(Naively.)
It pleases me that I shall marry soon.
Will you not like it too
When you shall find a bride? Have you not thought of it, mon Cousin?
But think, how lonely all you bachelors are!

OCTAVIAN: (softly) Oh heaven!
How fair and good she is!

SOPHIA: Truly, you are a man, and men are what they are.
But, till a husband is her guide, a woman's naught.
I'll be much indebted to my husband for these things.

OCTAVIAN: (deeply moved—softly): How good and fair she is.
She confuses me quite.

SOPHIA: I never will, for sure, disgrace him—
And as for due precedence
(very eagerly)
If haply another woman ever should Dare to dispute it—

so will ich, wenn es sein muss, meiner Seel' ihr beweisen, dass ich die Vornehmere bin und lieber alles hinnehme wie Kränkung oder Ungebühr.

OCTAVIAN: (lebhaft). Wie kann Sie denn nur denken, dass man Ihr mit Ungebühr begegnen wird, da Sie doch immer die Schönste,
die Allerschönste sein wird.

SOPHIE: Lacht er mich aus, mon cousin?

OCTAVIAN: Wie, glaubt Sie das von mir?

SOPHIE: Er darf mich auslachen, wenn er will.
Von Ihm lass ich alles mir gerne geschehen, weil mir nie noch ein junger Kavalier . . . .
von Nähen oder Weitem also wohlgefallen hat wie Er.
Jetzt aber kommt mein Herr Zukünftiger.
(Die Tür rückwärts geht auf. Alle drei erheben sich. Sophie und Marianne treten nach rechts. Octavian nach links vorne. Faninal führt den Baron zeremoniös über die Schwelle und auf Sophie zu indem or ihm den Vortritt lässt. Die Lerchenausche Livree folgt auf Schritt und Tritt: zuerst der Almosenier mit dem Sohn und Leibkammerdie er. Dann folgt der Leibjäger mit einem ëhnlichen Lümmel, der ein Pflaster über der eingeschlagenen Nase trägt, und noch zwei von der gleichen Sorte vom Rübenacker her in die Livree gesteckt. Alle tragen wie ihr Herr Myrthensträusschen. Die zwei Fanalischen Boten bleiben im Hintergrunde.)

FANINAL: Ich präsentiere Euer Gnaden Dero Zukünftige.

BARON: (macht die Reverenz, dann zu Faninal): Deliziös!
Mach' Ihm mein Kompliment.
(Er ki'sst Sophie die Hand, gleichsam prüfend.)
Ein feines Handgelenk. Darauf halt' ich gar viel.
Ist unter Bürgerlichen eine seltne Distinktion.

OCTAVIAN: (halblaut): Es wird mir heiss und kalt.

FANINAL: Gestatten dass ich die getreue Jungfer
Marianne Leitmetzerin—
(Mariannen präsentierend, die dreimal tief knickst.)

BARON: (indem er unwillig abwinkt): Lass Er das weg.
Begrüss Er jetzt mit mir meinen Herrn Rosenkavalier.
(Er tritt mit Faninal auf Octavian zu, unter Reverenz, die Octavian erwiedert. Das Lerchenausche Gefolge kommt endlich zum Stillstand, nachdem es Sophie fast umgestossen, und retiriert sich um ein paar Schritte nach rechts rückwärts.)

At christenings or funerals—
I'll shower very quickly,
If needs must, with a slapping,
That I am better bred than she,
And rather will bear anything
Than such overweening impudence.

OCTAVIAN: (eagerly): No, do not think there's anyone
So graceless who would put a slight on you.
For you will still be the fairest, always the crown you will bear.

SOPHIA: Mock me not so, mon Cousin—

OCTAVIAN: What, think you thus of me?

SOPHIA: You are allowed such freedom, if you will,
From you I gladly take all that you choose.
For, truthfully, no gentleman I've seen
Or met with, has been able yet to please me half as well as you.
Now I must cease, for look, the Baron's here.
(The door at the back is thrown open. All three rise and step to the right. Faninal ceremoniously conducts the Baron over the threshold towards Sophia, giving him the precedence. The servants of Lerchenau follow in his footsteps, first the Almoner, then the Body Servant. Next follows the Chasseuz, with a clown of the same kidney, who has a plaster over his battered nose, and two others no less uncouth, looking as if they had stepped straight from the fields into their liveries. All, like their master, carry sprigs of myrtle. The servants of Faninal remain in the background.)

FANINAL: I have the honor to your Lordship to present your bride.

BARON: (bows—then to Faninal): Delicieuse! I compliment you, Sir.
(He kisses Sophia's hand as though examining it.)
A hand so delicate is a thing I much admire.
It is an attraction rarely found among the bourgeoisie.

OCTAVIAN: (To himself): Can I command myself?

FANINAL: Permit me my most faithful friend and servant—
(Presenting Marianne, who makes three deep curtseys.)

BARON: (with a gesture of vexation): Pray, spare me that.
(After having almost knocked Sophia over, Lerchenau's servants come to a standstill, and then withdraw a few paces.)
Now greet the Count, and thank him for being my ambassador.
(They go towards Octavian, bowing. He returns the compliment.)

SOPHIE: (mit Marianne rechsstehend, halblaut): Was sind das für Manieren? Ist er leicht ein Rosstauscher und kommt ihm vor, er hätt' mich eingekauft?

MARIANNE: (ebenso): Ein Kavalier hat halt ein ungezwungenes, leutseliges Betragen.
Sag' dir vor, wer er ist
und zu was er dich macht,
so werden dir die Faxen gleich vergehn.

BARON: (während des Aufführens zu Faninal): Ist gar zum Staunen, wie der junge Herr jemand Gewissem ähnlich sieht.
Hat ein Bastardl, recht ein saubres, zur Schwester.
Ist kein Geheimnis unter Personen von Stand.
Hab's aus der Fürstin eignem Mund, und weil der Faninal sozusagen jetzo zu der Verwandtschaft gehört!
Mach' dir kein Depit, darum Rofrano, dass dein Vater ein Streichmacher war,
befindet sich dabei in guter Kompagnie, der selige Marchese.
Ich selber exkludier' mich nicht.
(Zu Octavian.)
Seh', Liebden, schau' dir dort den Langen an, den Blonden, hinten dort.
Ich will ihn nicht mit Fingern weisen,
aber er sticht wohl hervor
durch eine adelige Kontenance.
Ist auch er ein ganz besondrer Kerl.
Sag's nicht, weil ich der Vater bin,
hat's aber faustdick hinter den Ohren.

SOPHIE: (während dessen): Jetzt lässt er mich so stehn, der grobe Ding!
Und das ist mein Zukünftiger.
Und blattersteppig ist er auch, o mein Gott!
(Der Haushofmeister tritt verbindlich auf die Lerchenauschen Leute zu und führt sie ab. Desgleichen tritt die Faninalsche Livree ab bis auf zwei, welche Wein und Süssigkeiten servieren.)

FANINAL: (zum Baron): Belieben jetzt vielleicht?—ist ein alter Tokaier.
(Octavian und Baron bedienen sich.)

SOPHIA: (standing at the back with Marianne): How vulgar his behaviour.
Like some low horse-dealer
Who thinks he's bought me like a yearling colt.

MARIANNE: Oh what an air! How free from affectation,
How full of grace is his behaviour!
Tell yourself who he is,
What he helps you to be
And soon your silly whimsies will be gone.

BARON: (To Faninal): I can but wonder, when I see his face,
How like he is to someone else.
Has a sister—most bewitching young baggage.
(Coarsely confidential.)
These are no secrets among persons of our rank,
It was her Highness who did tell me so,
(Genially.)
And now you, Faninal, may be accounted almost as being one of us.
There is no need to be ashamed, Rofrano,
That once your father chose to sow wild oats—.
I warrant you he was in noble company,
(Laughing.)
The late lamented Marquis—I count my self among it, too.
(To Faninal.)
Look well now at that long-legged rascal there,
The fair one at the back.
I cannot point my finger at him,
But at a glance you will pick out
His high-born features from among the rest.
And see he bears himself like any courtier.
He has a noble pedigree, but he's the greatest fool of all my household.

SOPHIA: What breeding's this, to leave me here alone!
And he my husband that's to be,
And pock-marked also is his face, I do protest.
(The Major-Domo approaches the servants of Lerchenau most politely and conducts them out of the room. At the same time Faninal's servants withdraw—all but two, who offer wine and comforts.)

FANINAL: (To the Baron): Perhaps you would partake . . .
It is Tokay, an old vintage.

BARON: Brav, Faninal, er weiss, was sich gehört.
Serviert einen alten Tokaier zu einem jungen Mädel.
Ich bin mit Ihm zufrieden.
(Zu Octavian.)
Musst denen Bagatelladeligen immer zeigen, dass nicht für unsersgleichen sich ansehen dürfen,
muss immer was von Herablassung dabei sein.

OCTAVIAN: (spitzig): Ich muss deine Liebden sehr bewundern.
Hast wahrhaft grosse Weltmanieren.
Könntst einen Ambassadeur vorstellen heut wie morgen.

BARON: (derb): Ich hol' mir jetzt das Mädl her.
Soll uns jetzt Konversation vormachen, damit ich seh', wie sie beschlagen ist.
(Geht hinüber, nimmt Sophie bei der Hand, führt sie mit sich.)
Eh bien: Nun plauder' Sie uns eins, mir und dem Vetter Taverl.
Sag' Sie heraus, auf was Sie sich halt in der Eh' am meisten freut.
(Setzt sich, will sie halb auf seinen Schoss ziehen.)

SOPHIE: (entzieht sich ihm): Wo denkt Er hin?

BARON: (behaglich): Pah! Wo ich hindenk'!
Komm' Sie da ganz nah zu mir,
dann will ich Ihr ersählen, wo ich hindenk'.
(Gleiches Spiel, Sophie entzieht sich ihm heftiger.)
(behaglich)
Wär Ihr leicht präferabel, dass man wegen Ihrer den Zeremonienmeister sollt' hervortun?
Mit "mille pardons" und "devtion"
und "Geh da weg" und "hab' Respekt"?

SOPHIE: Wahrhaftig und ja gefiele mir das besser!

BARON: (lachend): Mir auch night!
Das sieht Sie!
Mir auch ganz und gar nicht!
Bin einer biedern offenherzigen Galanterie recht zugetan.
(Er macht Anstalt, sie zu küssen, sie wehrt sich energisch.)

FANINAL: (nachdem er Octavian den zweiten Stuhl angeboten hat, den dieser ablehnt): Wie ist mir denn!
Da sitzt ein Lerchenau
und karessiert in Ehrbarkeit mein Sopherl, als wär' sie ihm schon angetraut.
Und da steht ein Rofrano, sonsten nix—der Bruder vom Marchese Obersttruchsess.

BARON: Good, Faninal, you know what's right and fitting
To serve a mellow wine of an old vintage to drink a young bride's health,
You have my commendation.
(To Octavian).
It is not amiss to show some condescension
In talking to gimcrack nobility,
And show them clearly,
They must not deem themselves equal to such as us.

OCTAVIAN: (Pointedly): I vow, I do admire your Lordship's wisdom,
You have mastered the great world's manners,
Like an Ambassador or Chancellor you bear yourself.

BARON: (roughly): I'll bring the wench now to my side,
That I may see if her talk pleases me,
(Crosses over, takes Sophia by the hand and leads her back with him.)
That of her points and paces I may judge.
Eh bien! Now let us hear you talk,
me and you cousin Tavy,
Tell me now, what will, do you think, please you most about marriage?

SOPHIA: (withdrawing from him): What mean these ways?

BARON: (at his ease): Pooh! Why this pother?
Now come here quite close to me
And I will tell you quickly all my meaning.
(Same by-play. Sophia tries to withdraw still more angrily.)
Would you la'ship perhaps prefer it, if one came
Like a dancing master, bowing and congeeing,
With "Mille pardons" and "Devotion"
And "By your leave" and "My respects."

SOPHIA: Most surely yes, it would please me better!

BARON: I think not—All flimflam, fudge and silly nonsense—
My taste is all for free and easy ways, and open-hearted gallantry.
(He tries to kiss her. She resists energetically.)

FANINAL: (offering a chair to Octavian, who refuses.): What!
Can it be?
There sits a Lerchenau
A-paying his addresses to my Sophy, as if they had been wed and all,
And there stands a Rofrano, just as natural!
A Count Rofrano, nothing less—
A brother to the Empress' Lord High Steward.

OCTAVIAN: (zornig für sich): Das ist ein Kerl, dem möcht' ich wo begegnen mit meinem Degen da,
wo ihn kein Wächter schreien hört.
Ja, das ist alles, was ich möcht'.

SOPHIE: (zum Baron): Ei, lass Er doch, wir sind nicht so vertraut!

BARON: (zu Sophie): Geniert Sie sich leicht vor dem Vetter Taverl?
Da hat Sie unrecht.
In der grossen Welt,
wo doch die hohe Schul' ist für Manieren,
da gibt's fret nichts,
was man nit willig pardonnieren tat', wenn's nur mit einer adligen Noblesse
und richtigen Galanterie vollführet wird.
(Er wird immer zärtlicher, sie weiss sich kaum zu helfen.)

FANINAL: (für sich): Wär' nur die Mauer da von Glas, dass alle bürgerlichen Neidhammeln von Wien uns könnten so en famille beisammen so sitzen sehn!
Dafür wollt' ich mein Lerchenfelder Eckhaus geben, meiner Seel'!

OCTAVIAN: (wütend): Dass ich das Mannsbild sehen muss, so frech, so unverschämt mit ihr.
Ich büss' all meine Sünden ab!
Könnt' ich hinaus und fort von hier!

BARON: (zu Sophie): Lass Sie die Flausen nur!
Gehört doch jetzo mir!
(Halb für sich, sie kajolierend.)
Ganz meine Massen!
Schultern wie ein Henderl!
Geht all's recht!
Sei Sie gut!
Geht alles so wie am Schnürl!
Hundsmager noch—das macht nichts, aber weiss
mit einem Glanz darauf, wie ich ihn ästimier'!
Ich hab' halt ja ein lerchenauisch Glück!
(Sophie reisst sich los und stampft auf).
(vergnügt)
Ist Sie ein rechter Kapricenschädel!
(Auf und ihr nach.)
Steigt Ihr das Blut gar in die Wangen, dass man sich die Hand verbrennt?

SOPHIE: (rot und blass von Zorn): Lass Er die Hand davon!
(Octavian in stummer Wut, verdrückt das Glas, das er in der Hand hält, und schmeisst die Scherben zu Boden).

OCTAVIAN: Faugh! What a boor!
How I should like to meet him
Alone with my good sword—
No watch to hear him shout for help—
Yes, nothing better I should wish.

SOPHIA: (To Baron): I pray you cease, we are but strangers yet!

BARON: (To Sophia): Is it my cousin Octavian that makes you bashful?
That's out of reason.
In the highest ranks
Where surely they know most about good manners
There's nothing
That will not be allowed, and freely pardoned,
If but it be done rightly with a courtly grace,
Befitting folk of birth and breeding.
(The Baron grows more and more importunate—she is at her wit's end.)

FANINAL: (To himself): Would that the walls could be of glass . . .
If but the townsfolk all could see them sitting there,
Quite en famille, how green would they turn with envy!
Gladly for that I'd give the best of all my houses, on my soul!

OCTAVIAN: (furious): Oh, that I must stand here and see him thus,
So course and so unmannerly.
If I could only up and flee from here!

BARON: (To Sophia): Put your airs aside, for I have got you now!
All goes well!
Never fear!
It is all just as I wish it!
(Half to himself, fondling her.)
Just as I wish it! Tender as a pullet!
Not very plump—no matter—but so white,
White—and what a bloom—there's nothing I like more!
I have the luck of all the Lerchenaus!
(Sophia tears herself away and stamps her feet.)
Gad, what a mettlesome little filly!
(Rises and runs after her.)
And see how hot her cheeks are burning—
Full hot enough to burn one's hands!

SOPHIA: (pale with anger): Hands off, I say!
Be gone!
(Octavian in silent anger, crushes the glass he holds in his hand and throws the pieces to the ground.)
(Marianne runs with affected grace towards Octavian, picks up the pieces and confides her delight to him.)

DUENNA: (läuft mit Grazie zu Octavian hinüber, hebt die Scherben auf und raunt ihm mit Entzücken zu): Ist recht ein familiärer Mann, der Herr Baron!
Man delektiert sich, was er all's für Einfäll' hat!

BARON: (dicht bei Sophie): Geht mir nichts drüber!
Konnt' mich mit Schmachterei und Zärtlichkeit nicht halb so glücklich machen, meiner Seel'!

MARIANNE: (scharf, ihm ins Gesicht): Ich denk' nicht dran, dass ich Ihn glücklich mach'!
(Indessen ist der Notar mit dem Schreiber eingetreten, eingeführt durch Faninals Haushofmeister. Dieser meldet ihn dem Herrn von Faninal leise; Faninal geht zum Notar nach rückwärts hin, spricht mit ihm und sieht einen vom Schreiber vorgehaltenen Aktenfaszikel durch.)

SOPHIE: (zwischen den Zähnen): Hat nie kein Mann dergleichen Reden nicht zu mir geführt!
Möcht wissen, was ihm dünkt von mir und Ihm?
Was ist Er denn zu mir?

BARON: (gemütlich): Wird kommen über Nacht, dass Sie ganz sanft
wird wissen, was ich bin zu Ihr.
Ganz wie's im liedel heisst—kennt Sie das Liedel?
Lalalalala—
(Recht gefühlvoll.)
Wie ich dein alles werde sein!
Mit mir, mit mir keine Kammer dir zu klein,
ohne mich, ohne mich jeder Tag dir so bang, (frech und plump)
mit mir, mit mir keine Nacht dir zu lang?
(Sophie da er sie fester an sich drückt, reisst sich los und stösst ihn heftig zurück.)

DUENNA: (zu ihr eilend): Ist recht ein familiärer Mann, der Herr Baron!
Man delektiert sich, was er all's für Eihnfäll' hat!
(Krampfhaft in Sophie hineinredend.)
Nein, was er all's für Einfäll' hat, der Herr Baron!

OCTAVIAN: (ohne hinzusehen, und doch sieht er alles, was vorgeht): Ich steh' auf glüh'nden Kohlen!
Ich fahr' aus meiner Haut!
Ich büss in dieser einen Stund'
all meine Sünden ab!

BARON: (für sich, sehr vergnügt): Wahrhaftig und ja, ich hab' halt ein lerchenauisch Glück!
Gibt gar nichts auf der Welt, was mich so enflammiert und also vehement verjüngt als wie

MARIANNE: His Lordship has most uncommon easy ways,
The jests he thinks of, la, they make me laugh till I could cry.
(In the meantime the Attorney has entered with his clerk, introduced by Faninal's Major-Domo. He announces them in a whisper to Faninal: Faninal goes to the back to the Attorney, speaks with him and looks through a bundle of documents presented to him by the Clerk.)

SOPHIA: (with clenched teeth): There is no man has ever dared to speak to me like this!
What can you think of me and of yourself?
What are you, pray, to me?

BARON: (contentedly): One day you'll wake and find
That you have just Discovered what I am to you.
Just as the ballad says—Do you not know it?
La la la la la.
(Very sentimentally.)
How to you I'll be all in all!
With me, with me no attic seems too small.
Without me, without me slowly will pass all the days,
(Impudently and coarsely.)
With me, with me time will seem short always!
(Sophia, as he tries to draw her still closer to him, frees herself and violently pushes him back.)

MARIANNE: (now hurrying to Sophia): It is most uncommon easy way his Lordship has,
The jests he thinks of make me laugh till I could cry;
(Speaking to Sophia with feverish energy.)
They make me laugh till I could cry, his Lordship's jests.

OCTAVIAN: (without looking at the Baron, and yet aware of all that is passing): I'm standing on coals of fire!
It is more than I can bear!
In this one hour before Heaven I do Penance for all my sins!

BARON: (To himself, very contented): I always did say, I have all the luck of all the Lerchenaus!
Nothing else in the world does so renew my youth
Or whet my appetite so well as a ein rechter Trotz!

(Faninal und der Notar, hinter ihnen der Schreiber, sind an der linken Seite nach varne gekommen.)

BARON: (sowie er den Notar erblickt, eifrig zu Sophie, ohne zu ahnen, was in ihr vorgeht): Dort gibt's Geschäften jetzt, muss mich dispensieren:
bin dort von Wichtigkeit. Indessen der Vetter Taverl leistet Ihr Gesellschaft!

FANINAL: Wenn's jetzt belieben tät', Herr Schwiegersohn!

BARON: (eifrig): Natürlich wird's belieben.
(Im Vorbeigehen zum Octavian, denn er vertraulich anfasst.) Hab' nichts dawider, wenn du ihr möchtest Augerln machen, Vetter,
jetzt oder künftighin.
Ist noch ein rechter Rühr-nicht-an.
Betracht's als förderlich, je mehr sie degourdiert wird.
Ist wie bei einem jungen ungerittenen Pferd.
Kommt all's dem Angetrauten letzterdings zugut.
wofern er sein eh'lich Privilegium zunutz zu machen weiss.
(Er geht nach links. Der Diener, der den Notar einliess, hat indessen die Türe links geöffnet. Faninal und der Notar schicken sich an, hineinzugehen. Der Baron misst Faninal mit dem Blick und bedeutet ihm, drei Schritte Distanz zu nehmen. Faninal tritt devot zurück. Der Baron nimmt den Vortritt, vergewissert sich, dass Faninal drei Schritte Abstand hat und geht gravitätisch durch die Tür links ab. Faninal hinter ihm, dann der Notar, dann der Schreiber. Der Bediente schliesst die Türe links und geht ab, lässt aber die Flügeltüre nach dem Vorsaal offen. Der servierende Diener ist schon früher abgegangen.)
(Sophie rechts, steht verwirrt und beschämt).
(Duenna neben ihr knickst nach der Türe hin, bis sie sich schliesst).

OCTAVIAN: (mit einem Blick hinter sich, gewiss zu sein, dass die anderen abgegangen sind, tritt schnell zu sophie hinüber, bebend vor Aufregung): Wird Sie das Mannsbild da heiraten, ma cousine?

SOPHIE: (einen Schritt auf ihr zu, leise): Nicht um die Welt!
(Mit einem Blick auf die Duenna.)
Mein Gott, wär' ich allein mit Ihm, dass ich Ihn bitten könnt'! dass ich Ihn bitten könnt'!

real spitfire can.
(Faninal and the Attorney, followed by the Clerk, have advanced to the front, on the left.)

BARON: (as soon as he sees the Attorney, eagerly to Sophia, without the smallest idea what she is thinking): But now there's work to do, so for a while forgive me:
They need my presence there. And meanwhile
There's Cousin Tavy, he will entertain you!

FANINAL: May I beg the honor now, dear Son-in-law!

BARON: (eagerly): Of course you'll have the honor.
(In passing to Octavian, whom he touches familiarly.)
It would not displease me
If you should cast some sheep's eyes at her, Cousin,
Now or at any time:
You're still content with looks alone.
The more she learns from you, the better I shall like it
For a girl, do you see, is just like an unbroken foal:
The husband in the end gets all the benefit,
Provided he has but sense enough to use
His opportunities.
(He goes to the left. The servant who had admitted the Attorney, has in the meantime opened the door on the left. Faninal and the Notary make for the door. The Baron fixes his eyes on Faninal and signifies to him he must keep a distance of three paces. Faninal obsequiously retreats. The Baron takes precedence, assures himself that Faninal is three paces behind him, and walks solemnly through the door on the left. Faninal follows, and after him come the Attorney and his Clerk. The Footman closes the door to the left, and goes out, leaving the door which leads to the ante-room open. The Footman who was serving refreshments has already left the room.)
(Sophia on the right, stands confused and humiliated. The Duenna curtseys in the direction of the door till it closes.)

OCTAVIAN: (quivering with excitement, hurries towards Sophia, after glancing backwards so as to be sure that the others have gone.) And do you marry that thing there, ma Cousine?

SOPHIA: (moving one step towards him, in a whisper): Not for the world!
(With a look to the Duenna.)
Oh Heaven!
Could we but be alone,
That I might beg of you!
That I might beg of you!

OCTAVIAN: (halblaut, schnell): Was ist's, das Die mich bitten möcht'?
Sag' Sie mir's schnell!

SOPHIE: (noch einen Schritt näher zu ihm): O mein Gott, dass Er mir halt hilft!
Und Er wird mir nicht helfen wollen,
weil Er halt sein Vetter ist!

OCTAVIAN: (heftig): Nenn' ihn Vetter aus Höflichkeit; Gott sei Lob und Dank,
hab' ihn im Leben vor dem gestrigen Tag nie gesehn!
(Quer durch den Vorsaal flüchten einige von den Mädgen des Hauses. denen die Lerchenauschen Bedienten auf den Fersen sind. Der Leiblakai und der mit dem Pflaster auf der Nase jagen einem hübschen jungen Mädchen nach und bringen sie fast an der Schwelle zum Salon bedenklich in die Enge.)

DER FANINALSCHE HAUSHOFMEISTER: (kommt verstört hereingelaufen die Duenna zu Hilfe zu holen): Die Lerchenauischen sind voller Branntwein gesoffen und gehn aufs Gesindel los zwanzigmal ärger als Türken und Krowaten!

MARIANNE: Hol' Er unsere Leut', wo sind denn die?
(Läuft ab mit dem Haushofmeister, sie entreissen den beiden Zudringlichen ihre Beute und führen das Mädchen ab; alles vertiert sich, der Vorsaal bleibt leer●●●

SOPHIE: (nun, da sie unbeobachtet ist, mit freier Stimme): Zu Ihm hätt' ich ein Zutrau'n, mon cousin, so wie zu neimand auf der Welt,
dass Er mir könnte helfen, wenn Er nur den guten Willen hätt'!

OCTAVIAN: Erst muss Sie sich selber helfen, dann hilf ich Ihr auch.
Tu' Sie das Erste für mich,
dann tu' ich was für Sie!

SOPHIE: (zutraulich, fast zärtlich): Was ist denn das, was ich zuerst tun muss?

OCTAVIAN: (leise): Das wird Sie wohl wissen!

SOPHIE: (den Blickt unverwandt auf ihn): Und was ist das, was Er für mich will tun?
O sag' Er mir's!

OCTAVIAN: (entschlossen): Nun muss Sie ganz alleinig für uns zwei einstehn!

SOPHIE: Wie?
Für uns zwei?
O sag Er's noch einmal.

OCTAVIAN: (leise): Für uns zwei!

OCTAVIAN: (quickly below his breath): What is it you would beg of me?
Tell me now, quick!

SOPHIA: (coming another step nearer to him): O, gracious Heaven, befriend me in my need!
But since he is your friend and cousin,
You will not wish to succour me!

OCTAVIAN: (vehemently): I am his cousin but by courtesy;
Thanks be to all my stars,
I had not ever seen his hateful face till yesterday!
(Some of the servant girls rush headlong across the anteroom, hotly pursued by Lerchenau's attendants. The Body Servant and the one with the plaster on his nose are at the heels of a pretty young girl and bring her to bay close to the door of the salon.)
(Faninal's Major-Domo runs in much perturbed, to call the Duenna to help him.)

MAJOR-DOMO: The Baron's menfolk, with our good wine quite besotted;
Run after all the girls, worse than an army
From Turkey, or Croatians!

MARIANNE: Fetch our men, quick, to help you.
Where can they be hid?
(She runs off with the Major-Domo. They rescue the girl from her assailants and lead her away. All disappear. The anteroom remains empty.)

SOPHIA: (speaking freely, now that they are unobserved): In you I place my trust, mon Cousin,
Knowing that you, like no one else,
Could be my help, my savior,
Would you but bend your will to it!

OCTAVIAN: First must you for yourself take courage,
Then I too will help.
Till you have helped yourself,
I can do nothing for you!

SOPHIA: (confidingly, almost tenderly): What is it then, I for myself must do?

OCTAVIAN: (softly) Surely you know it!

SOPHIA: (looking at him undismayed): And what is it that you will do for me,
Now tell me that!

OCTAVIAN: (decidedly): Now must you strike a blow alone—you for us twain!

SOPHIA: What, for us twain?
O say it once again!

OCTAVIAN: (softly): For us twain!

SOPHIE: (mit hingegebenem Entzücken): Ich hab' im Leben so was Schönes nicht gehört!

OCTAVIAN: (stärker): Für sich und mich muss Sie sich wehren und bleiben—was Sie ist.
(Sophie nimmt sein Hand, er küsst sie schnell auf den Mund).

OCTAVIAN: (indem er sie, die sich an ihn schmiegt, in den Armen, habt zärtlich): Mit Ihren Augen voller Tränen kommt Sie zu mir, damit Sie sich beklagt.
Vor Angst muss Sie an mich sich lehnen,
Ihr armes Herz ist ganz verzagt.
Und ich muss jetzt als Ihren Freund mich zeigen und weiss noch gar nicht, wie!
Mir ist so selig, so eigen,
dass ich dich halten darf:
Gib antwort, aber gib sie nur mit Schweigen:
Bist du won selber so zu mir gekommen?
Ja oder nein? Ja oder nein?
Du musst es nicht mit Worten sagen—
Hast du es gern getan?
Sag', oder nur aus Not?
Aus Not so alles zu mir hergetragen, dein Herz, dein liebliches Gesicht?
Sag', ist dir nicht, dass irgendwo in irgendeinem schönen Traum das einmal schon so war?
Spürst du's wie ich?
Sag', spürst du's so wie ich?

SOPHIE: Ich möchte mich bei Ihm verstecken und nichts mehr wissen von der Welt.
Wenn Er mich so in Seinen Armen hält, kann mich nichts Hässliches erschrecken.
Da bleiben möcht' ich, da!
Und schweigen, und was mir auch gescheh', geborgen wie der Vogel in den Zweigen, stillstehn und spüren: Er ist in der Näh'!
Mir müsste angst und bang im Herzen sein, statt dessen fühl' ich Freud und Seligkeit
und keine Pein,
ich könnt' es nicht mit Worten sagen!
Hab' ich was Unrechtes getan?
Ich war halt in der Not!
Da war Er mir nah!

SOPHIA: (rapturously): O words of rapture! I've heard nothing so sweet till now.

OCTAVIAN: (loudly): To save us both must you be steadfast,
And still be—

SOPHIA: Still be?

OCTAVIAN: What you are.
(Sophia seizes his hand, bends over it, kisses it quickly before he can withdraw it. He kisses her on the lips.)

OCTAVIAN: (holding her in his arms as she nestles closely to him): With tear-dimmed eyes, all affrighted,
My aid you seek, telling your sorrows all,
Fear nothing, henceforth to me united,
Fear nothing, whatever may befall!
To save you now must be my one endeavor,
And yet I know not how.
Rapture like this, you never
Grant to a mortal, gods!
Give me answer, but with eloquent silence,—
Did your free will guide you here to me?
Say yea or nay—say yea or nay!
No words could tell me all your meaning.
Was your free will your guide?
Say, or your direful need?
Why brought you here these gifts so lavish?
Your loving heart, your face so fair?
Say, seems it not that once in days
Far off, in some dear magic dream
We loved each other thus?
Think you not so?
Dreamed you never thus, as I?
My heart, my soul,
Will always be with you?
Wherever you be,
For all eternity.

SOPHIA: What rapture, thus with you to hale me
And hear no whisper of the world,
When thus contented in your arms I be,
I fear nothing, ill can never betide me.
There fain I'd linger, there, for ever
Secure from grief and fear,
And know that our fond union naught can sever.
Naught now can harm me,
You, you are always near.
My pulse should cease to beat for shame and dread.
But lo! I feel an endless joy and happiness.
All pain is fled,
No words can tell you all my meaning,
Haply it was sinful what I did?
But direful was my need,
And lo! you were near—
I saw your face so fair—
Your eyes, your valiant air—

Da war es Sein Gesicht,
Sein' Augen jung und licht,
auf das ich mich gericht,
Sein liebes Gesicht—
Er muss mir Seinen Schutz vergonnen,
Was Er will, werd' ich können;
Bleib' Er nur bei mir!
Er muss mir Seinen Schutz vergönnen—
Bleib Er nur bei mir!
(Aus den Kaminen in den rückwärtigen Ecken sind links Valzacchi, rechts Annina lautlos spähend herausgeglitten. Lautlos schleichen sie, langsam, auf den Zehen, näher. Octavian zieht Sophie an sich, küsst sie auf den Mund; in diesem Augenblick sind die Italiener dicht hinter ihnen, ducken sich hinter den Lehnsesseln: jetzt springen sie vor, Annina packt Sophie, Valzacchi fasst Octavian.)

VALZACCHI UND ANNINA: (zu zweien schreiend): Herr Baron von Lerchenau!—
Herr Baron von Lerchenau!—
(Octavian springt zur Seite nach links).

VALZACCHI: (der Mühe hat, ihn zu halten, atemlos zu Annina):
Lauf und 'ole Seine Gnade!
Snell, nur snell, ik muss 'alten diese 'err!

ANNINA: Lass ich die Fräulein aus, läuft sie mir weg!

ZU ZWEIEN: Herr Baron von Lerchenau,
Herr Baron von Lerchenau!
Komm' zu sehn die Fräulein Braut!
Mit eine junge Kavalier!
Kommen eilig, kommen hier! Ecco!
(Baron tritt aus der Tür links. Die Italiener lassen ihre Opfer los, springen zur Seite, verneigen sich vor dem Baron mit vielsagender Gebärde.)
(Sophie schmiegt sich ängstlich an Octavian).
(Baron die Arme über die Brust gekreuzt, betrachtet sich die Gruppe, Unheilsschwangere Pause, endlich): Eh bien, Mamsell, was hat Sie mir zu sagen?
(Sophie schweigt).

BARON: (der durchaus nicht aus-ser Fassung ist): Nun, resolvier' Sie sich!

SOPHIE: Mein Gott, was soll ich sagen,
Er wird mich nicht verstehn!

BARON: (gemütlich): Das werden wir ja sehn!

OCTAVIAN: (einen Schritt auf den Baron zu): Eu'r Liebden muss ich halt vermelden, dass sich in Seiner Angelenheit was Wichtiges verändert hat!

And healed was my despair.
And thenceforth nothing I know,
Nothing more of myself—
O stay now with me—
Protect me, save me, stay beside me,
I follow wherever you guide me.
Save me, leave me not—
(From the fireplaces to the left and right respectively come Valzacchi and Annina noiselessly and watch the lovers. They approach silently on tiptoe. Octavian draws Sophia to him and kisses her on the lips. At this moment the two Italians are close behind them. They duck behind the armchairs. Then they jump forward, Annina seizes Sophia, Valzacchi takes hold of Octavian.)

VALZACCHI AND ANNINA: (screaming together): Quick, Baron Lerchenau, quick, Baron Lerchenau!
(Octavian leaps aside to the right.)

VALZACCHI: (holding him with difficulty, breathless to Annina):
Run, bring 'izzer 'is Lords'ip—
Quick, make 'aste: I must 'old zis young man.

ANNINA: If I not 'old zis lady, she escape me!

VALZACCHI AND ANNINA:
Quick! Baron Lerchenau!
Quick! Baron Lerchenau!
Come to see your future wife
Discovered viz a gentleman,
Pray come quickly!
Pray come 'ere!
(The Baron enters through the door on the left and with folded arms contemplates the group. Ominous pause. Sophia nestles timidly close to Octavian.)
Ecco!

BARON: Eh bien, Ma'mselle!
What would you wish to tell me?
(Sophia remains silent. The Baron retains his composure.)
Well, do not hesitate.

SOPHIA: Alas!
What could I tell you?
You would not understand—

BARON: (quickly): Ecod, I think I will.

OCTAVIAN: (moving a step nearer the Baron): It is my duty to inform your Lordship
That most important changes have been wrought
In matters that concern you nearly.

BARON: (gemütlich): Verändert?
Ei, nicht dass ich wüsst'!

OCTAVIAN: Darum soll Er es jetzt erfahren!
Die Fräulein—

BARON: Ei, Er ist nicht faul!
Er weiss zu profitieren,
mit Sein siebzehn Jahr'!
Ich muss Ihm gratulieren!
(halb zu sich)
Ist mir ordentlich, ich seh' mich selber!
Muss lachen über den Filou, den pudeljungen.

OCTAVIAN: Die Fräulein—

BARON: Ei! Sie ist wohl stumm und hat Ihn angestellt für Ihren Advokaten!

OCTAVIAN: Die Fräulein—
(Er hält abermals inne, wie um Sophie sprechen zu lassen.)

SOPHIE: (angstvoll): Nein!
Nein!
Nein!
Ich bring' den Mund nicht auf.
Sprech' Er für mich!

OCTAVIAN: (entschlossen): Die Fräulein—

BARON: (ihm nachstotternd):
Die Fräulein, die Fräulein!
Die Fräulein!
Die Fräulein!
Ist eine Kreuzerkomödi wahrhaftig!
Jetzt echappier' Er sich, sonst reisst mir die Geduld.

OCTAVIAN: (sehr Bestimmt): Die Fräulein, kurz und gut, die Fräulein mag Ihn nicht.

BARON: (gemütlich): Sei Er da ausser Sorg'.
Wird schon lernen mich mögen.
(Auf Sophie zu.)
Komm' Sie da jetzt hinein: wird gleich an Ihrer sein, die Unterschrift zu geben.

SOPHIE: (zurucktretend): Um keinen Preis geh' ich an seiner Hand hinein!
Wie kann einn Kavalier so ohne Zartheit sein!

OCTAVIAN: (der jetzt zwischen den beiden anderen und der Tür links): Versteht Er deutsch?
Die Fräulein hat sich resolviert.
Sie will Euer Gnaden ungeheirat' lassen
in Zeit und Ewigkeit!

BARON: (mit der Miene eines Mannes, der es eilig hat): Mancari!
Jungfernred' ist nicht gehaun und nicht gestochen!
Verlaub' Sie jetzt!
(Nimmt sie bei der Hand.)
(Er macht Miene, Sophie mit scheinbarer Unbefangenheit gegen die Mitteltür zu führen, nachdem ihm die Italiener lebhafte Zeichen gegeben haben, diesen

BARON: (genially): Important?
Changed?
Not that I know!

OCTAVIAN: And therefore I now have to tell you,
This lady—

BARON: Well, you lose no time,
And take the best advantage
For all your seventeen years—I must congratulate you!
This lady—
'Gad, I like you well. Was I not just so?
The rascal! I must laugh, egad!
To start so early?

OCTAVIAN: This lady—

BARON: Ah! She's dumb, I presume, and is employing you
To plead as her attorney.

OCTAVIAN: This lady—
(He pauses again, as though to let Sophia speak.)

SOPHIA: (timidly): No, no!
I cannot speak the word—
Speak you for me—

OCTAVIAN: (with determination): This lady—

BARON: (mimicking him): This lady, this lady, this lady, this lady!
This is jack-pudding foolery, by heaven!
And you had best depart, I've borne with you too long.

OCTAVIAN: (very determined):
This lady, once for all now, will have none of you.

BARON: As for that, have no fear—
She will soon enough have me.
(To Sophia):
Come with me now in there—you will be needed soon to sign the marriage contract.

SOPHIA: (retreating): No, not for all the world I'll let you lead me in!
How can a gentleman be so indelicate!

OCTAVIAN: (who has now taken his place between them and the door on the left): Please understand.
The lady has determined finally
That she will let your Lordship stay unmarried
For now and evermore!

BARON: Baby-talk!
By hard words never a bone is broken!
And time is short.
(Takes her by the hand.)
(He attempts, with feigned unconcern, to lead Sophia towards the center door, after the Italians have signified to him by lively gestures to take that way.)
Come, now! Go to your father, who Weg zu nehmen.) Komm' Sie!

Gehn zum Herrn Vater dort hinüber!
Ist bereits der nähere Weg!

OCTAVIAN: (ihm nach, dicht an ihr): Ich hoff', er kommt vielmehr jetzt mit mir hinters Haus, ist dort recht ein bequemer Garten.
(Baron setzt seinen Weg fort, mit gespielter Unbefangenheit Sophie an der Hand nach jener Richtung zu führen bestrebt, über die Schulte: zurück):

BARON: Bewahre.
Wär mir jetzo nicht genehm.
Lass um all's den Notari nicht warten.
Wär' gar ein Affront für die Jungfer Braut!

OCTAVIAN: (fasst ihn an Aermel): Beim Satan, Er hat eine dicke Haut!
Auch dort die Tür passiert Er mir nicht!
Ich schrei's Ihm jetzt in Sein Gesicht:
Ich schrei's Ihn für einen Filou, einen Mitgiftjäger,
einen durchtriebenen Lügner und schmutzigen Bauer, einen Kerl ohne Anstand und Ehr'!
Und wenn's sein muss, geb' ich ihm auf dem Fleck die Lehr'!
(Sophie hat sich vom Baron losgerissen und ist hinter Octavian zurückgesprungen. Sie stehen links, ziemlich vor der Tür).

BARON: (steckt zwei Finger in den Mund und tut einen gellenden Pfiff Dann): Was so ein Bub' in Wien mit siebzehn Jahr schon für ein vorlaut Mundwerk hat!
(Er sieht sich nach der Mitteltür um.)
Doch Gott sei Lob, mann kennt in hiesiger Stadt den Mann, der vor ihm steht,
halt bis hinauf zu kaiserlicher Majestät!
Man ist halt was man ist, und braucht's nicht zu beweisen.
Das lass Er sich gesagt sein und geb' mir den Weg da frei.
(Die Lerchenausche Livree ist vollzählig in der Mitteltür aufmarschiert; er vergewissert sich dessen durch einen Blick nach rückwärts. Er rückt jetzt gegen die beiden vor, entschlossen, sich Sophiens und des Ausgangs zu bemächtigen.)
Wär mir wahrhaftig leid, wenn meine Leut' da hinten—

OCTAVIAN: (wütend): Ah, untersteht Er sich, Seine Bedienten hineinzumischen in unsern Streit!
Jetzt zieh Er oder gnad' ihm Gott!
(Er zieht.)
(Die Lerchenauschen, die schon einige Schritte vorgerückt waren, werden durch diesen Anblick einigermassen unschlüssig und stellen ihren Vormarsch ein.) awaits us.

By this door is the speedier way.

OCTAVIAN: (following them, close to her): I beg you rather come with me—
At the back of the house
I know a most convenient garden.
(The Baron continues in the same direction still with simulated unconcern, trying to lead away Sophia, whom he still holds by the hand, and speaks over his shoulder.)

BARON: Enough of this. Your jests are most ill-timed—
We must not keep the Notary waiting,
It would be an insult to this lady here.

OCTAVIAN: (seizing him by the sleeve): By heaven!
I never knew so tough a hide!
And by this door I swear you will not pass—
That you may know it, to your face
I say that you are but a cheat,
And dowry-hunter,
Nothing but a rascally, lying, unmannerly clown, Sir,
But a boor, unclean in thought and in deed,
And with my sword I'll give you the sharp lesson you need.
(Sophia has freed herself from the Baron and takes refuge behind Octavian. They stand to the left, almost in front of the door.)

BARON: (putting two fingers into his mouth and giving a shrill whistle): How soon these boys do learn in Vienna here,
To set their tongues a-wagging.
(Looking towards the center door.)
But, heaven be praised, the Court and all the Town
Know him that you affront,
Even to the throne of her Imperial Majesty!
We all are what we are, and there's no need to prove it.
Now, young Sir, I have said my say, and get you from my path—(Lerchenau's servants, in full numbers, have appeared at the center door. The Baron, by a backward glance, assures himself of their presence. He now approaches Sophia and Octavian, determined to secure Sophia and his retreat.)
Truly I should regret it if my people yonder—

OCTAVIAN: Now, as you prize your life, Sir, do not dare
To drag your grooms and lackeys into our quarrel.
Draw, Sir, or Heaven protect your soul!
(The Baron's servants, who had already approached a few steps, hesitate as they see what is happening and pause in their advance. The Baron takes a step forward in order to secure Sophia.)
Draw, ruffian, draw!
Or on my sword I'll split you.

(Baron tut einen Schritt, sich Sophiens zu bemächtigen):
(schreit ihn an)
Zum Satan, zieh' Er oder ich stech' Ihn nieder!

SOPHIE: O Gott, was wird denn jetzt geschehn?

BARON: (retiriert etwas): Vor einer Dame, pfui!
so sei Er doch gescheit!
(Octavian fährt wütend auf ihn los).
(Baron zieht, fällt ungeschickt aus und hat schon die Spitze von Octavians Degen im Oberarm. Die Lerchenauschen stürzen vor).

BARON: (indem er den Degen fallen lässt). Mord! Mord! Mein Blut! Zu Hilfe! Mörder! Mörder! Mörder!
(Die Diener stürzen alle zugleich auf Octavian los. Dieser springt nach rechts hinüber und hält sie sich vom Leib, indem er seinen Degen blitzschnell um sich kreisen lässt. Der Almosenier, Valzacchi und Annina eilen auf den Baron zu, den sie stützen und auf einem der Stühle in der Mitte niederlassen)

BARON: (von ihnen umgeben und dem Publikum verstellt): Ich hab' ein hitzig' Blut!
Um Aerzt', um Leinwand!
Verband her!
Ich verblut' mich auf eins, zwei!
Aufhalten den!
Um Polizei! Um Polizei!

DIE LERCHENAUSCHEN: (indem sie mit mehr Ostentation als Entschlossenheit auf Octavian eindringen): Spinnweb' her!
Feuerschwamm!
Reisst's ihn den Spadi weg!
Schlagt's ihn tot auf'm Fleck!
(Die sämtliche Faninalsche Dienerschaft, auch das weibliche Hausgesinde, Küchenpersonal, Stallpagen sind zur Mitteltür hereingeströmt.)
(Valzacchi und der Almosenier ziehen dem Baron, der fortwährend stöhnt, seinen Rock aus.)

DIE FANINALISCHE DIENERSCHAFT: Schaut's nur die Fräulein an, Schaut's, wie sie blass is'!

OCTAVIAN: (Sophie verzweifelt zurufend): Liebste!
(*Die Lerchenauschen machen Miene, sich zu diesen Zweck der Hemden der jängeren und hübscheren Mägde zu bemächtigen. Handgemenge, bis Faninal beginnt. In diesem Augenblick kommt die Duena, die fortgestürzt war, zurück, atemlos, beladen mit Leinwand; hinter

SOPHIA: Oh! Heaven!
Oh, what will happen now!

BARON: (withdraws a step): What!
In a lady's presence!
Is the boy possessed?
(Octavian rushes at him furiously, the Baron draws and lunging clumsily receives the point of Octavian's sword in his upper arm. Lerchenau's servants rush forward.)

BARON: (dropping his sword): Help! Help! I bleed! A surgeon!
Murder! Murder! Murder!
(All the servants rush towards Octavian. He springs to the right and keeps them at arm's length whirling his sword about him. The Almoner, Valzacchi and Annina hurry to the Baron, and supporting him, lead him to one of the chairs in the middle of the room.)

BARON: (surrounded by his servants and the Italians, who conceal him from the public.) I have most fiery blood! A doctor! Linen!
A bandage!
Call the watch! I bleed to death before you can count to three!
Don't let him go! And call the watch! And call the watch!

LERCHENAU'S SERVANTS: (closing round Octavian with more swagger than courage): Break his crown!
Cobwebs here!
Sponge him down!
Take his sword, break his head
Who's afraid?
Kill him dead!
(All Faninal's Servants, the female domestics, the kitchen staff and the stable hands, have streamed in by the center door.)
(Valzacchi and the Almoner divest the Baron, who groans uninterruptedly, of his coat.)

FANINAL'S SERVANTS: Look at the brazen thing,
How dared she do it?

OCTAVIAN: (calling to Sophia, in despair): Dearest!
(*Lerchenau's Servants make as if to tear up the clothes of the younger and prettier servant maids. Mélée till Faninal comes. At this moment the Duenna, who had rushed out, returns, breathless, bringing linen for bandages, behind her two maids with sponges and basins. They surround the ihr zwei Mägde mit Schwamm und Wasserbecken. Sie umgeben den Baron mit eifriger Hilfeleistung. Faninal kommt zur Türe links hereingestürzt, hinter ihm der Notar und der Schreiber, die in der Türe ängstlich stehen bleiben.)

BARON: (man hört seine Stimme, ohne viel von ihm zu sehen): Ich kann ein jedes Blut mit Ruhe fliessen sehen, nur bloss das meinig' nicht! Oh! Oh!
(Die Duenna anschreiend.)
So tu' Sie doch was G'scheidt's, so rett' Sie doch mein Leben!
Oh! Oh!
(Sophie ist, wie sie ihres Vaters ansichtig wird, nach rechts vorne hingelaufen, steht neben Octavian, der nun seinen Degen einsteckt).

ANNINA: (knicksend und eifrig zu Faninal links vorne): Der junge Kavalier und die Fräulein Braut, Gnaden, waren im Geheimen
schon recht vertraut, Gnaden!
Wir voller Eifer
Für'n Herrn Baron, Gnaden, haben sie betreten
in aller Devotion, Gnaden!

DUENNA: (um den Baron beschäftigt): So ein fescher Herr!
So ein gross' Malheur,
so ein schwerer Schlag, so ein Unglückstag!

FANINAL: (anfangs sprachlos, schlägt nun die Häde überm Kopf zusammen und bricht aus): Herr Schwiegersohn!
Wie ist Ihm denn?
mein Herr und Heiland!
Dass Ihm in mein' Palais das hat passieren müssen!
Gelaufen um den Medikus!
Geflogen!
Meine zehn teuren Pferd' zu Tod gehetzt!
Ja hat denn niemand von meiner Livree daswischen fahren mögen!
Füttr' ich dafür
ein Schock baumlanger Lackeln, dass mir solche Schand'
passieren mus in meinem neuchen Stadtpalais!
(Gegn Octavian hin.)
Wär wohl von Euer Liebden
hochgräfliche Gegenwart allhier Warhaftig einer anderen Freud' gewärtig!

OCTAVIAN: (höflich): Er muss mich pardonieren
Bin ausser Massen sehr betrübt über den Vorfall.
Bin aber ausser Schuld.
Zu einer mehr gelegenen Zeit

Baron and busy themselves about him. Faninal rushes in by the door to the left followed by the Attorney and his Clerk, who remain standing, in great alarm, in the doorway.)

BARON: (his voice is heard, but he is scarcely visible): I can look on other people's blood unmoved,
But my own makes me faint.
Oh! Oh!
(Shouting to the Duenna.)
Stop whining!
Stir yourself!
Don't stand and watch
His lifeless corpse will be your bridegroom!
Me dying!
Oh! Oh!
(Sophia, as soon as she has seen her father, has run across the front of the stage to the right, and stands by Octavian, who sheaths his sword.)

ANNINA: (curtseying and crossing over to Faninal, eargerly): Ze gentleman 'ere And Mistress Sophia zere, yes, Sir,
Secretly were intimate,
I declare, yes Sir,
Ve, full of zeal
For his Lords'ip's sake, yes Sir,
Kept a watch and found zem,
And zere was not mistake, yes Sir.
Kept a watch and found zem,
And zere was no mistake, yes Sir.

MARIANNE: (busied about the Baron): Such a high-born Lord!
Such a cruel sword!
Such a heavy blow!
Such a day of woe!

FANINAL: (at first speechless, wrings his hands and breaks out): Dear Son-in-law, how is't with you?
The Saints preserve us!
That such a brawling boy should so disgrace my Palace!
Send some one for a surgeon, quick!
Delay not!
Ride all my costly thoroughbreds to death.
How is it none of my men had the sense,
To interfere between them? Do I feed whole troops
Of long-legged good-for-nothings, just that such disgrace
Should fall on me in my new Palace here in Town?
(Going to Octavian, with suppressed fury.)
Indeed from your Lordship.
I ventured to expect for other pleasures.

OCTAVIAN: (courteously): I beg you, Sir, forgive me;
I too am grieved beyond all measure for this accident;
But I am free from blame.
At some more fitting time and place

erfahren Euer Liebden wohl den Hergang aus Ihrer Fräulein Tochter Mund.

FANINAL: (sich mühsam beherrschend): Da möcht' ich recht sehr bitten!

SOPHIE: (entschlossen): Wie Sie befehlen, Vater.
Werd' Ihnen alles sagen.
Der Herr dort hat sich nich so, wie er sollt', betragen.

FANINAL: (zornig): Ei, von wem red't Sie da?
Von Ihrem Herrn Zukünft'gen?
Ich will nicht hoffen, wär mir keine Manier.

SOPHIE: (ruhig): Ist nicht der Fall.
Seh' ihn mit nichten an dafür.
(Der Arzt kommt, wird sogleich zum Baron geführt.)

FANINAL: (immer zorniger): Sieht ihn nicht an?

SOPHIE: Nicht mehr.
Bitt' Sie dafür um gnädigen Pardon.

FANINAL: (zuerst dumpf vor sich hin, dann in helle Wut ausbrechend).
Sieht ihn nicht an.
Nicht mehr.
Mich um Pardon.
Liegt dort gestochen,
Steht bei ihr.
Der Junge.
(Ausbrechend.)
Blamage.
Mir auseinander meine Eh',
Alle Neidhammeln von der Wieden und der Leimgrub'n auf! in der Höh!
Der Medikus!
Stirbt mir womöglich.
(Auf Sophie zu, in höchster Wut.)
Sie heirat' ihn!
(Auf Octavian, indem der Respekt vor dem Grafen Rofrano seine Grobheit zu einer knirschenden Höflichkeit herabdämpft):
Möchte Euer Liebden recht in aller Devotion gebeten haben, schleunig sich von hier zu retirieren und nimmer wieder zu erscheinen!
(Zu Sophie.)
Hör Sie mich!
Sie heirat' ihn!
Und wenn er sich verbluten tät',
so heirat' Sie ihn als Toter!
(Der Arzt zeigt durch eine beruhigende Gebärde, dass der Verwundete sich in keiner Gefahr befindet. Octavian sucht nach seinem Hut, der unter die Füsse der Dienerschaft geraten war. Eine Magd überreicht ihm knicksend den Hut. Faninal macht Octavian eine Verbeugung, übertrieben höflich, aber unzweideutig. Octavian muss wohl gehen, möchte aber gar zu gerne Sophie noch ein Wort

Your Lordship from your daughter will discover
How these mischances came to pass.

FANINAL: (controlling himself with difficulty): It would please me—nothing better.

SOPHIA: (determined): As you command me, father, I will relate all truly:
His Lordship did not treat me as a man of honor.

FANINAL: (angrily): What?
Of whom do you speak?
Of my future son-in-law?
I hope it is not so: I should think it a sin—

SOPHIA: (quietly): No, it is not so—I do not look on him as such.

FANINAL: (still more angry): What?
Not as such?

SOPHIA: No more.—I ask your gracious pardon, if I err.
(The Doctor arrives and at once goes to the Baron.)

FANINAL: (at first muttering to himself): Looks not on him?
No more?
Pardon she asks?
And he lies wounded.—
By her side the Schoolboy!
(Breaking out.)
A scandal!
What?
This splendid marriage broken off!
All the jealous fools of the quarter and the streets around,
How they will laugh!
The surgeon quick!
What if it were fatal?
(To Sophia, in utmost fury.)
You marry him!
(To Octavian, subduing his rudeness, out of respect to Rofrano's rank to obsequious civility.) And may I now, in all humility, request
Your Lordship to retire as speedily from hence as may be
And never again to darken these doors!
(To Sophia.)
Mark my words—
You marry him, and if he now should bleed to death,
His lifeless corpse will be your bridegroom!
(The Doctor indicates by a reassuring gesture that the wounded man is in no danger. Octavian looks for his hat, which had fallen under the feet of the servants. A maid hands it to him with a curtsey. Faninal makes an obeisance of exaggerated civility, but unmistakable significance to Octavian. Octavian realizes that he must go, but is longing to speak one more word to Sophia. He replies to Faninal's obeisance by an equally ceremonious bow. Sophia sagen. Er erwidert zunächst Faninals Verbeugung durch ein gleich tiefes Kompliment.)	hastens to speak the following words ere Octavian is out of earshot. With a curtsey.)

SOPHIE: (beeilt sich das Folgende noch zu sagen, solange Octavian es hören kann. Mit einer Reverenz): Heirat' den Herrn dort nicht lebendig und nicht tot! Sperr' mich zuvor in meine Kammer ein!	SOPHIA: That man I will not marry living, and not dead First will I lock me in my chamber and starve!
FANINAL: (in Wut, und nachdem er abermals eine wütende Verbeugung gegen Octavian gemacht hat, die Octavian prompt erwidert): Ah! Sperrst dich ein. Sind Leut' genug im Haus, die dich in Wagen tragen werden.	FANINAL: (furious, after he has again made an angry bow to Octavian, to which he promptly responds): Ah! Lock yourself in—I've men enough to drag you To a coach if I command them.
SOPHIE: (mit einem neuen Knicks): Spring' aus dem Wagen noch, der mich zur Kirch'n führt!	SOPHIA: (curtseying again): Then on the way to church from out the coach I jump!
FANINAL: (mit dem gleichen Spiel zwischen ihr und Octavian, der immer einen Schritt gegen den Ausgang tut, aber von Sophie in diesem Augenblick nicht los kann): Ah! Springst noch aus dem Wagen! Na, ich sitz' neben dir, werd' dich schon halten!	FANINAL: (with similar by-play between himself and Octavian, who each time takes a step towards the door, but cannot tear himself from Sophia at such a moment): From the coach you'll jump, Miss! Well, I'll be by your side, And I'll know how to hold you.
SOPHIE: (mit einem neuen Knicks): Geb halt dem Pfarrer am Altar Nein anstatt Ja zur Antwort! (Der Haushofmeister indessen macht die Leute abtreten. Die Bühne leert sich. Nur die Lerschenauschen Leute bleiben bei ihrem Herrn zurück.)	SOPHIA: (Curtseys again): Then at the altar I shall say, "No," and not "Yes."—No, never! (The Major-Domo has in the meantime made the servants leave. The stage is gradually cleared. Only Lerchenau's servants remain with their master.)
FANINAL: (mit gleichem Spiel): Ah! Bigst Nein statt Ja zur Antwort. Ich steck' dich in ein Kloster stante pede! Marsch! Mir aus meinen Augen! Lieber heut als morgen! Auf Lebenszeit!	FANINAL: (with similar by-play). Ah! Say No and never Yes at the altar! I send you to a convent on the instant! March! Out of my sight! Hussy! Better now than tomorrow. For all of your life!
SOPHIE: (erschrocken): Ich bitt' Sie um Pardon! Bin doch kein schlechtes Kind! Vergeben Sie mir nur dies eine Mal!	SOPHIA: (alarmed): Pray pardon, I implore! I am your loving child— Forgive me, father, but this once, this once.
FANINAL: (hält sich in Wut die Ohren zu): Auf Lebenszeit! Auf Lebenszeit!	FANINAL: (furious, closing his ears): For all of your life! For all of your life!
OCTAVIAN: (schnell, halblaut): Sei Sie nur ruhig, Liebste, um alles! Sie hört von ir! (Duenna stösst Octavian, sich zu entfernen.)	OCTAVIAN: (whispers): Do not speak so rashly, dearest, for my sake! You'll hear from me. (The Duenna pushes Octavian towards the door.)
FANINAL: Auf Lebenzeit!	FANINAL: For all your life! (The Duenna takes Sophia with her to the left.)
DUENNA: (zieht Sophie mit sich nach links): So geh' doch nur dem Vater aus den Augen! (Sieht sie zur Türe links hinaus, schliesst die Tür. Octavian ist zur Mitteltür abgegangen. Baron, umgeben von seiner Dienerschaft, Duenna, zwei Mägden, den Italienern und dem Arzt, wird auf einem aus Sitzmöbeln improvisierten Ruhebett jetzt in ganzer Gestalt sichtbar.)	DUENNA: Go, be gone from out your father's sight now. (Takes her out by the door to the left—closes the door. Octavian goes out by the center door. The Baron, surrounded by his servants, the Duenna, two Maids, the Italians and the Doctor, is now discovered lying on a couch improvized out of several chairs.)
FANINAL: (schreit nochmals durch die Türe links, durch die Sophie abgegangen ist): Auf Lebenszeit! (Eilt dann dem Baron entegegen.) Bin überglücklich! Muss Eu'r Liebden embrassieren!	FANINAL: (shouts once more through the door after Sophia): For all your life! (Hurries towards the Baron.) What joy unbounded! I must embrace you, my dear Baron!
BARON: (dem bei der Umarmung der Arm wehgetan): Oh! Oh! Jesus Maria!	BARON: (whose arm has been hurt by the embrace): Oh! Oh! Jesus Maria!
FANINAL: (nach rechts hin in neuer Wut): Luderei! Ins Kloster! (Nach der Mitteltür.) Ein Gefängnis! Auf Lebenszeit!	FANINAL: (turning to the right, his anger rising again): You hussy! A convent! (Turning to the center.) A prison cell! For all your life!
BARON: Is gut! Is gut! Ein Schluck von was zu trinken!	BARON: Let be! Let be! Some drink, for I am thirsty.
FANINAL: Ein Wein? Ein Bier? Ein Hippokras mit Ingwer? (Der Arzt macht eine ängstlich abwehrende Bewegnung).	FANINAL: Some wine? Some beer? Some hippicras with ginger? (The Doctor makes a nervous deprecating gesture.)
FANINAL: (jammernd): So einen Herrn zurichten miserabel! In meinem Stadtpalais! Sie heirat' ihn um desto früher! Bin Manns genug!	FANINAL: (plaintively): So nobly born, so nobly born, so mauled and so insulted! And in my Palace too! You'll marry him but all the sooner. I'm master here!
BARON: (matt): Is gut, is gut!	BARON: (wearily): Let be! Let be!
FANINAL: (nach der Tür links, in aufflammender Wut): Bin Manns genug! (Zum Baron.) Küss Ihm die Hand für Seine Güt und Nachsicht. Gehört alles Ihm im Haus. Ich lauf'—ich bring' Ihm— (Nach links.) Ein Kloster ist zu gut! (Zum Baron.) Sei'n ausser Sorg'. (Sehr devot.) Weiss, was ich Satisfaktion Ihm schuldig bin. (Stürzt ab. Desgleichen gehen Duenna und Mägde ab. Die beiden Italiener sind schon während des Obigen fortgeschlichen.)	FANINAL: (towards the door on the left, his anger rising): I'm master here! (To the Baron.) I kiss your hand. My thanks for such indulgence. Command all that is in this house! I run—I bring you . . . (To the left.) A convent is too good. (To the Baron.) Pray have no fear. (Very obsequious.) I know what satisfaction, is your due from me. (Faninal rushes off. The Duenna and the Maids follow. The two Italians had already slunk off during the preceding scene.)
BARON: (halb aufgerichtet): Dalieg' ich was ei'm Kavalier mit all's passieren Kann in Dieser Wienerstadt! Wär nicht mein Gusto hier,— da ist eins gar zu sehr in Gottes Hand, Wär lieber schon daheim! (Ein Diener ist aufgetreten, eine Kanne Weines z servieren.)	BARON: (half sitting up): Here am I! Now! What curious adventures may befall a man In this Metropolis. Not all are to my taste— Here is one far too much the sport of fate! It is better at home. (A Footman enters and serves wine. The Baron tries to drink and makes a movement which causes him pain.)

BARON: (will trinken, da macht er eine Bewegung, die ihm Schmerzen verursacht): Oh! Oh!
Der Satan!
Oh!
Oh!
Sakramentsverfluchter Bub',
nit trocken hinterm Ohr und fuchtelt mit 'n Spadi!
(In immer grösserer Wut.)
Wällischer Hundsbub' das!
Dich sollt' ich nur erwischen.
In Hundezwinger sperr' ich dich,
bei meiner Seel,' in Hühnerstall!
In Schweinekofen!
Tät' dich kuranzen!
Solltest alle Engel singen hör'n!
(Zu dem Faninalschen Diener.)
Schenk' Er nur ein da, schnell!

DIE LERCHENAUISCHEN: (gedämpft): Wenn ich dich erwisch',
Du liegst unter'm Tisch.
Wart', dich hau' i z'samm,
dass dich Gott verdamm'!

BARON: (zum Arzt gewandt): Herr Medicus, verfüg' Er sich voraus!
Mach' Er das Bett aus lauter Federbetten.
Ich komm'.
Erst aber trink' ich noch.
Marschier' Er nur indessen.
(Der Arzt geht ab mit dem Leiblakai. Annina ist durch den Vorsaal hereingekommen und schleicht sich verstohlen heran, einen Brief in der Hand).

BARON: (vor sich leise, den zweiten Becher leerend): Ein Federbett.
Zwei Stunden noch zu Tisch.
Werd' Zeitlang haben.
"Ohne mich, ohne mich, jeder Tag dir so bang,
mit mir, mit mir, keine Nacht dir zu lang."
(Annina stellt sich so, dass der Baron sie sehen muss und winkt ihm geheimnisvoll mit dem Brief.)
Für mich?

ANNINA: (näher): Von der Bewussten.

BARON: Wer soll da gemeint sein?

ANNINA: (ganz nahe): Nur eigenhändig, insgeheim zu übergeben.

BARON: Luft da!
(Die Diener treten zurück, nehmen den Faninalschen ohne weiteres die Weinkanne ab und trinken sie leer.) Zeig' Sie den Wisch!
(Reisst mit der Linken den Brief auf. Versucht ihn zu lesen, indem er ihn sehr weit von sich weghält.)
Such' Sie in meiner Taschen meine Brillen.
(*Misstrauisch, da sie sich dazu

BARON: Oh! Oh!
The Devil!
Oh! Oh! Oh, a plague upon that boy!
A baby, scarcely breeched, and plays with swords already.
(With growing passion.)
Cursed Italian hound!
Wait till I catch your Lordship!
In my kennel, I'll teach you to fight, upon on my soul!
With cocks and hens I'll house you.
Egad, I'll trounce you!
Make you hear the angels sing!
(To Faninal's Footman.)
Give me some wine there, quick!

LERCHENAU'S SERVANTS: (with hollow voices): We will towzle you!
Beat you black and blue!
We will do for you,
Beat you black and blue!

BARON: (to the Doctor): And now, my friend, precede me to my room,
And make my bed, and let it be all feathers.
I come, but first, another draught
Remember what I told you.
(The Doctor goes out with the Body Servant. Annina has entered through the ante-room and comes up to him mysteriously with a letter in her hand.)

BARON: (to himself softly, emptying the second cup): A feather bed!
Two hours yet till I dine, and no distraction.
"Without me, without me, slowly pass all the days,
With me, with me, time will seem short always."
(Annina places herself so that the Baron must see her and makes mysterious signs to him with her letter.)
For me?

ANNINA: (nearer): From her you know of!

BARON: And whom may you mean, pray!

ANNINA: (coming quite close): Into your own hands I must give it, and in secret.

BARON: Room there!
(His servants retire without more ado, take the wine-can from Faninal's servant and empty it.)
Show me the thing!
(Tears the letter open with this left hand. Tries to read it, holding it as far as possible from him.)
Look in my pocket for my glasses.
(Suspiciously, as she is searching.)
No! Do not look.

anschickt.)
Nein! Such' Sie nicht!
Kann Sie Geschriebnes lesen?
Da.

ANNINA: (nimmt und liest): "Herr Kavalier!
Den morgigen Abend hätt' i frei.
Sie ham mir schon g'fall'n, nur g'schamt
hab' i mi von der fürstil'n Gnad'n, weil i noch gar so jung bin. Das bewusste Mariandel, Kammerzofel und Verliebte.
Wenn der Herr Kavalier den Nam' nit schon vergessen hat.
I wart' auf Antwort."

BARON: (entzückt): Sie wart' auf Antwort.
Geht all's recht am Schnürl so wie z' Haus und hat noch einen andern Schick dazu.
Ich hab' halt schon einmal ein lerchenauisch Glück.
Komm' Sie nach Tisch, geb' Ihr die Antwort nachher schriftlich.

ANNINA: Ganz zu Befehl, Herr Kavalier.
Vergessen nich der Botin?

BARON: (sie überhörend, vor sich): "Ohne mich, ohne mich jeder Tag dir so bang."

ANNINA: (dringlicher): Vergessen nicht der Botin, Euer Gnad'n?

BARON: Schon gut.
"Mit mir, mit mir kein Nacht dir zu lang."
(Annina macht nochmals eine Gebärde des Geldforderns).
Das später.
Alls auf einmal.
Dann zum Schluss.
Sie wart' auf Antwort!
Tret' Sie ab indessen.
Schaff' Sie ein Schreibzeug in mein Zimmer, bin dort drüben, dass ich die Antwort dann diktier'.
(Annina geht ab, nicht ohne mit einer drohenden Gebärde hinter des Barons Rücken angezeigt zu haben, dass sie sich bald für seinen Geiz rächen werde).
(tut noch einen letzten Schluck, er geht, von seinen Leuten begleitet, seinem Zimmer zu): "Mit mir, mit mir keine Nacht dir zu lang!"

End of Act II.

DRITTER AUFZUG

Ein Extrazimmer in einem Gasthaus. Im Hintergrund links ein Alkoven, darin ein Bett. Der Alkoven durch einen Vorhang verschliessbar, der sich auf- und zuziehn lässt. Vorne rechts Türe ins Nebenzimmer. Rechts steht ein für zwei Personen gedeckter Tisch, auf diesem ein grosser vielarmiger Leuchter. In der Mitte rückwärts Ture auf den Korridor.

Are you a scholar? Read it
There—

ANNINA: (takes the letter and reads): "Worshipful Sir! Tomorrow at nightfall I am free!
You pleased me, but I felt it shame,
Ven 'er 'ighness was looking, to say it,
For I am still a young thing,
She you know of, Mariandel,
Tirewoman, and your sweetheart,
And I hope that your Lords'ip's
'onor 'as not forgotten me.
I wait an answer."

BARON: (delighted): She waits an answer!
It all goes on wheels—as at home
And, look you, what an air of fashion it has.
(Very merry.)
I have all the luck of the Lerchenaus—
Come when I've dined—I'll give the answer then in writing.

ANNINA: Your most obedient servant, my Lord.
Your Lords'ip v'on't forget me?

BARON: (not noticing her—to himself): "Without me, without me, slowly pass all the days."

ANNINA: (importunately): Your Lords'ip 'has forgotten ze bearer

BARON: Enough—
"With me, with me, time will seem short always—(Annina makes another begging gesture.)
Afterward—all together—at the end.
"I wait an answer." In the meantime leave me,
Bring to my room soon all that you need for writing,
And I'll dictate you my reply.
(Annina goes out, not without indicating by a threatening gesture behind the Baron's back, that she will be even with him for his niggardliness. The Baron takes a last sip of wine, and goes toward his room, accompanied by his people.)
"With me, with me, time shall seem short always!"

END OF ACT TWO.

ACT III

A private room in an inn. At the back to the left a recess (in it a bed.) the recess is separated from the room by a curtain, which can be drawn.
At the center, towards the left, a fire-place with a fire, over it a mirror. In front on the left, a door leading to a side room. Opposite the fire-place is a table laid for two, on which stands a large,

Daneben links ein Büffet. Rechts rückwärts ein blindes Fenster, vorne links ein Fenster auf die Gasse. Armleuchter mit Kerzen auf den Seitentischen, sowie an den Wänden. Es brennt nur je eine Kerze in den Leuchtern und auf den Seitentischen. Das Zimmer halbdunkel.

Annina steht da, als Dame in Trauer gekleidet. Valzacchi richtet ihr den Schleier, zupft da und dort das Kleid zurecht, tritt zurück, mustert sie, zieht einen Crayon aus der Tasche, untermalt ihr die Augen. Die Türe rechts wird vorsichtig geöffnet, ein Kopf erscheint, verschwindet wieder, dann kommt eine nicht ganz unbedenklich aussehende, aber ehrbar gekleidete Alte hereingeschlüpft, öffnet lautlos die Tür und lässt respektvoll Octavian eintreten, in Frauenkleidern, mit einem Häubchen, wie es die Bürgermädchen tragen.

Octavian, hinter ihm die Alte, gehen auf die beiden anderen zu, werden sogleich von Valzacchi bemerkt, der in seiner Arbeit innehält und sich vor Octavian verneigt. Annina erkennt nicht sofort den Verkleideten, sie kann sich vor Staunen nicht fassen, knickst dann tief. Octavian greift in die Tasche (nicht wie eine Dame sondern wie ein Herr und man sieht, dass er unter dem Reifrock Männerkleider und Reitstiefel anhat, aber ohne Sporen) und wirft Valzacchi eine Börse zu. Valzacchi und Annina küssen ihm die Hände, Annina richtet noch an Octavians Brusttuch. Indessen sind fünf verdächtige Herren unter Vorsichtsmassregeln eingetreten. Valzacchi bedeutet sie mit einem Wink zu warten. Sie stehen nahe der Türe.

many-branched candlestick. At the back, in the center, a door leading to the corridor. Next to it, on the right, a sideboard.

At the back, on the right, a blind window; in front, on the right, a window looking on the street. Candelabra with candles on the sideboard and on the chimney piece, and sconces on the walls. Only one candle is burning in each candlestick on the chimney-piece. The room is in semi-darkness.

Annina discovered, dressed as a lady in mourning. Valzacchi is arranging her veil, putting her dress to right, takes a step backwards, surveys her, takes a crayon from his pocket and paints her eyes. The door on the left is opened cautiously, a head appears, and vanishes. Then a not unsuspicious-looking but decently dressed old woman slips in, opens the door silently and respectfully introduces Octavian, in female clothes, with a cap such as girls of the middle classes wear. Octavian, followed by the old woman, moves towards the others. Valzacchi is at once aware of them, stops in his occupation, and bows to Octavian. Annina does not at once recognize him in his disguise. She cannot restrain her astonishment, and curtseys low. Octavian feels in his pocket (not like a woman, but like a man, and one sees that under his skirt he is wearing riding boots without spurs) and throws a purse to Valzacchi; Valzacchi and Annina kiss his hands. Annina puts a finishing touch to his kerchief.

Five suspicious looking men enter very cautiously from the left. Valzacchi makes them a sign to wait. They stand at the left, near the door.

Eine Uhr schlägt halb. Valzacchi zieht seine Uhr, zeigt Octavian: es ist hohe Zeit. Octavian geht eilig ab, gefolgt von der Alten, die als seine Begleiterin fungiert. Annina geht zum Spiegel (alles mit Vorsicht, jedes Geräusch vermeidend) arrangiert sich noch, zieht dann einen Zettel hervor, woraus sie ihre Rolle zu lernen scheint. Valzacchi nimmt indessen die Verdächtigen nach vorne, indem er mit jeder Gebärde die Notwendigkeit höchster Vorsicht andeutet. Die Verdächtigen folgen ihm auf den Zehen nach der Mitte. Er bedeutet ihrer einem, ihm zu folgen: lautlos, ganz lautlos. Führt ihn an die Wand rechts, öffnet lautlos eine Falltür unfern des gedeckten Tisches, lässt den Mann hinabsteigen, schliesst wieder die Falltür. Dann winkt er zwei zu sich, schleicht ihnen voran bis an die Eingangstüre, steckt den Kopf heraus, vergewissert sich, dass niemand zusieht, winkt die zwei zu sich, lässt sie dort hinaus.

Dann schliesst er die Tür, führt die beiden letzten leise an die Türe zum Nebenzimmer voran, schiebt sie hinaus. Winkt Annina zu sich, geht mit ihr leise links ab, die Türe lautlos hinter sich schliessend. Er kommt wieder herein, klatscht in die Hände. Der eine Versteckte hebt sich mit halben Leib aus dem Boden hervor. Zugleich erscheinen über dem Bett und andern Stellen Köpfe. Auf Valzacchis Wink verschwinden dieselben ebenso plötzlich, die geheimen Schiebtüren schliessen sich ohne Geräusch. Valzacchi sieht abermals nach der Uhr, geht nach rückwärts, öffnet die Eingangstür, dann zieht er ein Feuerzeug hervor und beginnt eifrig die Kerzen auf dem Tisch anzuzünden.

Ein Kellner und ein Kellnerjunge kommen gelaufen mit zwei Stöcken zum Kerzenanzünden. Entzünden die Leuchter auf dem Kamin, auf dem Büfett, dann die zahlreichen Wandarme. Sie haben die Tür hinter sich offen gelassen, man hört aus dem Vorsaal (im Hintergrunde) Tanzmusik spielen. Valzacchi eilt zur Mitteltür, öffnet dienstbeflissen auch den zweiten Flügel, springt unter Verneigung zur Seite.

A clock strikes the half-hour. Valzacchi takes out his watch; shows it to Octavian; it is high time. Octavian hurries out to the left, followed by the old woman, who acts as his duenna. Valzacchi leads the suspicious looking men to the front, impressing on them with every gesture the necessity of extreme caution. Annina goes to the mirror (all the while cautiously avoiding every noise) completes her disguise; then draws from a pocket a piece of paper, from which she seems to be learning a part. The suspicious looking men follow Valzacchi on tiptoe to the center. He signs to one of them to follow him noiselessly, quite noiselessly, leads him to the wall on the right, noiselessly opens a trapdoor not far from the table, makes the man descend, closes the trapdoor; then he summons the others to his side, slinks in front of them to the door of the room, puts his head out, assures himself that they are not observed, makes a sign to the two to come to him, and lets them out. Then he closes the door, directs the two remaining men to precede him to the door which leads to the side room, pushes them out, signs to Annina to come to him, goes out with her silently to the left, and noiselessly closes the door behind him. He returns—claps his hands.

The man who is hidden rises to his waist from the trapdoor. At the same moment heads appear above the bed and in other places. At a sign from Valzacchi they disappear as suddenly—the secret panels close without a sound. Valazacchi again looks at his watch, goes to the back, opens the door. Then he produces a tinder-box and busily lights the candles on the table.

A Waiter and a Boy run in with tapers for lighting candles, and light the candles on the chimney, on the sideboard, and the numerous sconces. They have left the door open behind them, dance music is heard from the anteroom at the back.

Valzacchi hurries to the center door, opens it respectfully (both wings) and bowing low springs aside.

Baron Ochs erscheint, den Arm in der Schlinge. Octavian an der Linken führend, hinter ihm der Leiblakai. Baron mustert den Raum. Octavian sieht herum, läuft an den Spiegel, richtet sein Haar. Baron bemerkt den kellner und Kellnerjungen, die noch mehr Kerzen anzünden wollen, winkt ihnen, sie sollten es sein lassen. In ihrem Eifer bemerken sie es nicht.

(Baron ungeduldig, reisst den Kellnerjungen vom Stuhl, auf den er gestigen war, löscht einige ihm zunächst brennende Kerzen mit der Hand aus. Valzacchi zeigt dem Baron diskret den Alkoven und durch eine Spalte des Vorhanges das Bett. Der Wirt mit mehrerer Kellnern eilt herbei, den vornehmen Gast zu begrüssen).

Baron Ochs appears, his arm in a sling, leading Octavian by his left, followed by his Body Servant. The Baron surveys the room. Octavian looks round, runs to the the mirror and arranges his hair. The Baron notices the Waiter and the Boy, who are about to light more candles, and signs to them to stop. In their preoccupation they do not notice him. The Baron, in his impatience, pulls the Boy from the chair on to which he has climbed, and extinguishes some of the candles nearest him with his hand. Valzacchi discreetly points out the recess to him (and through an opening of the curtains the bed). (Enter the Landlord.)

WIRT: Haben Euer Gnaden noch weitre Befehle?

LANDLORD: (hurrying forward to greet the noble guest): Has your Lordship any further wishes?

KELLNER: Befehl'n mehr Lichter?

WAITERS: D'you lack more candles?

WIRT: Ein grösseres Zimmer?

LANDLORD: A larger apartment?

KELLNER: Befehlen mehr Silber auf den Tisch?

WAITERS: We'll bring your Lordship more lights if you wish—
More silver—

BARON: (eifrig beschäftig mit einer Serviette, die er vom Tisch genommen und entfaltet hat, alle ihm erreichbaren Kerzen auszulöschen): Verschwindt's!
Macht mir das Madel net verruckt
Was will die Musik?
Hab' sie nicht bestellt.
(Löscht weitere Kerzen aus.)

WIRT: Schaffen vielleicht, dass man sie näher hört
Im Vorsaal da als Tafelmusik.

BARON: Lass Er die Musick, wo sie ist.
(Bemerkt das Fenster rechts rückwärts im Rücken des gedeckten Tisches.)
Was ist da für ein Fenster da?
(Probiert, ob es hereinzieht.)

WIRT: Ein blindes Fenster nur.
(Verneigt sich.)
Darf aufgetragen werd'n?
(Alle fünf Kellner wollen abeilen.)

BARON: Halt, was woll'n die Maikäfer da?

KELLNER: (an der Tür): Servier'n, Euer Gnaden.

BARON: (winkt ab): Brauch' niemand nicht.
(Als sie nicht gehen, heftig.)
Packt's Euch!
Servieren wird mein Kammerdiener da.
Einschenken tu' ich kelber.
Versteht Er?
(Valzacchi bedeutet sie, den Willen seiner Gnaden wortlos zu respektieren. Schiebt alle zur Tür hinaus.)

BARON: (löscht aufs neue eine Anzahl Kerzen aus, darunter mit einigen Mühe die hoch an der Wand brennenden, zu Valzacchi): Er ist ein braver Kerl.
Wenn er mir hilft, die Rechnung 'runterdrucken,
Dann fallt was ab für Ihn.
Kost' sicher hier ein Martergeld.
(Valzacchi unter Verneigung ab.—Octavian ist nun fertig.)
(Baron führt ihn zu Tisch, sie setzen sich).
(Der Lakai am Büffet sieht mit unverschämter Neugierde der Entwicklung des tete-a-tete entgegen, stellt Karaffen mit Wein vom Büffet auf den Esstisch. Baron schenkt ein. Octavian nippt. Baron küsst Octavian die Hand. Octavian entzieht ihm die Hand. Baron winkt den lakaien abzugehen, muss es mehrmals wiederholen, bis die Lakaien endlich gehen.)

OCTAVIAN: (schiebt sein Glas zurück): Nein, nein, nien, nein!
I trink' kein Wein.

BARON: (busily engaged in extinguishing all the candles in his reach with a napkin which he has taken from the table and unfolded.) Be off!
Such talk will turn the hussy's brain.
(Extinguishes more candles.)
What is that music?
I commanded none.

LANDLORD: They can come near it it is your Lordship's wish—
To play to you in yonder anteroom.

BARON: Best let them stay there, as they are.
(Notices the blind window to the right behind the table.)
Tell me, what means that window there?
(Tries it.)

LANDLORD: That window?
That is blind.
(Bows.)
Can supper now begin?
(All five waiters make as if to hurry off.)

BARON: Stop!
What mean those grinning apes?

WAITERS: To wait upon your Lordship.

BARON: (makes a sign to them to go): I need no help.
Be off!
My man there will serve all the meats to us.
Myself I'll fill the glasses. Now leave us
(Valzacchi signing to them to respect his Lordship's wishes without demur, pushes them all out of the door. The Baron continues to extinguish the candles, among them some high on the walls which he reaches with difficulty.)

BARON: You are an honest fellow.
If you can help me reduce the reckoning,
There will be vails for you.
It is surely very costly here.
(Exit Valzacchi, bowing.)
(Octavian has now finished arranging his hair. The Baron leads him to the table. The Body Servant at the sideboard contemplates the developments of the tête-à-tête with impudent curiosity. He places bottles of wine from the sideboard on the table. The Baron pours out wine. Octavian takes a sip. The Baron kisses Octavian's hand. Octavian withdraws his hand. The Baron signs to the lackey to withdraw, but he has to repeat the signal several times before he goes.) OCTAVIAN: (pushing back his glass): What do you think?

I drink no wine.

BARON: Geh, Herzel, was denn?
Mach' doch keine Faxen.

OCTAVIAN: Nein, nein, i bleib' net da.
(Springt auf, tut, als wenn er fort wollte.)

BARON: (packt sie mit seiner Linken): Jetzt komm' Sie.
Setz' Sie sich schön.
Kommt gleich wer mit'n Essen
Hat Sie denn kein' Hunger nicht?
(Legt ihr die Hand um die Taille.)

OCTAVIAN: (wirft dem Baron schmachtende Blicke zu): O weh, wo Sie doch ein Bräutigam tun sein.
(Wehrt ihn ab.)

BARON: Ach, lass Sie schon einmal das fade Wort!
Sie hat doch einen Kavalier vor sich und keinen Seifensieder:
Ein Kavalier lässt alles,
was ihn nicht konveniert, da draussen vor der Tür. Hier sitzt kein Bräutigam und keine Kammerjungfer nicht:
Hier sitzt mit seiner Allerschönsten ein Verliebter beim Souper.
(Zieht sie an sich.)
(Octavian lehnt sich kokett in den Sessel zurück, mit halbgeschlossenen Augen).
(erhebt sich, der Moment für den ersten Kuss scheint ihm gekommen. Wie sein Gesicht dem der Partnerin ganz nahe ist, durchzuckt ihn jäh die Aehnlichkeit mit Octavian. Er fährt zurück und greift unwillkürlich nach dem verwundeten Arm): Ist ein Gesicht!
Verfluchter Bub'!
Verfolgt mich alser wacher und im Traum!

OCTAVIAN: (öffnet die Augen und blickt ihn frech und kokett an): Was meint Er denn?

BARON: Sieht einem ähnlich, einem gottverfluchten Kerl!

OCTAVIAN: Ah geh'!
Das hab' i no net g'hört! (Baron nun wieder versichert, dass es die Zofe ist, zwingt sich zu einem Lächeln. Aber der Schreck ist ihm nicht ganz aus den Gliedern. Er mus Luft schöpfen und der Kuss bleibt aufgeschoben. Der Mann unter der Falltür öffnet zu früh und kommt zum Vorschein).
(Octavian der ihm gegenübersitzt, winkt ihm eifrig zu verschwinden. Der Mann verschwindet sofort. Baron, der, um den unangenehmen Eindruck von sich abzuschütteln, ein paar Schritte getan hat und sie von

BARON: Come, sweetheart, why not?
Now let's have no flim-flams.

OCTAVIAN: No, no, no,no, I will not stay.
(Jumps up as if he would go away.)

BARON: (seizing him with his left hand): Sit down now, take your place, here.
They'll soon bring supper . . .
Then we'll fall to with appetite.
(Put his arm round his waist. Octavian casts languid glances at him.)

OCTAVIAN: Oh dear! Oh! to think you're promised and all!
(Keeping him off.)

BARON: Have done with such old wives' tales once for all.
You see here nothing but a gentleman,
None of your common fellows—
A gentleman forgets
And leaves behind him everything
That is not to his taste. Here sits no promised man,
Here at my side no waiting-maid—
Here sit we two and sup, a lover and his lass.
That merely,—nothing more.
(Draws him to his side. Octavian leans back coquettishly in his chair, with half-closed eyes. The Baron rises. The moment for the first kiss seems to have come. As his face is close to that of his companion, the resemblance to Octavian strikes him like a blow. He starts back and half unconsciously feels his wounded arm.)

BARON: One face, I swear,
Accursèd boy . . .
Pursues me when I'm waking and all night.

OCTAVIAN: (opening his eyes and looking at him with impudent coquetry): Lawk! How you talk!

BARON: You're like to some one—an accursèd scurvy boy—

OCTAVIAN: Have done! Who can it be I'm like?
(The Baron has once again assured himself that it is the waiting-maid, and forces a smile. But he is not quite rid of his fright. He must take breath, and the kiss is postponed. The man under the trapdoor opens it too soon and appears. Octavian who is sitting opposite to him makes violent signs to him to get out of sight. He vanishes at once. The Baron, who to shake off the unpleasant impression, has taken a few steps and is on the point of embracing Octavian from behind, just rückwärts umschlingen und küssen will, sieht gerade noch den Mann. Er erschrickt heftig, zeigt hin).

OCTAVIAN: (als verstände er nicht): Was ist mit Ihm?

BARON: (auf die Stelle deutend, wo die Erscheinnung verschwunden ist): Was war den das?
Hat Sie den nicht gesehn?

OCTAVIAN: Da is ja nix.

BARON: Da is nix?
(Nun wieder ihr Gesicht angstvoll musternd.)
So?
Und da ist auch nix?
(Fährt mit der Hand über ihr Gesicht.)

OCTAVIAN: Da is mei' G'sicht.

BARON: (atmet schwer, schenkt sich ein Glas Wein ein): Da is Ihr G'sicht—und da is nix—mir scheint, ich hab' die Kongestion.
(Setzt sich schwer, es ist ihm ängstlich zumute. Die Tür geht auf, man hört draussen wieder die Musik. Der Lakai kommt und serviert.)

OCTAVIAN: (sehr weich): Die schöne Musik!

BARON: (wieder sehr laut): Is mei Leiblied, weiss Sie das?

OCTAVIAN: (horcht auf die Musik): Da muss ma weinen.

BARON: Was?

OCTAVIAN: Weil's gar so schön is.

BARON: Was, weinen?
Wär nicht schlecht.
Kreuzlustig muss Sie sein, die Musik geht ins Blut.
(Sentimental.)
G'spürt Sie's jetzt—
(Winkt dem Lakaien abzugehen.)
Auf die letzt, g'spürt Sie's dahier,
Dass Sie aus mir
Kann machen alles frei, was Sie nur will.
(Der Lakai geht zögernd ab, öffnet nochmals die Tür, schaut mit frecher Neugierde herein und verschwindet erst auf einen neuen heftigen Wink des Barons gänzlich).

OCTAVIAN: (zurückgelehnt, wie zu sich selbst sprechend, mit unmässiger Traurigkeit): Es is ja eh als eins, es is ja eh als eins,
Was ein Herz noch so gach begehrt.
(Indes der Baron ihre Hand fasst.)
Geh', es is ja all's net drumi wert.

BARON: (lässt ihre Hand fahren): Ei, was denn? Is sehr wohl der Müh wert.

catches a last glimpse of him. He is violently alarmed and points to the spot.)

OCTAVIAN: (does as if he did not understand.) What's wrong with you?

BARON: Gad! What was that?
(Points to the spot where the apparition has vanished.)
Did you see that man there?

OCTAVIAN: There's nothing there.

BARON: Nothing there?
(Again anxiously scanning Octavian's face.)
No?
(Passing his hand over his face.)
Nothing there, neither?

OCTAVIAN: That is my face.

BARON: (breathing heavily, pours out a glass of wine): There is your face, and nothing there.
It seems I have a feverish brain—
(The door opens. The music from outside is heard again. The Body Servant comes and serves.)

OCTAVIAN: (very sweetly): The pretty music!

BARON: It is the song that I like best.

OCTAVIAN: It sets me weeping—

BARON: What?

OCTAVIAN: It is that pretty—

BARON: What?
Weeping?
Why, what next?
It is merry you should be.
The music fires the blood.
(Sentimentally.)
Do you still doubt, my dear?
(Signs to the Lackey to go.)
Do you not see how it is with me?
You now can make of me
Your willing slave.
(The Lackey goes reluctantly—then opens the door again, and looks in with insolent curiosity and does not go till the Baron has made an angry sign.)

OCTAVIAN: It is all one—it is all one—
All our joys, and all our bitter pain,
In the end are they not all in vain?
(Leaning back in his chair as though to himself with exaggerated melancholy. The Baron takes his hand.)

BARON: (dropping his hand):
Why?
What's this?
No, sweetheart, not in vain.
(Octavian casts languishing glances at him.)

OCTAVIAN: (immer gleich melancholisch, wirft dem Baron schmachtende Blicke zu): Wie die Stund hingeht, wie der Wind verweht,
So sind wir bald alle zwei dahin.
Menschen ein' ma halt.
(Schmachtender Blick auf den Baron.)
Richtn's nichts mit G'walt,
Weint uns niemand nach, net dir net und net mir.

BARON: Macht Sie der Wein leicht immer so?
Is ganz gewiss Ihr Mieder, das aufs Herzer! Ihr druckt.
(Octavian mit geschlossenen Augen, gibt keine Antwort).
(steht auf und will ihr das Mieder aufschnüren): Jetzt wird's frei mir a bisserl heiss.
(Schnell entschlossen nimmt er seine Perücke ab und sucht sich einen Platz, sie abzulegen. Indem erblickt er ein Gesicht, das sich wieder im Alkoven zeigt und ihn anstarrt. Das Gesicht verschwindet gleich wieder. Er sagt sich: Kongestionen! und verscheucht den Schrecken, muss sich aber doch die Stirne abwischen. Sieht nun wieder die Zofe willenlos wie mit gelösten Gliedern dasitzen. Das ist stärker als alles, und er nähert sich ihr zärtlich. Da meint er wieder das Gesicht Octavians ganz nahe dem seinigen zu erkennen, und er fährt abermals zurück. Mariandl rührt sich kaum. Abermals verscheucht der Baron sich den Schreck, zwingt Munterkeit in sein Gesicht zurück, da fällt sein Auge abermals auf einen fremden Kopf, welcher aus der Wand hervorstarrt. Nun ist er masslos geängstigt, er schreit dumpf auf, ergreift die Tischglocke und schwingt sie wie rasend): Da und da und da und da!
(Plötzlich springt das angeblich blinde Fenster auf. Annina in schwarzer Trauerkleidung erscheint und zeigt mit ausgestreckten Armen auf den Baron).

BARON: (ausser sich vor Angst): Da und da und da und da! (Sucht sich den Rücken zu decken.)

ANNINA: Er ist es! Es ist mein Mann! Er ist's! (Verschwindet.)

BARON: (angstvoll): Was ist denn das?

OCTAVIAN: Das Zimmer ist verhext. (Schlägt ein Kreuz.)

ANNINA: (gefolgt von dem Intriganten, der sie scheinbar anzuhalten sucht, vom Wirt und von drei Kellnern, stürzt zur Mitteltür herein; sie bedient sich des böhmisch-deutschen Akzents, aber gebildeter Sprechweise): Es ist mein Mann, ich leg' Beschlag auf

OCTAVIAN: (still very melancholy): As the hours that go, as the winds that blow,
So we twain will pass away;
Flesh and blood are we, ruled by Fate's decree.
(With another languishing glance.)
When we die there's none to cry for us—not for you and not for me.

BARON: Does wine make you so sad always?
It is surely your stomacher, that is pressing on your heart.
(Octavian with closed eyes does not answer. The Baron rises and tries to open his dress.)
It grows warm—I will take my ease.
(Without ado he takes off his wig, and seeks a place to deposit it. At this moment he espies a face which shows itself in the recess and glares at him. The face vanishes in a trice. He says to himself "Brainsick" and struggles with his fright, but has to mop his forehead. His eyes fall once again on the waiting-maid, sitting there helpless with relaxed limbs. That decides him, and he approaches tenderly. Then again he sees Octavian's face close to his own. He starts back again. "Mariandel" scarcely stirs. Once more the Baron fights with his terror, and forces himself to take a cheerful mien. Then his eyes alight again on a strange face, staring at him from the wall. Now he is beside himself with fright—he gives a muffled scream, seizes the handbell from the table and swings it distractedly.)
There! and there! and there! and there!
(Suddenly the presumed blind window is torn open. Annina in mourning appears and with outstretched arms points to the Baron.)

BARON: (beside himself with fear): There! and there! and there! and there!

ANNINA: My husband!
Yes, it is he! it is he! it is he!
(Vanishes.)

BARON: Zounds, what was that?

OCTAVIAN: (crosses himself): The room is bewitched!

ANNINA: (followed by Valzacchi who makes pretence of holding her back, the Landlord, and three Waiters, rushes in at the center door; speaking with a Bohemian accent, but like a woman of education): I am his wife!
I make a claim to him!

ihn!
Gott ist mein Zerge, Sie sind meine Zeugen!
Gerichte!
Hohe Obrigkeit! Die Kaiserin muss ihn mir wiedergeben!

BARON: (zum Wirt): Was will das Weibsbild da von mir, Herr Wirt!
Was will der dort und der und der und der?
(Zeigt nach allen Richtungen.)
Der Teufel frequentier' sein gottverfluchtes Extrazimmer!
(Baron hat sich eine kalte Kompresse auf den Kopf gelegt, hält sie mit der Linken fest, geht dann dicht auf die Kellner, den Wirt, zuletzt auf Annina zu, mustert sie ganz scharf, um sich über ihre Realität klar zu werden)

ANNINA: Leupold bedenk':
Anton von Lerchenau, dort oben richtet dich ein Höherer!
(Erschrickt zuerst heftig, dass sie in ihrer Anrede unterbrochen wird, fasst sich aber schnell.)

BARON: (starrt sie fassungslos an): Kommt mir bekannt vor.
(Sieht wieder auf Octavian.)
Hab'n doppelte Gesichter alle miteinander.

WIRT: Die arme Frau Baronin!

KELLNER: Die arme Frau, die arme Frau Baronin!

VIER KINDER: (zwischen vier und zehn Jahren stürzen zu früh herein und auf den Baron zu): Papa! Papa! Papa!

ANNINA: Hörst du die Stimme deines Blutes!
Kinder, hebt eure Hände auf zu ihm!

BARON: (schlägt wütend mit einer Serviette, die er vom Tisch reisst, nach den Kindern; zum Wirt): Debarassier' Er mich von denen da, Von der, von dem, von dem!
(Zeigt nach allen Richtungen. Valzacchi indessen zu Octavian leise.)

OCTAVIAN: (zu Valzacchi): Ist gleich wer fort, den Faninal zu holen?

VALZACCHI: (leise): Sogleich in Anfang.
Wird sogleich zur Stelle sein.

Heaven is my witness—you shall be my witness!
The Law, the Ministers, Her Majesty
Must restore him to my arms!

BARON: (to the Landlord): Landlord, what does this female want of me?
What does he want? and he? and that one there?
(Pointing all round the room.)
Hell is let lose in this foul den of thieves.
(The Baron has put a cold compress on his head, holds it in its place with his left hand, then goes close up to the Landlord, the Waiters and Annina in turn, and scans them closely, as if to convince himself that they are real.)

ANNINA: Leopold, reflect!
Anton of Lerchenau,
Above us dwells a Judge that knoweth all!

LANDLORD AND WAITERS: Poor ill-used lady!
Oh wretched, ill-used lady!

BARON: (stares in amazement at Annina): Surely I know you!
(Looks towards Octavian again.)
They all have double faces!
All of them together!
(Four children between the ages of ten and four, entering too soon, rush towards the Baron.)

THE FOUR CHILDREN: Papa! Papa! Papa!
(Annina at first starts violently, so that her speech is interrupted, but soon regains her composure.)

ANNINA: Hear you the voices of your offspring?
My children, raise your hands to him in prayer!
(The Baron hits out at the children with a napkin which he takes from the table.)

BARON: (to the Landlord): Take all this crew away from here at once—
Take her, take him, and him, and him!

OCTAVIAN: (aside to Valzacchi): Have messengers been sent for Faninal?

VALZACCHI: Before you 'ad come 'ere: in a moment you vill see 'im.

WIRT: (im Rücken des Barons, leise): Halten zu Gnaden, gehen nit zu weit.
könnten recht böse Folgen g'spüren!
Bitterböse!

BARON: Was? ich was g'spür'n?
Von dem Möbel da?
Hab's nie nicht angerührt, nicht mit der Feuer zang'!

ANNINA: (schreit laut auf): Aah!

WIRT: (wie oben): Die Bigamie ist halt kein G'spass,
Is gar ein Kapitalverbrechen!

VALZACCHI: (zum Baron leise): Ik rat' Euer Gnaden, sei'n vorsiktig, Die Sittenpolizei sein gar nicht tolerant!

BARON: Die Bigamie?
Die Sittenpolizei?
(Die Stimmen der Kinder nachahmend.)
Papa, Papa, Papa?
(Greift sich wie verloren an den Kopf, dann wütend.)
Schmeiss' Er hinaus das Trauerpferd!
Wer?
Was?
Er will nicht?
Was?
Polizei!
Die Lackln woll'n nicht?
Spielt das Gelichter
Leicht alles unter einem Leder?
Sein wir in Frankreich?
Sein wir unter Kurutzen?
Oder in kaiserlicher Hauptstadt?
(Reisst das Gassenfenster auf.)
Polizei!
Herauf da, Polizei: Gilt Ordnung herzustellen
Und einer Stand'sperson zu Hilf' zu eilen!
(Man hört auf der Gasse laute Rufe nach der Polizei.)

WIRT: (jammernd): Mein renommiertes Haus!
Das muss mein Haus erleben.

DIE KINDER: (plärrend): Papa!
Papa! Papa
(Kommissarius mit zwei Wächtern treten auf. Alles rangiert sich, ihnen Platz zu machen.)

VALZACCHI: (zu Octavian): Oh weh, was maken wir?

OCTAVIAN: Verlass' Er sich auf mich und lass' Er's gehen, wie's geht.

VALZACCHI: Zu Euer Excellenz Befehl!

KOMMISSARIUS: (scharf): Halt!
Keiner rührt sich!
Was ist los?
Wer hat um Hilf' geschrien?
Wer hat skandal gemacht?

BARON: (auf ihn zu, mit der Sicherheit des grossen Herrn): Is all's in Ordnung jetzt.
Bin mit Ihm wohl zufrieden.
Hab' gleich verhofft, das in Wein

LANDLORD: (behind the Baron): Asking your pardon, venture not too far,
Else might it end in harm for you—in harm most serious.

BARON: What? Harm to me from that old beldam there?
Never have I touched her—no, not with a pitchfork's end

ANNINA: (screams shrilly): Ah!

LANDLORD: For bigamy is not a trifle,
It is a hanging matter—

VALZACCHI: I counsel zat your Lords'ip 'ave a care,
Ze police in zis town, it 'ave no mercy, Sir!

BARON: Bigamy! Pooh!
A fig for your police!
(Mimicking the voices of the children.) Papa! Papa! Papa!
(Striking his head as if in despair, then furiously.)
Turn out that whining Jezebel!
Who?
What?
You will not?
What?
The Watch here!
The rascals will not stir!
Is all this scurvy crew
Plotted to do me mischief?
Are we among heathens?
Or in France, or Turkey?
Or in this Empire's foremost city.
(Tears open the window that looks on to the street.)
The Watch!
The Watch, here!
Hurry!
Here!
Quick, here, to quell a riot!
Here is a man of quality in danger!
(Loud cries of "The Watch" are heard from the street.)

LANDLORD: Oh! my old inn disgraced!
Oh, my fair reputation!

THE CHILDREN: (whining): Papa!
Papa! Papa!
(A Commissary of Police enters with two Constables. All stand back to make way for them.)

VALZACCHI: Alas! Vat can ve do?

OCTAVIAN: Put all your trust in me and happy chance.

VALZACCHI: Your humble servant to command.

COMMISSARY: (roughly): Stop!
No one stirs now!
What's amiss?
Who was it called for help?
Who was it broke the peace?

BARON: (going towards him with the self-confidence of a great gentleman): The trouble now is passed.
Right well done!

all's so wie am Schnürl geht.
(Vergnügt.)
Schaff' Er mir da das Pack vom Hals.
Ich will in Ruh' soupieren.

KOMMISSARIUS: Wer ist der Herr?
Was gibt dem Herrn Befugnis?
Ist Er der Wirt?
(Baron sperrt den Mund auf.)
(scharf): Dann hal' Er sich gefällig still
Und wart' Er, bis man ihn vernehmen wird.
(Baron retiriert sie etwas, perplex, begiunt nach seinen Perücke su suchen, die in dem Tumult abhanden gekommen ist und unauffindbar bleibt).
(Kommissarius setzt sich, die zwei Wächter nehmen hinter ihm Stellung).
Wo ist der Wirt?

WIRT: (devot): Mich dem Herrn Oberkommissarius schönstens zu rekommandieren.

KOMMISSARIUS: Die Wirtschaft
da rekommandiert Ihn schlecht.
Bericht' Er jetzt!
Von Anfang!

WIRT: Herr Kommissar!
Der Herr Baron—-

KOMMISSARIUS: Der grosse
Dicke da?
Wo hat er sein Paruckl?

BARON: (der die ganze Zeit gesucht hat): Das frag' ich Ihn!

WIRT: Das ist der Herr Baron von Lerchenau!

KOMMISSARIUS: Genügt nicht.

BARON: Was?

KOMMISSARIUS: Hat Er Personen
nahebei,
Die für Ihn Zeugnis geben?

BARON: Gleich bei der Hand!
Da hier mein Sekretär, ein Italiener.

VALZACCHI: (wechselt mit Octavian einen Blick des Einverständnisses): Ik exkusier' mik.
Ik weiss nix.
Die Herr kann sein Baron, kann sein auch nit.
Ik weiss von nix.

BARON: (ausser sich): Das ist
doch stark, wällisches Luder, falsches!
(Geht mit erhobener Linken auf ihn los.)

KOMMISSARIUS: (zum Baron, scharf): Fürs erste moderier' Er sich.

I commend you,
I knew at once that there's no danger in Vienna.
(Relieved.) Drive me this crowd from out the room.
I wish to sup unhindered.

COMMISSARY: Who are you, pray?
By what right do you meddle?
Is this your house?
(The Baron stands open-mouthed.)
Then hold your peace, withdraw,
And wait in patience till I need your evidence.
(The Baron retires in perplexity, begins to look for his wig, which had disappeared in the confusion and is not to be found. The Commissary seats himself. The two Constables take up their position behind him.)
The Landlord first.

LANDLORD: By your leave.
Report myself.
I'm landlord here, very much at your service.

COMMISSARY: These goings-on do not speak well for you.
Now your report—
The whole truth!

LANDLORD: It happened thus—
His Lordship there . . .

COMMISSARY: That very fat man
there?
Where have you put your wig, Sir?

BARON: (who has been searching all the time): That I would from you.

LANDLORD: That is his Lordship,
Baron Lerchenau—

COMMISSARY: First prove it.

BARON: What?

COMMISSARY: Is any person near at hand
Whom you can call as witness?

BARON: Yes, close at hand.
There!
My secretary, an Italian.

VALZACCHI: (exchanges glances of intelligence with Octavian): I can say nozzing!
I not know.
'E may
Be Lerchenau—'e may be not.
I do not know.

BARON: (beside himself): That is too much.
Lying Italian scum, you!
(Goes toward him with raised fist.)

COMMISSARY: It would be best for you keep a civil tongue.
(Octavian, who up to now has stood quiet, now does as if, running about in despair, he could not find the way out, and mistook the window for the door.)

OCTAVIAN: (der bis jetzt ruhig rechts gestanden, tut nun, als ob er, in Verzweiflung hin und her irrend, den Ausweg nicht fände und das Fenster für eine Ausgangstür hält): Oh mein Gott in die Erd'n möcht' ich sinken!
Heilige Mutter von Maria Taferl!

KOMMISSARIUS: Wer ist dort die
junge Person?

BARON: Die?
Niemand.
Sie steht unter meiner Protektion!

KOMMISSARIUS: Er selber wird
bald eine Protektion sehr nötig haben.
Wer ist das jung Ding, was macht
Sie hier?
(Blickt um sich.)

BARON: Ist die Jungfer Faninal
Sophia Anna Barbara, eheliche Tochter des wohlgeborenen Herrn von Faninal.
Wohnhaft am "Hof" im eignenPalais.
(An der Tür haben sich Gasthofpersonal, andere Gäste, auch einige der Musiker aus dem andern Zimmer neugierig angesammelt. Herr von Faninal drängt sich durch sie durch, eilig aufgeregt in Hut und Mantel.)

FANINAL: Zur Stell'!
Was wird von mir gewünscht?
(Auf den Baron zu.)
Wie sieht Er aus?
War mir vermutend nicht zu dieser
Stunde,
in ein gemeines Beisl depeschiert
zu werden!

BARON: (sehr erstaunt und unangenehm berührt): Wer hat Ihn hierher depeschiert?
In des Dreiteufels Namen?

FANINAL: (halblaut zu ihm):
Was soll mir die saudumme Frag',
Herr Schwiegersohn?
Wo Er mir schier die Tür einrennen
lässt mit Botschaft.
Ich soll sehr schnell
Herbei und Ihn in einer üblen Lage soutenieren,
In die Er unverschuldter Weise geraten ist!
(Baron greift sich an den Kopf).

KOMMISSARIUS: Wer ist der Herr?
Was schafft der Herr mit Ihm?

BARON: Nichts von Bedeutung.
Ist bloss ein Bekannter, hält sich per Zufall hier im Gasthaus auf.

KOMMISSARIUS: Der Herr geb' seinen Namen an!

FANINAL: Ich bin der Edle von Faninal.

OCTAVIAN: Oh! I pray that the earth may start open
Under my feet and swallow me up!
(The Body Servant, who is much alarmed at the situation, suddenly has a hopeful inspiration and hastily rushes out by the center door.)

COMMISSARY: And that young woman there, who is she?

OCTAVIAN: That?
No one—she stands under my protection here—

COMMISSARY: Yourself will find protection needful soon.
Who is that girl, I say.
Why is she here?
(Looks round.)

BARON: It is young Mistress Faninal, Sophia Anna Barbara, heiress and daughter
In lawful wedlock born to the most noble Lord
Faninal, domiciled here in the Hof.
(The servants of the inn, other guests, also some of the musicians from the next room have crowded around the door and look in curiously. Herr von Faninal forces his way through the crowd, much perturbed, in hat and cloak.)

FANINAL: The same, Sir.
What might you desire of me?
(Goes to the Baron.)
Why, how you look,
I scarce expected you would need my presence
At this untimely hour, here in a common pot-house.

BARON: (very much surprised and annoyed): And who asked you to meddle, in the name of mischief?

FANINAL: Why ask such questions, like a fool, Sir son-in-law,
When messengers from you came batt'ring at my house-door
And shouting I must come in hottest haste to rescue you from gravest danger, Which by no fault of yours was threatening your liberty.
(The Baron seizes his head in his hand.)

COMMISSARY: Whom have we here?
What is your talk with him?

BARON: It is nothing—nothing.
We are scarce acquainted—
It is but a chance that he is staying here.

COMMISSARY: (to Faninal):
Your name—and tell me why you're here.

FANINAL: I am the Baron of Faninal.

KOMMISSARIUS: Ja, ja, genùgt schon.
(Zu Faninal.)
Er erkennt demnach in diesem Herrn hier Seinen Schwiegersohn?

FANINAL: Sehr wohl!
Wie sollt' ich Ihn nicht erkennen?
Leicht, weil Er keine Haar nicht hat?

KOMMISSARIUS: (zum Baron):
Und Er erkennt nunmehr wohl auch in diesem Herrn
Wohl oder übel Seinen Schwiegervater?

BARON: (nimmt den Leuchter vom Tisch, beleuchtet sich Faninal genau): So so, la la! Ja, ja, wird schon derselbe sein.
War heut den ganzen Abend gar nicht recht beinand,
Kann meinen Augen heut nicht traun. Muss Ihm sagen,
Liegt hier was in der Luft, man kriegt die Kongestion davon

KOMMISSARIUS: (zum Faninal):
Dagegen wird von Ihm die Vaterschaft zu dieser Ihm verbatim zugeschobenen Tochter Geleugnet.

FANINAL: (bemerkt jetzt erst Octavian): Meine Tochter?
Meine Tochter soll herauf!
Sitzt unten in der Tragchaise.
Im Galopp herauf!
(Wieder auf den Baron losstürzend.)
Das zahlt Er teuer!
Bring' Ihn vors Gericht!
(Baron im Wilden Herumfahren, um die Perücke zu suchen, fasst er einige der Kinder an und stösst sie zur Seite).

DIE KINDER: (automatisch):
Papa! Papa! Papa!

FANINAL: (fährt zurück): Was ist denn das?

BARON: (im Suchen findet wenigstens seinen Hut, schlägt mit dem Hut nach den Kindern): Gar nix, ein Schwindel!
Kenn' nit das Bagagi!
Sie sagt, dass sie verheirat' war mit mir.
Käm' zu der Schand', so wie der Pontius ins credo!
(Sophie kommt im Mantel eilig herein, man macht ihr Platz. An der Tür sieht man die Faninalschen Bedienten, jeder eine Tragstange der Sänfte haltend. Baron sucht die Kahlheit seines Kopfs vor Sophie mit dem Hut zu beschatten).

COMMISSARY: Yes, yes, I follow.
Then you recognize
This gentleman for your son-in-law?

FANINAL: For sure; how should I fail to recognize him?
Maybe because his pate is bald?

COMMISSARY: (to the Baron):
And you now recognize this gentleman to be
For good or evil, the young lady's father?

BARON: (taking the candlestick from the table and holding it up to Faninal's face). So, so! La, la!
Yes, yes!
May be that it is he—
My head today has been quite giddy and confused—
I can no longer trust my eyes. I feel
There's here a something in the air that gives a man a fevered brain.

COMMISSARY: (to Faninal): You on the other hand deny you are
The father of this girl here who is said
To be your daughter?

FANINAL: (now for the first time noticing Octavian): That my daughter?
Summon my daughter here.
She waits in her sedan-chair—
Bid her come up at once.
(Again going to the Baron.)
You'll pay this dearly!
I will go to law!

BARON: What mighty pother you are making
About a little thing—To be your son-in-law a man must have
The patience of an ass, parole d'honneur!
Now bring my wig here!
(Shakes the Landlord.)
Find my wig!
Find me my wig!
(In his wild hunt for his wig, he seizes some of the children and pushes them aside.)

THE FOUR CHILDREN: (automatically): Papa! Papa! Papa!

FANINAL: (starts back): What brats are those?

BARON: (in his wild search he has come across his hat and hits out at the children with it): Nothing!
A lie!
Till now I never saw her!
She says that she's my lawful wedded wife!
Heaven only knows why things like this are sent to try us!
(At the door appear servants of Faninal, each one holding the pole of a sedan-chair. Sophia comes in in hat and cloak. All make room for her. The Baron tries to conceal his bald pate from Sophia with his hat, while Sophia goes towards her father.)

VIELE STIMMEN: (indes Sophie auf ihren Vater zugeht, dumpf):
Da ist die Braut.
Oh was für ein Skandal!

DUMPFE STIMMEN: Der Skandal!
Der Skandal!
Fürn Herrn von Faninal!

FANINAL: Da!
Aus dem Keller!
Aus der Luft!
Die ganze Wienerstadt!
(Auf den Baron zu, mit geballter Faust.)
Oh, Er Filou!
Mir wird nicht gut! Ein' Sessel!
(Bediente springen hinzu, fangen ihn auf. Zwei desgleichen haben vorher ihre Stange einem der Hinterstehenden zugeworfen. Sophie ist angstvoll um ihn bemüht. Wirt springt gleichfalls hinzu. Sie nehmen ihn auf und tragen ihn ins Nebenzimmer. Mehrere Kellner den Weg weisend, die Türe öffnend voran. Baron wird diesen Augenblick seiner Perücke ansichtig, die wie durch Zauberhand wieder zum Vorschein gekommen ist, stürzt darauf los, stülpt sie sich auf und gibt ihr vor dem Spiegel den richtigen Sitz. Mit dieser Veränderung gewinnt er seine Haltung so ziemlich wieder, begnügt sich aber, Annina und den Kindern, deren Rücken zu kehren. Hinte, Herrn von Faninal und seiner Begleigtung hat sich die Türe links geschlossen. Wirt und Kellner kommen bald darauf leise wieder heraus, holen Medikamente, Karaffen mit Wasser und anderes, das in die Tür getragen und von Sophie in der Türspalte übernommen wird.)

BARON: (nunmehr mit dem alten Selbstgefühl auf den Kommissarius zu): Sind desto ehr im Klaren.
Ich zahl', ich geh'!
(Zu Octavian.)
Ich führ' Sie jetzt nach Haus.

KOMMISSARIUS: Da irrt Er sich.
Mit Ihm jetzt weiter im Verhör!
(Auf den Wink des Kommissarius entfernen die beiden Wächter alle übrigen Personen aus dem Zimmer, nur Annina mit den Kindern bleibt an der linken Wand stehen.)

OCTAVIAN: Kerr Kommissar, i geb' was zu Protokoll, Aber der Herr Baron darf nicht zuhörn dabei.
(Auf den Wink des Kommissarius drängen die beiden Wächter den Baron nach vorne rechts. Octavian scheint dem Kommissarius

CHORUS: The bride!
Oh, what a sad disgrace!

MUFFLED VOICES FROM ALL SIDES: A disgrace!
A disgrace!
For him and all his race!

FANINAL: From the cellar!
From the air!
I dare not show my face—
(Going towards the Baron with clenched fist.)
The villain!
I am not well!
An armchair!
(His servants run forward and save him from falling. Two of them had already given their poles to the onlookers. Sophia hurries to his aid. They lift him up and carry him to the next room. Several waiters precede them, showing the way and opening the door. At this moment the Baron is aware of his wig, which has reappeared, as if by magic, darts towards it, clasps it on his pate and, going to a mirror, sets it straight. With this change he regains some of his lost self-confidence, but satisfies himself with turning his back on Annina and the Children, whose presence, after all, he regards with uneasiness.)
(The door to the left is closed behind Herr von Faninal and his following. The waiters and the Landlord after a time emerge quietly and go to fetch drugs, bottles with water and other things, which they carry as far as the door and hand to Sophia through the opening.)

BARON: (going towards the Commissary with self-confidence now fully restored): This clears our path but the sooner.
I pay, and go.
(To Octavian.)
And you I'll now take home.

COMMISSARY: Pray, not so fast.
A few more questions before you go—
(At a sign from the Commissary, the Constables remove from the room everybody except Annina and the Children, who remain standing by the wall to the left.)

OCTAVIAN: (speaking): I have something that I would say to the Officer
Gentleman, but the Baron must not listen.
(At a sign from the Commissary the two Constables shepherd the Baron to the front of the stage to etwas zu melden, was diesen sehr überrascht.)

BARON: (zu den Wächtern, familiär, halblaut, auf Annina hindeutend): Kenn' nicht das Weibsbild dort, auf Ehr'.
War grad' beim Essen!
Hab' keine Ahnung, was sie will.
Hätt' sonst nicht selber um die Polizei—
(Der Kommissarius begleitet Octavian bis an den Alkoven. Octavian verschwindet hinter dem Vorhang. Der Kommissarius scheint sich zu amüsieren und ist den Spalten des Vorhangs ungenierterweise nahe.) (bemerkt die Heiterkeit des Kommissarius, plötzlich sehr aufgeregt über den unerklärlichen Vorfall): Was g'schieht denn dort?
Is wohl nich möglich das?
Der Lackl!
Das heisst Ihr Sittenpolizei?
Ist eine Jungfer!
(Er ist schwer zu halten.)
Steht unter meiner Protektion!
Beschwer' mich!
Hab' da ein Wörtel drein zu reden!
(Reisst sich los, will gegen das Bett hin. Sie fangen und halten ihn wieder. Aus dem Alkoven erscheinen Stück für Stück die Kleider der Mariandel. Der Kommissarius macht ein Bündel daraus.)
(immer aufgeregt, ringt, seine beiden Wächter los zu werden): Muss jetzt partout zu ihr!
(Sie halten ihn mühsam, während Octavians Kopf aus einer Spalte des Vorhangs hervorsieht.)

WIRT: (hereinstürmend): Ihre hochfürstliche Gnaden, die Frau Fürstin Feldmarschallin!
(Kellner herein, reissen die Türe auf. Zuerst werden einige Menschen in der Marschallin Livree sichtbar, sie rangieren sich, Marschallin tritt ein, der kleine Neger trägt ihre Schleppe.)

BARON: (hat sich von den Wächtern losgerissen, wischt sich den Schweiss von der Stirne, eilt auf die Marschallin zu): Bin glücklich über Massen, hab' die Gnad' kaum meritiert, Schätz' Dero Gegenwart hier als ein Freundstück ohnegleichen.

OCTAVIAN: (streckt den Kopf zwischen dem Vorhang hervor): Marie Theres', wie kommt Sie her?
(Marschallin regungslos, antwortet nicht, sieht sich fragend um.) the right. Octavian says something to the Commissary which seems to surprise him very much. The Commissary accompanies him to the recess and he disappears behind the curtain.)

BARON: (familiarly to the Constables, pointing to Annina): I never did see that slut till now.
We were at supper—
I have no inkling what she seeks.
(The Commissary seems to be vastly entertained and unconcernedly approaches the open curtain.)
Else would I surely not have asked your aid.
(Suddenly much perturbed at the inexplicable proceeding.)
What is happening there?
Can I believe my eyes?
The scoundrel!
Look!
He too, who dared to threaten me!
It is an outrage, yes, an outrage!
(They have difficulty in holding him back.)
She's under my protection. I warn you,
You'll smart for this behavior.
(He makes himself free and goes towards the recess; they pursue him and seize him again. From the recess are thrown Mariandel's clothes, piece by piece. The Commissary makes a bundle of them. The Baron struggles with his captors. They hold him with difficulty, while Octavian puts his head out of the opening of the curtains.)

LANDLORD: (rushes in): The Princess, her Highness the Princess of Werdenberg.
(First some men in the Princess's livery appear, then the Baron's Body Servant. They form a line. Then the Princess enters, the Little Black Boy carrying her train. The Baron has shaken off his captors, mops his forehead and hurries towards the Princess.) BARON: Your Highness overwhelms me.

This is more than I deserve.
Your presence, here, your Highness, does betoken truest friendship.

OCTAVIAN: (his head appearing behind the curtain): Marie Theres'!
How have you come here?
(The Princess stands motionless and does not answer. She looks round with a questioning glance.)

KOMMISSARIUS: (auf die Fürstin zu, in dienstlicher Haltung): Fürstliche Gnaden, melde mich gehorsamst
Als vorstädtischer Unterkommissarius.

BARON: (gleichzeitig): Er sieht, Herr Kommissar, die Durchlaucht haben selber sich bemüht.
Ich denk', Er weiss, woran Er ist.
(Leiblakai auf den Baron zu, stolz und selbstzufrieden. Baron winkt ihn als Zeichen seiner Zufriedenheit.)

MARSCHALLIN: (zum Kommissar, ohne den Baron zu beachten): Er kennt mich?
Kenn' ich Ihn nicht auch?
Mir scheint beinah'.

KOMMISSARIUS: Sehr wohl.

MARSCHALLIN: Dem Herrn Feldmarschall seine brave Ordonanz gewest?

KOMMISSARIUS: Fürstliche Gnaden, zu Befehl!
(Octavian steckt abermals den Kopf zwischen den Vorhängen hervor.)

BARON: (winkt ihm heftig, zu verschwinden, ist zugleich ängstlich bemüht, dass die Marschallin nichts merkte. Halblaut): Bleib' Sie. zum Sakra, hinten dort!
(Dann hört er, wie sich Schritte der Tür links vorne nähern; stürzt hin, stellt sich mit dem Rücken gegen die Türe, durch verbindliche Gebärden gegen die Marschallin bestrebt, seinem Gehaben den Schein völliger Unbefangenheit zu geben.) (Marschallin kommt gegen links, mit zuwartender Miene den Baron anblickend).

OCTAVIAN: (in Männerkleidung tritt zwischen den Vorhängen hervor, sobald der Baron ihm den Rücken kehrt; halblaut): War anders abgemacht!
Marie Theres', ich wunder' mich!
(Marschallin als hörte sie ihn nicht, hat fortwährend den verbindlich erwartungsvollen Blick auf den Baron gerichtet, der in äusserst Verlegenheit zwischen der Tür und der Marschallin seine merksamkeit teilt. Die Tür links wird mit Kraft geöffung dass der Baron der vergebens versucht hatte, sich dagegen stemmen, wütend zurückzutreten genötigt ist. Zwei Faninal Diener lassen jetzt Sophie eintreten).

(The Body Servant, proud and pleased with himself, goes towards the Baron. The Baron gives him signs of his satisfaction.)

COMMISSARY: (going towards the Princess, at attention): May it please your Highness, my most humble duty.
The Commissary of this district.

BARON: Her Highness, as you see, has deigned to come in person to my aid.
And now perhaps you'll know the man I am.

PRINCESS: You know me?
Do I know you too?
I almost think—

COMMISSARY: Right well.

PRINCESS: Were you not long ago the Prince Field Marshal's orderly?

COMMISSARY: It is so, your highness, to command.
(Octavian again puts his head through the curtains.)

BARON: (makes a sign to Octavian to vanish, and is at the same time in great anxiety lest the Princess should observe him.) Plague on you, stay there!
Hide yourself.
(The Baron hears steps approaching the door on the left to the front, rushes there and places himself with his back to the door, trying by means of gestures in the direction of the Princess to appear quite at his ease. The Princess steps towards the left and looks at the Baron expectantly. Octavian comes from behind the curtain, in male clothes, as soon as the Baron has turned his back.)

OCTAVIAN: It was not this we hoped!
Marie Theres', I wonder much!
(The Princess, as though not hearing Octavian, fixes a courteous expectant look on the Baron, who in the utmost perplexity is dividing his attention between the Princess and the door. The door on the left is opened violently, so that the Baron, who has been leaning against it in a vain attempt to keep it closed, is pushed forward. Two of Faninal's servants now stand aside to let Sophia pass.)

SOPHIE: (ohne die Marschallin zu sehen, die ihr durch den Baron verdeckt ist): Hab' ihm von mei'm Herrn Vater zu vermelden!

BARON: (ihr ins Wort fallend, halblaut): Is jetzo nicht die Zeit, Kreuzelement!
Kann Sie nicht warten, bis dass man Ihr rufen wird?
Meint Sie, dass ich Sie hier im Beisl präsentieren werd'?

OCTAVIAN: (ist leise hervorgetretten, zur Marschallin, halblaut): Das ist die Fräulein—die—um derentwillen—

MARSCHALLIN: (über die Schulter zu Octavian halblaut): Find' Ihn ein bissl empressiert, Rofrano.
Kamm mir wohl denken, wer sie ist.
Find' sie scharmant.
(Octavian schlüpft zwischen die Vorhänge zurück.)

SOPHIE: (den Rücken gegen die Türe, so scharf, dass der Baron unwillkürlich einen Schritt zurückweicht): Er wird mich keinem Menschen auf der Welt nicht präsentieren, Dieweilen ich mit Ihm auch nicht so viel zu schaffen hab.
(Die Marschallin spricht leise mit dem Kommissar.)
Und mein Herr Vater lasst Ihm sagen: wenn Er alsoweit
Die Freichheit sollte treiben, dass man seine Nasen nur
Erblicken tät' auf hundert Schritt von unserm Stadtpalais,
So hätt' Er sich die bösen Folgen selber zuzuschreiben,
Das ist, was mein Herr Vater Ihm vermelden lässt.

BARON: (zornig): Corpo di bacco!
Was ist das für eine ungezogene Sprach'!

SOPHIE: Die Ihm gebührt.

BARON: (ausser sich, will an ihr vorbei, zur Tür hinein): He, Faninal, ich muss—

SOPHIE: Er untersteh' sich nicht!
(Die zwei Faninalschen Diener treten hervor, halten ihn auf, schieben ihn zurück. Sophie Tritt in die Tür, die sich hinter ihr schliesst.)

BARON: (gegen die Tür brüllend): Bin willes, alles Vorgefall'ne
Vergeben und vergessen sein zu lassen!

MARSCHALLIN: (ist von rückwärts an den Baron herangetreten und klopft ihm auf die Schulter): Lass' Er nur gut sein und verschwind' Er auf eins zwei!

SOPHIA: (without seeing the Princess, who is hidden from her by the Baron): I have to bring you a message from my father . . .

BARON: (interrupting her, in an undertone): It is most untimely now, can you not wait!
Can you not wait until the proper time has come?
Think you this pothouse here is fitting for an introduction?

OCTAVIAN: (who now comes quietly from the recess, aside to the Princess): That is the lady—who—to whom you sent me—

PRINCESS: (aside to Octavian, over her shoulder): Surely there's here a little haste, Rofrano.
It is easy guessing who she is.
Your taste is good.
(Octavian slips back behind the curtain.)

SOPHIA: (her back to the door, so angrily that the Baron instinctively starts back a step): You will not here, nor anywhere, to anyone present me, Know that from henceforth I have done with you once and for all.
(The Princess converses in a low voice with the Commissary.)
And this my father bids me tell you: should you ever
So far carry your presumption, as to dare to let your face
Be seen within a hundred yards of where our mansion is,
You'll have yourself alone to thank for all that may befall you.
That is the message that my father sends to you.

BARON: (very angrily): Corpo di Bacco!
What impertinence is this, what ill-bred language?

SOPHIA: It is your desert.

BARON: (beside himself, tries to pass her and reach the door): Ha, Faninal, I must—

SOPHIA: Stand back, Sir!
Do not dare!
(The two footmen of Faninal come forward, bar his passage and push him back. Sophia passes out. The door is closed behind her.)

BARON: (shouting against the door): I am content that all that's happened
Shall henceforth be forgiven and forgotten.
(The Princess approaches the Baron from behind and taps him on the shoulder.)

PRINCESS: Leave well alone, and before I count to three, withdraw!
(The Baron turns round and stares at her.)

BARON: (dreht sich um, starrt sie an): Wieso denn?

MARSCHALLIN: (munter, überlegen): Wahr' Er sein Dignité und fahr' Er ab!

BARON: (sprachlos): Ich?
Was?

MARSCHALLIN: Mach Er bonne mine a mauvais jeu:
So bleibt Er quasi doch noch eine Standsperson.
(Baron starrt sie stumm an).
(Sophie tritt leise wieder heraus. Ihre Augen suchen Octavian.)

MARSCHALLIN: (zum Kommissar, der hinten rechts steht, desgleichen seine Wächter): Er sieht, Herr Kommissar:
das Ganze war halt eine Farce und weiter nichts.

KOMMISSARIUS: Genügt mir!
Retirier' mich ganz gehorsamst.
(Tritt ab, die beiden Wächter hinter ihm.)

SOPHIE: (vor sich, erschrocken): Das Ganze war halt eine Farce und weiter nichts (Die Blicke der beiden Frauen begegnen sich; Sophie macht der Marschallin einen verlegnen Knicks.)

BARON: (zwischen Sophie und der Marschallin stehend): Bin gar nicht willens!

MARSCHALLIN: (ungeduldig, stampft auf): Mon Cousin, bedeut' Er Ihm!
(Kehrt dem Baron den Rücken.)

OCTAVIAN: (geht von rückwärts auf den Baron zu, sehr männlisch): Möcht Ihn sehr bitten!

BARON: (fährt herum): Wer?
Was?

MARSCHALLIN: (von rechts, wo sie nun steht): Sein' Gnaden, der Herr Graf Rofrano, wer denn sonst?

BARON: (nachdem er sich Octavians Gesicht scharf und in der Nähe betrachtet, mit Resignation): Is schon a so!
(Vor sich.)
Hab' g'nug von dem Gesicht,
Sind doch nicht meine Augen schuld.
Is schon ein Mandl.
(Octavian steht frech und hochmütig da.)

MARSCHALLIN: (einen Schritt näher tretend): Ist eine wienerische Maskerad' und weiter nichts.

SOPHIE: (halb traurig, halb höhnisch für sich): Ist eine wienerische Maskerad' und weiter nichts.

BARON: What mean you?

PRINCESS: (gaily, sure of victory): Think of your dignity and take your leave!

BARON: (speechless): I? How?

PRINCESS: If you would still preserve your name
As gentleman, make virtue of necessity
(The Baron stares at her in speechless amazement. Sophia comes quietly out of the other room. Her eyes seek Octavian.)

PRINCESS: (to the Commissary, who is standing at the back on the right with the two Constables):
And now, it is all quite clear;
It all has been just a diversion—nothing more.

COMMISSARY: Enough! I humbly beg leave to withdraw.
(Exit, followed by the two Constables.)

SOPHIA: (aside, afraid): The whole has been just a diversion—nothing more.
(The eyes of the two women meet; Sophia makes an embarrassed curtsey.)

BARON: (standing between Sophia and the Princess): Not so, your Highness!

PRINCESS: (impatiently, stamping her foot): Mon cousin, explain to him!
(Turns her back on the Baron.)

OCTAVIAN: (approaches the Baron from behind. Very mannish): Will you permit me?

BARON: (turns on him sharply): Who?
What?

PRINCESS: (on the right, where she now takes up her position): The Count Rofrano, my dear kinsman, who but he?

BARON: (resignedly, after careful scrutiny of Octavian's face): I thought as much!
(To himself.)
That face, I'm sick of it,
My eyes did not mislead me then.
For sure, 'twas he.
(Octavian stands there, arrogant and defiant.)

PRINCESS: (approaching a step nearer): A masquerade, as we in Vienna practise,—nothing more.

SOPHIA: (half sadly, half ironically to herself): A masquerade, as we in Vienna practise,—nothing more.

BARON: (sehr vor den Kopf geschlagen): Aha!
(Für sich.)
Spiel'n alle unter einem Leder gegen meiner!

MARSCHALLIN: (von oben herab): Ich hätt' Ihm nicht gewunschen,
Dass Er mein Mariandl in der Wirklichkeit mir hätte debauchiert!
(Baron wie oben, vor sich hin sinnierend).

MARSCHALLIN: (wie oben und ohne Octavian anzusehen): Hab' jetzt einen montierten Kopf gegen die Männer—so ganz im allgemeinen!

BARON: (allmählich der Situation beikommend): Kreuzelement!
Komm' aus dem Staunen nicht heraus!
Der Feldmarschall—Octavian—Mariandl—die Marschallin—Octavian.
(Mit einem ausgiebigen Blick, der von Marschallin zu Octavian, von Octavian wieder zurück zur Marschallin wandert.)
Weiss bereits nicht, was ich von diesem ganzen qui-pro-quo mir denken soll!

MARSCHALLIN: (mit einem langen Blick, dann mit grosser Sicherheit): Er ist, mein' ich, ein Kavalier?
Da wird Er sich halt gar nichts denken.
Das ist's, was ich von Ihm erwart'.
(Pause.)

BARON: (mit Verneigung und weltmännisch): Bin von so viel Finesse scharmiert, kann gar nicht sagen wie.
Ein Lerchenauer war noch nie kein Spielverderber nicht.
(Einen Schritt an sie herantretend.)
Find' deliziös das ganze qui-pro-quo, bedarf aber dafür nunmehro Ihrer Protektion.
Bin willens, alles Vorgefallene vergeben und vergessen sein zu lassen.
(Pause.)
Eh bien, darf ich den Faninal—
(Er macht Miene, an die Türe links zu gehen.)

MARSCHALLIN: Er darf—Er darf in aller Still' sich retirieren.
(Baron aus allen Himmeln gefallen).

MARSCHALLIN: Versteht Er nicht, wenn eine Sach' ein End' hat?
Die ganze Brautschaft und Affär' und alles sonst.
Was drum und dran hängt,
(sehr bestimmt)
Ist mit dieser Stund' vorbei.

SOPHIE: (sehr betreten, für sich): Was drum und dran hängt, ist mit dieser Stund vorbei!

BARON: (greatly amazed): Aha!
(To himself.)
I see now they are all conspiring to befool me!

PRINCESS: (haughtily): It is well for you it was not Really my Mariandel whom you villainous persuasions have misled!
(Baron as before deep in thought.)

PRINCESS: (as before and without looking at Octavian): I feel just now a bitter grudge, a deep resentment Against all men in general!

BARON: (gradually realizing the situation): God bless my soul!
I'm in a maze without a clue!
(With a comprehensive glance which wanders from the Princess to Octavian and from Octavian back to the Princess.)
In all this crazy comedy I'm at a loss to know
What I should think.

PRINCESS: (looking at him fixedly, then emphatically): It best befits a gentleman in such case to refrain from thinking.
That is what I expect of you.

BARON: (with a bow and the manner of a man of the world):
Sure, sentiments so exquisite with admiration fill me quite.
And none could ever say of any Lerchenau that he would spoil good sport.
(Approaching the Princess.)
I find this whole diversion vastly droll,
But in return I need your Highness's help and interest.
I am content to let these incidents
And all that's passed from henceforth be forgotten.
(Pause.)
Eh bien, may I tell Faninal—
(Approaching the door to the left.)

PRINCESS: You may—you may say nothing, and so leave us.
(The Baron is thunderstruck with surprise.)

PRINCESS: Do you not know when you can go no further?
Your great alliance and whatever it means both now
And in the future
(Emphatically.)
From this hour you must renounce.

SOPHIA: (in great astonishment, aside): His great alliance from this hour he must renounce.

BARON: (für sich, empört, halblaut): Mit dieser Stund' vorbei!
Mit dieser Stund' vorbei

MARSCHALLIN: (scheint sich nach einem Stuhl umzusehen, Octavian springt hin, gibt ihr einen Stuhl. Marschallin setzt sich rechts, mit Bedeutung für sich):
Ist halt vorbei.

SOPHIE: (links vor sich, blass): Ist halt vorbei!
(Baron findet sich durchaus nicht in diese wendung, rollt verleges und aufgebracht die Augen. In diesem Augenblick kommt der Mann aus der Falltür hervor. Von links tritt Valzacchi ein, die Verdächtigen in bescheidener Haltung hinter ihm. Annina nimm Witwenhaube und Schleier ab, wischt sich die Schminke weg und zeigt ihr gewöhnliches Gesicht. Dies alles zu immer gesteigertem Staunen des Barons. Der Wirt, eine lange Rechnung in der Hand, tritt zur Mitteltüre herein, hinter ihm Kellner, Musikanten Hausknechte, Kutshcer.)

BARON: (wie er sie alle erblickt, gibt er sein Spiel verloren. Ruft schnell entschlossen): Leupold, wir gehn!
(Macht der Marschallin ein tiefes, aber zorniges Kompliment. Keiblakai ergreift einen Leuchter vom Tisch und will seinem Herrn voran.)

ANNINA: (stellt sich frech dem Baron in den Weg): "Ich hab' halt schon einmal ein Lerchanauisch Glück."
(Auf die Rechnung des Wirtes deutend.)
"Komm' Sie nach Tisch, geb' Ihr die Antwort nachher schriftlich!"
(Die Kinder kommen dem Baron unter die Füsse. Er schlägt mit dem Hut unter sie.)

DIE KINDER: Papa! Papa! Papa!

KELLNER: (sich zuerst an den Baron drängend): Entschuld'gen Euer Gnaden!
Uns gehen die Kerzen an!

WIRT: (sich mit der Rechnung vordrängend): Entschuld'gen Euer Gnaden!

ANNINA: (vor dem Baron her nach rückwärts tanzend): "Ich hab' halt schon einmal ein Lerchenauisch Glück!"

VALZACCHI: (höhnisch): "Ich hab' halt schon einmal ein Lerchenauisch Glück!"

DIE MUSIKANTEN: (sich dem Baron in dem Weg stellend): Tafelmusik über zwei Stunden!
(Leiblakai bahnt sich den Weg gegen die Tür hin).
(Baron will hinter ihm durch).

BARON: (aside, indignantly, softly); From now I must renounce!
From now I must renounce!

PRINCESS: (seems to look for a chair. Octavian hurries forward and gives her one. The Princess takes a seat to the right and says significantly, aside): I must renounce!

SOPHIA: (on the left, pale): He must renounce.
(The Baron finds it difficult to realize the new developments and rolls his eyes in anger and perplexity. In this moment the man emerges from the trap-door. Valzacchi enters from the left, his suspicious accomplices following him. Annina takes off her widow's cap and veil, wipes off the paint and shows her natural face. The Baron watches this in growing astonishment. The Landlord carrying a long bill in his hand enters by the center door, followed by the Waiters, Musicians, Boots and Coachmen.)

BARON: (when he sees this knows that his game is lost, calls out quickly and decidedly): Leopold, we go!
(Makes a deep but angry bow to the Princess. His Body Servant takes a candle from the table and precedes his master.)

ANNINA: (insolently bars the Baron's passage): "For sure I have the luck of all the Lerchenaus."
(Pointing to the Landlord with his bill.)
"Come when I've dined, I'll give the answer then in writing."
(The Children run between the Baron's legs. He hits out at them with his hat.)

CHILDREN: Papa! Papa! Papa!

WAITERS: (pressing round the Baron): May it please you, your Lordship,
Item, the candlelight!

LANDLORD: (pressing forward with his bill): May it please you your Lordship.

ANNINA: (dancing backwards in front of the Baron): "I surely have the luck of all the Lerchenaus!"

VALZACCHI: (ironically): "I surely have the luck of all the Luchenaus!"

MUSICIANS: (coming in front of the Baron): Item, music two hours and over.
(The Body Servant forces a passage to the door. The Baron tries to follow him.)

DIE KUTSCHER: (auf den Baron eindringend): Für die Fuhr', für die Fuhr', Rösser g'schund'n ham ma gnua!

HAUSKNECHT: (den Baron grob anrempelnd): Sö fürs Aufsperrn, Sö, Herr Baron!

WIRT: (immer die Rechnung präsentierend): Entschuld'gen Euer Gnaden.

KELLNER: Zwei Schock Kerzen, uns gehen die Kerzen an.

BARON: (im Gedränge): Platz da, zurück da, Kreuzmillion.

DIE KINDER: Papa! Papa! Papa!
(Alle schreien wild durcheinander).
(Baron drängt sich mit Macht durch gegen die Ausgangstür, alle dicht um ihn in einem Knaüel).

HAUSKNECHT: Führa g'fahr'n, aussa g'ruckt, Sö. Herr Baron!
(Alle sind schon in der Tür, dem Lakai wird der Armleuchter entwunden).
(Baron stürzt ab).
(Alle stürmen ihm nach, der Lärm verhallt. Die zwei Faninalschen Diener sind indessen links abgetreten. Es bleiben allein zurück: Sophie, die Marschallin und Octavian).

SOPHIE: (links stehend, blass): Mein Gott, es war nicht mehr als eine Farce.
Mein Gott, mein Gott!
Wie Er bei ihr steht und ich bin die leere Luft für Ihn.

OCTAVIAN: (hinter dem Stuhl der Marschallin verlegen): War anders abgemacht, Marie Theres', ich wunder' mich.
(In höchster Verlegenheit.)
Befiehlt Sie, dass ich—soll ich nicht—die Jungfer—der Vater—

MARSCHALLIN: Geh' Er doch schnell und tu' Er, was sein Herz Ihm sagt.

SOPHIE: (verzweifelt): Die leere Luft.
O mein Gott, o mein Gott!

OCTAVIAN: Theres', ich weiss gar nicht—

MARSCHALLIN: Geh' Er und mach' Er seinen Hof.

OCTAVIAN: Ich schwör Ihr—

MARSCHALLIN: Lass Er's gut sein.

OCTAVIAN: Ich begreif' nicht, was Sie hat.

MARSCHALLIN: (lacht zornig): Er ist ein rechtes Mannsbild, geh' Er hin.

OCTAVIAN: Was Sie befiehlt.
(Geht hinüber.)
(Sofphie wortlos).
(Octavian bei ihr): Eh bien, hat Sie kein freundlich Wort für mich?
Nicht einen Blick, nicht einen lieben Gruss?

SOPHIE: (stockend); War mir von Euer Gnaden Freundschaft und Behilflichkeit
Wahrhaftig einer andern Freud' gewärtig.

OCTAVIAN: (lebhaft): Wie—freut Sie sich denn nicht?

SOPHIE: (unmutig): Hab' wirklich keinen Anlass nicht.

OCTAVIAN: Hat man Ihr nicht den Bräutigam vom Hals geschafft?

SOPHIE: Wär' all's recht schön, wenn's anders abgegangen wär'.
Schäm mich in Grund und Boden.
Versteh' sehr wohl,
Mit was für einen Blick Ihre fürstliche Gnaden mich betracht'.

OCTAVIAN: Ich schwör Ihr, meiner Seel' und Seligkeit.

SOPHIE: Lass Er mich gehn.

OCTAVIAN: Ich lass Sie nicht.
(Fasst ihre Hand.)

SOPHIE: Der Vater braucht mich drin.

OCTAVIAN: Ich brauch' Sie nötiger.

SOPHIE: Das sagt sich leicht.

OCTAVIAN: Ich hab' Sie übermässig lieb.

SOPHIE: Das ist nicht wahr,
Er hat mich nicht so lieb, als wie Er spricht.
Vergess' Er mich!

OCTAVIAN: Ist mir um Sie und nur um Sie.

SOPHIE: Vergess' Er mich!

OCTAVIAN: (heftig): Mag alles drunter oder drüber gehn!

SOPHIE: (leidenschaftlich): Vergess' Er mich!

OCTAVIAN: Hab' keinen andern Gedanken nicht.
Seh' alleweil Ihr lieb Gesicht.
(Fasst mit beiden Händen ihre Beiden.)

SOPHIE: (schwach abwehrend): Vergess' Er mich!

MARSCHALLIN: (ist indessen aufgestanden, bezwingt sich aber und setzt sich wieder, vor sich, getragen, gleichzeitig mit Octavian und Sophie): Heut oder morgen oder den übernächsten Tag.
Hab' ich mir's denn nicht vorgesagt?
Das alles kommt halt über jede Frau.
Hab' ich's den nicht gewusst?
Hab' ich nicht ein Gelübde tan,
Dass ich's mit einem gans gefassten Herzen
Ertragen werd'...

COACHMEN: (pressing round the Baron): Coach hire, coach hire!
Our poor horses whipped to death!

BOOTS: (insolently shouting at the Baron): For opening the doors, your Lordship!

LANDLORD: (still presenting his bill): May it please you, your Lordship.

WAITERS: Two score candles, item, the candlelight!

BARON: (in the middle of the crowd): Make room, make room, deuce take you all!

CHILDREN: Papa! Papa! Papa!
(The Baron struggles violently towards the door, all follow him in confusion.)

BOOTS: I am the boots, that opened the doors, may it please your Lordship!
(The whole crowd is in the doorway, someone wrests the candlestick from the Body Servant. The Baron rushes off. All tear after him. The noise grows fainter. Faninal's two Footmen have in the meanwhile gone through the door on the left. Sophia, Princess and Octavian are left alone.)

SOPHIA: (standing on left, pale): The whole affair has been a mere diversion
And nothing more—
How he leans over her, and I am but as empty air for him.

OCTAVIAN: (behind the Princess's chair, embarrassed): It was not thus we hoped, Marie Theres'—I stand amazed—
(In extreme perplexity.)
Perchance you wish it. . . .
Shall I not. . . .
The lady. . . .
Her father. . .

PRINCESS: Go quickly, go, and do all that your heart commands.

SOPHIA: (in despair): But empty air!
O help me, gracious Heaven!

OCTAVIAN: Theres', I have no words!

PRINCESS: Woo her and win her love—

OCTAVIAN: I wonder—

PRINCESS: It is no matter—

OCTAVIAN: On my honor, what you mean—

PRINCESS: (laughs angrily): How like the rest!
How manlike!
Go to her!

OCTAVIAN: As you command!
(Crosses to Sophia, who stands silent.)
Eh bien, have you no kindly word for me?
No smile, no look, no greeting, not one sign?

SOPHIA: I had hoped, truly, that your Lordship would quite otherwise
Befriend me, and would bring me help and comfort—

OCTAVIAN: What, are you then not glad?

SOPHIA: (angrily): And tell me, pray, what cause I have?

OCTAVIAN: Is it not cause enough that you are rid of him?

SOPHIA: Had it been done quite otherwise, it would have been well.
I am angered and shamed—I feel the smart
Of every glance of scorn and pity that her Highness casts at me.

OCTAVIAN: You wrong her, on my soul, by such a thought!

SOPHIA: Leave me in peace!

OCTAVIAN: That cannot be!
(Seizes her hand.)

SOPHIA: My father needs my help—

OCTAVIAN: My need is greater far—

SOPHIA: It is lightly said—

OCTAVIAN: I love you with a mighty love—

SOPHIA: No—it is not so
Your love is not as great as you declare—Forget me quite—

OCTAVIAN: You are my all—you are my all.

SOPHIA: Forget me quite—

OCTAVIAN: (vehemently): Beside you, the whole world is nothing worth!

SOPHIA: (passionately): Forget me quite—

OCTAVIAN: My thoughts are ever of you alone!
Nothing but you I see.
(Seizes both her hands in his.)

SOPHIA: (defending herself weakly): Forget me quite—

PRINCESS: "Now or tomorrow: if not tomorrow, very soon"—
Did I not say the words myself?
There is no woman can escape her fate!
Did I not know the truth?
Did I not swear by all the Saints
That I with chastened heart and tranquil spirit
Would bear the blow . . .
"Now or tomorrow: if not tomorrow, very soon"—
(Wipes her eyes and rises.)

Heut oder morgen oder den übernächsten Tag. (Sie wischt sich die Augen, steht auf.)
SOPHIE: (leise): Die Fürstin da! Sie ruft Ihn hin! So geh' Er doch. (Octavian ist ein paar Schritte gegen die Marschallin hingegangen, steht jetzt zwischen beiden, verlegen. Pause). (Sophie in der Tür, unschlüssig, ob sie gehen oder bleiben soll). (Octavian in der Mitte, dreht den Kopf von einer zur andern). (Marschallin sieht seine Verlegenheit; ein trauriges Lächeln huscht über ihr Gesicht).	SOPHIA: (softly): Her Highness! Look! She calls to you! Then go to her! (Octavian, after advancing a few steps towards the Princess, now stands undecided between the two.) (Sophia in the doorway, hesitating whether to go or to remain.) (Octavian, between them, turns his head from one to the other. The Princess notices his perplexity and a melancholy smile flits over her countenance.)
SOPHIE: (an der Tür): Ich muss hinein und fragen, wie's dem Vater geht.	SOPHIA: (by the door): I must go in and ask how my dear father does.
OCTAVIAN: Ich muss jetzt was reden, und mir verschlagt's die Red'.	OCTAVIAN: Much fain would I tell her, but thought and language fail.
MARSCHALLIN: Der Bub', wie er velegen da in der Mitten steht.	PRINCESS: The boy, look how he stands beside her there, perplexed and pale.
OCTAVIAN: (zu Sophie): Bleib' Sie um alles hier. (Zur Marschallin.) Wie, hat Sie was gesagt? (Marschallin geht, ohne Octavian zu beachten hinüber zu Sophie). (Octavian tritt einen Schritt zurück). (Marschallin steht vor Sophie, sieht sie prüfend, aber gütig an). (Sophie in Verlegenheit, knickst).	OCTAVIAN: (to Sophia): Stay here, by all you love. (To the Princess.) How? did you speak to me? (The Princess, paying no heed to Octavian, crosses to Sophia and looks at her, critically but kindly. Sophia, much embarrassed, makes a curtsey. Octavian retreats a step.)
MARSCHALLIN: So schnell hat Sie ihn gar so lieb?	PRINCESS: So quickly did you learn to love him?
SOPHIE: (sehr schnell): Ich weiss nicht, was Euer Gnaden meinen mit der Frag'.	SOPHIA: (very quickly): Indeed, Madam, your question I can hardly understand.
MARSCHALLIN: Ihr blass Gesicht gibt schon die rechte Antwort drauf.	PRINCESS: Your cheek so pale gives me the answer plain enough.
SOPHIE: (in grosser Schüchternheit und Verlegenheit, immer sehr schnell): War gar kein Wunder, wenn ich blass bin, Euer Gnaden. Hab' einen grossen Schreck erlebt mit dem Herrn Vater. Gar nicht zu reden von gerechtem Emportement gegen den skandalösen Herrn Baron. Bin Euer Gnaden recht in Ewigkeit verpflichtet, Dass mit Dero Hilf' und Aufsicht—	SOPHIA: (very timid and embarrassed. Still very quickly): It is small wonder too your Highness, if I am pale. But I was sorely frightened by my dear father's sickness. Did not that monster the Baron, too, give me just cause For great offense by all that he has said and done? And to your Highness I shall be most grateful always Because your timely intervention—
MARSCHALLIN: (abwehrend): Red' Sie nur nicht zu viel, Sie ist ja hübsch genug! Und gegen den Herrn Papa sein Uebel weiss ich etwa eine Medizin. Ich geh' jetzt da hinein zu ihm und lad' ihn ein. Mit mir und Ihr und dem Herrn Grafen da In meinem Wagen heimzufahren—meint Sie nicht— Das ihn das rekreieren wird und allbereits ein wenig munter machen?	PRINCESS: (deprecatorily): Waste not your words on me, your're pretty, that's enough! And for your worthy father's humours, a most sovereign cure I think I know. I'll go, say a word to him, and bid him come With me and you and Count Octavian, In my own coach, and bring him homeward— Will that not, Think you, soon to his wonted health restore him quite, And cheer his drooping spirits?
SOPHIE: Euer Gnaden sind die Güte selbst.	SOPHIA: Such graciousness puts me to shame.
MARSCHALLIN: Und für die Blässe weiss vielleicht mein Vetter da die Medizin	PRINCESS: And for your poor pale cheeks I think my cousin there will know the cure.
OCTAVIAN: (innig) Marie Theres', wie gut Sie ist. Marie Theres', ich weiss gar nicht.—	OCTAVIAN: (with deep feeling): Marie Theres', how good are you, Marie Theres', I do not know—
MARSCHALLIN: (mit einem undefinierbaren Ausdruck leise): Ich weiss auch nix. (Ganz tonlos.) Gar nix. (Winkt ihm zurückzubleiben.)	PRINCESS: (with an enigmatical expression, softly): And I know nothing. (Quite toneless.) Nothing— (She makes a sign to him to remain.)
OCTAVIAN: (unschlüssig, als wollte er ihr nach): Marie Theres'! (Marschallin bleibt in der Tür stehen. Octavian steht ihr zunächst, Sophie weiter rechts.)	OCTAVIAN: (uncertain, as if he wished to follow her): Marie Theres'! (The Princess remains standing in the door. Octavian stands next to her, Sophia further to the right.)
MARSCHALLIN: (vor sich, zugleich mit Octavian und Sophie): Hab' mir's gelobt, Ihn lieb zu haben in der richtigen Weis'. Dass ich selbst Sein Lieb' zu einer andern noch lieb hab! Hab' mir freilich nicht gedacht, dass es so bald mir auferlegt sollt' werden! (Seufzend.) Es sind die mehrenen Dinge auf der Welt, So dass sie ein's nicht glauben tät'. Wenn man sie möcht' erzählen hör'n. Alleinig wer's erlebt, der glaubt daran und weiss nicht wie— Da steht der Bub' und da steh' ich, und mit dem fremden Mädel dort Wird Er so glücklich sein, als wie halt Männer Das Glücklichsein verstehen. In Gottes Namen.	PRINCESS: (to herself): I made a vow to love him rightly as a good woman should, No, even to love the love he bore another I promised! But in truth I did not think That all so soon my vow would claim fulfilment. (sighing.) Full many a thing is ordained in this world, Which we should scarce believe could be, If we heard others tell of them . . . But soon he whom they wound believes in them, and knows not how— There stands the boy, and here stand I, and with his love, new found this day, He will have happiness, After the manner of men, who think they know it all. It is done—so be it.
OCTAVIAN: (zugleich mit der Marschallin und Sophie, erst vor sich, dann Aug' in Aug' mit Sophie): Es ist was kommen und ist was g'schehn, Ich möcht' Sie fragen: darf's denn sein? und grad' die Frag', Die spür ich, dass sie mir verboten ist. Ich möcht' Sie fragen: warum zittert was in mir?— Ist denn ein grosses Unrecht geschehn? Und grad' an Sie Darf ich die Frag' nicht tun—und dann seh' ich dich an, Sopie, und seh' nur dich und spür nur dich, Sophie, und weiss von nichts als nur: dich hab' ich lieb.	OCTAVIAN: (together with the Princess and Octavian, first aside, then gazing into Sophia's eyes): What has come over me, what has come to pass? I fain would ask her. Can it be? And just that question, I know I cannot ask of her. I fain would ask her: oh, why trembles all my soul?— Has bitter wrong, a sinful deed been done? And just of her I may not ask the question—and then on your dear face I gaze, and see but you, and know but you, Sophia, and I know only this: You, you I love!

SOPHIE: (zugleich mit der Marschallin und Octavian, erst vor sich, dann Aug' in Aug' mit Octavian): Mir ist wie in der Kirch'n, heilig ist mir und so bang.
Und doch ist mir unheilig auch! Ich weiss nicht, wie mir ist.
(Ausdrucksvoll.)
Ich möcht mich niederknien dort vor der Frau und möcht ihr was antun, denn ich spür', sie gibt mir ihn und nimmt mir was von ihm zugleich.
Weiss gar nicht, wie mir ist!
Möcht' all's verstehen und möcht' auch nichts verstehen
Möcht fragen und nicht fragen, wird mir heiss und kalt.
Und spür nur dich und weiss nur eins: dich hab' ich lieb!
(Marschallin geht leise links hinein, die beiden bemerken es gar nicht. Octavian ist dicht an Sophie herangetreten, einen Augenblick später liegt sie in seinen Armen.)

OCTAVIAN: (zugleich mit Sophie): Spür nur dich, spür nur dich allein und dass wir beieinander sein!
Geht all's sonst wie ein Traum dahin vor meinem Sinn!

SOPHIE: (zugleich mit Octavian): Ist ein Traum, kann nicht wirklich sein, dass wir zwei beieinander sein,
beieinand' für alle Zeit
und Ewigkeit!

OCTAVIAN: (ebenso): War ein Haus wo, da warst du drein, und die Leut' schicken mich hinein, mich gradaus in die Seligkeit!
die waren g'scheit!

SOPHIE: (ebenso): Kannst du lachen?
Mir ist zur Stell' bang wie an der himmlischen Schwell'!
Halt' mich, ein schwach Ding, wie ich bin, sink' dir dahin!
(Sie muss sich an ihn lehnen. In diesem Augenblick öffnen die Faninalschen Lakaien die Tür und treten herein, jeder mit einem Leuchter. Durch die Tür kommt Faninal, die Marschallin an der Hand führend. Die beiden jungen stehen einen Augenblick verwirrt, dann machen sie ein tiefes Kompliment, das Faninal und die Marschallin erwidern. Faninal tupft Sophie väterlich gutmütig auf die Wange.)

FANINAL: Sind halt aso, die jungen Leut'!

MARSCHALLIN: Ja, ja.
(Faninal reicht der Marschallin die Hand, führt sie zur Mitteltür, die zugleich durch die Livree der Marschallin, darunter der kleine Neger, geöffnet wurde. Draussen hell, herinnen halbdunkel, da die beiden Diener mit den Leuchtern der Marschallin voraustreten. Octavian und Sophie, allein im halbdunklen Zimmer, wiederholen leise.)

OCTAVIAN: (zugleich mit Sophie): Spür nur dich, spür nur dich allein und dass wir beieinander sein!
Geht all's sonst wie ein Traum dahin vor meinem Sinn!

SOPHIE: (zugleich mit Octavian): Ist ein Traum, kann nicht wirklich sein,
dass wir zwei beieinander sein,
beieinand' für alle Zeit
und Ewigkeit!

(Sie sinkt an ihn hin, er küsst sie schnell. Ihr fällt, ohne dass sie es merkt, ihr Taschentuch aus der Hand. Dann laufen sie schnell. Hand in Hand, hinaus, Die Bühne bleibt leer, dann geht nochmals die Mitteltür auf. Herein kommt der kleine Neger, mit einer Kerze in der Hand, sucht das Taschentuch, findet es, hebt es auf, trippelt hinaus.)

SOPHIA: (together with the Princess and Octavian first aside, then gazing into Octavian's eyes): As one at worship, thoughts most holy fill my soul,
And yet thoughts most unholy too posses me: I'm distraught.
(With much expression.)
At yonder lady's feet I fain would kneel, yet would I too
Fain harm her, for I feel that she gives him to me
And yet robs me of part of him.
So strangely I'm perplexed!
I would know all things, yet I fear to know the truth.
Now longing to ask, all now fearing, hot am I and cold.
And know but you and know but this one thing, that I love you!
(The Princess goes quickly into the room on the left; the two others do not notice her. Octavian has come quite near to Sophia. A moment later she is clasped in his arms.)

OCTAVIAN: (together with Sophia): You alone I know, only you
That you love me and I love you—
All besides like a vision seems
Of fleeting dreams.

SOPHIA: (together with Octavian): It is a dream of heaven: is it true,
That you love me and I love you?
Never in this world to part,
One soul, one heart!

OCTAVIAN: (louder): In a great house was your bower,
They sent me there in a happy hour
Straight to you and paradise,
Oh, they were wise.

SOPHIA: Dare you laugh so? I fear my fate,
As a soul that trembles at Heaven's own gate!
Clasp me closer, friendless and weak,
I seek your arms.
(She leans on him for support. At this moment Faninal's footmen open the door and enter, each carrying a candlestick. Faninal, leading the Princess by the hand, enters through the door. The two young people stand for a moment confused, then they make a deep bow, which Faninal and the Princess return. Faninal pats Sophia with paternal benevolence on the cheek.)

FANINAL: It is just their way,—youth will be young!
(Faninal gives his hand to the Princess, conducts her to the center door which the suite of the Princess, among them the little Black Boy, at that moment throw open.)

PRINCESS: Yes, yes.
(Bright light outside, within a half-light, as the two Footmen with the candlesticks precede the Princess.)

OCTAVIAN: (dreamily): You alone I know, only you,
That you love me and I love you!
All besides like a vision seems
Of fleeting dreams.

SOPHIA: (dreamily): It is a dream, of heaven: is it true,
That you love me and I love you?
Never in this world to part—
One soul, one heart.

OCTAVIAN AND SOPHIA: I know you alone!
(She sinks into his arms. He kisses her quickly. Without her noticing it, her handkerchief drops from her hand. Then they run off quickly, hand in hand. The stage remains empty. Then the center door is opened again. Through it comes the little Black Boy with a taper in his hand. Looks for the handkerchief—finds it—picks it up—trips out.)

The End
(THE CURTAIN FALLS QUICKLY.)

Eugenio Oneghin (1879)

Eugene Onegin

MUSIC BY PYOTR ILYICH TCHAIKOVSKY ■ LIBRETTO BY K. S. SHILOVSKY ■ BASED ON THE POEM BY ALEXANDRE PUSHKIN

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by K.S. Shilovsky and the composer himself (based on Pushkin's poem), was first performed by students at the Imperial College of Music in Moscow on March 29, 1879. It received its first official performance at the Bolshoi Theatre on April 23, 1881. The story takes place in Russia during the early nineteenth century. Madame Larina and her nurse, Filipevna, are conversing in her garden. They can hear Tatiana and Olga, her daughters, singing to celebrate the end of the harvest. Olga is happy and outgoing, in contrast to Tatiana, who is more shy and romantic. Lenski, Olga's fiancé, arrives with his friend, Eugene Oneghin, to visit. Oneghin is a well-brought-up young man but egotistical and dandy-ish, bored by everything. Tatiana falls head over heels for him. In her room later that night, she writes him a long love-letter, pleading that they should meet. Although he comes to see her, he is polite but unresponsive. He is unreliable and she should forget all about him. At a ball held at Madame Larina's house in honor of Tatiana's birthday, Monsieur Triquet, the dancing master, sings a song for her. Oneghin overhears some gossip regarding his dancing with Tatiana and decides to flirt with Olga, making Lenski jealous. They argue; Lenski challenges Oneghin to a duel to be fought the next morning at dawn. Hesitant at first because of their long-standing friendship, neither man makes a move. The seconds load the pistols and measure the distances; the duel takes place and Lenski dies as a result of Oneghin's first shot. Six years later at a ball held at the palace of Prince Gremin in St. Petersburg, Oneghin is among the guests; he has recently returned from long journeys to faraway places, which he took to try and forget his friend's death. He encounters Tatiana once again, now married to the Prince, and falls deeply in love with her. She receives him in her drawing room as he requests. He beseeches her with his love, but she remains loyal to her husband, sending Oneghin away forever.

■ ATTO PRIMO

SCENA I

(Giardino nella proprietà Larinto. A sinistra, casa con terrazza, a destra un albero e aiuole fiorite. In fondo alla scena una grata di legno, al di là della quale, fra gli alberi, si vede un villaggio. Comincia ad imbrunire. La signora Larina seduta sotto l'albero, intenta a confezionar confettura, presta l'orecchio al canto delle figlie, la balia le stavicino. Alla seconda strofa del duetta di Tatiana e Olga le due vecchie entrano in conversazione. Dalla casa si sente cantare. Le porte sulla terrazza sono aperte).

TATIANA: Udiste voi il dolce gorgheggiar del rossignol
Che canta amore a duolo al queto albor;
Nei campi ancor sopiti il mesto suon del semplice pastor.
L'udiste voi? l'udiste voi?
L'udiste voi la flebile canzon del semplice pastor?

OLGA: Udiste voi il gorgheggiar divin del rossignol che canta duolo!
Nei queti campi ancor sopiti il mesto suon del semplice pastor?

■ ACT I

SCENE I

(Garden on the estate of Larino. To the left, house with terrace; to the right a tree and path of flowers. In the rear of the stage a wooden gate, through which a village is seen. It is dusk. The signora Larina, seated under the tree, busy making candy, is listening to the song of the little girls, the nurse standing nearby. At the second stanza of the duet between Tatiana and Olga the two old women begin a conversation. From the house singing is heard. The doors on the terrace are open).

TATIANA: Do you hear the sweet trilling
Of the nightingale,
Singing of love and grief
In the quiet light;
In the still silent fields
The sad sound of the simple shepherd,
Do you hear it? Do you hear it?
Do you hear the sad song
Of the simple shepherd?

OLGA: Do you hear the divine trill
Of the nightingale's sad song;
In the still quiet fields,
Do you hear the sad sounds
Of the simple shepherd?

LARINA E FILIPIEVNA: Dal ciel la quete a noi si dà in luogo di felicità.
Ah, sì, davver.
(Dietro la scena si ode un coro di contadini che vengono appressandosi).

SCENA II

CORO: Il veloce piè più non vuole andar!
La man soffre ahimè, del gran lavorar!
Ahimè il mesto mio cor si strugge
Il mio cor per il gran penar!

UNO DEL CORO: Che mai deggio far l'amor mio per obliar!

CORO: Il buon giorno, signora, a te
Di gran cuore auguriamo noi!
Noi ti rechiam come l'uso vuol,
Le spighe ornate di nastri e fior!
L'opera nostra finì.

LARINA: Grata vi sono! Or gioite, contenta io son.
Cantate una canzon che lieta sia!

CORO: Felici noi sarem
Noi liete canterem, Il cerchio orsù formate,
Fanciulle vi fermate!

LARINA and FILIPIEVNA: Heaven sends us quiet
In place of happiness.
Ah, yes, truely
(Behind the scene is heard a chorus of peasants approaching).

SCENE II

CHORUS: The swift foot no longer
Wants to move;
Alas! the hand suffers, overworked;
Alas! my sad heart is wasted
In endless suffering!

ONE OF CHORUS: May I never have to make love to forget!

CHORUS: Good day, signora, to you,
We wish you good day
With all our heart.
We greet you, as custom decrees,
With ears adorned with ribbons
And with flowers our work.

LARINA: I thank you! Now rejoice,
I am content!
Sing a song, a happy song.

CHORUS: We will be happy
We will sing gaily.
Come, form a ring,
Maidens, join hands.

UNO DEL CORO: Sia lieta la canzon,
Il cerchio sù formate,
Via venite!
(Durante il coro le contadine ballano intorno al covone.)

CORO: Sopra il ponte ponticello,
Pass'ardito un garzoncello, Vainu, vainu, vainu,
Passa e canta la mattina
Non c'è rosa senza spina,
Canta, tace, si riposa.
Chi mai sia tu l'indovina
Quel che canta la mattina.
(Durante il canto Tatiana e Olga escono sulla terrazza.)
Sparve il sol, tu dormi omai,
Qui mandar dame potrai
Daria, Nina, Caterina, O la bionda bella Irina,
Vainu, vainu, vainu.
Venne Nina la gioconda
Delle belle la seconda.
Disse, tu sei garzoncello
Che traversi il ponticello
E che canti ogni mattina.
Non c'è rosa senza spina.

SCENA III

(Durante il coro precedente Tatiana e Olga sono uscite sulla terrazza).

TATIANA: (con un libro in mano) Ei m'è pur grato al suon di quelle voci
Lasciar libero corso ai miei pensier che vagan,
Che vagan là, lontan.

OLGA: Ah, Tania, Tania! sei lì sempre a sognar.
Davver pari non siam no!
Quel cantar mi rende lieto il core.
(Ballando.)
Sopra il ponte ponticello
Pass'ardito un garzoncello!
(Filipievna e Tatiana s'allontanano dagli altri.)

SCENA IV

LARINA: Al par d'un augellino sei viva e lieta mia buona fanciulla.
(Al Coro.)
Dei vostri dolci canti io vi son grata!
(Tatiana siede sulla scala della terrazza e s'immerge nella lettura d'un libro. Filipievna esce coi contadini.)
Ed ora andatene, Filipievna,
Io vo' che a lor si dia del vin.
Addio, miei cari.

CORO: Vi benedica il ciel!
(I contadini escono.)

OLGA: Mammina, non vi par che soffre Tania?

ONE OF CHORUS: Let the song be gay!
Come, form a ring.
Come away!
(During the chorus the peasants dance around the sheaf).

CHORUS: Under the pontifical bridge
Passes boldly a little boy,
Vainu, vainu, vainu,
Passes, and sings the morning song,
There is no rose without thorns
Sings, is silent, and rests.
You be the prophet, and say
Who is he that sings the morning song.
(During the song Tatiana and Olga go out on the terrace).
The sun has disappeared,
You are sleeping now,
You will be able to send ladies here,
Daria, Nina, Caterina,
Or the beautiful blond Irene,
Vainu, Vainu, Vainu.
There came Nina the joyous one,
The second of the beautiful ones.
Who said, you are a little boy,
Who crosses the pontifical bridge,
And who sings every morning:
There is no rose without thorns.

SCENE III

(During the preceding chorus Tatiana and Olga have gone out on the terrace).

TATIANA: (with a book in her hand) More than ever grateful am I
For the sound of those voices,
Leaving my wandering thoughts
Free to roam,
Far, far from here.

OLGA: Ah, Tania, Tania!
Art always dreaming.
Indeed, we two are not alike.
Yon singing makes my heart happy.
(Dancing).
"Under the pontifical bridge
Passes boldly a little boy".
(Filipievna and Tatiana move away from the others).

SCENE IV

LARINA: Little child of mine, you are lively and happy
like a little bird.
(to the chorus).
I am grateful to you for your sweet songs.
(Tatiana sits on the steps of the terrace and loses herself in the reading of a book. Filipievna goes out with the peasants).
And now leave us, Filipievna,
And then let us have some wine.
Addio, my beloved ones.

CHORUS: Heaven bless you! (The peasants go out).

OLGA: Mother dear, does it not seem to you
That Tatiana is suffering?

LARINA: E che? Davver, davver sei tutta smorta.

TATIANA: Sempre tale io sono.
Non v'allarmate, mamma.
Leggo un'avventura che mi commuove.

LARINA: E triste sei sol per ciò?
(Ride.)

TATIANA: Ma certo, mamma.
Narra la novella le pene
Acerbe di due cuori
Che l'amor tormenta.
Dio! triste è il loro fato.

LARINA: Eh via! Tania. Rammento pur anch'io
I miei sospir per gl'infelici eroi;
Son tutte larve, sì. Pasaro i dì,
Ed ora certa son che sogno son gli eroi.
Or queta io son.

OLGA: Invan cotanta quete, mirate,
Il grembiale non toglieste.
(Larina sì toglie in fretta is grembiale).
Or or qui verrà Lenski, che dirà?
(Ride).
Oh! Odi alcun s'appressa . . .
Certo è lui.

LARINA: Si, si, Davvero!

TATIANA: (Guardando dalla terrazza). Ei non è sol . . .

LARINA: Che mai sarà?
(Entrano frettolosi la balia ed il servo).

FILIPIEVNA: Padrona mia, il nobil Lenski giunse
Con un signor, Oneghin!
(Tatiana vuol andarsene, ma Larina la trattiene).

TATIANA: Ah! sù presto io men vo'.

LARINA: Ei Tania, Tania, ciò non conviene.
Dio, che orror!
La cuffia a sghembo mi stà.
(Il servo esce correndo. Tutti, in grande emozione, aspettano le visite.)

SCENA V

(Entrano Oneghin e Lenski.)

LENSKI: Mesdames! La vostra cortesia
Mi rese ardito.
Io raccomando a voi
Oneghin, mio vicin.

ONEGHIN: E' un grand'onore.

LARINA: (confusa). Ma che signor . . .
Per noi l'onor.
Sedete. Le figlie mie, signor!

ONEGHIN: Ben fortunato inver.

LARINA: How? indeed, indeed, you're deathly pale

TATIANA: I am always like this.
Do not alarm yourself
I am reading a tale
That moves me greatly.

LARINA: Are you sad only because of this?
(smiles).

TATIANA: Indeed, Mamma.
The story relates
The bitter sufferings
Of two hearts
Tortured by love.
God, what a fate was theirs.

LARINA: Come, come, I too remember
How I did sigh
For the unhappy heroes;
Phantoms all. Those days are over;
And now I know that heroes
Are but dreams.
And now peace fills my mind.

OLGA: In vain to complain. Look you
Have not removed your apron.
(Larina hastily removes her apron.)
What will Lenski say, to see you like this?
(Laughs).
Ah! I hear some one approaching.
Certainly it is he.

LARINA: Yes, yes indeed!

TATIANA: (Looking down from the terrace). And he is not alone . . .

LARINA: And who might it be?
(Enter hastily the nurse and the servant).

FILIPIEVNA: Mistress, the noble Lenski has arrived
With one Signor Oneghin!
(Tatiana wishes to withdraw, but Larina restrains her)

TATIANA: Ah! quick, I faint!

LARINA: Ah! Tania, Tania!
This does not become you!
God, how dreadful!
My bonnet is awry!
(The servant runs out. All, in great commotion, await the visitors).

SCENE V

(Enter Oneghin and Lenski).

LENSKI: Mesdames. Your courtesy
Has emboldened me.
Permit me to present
My neighbor, Oneghin.

ONEGHIN: This a great honor. .

LARINA: (confused). Ah, no, signor . . .
The honor is ours.
Be seated. My daughter, signor.

ONEGHIN: How fortunate!

LARINA: Accomodatevi; o forse v'è più caro
Goder del bel sereno cielo?
Sta bene! Di cure ha d'uopo ancor la casa; io vi corro.
Voi gli ospiti onorate . . . Tornerò . . .
(Esce facendo segno a Tatiana d'essere amabile. — Lenski e Oneghin passano a destra. Tatiana e Olga restano dalla parte opposta).

TATIANA: Non fu il mio sogno una chimera!
E' desso, il cor non m'ingannò!
Il guardo suo mi dice 'spera''
Scordarlo, ahimè, no non saprò.
Sarà la vita mia beata
Da quell'immagine desiata,
Sarà signore del mio cor
In cui s'accese ardente amor!
Sarà signore del mio cor
Che accese un potente amor.

OLGA: Era già noto a me ch'il giovin sere Oneghin
Parria strano signor d'assai strane maniere,
Ma di geniale e lieto umor.
Assai diversa è l'opinione.
Ognun adduce a sua ragione,
Nessun poi sa la verità
A Tania per fidanzato si darà!

LENSKI: E' lei che triste se ne sta
E silenziosa qual Svetlana.
E chè?
Amico mio, l'alpe il ruscello,
La prosa il verso, fiamma e gelo
Non son dissimili fra lor.
Per quanto vari i nostri cor.

ONEGHIN: Or dimmi tu, qual'è Tatiana?
Favella orsù, lo vuò saper.
E tu l'altra fanciulla adori?
Io l'altra avrei prescelta
Se delle muse foss'io cultor.
La vita in lei non ha tepor
Siccome classica Madonna.
Purpurea tonda, per mia fè
Come l'idiota luna ell'è che splende
Su nel firmamento!
Son vari i nostri cori.
(Lenski s'avvicina ad Olga. Oneghin senza cerimonie considera Tatiana che sta cogi occhi bassi, poi s'avvicina a lei e le parla).

SCENA VI

LENSKI: (con vivacità). Felice, felice io son,
Io vi rivedo ancora!

OLGA: Eppur voi foste ieri qui, mi par!

LARINA: Make yourselves comfortable. Or perhaps you'd rather Enjoy the serenity of our lovely sky?
As you please! I am needed within the house.
I will go. You entertain our guests.
I shall return.
(Exit, making a sign to Tatiana to be amiable. Lenski and Oneghin pass to the right, Tatiana and Olga remain opposite).

TATIANA: My dream was not a chimera!
It is he himself. My heart does not decieve me.
His glance says to me "Hope!"
Alas to forget him were impossible!
Blessed were my life,
To be desired of yon figure
She in whom ardent love will waken
Will be the mistress of my heart;
He that will kindle overpowering love,
Will be the master of my heart.

OLGA: I have already noticed that young Oneghin
Is an unusual man, of uncommon manner,
Withal of genial and lively humor.
Different are our opinions,
Each with its own reasons,
But none knows the truth.
He'll pretend to be betrothed to Tania.

LENSKI: And she, why so sad
Why so silent, yon Svetlana.
And why?
My friend, Alps from the brooklet,
Pros from verse, flame from ice,
Do not so much from each other differ.
As do our hearts from one another.

ONEGHIN: Now tell me which is Tatiana?
Come speak, I yearn to know.
Do you adore the other girl?
I would have chosen the other one,
Were I a patron of the arts.
Her being does not possess the luke warmness
Of the classical Madonna.
Deep purple, by my soul,
Shining like the stupid moon,
Over the firmament.
Indeed our hearts are different.
(Lenski approaches Olga. Oneghin rudely stares at Tatiana, who stands with downcast eyes; then he comes closer and speaks to her).

SCENE VI

LENSKI: (with animation). Happy, I am happy.
That I see you again!

OLGA: I thought you were here yesterday.

LENSKI: Ahimè! un di passava,
Triste di da voi lontano,
E fu eterno!

OLGA: Eterno! E' strano affè! strano davver,
Eterno un sol dì!

LENSKI: Vi sembra strano, si,
Miei detti l'ispira amor!
(Lenski ed Olga escono.)

ONEGHIN: (A Tatiana con freddezza). Or dite a me,
Io penso che la noja a voi
Compagna esser de' qui!
Ridente é il loco, ma lontano.

TATIANA: Talvolta sogno errando pel giardino.

ONEGHIN: Quai sono i vostri sogni allor?

TATIANA: Sognar fu mia più dolce cura Fin dalla prima gioventù.

ONEGHIN: Vagar v'è grato per le nubi d'oro
Ed io, confesso, fui pur tal.
(Oneghin passa dall'altra parte del giardino, Lenski ed Olga ritornano.)

LENSKI: (Con calore e passione).
T'amo tanto Olga, tanto io t'amo
Che si strugge sola l'alma
D'un poeta di sì possente e puro amor.
Nei sogni sempre una visione
Nei cor impera una passione
Che non dà pace e notte e dì.
Fin dall'estrema giovinezza
Rapisti a me l'ingenuo cor
Ed invidiai pur la carezza
Che al labbro tuo faceano i fior!
L'oscuro ciel, la dolce aurora
Contemplavam fanciulli ancora, ah!
(Con grande espressione).
Io t'adoro, io t'adoro quanto l'alma
D'un poeta amor puote;
Sola imperi sul mio core,
Da te sola, o mia diletta,
gioie e duol la vita aspetta,
O mio dolce amor,
Il pensier mio sarà fedel
Compagno al tuo pensier,
Nei di felici e nei tristi,
Teco pur sarà quest'alma
Che consuma un santo amor divin!

OLGA: Quei dolci dì te ne sovvien,
Di nostra prima e cara età!

LENSKI: O mio dolce amor!

OLGA: Noi celavam gelosi in sen la speme
E la felicità nei nostri cor!

LENSKI: Alas! One day passed,
And I have been saddened by you absence.
It has been an eternity.

OLGA: Eternal faith! strange indeed,
One day of eternity!

LENSKI: Does it seems strange to you? yes,
Do my words not inspire love!
(Exit Lenski and Olga)

ONEGHIN: (To Tatiana, coldly).
Now tell me,
Methinks that you
Are lonesome here;
There are livelier places but they are far away.

TATIANA: At times
I wander dreaming in the garden.

ONEGHIN: What do you dream then?

TATIANA: Dreaming has always been My most soothing cure
Since my childhood days.

ONEGHIN: To roam through the golden clouds is pleasant
And, I confess,
That I have felt the same:
(Oneghin crosses to the other side of the garden. Lenski and Olga appear).

LENSKI: (with warmth and passion).
I love you so much Olga, so much
That only a poet's soul.
Could feel such pure love as mine.
In my dreams I see your vision.
In my heart a strong passion rules
That I do not rest day, or night.
Since my youth,
You have wrested away my heart.
I have envied the caresses
Of the flowers upon your lips!
The obscure sky,
And the sweet aurora
Yet contemplated our childhood, ah!
(With great expression).
I adore you, I adore you as only
A poet's soul can love;
You rule supreme in my heart,
From you alone, Oh my beloved,
Joy and sorrow my life awaits,
Oh, my sweet love, my thoughts will
Be loyal to your thoughts,
In happy and gloomy days
With you rests my soul
That consumes a divine love!

OLGA: You have not forgotten
The sweet memories
Of your childhood days!

LENSKI: Oh, my dear love!

OLGA: We were jealously concealing
Our hopes in each other's bosom,
And the happiness of out heart!

LENSKI: O mio dolce amor!
(Escono sulla terrazza Larina e Filipievna. Comincia a far notte; alla fine notte completa).

SCENA VII

(La scena rappresenta la camera di Tatiana, mobiliata con semplicità e decoro. Sedie bianche di vecchia forma, tese di cotonina. Tenede simili alle finestre. Un letto con mensola per libri. Una comode coperta di tovaglia; sulla comode uno specchio e vasi da fiori. Presso la finestra, una scrivania—Sipario—Tatiana, pensierosa, siede allo specchio. Filipievna le sta vicino. Tatiana è in vesta da camera bianca).

FILIPIEVNA: Via, non vò più ciarlar!
E' tempo, Tania, dei tu destarti
All'alba per la messa,
Or dei dormir!

TATIANA: Dormir non posso, non respiro,
Aprir convien; poi siedi qui!
(Aperta la finestra la balia siede presso Tatiana.)

FILIPIEVNA: Di! Tania di! che hai?

TATIANA: M'annojo; mi narra dell'antichità!

FILIPIEVNA: Ma non m'ascolti tu, perchè?

TATIANA: (Abbraccia la balia con passione.) Ah, balia, balia, soffro tanto,
Io mi struggo, io soffro,
Si, diletta mia, si pianger,
Singhiozzar vorrei!

FILIPIEVNA: Fanciulla mia, malata sei!
Signor ci salva per pietà!
La fronte segnerò coll'acqua santa,
Ardente sei.

TATIANA: (indecisa). Non è dolor.
M'ascolta, balia, no! soffre il cor . . .
Mi lascia or tu, mi lascia or tu,
Mi strugge amor!

FILIPIEVNA: Che dici?

TATIANA: Va via, mi lascia sola qui.
Ma pria, diletta, porgi un foglio.
Io scriverò; formir non voglio.
Addio!

FILIPIEVNA: Ti benedica il cielo!
(Esce).

SCENA VIII

(Tatiana resta a lungo pensierosa, poi s'alza agitatissima, ma decisa.)

LENSKI: Oh, my dear heart!
(Exit on the terrace Larina and Filipievna. It is late in the evening, near midnight).

SCENE VII

(The scene represents the room of Tatiana, furnished with simplicity and dignity. Chairs are white, of old style, upholstered in calico, similar curtains for the windows. A bed with a bracket for books. A dresser covered with a cloth scarf, and on it a mirror and flower vases. Near the window a desk.—Curtain.—Tatiana sitting thoughfully by the mirror with Filipievna near by. Tatiana wears a white boudoir negligee).

FILIPIEVNA: Come, let us not talk!
Or you, Tania, will not awake at daybreak for mass,
Let us sleep now!

TATIANA: I cannot sleep, I cannot breathe,
It is better to open the window;
Come sit by me!
(The nurse opens the window, and sits besides Tatiana).

FILIPIEVNA: Tell me! Tell me Tania!
What is the matter?

TATIANA: I am weary; I am bored by every thing!

FILIPIEVNA: But you do not listen to me, why?

TATIANA: (Embraces the nurse affectionately).
Ah! nurse, I suffer much,
I worry, I suffer,
Yes, my dear, I would like to cry, and sob!

FILIPIEVNA: My girl, you are sick!
God have pity on us!
I will mark your forehand with holy water.
For you are feverish.

TATIANA: (in doubt). It is not pain,
Listen, nurse, no.
It is my heart that suffers . . .
Leave me alone,
I want to be alone,
Love consumes me!

FILIPIEVNA: What do you say?

TATIANA: Leave me, I wish to be alone,
But, before you go dear,
Hand me that sheet,
I will write; I cannot sleep.
Farewell!

FILIPIEVNA: God bless you, dear!
(Exit).

SCENE VIII

(Tatiana remains in a thoughtful mood, she bestirs herself, much agitated, but resolved).

TATIANA: (con vivacità, forza e passione). Sia poi quel che sarà, Ma prima abbandonata alla speranza
Ignoto gaudio invocherò,
Delizia arcana in core avrò.
M'inebbria il tossico desiato,
Un grato sogno arride a me!
Rapit'io son, l'acuto stral
Del guardo suo dolce e fatal,
Si fe' signore del mio core!
(Siede alla 'scrivania. Scrive un poco, poi si ferma).
No, non è ciò! Orsù da capo!
(Straccia la lettera).
Dio, non so più! Ah, quale ardor!
Che dire . . . io non so!
Perchè, perchè moveste il passo voi
A questo nostro asil beato!
Io non sapea che fosse io duol;
Qui pura l'alma avea sognato
Il dolce nido desiato
E forse un dì, signor, chi sa?
Avria trovato un cor amante.
Del focolar le gioie sante
Io conosciuto avrei allor!
(Balzando in piedi.)
A un altro!
No! no! su questa terra
Ad altri non darei il mio cor!
Ciò che il d'estino ha stabilito
Si dee compire, io son tua!
Dal dì che nel pensier di Dio
Fui creata vissi sol per te;
Lo sento, Dio ti fece mio
Per la vita, per l'eternità!
(S'avvicina alla tavola e 'scrive; cessa di scrivere e resta pensierosa).
Chi sa? La speme sconsigliata,
Chimera vana sogno fu!
Tutt'altra sorte m'è serbata!
(S'alza e cammina pensierosa).
Sia pur così!
Il mio destin in tuo potere
Omai confidando.
Il pianto mio ti muova alfin,
M'affido a te ben mio m'affido,
Si m'affido!
(Con forza e passione).
Mistero a tutti è il io soffrir,
Il mio pensier da me s'invola!
(Animandosi sempre più).
Son qui straziata, sola
E sola alfin dovrò perir!
Deh! vieni a me
Tu mi consola.
Di speme un raggio arreca a me,
Oppur distruggi il sogno,
Ahimè, ansiosa attendo omai,
Attendo omai la tua parola!
(S'avvicina con impeto alla scrivania e finisce di scrivere la lettera—Alzandosi e sigillando la lettera).
E' fatto! Ciel! Che scrissi mai!
Timor, vergogna ho nel core,
Omai l'indugio saria van;
Confido sol nell'onor suo!

TATIANA: (With liveliness and strong passion). Whatever shall come to be,
I have given all my hopes, to you,
I shall invoke the unknown joy,
With its mysterious delight
Which breeds a poison in my heart.
Like a beautiful dream
Which smile down upon me!
I behold you with the sweet,
And yet fatal look,
Which has wrested my heart away like a pointed arrow.
(Sits at the desk. Writes a little, then stops).
No, No, it is not so!
Cheer up! begin over again!
(Tears the letter).
God, I do not know!
Ah, such ardor!
What can I say . . .
I do not know!
Why, why did I start all this
In our blessed refuge,
I did not know our souls
Would come to grief
Over the happy days
We had longed for.
Perhaps! a day will come, sir,
Who knows?
When I shall have found a heart to love,
And then I would know
How to speak of our joys by the hearth!
(Then leaping to her feet).
To someone else!
No, no, I'll not on this earth
give my love to another.
Whatever part fate may decree,
I am yours!
Since the day that in the thought
Of God I came to life,
I've lived only for you!
I feel that God has made you mine
For life, and for eternity!
(She sits at the table and writes, stops writing and remains thoughtful).
Who knows? That hope
Has been like a chimera
As empty as a dream!
Perhaps some other fate awaits me!
(Arises and walks about in a thoughful mood).
So be it!
My fate is within your power,
And everything depends on you.
My cry will move you to an end,
I trust myself to you, my dear,
Yes, I trust in you.
(Passionately).
My suffering has been
A mystery to everyone,
It has been my thoughts
That have carried me off secretly.
(With strong emotion).
Here I am tortured, alone!
And alone to the end, I shall die!
Oh! come to me.
You will comfort me.
You will be like a ray of hope to me,
Or you will destroy my dream.
Alas! I am anxiously waiting,
Awaiting anxiously your word!

SCENA IX

(Tatiana s'avvicina alla finestra e tira la tenda. La luce irrompe nella camera).

TATIANA: Ah! Ecco il giorno, sereno il ciel,
Il sole spunta già!
(Siede presso la finestra).
Il pastor suona la sua canzon . . .
(Pensierosa).
Ed io! . . . Io . . .
(Entra la balia, aprendo la porta con precauzione).

FILIPIEVNA: (Non vedendo ancora Tatiana). Tatiana, è tempo omai. Suvvia!
(Vede Tatiana).
Che vedo, già tu sei levata?!
O dolce labor degli occhi miei.
Ieri per te quant'io temei! . . .
Sien grazie al cielo,
Tu non sei malata.
Sveniro i sogni ed i terror,
(Tatiana s'allontana dalla finestra e prende la lettera).
Il dolce viso sembra un fiòr!

TATIANA: Ah! balia, d'un servizio ho d'uopo.

FILIPIEVNA: Il ciel m'è testimonio . . .

TATIANA: Il tuo garzon rechi in segreto
Cotesta lettera ad . . . a quel . . .
Quel signor, ma sappia il bambin
Che non de' profferir parola eppoi
Che favellar di me non de'! . . .

FILIPIEVNA: A chi? diletta dimmi orsù?
L'età m'ha ottusa la ragione.
Non era tale in altra età.
Un detto, un detto sol bastava . . .

TATIANA: Ah! balia, balia cess'alfine,
Di vecchie storie parli invan.
Non odi? Della lettera parliam!

FILIPIEVNA: Ho inteso, inteso, basta, mia diletta,
Non t'adirar! La mente mia non sa pensar.

TATIANA: Di vecchie storie, balia, parli invan.
Dovrà ricevere codesto foglio, balia!

(With a sudden impulse she seats herself at the desk, and ends her letter. Arises and closes the letter).
It is done! Oh God,
What have I written!
Fear and shame possess my heart,
It is too late, I've done it,
I trust only in his honor.

SCENE IX

(Tatiana goes to the window and draws the curtains. The light streams into the room).

TATIANA: Ah! it is daylight, with a clear sky.
The sun is coming out!
(Sits by the window).
The shepherd sings his song . . .
(Pensively).
And I! . . . I . . .
(The nurse enter, opening the door softly).

FILIPIEVNA: (Who has not yet seen Tatiana). Tatiana, it is time.
Come! Come!
(Sees Tatiana).
What do I see?
Are you already awake?
I see the brightness in your eyes.
Yesterday I was fearing for you,
But thank heavens, you are not ill.
And now my dreams of terror have vanished.
(Tatiana withdraws from the window, and takes the letter).
Your sweet face is like a flower!

TATIANA: Ah! nurse,
I would ask a favor of you . . .

FILIPIEVNA: Heaven bear me witness!

TATIANA: That your boy should take this letter
Secretly to . . . to that . . .
That gentlemen, but tell the boy,
Not to say a word,
And not to talk about me! . . .

FILIPIEVNA: To whom, my dear,
Who would I tell?
Age has obtused my reasoning.
It was not so in younger years,
For once a thing was said,
Once was sufficient . . .

TATIANA: Ah! nurse, nurse, please stop.
You speak in vain of old stories,
Do you hear me?
Let us speak of the letter!

FILIPIEVNA: I have heard, I have heard,
It is sufficient, my dear.
Pray do no get angry.
I have no mind to think.

TATIANA: Do not speak in vain of old stories, nurse.
Speak of Oneghin! . . .
Will he recieve this letter, nurse?

FILIPIEVNA: Su, via fanciulla, mia, non t'adirar,
La mente mia non sa pensar.
Ma tu do nuovo impallidisci?

TATIANA: T'inganni, balia, in verità!
Non rifiutarmi per pietà!
(La balia, presa la lettera, rimane indecisa. Tatiana le fa cenno di uscire. La balia 'si avvia, si ferma sulla porta, pensierosa, poi torna indietro. Finalmente fa intendere con cenni, che ha capito ed esce. Tatiana siede al tavolo e resta pensieorsa, la fronte nella palma.).

SCENA X

(Tatiana entra correndo e cade seduta sul banco).

TATIANA: Ei qui! qui! Eugenio! . . . Mio Dio!
Che pensato avrà? Che mai dirà?
Ah! perchè mai a tal s'indusse il triste cor!
Mi spinse sconsigliato amor.
Or le mie pene a lui son note!
Ed ei, chi sa? Forse, crudele,
In riso volge il mio dolor!
O mio fatale tentator!
Ahimè, Signor! me sventurata!
O mio soffrir!
Qualcun s'appressa . . .
Al certo egli è . . .
Si, è lui!
(Entra Oneghin. Tatiana balza in piedi. Oneghin le si avvicina. Essa abbassa il capo).

ONEGHIN: (Dignitoso, calmo e freddo). Voi mi scrivete . . .
Negar non vale.
Or io so il senso arcan del vostro core.
E' puro e santo ingenuo amore!
Io la franchezza so apprezzar.
I vostri accenti ravvivar
Nell'alma un senso già scordato,
Ma pur lodarvi non poss'io.
E senz'ambagi il pensier mio
A voi sarà qui rivelato.
Io mi confesso al vostro piè,
Il vostro cor decider de'.

TATIANA: O cielo, quale offesa!
Quant'io soffro.
(Si lascia andare sul banco).

ONEGHIN: Se dell'imen la dolce cura
Empisse d'estasi il mio cor,
Se la ribelle mia natura
Piegasse ai palpiti d'amor,
Fedel compagna per mia fe',
Sareste sola voi per me.
Ma non m'arride il gaio sole.
Non v'ha per me felicità,
Imene, amor son vane fole
Che l'indoman fanno pietà.

FILIPIEVNA: Come, my dear, do not get angry.
My mind cannot think clearly,
Why, you are getting pale again?

TATIANA: You are truly deceiving yourself, nurse!
For pity sake do not refuse me!
(The nurse hesitates to take the letter, Tatiana motioins to her to go. The nurse stops short at the door, and in a thoughtful mood comes back again. Finally she motions that she has understood and departs. Tatiana sits at the table, and remains pensive, with her forehead resting in her palms.)

SCENE X

(Tatiana comes in running, and sits down on the bench).

TATIANA: Here! Here! Eugene!..
Oh, my God!
What will he think?
What ever will he say? . . .
Ah! why did my sad heart ever
Induce me to do such a deed?
It has been the unreasoning love that has moved me.
Now my troubles are known to him!
And he, who knows?
Perhaps shall mock my grief!
Oh, what fatal temptation!
Alas! God, I am unfortunate!
Oh! I shall suffer for this!
Some one is approaching
I am almost certian that it is he . . .
Yes, it is he! . . .
(Enter Oneghin. Tatiana jumps to her feet. Oneghin comes close to her. She stands meekly).

ONEGHIN: (With dignity and calmness). You have written to me . . .
Can you deny it?
Now I know the mysterious feeling in your heart.
A pure and holy love!
I know how to appreciate your frankness,
And your hopes I revive.
No, I cannot praise you,
I will reveal to you my thoughts
Without subterfuges.
At your feet I will confess myself . . .
And your heart will then decide!

TATIANA: Oh heavens, what an offense!
Must I endure all this? . . .
(She falls on the bench).

ONEGHIN: If wedlock were a cure,
And would fill my heart with rapture,
Then my nature would rebel,
And yield to the throbs of love.
And then you alone would be
The only loyal companion of my faith.
But the gay sun do not smile upon me
And brings me no happiness

A che cercar sì grave cura?
L'imen per noi saria sventura.
L'amor dell'oggi saria van;
Non v'amerei già più doman!
Or voi sapete le delizie
Che l'imeneo ci arrecherà
E forse per l'eternità.
(Esaltandosi).
L'età felice s'è involata,
Ah! s'è involata,
Mutarsi l'alma no non può,
Ogni altra sorte m'è negata
D'amor fraterno io v'amerò!
E forse ancor . . . d'un più possente amor
Il mio parlar non dia livore,
Fanciulla vaga al vostro core!
Amore, amore caccia un altro amor!
Il detto mio guida vi sia,
Un passo falso, ahimè!
Ancor potria piombarvi nel dolor!

CORO DIETRO LE QUINTE: Forosette amabili, vaghe e desiabili
Intrecciar dovete or voi
Danze, giochi e canti orsù!
(Il coro s'allontana poco a poco).
Se il garzon ci apparirà,
Ei non de' fuggir da noi.
Accorrete tutte voi,
Lo colpite dritto al cor
Sei curioso bel garzon!
Ed avrà di te ragion,
La purpurea bocca in fe'!
(Oneghin offre il braccio a Tatiana. Essa lo guarda lungamente in atto di silenziosa preghiera, poi si alza macchinalmente, s'appoggia al braccio di Oneghin ed esce lentamente).

SIPARIO.

ATTO SECONDO

SCENA I

CORO: Brillante idea davver inaspettata!
Che bella musica e gaia si davver!
Brillante assai, si è la serata
Ed il festin giocondo, miei signor!
Bravo! Bravo! Genial sorpresa!
Brillante assai è davver la festa!
Il festino giocondo, in verità!

VECCHI SIGNORI: Solo cacciando noi ci dilettiamo
Al bosco, al piano sol moviam il piè

VECCHIE SIGNORE: Altro che danze! Per valli, per piani, Per boschi si corre, ai campi si va!
Poi stanchi ritornano al sonno si danno
E noi che facciamo, Dio solo lo sa!
(Le giovani circondano il capitano).

Love is like an empty tale,
That on the morrow it wakes pity.
And why look for such a cure? . . .
Wedlock would mean misfortune for us,
The love of today is all in vain;
Tomorrow I could no longer love you!
Now, you know the delight,
That the world will render us,
And perhaps to eternity!
(He becomes exalted)
The happy age has flown by,
Ah, it has passed!
We cannot change our souls,
I have been denied of any chance.
I shall love with a brotherly love!
And perhaps with a more powerful love!
If I have spoken thus,
Do not let hatred fill your heart.
For love will always hunt for love!
Let my words be a guide to you,
For if you should take a false step,
Alas! . . . You would sink forever
Into the abyss of suffering!

CHORUS IN BACK OF THE STAGE: Amiable countrywomen, charming and desirous, Come, let us all indulge
In dancing, games and singing.
(The chorus withdraws slowly).
And when the boy will come back,
Let us all run to meet him,
And with our looks
We shall pierce his heart like an arrow.
Then we shall learn the truth.
Come! Come! Hurry up!..
(Oneghin offers his arm to Tatiana. She looks at him meekly and in action of prayer, then she rises, mechanically supporting herself on Oneghin's arm, and departs slowly).

CURTAIN.

ACT II

SCENE I

CHORUS: Clever idea, indeed, and so unexpected!
What lovely music and so merry!
Lovely indeed is the evening.
What merriment, my gentlemen!
Bravo! bravo! such a genial surprise!
It has been a clever idea,
And such gay merriment!

OLD GENTLEMEN: Hunting from woods to woods is
Our only amusement.

OLD LADIES: What of the dances!
From the fields
Into the woods, and up and down hills we go!
Then we come home all tired out, and fall asleep!
(The maidens surround the captain).

Ah! Trifon Petrovic sien grazie a voi,
Davver noi vi siamo grati assai!
Danziamo, danziamo or noi!

IL CAPITANO: Nossignor! Io grato vi sono.
Anch'io son disposto,
Si prenda a danzar.
(Oneghin balla con Tatiana. Tutti si fermano per vederli ballare).

LE VECCHIE SIGNORE: Danzano!
Danzano! le dolci colombe.
Convien che si spieghi . . .
Bel tipo inver.
Sua sposa la farà.
O povera Tania!
Tiranno sarà!
(Oneghin passa sbadatamente presso le vecchie signore, cercando di sorprendente le loro conversazioni).

CORO: E' un vero orrore, un villano,
Ei non s'appressa al baciamano,
E' un framasson, vizioso egli è.
E la bottiglia amica gli è.

ONEGHIN: Bell'opinione! Benissimo.
Or basta di lor giudizi abbietti.
Son piene di veleno!
A che venut'io son?
Davver, davver non so perchè!
Vendetta avrò sensibile per tal serviglio!
Ecco farò il galante a Olga.
(Passa Olga seguita da Lenski).
Va là!.. sarai contento.
Essa è qui. Vi prego . . .
(Olga indecisa).

LENSKI: La danza concedete a me!

ONEGHIN: Al certo sei in error!
(Oneghin e Olga balleno).

LENSKI: O ciel, che avvenne?
Io non comprendo . . .
Olga! Dio! Mi manca il cor.

CORO: Brillante idea, brillante inver!
Brillante è la festa,
E gaia, si davver.
Il festino!
Brillante idea, davver, inaspettata,
Che bella musica e gaia,
E lieta la serata, il festino,
Bravo! Bravo! Genial sorpresa!
La festa e dèliziosa,
Si, la bella musica!
O qual divario! o che piacer.
Il festino è divino!

SCENE II

LENSKI: (Avvicinandosi ad Olga che ha appena finito di ballare).
Perchè, perchè mi fate triste e sconsolato?
Ah! Olga! siete meco assai crudel!
Che fec'io mai?

Ah! Trifon Petrovitch, we are thankful to you,
Very very thankful indeed!
Let us dance, let us dance!

THE CAPTAIN: I am grateful to you all,
I, too, feel inclined to dance,
Then let us dance.
(Oneghin dances with Tatiana. All stop to look at them).

THE OLD LADIES: The sweet doves are dancing! dancing!
It is almost time for him to explain . . .
Fine specimen indeed.
Will he make her his own?
Ah! poor Tania!
What a tyrant he will be!
(Oneghin carelessly passes in front of the old ladies, trying to listen to their conversation).

CHORUS: He is abominable, he is rude,
We do not want him near us,
He is a freemason, full of vices,
With the bottle as his best friend.

ONEGHIN: Fine opinion! Very well.
It is time to stop such vile opinions.
They are full of poison to me!
What place have I come to?
Indeed, indeed, I know not why I came!
I shall avenge myself for such treatment!
Now, I am going to make love to Olga.
(Olga passes, followed by Lenski).
You will be happy now . . .
She is here. I pray you . . .
(Olga is undecided).

LENSKI: You promised me the dance!

ONEGHIN: You are mistaken!
(Oneghin and Olga dance).

LENSKI: Oh heavens! What is happening?
I do not understand . . .
Olga, God! My heart is failing.

CHORUS: Clever idea! clever idea!
And so unexpected!
It is gay indeed!
What lovely music, so lively,
Gay indeed is the evening and the feast!
Bravo! bravo! such a genial surprise!
Yes, the feast is delightful!
The music is lovely!
Oh so much variety!
Oh such pleasure!

SCENE II

LENSKI: (Approaching Olga, who has just stopped dancing). Why, why do you make me feel so sad?
Ah! Olga! you are cruel to me!
What have I ever done?

OLGA: Che dir vogliate, no, io capir non so!

LENSKI: Voi con Oneghin danzaste,
E con lui sol!
Io non comprendo . . .
Io v'invitai pur ma rifiutaste.

OLGA: Davver mi meraviglio.
Non so di che parlar vuoi tu!

LENSKI: Che! Non intendi ancor?
E non si spezza il core
Al sol veder lo sguardo
Tuo gentil fissato
Agli occhi suoi,
Sommesso ti parlava
E ti stringeva a sè!
O mio dolor!

OLGA: Comprenderti non so davver!
Invan tu sei geloso.
M'è grato il suo parlar,
E' assai gentil.

LENSKI: Ah! gentil!
Ah! Olga, Olga, tu non m'ami!

OLGA: Che stravagante!

LENSKI: (Oneghin s'avvicina).
Olga, tu non m'ami!
Meco il cotillon danzar vuoi tu?

ONEGHIN: No! con me! A me voi deste la parola.

OLGA: Certo sì, vi seguo!
Punir così voglio il mal pensier!

LENSKI: Olga!

OLGA: (Dal fondo viene Triquet circondato dalle fanciulle). No davver! Le damigelle amabili Qui vengon con Triquet.

ONEGHIN: Chi è?

OLGA: Di Francia venne, qui maestro.

CORO: Monsieur Triquet non lo dirà!
Chantez de grâce un couplet!

TRIQUET: Un madrigal ho pronto già!
Ma dove sta Mademoiselle?
(Tutti formano cerchio intorno a Tatiana che vuole schivarsi, ma viene trattenuta).
Monsieur Triquet non lo dirà!
Car le couplet est fait pour elle!

CORO: Essa è qui! Essa è qui!

TRIQUET: Ah! Ah! Mademoiselle, je vous en prie!
Mesdames, voi state ad ascoltar.
E' tempo omai di cominciar.
(Con molta espressione).
In questo bel felice dì
La fanciulla piena di beltà,
Spira delizia, gioia, amor
Il vostro viso incantator.
Vi sorrida la felicità.
Legge saran vostri desir,

OLGA: I do not understand you!

LENSKI: You danced with Oneghin.
With him alone! . . . I cannot understand
Why you refused me, when I asked you

OLGA: Indeed, I am surprised.
I do not know what you are talking about!

LENSKI: What? you do not understand me yet?
It was enough to break my heart as I watched,
How sweetly you stared into his eyes,
As he was softly speaking,
And holding you close in his arms!
Oh! my grief!

OLGA: I cannot understand you!
You are vainly jealous.
It is a pleasure talking to him,
He is so kind.

LENSKI: Ah! kind!
Ah! Olga, Olga, you do not love me!

OLGA: How you exaggerate!

LENSKI: (as Oneghin approaches). Olga! you do not love me!
Will you dance the cotillion with me?

ONEGHIN: No! with me! You promised me the dance.

OLGA: Certainly, I will dance with you!
I will thus cure him of his jealously!

LENSKI: Olga!

OLGA: (Triquet appears in the background surrounded by the maidens). No, indeed! my amiable young ladies,
Here you come with Triquet.

ONEGHIN: Who is he?

OLGA: He came here from France as a teacher.

CHORUS: M. Triquet! M. Triquet!
Sing us a poem with all your grace!

TRIQUET: The poem is ready!
But where is the young lady?
(They all form a circle around Tatiana, who tries to dodge them, but is kept back).
M. Triquet will not tell
That the poem is dedicated to her!

CHORUS: Here she is! here she is!

TRIQUET: Ah! Ah! maidens, you are all invited.
And you ladies remain to hear us.
It is already time to start.
(With expression).
On this most happy day,
We are here to celebrate
In honor of this beautiful girl,
Whose lovely face radiates
Love, happiness, and delight,
And may happiness smile on you

Lungi le lagrime, i sospir
E la gioia sol v'arriderà.
Bella Tatiana al vostro piè
Noi qui siam tutti, per mia fè.
V'auguriamo la felicità.
Il cielo, il ciel propizio a voi sarà!
Il cielo v'arrida o bella Tatiana.
Il cielo sorrida a voi Tatiana.
(Triquet s'inchina rigraziando).

CORO: Bravo, bravo! Bravo, Monsieur Triquet!
Grazioso il madrigale e bene lo cantò.
(Dopo cantate le strofe, Triquet s'inginocchia innanzi a Tatiana e le presenta il madrigale).

SCENA III

IL CAPITANO: Messieurs, Mesdames! Vi prego ai vostri posti.
Tosto comincia il cotillon!
Al posto orsù!
(Il Capitano dà la mano a Tatiana. Cominciano a ballare. Altre coppie di ballerini che li seguono, prendono posto successivamente. Oneghin ed Olga siedono presso la ribalta. Lenski, pensieroso resta in piedi dietro di loro).

ONEGHIN: (Dopo aver fatto un giro con Olga, la fa sedere, poi fingendo di accorgersi, soltanto allora, di Lenski, gli rivolge la parola). Perch non danzi, Lenski?
Una statua mi sembri davver.
Di, che hai?

LENSKI: Io? che! nulla in fè!
L'amico ammiro in te
Il mio fedel amico.

ONEGHIN: Vedi un po! Curioso assai mi sembra il tuo giudizio.
Che mai ti turba il cor?

LENSKI: (Sul principio risponde pacatamente, ma poco a poco si esalta). Turbarmi? No davvero!
Esperto non sapea che fosti tu,
Col dolce favellar turbar l'ingenuo cor
Di credule fanciulle, col tuo sorriso!
Certo che per te solo Tatiana,
Eh, via! saria poco inver!
(Gli invitati cessano, poco, di ballare e cominciano a prestar attenzione alla disputa).
Fedele amico! Olga pur vuoi tu.
Tu vuoi spezzarle il cor,
Del suo dolore poi farti onor!
Sei davvero onesto!

ONEGHIN: (Con ironia, ma calma). Che! Di mente uscito sei?

LENSKI: Prosegui.
Da te mi vien l'offesa
E tu stesso dici a me che folle io son!
(Le danze vengono interrotte).
Oneghin, più amico non vi son!

forever.
May your desires be like laws,
And tears and sighs be far far away,
Joy alone will smile on you.
Beautiful Tania,
Here at your feet we are
To wish you happiness.
There will be kindness in the future
For you!
Heaven will smile on you,
Beautiful Tatiana.
(Triquet bows graciously).

CHORUS: Bravo! bravo! bravo! M. Triquet!
Graceful is the poem, and well sung.
(After singing a stanza, Triquet kneels in front of Tatiana, and gives her the poem).

SCENE III

THE CAPTAIN: Ladies, and Gentlemen,
I pray you take your seats.
The cotillion will begin now!
Come to your seats!
(The captain gives his hand to Tatiana. They start to dance. Other couples follow them, taking places subsequently. Oneghin and Olga sit on the steps of the stage. Lenski stands in back of them in a thoughtful mood.)

ONEGHIN: (After dancing one round with Olga, begs her to sit down, and pretends to have just noticed Lenski, and turns to speak to him.) Why don't you dance, Lenski?
You look, indeed, like a statue.
Tell me, what is the matter?

LENSKI: I? what! nothing, indeed!
In you, my friend, I have always found a true friend.

ONEGHIN: See here! Curious enough is your wisdom,
What is it that troubles your heart?

LENSKI: (at first he answers softly, then little by little he becomes excited). Troubles? No, indeed!
I did not know you were such an expert
At stealing young maidens' hearts,
With your sweet smiles, and speeches!
I was certain that you were Tatiana's suitor,
Alas now! it is not true!
(The guests stop dancing, to listen to the conversation).
Faithful friend! You want Olga, too.
Do you want to break her heart,
And rejoice in her sorrow!
You would be honest indeed!

ONEGHIN: (With irony, but calm). What! Have you lost your head?

LENSKI: Proceed.
From you such an insult
And you accuse me of being foolish!
(The dances are stopped).

(Tutti gli invitati s'avvicinano e li circondano). Tutt'ho scordato l'antico nostro affetto! Io . . . io sol disprezzo ho in cor!	Oneghin! I am your friend no longer. (All the guests form a circle around them). Everything will be forgotten, even our old love! I . . . I have only hatred in my heart!
ONEGHIN: Or m'odi . . . basta, basta . . . Ci ascoltan tutti.	ONEGHIN: You hate me now . . . That is enough, enough . . . They are all listening to us.
LENSKI: (fuori di sè). E che importa a me? Si, m'offendeste voi! Ne renderete a me ragion, signor!	LENSKI: (As if out of his mind). What do I care? Yes, you insulted me! You shall account for this, Sir!
CORO: Che avvenne raccontate?	CHORUS: Tell us what has happened?
LENSKI: Nulla, io chiedo so! Che Oneghin qui presente. Mi dia ragion di sua condotta. Risponder ei non vuole a me, Or'io lo sfido qui. Decida il ferro! . . . (La Sig.ra Larina si fa strada nella folla e si rivolge a Lenski).	LENSKI: Nothing, I am only asking That Oneghin who is present, Account for his behavior. To me he does not answer, I will challenge him here And the sword will decide his lot! . . . (Madame Larina passes through the crowd, and turns to Lenski).
LARINA: O Dio! In mia casa! Vi calmate, vi calmate!	LARINA: Oh God! In my home! Calm yourselves, calm yourselves!
LENSKI: (Con gran sentimento). Qui, signora! Qui, signora, D'un sogno dorato si beava Il mio giovine cor. Qui, signora, mi fu rivelato Il sublime segreto d'amor! Ma la dolce chimera ha spezzata! Della vita m'apparve l'orror. L'amistade è menzogna spietata. E' menzogna spietata l'amor!	LENSKI: (With great feeling). Here Madam! Here Madam! My young heart was blessed with a golden dream. Here, madam, The sublime secret of love was first revealed to me! And now that the sweet chimera is broken! Life seems a horror. Friendship is but a cruel falsehood, As cruel a falsehood as love is.
ONEGHIN: Al rimirar si gran dolor Ho di rimorso pieno il cor. Questa passione dolce, santa io Non dovea turbar, lo sento. Di vero affetto Lenski amai, Giammai io nol dovea turbar.	ONEGHIN: My heart is full of remorse. I feel that I should not have troubled your sweet passion, I had a great love for Lenski, I should have never troubled him.
TATIANA: Colpita io sono, sventurata, Confuso resta il pensiero, Sol m'arde in seno e gelosia e dolor! Mi consuma geloso dolor Cruda doglia mell'alma mi stà, Tremenda mi tortura, Mi dilania il core.	TATIANA: I am the unfortunate one, Confused are my thoughts, And in my bosom I glow with grief and jealousy! A crude grief is in my soul, that tortures me dreadfully, And lacerates my heart.
OLGA E Larina: Davver i lor furori insani Preparan triste l'indomani.	OLGA AND Larina: They will be sad indeed on the morrow for such insane fury!
CORO: Disgraziato!	CHORUS: It is disgraceful!
ONEGHIN: Io non dovea piagar quell'alma. Punge il rimorso il mio cor!	ONEGHIN: I should not have wounded your soul; And now remorse stings my heart!
CORO: Fa davver pietà!	CHORUS: It is pitiful, indeed!
LENSKI: La fanciulla dal puro sembiante, Cui nel guardo rifulge il candor, (Con amarezza). Per inganno v'inebbria un istante, V'abbandona poi trista al dolor!	LENSKI: The maiden with the loving face, In whose glance shines sincerity, (With bitterness). She inebriates you on the moment. Only to deceive you, And leave you to your sorrows!
ONEGHIN: Io nol dovea turbar, lo sento!	ONEGHIN: I should not have disturbed you, I feel it!
TATIANA: Ah! Perduta io sono, il core mel disse, Io pianger non oso, non oso. Ah! perchè plorar, Felice ei farmi non puote, ahimè!	TATIANA: Ah! now I am lost, My heart told me so, I will not dare weep. Ah! but why weep, For he cannot make me happy!
OLGA: Ai lor furori li abbandono, io no, Colpevol no, non sono davver, Fra loro discordia sol regna discordia, Un detto nemici li rende. Ah! spensierata gioventu; Ignota a lor è la virtù.	OLGA: I will not give myself up To their violence, I am not to blame, no indeed, Nothing but discord reigns among them, And a mere word makes them enemies. Ah! careless youth; Virtue is unknown to you.
LARINA: Davver i lor furori insani, Preparan triste l'indomani! Spensierata gioventù; Sol regna fra loro discordia, Un detto nemici li rende. Ah! spensierata gioventù; Ignota a lor è la virtù.	LARINA: Indeed with their insane violence, They will be sad tomorrow! Careless youth. Nothing but discord reigns among them, And one cross word makes them enemies. Ah! careless youth! Virtue is unknown to you.
ONEGHIN: Di vero affetto Lenski amai, Io nol dovea giammai turbar. Io non dovea piagar quell'alma, Colpevol io sono, lo sento. Al rimirar sì gran dolor, Ho di rimorso pieno il cor. Or mi sospinge il fato già. E' d'uopo ch'io risponda a tanta offesa!	ONEGHIN: I loved Lenski with all my heart, And I should never have disturbed him. Now, I have wounded his soul, I am to blame, I know it. To look upon such grief, My heart is filled with remorse. And now I shall trust to luck, For it is up to me To account for my offense!
LENSKI: Ah! no! no, colpevol tu non sei. Angiol mio, sei pura, mio bene, Ei solo fu vile, punirlo si deve.	LENSKI: Ah! no, no, you are not guilty, My angel, my love, you are pure, He alone is the coward, And we must punish him.
CORO: Spensierata gioventù, Sol regna fra loro discordia, Un detto nemici li rende! Possibil mai! che un dì sì bello finir Si debba in un duello.	CHORUS: Careless youth, Nothing but discord reigns among them, And a cross word makes them enemies! Is it possible that this beautiful day Will end in a duel?
ONEGHIN: Ai cenni vostri io son! Or basta! V'ho udito, sta ben! Follia, signor! Preziosa inver Per voi fia la lezione! . . .	ONEGHIN: I am here at your command! Silence! I hear you! all is well! Foolishness, Sir! Let all this teach you a costly lesson!..
LENSKI: Sia! pur! Domani! Vedrem chi di noi n'ha d'uopo! son folle! Ebben sia pu! Ma voi . . . siete un vile seduttore!	LENSKI: Let it be! Tomorrow We will see Which one of us is guilty! Is it madness! Very well, let it be! But you . . . .you are a vile corrupter!
ONEGHIN: Ah! tacete, o qui v'uccido! (Larina, Olga ed una parte degl'invitati trattengono Lenski. Tatiana piange. Oneghin si precipita su Lenski. Vengono separati. Oneghin si allontana e volge le spalle a Lenski).	ONEGHIN: Ah! be silent, or I will kill you right here! (Larina, Olga and some of the guests hold back Lenski. Tatiana weeps. Oneghin throws himself upon Lenski. They are separated. Oneghin withdraws with his back turned to Lenski).

CORO: Ciò non sarà,
Pur impedirlo sapremo, giammai,
Il sangue versato non fia,
Uscire non debbon; fermate!
Non si deve lasciarli partire.

OLGA: Vladimir! Deh! ti calma, io t'imploro.

LENSKI: Ah! Olga! Per sempre addio!

CORO: Sventurato! (Lenski si allontana precipitosamente. Oneghin lo segue).

SCENA IV

(La scena rappresenta un molino sulla riva d'un fiumicello. Comincia a far giorno. E' d'inverno).
(All'alzarsi del sipario Lenski e Saretzki sono già in iscena. Lenski siede pensieroso sotto un albero. Saretzki passeggia con impazienza).

SARETZKI: Ebbene? Non s'è presentato ancor l'avversario?

LENSKI: tosto ei qui sarà.

SARETZKI: Ma per mia fede pur mi sembra strano.
Ch'ei non sia qui!
E' tempo alfin!
Credea che giunto fosse già!
(Saretzki va verso il molino ed entra in conversazione col mugnaio che ha veduto in fondo alla scena. —Lenski continua a rimanere seduto).

LENSKI: Lontan, lontan da me ne andaste,
Lontan da me miei dolci dì?
(S'alza e viene alla ribalta).
Qual sorte arrechi il nuovo sole . . .
Ahimè! discerner non m'è dato.
L'asconde il dubbio ed il mister!
L'arcano di svelar non val!
L'acuto dardo fia mortale,
Oppur lontan da me ne andrà.
Non cale: gaudio oppur dolor,
Ha fissa l'ora sua fatale!
A che scrutar tanto mister
E della tenebre . . . l'imper!!
Rosato sorge albor novello
Raggiante splende il divo sol!
Ed io già forse nell'avello
Avrò scordato e pene e duol!
E la memoria del poeta tarrà
Di Lete l'ondaqueta,
E ognun mi scorderà, ma tu?!
Tu Olga! . . .
(Con molto espressione).
Fanciulla cara di' tu non verrai
A lacrimar sulla mia tomba pensando:
Quant'ei pur m'amò . . .
All'amor mio ei consacrò,
La triste sua vita affanosa.
Ah! Olga! quanto t'ho adorato!
A te soltanto ho consacrato
Il mio pensiero, il mio amore:
Ah! Olga! quant'io t'adorai!

CHORUS: This cannot be,
We shall know how to prevent it,
Blood will not be shed,
They must not go; stop them!
We must not let them go away.

OLGA: Vladimir! Alas! calm yourself,
I beseech you.

LENSKI: Ah! Olga! Goodbye forever! . . . .

CHORUS: Unfortunate! (Lenski withdraws quickly. Oneghin follows him).

SCENE IV

(The scene represents a mill on the bank of a small river. It is daylight, and a winter morning.—As the curtain rises Lenski and Saretzski are already on the stage; Lenski under a tree, and in a thoughtful mood. Saretzski walks up and down impatiently).

SARETZSKI: Well? Has the opponent not appeared yet? . . .

LENSKI: He will be here shortly.

SARETZSKI: In my faith, yet it seem strange,
That he should be here!
It is almost time!
I thought he had arrived!
(Saretzski goes toward the mill, and starts to converse with the miller whom he has spied in back of the stage. Lenski still remains seated)

LENSKI: Far, far away from me
The sweet days have gone by!
(Rises and comes forward on the platform).
What fate will the new sun bring . . .
Alas! I cannot guess.
It conceals all doubts, and mysteries!
And it would be worthless
To disclose the secret!
The deadly sword will decide his lot,
Or take him far, far away from me.
I care not: joy or sorrow,
His fatal hour is fixed!
Fresh is the dawn of a new day,
When the divine soul beams radiantly!
And I, perhaps, in my grave,
Will have forgotten sorrows and pains!
And the memory of the poet will be dipped
In the peaceable billows of Lete,
And everyone will have forgotten me, but you! You Olga!!!
(With great feeling).
Tell me dear, will you not come.
To mourn over my grave, thinking:
How much he loved me! . . . .
And for my love he sacrificed,
His sad, and strenuous life.
Ah! Olga! how much I have worshipped you!
And to you only I have given,
All my thoughts, all my love!
Ah! Olga! I have worshipped you!
My beloved, my sweet love!
Alas! come! Alas! come!
My sweet love!
Alas! come here close to my heart.
Far, far away from me,
Your beautiful days have gone by;
Good-bye forever, my beautiful days!

Diletta mia, mio dolce amor!
Deh! vien! deh vien!
Mio dolce amor!
Deh! vien qui sul mio cor!
M'inebbria, o bella, del tuo amor!
Lontan, lontan da me ne andaste miei dolci dì;
Per sempre addio miei dolci dì! . . .

SCENA V

(Saretzki s'avvicina a Lenski).

SARETZKI: Ei giunse alfin!
Alcun con sè conduce . . .
Chi mai sarà? (Entrano Oneghin ed il suo servo Guillot, che reca le pistole.—Oneghin saluta).

ONEGHIN: Ai cenni vostri sono.
L'indugio perdonate!

SARETZKI: Vi prego. Il pardrin dov'è?
Pedanti esser qui convien!
Gli scontri, no, non son gioco,
L'antica legge rispettar si deve qua.
Non c'è che far gli scontri,
No, non sono un gioco.
Il mio dover io compirò.

ONEGHIN: E noi, signor, ve ne lodiam!
Il mio secondo è qui:
Monsieur Guillot!
Al suo mandato appien risponde.
Suppongo accetto vi sarà!
A voi signori ignoto ancora,
Ma già s'intende, è un uomo d'onore!
(Saretzki risponde con freddezza).

ONEGHIN (a Lenski). Che? Miei signor?

LENSKI: Andiam, son prono.
(Saretzki s'allontana con Guillot per fissore le condinioni del duello. Lenski ed Oneghin restano in faspettativa senza guardarsi).

LENSKI: Sia pur! Distrutta hai la mia fede,
Impera l'odio nel mio cor.
Il dolce affetto più non riede,
Che ieri pur ci legava ancor.
Tutto è finito.
Un istante nemico odiato t'ho dinnante
E della morte, nel mister
Sogghigna l'avido sembiante!

ONEGHIN: Ah! Ridiam dell'odio e del dolor
Finchè ne siamo in tempo ancor!
Scordiam l'offesa d'un istante . . .

LENSKI: No! No! No! Mai!
(Saretzki e Guillot hanno caricato le armi e misurato la distanza. Saretzki mette al posto gli avversari e consegna loro le pistole. Guillot impaurito si nasconde dietro un albero).

SCENE V

(Saretzski approaches Lenski).

SARETZSKI: He is here at least!
And someone is with him . . . .
Who could it be?
(Enter Oneghin followed by his servant Guillot, who carries the weapons.—Oneghin bows).

ONEGHIN: I am at your command.
Forgive the delay!

SARETZSKI: I pray you. Where is the godfather?
It is proper to respect the old laws here!
For this is an encounter, not a game.
I will do my duty.

ONEGHIN: And we praise you, sir!
My assistant is here:
Mr. Guillot!
Who fully answers the order.
I presume you will accept him!
Though he is not known to you,
They all know him;
As a man highly esteemed! (Saretzski bows coldly).

ONEGHIN: (To Lenski). Well, my gentleman?

LENSKI: Come, I am ready.
(Saretzski departs with Guillot to fix the conditions of the duel. Lenski and Oneghin in expectation without looking at each other).

LENSKI: Let it be!
You have destroyed my faith,
Hatred rules in my heart.
The sweet passion that still bound us yesterday,
Does not smile upon us to-day.
All is over.
Death with its mystery
Sneers eagerly at your face!

ONEGHIN: Ah Till we are ready
Let us laugh at hatred, and pain!
Let us forget the offense for a moment . . . .

LENSKI: No! No! No! Never!
(Saretzski and Guillot have loaded the weapons and are measuring the distance. Saretzski places the antagonists, and hands them the weapons. Guillot is frightened and hides in back of a tree).

SARETZKI: Signori, andate!
(Da i tre colpi regolamentari. Gli avversari fanno quattro passi avanti senza mirare. Oneghin avanzando alza la pistola, nel medesimo tempo Lenski comincia a prender la mira.— Oneghin tira. Lenski tentenna e cade. Saretzki s'avvicina a lui e l'osserva attentamente. Oneghin pure si precipita versso il caduto).

ONEGHIN: (con voce strozzata). Morto?

SARETZKI: Morto?
(Oneghin disperato si copre il volto colle mani).

SIPARIO.

ATTO TERZO

SCENA I

(La scena rappresenta una sala laterale di ricca casa signorile in Pietroburgo).

(Gl'invitati traversano la scena ballando la polonese).

ONEGHIN: (a destra). Qui pur m'annoio!
Lo splendor dei balli e delle feste
Dissipar non puote
Le pene del mio cor!
(S'avvicina alla ribalta).
Ramingo andai per l'universo,
I tristi dì volea scordar!
Ahimè! Che mai potria sanar,
Il crudo mio soffrir perverso!
Son qui venuto e qui ancor
Il tedio ho soltanto in cor!
(Entra il principe Gremin dando il braccio a Tatiana).

CORO: Mira la Gremina! Mirate, mirate!
(Tatiana siede sul divano. Invitati d'ambo i sessi le si avvicinano continuamente a farle omaggio).
(Oneghin, sorpreso tiene gli occhi fissi su Tatiana).

ONEGHIN: Oh! ciel, Tatiana . . . parmi!
No! Che! Come in questi luoghi?
Esser non può! Inganno è il mio!

CORO: Un cortigiano, un'ipocondrico signor,
In lidi estranei andò . . . .
Or qui . . . ritorno fè fra noi Oneghin!..

ONEGHIN: Or, dimmi sù,
E' nota a te la dama là
Ch'a rosso il tocco?

GREMIN: La mia sposa ell'è.

ONEGHIN: M'è grato in ver!
Io nol sapeva..
Da quando?

SARETZSKI: Gentlemen, Go!
(He fires three regulations shots. The antagonists take four steps forward without aiming. Oneghin advances, and raises the pistol; at the same time Lenski aims at him— Oneghin fires. Lenski staggers and falls. Saretzski approaches him and observes him intently. Oneghin also rushes forward to aid the fallen one).

ONEGHIN: (With a choking voice). Dead?

SARETZSKI: Dead!
(Oneghin in despair covers his face with his hands).

CURTAIN.

ACT III

SCENE I

(The scene represents a parlor in a rich mansion in Petrograd).

(The guests cross the stage, dancing the Polonaise).

ONEGHIN: (To the right). I am bored! Here, too!
The gaiety of the dances, and the feast
Cannot make me forget
The pain in my heart!
(He goes to the end of the stage).
Aimlessly I roamed around the world,
Trying to forget the unhappy days!
Alas! What could ever heal
The keen pangs of my heart?
I have come here,
And here again I find
Weariness in my heart!
(Enter Prince Gremin, offering his arm to Tatiana).

CHORUS: Look at Gremin over there!
Look! look!
(Tatiana sits on the sofa. The guests go up to her to pay their homage).
(Oneghin stares at Tatiana in surprise).

ONEGHIN: Oh! Heavens, Tatiana . . . seems like her!
No! What! In this place?
It cannot be! I must be mistaken!

CHORUS: A courtier, and a lazy man,
Had gone to strange shores . . .
And hither . . . Is Oneghin among us again? . . .

ONEGHIN: Now, tell me,
Do you know that lady over there
With the red cap?

GREMIN: She is my wife.

ONEGHIN: I am glad indeed!
I did not know.
How long?

GREMIN: Son due anni già.

ONEGHIN: Il nome?

GREMIN: Dei Larini, Tatiana.
E' nota a te?

ONEGHIN: Fur miei vicin!

GREMIN: (con nobiltà, calma e sentimento). Ad ogni età l'amor s'apprende,
E i generosi sensi accende
Nell'innocente e giovin cor,
A cui la vita ignota è ancor.
Nel vecchio core del guerrier,
Dal bianco crin s'accende alter!
Oneghin, la menzogna è vana,
Amor possente ho per Tatiana!
La desolata vita, ahimè,
Correva ed ella apparve a me,
Quale vision che viva splende
E il vecchio cor gioioso rende.
Er'io già lasso,
Solo inganni aveva in cor la gioventù.
Fanciulle ancor nel fior degli anni.

SCENA II

GREMIN: Amico andiam; io tipresenterò. (Gremin conduce Oneghin presso Tatiana).
Mia cara: Io ti presento Oneghin,
Parente e caro amico egli è!
L'accogli tu.
(Oneghin s'inchina profondamente. Tatiana risponde semplicemente e senza scomporsi)

TATIANA: Ben fortunata . . .
Io vi conobbi già, signor.

ONEGHIN: Gran tempo già passò.

TATIANA: Ed ora? Or dai poder veniste qui?

ONEGHIN: Oh! no. Da luoghi estrani son qui tornato.

TATIANA: Da lungo?

ONEGHIN: Sol'oggi.

TATIANA: (a Gremin). Andiam. Son lassa già!
(Tatiana al braccio di Gremin esce, rispondendo ai saluti degl'invitati. Oneghin la segue collo sguardo).

ONEGHIN: E lei, mio, Dio, quella Tatiana,
Che nel silenzio e nel mister
Un dì me schiuse lusinghier
Ingenua il dolce suo pensiero
Ed io, spietato fui severo.
E' dessa, sì! ch'io disprezzai,
Di cui la sorte irrisi insano?
E' dessa e fia possibil mai?
Cotanta calma, tanto ardir!
Vaneggio inver. E sogno, ahimè?
Dubbio, rimpianto sento in me!
Qual nuovo senso arcan m'assale?
Qual fiamma s'agita nel cor?
Saria disprezzo o forse amor?
Non v'ha più dubbio, ahimè!

GREMIN: It has been two years already.

ONEGHIN: Her name?

GREMIN: Tatiana, from the Larini.
Do you know her?

ONEGHIN: They were my neighbors!

GREMIN: (With dignity, calmness and feeling). One learns to love at all ages,
And kindled are the noble feelings
Of the young and innocent heart,
To whom lfe is yet unknown.
Even in the heart of the old warrior,
Fiercely burns the flame of love!
Oneghin, it is vain to lie,
I love Tatiana with a powerful love!
My lonely life, Alas!
Was going by, when she appeared to me,
Like a vision that lives and sparkles,
And brought back happiness to my old heart.
For in my younger days my heart had been deceived,
By maidens still in their frivolous youth.

SCENE II

GREMIN: Come, my friend; I will introduce you.
(Gremin takes Oneghin up to Tatiana).
My dear, meet Oneghin,
A relative, and a dear friend of mine!
Make him feel at home.
(Oneghin bows deeply. Tatiana acknowledges with a slight bow).

TATIANA: Very fortunate . . .
I have already met you, sir.

ONEGHIN: A long time passed.

TATIANA: And now? Have you just come home from the farm?

ONEGHIN: Oh! no. I have come back from foreign lands.

TATIANA: Is it long?

ONEGHIN: Only today.

TATIANA: (To Gremin). Come. I am tired!
(Tatiana departs arm in arm with Gremin, and bows in answer to the greetings of the guests. Oneghin follows her with his glance).

ONEGHIN: It is she, yes, whom I despised,
Who in secret
One day freely revealed
Her flattering thought for me?
And I was cruelly severe.
It is she, yes, who I despised,
And at whose fate I laughed insanely?
Can it possibly be she?
So calm, and so haughty!
I must be dreaming. Alas!
Doubts and remorse grip me!
What new passion stirs in my heart?
Can it be hatred, or love?
There is no doubt, Alas!

Io 'amo d'insensato ardente amore.
Perduto io son! Ebben ch'importa?
La dolce speme è alfin risorta.
Il tossico fatal m'inebbria
Un grato sogno arride a me!
Rapito io son.
L'acuto stral del guardo suo dolce
E fatal si fe' signore del mio core!

SCENA III

(La scena reppresenta una stanza da ricevere in casa Gremin—Entra Tatiana in elegante abito da mattina. Ha in mano una lettera).

TATIANA: Ah! Povero mio cor!
Ancora Oneghin apparve innanzi
A me quel seduttor crudele.
Col guardo suo fatal ei ridestava in cor
Nell'alma misera il crudo mio dolor!
Dei dì trascorsi più non ho memoria,
Fanciulla innanzi a lui, ahimè!
Mi sento ancora!
(Piange).
(Oneghin compare sulla soglia; rimane qualche tempo immobile a contemplare Tatiana piangente. Poi s'avanza con vivacità e le s'inginocchia ai piedi. Tatiana lo guarda senza sorpresa e senza rancore, poi gli fa cenno di alzarsi).

TATIANA: Ven prego! Basta! Palesar vi debbo
Tutto il mio pensiero!
Non vi sovvien del triste dì là
Nell'annoso parco, fra gli aulenti fior,
I vostri accenti ascoltai,
Prostrata nel dolor.

ONEGHIN: Pietàde, sì di me vi prenda.
Io m'ingannai . . . punito io sono!

TATIANA: Oneghin! ero allor fanciulla,
Avea la mente ingenua allor.
Ed io v'amai ma in preda al nulla
Spingeste il povero mio cor!
Che deste a me?
Severi accenti!
D'un puro cor pene e tormenti
Conoscevate voi, signor!
Ed ora? Dio! io tremo ancor
Al sovvenir di tanto strazio
E di sì rio dolor!
Io non v'accuso, no!
In quel fatal momento,
Foste uom d'onore!
Non v'ingannaste no, signor!
Il so! nel queto mio ritiro
Lontan dal mondo incantator,
Io vi dispiacqui allor!
Ed ora? (Animandosi).
Perchè mi tormentate ancor?
Perchè lo sguardo a me volgeste?
Fra gli splendor di vaghe feste

I love her with an ardent passion.
I am lost! What matters?
Sweet hope is revived again.
The fatal venom intoxicates me.
A pleasant dream smiles down upon me!
I am charmed by her beautiful glance,
Which is as fatal to my heart,
As a pointed arrow!

SCENE III

(The scene represets a parlor in Gremin's house. — Enter Tatiana wearing a beautiful morning dress. She has a letter in her hand).

TATIANA: Ah! My poor heart!
Again Oneghin has come before me,
That cruel seducer.
His fatal look has roused in my heart
And in my soul, the miserable grief!
I had forgotten the days gone by,
Alas! I feel like a young girl again before him!
(She weeps).
(Oneghin appears on the threshold; he stops short to look at Tatiana, who is weeping. He approaches her quickly, and kneels at her feet. Tatiana looks at him without surprise, and without ill feeling, then motions to him to rise).

TATIANA: I pray you! Silence!
I will reveal to you all my thoughts!
Do you remember the sad day there
In the ancient park, among the fragrant flowers,
When, prostrated by grief,
I listened to your words.

ONEGHIN: Oh, have pity on me!
I deceived myself . . . and now I am punished!

TATIANA: Oneghin! I was then a young and innocent girl.
I loved you, and you broke my heart!
What did you give me?
Harsh words!
The pains and griefs of a true heart!
You knew, sir!
And now? God! I still tremble
To think of such mockery,
And so much wicked pain!
No, I do not blame you!
For in that fatal moment,
You were an honorable man!
You were not deceived, sir!
I know! When I quietly retired
Far away from the world's temptations
You were displeased then!
And now?
(Animated).
Why do you torment me again?
Why did you look at me again?

Oppur vi tenta l'alto onor
Che m'ha la sorte riservato?
palese a voi si fe' l'amor?
Dei gran signor la cortesia.
O vi sorride l'onta mia,
Che a tutti qui saria svelata?
Il pianto più crudel sarà,
Più vanto e gloria a voi darà?

ONEGHIN: Ah . . . che dite? Ahimè!
(Con passione).
Possibil fia che tanto affetto
Menzogna vil vi sembrerà? . . .
Il mio soffrir solo dispetto,
Il vostro cor giudicherà?
Voi non sapete quanto amore,
Qual face ardente in cor mi sta!
Del mio straziante e rio dolore
Vi penderebbe alfin pietà!
Io qui prostrato al vostro piede,
Mi sento l'anima straziar!
Vorrei ridarvi alfin la fede,
Al vosto piè vorrei pregar!

TATIANA: Io piango . . .

ONEGHIN: Dio! Questo pianto è più prezioso d'un tesoro!

Tatiana e ONEGHIN: Ah! Fu sì presso a noi la gioia, Sì presso . . . sì presso! Oh! ciel!

TATIANA: La mia sorte omai decisa è già senza ritorno.
Io sposa sono.
Per pietà, si, per pietà.
Deh, mi lasciate!

ONEGHIN: Lasciarvi? Lasciarvi?
Follia! lasciarvi? Mai?
(Colla massima espressione).
No, scordar, no, non poss'io,
Il vostro viso incantatore.
Io no, domar non posso, o Dio!
L'ardente brama del mio core!
Darei la vita per destar in voi
L'amor che m'arde, insano!
(Animandosi gradatamente le cade di nuovo inginocchiato ai piedi e le prende la mano con vivacità).
Vorrei soffrir, distruggermi, pregar . . .
Morir dicendo: t'amo, t'amo!
Questo è il sogno mio divin,
Sol quest'io bramo!

TATIANA: (Impaurita, ritira la mano). Oneghin, parli in voi l'onor,
Non mi spezzate invano il cor.

ONEGHIN: Lasciarvi, ahimè non posso!

TATIANA: Oneghin! Per pietà, sì, per pietà!
Deh! mi lasciate!

ONEGHIN: Crudele!

TATIANA: A che celarlo?
Mentir non vale!
Ah! Io v'amo ancor!
(Tatiana esaltata dalla confes-

Among the splendor and charm of the feast,
My love revealed itself to you,
And now, does not your honor
Tempt you to consider my state?
My shame only makes you smile?
It will become known to everyone?
The stronger my anguish
The greater your boast?

ONEGHIN: Ah! . . . What are you saying? Alas!
(Passionately).
Can it be possible that such great love,
Would seem to you a vile falsehood?
If my grief is only pretense,
Your heart wll then decide!
You do not know what love
Is glowing in my heart!
Or else you would take pity
Upon my sins, and pains! . . .
And here prostrated at your feet,
I feel my soul abased!
Again I would want to give back to you all my trust,
And at your feet I would want to pray!

TATIANA: I weep . . .

ONEGHIN: God! These tears are more precious than riches!

Tatiana and ONEGHIN: Ah! Joy has always been with us.
Yes with us . . . yes with us! Oh! Heaven!

TATIANA: My fate is now decided.
I am married.
For pity's sake, yes, for pity's sake,
Alas! Leave me!

ONEGHIN: Leave you? Folly! leave you? Never!
(With great expression).
No, I cannot forget
Your beautiful face.
No, I cannot subdue, Oh God!
The great desire of my heart!
I would give my life to rouse in you
The love that burns in my bosom!
(Gradually picking up courage, he falls again kneeling at her feet, and he takes her hand vigorously).
I would want to suffer, and die saying:
I love you, I love you!
This is my heavenly dream,
And only this I wish for!

TATIANA: (Frightened, withdraws her hand). Oneghin, think of your esteem,
Do not break my heart in vain.

ONEGHIN: Leave you! Alas! I cannot!

TATIANA: Oneghin? For pity's sake, yes, for pity's sake!
Alas! Leave me!

ONEGHIN: Cruel one!

TATIANA: Why should I conceal it?
It s useless to lie?
Alas! I still love you!

sione fatta si abbandona sul petto di Oneghin, che cerca di abbracciarla, ma essa rientrando tosto in sè si allontana da lui).

ONEGHIN: Tu m'ami ancor?
E' sogno oppur delirio è questo?
O gioia! m'ami ancor!
Qual ti sognai t'ho ritrovata!

TATIANA: No! no! Quel che fu non torna più!
Ad altro amai giurai mia fede,
Al giuro mio non mancherò!
Fedel per sempre a lui sarò!
(Vuole allontanarsi, ma cade estenuata sopra un divano).

ONEGHIN: (con passione vivissima, inginocchiandosi). Deh! non fuggir! tu m'ami, il sento, pietà, Pietà del mio dolor.
Tu m'ami, il dolce caro accento
Destò la vita nel mio cor!
Già nel pensier del sommo Iddio
Creata fosti sol per me, lo sento,
Dio ti fece mia per la vita, per l'eternità!
Or mia tu sei! Da me lontano fuggir,
Diletta, cerch'invano.
Per me, mio ben, scordar tu dei.
La data fè, or mia tu sei.

TATIANA: (alzandosi). Oneghin!
Io giurai mia fede.

ONEGHIN: Da me lontano fuggir non puoi tu!

TATIANA: Il fato mio si compirà.
Colui che il nome, il cor mi diede
A lui fedele ognor m'avrà.
Mio Dio, tremenda è la mia croce.

(Tatiana excited by the confession she has made, leans on Oneghin's bosom. He tries to embrace her, but she withdraws rather sharply).

ONEGHIN: You still love me?
Is this a dream, or a delirium?
My love! you still love me!
I found you, just as I saw you in a dream!

TATIANA: No! no! What has gone by, will not come back!
I have sworn my troth to someone else,
I shall not break my pledge!
I will always be faithful to him!
(She tries to withdraw, but falls exhausted on the sofa).

ONEGHIN: (With great passion, keeling). Alas! do not run away!
You love me, I know it.
Have pity, have pity on my grief.
You love me, and your sweet voice,
Has roused new life in my heart!
Already in the thought of the supreme God,
You were created only for me, I feel it.
God made you mine for life, and for eternity!
Now you are mine!
My love, do not try in vain
To run away from me.
For me, my love, forget your given troth.
You are mine now.

TATIANA: (Rising). Oneghin! I have sworn my faith!

ONEGHIN: You cannot run away from me!

TATIANA: My fate will come to an end.
He who gave me his name, and heart,

Mi spezza il core il suo dolor.
Ma pur la voce dell'onor possente,
Crudele, divina solve il dubbio atroce.

ONEGHIN: La data fè, per me tu dei scordar!
Sì! Per me, mio ben, scordar tu dei
La data fè or mia tu sei!
Deh! non fuggir, pietà, pietà,
Tu m'ami ancora, tu mel dicesti,
Mia tu sei, si, mia sei tu!

TATIANA: Io m'allontano!

ONEGHIN: No, no, no! mai!

TATIANA: Mi lascia!
(Oneghin cerca di trascinar seco Tatiana, che resiste con forza, ma va perdendo energia).

ONEGHIN: O Tatiana, non fuggir!

TATIANA: No, salda è la mia fede!

ONEGHIN: Mio dolce amor, mio dolce amor!

TATIANA: Pietà di me.

ONEGHIN: Io t'amo, ahimè!

TATIANA: Per sempre addio!

ONEGHIN: Mia sei tu!
(Oneghin rimane qualche tempo colpito da disperazione).
Vergogna, orror! Si spezza or tu mio cor!
(Esce precipitosamente).

FINE.

To him I will always be true.
My God, it is terrible to be tormented.
The pain breaks my heart.
Yet the powerful voice of my self-esteem
Will solve the atrocious doubt.

ONEGHIN: For my sake, you must forget your given faith!
Yes! for me, my love, you must forget!
Now you are mine!
Alas! do not run away, have pity!
You love me yet, you told me,
You are mine, yes, you are mine!

TATIANA: I will go away!

ONEGHIN: No, no, no! Never!

TATIANA: Leave me!
(Oneghin tries to draw Tatiana toward him; she tries hard to resist him, but gradually lose energy).

ONEGHIN: Oh Tatiana! do not run away!

TATIANA: No, sound is my faith!

ONEGHIN: My sweet love! my sweet love!

TATIANA: Pity me! . . . .

ONEGHIN: I love you, Alas!

TATIANA: Goodbye forever!

ONEGHIN: You are mine!
(Oneghin remains for some time in a hopeless mood).
Shame! horror! My heart is broken!
(Withdraws quickly).

END.

Mignon (1866)

MUSIC BY AMBROISE THOMAS ■ LIBRETTO BY MICHEL CARRÉ AND JULES BARBIER

This three-act opéra-comique, set to a libretto by Michel Carré and Jules Barbier (based on Goethe's Wilhelm Meister's Lehrjahre), premiered at the Opéra-Comique in Paris on November 17, 1866. In the courtyard of a German inn, Philine and Laerte, two actors, watch as Lothario, an old, absent-minded musician, and Wilhelm Meister, a traveling student, protect Mignon, a pretty young woman, from a gypsy's bad behavior. Mignon gives them both flowers as her thanks for their efforts, and Meister gives his to Philine when she comes to meet him. Mignon tells Meister that she is the gypsy's servant and that she has no memory of her childhood. Meister decides to give the gypsy enough money to buy Mignon's freedom, for which she is very grateful. She is also envious that he seems to prefer Philine over her. In Philine's bedroom in a castle where she and Laerte are about to perform A Midsummer Night's Dream, Mignon and Meister come in while Philine is making her preparations for the play. Mignon pretends that she is asleep so that she can watch the others. When they leave, she puts on one of Philine's costumes, much to Philine's and Meister's scorn. Meister decides that he will not travel with her in order to avoid further scenes. Lothario and Mignon are together in the park, where she wishes out loud that the castle would burn down to the ground with everyone inside. The play ends and Meister and the actors come out to the park. Meister is sorry that he was mean to Mignon, and to make amends Philine sends her inside the castle to fetch the flowers which Meister had given to her (the very bouquet that Mignon had given to Meister). As she enters the conservatory, flames rise around he, but she is rescued by Meister. At the Cipriani castle, where Meister has brought both Lothario and Mignon, who has been very ill, it becomes clear that this is the castle from which Mignon was abducted when she was a small child. Lothario's absent-mindedness has left him in these surroundings, and it turns out that he is her long-lost father.

■ ACTE PREMIER	■ ACT I
Une cour de taverne allemande. A gauche, corps de bâtiment dont l'un des côtés fait face au public. Au premier étage, porte vitrée donnant sur le perron d'un escalier extérieur qui descend dans la cour. A droite, un hangar. Table et tonnelles.	The courtyard of a German Inn. To the left a wing of a building, the facade of which faces the spectator. On the first floor, a little door, with glass window, which opens upon a parapet, from which a flight of steps leads down to the court yard. To the right a penthouse, or shed. Arbors and tables, etc.
Les Bourgeois sont attablés et boivent; quelquea Garçons de taverne sont occupés à les servir.	The townspeople, etc., sit down at the table and drink. Waiters belonging to the inn, hurry to and fro, attending officiously to the wants of the customers.
CHOEUR des BOURGEOIS: Bons bourgeois et notables, Assis autour des tables, Fumons tranquillement, Et buvons en fumant! La bière brune ou blanche, Ecume dans les pots, C'est aujourd'hui dimanche, C'est le jour du repos! (LOTHARIO parait au fond sur le seuil de la taverne. Il s'avance lentement, s'arrête au milieu de la cour et chante en s'accompagnant sur un luth.)	CHORUS: Great magnates, and towns-folk small, To table now sit down, Our cigars we quickly light, Fresh zest it will give unto the drink! Fill high! the foaming beer In jugs does now approach; A festive day is this indeed, A day of mirth and joy! (Lothario appears at back, at the entrance to the inn. He advances slowly, stopping near the middle of the courtyard, when he begins to sing—accompanying himself the while on his harp.)
LOTHARIO: Fugitif et tremblant, je vais de porte en porte, Où le hasard me guide, où l'orage m'emporte! Des misérables Dieu prend soin! Elle vit! elle vit! Et je cherche sa trace! Je me repose un jour, en seul jour, et je passe! Je vais plus loin, toujours plus loin!	LOTHARIO: A lonely wanderer am I. I stray from door to door. As fate shall guide, or as the storm shall hurry me; But heaven protects the wretched with kind fostering care! She lives—I feel this in my heart; her steps I anxiously do trace,— A moment here I will repose—my journey I will then resume; Far, far I'll roam in search of her!
UN BOURGEOIS: (À ses viosins.) Oui; c'est Lothario, le vieux chanteur nomade.	1ST CIT: Listen to him, it is Lothario the wandering minstrel!
DEUXIÈME BOURGEOIS: On dit que le malheur a troublé sa raison.	2ND CIT: It is said that grief has taken his reason from him.
UN BOURGEOIS: D'où vient-il?	1ST CIT: But how came this?
DEUXIÈME BOURGEOIS: On l'ignore.	2ND CIT: The cause I know not.
CHOEUR: Allons, mon camarade! Viens boire, et laisse là ta plaintive chanson! (On fait asseoir Lothario sous la tonelle, et on lui verso à boire.)	CHORUS: (To Lothario.) Take courage, friend! Give over your singing— Come and sit down with us! (The Chorus makes Lothario sit down with them, beneath the vine-trellis. They fill a glass for him.)
CHOEUR: Bons bourgeois et notables, Assis autour des tables, Fumons tranquillement, Et buvons en fumant! La bière brune et blanche, Ecume dans les pots, C'est aujourd'hui dimanche, C'est le jour du repos! (Quelques buveurs remontent au fond et se groupent pres le seuil de la taverne.)	CHORUS: Magnates great, and towns-folk small To table now sit down, Our cigars, let's quickly light, Fresh zest it will give unto the drink! Fill high! the foaming beer In tankards now draws near. A festive day is this indeed, A day of mirth and joy! (Several of the convivial party now approach the back of the stage, and form a group near the door of the inn.)

QUELQUES PAYSANS: (Entrant.) Place, amis! Faites place aux enfants de Bohême, Aux tsiganes, aux zingari! . . .
Voici toute la bande avec Jarno lui-même,
Et son compère Zafari!
(Entrée des Bohemiens. La bande défile autour du theâtre. Un chariot couvert d'une toile grossière et chargé d'oripeaux de toutes sortes, est trainé sur le devant de la scène par deux ou trois ZINGARI en haillons. JARNO est debout sur le chariot. MIGNON, enveloppée d'un vieux manteu rayè, dort sur une botte de paille au fond du chariot. Un groupe de danseurs, le tambour de basque en maia s'elance en scène. ZAFARI saisit son violon et donne le signal de la danse. Un tambourin et un hautbois l'accompagnent.)

PHILINE: (Paraissant sur le balcon, suivie de Laerte.) Laërte, ami
Laërte, accourez au plus vite!
Voilà qui nous promet un spectacle esgageant!—
Mais ne vous moquez pas et soyez indulgent!
A vous asseoir je vous invite.
(Laerte s'asseoit sur le balcon à côté de Philine.)
DANSE BOHEMIENNE

UN GROUPE de VIEUX BORGEOIS: Ces filles de Bohême
Ont de fort jolis yeux,
Et ma femme elle-même
Ne danserait pas mieux!—

PHILINE et LAËRTE: O filles de Bohême,
Filles au coeur joyeux,
Vous aimez, on vous aime,
Et tout est pour le mieux!—

PHILINE et CHOEUR: Ah, ah, quelle danse folle!
Leur gai refrain
Nous met en train.
Ah, chantons, chantons et buvons,
Ah, chantons, chantons et buvons,
La danse folle,
S'élance et vole,
Leur joyeux refrain
Nous met tous en train!
La danse folle
S'élance et vole!
Ah, chantons!
(JARNO s'avance au milieu du théâtre et salue l'assemben. Quelques pièces de monnaie tombent à ses pieds. ZAFARI les ramasse.)

JARNO: Pour gagner maintenant toute votre indulgence,
Et vous remercier de vos dons généreux,
Mignon va vous montrer sa vive intelligence.
En dansant devant vous le fameux pas des oeufs!

CHOEUR, PHILINE et LAËRTE: Vivat! rapprochons-nous d'eux
Pour voir la danse des oeufs!

PEASANTS: Room, good friends, for the travelling players!
What ho! make way there!
See! Jarno with the flower of his tribe comes,
And Zaffi, too, is there!
(Procession of gipsies. The entire tribe march round the stage. A cart covered with an old piece of matting, and filled with various articles of household furniture, leads the way drawn by two ragged gipsies. Mignon, wrapped in a tattered mantle, is sleeping at the back of the cart on a sheaf of straw. A party of gipsies, with tambourines in their hands, now rush on the stage. Zaffi takes a violin, and gives the signal for the dance. An oboe and a tambourine serve as accompaniment.)

FILINA: (Looking from the balcony with Laertes.) Quick, my Laertes, just step this way;
See—an hour's amusement here awaits us.
Laugh not at these good people, but pray make allowance—
Let us take our places here!
(Laertes sits down by Filina's side.)
GIPSY DANCE

PEASANTS: The Gypsy girls
Have lovely eyes
My wife herself
Gives them the prize.

FILINA: O! Gypsy Girls
Just full of zest.
You love them, they love you
And all is for the best.

FILINA and CHORUS: Oh! What a mad dance
Oh! sing! hey! hey!
Let us be gay
We'll dance and drink, drink and dance
We'll dance and drink, drink and dance
A dance that's mad
Will make us glad
A whirl of joy
For girl and boy
A dance that's mad
Will make us glad.
(Jarno advances into the middle of the stage, and salutes the bystanders, who throw to him coins, which Zaffi picks up.)

JARNO: Gentlemen, for so much kindness in return,
And just to show my sense of obligation,
Mignon a sample of her skill shall give you;
Her far-famed "egg dance"
She shall now perform!

CHORUS, FILINA and LAERTES: Faith, we even awhile will tarry,
This far-famed dance to see!

JARNO: (Se tourant vers Zafari.)
Toi, Zafari, prépare
Ton concerto le plus savant!—
(Aux autres Zingari.)
Couvrez le sol d'un tapis rare!—
(S'approchant du chariot et réveillant Mignon.)
Et toi, Mignon, debout! en avant! en avant!
(Zafari prélude sur son violon. Une vielle Zingara couvre le sol d'un lambeau de tapis. Les oeufs y sont déposés par un enfant. MIGNON s'éville à la voix de JARNO et s'avance au milieu du cercle des curieux. Elle tient un bouquet de fleurs sauvages à la main et semble sortir d'un rêve.)

PHILINE: (À Jarno, du haut du balcon.) Holà! mon cher monsieur, vous palit-il de nous dire.
Quel est ce pauvre enfant qui semble vous maudire
De l'avoir de la sorte éveillé sans facon?—
Est-ce une fille? est-ce un garçon?—

JARNO: Ni l'unni l'autre, belle dame,
Ni garçon, ni fille, ni femme.

PHILINE: Qu'est-ce donc alors?

JARNO: (Ecartant le manteau qui couvre Mignon.) C'est Mignon!
(Philine et le Choeur éclatent de rire.)

MIGNON: (À part.) Ces yeux fixés moi! . . . Ce rire qui m'outrage! . . .
Retrouve ta fierté, mon coeur, et ton courage!

JARNO: Allons, saute, Mignon!

MIGNON: (Frappant le terre de son pied nu.)
Non, non, non, non!
Je brave ta menace!
De t'obéir à la fin je suis lasse!

JARNO: Tu refuses! (Se tourant vers les Zingara.)
Holà! vous autres, mon bâton!
Danse, Mignon!
Méchant démon!
Ou mon bâton
Saura te mettre à la raison!

MIGNON: Non, non, non, non, non, non!

LOTHARIO: (Courant à Mignon qu'il étreint dans ses bras.) Reprenda courage!
Viens, pauvre enfant,
Contre sa rage
Je te déferi.

JARNO: (Turning to Zaffi.) And now, good Zaffi, quick prepare,
Thy choicest song to sing;
(Addressing himself to some of the Gipsies.)
Our beauteous piece of carpet,
On the ground now place—
(Approaching the cart and shaking Mignon.)
Up, up, Mignon, to work.
(Zaffi preludes on his violin. An old Gipsy lays on the ground a faded piece of worn out carpet, while a boy places on it several eggs. Mignon, on hearing Jarno's voice, awakes and enters the circle formed by the chorus. She holds in her hand, a bouquet of wild flowers.)

FILINA: (To Jarno, from the balcony.) What ho! good sir, permit me to inquire,
What hapless being is that just waking up?
Say, is it a girl, or strippling lad?

JARNO: It is neither one nor other, lady—
It is neither woman, girl, nor boy.

FILINA: (Laughing.) What is it then I pray?

JARNO: (Raising the mantle which covers the young Gipsy.) It is—Mignon!
(Filina and the chorus laugh heartily.)

MIGNON: (Aside.) Why are all eyes thus fixed on me?
Why laugh they thus—surely to insult and mock me!
O heart! resume your wonted strength and courage!

JARNO: Quick, Mignon, arouse yourself! dance!

MIGNON: (Stamping with her foot on the ground.) Cease your rude tone!
It's time I should speak out; I am weary of doing your biding!

JARNO: What! you refuse!
(Turning to the Gipsies.)
My friends, my stick just pass me.
Dance, I say.
Then, faith, I'll soon to reason bring you!

MIGNON: No, no!
(Raises stick in a menacing attitude; as he does so Lothario rushes to Mignon and encircles her with his arms as though to protect her.)

LOTHARIO: (To Mignon.) Take heart I pray,
Your shield I'll be!
His rage evade—
Fly quickly here!

JARNO: (Avec colère.) Au diable! au diable!
Vil misérable!
(Il repousse violemment Lothario.)
Danse, Mignon!
Méchant démon!
Ou mon bâton
Saura te mettre à la raison!

MIGNON: Non, non, non, non, non, non!
(Jarno lève son bâton sur Mignon. Entre Wilhelm en habit de voyage, suivi d'un valet qui porte sa valise et son manteau.)

WILHELM: (S'élançant au secours de Mignon et retenant le bras de JARNO.) Holà! coquin! arrête, ou ton heure est venue!

JARNO: Hein? Plâit-il?

WILHELM: (Tirant un pistolet de sa poche.) Si tu fais un seul pas je te tue!

JARNO: C'est bon! Je me tiens coi!
(D'un ton lamentable.)
Mais je suis ruiné!
Qui de vous me paira ma recette perdue?

PHILINE: (Sur le balcon, jetant sa bourse à Jarno.) Tiens donc!
Prends et tais-toi!

MIGNON: (Partageant son bouquet entre Wilhelm et Lothario.)
A vous ces fleurs, amis, qui m'aves defendue!—

WILHELM: Qui diantre aurait pu prévoir
Cette bizarre aventure!
Mon coeur, pauvre créature,
M'a seul dicté mon devoir!

PHILINE: (À part.) Quel est, je veux le savoir,
Ce beau coureur d'aventure?
Il nous cache sa figure,
Et n'a pas l'air de nous voir.

MIGNON: (Priant, à l'écart.) O Vierge, mon seul espoir, Protége ta créature!
Je me courbe sans murmure
Devant ton divin pouvoir!

CHOEUR: (À Jarno.) Nous reviendrons tous vous voir.
Tant que le dimanche dure,
On chemine à l'aventure
Et l'on vient danser le soir.

JARNO: Messieurs, revenez-nous voir,
Oubliez cette aventure,
Vous serez, je vous le jure,
Très-contents de nous ce soir.

JARNO: (Furiously to Lothario.)
You wretched meddler,
Come here!
(Pushes back Lothario violently, and again threatens Mignon.)
Dance, Mignon,
Dance, I say, or—
Then quickly I'll to reason bring you!

MIGNON: No, no!
(He again raises his stick over Mignon, Enter Wilhelm, who appears to have come off a journey. A servant, who carries his portmanteau, stands behind him.)

WILHELM: (Hurrying to Mignon's assistance, and arresting JARNO's arm.) Ruffian, hold! or meet your death!

JARNO: Eh? pray what do you mean?

WILHELM: (Producing a pistol.)
Another word, and through your brains
I'll send a bullet!

JARNO: (Alarmed.) You mean it? then quiet I'll remain
(In a piteous tone.)
I'm ruined quite—I am indeed!
Who will repay me for the loss I thus endure?

FILINA: (Throwing him a purse from the balcony.) That I will.
Take this purse and hold your tongue,
Take yourself away with all convenient speed!

MIGNON: (Dividing her nosegay into two halves, one of which she gives to Wilhelm, and the other to Lothario.) Kind friends, accept this humble token of my gratitude.

WILHELM: So strange an occurrence
Who ever could forsee?
Nature's own instinct
My steps did hither bend.

FILINA: (To Laertes.) Tell me, who is that gentleman,
Of manners so urbane?
He does not seem to see us
And does himself conceal
From where he comes and where he goes
I would wish to know.

MIGNON: (Who has withdrawn a few paces—praying.) Holy Virgin Mary,
Have mercy on an innocent maid,
Who always humbly seeks
Thy gracious will to do.

CHORUS: (To Jarno.) We'll be back to see you again.
For adventure we're out
Till the sun's put to rout
But we'll return to dance then.

JARNO:
Folks, come back tonight.
Please forget this incident.
You will be, I will bet
Happy and thrilled with delight.

LAËRTE: (À Philine.) Ce beau garçon à l'oeil noir,
Ce beau coureur d'aventure
Quel est-il? ah! je le jure,
Vous brûlez de le savoir.

LOTHARIO: (Immobile et l'oeil fixe, touchant les cordes de sa harpe.) Sous le voile obscur du soir, Et sous la verte ramure,
Un homme à la lourde armure
Arrête son coursier noir!
(Les Bourgeois sortent par le fond. Jarno et les Bohemiens se retirent dans le hangar. MIGNON les suit et LOTHARIO s'éloigne lentement. PHILINE parle bas à LAERTE en lui montrant WILHELM du doigt. Elle rentre chez elle en riant et LAERTE descend dans la cour par l'escalier extérieur.)

LAËRTE: (S'approchant pour saluer Wilhelm.) Monsieur—

WILHELM: (Lui rendant son salut.) Monsieur—

LAËRTE: Monsieur, souffrez qu'on vous complimente sur la façon vraiment chevaleresque don vous avez secouru cette petite bohémienne.

WILHELM: Ce que j'ai fait, monsieur, tout autre l'eût fait autant.

LAËRTE: Ce n'est pas l'avis de Philine....
La dame du balcon a nom Philine; je me nomme Laërte....
O désastre! O ruine d'une troupe comique aujoud'hui sans emploi.
Vous voyez en nous deux les débris misérables!
Philine attend un sort meilleur, et moi j'envoie avec bonheur notre métier à tous les diables!

WILHELM: Vous plâit-il, cher monsieur, de partager cette bouteille?

LAËRTE: Velontiers, monsieur!

WILHELM: Un verre encor!
(À la Servante qui prépare la table.)
(A Laerte.)
Wilhelm Meister le fils d'un honnête bourgeois de Vienne.
(Ils boivent.)

LAËRTE: (Déclamant.) J'aime votre gaité, j'aime votre jeune âme.

WILHELM: (Souriant.) Vous courtisez pourtant de fort près la dame du balcon!

LAERTES: (To Filina.) This beautiful black-eyed man Soldier of fortune, beyond doubt.
Who is he? Oh! You'll find out
And meet him as soon as you can.

LOTHARIO: (Who continues motionless, his eye fied on vacancy, his hand the while rambling over the chords of his harp.) "The shades of even just began to fall,
When through the forest dark and drear,
A knight all clad in steel of proof
Did slowly wend his way."
(Townsfolk, etc., exeunt at back. Jarno and his comrades retire beneath the shed—Mignon follows them. Lothario slowly withdraws. Filina speaks aside to Laertes, pointing the while to Wilhelm. She immediate afterwards enters her room, while Laertes descends into the court by the outer staircase.)

LAERTES: (Saluting Wilhelm.) Sir!—

WILHELM: (Returning the salutation.) Sir!—

LAERTES: Be not offended if I sing your praises;
The succor you extended to that helpless maid,
Was truly worthy of a knight of yore.

WILHELM: (Carelessly.) Who would not have done the same?

LAERTES: Exactly; but this opinion Filina does not share—
Filina is the lady who just now sat in yonder balcony,
While men call me—Laertes!
(Declaiming with comic emphasis.)
Alas! misfortune! indeed, I may say, ruin!
Of a luckless troupe of actors,
On whom destiny never did smile,
You see in us the helpless remnant!
Filina hopes for a more prosperous turn on Fortune's wheel,
While I, of my artistic calling well weary,
Curse in my heart, the Tragic Muse!

WILHELM: (Courteously.) A flagon of good wine,
I trust you'll not refuse?

LAERTES: Right glad, sir.

WILHELM: (To the waiter.) Another glass.
Wilhelm Meister is my name. I hail from Vienna.

LAERTES: I like your youth, I like your spirit.

WILHELM: And yet, I saw you flirting
With a fair lady in that balcony.

LAËRTE: Qui, l'aimable Philine? Nous nous connaissons beaucoup trop pour nous aimer. Folle, vaine comme pas une, Plus perfide que la fortune, Et plus changeante que la lune, C'est grace à son esprit et grace à sa beauté Le plus charmant démon! Buvona à sa santé! (Ils trinquent et boivent. Philine descend l'escalier pendant les dernières paroles de LAERTE.)	LAERTES: What! with Filina? The gods forbid! We know each other far too well, To feel a mutual love! She's flighty, vain, cantankerous, astute, Fickle as Fortune, and more changeable Than is the moon! And yet her beauty rare, Inflames all hearts with love. Let's drink her health! (Raises his glass.) (Filina who has overheard this conversation from the window quickly descends the staircase.)
PHILINE: Eh! quoi! mon cher Laërte, en vidant votre verre, N'ajouterez-vous rien à ce portrait charmant ant?	FILINA: So, sir! now you've finished the portrait, Why not place it in a frame?
WILHELM: (Saluant Philine.) Il vous juge en ami sévere, Et vos beaux yeux disent qu'il ment.	WILHELM: (Bowing.) He treats you somewhat harshly I must own, But those bright eyes the slander right soon dispel.
PHILINE: Je vous sais gré du compliment.	FILINA: Grateful, indeed, am I, for so well-turned a compliment.
WILHELM: (À part.) Que de grâces et de charmes! Quels regards pleins de feu! Les soupirs et les larmes Sont ici hors de jue.	WILHELM: (Aside.) What beauty—what grace, How frank is her mien, I fear that my sighs. Her heart never will win!
PHILINE: (À part.) Essayons de nos charmes Pour nous venger un peu, Me voilà sous les armes, Le reste n'est qu'un jeu.	FILINA: (Aside.) The most I'll make now of my charms, Resolved am I that he shall love me; My beauty's power I know full well, No youthful heart can ever resist me.
LAËRTE: (Riant.) La voilà sous les armes, Nous allons voir beau jeu! Devant de pareils charmes Son coeur va prendre feu! Permettez, sans plus de façon, Qu'on vous présente l'un à l'autre. (Présentant Wilhelm à Philine.) Monsieur Wilhelm Meister, un aimable garçon, Qui vous offre son coeur en échange du vôtre. (Présentant Philine à Wilhelm.) La signora Philine, un ange en falbala, qui vous trouve charmant et voudrait vous le dire. (À Philine.) Décochez à monsieur votre plus doux sourire. (À Wilhelm.) Offrez votre bouquet à madame!— (Il prend le bouquet et le donne à Philine.)	LAERTES: (Aside.) The most she'll make now of her charms, Resolved is she the youth shall love her; Her blandishments I know full well, No youthful heart can ever resist her. But, without further ceremony, Each to the other I will introduce! (Presenting Wilhelm to Filina.) The most excellent Signor Wilhelm, a gentleman most worthy, Who, in exchange for yours, his heart would fain present you! (Introducing Filina to Wilhelm.) Mistress Filina, an actress of merit and renown, who is much taken with you, and, indeed, desires to let you known it; (Aside to Filina.) A loving glance just cast his way. (Aside to Wilhelm.) Present this nosegay to yon lady fair— So! (Takes nosegay and gives it to Filina.)
WILHELM: (À part.) Que de grâce et de charmes! Quels regards pleins de feu! Les soupirs et les larmes Sont ici hors de jeu!	WILHELM: (Aside.) What beauty, what grace, How enchanting each glance. I fear that my sighs Her heart never will win.
PHILINE: (À part.) Essayons de nos charmes Pour nous venger un peu, etc.	FILINA: (Aside.) The most I'll make now of my charms, Resolved am I that he shall love me, etc.
LAËRTE: (Riant) La belle est sous les armes, Nous allons voir beau jeu!	LAERTES: (Aside.) All her wiles she brings to bear, Resolved is she the youth shall love her, etc.
PHILINE: (À Wilhelm.) De mon ami, Monsieur, excusez les folies. (À Laerte.) Votre bras!	FILINA: Excuse, I pray, the giddy-pated fellow; (To Laertes.) Your arm now give me!
LAËRTE: (À Wilhelm.) Devons-nous vous retrouver ici?	LAERTES: (To Wilhelm.) I trust we soon may meet again;
PHILINE: (Riant.) Comment! quand on m'a vue est-ce qu'on fuit ainsi?	FILINA: (To Laertes smiling.) Can he who once has seen me, Take his departure quite so soon?
LAËRTE: On ferait bien de fuir!	LAERTES: It, perhaps might prove the wiser plan;
PHILINE: La réponse est polie! (À part.) Impertinent!	FILINA: In sooth, the observation is gallant.
LAËRTE: (Bas.) Coquette! (À Wilhelm.) Monsieur! (Ils sortent.)	LAERTES: (Aside.) A little puss is she. (To Wilhelm curtseying.) FILINA: Sir, I take my leave. (Exit with Laertes.)
WILHELM: (Gaiement.) Voilà, pardieu! une charmante fille et Laërte a beau dire, il n'est pas temps encore de nous dire un éternal adieu.	WILHELM: A pretty girl, Her friend may say just what he pleases, But i'll not leave her yet.
MIGNON: (Sortent.) Il est seul!—	MIGNON: (Coming from under the shed. Aside.) Ah! he's alone—
WILHELM: (Apercevant Mignon.) Ah! c'est toi! Que me veux-tu?	WILHELM: What is it you? What would you now?
MIGNON: Le maitre dort. Donne ta main, donne et mille fois merci!	MIGNON: (Timidly.) My master sleeps—give me your hand, I fain would kiss it.
WILHELM: Demain, mon pauvre enfant je serai loin d'ici, Et ton supplice va renâitre.	WILHELM: Tomorrow, my poor child, I shall be far from you, No further aid can I ever lend you.
MIGNON: Demain, dis-tu? Qui sait où nous serons demain. L'avenir est à Dieu! le temps est dans sa main.	MIGNON: Tomorrow? Who knows where we shall be tomorrow? It is known alone to God, who rules this vast world!
WILHELM: Quel est ton nom?	WILHELM: What's your name?
MIGNON: Ils m'appellent Mignon, Je n'ai pas d'autre nom.	MIGNON: They call me Mignon I have no other name.
WILHELM: Quel âge as-tu?	WILHELM: How old are you?
MIGNON: Les bois ont reverdi, les fleurs se sont fanées, Personne n'a pris soin de compter mes années.	MIGNON: Summers come and summers go but No one counted my summers for me.
WILHELM: Dis-moi de quelles plages lointaines ton âme a gardé le souvenir, Et si ma main brisait tes chaines, Vers quels pays tu voudrais revenir?	WILHELM: But tell me! of the scenes which, when a child, you left—have you no recollection? Were I to break your chains, and set you free, To what beloved spot would you wend your way?
Connaistu le pays oû fleurit l'oranger, Le pays des fruits d'or et des roses vermeilles, Où la brise est plus douce et l'oiseau plus léger, Où dans toute saison butinent les abeilles? Où rayonne et sourit,	Do you know the country, where the orange tree flowers? the land of golden fruit; and of vermilion roses— Where the breeze is sweeter, and the birds lighter— Where during every season, the bees gath-comme un bien-fait de Dieu, Un éternel printemps sous un ciel toujours bleu?

Hélas! que ne puis-je te suivre Vera ce rivage heureux d'où le sort m'exila! C'est là que in je voudrais vivre, Aimer et mourir!—c'est là!
Connais-tu la maison où l'on m'attend là bas? La salle aux lambris d'or où des hommes de marbre M'appellent dans la nuit en me tendant les bras, Et la cour où l'on danse à l'ombre d'un grand arbre? Et le lac transparent où glissent sur les eaux Mille bateaux légers pareils à des oiseaux—
Helas! que ne puis-je te suivre Vers ce rivage heureux d'où le sort m'exila! C'est là que in je voudrais vivre, Aimer et mourir!—c'est là!

WILHELM: Ce pays enchanté dont tu parles, n'est-ce pas l'Italie?

MIGNON: (Rêveuse.) Je ne sais—

WILHELM: (À part.) Etrange créature!

JARNO: (Qui entre.) Ah! ah! Il parâit que l'enfant vous plâit—mon prince, vous voulez me la débaucher!—

WILHELM: (Avec colère.) Sur ma vie, n'ajoute pas un mot!

JARNO: Bon, je ne dis plus rien. Mais puisque votre coeur s'interesse à la belle, remboursez-moi ce qu'elle m'a coûte, et je renounce à tous mes droits sur elles!

WILHELM: Viens done!
(Regardant Mignon avec intéret.)
Je veux lui rendre au moins sa liberté!
(Il sort avec Jarno.)

MIGNON: (À Lothario qui entre.)
Libre! libre! Est-ce vrai?—Viens partager ma joie!
Toi qui m'as comme lui
Defendue aujourd'hui!
Pour consoler Mignon c'est dieu qui vous envoie!

LOTHARIO: Je te cherchais pour te faire mes adieux.
J'ai voulu te voir avant de partir.

MIGNON: Ou vas-tu?

LOTHARIO: (Levant les bras vers le ciel.) Déjà les hirondelles volent vers le midi.
Moi, je pars avec elles.

MIGNON: Que ne puis-je à travers l'espace fuir aussi.
Donne-moi ton luth!

er nectar Where radiates and smiles, like an act of God, An eternal spring under a sky that's always blue?
Alas, but I cannot follow you to the happy shore from which I've been exiled! It is there that I wish to live, love & die, It's there. Do you know the house, where they wait for me there? The room is paneled in gold, where the men of marble Call my name in the night, and stretch their arms out to me, And the courtyard where they dance under the canopy of a huge tree? And the transparent lake where, gliding on the water, Are a thousand boats that seem like birds.
Alas, but I cannot follow you to the happy shore from which I've been exiled! It is there that I wish to live, love & die, It's there.

WILHELM: The enchanted soil you speak of, must surely Italy be?

MIGNON: Alas! I cannot say.

WILHELM: (Aside.) A strange creature this!

JARNO: (Issuing from the pent-house and running toward MIGNON, To WILHELM, sarcastically.) Oho! the damsel pleases you, it seems!
You would like to have her.
(Seizing him by the collar.)

WILHELM: Scoundrel!
Let but another word escape you—

JARNO: Nothing will I say—but still—
Since in the young lady—a—a—an interest you take,
Just hand to me the sum I gave for her,
And my claim on her, to you, I'll cede.

WILHELM: Come then—resolved am I
To free her from her bonds!
(Enters the inn with Jarno.)

MIGNON: (Bounding with joy.)
Free! Free!
And is it really true?
(Perceiving Lothario, who issues from the pent-house.) Come and share with me my joy,
Come and share with me my joy,
You who, but now, so nobly did defend me!
As consolation to my tortured soul
Heaven has surely sent you.

LOTHARIO: I come my leave to take,
Before I go;

MIGNON: And where will you go?

LOTHARIO: (Pointing to the sky.)
The swallows to the south do fly;
I'll go there with them!

MIGNON: Ah! why may I not fly there, too?
Reach me your harp!

LOTHARIO: Le voici!

MIGNON: Légères hirondelles, Oiseaux bénis de Dieu, Ouvrez, ouvrez vos ailes, Envolez-vous! Adieu! Ouvrez, ouvrez vos ailes! Envolez-vous! Adieu!

LOTHARIO: Le vieux luth s'éveille, Sous ses jeunes doigts Et semble, o merveille! Répondre à sa voix.

MIGNON: Légères hirondelles, Ouvrez, ouvrez vos ailes, Fuyez vers la lumière, vers l'horizon vermeil! Heureuse la première, Heureuse la première, Quo reverra demain le pays du soleil! Qui reverra demain le pays du soleil!
(Mignon et Lothario sortent. Philine, entre en riant avec FREDERIC.)

PHILINE: Ah, ah, ah, ah, ah!
Comment? C'est vous?

FRÉDÉRIC: (s'époussetant avec sa cravache.) Oui, oui, riez! je suis un sot
De créver mon cheval de vous revoir plus tôt!

PHILINE: (Se moquant.) Ne voulez-vous pas que je pleure?

FRÉDÉRIC: Ah, vous me faites repentir d'etre venu!—

PHILINE: Vous pouvez repartir,
Vous nous reviendrez tout à l'heure.

WILHELM: (Qui entre avec Jarno, à ce dernier.)
Marché conclu! Mignon est libra.

PHILINE: Qu'entends-je là! Vous avez rachefé Mignon?

FRÉDÉRIC: Hein? d'ou sort celui-là!

PHILINE: (Presentant Frederic.)
Monsieur Meister, je vous présente
Le jeune Frédéric, un petit écolier
Qui malgré moi s'est fair mon chevalier. (Présentant Wilhelm à Frederic.) Monsieur Wilhelm Meister, un homme que peutêtre
Vous aimerez un jour.

LAËRTE: (Au dehors.) Philine! Philine!

PHILINE: Ah, voici Laërte!

LAËRTE: (À Philine, lui offrant use lettre.) Cette lettre est pour vous.

PHILINE: Lisez, lisez!

LAËRTE: (Lisant.) Ma toute belle,
Pour fêter dignement et de facon nouvelle
Le passage du Prince Ulric de Tiffembourg, Je vous attends ainsi que Laërte et

LOTHARIO: It's here!

MIGNON: (Accompanying herself on the harp.) Oh swallows gay and blithe, joy of every land, Unfold your gentle wings, speed quickly on your way! Unfold your gentle wings, speed quickly on your way, LOTHARIO: The antiquated harp touched by her gentle hand A melancholy sound mysteriously gives forth, Ah yes, MIGNON: blithe and gentle swallows. Unfold your nimble wings, Quick, hasten to the land where winter never reigns, Thrice happy bird, thrice happy bird, who first the wished-for goal right joyously shall reach, Who first the wished-for goal right joyously shall reach.

(They both withdraw beneath the pent-house.)

FILINA: (Laughing mockingly at Frederic, who follows her, shaking the dust from his clothes.)
What! is it you?

FREDERIC: You laugh, do you? a madman was I truly
To kill my horse by racing after you!

FILINA: (Laughing. You'd like me perhaps, to cry?

FREDERIC: I vow, I'm sorry now I came!

FILINA: (Aggravatingly.) You can return whenever you please;
You'll soon come back again!

WILHELM: (To Jarno at the door of the Inn.) It is understood then—Mignon is free!

FILINA: (To Wilhelm.) Hear I aright?
Has Mignon been re-purchased from her master?

FREDERIC: (Aside, and jealously.) From where comes that gentlemen, I pray?

FILINA: (Introducing Frederic to Wilhelm.) Mr. Meister,
Permit me to introduce my young friend Frederick,
Who, whether I will or no,
My cavalier undertakes to be.
(Presenting Wilhelm to Frederic)
Wilhelm Meister this—I think you'll like him.

LAERTES: (Outside, calling.) Filina.

FILINA: (Turning round.) Here is Laertes.

LAERTES: (Turning to Filina.)
This letter is addressed to you;

FILINA: Read it aloud.

LAERTES: (Reading.) "Beauteous goddess!
Wishing right worthily to celebrate
The Prince Ulrico Tieflenbach's arrival,
I hope to see you, with your friends,

les autres,
En mon castel, avant la fin du jour—
Je comte bien, mon coeur, que vous serez des notres;
Vous devinez mon tendre espoir—
Baron de Rosemberg.

FRÉDÉRIC: Mon oncle!

PHILINE: Hein? Comment? le Baron est votre oncle?

FRÉDÉRIC: Hélas! oui!

PHILINE: C'est charmant!

FRÉDÉRIC: Vous acceptez son offre?

PHILINE: Avec empressement!
(A Wilhelm.)
Vous, monsieur, s'il vous plait prendre part à la fête,
Vous jouerez parmi nous le rôle de poëte
Si vous venez, d'ailleurs, vous me ferez plaisir.

WILHELM: Maudit Baron! Maudit message!
Maudite coquette! Au revoir, Laërte
(Se tournant vers Wilhelm.)
Vous, Monsieur!

WILHELM: Plait-il?

LAËRTE: Soyez plus sage
Que ce jeune étourneau qui s'attache à nos pas.
Suivez votre chemin. Partez et bon voyage.

MIGNON: (Accourant vers Wilhelm.) Me voici! tu m'as rachetée,
A ton gré dispose de moi!

WILHELM: Je sais en cette ville, où le sort t'a jetée
D'honnêtes gens chez qui tu bien traitée.

MIGNON: (Vivement.) Pourquoi me séparer de toi!

WILHELM: (Souriant.) Je ne puis t-emmener avec moi, pauvre fille!
Et m'imposer les soins d'un père de famille

MIGNON: Ne peux-tu m'habiller comme un jeune garçon
Et me laisser porter ta livrée!—

(At whose head I trust Laertes to behold!)
At this my castle, before day declines;
I trust the invitation will be pleasing to you.
You well know the flame
Which burns within my tender heart;
"Baron Rosenberg."

FREDERIC: (Surprised.) Heavens, my uncle!

FILINA: What! is the baron your uncle?

FREDERIC: Alas! too much my uncle!

FILINA: (Laughing.) A pretty coincidence!

FREDERIC: Do you accept the invitation?

FILINA: With pleasure!
(Turning to Wilhelm.) And you sir,
Should it please you to take part in the festivity,
Pray come; It will give me pleasure I assure you;
To account for your presence,
We'll say you are stock author to the company.
(She ascends the outer staircase to her room, the door of which she shuts.)

FREDERIC: (Enraged.) O thrice accursed epistle!
O, day of woe! unnatural, heartless girl!
(To Laertes, giving him his hand.)
Farewell, Laertes!
(To Wilhelm—turning at the same time his back to him, in a threatening tone.)
As for you, sir—

WILHELM: Well! what now?

LAERTES: (To Wilhelm.) Be wiser than that booby
Take my advice, nor linger here.
Set out at once! a pleasant journey to you!
(Shakes his hand and enters inn.)

MIGNON: Stranger! you did purchase me—
Dispose of me, even as you will.

WILHELM: In this very town, to which Fate has brought you,
There lives an aged relative of mine,
Who, to her home, will gladly welcome you.

MIGNON: Must I then part from you?

WILHELM: My child, you can not dwell with me;
Ill could I the part perform,
Of father!

MIGNON: Could I not disguise myself,
And as your servant, travel with you?

WILHELM: (Lui prenant les mains.) A quoi bon?

MIGNON: (Avec un élan passionné.) Envers qui me délivre
Je voulais m'acquitter!
J'étais prête à te suivre
Pour ne plus te quitter!

WILHELM: Des mains de ce sauvage
Libre pour un peu d'or,
Quel nouvel esclavage
Veux-tu subir encor?

MIGNON: (Tristement.) C'est bien!— puisque ta main sans pitié me repousse, (Montrant Lothario qui parait sur le seuill de du hangar) Je pars avec lui!—

LOTHARIO: (Accourant vers Mignon et l'entourant de ses bras)
Viens! La libre vie est douce!
A l'ombre des granda bois sous le ciel étoilé,
Nous trouverons un lit de fougère et de mousse
Et tu partageras le pain de l'exile!
(Il veut entrainer Mignon.)

WILHELM: (L'arrêtant.) Non! pauvre enfant! pour toi l'avenir m'épouvante
Jeune fille ou garçon, serviteur ou servante
Reste avec moi si tu le veux!
Le sort en est jeté! Je me rends à tes voeux!

MIGNON: (Baisant la main de Wilhelm avec transport.) Envers qui me délivre
Je pourrai m'acquitter!
Je suis prête à te suivre
Pour ne plus te quitter!

WILHELM: (Lui souriant avec bonté.) L'ami qui te délivre
Ne doit plus te quitter!
Libre à toi de me suivre;
Il faut te contenter.

LOTHARIO: (À part, retombant dans son extase habituelle.) Dieu bon! laissez-moi vivre,
?Espérer et chanter!
(Les Comediens envahissent la cour de l'auberge. Ils sont en habits de voyage et portent sur l'épaule ou à la main des paquets et des valises qui contiennent leurs hardes de théâtre.)

CHOEUR des COMÉDIENS: En route, amis, plions bagage!
La chance nous sourit enfin!
Que la gaîté soit du voyage,
Au diantre la soif et la faim!
Oublions nos repas d'auberge,
Et saluons, chapeau levé,
Ce vieux castel où l'on héberge
Les histrions sur le pavé!

WILHELM: (Taking her hands.)
And what could you do then?

MIGNON: With love and gratitude,
My heart is filled.
to follow you, O master mine,
Indeed were happiness to me!

WILHELM: But just released for trifling sum,
From tyrant harsh and stern,
Would you renounce your liberty again?
And be a slave once more?

MIGNON: (Sadly.) Well since you will not hear my prayers, (Pointing to Lothario, who issues from under the pent-house.)
I'll even depart with him!

LOTHARIO: (Rushing to Mignon, and encircling her with his arms.)
Come! follow my footsteps:
Through by-paths lone and wild,
Far from this spot, a home of twigs and leaves we'll seek Ah! follow my footsteps
My destiny pray share!
(Attempts to draw Mignon with him.)

WILHELM: (Stopping her.) No, stay, fair maiden! for your future I now fear!
Disguise yourself as page, or lackey, as you will,
But at least remain with me,
The stars have willed it so. Come! all care I'll take of you!

MIGNON: (Kissing Wilhelm's hand with rapture.) With love and gratitude
My heart bounds
O master mine,
I am ready to follow you!

WILHELM: (With a kindly smile.)
My heart is deeply touched
With tender pity;
A noble impulse it must surely be,
That each pulse causes it to throb.

LOTHARIO: (Aside, as though his mind were again wandering.)
Yield the maid to me,
And bless me for always.
(The actors beset the door of the inn. They are in traveling clothes; they all carry, on their shoulders, or in their hands bundles, packages, etc.)

CHORUS: On foot, my friends! away! away!
On us Dame Fortune smiles serene;
Joy accompanies our voyage,
Leaving hunger and thirst behind.
From our heads—our hats—let's take,
We lowly bow to the ground;
With joyous shouts we'll gaily hail
The generous host who entertains the merry players!

LAËRTE: (Au Laquais.) Nous vous suivons.
(Aux Garcons d'auberge, qui portent ses hardes et celles de PHILINE.)
Marchez devant, vous autres!
(Aux Comediens.)
Je vous précède, amis, pour vous mieux recevoir!
Un splendide festin vous attendra ce soir!

LES COMÉDIENS: Vivat!

À WILHELM: Et vous, monsieur, n'êtes-vous pas des nôtres? Grâce au galant seigneur Qui, pour nous faire honneur, Nous prête son carrosse, Nous allons voyager, Et nous faire héberger, Comme en un jour de noce! Je vous dis au revoir!

WILHELM: (Vous me verrez ce soir! Je serai de la fête!) Au revoir, au revoir!
(Elle montre à Wilhelm le bouquet qu'elle a reçu de lui. MIGNON, qui reparaît, son paquet à la main s'approche vivement et reconnait les fleurs qu'elle a données à WILHELM.)

MIGNON: (À part.) Mon bouquet!

WILHELM: (À Mignon.) Qu'as-tu donc?

PHILINE: (Bas.) Il m'adore!

LAËRTE: (Bas.) Il est pris!

MIGNON: (Montrant Lothario.)
Vois, de mes pauvres fleurs il n'a point fait mépris?
Il n'a pas rejeté mon bouquet, lui

WILHELM: (Bas en souriant.) Pardonne!
Je ne l'ai pas offert . . . on me l'a prix.

MIGNON: C'est bien! . . . emmène-moi! . . . Je suiviens! . . . Ordonne!
(Aux Bohemiens.)
Vous dont j'ai partage
La honte et la misère,
Adieu! . . .
(A L'ENFANT, en lui passant une médaille)
Toi, pauvre enfant, sois un jour ta protége
Par cette humble médaille!
(A Jarno.)
Et toi, dont la colère!
M'a si souvent fait peur . . . hélas!
Adieu? Mignon ne t'en veut pas!

LES COMÉDIENS: (Au fond.) Adieu, Philine, et bon voyage!
Adieu, la belle, et bon voyage.
Adieu, Mignon, et bon voyage!

LES COMÉDIENS: En route, amis! plions bagage
La chance nous sourit enfin!
Que la gaîté soit du voyage!

LAERTES: (To the groom.) We follow you!
(To the waiters who carry his luggage, and that of Filina.)
(To the actors.)
And you my friends, pray, quick precede us!
I start at once; I must be there first,
To get the supper ready!

ACTORS: Huzza!

FIL. TO WILHELM: You'll come with us, I trust, sir, Thanks for the politeness of him who so kindly sends his carriage for us, Side by side we may most pleasantly travel, We'll shortly meet again.

WILHELM: (Kissing the hand of Fil:) I fain would join the throng, And shall eagerly look for you. We shall meet, we shall soon meet again.
(Filina shows to Wilhelm the bouquet which she, just now, received from him. Mignon, who, at this moment enters with a little bundle in her hand, at once recognizes the flowers which she had given to Wilhelm.)

MIGNON: (Aside.) My flowers!

WILHELM: (To Mignon.) What ails you?

FILINA: (Aside to Laertes, laughing.) He love me!

LAERTES: (Aside, laughing.) He's trapped—poor fellow!

MIGNON: (To Wilhelm—pointing to Lothario.) See! my poor flowers, he has not despised, like you!
His bouquet he has not given away!

WILHELM: (Aside to Mignon, smiling.) I did not give it, child—it was stolen from me!

MIGNON: But let's away, I ready am to follow you,
(To the Gipsies.)
Oh, you with whom both shame and misery I've shared,—farewell!
(To a lad among the tribe, attaching a medal to his neck.)
Poor boy! may this medallion
One day prove your safeguard!
(To Jarno.)
And you who often did wrongfully ill use me,
I bid you, too, adieu!

GIPSIES: Farewell! take heart, Mignon!
Farewell, Filina!
A prosperous journey we do wish you.

CHORUS: Quick, quick my friends, now let's away!
Dame Fortune smiles on us, serene;
Joy, once more, our hearts will

Au diantre la soif et la faim!
(WILHELM fait un dernier signe d'adieu à Philine et les COMEDIENS et les COMEDIENNES se disposent à partir. LOTHARIO s'asseoit pensif sur le devant de la scène. Mignon rête au milieu du théâtre, les yeux fixés sur WILHELM.)

■ ACTE DEUXIÈME

SCÈNE I

Un boudoir élégant, Porte au fond. Portes de côté A droite une fenêtre, à gauche une cheminés. Divans fauteuils, etc.

LAËRTE: (Entrant, d'un air majestueux.) Corbleu! les somptueux lambris!
(Regardant autour de lui.)
C'est içi qu'on vous loge?

PHILINE: Oui, mon cher! Madame la baronne me prête son boudoir.

LAËRTE: (Finement.) Dont M. le baron a gardé la clef.

PHILINE: (Se levant vivement.) Fi donc, vous êtes gris!

LAËRTE: Non! je suis en humeur de rire et de faire des compliments . . .
Belle, ayez pitié de nous!
Daignez baisser vos paupières!
Les cils de vos yeux si doux . . .
Sont des flèches meurtrières
Du Dieu qui nous blesse tous!
Et lon, lon, la, et lon, lon, la!
Landéridéra, landéridéra!
Et lon, lon, la, landéridéra!
(Il fait une pirouette.)
Voilà!

LAERTE: Rien ne vaut pour nous égayer Le vin qu'on n'a pas à payer! Rien ne vaut pour nous égayer Le vin qu'on n'a pas à payer! la la la la la la. la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la

PHILINE: (Se moquant.) Fort bien on croit entendre
Je vous le jure, le jeune Frédéric.
Comment n'est-il pas içi?

LAËRTE: (Avec malice.) Merci! et Wilhelm?

PHILINE: Il viendra.

LAËRTE: Croyez-vous?

PHILINE: J'en suis sure, il est en route, il vient.

WILHELM: (Paraissant sur le seuil.) Belle Philine!

PHILINE: (Elle va au devant de lui.) Et le voici.

warm,
Fell hunger we will soon dispel!
(Wilhelm waves his hand to Filina, in token of adieu. The actors depart on their journey; Lothario remains pensively seated near the front of the stage. Mignon stands near the centre of the stage, bending her eyes fixedly on WILHELM.)

■ ACT II

SCENE I

(An elegant boudoir. Door at back. Side doors. To the right a window, to the left a chimney. Elegant details. Sofas, easy chairs, etc.)

LAERTES: My! What luxury
(Looking around.)
Is this where you stay?

FILINA: Yes, my dear. The baroness has loaned me her boudoir.

LAERTES: (Slyly.) Of which the baron has a key.

FILINA: (Rising, in anger.) Oh! You're drunk!

LAERTES: No! I just feel good and amiable.
Oh! sweetest one, have a heart
Don't look at me that way.
Your lovely eyes' soft lashes,
Like arrows in Cupid's play,
Will wound me now and forever.

LAERTE: Nothing to me such joy affords, As wine which I drink without cost, Nothing to me such joy affords As wine which I drink without cost. la la la la la la la. la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la la

FILINA: (Laughing.) Bravo! in style and manner,
You resemble Frederic.
How is it that he has not yet arrived?

LAERTES: (Significantly.) What now is your opinion as regards young Wilhelm?

FILINA: He'll surely come.

LAERTES: You hope so?

FILINA: I'm sure of it—nor his arrival will he long delay.
(Entering.)

WILHELM: (Bowing) Beautiful Filina!

FILINA: (Advancing to meet him.) Here he is already.

LAËRTE: Bon! très bien. Je vaie voir là-bas si tout s'apprête.
"Le Songe d'une Nuit d'Eté"
Doit faire les frais de la fête.
C'est d'un nommé Shakespeare, un assez bon poëte.
(Montrant Philine.) Et de Titania vous serez enchanté.
(Con emphase.)
A bientôt, cher monsieur!
Adieu, ma toute belle!
Je vous laisse avec lui?
Je vous laisse avec elle.
(S'arretant aupres de la porte du fond.)
Mais qui donc se tient là?

WILHELM: C'est Mignon!

PHILINE: Mignon?

WILHELM: Elle n'a pas voulu se séparer de moi. Faut l'appéler.
(Remontant par le fond et appelent.)
Mignon!

MIGNON: (Elle parait, en habit de jeune page.)
Que veux-tu, maîre?

PHILINE: (Souriant.) Eh! mais vraiment, on a peine à la reconnaitre.
Approche et rechauffe-toi.
Tu nous danseras en suite la danse des oeufs.
(Mouvement de Mignon.)

LAËRTE: Je crois qu-un orage est dans l'air.

PHILINE: Plait-il?

LAËRTE: Rien, je vous quitte.

WILHELM: Plus de soucis, Mignon! plus de tristes pensées!
Viena réchauffer tes mains glacées,
A ce foyer
Hospitalier! . . .
(Il fait asseoir Mignon dans un fauteuil devant la cheminée)

MIGNON: (À demi-voix.) Je ne me souviens plus de mes douleurs passées!
Je n'ai plus froid! Je suis heureuse à tes côtes!

PHILINE: (Riant.) Quels soins touchants! Que de bontés!
Permettez-moi de rire
De ce beau dévouement!

MIGNON: (À part.) Hélas! qu'a-t-elle à rire?
Cruel amusement!

LAERTES: I hasten to see whether the preparations are complete—
(To Wilhelm.)
this evening we will render joyous,
By our performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream;"
A work is this by Shakespeare,
A great, an immortal poet!
As to Filina, she will perform miracles,
If only to please you!
Sir, your most obedient—
Beauteous Filina, I take my leave.
(Aside.)
(To Filina)
I leave you with him.
(To Wilhelm.)
I leave you with her.
(On reaching the door he draws back in surprise.) Why, who is there?

WILHELM: It is Mignon!

FILINA: (Surprised.) Mignon?
How's this?

WILHELM: She seems determined not to leave me;
I shall call her in.
Mignon!

MIGNON: (Entering.) What would you?
Your commands I will obey.

FILINA: (Banteringly.) I really scarcely recognize the child!
(To Mignon, with ill-concealed jealousy)
Come, walk in!
Pray come and warm yourself;
And then the "egg dance"
Perhaps you'll give us!

LAERTES: (Aside.) A storm is brewing.

FILINA: (To Laertes.) What ails you now, I pray?

LAERTES: (Pre-occupied.) Oh, nothing—
I will take my leave.
(Bows and withdraws.)

WILHELM: (To Mignon.) Do not be anxious—your fears dismiss;
Come, then, and warm your freezing hands
At yonder hospitable fire!
(He seats Mignon in a chair by the fireside.)

MIGNON: No longer will I brood over past troubles,
Nor am I cold—happy, indeed, am I,
Since I am at your side!

FILINA: (Sneeringly.) What touching anxiety;
Excuse me if I laugh
At this reciprocal solicitude!

MIGNON: (Aside.) Alas! her bitter laugh
Causes my heart anguish.
(To Filina.) In truth your gaiety
My spirits vastly enliven.

WILHELM: (À Philine.) Vous faites bien de rire;
Votre rire est charmant!

PHILINE: Mon cher, je vous admire,
C'est tout à fait charmant!
(Elle rit.)
Au lieu d'être servi par votre jeune page,
C'est vous qui le servez!

WILHELM: (Se rapprochant de Philine.) Près de vous, à vos pieds, J'accepterais, si vous vouliez,
Un plus doux servage.

PHILINE: Vraiment!
(Lui désignant un flambeau sur la cheminée.) Apportez donc ce flambeau par içi.
(Elle s'asseoit devant sa toilette. Wilhelm va prendre le flambeau et revient avec empressement près de PHILINE. MIGNON suit tous ses mouvements du regard sans quitter le fauteuil óu elle est blottie.)

WILHELM: Je me fais votre esclave! ordonnez, me voici!

PHILINE: Mon coiffeur m'a ce soir, indignement coiffée! . . .
Mais vous allez me voir dans ma robe de fée! . . .

Je crois entendre Les doux compliments, Et la voix tendre De vingt amants. Chacun m'admire, Jeunes et vieux, Chacun soupire Pour mes beaux yeux.

WILHELM: J'admire l'éclat de vos yeux! Je suis ravi, charmé d'entendre Cette voix amoureuse et tendre, Ce rire moqueur et joyeux.

FILINA: Ah! Ah! Ah! Je crois entendre Les doux compliments, Et la voix tendre De vingt amants. Chacun m'admire, Jeunes et vieux, Chacun soupire Pour mes beaux yeux. Chacun soupire Chacun soupire Pour mes beaux yeux.
(Mignon fait semblant de dormir. Philine chante follement en achevant de se farder devant son miroir.)

WILHELM: (Se penchant amoureusement vers Philine.) Belle Philine, aimable enchanteresse,
Vos doux regards et vos attraits vainquers
A votre char enhaînment tous les coeurs
Autour de vous tout sourit et s' empresse
On vous fête, on vous aime, on vous adore hélas!
Pourquoi n'aimez-vous pas?

FILINA: (Laughing.) Most worthy sir,
I'm really touched, indeed;
Instead of waiting on his master,
It is the master who waits upon his page!

WILHELM: (Approaching Filina.)
Prostrate at your feet, O lady,
I now do offer you an homage far more zealous;
Will you accept my proffered service?

FILINA: You really mean it?
(Pointing to a candelabra which stands on the chimney piece.)
Yon candelabra, now, pray reach to me.
(She seats herself in front of the dressoir; Wilhelm eagerly fetches the candelabra alluded to. Mignon watches them, without leaving her seat.)

WILHELM: Your commands I eagerly await—Ordain—I will obey!

FILINA: In truth, the hair-dresser has but ill-arranged my hair;
But by putting on a more becoming dress,
I yet may hope to please you!

Charming gay compliments, praises unbounded, Sweet loving accents within my ears ring, My beauty rare will all surpass, with strong emotion all hearts will burn.

WILHELM: Filina you dost enthrall me, your genial sweet and loving voice, . . . your joyous beauteous features inspire With more than delight me.

FILINA: Ah! Ah! Ah! Charming gay compliments, praises unbounded, Sweet loving accents within my ears ring. My charms and beauty must be triumphant, All hearts, all hearts with love soon will burn, yes, all hearts will burn, yes, all hearts will burn with love of my beauty, all hearts will burn.
(Mignon feigns to sleep. Filina continues singing gaily before the looking-glass, "beautifying" herself the while.)

WILHELM: Beautiful Filina, irresistible enchantress,
Of those bright eyes, the all-bewitching glance
Each soul allures, each stubborn heart inflames;
To obey your bidding, is happiness to all!
By all you're idolized,
By all adored!
Alas! why then does love not illuminate your heart
For, woe is me! You are cruel and cold.

PHILINE: Au baron il faut qu'on vous présenta.

WILHELM: Philine, un mot encore! . . . un mot! . . .

PHILINE: (Montrand Mignon.)
Parlez plus bas!
Notre hôte nous attend . . . Offrez-moi vos bras.
(Elle fait quelques pas; Wilhelm la retient.)

WILHELM: Quoi! sans répondre . . .

PHILINE: (Lui tendant la main.)
Allons! J'ai l'âme complaisante! . . .
(Wilhelm porte la main de Philine à ses levres. Au bruit du baiser MIGNON fait un mouvement, sans ouvrir les yeux.)

WILHELM: (À demi-voix, avec passion.) O Philine! ô coquette! ô fille séduisante!
J'admire l'éclat de vos yeux!
Je suis ravi, charmé d'entendre
Cette voix amoureuse et tendre,
Ce rire moqueur et joyeux! . . .
Par pitié daigner m'entendre.
Donne un regard de vos doux yeux,
Un mot de cette voix tendre
A mon coeur amoureux.
(Wilhelm offre son bras à Philine et sort avec elle par la porte du fond.)

MIGNON: (Seule.) Me voilà seule, hélas! déjà Meister m'oublie . . .
Qu'importe! il a comblé mes voeux!
Le suivre et le servir
C'est tout ce que je feux.
Allons! pleurer serait folie . . .
Ah! c'est là, que tout à l'heure en souriant à son miroir
Elle écoutait Meister! Je ne voulais rien voir,
Je ne voulais rien entendre!
Hélas! et cependant je n'apu men défendre
Pardonne, cher maîre!
Voice le fard qui la rend belle . . .
Eh bien! si j'essayais de me farder aussi?
(Elle essaye de se farder.)
Ma pâleur disparaît déjà. Mon teint s'anime!

I (S'animant.)
Il était un pauvre enfant.
Un pauvre enfant de Bohême,
Au regard triste, au front blême . . .
(Se regardant dans le miroir.)
Ah! ah! la folle histoire! en vain je m'en défend!
Je me trouve bien mieux! je ne suis pius la même.
Ta la, ralla!
Ta la, ralla!
Est-ce bien Mignon que voilà?

II
Un beau jour, tout triomphant
Tout fier de son strategème,
Pour palire au maîre qu'il aime . . .
(Se regardant de nouveau en riant.)

FILINA: I really must present you to the Baron.

WILHELM: Stay! grant me but another word!

FILINA: Hush! were we to be overheard—
Give me your arm;
(She advances a few steps, when Wilhelm stop her.)

WILHELM: Will you not answer me?

FILINA: (Extending her hand to him.) I promise to be—merciful!
(Wilhelm impresses a kiss on Filina's hand. Mignon starts, but does not open her eyes.)

WILHELM: Oh Filina, my heart adores you
In more than human happiness am I steeped,
By your loving joyous voice—
By your winning, genial smile!
Then bend on me a glance benign,
My ardent prayer deign but to hear,
Crown this heart's sole wish!
(Wilhelm offers Filina his arm. They both exit back.)

MIGNON: (Alone.) At last I am alone! Ah! woe is me!
Already he has forgotten me.
What does it matter? Is not my utmost wish already fulfilled!
What need I more than learn to love, and to obey him?
A truce then to my sighs! it's folly to repine!
(Leaning on the toilette table.)
She listened to Wilhelm's vows—
I should have neither looked nor listened;
But, alas! the temptation was too strong;
Forgive me, my Wilhelm!
(Perceiving the rouge pot.)
Aha! the rouge lies here—
Suppose I were to try some.
(Putting on rouge)
Quickly my paleness disappears;

I
My features are enlivened!
A gipsy lad I well do know,
Graceful, winning, handsome is he;
Yet though his lip ever wears a smile,
His heart I think is sad.
(Looking at herself in the glass.)
Ha! ha! ha! a mad story, truly!
Sure none will ever believe it.
I really seem more fair, more beauteous than before,
Tra, la, ral, la!
Is it really I, whom in the glass I see?
Who is it that I now gaze on?

II
One day the youth,
Gaily devised a scheme;
A scheme he hoped his master dear might please.

Ah! ah! la folle histoire! En vain je m'en défend!
Je me trouve bien mieux, je ne suis plus la même,
Ta la, ralla!
Ta la, ralla!
Est-ce bien Mignon que voilà?
Non, non, ce n'est plus moi!
(Tristement.)
Mais quoi! ce n'est pas elle,
Elle a d'autres secrets encore pour être belle.
(Allant ouvrir la porte du cabinet de toilette.)
N'est pas là qu'on a rangé ses robes? oui!
Hélas! suis-je comme elle une femme pour lui?
O folle idée! O démon qui me tente!
(Elle entre dans le cabinet de toilette. La fenêtre s'ouvre brusquement. FREDERIC saute dans la chambre.)

FRÉDÉRIC: (Avec indignation.)
Quoi? mon oncle a logé Philine chez ma tante?
Me voici dans son boudoir,
Qui, je sens battre mon coeur d'espoir,
Ah! je guette l'instant de la revoir.
Qui, je sens battre mon coeur d'espoir,
Coquette, je guette l'instant de te revoir.
Il faut enfin vaincre la cruelle,
Il faut toucher le coeur de l'infidèle!
Je suis dans son boudoir
Et je sens mon coeur battre d'espoir.
Ah! je guette l'instant de la revoir.
Moi je veux qu'on m'aime et j'espère,
Oui, j'espère à mon tour être heureux.
Tant pis, ma foi! pour tous ses amoureux,
Je suis dans son boudoir,
Et je sens mon coeur battre d'espoir.
Ah, je guette l'instant de la revoir.
Ah, je sens mon coeur battre d'espoir.
Coquette, je guette l'instant de te revoir.
Pour mon coeur quel doux espoir.
Voici l'instant de la revoir!

WILHELM: (Entr'ouvrant a porte du fond et entrant sans voir FREDERIC.) Mignon!

FRÉDÉRIC: (Saluant.) Monsieur!

Wilhelm: Monsieur!

FRÉDÉRIC: Je suis peut-être indiscret,
Mais comment vous trouvez-vous içi?

WILHELM: Et vous-même, Monsieur?

(Gazing at herself in the glass.)
Ha! ha! a mad story, truly!
Sure none will ever believe it;
I really seem more fair, more beauteous than before
Tra, la, ralla, la!
Is it really I, whom in the glass I see?
Or who is it that I now gaze upon?
No, no! myself I do not recognize myself.
(After a short pause, sadly.)
And yet, alas! it is I!
Other secrets she must have, her beauty so to heighten!
(Approaching cabinet on the left.)
Is it not here, that she her wardrobe keeps?—
Mad thought! Ah! surely it is a demon tempts me.
(Enters cabinet.)

FREDERIC: (Enters alone.)
(Looking around.) Filina in my aunt's apartments?
O much loved room, while I gaze on you,
With joy and hope my heart loudly beats!
The young coquette, as yet, perchance expects me not;
The cruel flirt this day I must overcome,
Her heart at last I hope to tame.
O much loved room, while I gaze on you,
Yes! I swear she shall adore me—
The victory this very day shall be mine;
Let even a thousand watchful guards surround her,
Their vigilance I will elude!
O much loved room, while I gaze on you.

WILHELM: (From the door at back, calling.) Mignon!

FREDERIC: (Bowing.) Your servant, sir.

WILHELM: (Bowing also.) Yours, sir, to command.

FREDERIC: The question may seem indiscreet,
But much indeed I'd like to know
How you came here—

WILHELM: And you, sir, how did you arrive?

FRÉDÉRIC: Je suis de ses amis, Monsieur.	FREDERIC: I am the lady's friend.
WILHELM: J'en suis aussi.	WILHELM: And so am I, sir.
FRÉDÉRIC: Mais moi, je l'aime.	FREDERIC: Know, sir, that I do dearly love her!
WILHELM: Eh bien, moi je l'adore? Plâit-il?	WILHELM: I tell you, I adore her, sir!
FRÉDÉRIC: Il suffit! engarde!	FREDERIC: You do? enough! (Drawing his sword.) Defend yourself!
WILHELM: Quoi? chez Philine?	WILHELM: What here, in Filina's room?
FRÉDÉRIC: Chez Philine! C'est plus original! Battons-nous! (Ils croisent le fer.) (Mignon revêtue d'une des robes de Philine sort du cabinet et s'elance entre eux.) Ah, Meister! Dieu!	FREDERIC: In Filina's room; It will be all the more romantic! Defend yourself! (Mignon, who has put on one of Filina's dresses, rushes hurriedly in, and throws herself between the combatants, exclaiming: Hold!
WILHELM: Mignon!	WILHELM: Heavens! Mignon!
FRÉDÉRIC: Mignon? que signifie? (Raillant.) Mais voilà, si je m'en souviens Les atours de Philine! Ah, ah, ah, ah, ah, ah! (Sérieux.) Monsieur! Nous nous reverrons. Serviteur!	FREDERIC: Why, what does all this mean? (Sheathing his sword, and contemplating Mignon) Ha! ha! if I'm not mistaken She has one on one of Filina's dresses. Fear not, We'll meet again, before long!
WILHELM: Quel est ce caprice insensé? Deviens-tu folle? Alors quittons-nous.	WILHELM: What strange caprice is this? Have you lost reason? I tell you we must part.
MIGNON: Tu me chasses?	MIGNON: Do you then drive me from you?
WILHELM: (Plus tendrement.) Non, non, je ne te chasse pas! Même je dois te rendre graces du tendre mouvement . . . Mais je commence à comprendre Que je ne puis auprès de moi Te garder, pauvre enfant, Adieu, Mignon, courage! Ne pleure pas! Les chagrins sont bien vite oubliés à ton age! Dieu te consolera! mes voeux suivront tes pas! . . . Ne pleure pas! N'accuse pas mon coeur de froide indifference! Ne me reproche pas de suivre un fol amour! En te disant adieu, je garde l'espéranse De te revoir un jour! Adieu, Mignon, courage! Les chagrins sont bien vite oubliés à ton âge! Dieu te consolera! mes voeux suivrant tes pas! Ne pleure pas!	WILHELM: Not so—I do not drive you from me; Believe me, I do not drive you from me; Dear shall your memory ever be to me. (Mignon utters a cry of grief, and throws herself on a chair.) Farewell, Mignon, take heart! Your tears restrain! In the bright years of youth no grief lingers long. Weep not, Mignon! Over you just Heaven will watch with fostering care. Oh may you your dear native land, once more regain! May fortune benignly smile on your fate henceforth; It pains me much to leave you; my stricken heart With your lone destiny will ever sympathize! Farewell, Mignon, take heart! From tears refrain! In the bright years of youth no grief lingers long; Weep not, Mignon! Over you just Heaven will watch with fostering care; Then dry your tears!
MIGNON: Merci de tes bontés; mais sans toi, Je veux être libre comme autrefois.	MIGNON: Thankful am I; but since we're doomed to part, I fain would wander freely—
WILHELM: Ecoute la raison! Hors de cette maison Que vas-tu devenir?	WILHELM: To reason dictates list, I pray. What will become of you? When from my care removed, what will you do?
MIGNON: Ce que j'étais: Mignon! (Saissant la main de Wilhelm et la portant à ses lèvres.) Merci!	MIGNON: That which I did before. I will Mignon once more become. (She kisses the hand which Wilhelm extends to her.) I thank you!
WILHELM: Non, tu ne peux partir ainsi!	WILHELM: (Agitated.) You can not leave me like this!
MIGNON: Il le faut.	MIGNON: It is my duty; it must be so.
WILHELM: Angoiese cruelle!	WILHELM: (Aside, in tones of anguish.) O grievous trial! (Enter Filina and Frederic.)
PHILINE: (Elle parait avec Frederic.) Vous disiez vrai; Mignon de mes atours parée! (A Wilhelm, avec ironie.) Elle a bientôt quitté votre livrée.	FILINA: (To Frederic.) Now, upon my word, she's dressed out in my clothes! Right quickly has she laid her livery aside.
WILHELM: Philine. (Avec embarras.) Un caprice d'enfant qu'il faut lui pardonner.	WILHELM: (Confused.) It was a mere whim, Which must be forgiven.
PHILINE: Si la robe lui plâit, on peut la lui donner. (MIGNON arrache avec colère les dentelles de la robe dont elle est parée.) Eh! quoi? faut-il déchirer mes dentelles? Je demande grace pour elles. (MIGNON va ramasser son paquet de hardes et se sauve dans le cabinet de droite.) (Souriant.) Quel couroux! Quel regard! On dirait, sur ma foi, Que cette pauvre enfant est jalouse de moi.	FILINA: If she's so taken with the dress, I'll give it her. (Mignon angrily tears the ribbons from the dress.) Good gracious! why tear off my ribbons! I crave them. What anger strange is this? (Mignon rushes hastily to the apartment on the left, into which she disappears.) (To Wilhelm.) Now, upon my word, I almost think The little savage jealous is of me!
WILHELM: (À part.) Jalouse!	WILHELM: (Agitated.) Jealous!
LAËRTE: (Il entra vivement en scène sous son costume de Prince Thesée.) Eh bien, que faites-vous? Alerte, on commence!	LAERTES: (Appearing at the back, dressed in the garb of an ancient Greek.) I say, what are you doing here? It is almost time to begin.
PHILINE: Suivons Laërte.	FILINA: Let's follow Laertes.
WILHELM: (À part.) Jalouse!	WILHELM: (Aside.) Jealous!
PHILINE: (À Wilhelm, en souriant.) A quoi rêvez-vous donc? Je vous attends.	FILINA: (To Wilhelm.) What are you now thinking of?
WILHELM: Pardon!	WILHELM: Excuse me, pray.
PHILINE: Offrez-moi votre bras, si vous m'aimez encore.	FILINA: If you still love me, offer me your arm.
WILHELM: Quoi? Moi? Philine, je t'adore.	WILHELM: Love you! more dearly than I do love—myself! (Offers his arm to Filina. They exit, followed by Laertes.) (Frederic suddenly issues from the apartment on the left, and goes after Wilhelm and Filina as they withdraw.)
FRÉDÉRIC: (Regardant sortir Philine et Wilhelm.) Morbleu! Qu'avec plaisir je le massacrais.	FREDERIC: What pleasure keen it would give me, To run that scoundrel through!

MIGNON: (Elle repairait dans son costume du premier Acte.) Cette, Philine, je la hais!

SCÈNE II

(Un coin du parc. Au fond à droite, une serre attenante au chateau et éclairée à l'intérieur. A gauche, une lavge piece d'eau bordée de roseaux. Musique et bruit d'applaudissement dans la coulisse. Mignon se glisse sous le arbres et se penche dans l'ombre pour écouter.)

MIGNON: (Seule.) Elle est là près lui! Son triomphe commence!
Et moi j'erre au hasard dans ce jardin immense . . .
(Avec agitation.)
Elle est aimée! il l'aime! eh bien! je le savais!
Ces tourments, je les éprouvais!
Non! je ne l'avais pas entendu de sa bouche,
Ce mot qui déchire mon coeur!
Espères-tu que ton chagrin le touche,
Pauvre Mignon! il l'aime! et son rire moqueur,
Rend plus cruelle encore cette onde
Il l'aime! ô Dieu! je deviens folle
De rage et de douleur!
(Courant vers la pièce d'eau.)
Ah! . . . ce flot clair et tranquille
M'attire à lui!—j'entends parmi les verts roseaux, Votre voix, ô filles des eaux! . . .
Vous m'appelz à vous sous cette onde immobile! . . .
(Elle va pour s'élancer, les accords d'une harpe se font entendre sous les arbres.)
Ciel! qu'entends-je? écoutons! . . .
(Redescendant en scène.)
Le mauvais ange a fui!
Je veux vivre!
(LOTHARIO parait.)
Est-ce toi, Lothario?—
(Avec joie.)
C'est lui!

LOTHARIO: (Ne reconnaissant pas d'abord Mignon.) Qui donc est là? . . . Quelle est cette voix qui m'appelle?
(La regardant avec tendresse.)
Est-ce toi, Sperata? . . . Réponds! est-ce toi?

MIGNON: Non.

LOTHARIO: (La repoussant doucement.) Mon coeur se trompe encore, hélas! ce n'est pas elle!
C'est l'enfant qui voulait me suivre; c'est Mignon!

MIGNON: (Avec tristesse.) Oh! oui, tu te souviens! oui, c'est bien là mon nom!

MIGNON: (Coming from the apartment on the left, dressed as in the first Act.) That woman! I do loathe her.
(Exit.)

SCENE II

(A portion of the park adjoining the Baron's castle. At back, to the right, a conservatory, illuminated from within. To the left a lake, surrounded here and there by reeds, etc. Music and the noise of clapping hands, are heard to proceed from the wings. Mignon advances from among the trees, and stands in a listening attitude.)

MIGNON: (alone.)
She's there, by his side, triumphant, happy;
While I do wander forth alone, abandoned.
He loves her! Ah, my aching heart did foretell this,
But still I little thought to hear it from his own lips,
Now, with these eyes, the bitter truth to witness!
Ah! woe is me! he loves her! at this thought alone
My tongue shames to speak the hated words.
He loves her! Oh heaven! with grief my heart will break!
(Rushes hurriedly in the direction of the lake.)
Yes! this calm, unruffled stream,
Placid, though deep,
Summons me! I think beneath the waters clear,
I hear the siren's song—
Yes! with my life, I will end my woes here!
(She is about to throw herself into the water, when the strains of a harp are heard to proceed from behind the trees.)
Heavens! what sounds are those?
(Coming forward.)
My wicked impulse has almost passed away.
Yes! still do I wish to live!
(Lothario appears.)
Are you Lothario?
(Recognizes him.)
It is he!

LOTHARIO: (Who at first does not recognize Mignon.)
Who's there? who is that now approaches me?
Are you she for whom I've sought so long?

MIGNON: No, not so!

LOTHARIO: Ever am I mistaken! alas, I see it is not she!
The form that now hastens to my side,
Is surely that of Mignon!

MIGNON: Ah, yes. You've recognized me,
I am Mignon indeed.

LOTHARIO: Pauvre enfant! pauvre créature!
J'ai voulu te revoir et j'ai suivi tes pas!
Viens sur mon coeur! Reste en mes bras
Et dis-moi que! chagrin te brise et te torture! . . .
(Il presse Mignon entre ses bras.)

MIGNON: (Avec une ardeur fiévreuse, le front appuyé sur la poitrine de LOTHARIO.) As-tu souffert? As-tu pleuré?
As-tu langui sans espérance,
L'âme en deuil, le coeur déchiré?
Alors tu connais ma souffrance!

LOTHARIO: Comme toi, triste et solitaire,
Courbé sous d'inflexibles lois,
De mes pleurs j'ai mouillé la terre!
Le ciel reste sourd à ma voix!
(Applaudissements et acclmations bruyantes dans le châteu.)

MIGNON: (Se dégageant brusquement des bras de Lothario.)
Écoute! c'est son nom que la foule répete!
C'est elle qu'on acclame et c'est elle qu'on fête! . . .
(Se tournant vers le château avec un geste de menace.)
Ah! que la main de Dieu
Ne peut-elle sur eux faire éclater la foudre,
Et frapper ce palais, et le réduire en poudre,
Et l'engloutir sous des torrents de feu! . . .
(Elle s'enfuit sous les arbres.)

LOTHARIO: (Seul.) (Après un long silence; avec égarement.) Le feu! . . . le feu! . . . le feu! . . .
(Il traverse lentement le théâtre et disparait dans l'ombre. Les portes de la serre s'ouvrent pour laisser passer la foule des INVITES et des COMEDIENS.)
(La représentation vient de finir. Philine et les Comediens ont conservé leurs costumes de théâtre.)

CHOEUR: Brava! brava! brava!
La Philine est vraiment divine!
À ses pieds nos coeurs et nos fleurs!
Gloire à Titania! . . .

RECIT: FILINA: Oui, pour ce soir, je suis reine des fées! Voici mon sceptre d'or! Et voici mes trophées, Je suis Titania la blonde, Titania, fille de l'air! En riant, je parcours le monde Plus vive que l'oiseau, plus prompte que l'éclair! Ah! Ah! La troupe tolle Des lutins suit Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah! Mon char qui vole. Et dans LOTHARIO: (Tenderly.) Oh, hapless maiden!

Your footsteps, too, I've longed to trace,
Come to this aged breast!
Come! tell me the sad thoughts which now your heart do grieve.
(Pressing her to his breast.)

MIGNON: (In accents of the deepest woe, leaning her head on LOTHARIO's shoulder.) Have you ever suffered! Have you ever known grief!
Have you ever hopeless, languished in despair—
Have you ever vainly, sought your native land?
If so, my sorrow you can understand.

LOTHARIO: Maiden, I have known bitter grief,
Yes, cruel suffering have I endured;
My tears the ground have bedewed,
Amid foreign lands I long have roamed.
(A tumultuous noise of clapping of hands heard from behind the scenes.)

MIGNON: Listen! the castle resounds with applause—
They all admire, they all do praise her!
(Turning toward the conservatory, and declaiming in wrathful accents.)
Ah! why does not avenging ire,
Why does not the winged thunderbolt
Strike down and crush yon impious dwelling?
Why do not devouring flames consume it?
(Rushes hurriedly away, and disappears amid the trees.)

LOTHARIO: (Alone, after a moment's reflection, confused and bewildered.) Fire, she said! Ah, fire! fire!
(Slowly crosses the stage and disappears amid the shade. The door of the conservatory is thrown open, and a crowd of Guests, Actors, etc., issue forth.)
(The performance within is supposed to have just terminated. FILINA and the Actors retain their theatrical costumes.)

CHORUS: Filina is indeed divine,
A wondrous triumph she has achieved.
Her beauty let us celebrate!
Bravo! bravo!
Filina is indeed divine, etc., etc.

RECIT: FILINA: Yes, for this eve I shall reign queen of the fairies, observe here, my sceptre of gold! and behold my trophies. I'm fair Titania, glad and gay, through the world unfettered now I blithely stray. With jocund heart and happy mien, I cheerly dance, I cheerly dance the hours . . .away, Like the la nuit Fuit!. . . Ah! Je suis Titania la blonde.

PHILINE: Oui, pour ce soir, je suis reine des fées
Voici mon sceptre, d'or! . . .
Et voici mes trophées.
Autour de moi, toute ma cour court,
Chantant le plaisir et l'amour.
Aux rayons de Phoebé qui luit! . . .
Parmi les fleurs que l'aurore Fait éclore,
Par les bois et par les près Diaprès,
Sur les flots couverts d'écume,
Dans la brume,
On me voit d'un pied léger Voltiger!
Je suis Titania la blonde,
Titania, fille de l'air!
En riant, je parcours le monde,
Plus vive que l'oiseau, plus prompte que l'éclair!

COMÉDIENS: (Entre eux, avec dépit.) Déjà vingt amants Entourent la belle,
Et tout est pour elle,
Fleurs et compliments! . . .

CHOEUR: (Entourant Philine pour la complimenter.) Gloire à Titania la blonde, Brava! brava! brava!
Gloire à Titania!

PHILINE: (Apercevant Wilhelm.) Ah! vous voici! . . . Déjà vous me faites attendre.
(D'un air de reproche.)
Vous n'étiez pas là pour m'entendre! . . .

FRÉDÉRIC: (À part.) Encor oui! . . . quel sourire aimable! air tendre.

WILHELM: (Regardant autour de lui avec inquiétude.) Pardonnez-moi! . . . Je cherche en vain Mignon!

PHILINE: (Minaudant.) Eh! quoi! Celle que vous cherchez, Monsieur, ce n'est pas moi!
(Ils remontent en causant; Mignon et Lothario se rencontrent sur le devant du théâtre.)

LOTHARIO: (À demi-voix.) Sois contente, Mignon! Réjouis-toi, pauvre âme!
J'ai voulu t'obéir! . . . Et ces murs sont en flamme.

MIGNON: Ciel! que dis-tu!

LOTHARIO: (Calme et souriant.) J'ai fait ce que tu voulais.

MIGNON: Dieu!

LOTHARIO: Ces murs vont s'érouler sous des torrents de feu!
(Mignon inquiète cherche Wilhelm des yeux. Wilhelm l'aperçoit et accourt vers elle.) bird that freely wings its flight . . ..

Ah! Ah! Fairies dance around me,
Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Ah! . . . Elfin sprites on nimble toe around me gaily dance. Ah! . . .

FILINA: Both night and day.
My attendants ever sing.
The achievements of the God of Love!
On the wave's white foam, Amid the twilight grey,
Amid hedges, amid flowers,
I blithely dance!
Yes! the fair Titania am I, etc., etc.

ALL: With love for her
Each heart does burn,
Amid flowers and plaudits
Her bright path does lay!

CHORUS: Ah! Titania is indeed divine,
We'll pay homage to her beauty.

FILINA: (To Wilhelm.) At last I've found you,
Is it possible I have to search for you already?
Have you not been to hear me?

FREDERIC: (Aside.) This eternal fellow here again!
(Watching Filina's behavior.)
What glances! Ah, what smiles!

WILHELM: (Pre-occupied, and looking anxiously around him.) Excuse me, I implore! I vainly everywhere do seek Mignon—

FILINA: Indeed! Then it was not I whom you sought?
(They both retire conversing. Mignon and Lothario meet near the front of the stage.)

LOTHARIO: Banish, O maiden, the grief that now gnaws your heart,
Your wish is heard; the flames do even now consume the mansion!

MIGNON: Alas! What did you say?

LOTHARIO: I have accomplished your desire.

MIGNON: Oh, heaven.

LOTHARIO: Anon those walls will crumble into ashes!
(Mignon looks anxiously around her. Wilhelm, perceiving her, hurries towards her.)

WILHELM: C'est toi! . . . je te cherchais, Mignon! . . .

PHILINE: (S'approchant.) Holà! ma belle!

MIGNON: Que voulez-vous?

PHILINE: Pour nous prouver ton zèle,
Va vite, va chercher
Là-bas . . .
(Elle indique la serre.)
Certain bouquet . . . dont quelqu'un qui m'est cher
Tantôt m'a fait hommage,
Et que j'ai laissé choir, je crois, de mon corsage.

WILHELM: A quoi bon? . . .

MIGNON: (À Wilhelm.) J'obéis, j'obéis, maître!
(Elle s'élana.)

LAËRTE: (Accourant.) Dieu! Philine, mes amis, le théâtre est en feu!
Regardez! . . .

WILHELM: (Avec effroi.) Que dit-il?

PHILINE et LES FEMMES: Je meurs! . . . mon sang se glace! . . .
(Les Laquais sortent emportant les flambeaux. Le théâtre se plonge dans l'obscurité; des lueurs d'incendie commencent à éclairer le vitrage de la serre.)

WILHELM: (Écartant la foule.) Ah! malheureuse enfant! . . . Arrière! . . . faite place!

PHILINE: (Le retenant.) Cher Wilhelm!

LAËRTE: (Le retenant.) Arrêtez!

WILHELM: Ne me retenez pas! . . .
(Il s'élance au secours de Mignon.)

CHOEUR: Pour apaiser la flamme,
Tout secours serait vain!
L'effroi glace notre âme!
Que sert-il de tenter un effort surhumain!

LOTHARIO: (Debout, au milieu de la scene et dominant le tumult général.) Fugitif et tremblant, je vais de porte en porte,
Où le ciel me conduit, où l'orage m'emporte
Des misérables Dieu prend soin . . .
(Le vitrage éclate et s'écroule. La foule des invites se presse sur le devant de la scène en poussant un cri de terreur.)
(Wilhelm paraît enfin portant Mignon dans ses bras.)

WILHELM: At length, O dear one, have I found you,
I've sought you everywhere!

FILINA: (To Mignon.) Listen girl!

MIGNON: What would you?

FILINA: If you're anxious to display your zeal,
Haste yonder,
(Pointing to conservatory.)
And find the flowers, which
You offered yesterday to your master,
And which I think have fallen from my bosom!

WILHELM: (To Filina.) But why?

MIGNON: (To Wilhelm.) I will obey.
(Hastens to conservatory.)

LAERTES: (Entering hurriedly.) Quick, hasten all!
Gentlemen, the theatre is in flames!
See, see!

WILHELM: (Horrified.) Oh fearful sight!

FILINA: (To the Ladies.) An icy chill my frame pervades.
(Servants exit, bearing away the torches with them. The stage is enveloped in complete darkness. The red light of the conflagration now begins to be reflected by the glass-work of the conservatory.)

WILHELM: (With painful emotion.) Ah! ill advised was your zeal!

FILINA: (Endeavoring to stop him.) Dear Wilhelm!

LAERTES: (Seizing him by the arm.) Hold!

WILHELM: (Disengaging himself.) Ah! Do not retain me!
(Hurries hastily to Mignon's rescue.)

CHORUS: No mortal power can now check
The conflagration's might,
The castle soon must fall!
When human courage can do nothing,
Why sacrifice a life
In fruitless heroism?

LOTHARIO: (In the midst of the stage, quelling for the moment the general commotion.) I am a lonely wanderer! I stray from door to door,
As fate guides or as the storm hurries me;
But heaven protects the wretched with kind and fostering care!
(The glass-work of the conservatory falls in with a crash. The guests in terror, rush to the front of the stage. After a brief pause, Wilhelm re-appears, bearing in his arms MIGNON's fainting form.)

WILHELM: De la mort, Dieu l'a préservée!
La flamme l'entourait déjà! je l'ai sauvée!.
(Il dépose sur un banc de gazon Mignon évanouie. Mignon serre entre ses mains crispées un bouquet de fleurs à flétries et à demi consumées. Tableau final.)

ACTE TROISIÈME

Une galerie italienne ornée de statues. A droite, une fenêtre jouverte sur la campagne. Au fond, grande porte fermée. Portes laterales. Au lever du rideau, la scène est vide.

(Prélude de harpe dans la coulisse.)

CHOEUR: (Au dehors.) La douce clarté des étoiles,
Illumine le flot mouvant!
Amis, ouvrons gaîment nos voiles,
Aux baisers amoureux du vent!
La rame étincelle
Sur l'eau du lac bleu,
Et laisse après elle
Un sillon de feu! . . .
La douce clarté des étoiles
Illumine le flot mouvant!
(LOTHARIO parait sur le seuil de la porte de droite.)

LOTHARIO: (Seul.) Elle dort! . . .
De son coeur j'ai calmé la Fièvre!
Un sourire doux et joyeux
A ma voix entr'ouvrait sa lèvre;
Le sommeil a fermé ses yeux!
Un ange est debout auprès d'elle!
Un ange descendu des cieux
Lui prête l'ombre de son aile! . . .
(Wilhelm, Antonio) (ANTONIO pose une lampe sur une table, et se tourner vers la fenêtre.)

ANTONIO: Vous verrez de cette fenêtre s'illuminer les villas d'alentour.
De la fête du lac c'est demain le grand jour;
Ce palais seul depuis qu'il a perdu son maître ne s'illumine plus.
S'il est encore à votre gré
Vous pouvez l'acheter.

WILHELM: Demain je repondrai.
(Sur un signe de Wilhelm, Antonio sort. Wilhelm touchant l'épaule de LOTHARIO.)
Eh bien?

WILHELM: Heaven has saved her from a dreadful death;
Begirt was she with flames,
When, heaven be praised, I reached and saved her!
(Wilhelm places Mignon on a bank. She still holds in her hands the bunch of withered flowers. Tabeau.)

ACT III

A gallery, embellished with statues. To the right, a window overlooking the country. At back, a closed door. Side doors. At the rising of the curtain, there is no one on the stage.

A harp prelude is heard behind the scenes.

CHORUS: (Outside.) Quick, the sails unfurl,
The wind blows propitious,
the gently ruffled waves
Tempt us to put forth;
Let's quickly leave the shore,
And gaily tempt the wave!
Quick, then, unfurl the sails, etc., etc.
(Lothario appears on the threshold of the door (right hand.)

LOTHARIO: (Alone.) I've soothed the throbbing of her aching heart,
And restored the smile to her lips.
Her weary eyes at last have closed
In gentle slumber;
By day and night some heavenly spirit
The maiden protects
On wings celestial, it hovers round
Protecting her from harm!
(Enter Wilhelm, Antonio.)
(Antonio carries a lamp.)
(Placing the lamp on the table, and approaching the window.)

ANTONIO: From this window you will see
The shores on all sides lighted up;
tomorrow is a joyous festival,
Kept sacred by the dwellers on the lake.
This mansion alone, since that thrice fatal day.
When woe so suddenly overtook its owners,
The festal fire no more displays.
This castle, therefore, old and rugged,
Will before long be sold;
At the price agreed upon.
It may become yours.

WILHELM: Tomorrow, I'll give my final answer.
(At a sign from Wilhelm, Antonio withdraws.)

WILHELM: What now?

LOTHARIO: Chut! . . . Un sourire a passé sur sa lèvre;
L'enfant dort et n'a plus la fièvre.

WILHELM: (Vivement.) Ah, que le ciel en soit béni.
C'est l'air natal qui la rapelle à la vie.
Oui, demain j'acheterai pour elle
Le palais des Cypriani.

LOTHARIO: (Il se leve en tressaillant.) Cypriani!

WILHELM: Qu'as-tu?
(LOTHARIO se dirige vers la grande porte du fond et cherche à l'ouvrir.)

WILHELM: Cette chambre est fermée depuis quinze ans!

LOTHARIO: Quinze ans!
(Il se dirige vers la porte à gauche.)
Ah, là!
(Se tourant vers Wilhelm.)
Chut!
(Il sort lenteinent.)

WILHELM: (Seul.) Etrange regard!
Ah, mieux que ma raison le coeur de ce vieillard
Console cet enfant par ses soins ranimée.
J'ai deviné trop tard le secret de Mignon.
(Entr'ouvrant la porte de droite.)
Hélas, elle sommeille, et prononce mon nom!

WILHELM: Elle ne croyait pas, dans sa candeur naïve, Que l'amour innocent qui dormait dans son coeur, Pût se changer un jour en une ardeur plus vive Et troubler à jamais son rêve de bonheur! Pour rendre à la fleur épuisée Sa fraîcheur, son éclat vermeil, O printemps, donne-lui ta guotte de rosée! O mon coeur, donne-lui ton rayon de Soleil!
C'est en vain que j'attends un aveu de sa bouche!
Je veux connaître en vain ses secrètes douleurs!
Mon regard l'intimide et ma voix l'effarouche;
Un mot trouble son âme et fait couler ses pleurs! . . .
Pour rendre à la fleur épuisée
Sa fraîcheur, son éclat vermeil,
O printemps, donne-lui ta goutte de roseil!
O mon coeur, donne-lui ton rayon de soleil!
(WILHELM, ANTONIO, puis LAERTE)

ANTONIO: (Entrant.) Signor!

WILHELM: Que me veux-tu?

ANTONIO: Cette lettre.

LOTHARIO: Hush, she's sleeping.
Her eyelids tranquilly are closed;
The fever has quite left her.

WILHELM: May heaven be praised,
Her native air infuses new life into her veins,
For her it is that I tomorrow mean to buy
The Casa Cipriani!

LOTHARIO: (Starting violently at the name.) Cipriani!

WILHELM: What ails thee?
(Lothario looks round in surprise—he then approaches the door at back, which he endeavors to open.)

WILHELM: Yon door has remained closed,
For fifteen years.

LOTHARIO: (Deeply moved.) Fifteen years!
(He again looks around him with the aspect of one who seems to recall the past; and then approaches the door and turns toward Wilhelm)
Ah—yonder!
(Exit slowly.)

WILHELM: (Alone.) What strange, wild look was that?
This good old man has been more successful than I.
In soothing the poor, hapless maiden
At last I have discovered the secret of her heart,
From her sweet lips, my name escaped!

WILHELM: Ah! little thought the hapless maid, in innocence arrayed, What she in her breast now nurtured, would ardent love become, And thus perturb the peaceful current, the current of her life, would before long disturb the current of her peaceful life . . . That what she now unwittingly nurtured, would disturb the calm current of her life. O balmy April, who to the withered flowers restored their colors, Kiss her fair cheek, and a grateful sigh of love cause to escape.
Vainly do I implore, that she a single word will utter—the secret of her woes unto me she will not reveal!
One glance of mine, with trouble fills her heart,
One word from me brings tears to her eyes.
O balmy April! You who to the withered flowers
Their colors, by your genial presence, do restore, etc., etc.
(Lothario, Antonio and the before-named.)

ANTONIO: Signor—

WILHELM: What do you want now?

ANTONIO: (Giving him a letter.) This letter I do bring you.

WILHELM: (Prenant la lettre et le congèdiant.) Merci.
(ANTONIO sort, Il lit.)
"Philine vous suivait, fuyez, elle est ici."
Un avis de Laërte.
(Courant vers la chambre de Mignon et s'arretânt)
Ah, Mignon, la voiçi.

MIGNON: Ou suis-je? Je respire un air plus profonde
L'azur est plus profonde.
Dans le flot pur de ce lac transparent
Se reflète un bois sombre.
Une voile glisse dans l'ombre.
Quelle fraicheur! et ce palais dont les jardins descendent vers la grève
Il me semble avoir tout cela dans une rêve
Lothario! Wilhelm! Je t'appelais,
Je suis heureuse! l'air m'enivre!
Mon coeur a cessé de souffrir!
Je renais! . . . Je me sens revivre!
Mignon ne craint plus de mourir!

WILHELM: Pauvre enfant! plus de creintes vaines!
Cet air pur va te ranimer!
Un sang nouveau gonfle tes veines,
Mignon doit vivre pour aimer!

MIGNON: Oui, je te crois! Je veux te croire!
Parle-moi! parle encor! toujours!

WILHELM: Chasse à jamais de ta mémoire
Le souvenir des mauvais jours!
(La conduisant vers la fenêtre.)
Ah! que ton âme dans mon âme s'epanche!
Chère Mignon, lève vers moi tes yeux!
Sous ce rayon divin et dans ta robe blanche,
Tu m'apparais comme un ange des cieux!

MIGNON: (Souriant tristement.)
Non, c'est toujours Mignon!

WILHELM: (Tombant à ses pieds.) Mignon n'est plus la même!
Mignon a tout mon coeur et c'est elle que j'aime!

MIGNON: Toi! m'aimer! que dis-tu!
Souvienstoi du passé!
Et ne réveille pas un espoir insensé! . . .
(S'échappant de ses bras.)
Ton coeur n'est pas à moi! . . . Ton coeur est à Philine!

WILHELM: Philine est loin de nous . . . Et je ne l'aime pas!

WILHELM: A letter, you say?
(Opens the letter and reads.)
"Filina is on your track, Fly—already is she here!"
the hand is surely that of Laertes!
(Running to Mignon's room.)
(He stops short as Mignon enters.)
It is she!

MIGNON: Where am I! What balmy air is this that now I breathe?
Ah! how bright seems the blue of heaven!
The smooth mirror of yon sunny lake
Doth placidly reflect the outline of the hills;
A white sail skims the surface of the waves.
How beauteous is the scene.
Ah, this splendid mansion!
This garden on the hill-side situated;
All this I dimly now recall,
Like to faint memories of one's childhood's dreams
(Calling.)
Lothario! Wilhelm!
Happy! aye, thrice blessed am I;
My heart no longer feels grief,
To new life I seem to awake—
The fear of death no more haunts me!

WILHELM: Yes! new hope your heart inspires;
Thy much-loved native air, your life will save;
O maiden, banish now the grief,
That so long has bowed you down,
Live. and live to love!

MIGNON: Yes, dear one, I will live—to trust in you!
Speak! oh, speak, for ever!

WILHELM: Chase then from your troubled mind,
The memory of dark days gone by.
Ah, yes! my very soul seems to blend with yours!
O loving one, on me your bright eyes turn;
With that sweet radiant face, and robe of spotless white,
You seem an angel truly.

MIGNON: (With a melancholy smile.) And yet I am but what I ever was!

WILHELM: Nay, you are not now the same.
My heart's idol! You're now my treasure found!

MIGNON: Heavens! do I believe aright?
And dare you say you love me?
Not long since it was Filina whom you loved.

WILHELM: No, when you are at my side,
Of her I think no more.

MIGNON: (Revenant vers Wilhelm et lui tendant la main.) Est-il vrai! . . . parle! . . . O joie ineffable et divine!
Je puis te dire enfin! . . . Mais parlons bas . . . bien bas! . . .

LA VOIX de Philine: (Au dehors.)
"Je suis Titania la blonde,
Titania, fille de l'air!"

WILHELM: Philine!

MIGNON: (Courant à la fenêtre.)
Encore elle! . . . encore cette femme! . . .
(A part.)
O mon secret, reste au fond de mon âme!

MIGNON: Je reconnaisais sa voix!
Je l'entends! je la vois!
C'est elle encore? c'est elle qui te cherche et t'appelle!
Ne m'interroge pas!
Je dois me taire, hélas!
Je ne veux plus parler! je ne parlerai pas!
(MIGNON se laisse tomber dans un fauteuil.)

WILHELM: Ah, malheurese enfant! . . . Ses mains sont glacées.
Mignon, toi que j'aime, ah! reviens, toi.
(MIGNON reprend ses senses.)
Elle ouvre les yeux. C'est moi qui t'appelle.

MIGNON: Je n'entends plus rien.
N'est-ce pas un rêve?

WILHELM: Non, ce n'est qu'un rêve, un rêve menteur,
Ou la fièvre encore égare ton coeur.

MIGNON: La vièvre, dis-tu? Celui qui m'aime c'est Lothario.
Pourquoi n'est-il pas près de moi?
(Elle se tourne vers la porte du fond.)
Ecoute! Oui, j'entends son pas.

WILHELM: Nul ne peut venir de là.
(LOTHARIO parait.)

LOTHARIO: Mignon, Wilhelm, salut, à vous!
Soyez les bienvenus chez moi.

WILHELM: (À part.) Que veut'il dire?

MIGNON: (Etonnée.) Sous ces riches est-ce lui que je vois!

MIGNON: (Ecstatically.) Oh heavens! it's true!
Oh joy immense, unspeakable!
At last, then, the secret I'll avow to you . . .

FILINA: (Outside.) "The fair Titania am I, Titania by all on earth beloved."

WILHELM: (Aside.) Great heaven! Filina!

MIGNON: (Running to the window.) That woman still!
(Aside.)
O fatal secret, die in my heart!

MIGNON: Yes, yes, her voice it is,
Go, get you from my side.
Listen! Listen! it's she.
Did you hear? she draws nearer.
Ah, speak to me no more,
My voice, my speech, do fail
(Mignon falls on a seat.)

WILHELM: (Sadly.) Poor girl, her hands are icy cold!
(Tenderly.)
Take heart, dear girl,
Resume your senses!
(Mignon recovers her consciousness.)
Her eyes she opens!
It is I, Mignon, who calls you!

MIGNON: (Terrified.) The hateful voice, I now no longer hear;
Perchance I did but dream.

WILHELM: Yes! It was but a vain, delusive dream.
The dreadful fever still overclouds your sense.

MIGNON: (Sadly.) The fever you say?
No, that is not true;
The only one who loves me is Lothario!
Why do I not see him at my side?
(A noise is heard at back of stage.)
Listen! It is he!
I hear him coming.
(Pointing to door at back.)

WILHELM: Through that door, none can pass!
(The door at back is suddenly burst open, and Lothario appears on the threshold. He is attired in a rich garb of dark velvet—he advances slowly, bearing in his hand a small coffer.)

LOTHARIO: Mignon, Wilhelm, I do greet you!
Welcome, to this my house!
(In tones of mingled surprise and pity.)

WILHELM: Oh Heaven!

MIGNON: (Surprised.) Lothario! and in this rich attire?

LOTHARIO: Tout ici m'appartient! Regarde, enfant, admire! . . . En ce palais j'étais maître autrefois!	LOTHARIO: Here, all now belongs to me. Know, dear girl, that of this wealthy mansion, I was once the lord.
WILHELM et Mignon: (Les yeux fixés sur Lothario.) Je ne reconnais plus son regard ni sa voix	MIGNON: (To Wilhelm, contemplating Lothario with surprise.) I scarcely do recognize him—his look so wild, His words so strange . . . .
LOTHARIO: (Déposant la cassette sur la table, et s'approchant de MIGNON.) Oublions nos temps de misére! . . . Je t'apporte un don précieux, Il adoucira, je l'espère, L'ennui de ton coeur soucieux . . .	LOTHARIO: (Placing the little coffer on the table and approaching Mignon.) O maiden now, the past forget, A treasure rich, I here present to you; The trouble of your aching heart It will quickly calm.
MIGNON et WILHELM: Je crois deviner un mystère Que trahit l'éclat de ses yeux! . . .	WILHELM: Mignon. From those eyes, with oppressed woe, What fire unwonted now gleams!
LOTHARIO: Cette cassette est là depuis de bien longs mois! (A Mignon.) C'est à toi de l'ouvrir . . . (Il étend la main vers la cassette.)	LOTHARIO: Full many a month this coffer has lain in yonder chamber. (To Mignon.) It is yours to open.
MIGNON: Que contient-elle? . . .	MIGNON: Say! what does it enclose?
LOTHARIO: (Sans détourner la tête.) Vois.	LOTHARIO: See for yourself.
MIGNON: ((Ouvrant la cassette.) Une écharpe d'enfant!	MIGNON: (Running to the coffer and opening it.) A child's scarf.
LOTHARIO: (Le regard fixe, immobile au milieu de la scène.) D'or et d'argent brodée . . . Oui, je l'avais pieusement gardèe!	LOTHARIO: (Comtemplating it with a fixed stare.) It is embroidered with silver, Ah! with what fond love in that recess, I have preserved it.
WILHELM: Quelle est cette relique et qui donc la porta? . . . Parle!	WILHELM: But tell us—who did wear this beauteous scarf?
LOTHARIO: Sperata! . . .	LOTHARIO: Sperata!
MIGNON: Sperata! Déjà ce nom a frappe mon oreille! Un souvenir confus, A ce doux nom dans mon âme s'éville! Est-ce l'écho lointain d'un passé qui n'est plus? . . .	MIGNON: Sperata? The name seems familiar to my ear, At its sweet sound, vague memories do stir within me, Memories that do recall a time, long, long since passed away.
WILHELM et MIGNON: Des pleurs mouillent ses yeux . . .	WILHELM & MIGNON: See, see! his eyes do stream with tears!
LOTHARIO: (Toujours immobile sur le devant du théâtre et comme absorbé par ses souvenirs.) Ne vois-tu pas aussi Un bracelet de corail?	LOTHARIO: (Still motionless, and absorbed in his thoughts.) Do you not also find, A coral ornament?
MIGNON: (Tirant le bracelet de la cassette.) Le voici! (Essayant le bracelet à son bras.) Trop petit pour mon bras! . . .	MIGNON: (Drawing forth a bracelet.) It is here, (Endeavoring to put a bracelet on her arm.) It is too small for me!
LOTHARIO: (Tristement.) Trop grand! trop grand pour elle Elle ne voulait pas attendre au lendemain Pour porter un bijou qui la rendait au plus belle! Mais le bijou toujours lui glissait de le main!	LOTHARIO: (Sadly.) Yet, once, it was too large, Sperata never would wait till the morrow To wear a jewel that enhanced her charms; Yon bracelet ever from her hand did fall.
MIGNON: (Très-émue.) Mais le bijou toujours lui glissait de la main!	MIGNON: (Aside, repeating sorrowfully.) But the jewel always glistened on her hand!
WILHELM: Qu'as-tu, Mignon? Tu trembles et tu pleures!	WILHELM: (To Mignon.) What ails you? speak! What secret grief now torments you?
LOTHARIO: (À Mignon.) Regarde encore!	LOTHARIO: (To Mignon.) Search the coffer deeper still.
MIGNON: (Retirant de la cassette un petit livre à coins d'argent.) Un livre d'heures!	MIGNON: (Producing from the coffer a little Prayer Book.) A little Prayer Book!
LOTHARIO: Hélas! je crois toujours la voir, Lettre à lettre, épeler sa prière du soir!	LOTHARIO: Even now, methinks, I hear her angel voice in prayer. She ever prayed when day began to decline.
MIGNON: (Ouvrant le livre et lisant.) O Vierge Marie, Le Seigneur est avec vous! Abaissez vos regards si doux, Sur l'enfant qui prie! . . .	MIGNON: (Opening the book and reading.) O power supreme, Our lives are in your hands, Promise to keep me in Thy Holy care, Grant, that from the right path, I never may stray.
LOTHARIO: (Penché vera elle.) Elle priait ainsi, mains jointes, à genoux!	LOTHARIO: Thus, in the days gone by, Thus did my Sperata pray!
MIGNON: (MIGNON laissant échapper le livre et tombant à genoux, les yeux levés au ciel et les mains jointes, comme un enfant en prière.) Vous qui bercez sur vos genoux, Le divin Sauveur de la terre, Conservez l'enfant à sa mère, O madone, priez pour nous! . . .	MIGNON: (Lets fall the book from her hands, kneels down, clasps her hands, raises her eyes to heaven, and assumes the look and attitude of a child at prayer.) O Thou, who, in Heaven above, All mortal hearts read, Teach me to love my parents dear, Preserve me to them, evermore!
LOTHARIO: (Les mains étendues vera Mignon.) Est-ce Dieu qui l'inspire? Elle achève sans lire!	LOTHARIO: (Deeply agitated, extending his arm to Mignon.) Just Heaven! what does this mean? She knows the book's contents by heart.
MIGNON: (Se levant et s'exaltant de plus en plus.) Lothario! . . . Wilhelm! . . . suis-je encore en délire? . . . Je devine! . . . je vois! . . . je sens! . . . je ne puis dire! . . . Où m'avez-vous conduite et quel est ce pays?	MIGNON: (Rising with increasing fervor.) Lothario mine! what secret proof now works within my breast? I feel—I know—but yet cannot explain! (To Wilhelm.) Where have thou brought me? What hills are those that rise over there.
WILHELM: L'Italie!	WILHELM: They are the shores of Italy.
MIGNON: O rayons de céleste lumière! O souvenirs! . . . (Aprè avoir fait un effort pour rassembler ses souvenirs elle s'élance avec un cri vers la porte du fond, disparait un moment dans la coulisse et revient pâle et chancelante.) Là! là! l'image de ma mere! . . . Et sa chambre est deserté! . . .	MIGNON: O beauteous light! O sweet, reviving, gales! O memory! (After having, with a violent effort, endeavored to recall her scattered recollections, she rushes with a wild cry to the door at back, disappears for a moment, and then returns, pale and scarcely able to stand.) Yonder my mother's picture hangs! Her room, alas! seems deserted!
LOTHARIO: (Qui a suivi tous ses mouvements avec anxiété, lui tendant les bras et courant à elle.) Ah! ma fille!	LOTHARIO: (Who has followed her every movement, now rushes to her with extended arms.) My child!
MIGNON: Mon père! (Elle tombe dans les bras de Lothario.)	MIGNON: My father! (Throws herself into Lothario's arms.)

LOTHARIO: C'est mon enfant! . . . c'est elle! . . . O Dieu! je te bénis!	LOTHARIO: At length I've found my daughter dear. All praise to you, O Heaven!
MIGNON: Oui, je vous reconnais mon père! . . . mon pays!	MIGNON: All praise to Heaven be given! I at last have found my home, my father.
WILHELM: Mignon, retrouve enfin son père et son pays!	WILHELM: All praise be given to Heaven! She has found her home, her father! (Overcome by violent emotion.)
MIGNON: (Frappé d'une violente commotion.) Ah!	MIGNON: Ah!
WILHELM: (Effrayé.) Mignon!	WILHELM: Mignon.
LOTHARIO: (Soutenant Mignon.) Ma fille! (Elle suffoque.)	LOTHARIO: (Supporting her.) My Child!
WILHELM: Dieu! qu'a-t-elle donc?	WILHELM: (Alarmed.) Speak, in pity, speak! what is it you feel?
MIGNON: (Elle chancelle.) Je meurs! (Elle tombe.) (Wilhelm va ouvrir la fenêtre et revient près de Mignon. Peu à MIGNON revient à elle.)	MIGNON: (Falling to the ground.) I faint, I die!
WILHELM: Le bonheur est içi maintenant. Elle revit! Chère Mignon? Je t'aime, oui, je t'aime!	WILHELM: (Running to throw open one of the windows, and immediately returning to Mignon.) Oh dearest treasure, do not droop! My very life depends on yours! (Mignon slowly recovers her consciousness.) Ah! did you know how I adore you!
LOTHARIO: Son coeur se souvient.	LOTHARIO: See, she revives—her sense she now recovers!
MIGNON: (Reconnaissant Lothario et Wilhelm, comme dans une extase.) Ah, c'est là que tu voulais vivre, Aimer, aimer et mourir!	MIGNON: (Recognizing Wilhelm and Lothario—almost ecstatic with joy.) "Ah! it is there that I will live, love, and die!
LOTHARIO et WILHELM: Ah, c'est la que tu dois vivre, Pour être heureuse et pour aimer! C'est là, oui, c'est là, pour toujours unia!	WILHELM, and LOTHARIO: Ah, it is there that you shall live, To be happy and to love! It is there, yes, there forever united.

Ernani (1844)

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE

Ernani takes place in Spain and Aix-la-Chapelle in 1519. This opera in four acts is set to a libretto by Francesco Maria Piave based on Victor Hugo's Hernani, ou l'Honneur Castillian, and was first performed at the Teatro La Fenice in Venice on March 9, 1844. Ernani, who has been declared an outlaw by Don Carlo, King of Spain, is in love with Elvira and plans to kidnap her from the castle of her fiancé, Don Ruy Gomez de Silva. The king, who is also in love with Elvira, finds Ernani in her rooms. De Silva challenges both men to a duel. The king pretends Ernani is his messenger and helps him escape, but Ernani disguises himself as a pilgrim and hides at de Silva's castle on the day of de Silva's wedding to Elvira. De Silva discovers him and offers to protect him. When de Silva refuses to tell the king where Ernani is hiding, the king takes Elvira as hostage. De Silva challenges Ernani to a duel. Ernani refuses, pledging instead to take his own life if de Silva blows the horn Ernani has given him. The Electors meet to plan the succession of the Holy Roman Empire. De Silva and Ernani, among others, draw lots to decide who will kill the king. Ernani wins, but will not relinquish the honor to de Silva, who has offered to return the horn in exchange for the opportunity. Don Carlo is elected Holy Roman Emperor and pardons the captured plotters thanks to Elvira's pleading. He also grants Ernani and Elvira permission to wed. During the wedding the horn sounds three times. Ernani and Elvira entreat de Silva to allow Ernani to live, but their words fall upon deaf ears. Ernani kills himself. Elvira collapses over his body.

■ ACTO I

SCENA I

Montagne dell'Aragona. Vedesi in lontano il Moresco Castello di D. RUY GOMEZ DE SILVA. È presso il tramonto.
Coro di Ribelli Montanari e Banditti; Mangiano e bevono; parte giuocano e parte assettano le armi.

TUTTI: Evviva—beviam—Nel vino cerchiam
Almeno un piacer!
Che resta al bandito–
Da tutti sfuggito,
Se manca il bicchier?
Giuochiamo, che l'oro—
E vano tesoro,
Giuochiam, se la vita—
Non fa più gradita
Ridente beltà!
Per boschi e pendici—
Abbiam soli amici
Moschetto e pugnal:
Quand'esce la notte—
Nell'orride grotte
Ne forman guancial.

SCENA II

(ERNANI, mesto si mostra da una vetta.)

TUTTI: Ernani pensoso!
Perchè, o valoroso,
Sul volto hai pallor?
Commune abbiam sorte. In vita ed in morte
Son tuoi braccio e cor.
Qual freccia scagliata, la meta segnata
Sapremo colpir.
Non avvi mortale che il piombo o il pugnale
Non possa ferir.

ERNANI: Mercè, diletti, amici
A tanto amor, mercè—
Udite or tutti del mio cor gli affanni,
E se voi negherete il vostro aiuto
Forse per sempre Ernani fia perduto.
Come rugiada al cespite
D'un appassito fiore,
D'aragonese vergine
Scendeami voce al core.
Fu quello il primo palpito
D'amor che mi beò
Il vecchio Silva stendere
Osa su lei la mano—
Domani trarla al talamo
Confida l'inumano—
S'ella m'è tolta, ahi misero!
D'affanno morirò.
Si rapisca—

CORO: Sia rapita!
Ma in seguirci sarà ardita?

ERNANI: Me 'l giurò.

CORO: Dunque verremo:
Al castel ti seguiremo.
Quando notto il cielo copra
(Attorniandolo.)
Tu ne avrai compagni all'opra:
Dagli sgherri d'un rivale
Ti fia scudo ogni pugnale,
Vieni, Ernani; la tua bella
De banditi fia la stella.
Saran premio al tuo valore
Le dolcezze dell'amor.

ERNANI: Dell'esilio nel dolore
Angiol fia consolator.
(O tu che l'alma adora),
Vien, la mia vita infiora;
Per noi d'ogni altro bene

■ ACT I

SCENE I

The Mountains of Aragon Moorish Castle of D. RUY GOMEZ DE SILVA in the distance. It is near sunset.
Chorus of Rebel Mountaineers and Banditti; some are drinking, some playing.

ALL: Drink, drink let the bandit drink,
Let him drink without thought or measure
What's left to the scouted bandit—
What's left but wine and pleasure.
Play, play, if beauty fails
To please with her laughing eye;
Play, play, stake life itself
On the turn of the reckless die.
Our trusty guns, in the wood, in the town are
Our only comrades;
And they make our pillows, when we lay down
On the cavern's rugged floor.

SCENE II

(ERNANI is seen on the height.)

ALL: Ernani the thoughtful valiant chief,
Your cheek is wan with concern,
And yet your fate, be it life or death,
Your faithful followers share.
Our hearts and arms alike are yours,
And were an arrow sped
Against you at the slightest sign,
We'd ward it from your head;
Though mortal heart was never found
That sword or bullet could not wound.

ERNANI:
Brothers and friends, receive my thanks
For a love so true as yours;
You ask me why it is I grieve—
Now listen to the cause:
This hour, Ernani needs
Your aid the most, and if refused he's lost.
As falling dews, upon the flower
That droops, impart new life.
So fell the sweet voice of a maid
Upon my ravished heart—For me it was love's earliest ray.
Vain joy! an aged wretch would dare
To drag him from my side;
Tomorrow's sun sees my despair,
And sees her Silva's bride.

ALL: But will she dare to follow us?

ERNANI: She gave me her word.

CHORUS: With you when night below, draws down.
The shades of heaven
We'll share your toils, dare your rival,
Love's sweets will crown the brave.
Then hope—your maid of Aragon
Shall be the Bandit's star.

ERNANI: O angel of comfort in exile and strife,
You who my soul worships, come brighten my life.
Of all other pleasures shall love fill

Il loco amor terrà
Il loco amor terrà.
Purchè sul tuo bel viso vega brillare il riso
Gli stenti suoi le pene Ernani scorderà, ah!
(S'avviano al castello.)

SCENA III

Ricche stanze di ELVIRA nel Castello di SILVA. E'notte.)

ELVIRA: Sorta è la notte, e Silva non ritorna!
Ah, non tornasse ei più!
Questo odiato veglio,
Che quale immondo spettro ognor m'insegue
Col favellar d'amore,
Più sempre Ernani mi configge in core.
Ernani!
Ernani, involami
All'abborrito amplesso.
Fuggiam—se teco vivere
Mi sia d'amor concesso.
Per antri e lande inospite
Ti seguirà il mio piè
Un Eden di delizia,
Saran quegli antri a me.

SCENA IV

Detta ed ANCELLE, che entrano portando ricchi doni di nozze.

ANCELLE: Quante d'Iberia giovani
Te invidieran, signora!
Quante ambirieno il talamo
Di Silva che t'adora!
Questi monili splendidi
Lo sposo ti destina, Tu sembrerai regina
Per gemme e per beltà,
Sposa domani in giubilo
Te ognum saluterà

ELVIRA: M'è il voto ingenuo
Che il vostro cor mi fa.
(*Tutto sprezzo che d'Ernani
Non favella a questo core,
Non v'ha gemma che in amore
Possa l'odio tramutar.
Vola, o tempo, presto reca di mia fuga il lieto istante
Vola, o tempo, al core amante
E supplizio l'indugiar?*) CORO: (Sarà sposa, non amante Se non mostra giubilar.)

(Partono).

the place,
And if a sweet smile illuminates your face,
It will chase every care from the heart of Ernani.
And he'll joyfully bear fatigue, care, and envy.
(They move towards the Castle.)

SCENE III

Suite of apartments belonging to ELVIRA, in SILVA'S Castle. Night.

ELVIRA: It is night, and Silva does not come—if only he never came!
This old man, who, like some foul ghost,
Haunts and pursues me ever.
With words of love, that only wake
My deepest hatred, while they make Me love Ernani more.
Ernani, Ernani!
O! would that I could fly
From this detested suitor, to live or die with you.
Inhospitable lands—even should they be deserts,
It would seem an Eden of delight if shared with you.

SCENE IV

The above and LADIES, who enter carrying rich wedding gifts.

LADIES: How many will envy your lord! we come laden,
From him, fairest lady, with these brilliant stores
He destines for you! every Iberian maiden
Will envy the person whom Silva adores.
Gaze on these jewels—with them and your beauty
You'll move through the throng like a queen in her pride;
Tomorrow, how joyfully all will salute you.
How will they envy you! beautiful bride!

ELVIRA: Thanks for these wishes—they do not touch my heart;
How can they?
Ernani has no part in them.
To turn hatred to love, no gem has the power,
Fly quickly, O time! and hasten the hour.
To a fond heart what torture is like delay?
It is her hand, not her heart, that the bride gives away;
By her manners so joyless it is easy to see
That a wife, but not fond one, Elvira will be.
(Exeunt)

SCENA V

D. CARLO e Giovanna.

CARLO: Fa che a me venga—e tosto—

GIOVANNA: Signor, da lunghi giorni
Pensosa ognora ogni consorzio evita,
E Silva assente—

Carlo: Intendo
Or m'obbedisci—

GIOVANNA: Sia
(Parte.)

SCENA VI

D.CARLO: Perchè Elvira rapi la pace mia?
Io l'amo-il mio potere—l'amor mio
Ella non cura—ed io
Preferito mi veggo,
Un nemico giurato, un masnadiero—Quel cor tentiam solo una volta ancora.

SCENA VII

Detto ed ELVIRA.

ELVIRA: Sire!—fa ver?
voi stesso!—ed a quest'ora?

CARLO: Qui mi trasse amor possente—

ELVIRA: Non mi amate—voi mentite.

CARLO: Che favelli?
Un re non mente!

ELVIRA: Da qui dunque ora partite!

CARLO: Vieni meco.

ELVIRA: Tolga Iddio!

CARLO: Vien, mi segui, ben vedrai
Quanto io t'ami—

ELVIRA: E l'onor mio?

CARLO: Di mia corte onor sarai,

ELVIRA: No!—cessate—

CARLO: E un masnadiero
Fai superbo del tuo amor?

ELVIRA: Ogni cor serba un mistero.

CARLO: Quello ascolta del mio cor.
Da quel dì che t'ho veduta
Bella come un primo amore
La mia pace fu perduta,
Tuo fu il palpito del core,
Cedi, Elvira, ai voti miei;
Puro amor desio da te;
Gioia e vita esser tu dei
Del tuo amante del tuo Re.

SCENE V

D. CARLO and GIOVANNA.

CARLO: Go, send her to me, quickly.

GIOVANNA: Sire, for many days
She is most thoughtful, nor will her eyes raise
On any one; Silva himself does say—

CARLO: Enough, enough! now instantly obey.

GIOVANNA: Be it even so, my lord.
(Exit GIOVANNA).

SCENE VI

D. CARLO: Why does Elvira rob my soul of peace?
I love, yet does she disregard
My power, and all my love's reward
Is this—to know
A rival to myself preferred—
A robber and my foe!
My heart shall make a last appeal,
To prove once more if hers can feel.

SCENE VII

The above, and ELVIRA

ELVIRA: Sire, can it be true?
What brings you at this hour?

CARLO: Lady, my love for you.

ELVIRA: It is false!
You know not love's power.

CARLO: What mean these words? this to a King!

ELVIRA: This moment, then depart, I say.

CARLO: With you—

ELVIRA: O Heaven!

CARLO: Away, away! Elvira you shall see
How deep and true my love is for you.

ELVIRA: And my honor?

CARLO: You shall be the star of my court.

ELVIRA: Cease in pity! Oh! cease, for the love of heaven.

CARLO: Your love is given to a bandit, a robber.

ELVIRA: Every heart has its secret.

CARLO: Then listen to mine.
From the first day I saw you my soul was all yours
"It is a pure love I ask, peace and joy you can bring
To the life of your lover—oh! yield to your King.

ELVIRA: Fiero sangue d'Aragona
Nelle vene a me trascorre—
Lo splendor d'un corona
Leggi al cor non puòte imporre—
Aspirar non deggio al trono,
Nè i favor vogl'io d'un Re.
L'amor vostro oh sire, è un dono
Troppo grande o vil per me.

CARLO: Non t'ascolto—mia sarai—
Vien mi segui—
(Afferrandole un braccio).

ELVIRA: (fiera e dignitosa). Il Re dov'è?
Nol ravviso—

CARLO: Lo saprai—

ELVIRA: So che questo basta a me.
Mi lasciate o d'ambo il core (Strappandosi dal fianco il pugnale).
Disperata ferirò.

CARLO: Ho i miei fidi—

ELVIRA: Quale terrore!

SCENA VIII

Detti ed ERNANI, che viene da un uscio segreto, e va a porsi tra loro.

ERNANI: Fra quei fidi io pur qui sto.

CARLO: Tu se' Ernani! me'l dice lo sdegno
Che in vederti quest'anima invade:
Tu se' Ernani! il bandito, l'indegno
Turbatore di queste contrade—
A un mio cenno perduto saresti—
Va—ti sprezzo, pietate ho di te.
Pria che l'ira in me tutta si desti,
Fuggi, o stolto, l'offeso tuo Re.

ERNANI: Me conosci? tu dunque saprai
Con qual odio t'abborre il mio cuore!
Beni, onori rapito tu m'hai.
Dal tuo morto fu il'mio genitore.
Perchè l'ira s'accresca ambi amiamo
Questa donna insidiata da te.
In odiarci, in amor pari siamo,
Vieni adunque, disfidoti, o Re.

ELVIRA: (Entrando disperata fra loro col pugnale sguainato). No crudeli, d'amor non m'è pegno L'ira estrema che v'arde nel core —
Perchè al mondo di scherno far segno
Di sua casa e d'Elvira l'onore?

ELVIRA: The proud blood of Aragon swells in each vein.
And I disdain the pride of a crown in my heart
To your throne and its pomp to your favor, O sire
Too humble am I or too proud to aspire.

CARLO: I do not hear you. Follow, and share my proud lot.
(Seizing her arm).

ELVIRA: (proudly). Who said it was the King? I do not see him.

CARLO: You soon shall behold him, you soon shall be mine.

ELVIRA: (snatching from his side a dagger). Wait, or this sword drinks my heart's blood and yours!
Begone, and this instant: tempt not my despair.

CARLO: Tried followers are waiting.
Elvira, beware!

ELVIRA: O horror!

SCENE VIII

The above, and ERNANI, who enters by a secret door, and places himself between them.

ERNANI: Among your tried followers see Another.

CARLO: Ernani! I feel that it is he:
The hate and the rage in my heart tell me so;
But scorn is the strongest, and scorn bids you to go.
Ernani, vile brigand! that troubles this land.
Begone while I pity: a sign from my hand!
Would destroy you; around you my guards it would bring.
Fly, fool, while mercy lasts; do not provoke the King.

ERNANI: If you know me, then do you Know also the dark cause
I have to hate you—why I stand
A rebel to your laws.
Wealth, honor, you have stripped me of—
Through you my father died;
And now to make the measure full,
You covet my bride,
And with deceitful words would hide
How treacherous is your flame.
Defend yourself, Prince, we are equal now—
Our love and hate is the same.

ELVIRA: (placing herself between them with the drawn dagger). Forbear! forbear! by this fierce rage,
You think to prove your love?
To make my name a mark of scorn—
Is this your boasted love?

S'anco un gesto vi sfugge, un accento
Qui trafitta cadrò al vostro piè.
No, quest'alma, in si fiero momento
Non conosce l'amante nè il Re.

SCENA IX

Detti e SILVA seguito poscia da' suoi Cavalieri e da GIOVANNA colle Ancelle. CARLO, starà in modo da non essere facilmente conosciuto da SILVA. ELVIRA cerca di ricomporsi, e cela pugnale.

SILVA: Che mai vegg'io!
Nel penetral più scuro
Di mia magione, presso a lei che sposa
Esser dovrà d'un Silva,
Due seduttori io scorga?
Entrate, olà miei fidi cavalieri,
(Entra il Coro.)
Sia ognuno testimon del disonore,
Dell'onta che si reca al suo signore
(Infelice! e tuo credevi
Si bel giglio immacolato!
Del tuo crine sulle nevi
Piomba invece il disonor.
Ah perchè l'etade in seno
Giovin core m'ha serbato!
Mi doveano gli anni almeno
Far di gelo pure il cor?)
(a CARLO ed ERNANI). L'offeso onor, signori, Inulto non andrà.
Scudieri, l'azza a me, la spada mia—
L'antico Silva vuol vendetta—e tosto
Uscite—

ERNANI: Ma signore—

SILVA: Non un detto ov'io parlo—

CARLO: Signor Duca—

SILVA: Favelleran le spade: uscite o vili—
(A CARLO.)
E tu primo—vieni—

SCENA X

Detti JAGO e D. RICCARDO—

JAGU: Il regal scudiero, Don Riccardo—

SILVA: Ben venga spettator di mia vendetta—

Let but another angry word,
Another threat, be breathed;
Deep in my breast this sword
That instant shall be sheathed.
Know that Elvira in this hour,
Defies both King's and lover's power.

SCENE IX

The above and Silva, followed by his Attendants and by GIOVANNA, with her Maidens. CARLO stands in such a position as not to be recognized by SILVA. ELVIRA tries to regain her composure, and hides the dagger.

SILVA: What do I see? What do these sounds of strife mean?
Here, in the sanctuary of my home,
Two base seducers with my destined wife!
What ho! faithful retainers, come.
(Chorus enters)
Bear witness to this insult to your lord.
Oh! woe is me, that you who I adored —
Oh! woe is me, that I thought you as pure
As a lily gazing upward to the skies.
Should heap dishonor on me! - Why has age,
What thins my locks, not turned my heart to ice?
(To CARLO and ERNANI).
For you, insulted honor shall not go
Unpunished — to the old man there remain
His sword and shield; vengeance or death will show
His sword and shield are left him not in vain
Yes, though the old man's hand may tremble now.
It is passion that makes it shake. -
Youll see before long,
That when it is aiming at your dastard hearts
The old man's hand will be both firm and strong.
Leave this place.

ELVIRA: But sire —

SILVA: Where I am let none speak.

CARLO: Lord Duke —

SILVA: Leave idle parlance to our swords.
Villains, begone! - (To CARLO). - But advance first

SCENE X

The above, JAGO and RICCARDO.

JAGO: The regal armor-bearer, Don Riccardo.

SILVA: You come at a fit moment; you shall behold
My vengeance.

RICCARDO: Sol fedeltade e omaggio al Re si spetta.
(Indicando CARLO, al cui fianco prende posto.)

TUTTI: Oh cielo! è desso il Re!

ELVIRA ed ERNANI: (tra loro). Io tremo sol per te!

CARLO: (a RICCARDO). Vedi come il buon vegliardo
Or del cor lira depone,
Lo ritorna alla ragione
La presenza del suo Re!

RICCARDO: (à CARLO). Più feroce a Silva in petto
De' gelosi avvampa il foco,
Ma dell'ira or prende loco
Il rispetto del suo Re.

SILVA: (Ah! dagli occhi un vel mi cade!)
Credo appena a' sensi miei,
Sospettar io non potei
La presenza del mio Re!

ERNANI (piano ad ELVIRA).
M'odi, Elvira, al nuovo sole.
Saprò torti a tanto affanno;
Ma resisti al tuo tiranno.
Serba a Ernani la tua fè.

ELVIRA: (piano ad ERNANI). Tua per sempre—o questo ferro Può salvarmi dai tiranni! M'è conforto negli affanni
La costanza di mia fè.

JAGO, GIO., e CORO (fra loro).
Ben di Silva mostra il volto
L'aspra pugna che ha nel core,
Pur ei cela il suo furore
In presenza del suo Re.

SILVA: (piegando il ginocchio).
Mio signor, dolente io sono—

CARLO: Sorgi, amico, ti perdono . . .

SILVA: Questo incognito serbato . . .

CARLO: Ben lo veggo, t'ha ingannato.
Morte colse l'avo augusto,
(Appressandoglisi confidente).
Or si pensa al successore . . .
La tua fè conosco, e il core . . .
Vo'i consigli d'un fedel . . .

SILVA: Mi fia onore—onor supremo . . .

CARLO: Se ti piace il tuo castel
Questa notte occuperemo.

SILVA: Sire, I rejoice!

RICCARDO: To the King alone
My homage and my services are due.
(Indicating CARLO, at whose side he places himself.)

ALL: O Heavens! the King!

ELVIRA and ERNANI: (to each other). It is for you that I tremble alone.

CARLO: (to RICCARDO). All wrath is flown from the loyal old man's heart.

RICCARDO: (to CARLO). Though respect for the King has changed to ire,
His heart is consumed by fierce jealousy's fire.

SILVA: (Can it be true? a veil falls from my eyes,
Yet can my senses scarcely realize
The presence of my King.)

ERNANI: (aside to ELVIRA). Until the sun sinks once again in the deep,
Resist the proud tyrant, nor yield to dismay
For Ernani keep unbroken your precious faith
And tomorrow, I'll bear
you away from peril.

ELVIRA: (aside to ERNANI). You know I'm yours! know also, this steel
Can save me from tyrants — nor do I repine
In wretchedness even, it is solace to feel
That my heart, my faith will forever be yours.

JAGO, GIOVANNO AND CHORUS: (to each other) The countenance of Silva shows
How bitter his pains are, Though he restrains his fury in the presence of the King.

SILVA: (falling on his knee before the King). Sire, I regret —

CARLO: Enough, my friend, arise.

SILVA: Your incognito — the complete disguise —

CARLO: Deceived you — yes; I see it all.—Now lend your close attention.
(Approaching him with an air of secrecy.)
Know we need a friend
They talk of a successor to the throne —
Silva, your faith and loyalty are known.

SILVA: Your subject hears your words with proud delight.

CARLO: We claim your hospitality this night.

ELVIRA ed ERNANI: (Che mai sento!)

CARLO: (ad ERNANI). (Vo' salvarti)—Sul momento
(A SILVA indicando ERNANI).
Questo fido partià.

ELVIRA: (Sente il ciel di me pietà!)

ERNANI: Io tuo fido?—il sarò a tutte l'ore
(Fissando CARLO)
Come spetto che cerca vendetta,
Dal tuo spento il mio padre l'aspetta:
L'ombra amata placare saprò,
L'odio inulto che' m'arde nel core
Tutto spengere alfine potrò.

ELVIRA: (Piano ad ERNANI) Fuggi Ernani, ti serba al mio amore, Fuggi, fuggi a quest'aura funesta . . .
Qui, lo vedi, qui ognun ti desta;
Va—un accento tradire ti può.
Come tutto possedi il mio core,
La mia fede serbarti saprò.

CARLO: Più d'ogni astro vagheggio il fulgore.
(A SILVA e RICCARDO).
Di che splende cesàrea corona
Se al mio capo il destino la dona,
D'essa degno mostrarmi saprò.
A clemente giustizia e il valore
Meco ascendere in trono farò.

SILVA e RICCARDO: (a CARLO).
Nel tuo dritto confida, o signore,
E d'ogni altro più forte e più giusto,
No, giammai sopra capo più augusto,
Mai de' Cesari il lauro posò.
Chi d'Iberia possede l'amore,
Quello tutto del mondo mertò

GIOVANNA ed ANCELLE: (tra loro). Perchè mai dell'etade in sul fiore, Perchè Elvira smarrita ed oppressa,
Or che il giorno di nozze s'appressa,
Non di gioia un sorriso mostrò?
Ben si vede—l'ingenuo suo core
Simulare gli affetti non può.

JAGO e CAVALIERI: (tra loro).
Silva in gioia cangiato ha il furore.
Tutta lieta or si vede quell'alma
Come al mare ritorna la calma
Quando l'ira dei venti cessò.
La dimora del Re nuovo onore
Al castello di Silva apportò.

FINE DELL' ACTO PRIMA.

ELVIRA AND ERNANI: What do I hear?

CARLO: (to ERNANI). I fain would save you though you are a traitor
(TO SILVA.)
This is a faithful follower, let him depart.

ELVIRA: O heaven! in pity hear me!
What says he? Am
I his faithful follower? — true until I die,
I'll haunt him like a spectre; the loved shade
Of my lost parent soon shall be obeyed;
And the fierce hatred burning in my breast
Shall nerve my arm, and triumph over the rest.

ELVIRA: (aside to ERNANI). Ernani, for the love I bear you Quit this fatal place and fly!
Here your foes wait to ensnare you,
Linger not — Ernani fly.
You alone possess my faith
With you bear my trembling heart;
Every word may here betray you
For Elvira's sake depart.

CARLO: (To SILVA and RICCARDO). If more than either star or gem,
I covet that high place,
Believe the regal diadem
will grace A worthy brow.
Mercy, justice, valor, be
Enshrined on that high throne with me.

SILVA AND RICCARDO: (to CARLO). The laurels of Caesar are justly yours
Your right every rival's above; He who possesses Iberia's love is worthy to mount the world's throne

GIOVANNI AND LADIES: (to each other). Elvira does not smile; her eye
Is shining through a tear,
And yet this is her brightest hour.
Her bridal day is near.

JAGO and RETAINERS: (to each other). Silva has changed his rage to joy,
His soul is now restored to peace;
As calm descends upon the sea
When angry winds and tempests cease.

END OF ACT I

ACTO II

SCENA I

Magnifica sala del Castello di D. RUY GOMEZ DI SILVA. Porte che mettono a vari appartamenti. Intorno alle pareti veggonsi disposti, entro ricchi cornici, sormontate da corone ducali e stemmi dorati, i ritratti della famiglia dei SILVA. Presso ciascun ritratto vedesi collocata una completa armatura equestre, corrispondente all'epoca in cui il dipinto personaggio viveva. Avvi pure una ricca tavola con presso un seggiolone ducale di quercia Cavalieri e paggi di D. RUY. Dame e Damigelle di ELVIRA, riccamente abbigliate. Detti, JAGO e SILVA, che pomposamente vestito di grande di Spagna, va a sedersi sul seggiolone ducale.

SILVA: Jago, qui tosto il pellegrino adduci.
(JAGO esce, e tosto comparisce ERNANI in arnese da pellegrino).

ERNANI: Sorrida il cielo a voi.

SILVA: T'appressa, o pellegrin—
Chiedi, che brami?

ERNANI: Chiedo ospitalità.

SILVA: Fu sempre sacra ai Silva—e lo sarà
Qual tu sia, donde venga,
Io già saper non voglio
Ospite mio sei tu—
Ti manda Iddio,
Disponi—

ERNANI: A te! signor mercè.

SILVA: Non cale;
Que l'ospite è signor.

SCENA II

S'apre la porta dell'appartamento di ELVIRA, ed ella entra in ricco abbigliamento nuziale, seguita da giovani Paggi ed Ancelle.

SILVA: Vedi la sposa mia s'appressa—

ERNANI: Sposa!

SILVA (ad ERNANI). Fra un'ora.
(Ad ELVIRA.)
A che d'annello,
E di ducal corona.
Non t'adornasti, Elvira?

ERNANI: Sposa!
Fra un'ora?
Adunque
Di nozzo il dono io voglio offrirti, o Duca.

SILVA: Tu?

ERNANI: Sì.

ELVIRA: (Che ascolta!)

SILVA: E quale!

ERNANI: Il capo mio;
Lo prendi.
(gettando l'abita do pellegrino.)

ELVIRA: (Ernani vive ancor!) Gran Dio!

ERNANI: Oro quant oro ogni avido
Puote saziar desio,
A tutti v'offro, abbiatelo
Prezzo del sangue mio—
Mille guerrier m'inseguono,
Seccome belva i cani—
Sono il bandito Ernani,
Odio me stesso e il dì.

ELVIRA: (Oimè, si perde il misero!)

SILVA: (ai suoi,) Smarrita ha la ragione.

ERNANI: I miei dispersi fuggono,
Vostro son io prigione,
Al Re mi date, e premio—

SILVA: Ciò non sarà, lo giuro:
Rimanti qui securo,
Silva giammai tradì
In queste mura ogni ospite
Ha i dritti d'un fratello: Olà miei fidi, s'armino
Le torri del castello,
Seguitemi —
(Accena ad Elvira di entrare nelle sue stanze colle Ancele; e seguito do' suoi parte).

SCENA III

(ELVIRA, partito SILVA, fa alcuni passi per seguire le Ancelle, indi si ferma, e uscite quelle, torna ansiosa ad ERNANI, che sdegnosamente la respinge.)

ERNANI Tu, perfida.
Come dissarmi ardisci?

ELVIRA: A te il mio sen, ferisci,
Ma fui e son fedel.
Fama te spento credere
Fece dovunque.

ERNANI: Spento!
Io vivo ancora!

ELVIRA: Memore
Del fatto giuramento
Sull'ara stessa estringuere,
(mostrandogli il pugnal celato.)
Me di pugnale volea,
Non son, non sono rea
Come tu sei crudele.

ERNANI: Tergi il pianto — mi perdona,
Fu delirio — t'amo ancor.
Caro accento! al cor mi suona
Più possente del dolor.

ACT II

SCENE I

A magnificent hall in the Castle of D. RUY GOMEZ DI SILVA, Doors leading to various apartments. Portraits of the SILVA family, handsomely framed and surmounted by ducal coronets and coats of arms, are dispersed about the wall. By the side of each portrait is hanging a complete suit of equestrian armor, corresponding to the period in which the personage represented lived. There is also a handsome table, and near it a ducal oak chair.
Knights and pages of D. RUY. Ladies of ELVIRA. The above, JAGO and SILVA, who pompously dressed as a grandee of Spain, seats himself on the ducal chair.

SILVA: Let the holy pilgrim enter.
(JAGO goes out, and ERNANI immediately appears in a pilgrim's dress.)

ERNANI: Heaven smile on you, gracious knight.

SILVA: Pilgrim, say what you desire.

ERNANI: Shelter beneath your roof this night.

SILVA: Hospitality was ever
Sacred in a Silva's heart.
We do not ask to know you stranger.
Welcome, who ever you are;
Heaven be with you, here repose.
Be seated at our festal board.

ERNANI: Take my thanks.

SILVA: We do not ask them.
Here the guest is as the lord.

SCENE II

(The door of ELVIRA'S apartment opens, and she enters in a bridal dress, followed by Pages and Ladies.)

SILVA: See my bride advances.

ERNANI: Your bride?

SILVA: (to ERNANI). One hour yet,
And she will be—
(to ELVIRA). But fairst, where's
The ducal coronet?

ERNANI: Your wife! and in and hour?
Oh! then to me is left
To offer you, O Duke!
My humble wedding gift.

SILVA: You!

ERNANI: Ay—

ELVIRA: (What voice is this?)

SILVA: What is it that the pilgrim gives?

ERNANI: My head, my life—I'm ready.
(Throwing off his pilgrim's dress.)

ELVIRA: (Ernani! and he lives!)

ERNANI: Do you covet gold, here take it?
Take it, if gold suffice.
I offer it all—
It is the price of my blood
A thousand warriors track my steps,
As dog their savage prey;
I am the brigand Ernani,
And hate the light of day.

ELVIRA: (O Heaven! those words will lose him!)

SILVA: The wretched man raves.
(To his followers).

ERNANI: I yield as your captive,
Nor do I crave mercy
My comrades, fly—quick to the King,
Deliver me, do you hear?

SILVA: Not so, for Silva never betrayed,
Here you are safe, I swear.
A guest is sacred in these walls
As brother, from alarms.
What ho, there! man the battlements!
And soldiers, haste to arms!
(To ELVIRA).
Follow me, lady.
(He makes a sign to ELVIRA to retire to her apartmens, followed by her Ladies, and he leaves, followed by his attendants.)

SCENE III

(When SILVA is gone, ELVIRA feigns to follow her Ladies, then stops and returns to ERNANI, who repulses her with indignation.)

ERNANI: O false one! can you raise your head,
After such perfidy, to gaze on me?

ELVIRA; This wounded heart has never swerved from you
They told me you were dead.

ERNANI: Dead?—No;
Ernani lives!

ELVIRA: (Showing him the hidden dagger.) But know, this dagger at the altar drawn
Should have freed me from the marriage oath,
And drowned the memory of broken troth
With you
Reproach, revile me as you will.
Your cruelty us greater than my guilt.

ERNANI: O dearest! hush those complaints, oh! pardon give,
Delirium made me rave, I love and live.

ELVIRA ed ERNANI: Ah morir potessi odesso!
O mia Elvira,
O mia Elvira,
Sul tuo petto!
— O mio Ernani,
Preverebbe questo amplesso
La celeste volontà.
Solo affanni il nostro affetto
Sulla terra a noi dará.

SCENA IV

(Silva che vedendoli abbraciati, si scaglia furibondo tra loro col pugnale alla mano. Detti.)

SILVA: Scellerati, il mio furore
Non ha posa, non he freno,
Strapperò l'ingrato core,
Vendicarmi potrò almeno.

SCENA V

JAGO frettoloso e Detti.

JAGO: Alla porta del castello
Giunse il Re con un drapello
Vuole ingresso —

SILVA: S'apra al re.
(JAGO parte).

SCENA VI

SILVA, ELVIRA, ed ERNANI.

ERNANI: Morte invoco or io da te.

SILVA: No vendetta, più tremenda
Vo' serbata alla mia mano;
Vien ti cela, ognuno in vano
(ad ERNANI)
Rinvenirti tenterá.
A punir l'infamia orrenda
Silva solo basterà.

ELVIRA ed ERNANI: La vendetta più tremenda
Su me compia la tua mano,
Ma con lei — lui — ti serba umano
Apri il core alla pietà, Su me sol l'ira tua scenda;
Giuro, in lei — lui — colpa non v'ha.
(ERNANI entra in un nascondiglio datogli da Silva dietro il proprio ritratto. ELVIRA si ritira nelle sue stanze).

SCENA VII

SILVA, D. CARLO, D. RICCARDO (con seguito di cavalieri.)

ELVIRA: O cherished accents! blessed relief;
Stronger within this heart than grief.
If death should come

TOGETHER: O my Elvira, O my Ernani.
Lying on your bosom.
What bliss could Heaven reserve
Equal to that of dying?
Henceforth, while lingering here
On this sad earth,
To love each smile or tear
Must owe its birth.

SCENE IV

(SILVA, seeing them embrace rushes between them, sword in hand.)

SILVA: Base wretches, now at last
Shall vengeance have her sway,
And that ungrateful heart
Shall cast fury away.

SCENE V

JAGO enters hastly, and the above.

JAGO: Before the castle-gates
The clang of troops rings

SILVA: Throw open to the King.
(Exit JAGO)

SCENE VI

SILVA, ELVIRA and ERNANI.

ERNANI: I invoke death, I crave it as a boon.

SILVA: You'll meet it at my hand, but not so soon.
For darker is the doom your crime deserves;
A mighter vengeance reserves Silva's hand?
Come I'll hide you where all in vain will seek you.

ERNANI and ELVIRA: O let that vengeance on my head alone
Be visited
To us be shown pity!
Oh! let sweet mercy shine within your heart,
The guilt, I swear, alone is mine, is mine!
(ERNANI enters into a hiding-place, which SILVA opens to him beyond his own portrait. ELVIRA retires to her apartments)

SCENE VII

SILVA, S. CARLO, D, RICCARDO.

CARLO: Cugino, a che munito
Il tuo castel ritrovo?
(SILVA s'inchina senza parlare.) Rispondimi.

SILVA: Signore —

CARLO: Intendo — di ribellione l'idra,
Miseri conti e duchi, ridestate —
Ma veglio anch'io e ne' merlati covi
Quest'idre tutte soffocar saprò.
E covi e difensori abbatterò
Parla —

SILVA: Signore, i Silva son leali.

CARLO: Vedremo — de' ribelli
L'ultima torma vinta fu dispersa;
Il capo lor bandito,
Ernani, al tuo castello ebbe ricetto.
Tu me 'l consegna o il foco, ti prometto,
Qui tutto appianerà —
S'io fede attenga, tu saper ben puoi.

SILVA: Nol niego — è ver — tra noi
Un pellegrino giunse
Ed ospitalità chiese per Dio
Tradirlo non degg'io?

CARLO: Sciagurato! e il re tradir vuoi tu.

SILVA: Non tradiscono i Silva.

CARLO: Il capo tuo, o quel d'Ernani io voglio Intendi. —

SILVA: Abbiate il mio.

CARLO: Tu, Don Ricardo, a lui togli la spada.
(RICCARDO eseguise.)
Voi, del castello ogni angolo cercate,
Scoprite il traditore

SILVA: Fida è la rôcca come il suo signore.
(Parte de' Cavalieri escono).

SCENA VIII

D. CARLO, SILVA, D.RICCARDO e parte de' Cavalieri.

CARLO: Lo vedremo, veglio audace,
(Con fuoco a SILVA.)
Se resistermi potrai,
Se tranquillo sfiderai
La vendetta del tuo Re?
Essa rugge sul tuo capo?;
Pensa pria che tutta scenda
Più feroce, più tremenda
D'una folgore su te.

SILVA: No, de' Silva il disonore
Non vorà d'Iberia un Re.

CARLO: Il tuo capo o il traditore —
Scegli — scampo altro non v'è.

CARLO; Cousin, why in such armed array
Does your fair castle stand?
(SILVA inclines himself without speaking)
No answer, have you nothing to say?

SILVA: Sire —

CARLO: Enough, we understand;
The petty nobles of our land
Make a nest of their strong castles to rear rebellion's brood,
The hydra-headed snake;
But we will bruise it in the dust.
Speak.

SILVA: A Silva is ever worthy trust.

CARLO: That we shall see anon
The chief
Of the last rebel troop,
Ernani, here has sought relief
And he has found refuge.
Now yield him to our sovereign power,
Or by our kingly word, this hour
Fiercest flames shall wreathe round this tower
And raze it to the ground.

SILVA: What you say is true — a pilgrim came,
And hospitality did claim,
And urged it on me in God's name,
Shall I betray that guest?

CARLO: Traitor, you hear and delay!

SILVA: The Silvas never have betrayed.

CARLO: Ernani's head, or yours will be paid
For this.

SILVA: Let it be mine.

CARLO: Speak, Ernani; take Silva's sword!
In every angle gain entrance.
(RICCARDO obeys him.)

SILVA: True is the castle as its lord;
Your search will be in vain.
(Exit part of Attendants.)

SCENE VIII

CARLO, SILVA, RICCARDO and Attendants.

CARLO: (to SILVA, impetuously).
O rash old man! do you persist to defy your monarch?
A moment yet, if you resist,
And you shall surely die.
My vengeance hovers over you;
Before the tempest breaks.
Pause and reflect. O rash old man!
And take timely warning.

SILVA: Iberia's King can never desire to disgrace a Silva.

CARLO: Yours or the rebel's head, I say —
Choose, and save you while you may.

SCENA IX

Cavalieri, che rientrano portando fasci di armi e Detti

CORO: Fu esplorata del castello
Ogni parte la più occulta,
Tutto invano, del ribello
Nulla traccia si scoprì.
Fur le scolte disarmate;
L'ira tua non andrà inulta,
Ascoltar non dei pietate
Per chi fede e onor tradì.

CARLO: Fra tormenti paleranno,
Il Bandito additeranno.

SCENE IX

CHORUS: We've sought the castle turrets,
The dungeons underground,
But no trace of the rebel brigand has yet been found.
On him that mocks at royalty
The royal vengeance wreak.

CARLO: Torture shall show the lurking-place,
And make the traitor speak.

SCENA X

ELVIRA, che ese precipitosamente dalle sue stanze, seguita da GIOVANNA, ed Ancelle, e Detti.

ELVIRA: Deh cessate — in regal core
(gettandosi ai piedi di CARLO.)
Non sia muta la pietà

CARLO: Tu me'l chiedi! — ogni rancore
(Sorpreso rialzandola.)
Per Elvira tacerà
Della tua fede statico
Questa donzella sia —
Mi segua — o del colpevole —

SILVA: No, no; ciò mai non fa;
Deh, sire, in mezzo all'anima
Non mi voler ferir —
Io l'amo — al vecchio misero
Solo conforto è in terra
Non mi volerla togliere,
Pria questo capo atterra.

CARLO: Adunque, Ernani—

SILVA: Segnati,
La fe' non vo' tradir.

CORO: Ogni pietade è inutile,
Tè forza l'obbedir.

CARLO (ad ELVIRA). Vieni meco sol, di rose Intrecciar ti vo' la vita,
Meco vieni, ore penose
Per te il tempo non avrá.
Tergi il pianto o giovannita,
Dalla guancia scolorita;
Pensa al gaudio che t'aspetta,
Che felice ti farà.

RICCARDO e CORO: (ad ELVIRA.) Credi il gaudio che t'aspetta
Te felice renderà.

GIOVANNA ED ANCELLE: (Cio la morte a Silva affretta Più che i danni dell'eta).

ELVIRA: (Ah! la sorte che m'aspetta Il mio duolo eternerà).

SCENE X

ELVIRA, who rushes precipitately from her apartments, followed by GIOVANNA and Ladies.

ELVIRA: (Throwing herself at the feet of CARLO.) Oh! never, never in a royal heart
Should pity's holy, heavenly voice be dumb.

CARLO: (Raising her, much surprised.) It is you that pleads! Lady, at those tones
Rancor sinks down appeased; but you must come,
If you would save the guilty, come with me.

SILVA: No; never, Prince. — Oh! that must never be.
She is my only comfort left on earth;
I love, have loved her from her very birth.
Oh! wound me not so deeply — you will — you must Wait till the old man's head is mingled with the dust.

CARLO: Ernani, then —

SILVA: King, steadfast is my faith; take her away.

CARLO: (to ELVIRA). Oh! come with me, I'll strew your path with flowers.
And, Time's rude self shall bring no heavy hours
To one so lovely; wipe those tears away
From those pale cheeks — think of the happy fate
Reserved for you.

RICCARDO and CHORUS: (to ELVIRA). Pleasure and joy await your steps.

GIOVANNA and Ladies: (Far more than lengthened years
This grief will Bring down his silver hairs to the grave.)

ELVIRA: (My misery, by this destiny, Eternal will be made.)

SILVA: Sete ardente di vendetta,
Silva appien ti appagherà?
(Il Re parte col suo seguito, seco traendo ELVIRA, appogiata al braccio di GIOVANNA. Le Ancelle entrano nelle stanze della loro Signora).

SCENA XI

SILVA: (dopo aver vedutto immobile partire il Re col suo seguito.) Vigili pure il ciel sempre su te.
L'odio vivrà in cor mio pur sempre,
O re.
(Corre alle armature che sono presso i ritrati ne trae due, spade, e va quindi ad aprire il nascondiglio di ERNANI).

SCENA XII

ERNANI e SILVA.

SILVA: Esci—a te—scegli—seguimi.
(Presentandogli le due spade).

ERNANI: Seguirti?
E dove?

SILVA: Al campo.

ERNANI: No! vo — nol deggio —

SILVA: Misero!
Di questo acciario al lampo
Impallidisci? — Seguimi.

ERNANI: Me'l vietan gli anni tuoi.

SILVA: Vien ti disfido o giovane;
Uno di noi morrà.

ERNANI: Tu m'hai salvato; uccidimi.
Ma ascolta per pietà!

SILVA: Morrai.

ERNANI: Morrò ma pria —
L'ultima prece mia —

SILVA: Volgerla a Dio tu puoi —

ERNANI: No — la rivolga a te —

SILVA: Parla — ho l'inferno in me.

ERNANI: Sola una volta, un'ultima
Fa ch'io la vegga —

SILVA: Chi?

ERNANI: Elvira.

SILVA: Or or, parti, Seco la trasse il Re.

ERNANI: Vecchio, che mai facesti?
Nostro rivale egli è?

SILVA: Oh, rabbia! — E il ver dicesti?

ERNANI: L'ama —

SILVA: Vassalli all'armi.
(Furente per la scena).

SILVA: O ardent thirst for vengeance,
When will you be allayed?
(Exit the KING, dragging ELVIRA, who is leaning on the arm of GIOVANNA. The Ladies retire to their room.)

SCENE XI

SILVA: (after having stood motionless watching the KING depart with his suite.) Heaven above your head spread its protecting wing.
Hatred to you forever — hatred to you
O King!
(He goes to the armory near the portraits, takes two swords, and then opens ERNANI's hiding-place.)

SCENE XII

ERNANI and SILVA.

SILVA: (Presenting him with the two swords.) Without, without; our time is now
Or never. — Come, follow

ERNANI: Where?

SILVA: To the open field.

ERNANI: I will not, ought not.

SILVA: Wretch! do you feel
Afraid to handle the cold steel?
Come, follow me!

ERNANI: Your age, old man, forbids such strife —

SILVA: I challenge you;
Or you or I must fall.

ERNANI: You saved my life.
Kill me if you will; but first in pity hear.

SILVA: You shall die.

ERNANI: If you insist. I will die;
But before the cord of life be riven
I'd ask you to receive a prayer.

SILVA: No; offer it to Heaven.

ERNANI: Not so: that prayer must be to you.

SILVA: Speak; I feel a demon fire burn within me.

ERNANI: Once more, oh! once more, let me see—

SILVA: Whom?

ERNANI: Elvira.

SILVA: It is vain, the King has torn away
My bride this very hour.

ERNANI: Wretched old man, what do you say?—
She's in our rival's power?

SILVA: O misery! and is it time?

ERNANI: He loves her.

SILVA: (in violent agitation). Vassals, I summon you to arms.

ERNANI: A parte dei chiamarmi
Di tua vendetta.

SILVA: No,
Te prima ucciderò.

ERNANI: Teco la voglio compiere,
Posci m'ucciderai.

SILVA: La fè mi serberai?

ERNANI: Ecco il pegno nel momento
(Gli consegna un corno da caccia.)
In che Ernani vorrai spento.
Se uno squillo interderà
Tosto Ernani morirà.

SILVA: A me la destra — giuralo.

ERNANI: Pel padre moi lo giuro.

A DUE: Iddio n'ascolti, e vendice
Punisce lo spergiuro:
L'aura, la luce manchino,
Sia infamia al mentitor.

SCENA XIII

Cavalieri di SILVA, che entrano disarmati e fretolosi, e Detti.

CORO: Salvi ne vedi, e liberi
A' senni tuoi, signor.

SILVA: L'ira mi torna giovane;
S'insegua il rapitor.

SILVA ed ERNANI: (a 2.) In arcion, in arcion, cavalieri.
Armi, sangue, vendetta, vendetta!
Silva stesso vi guida, v'affretta.
Premio degno egli darvi saprà
Questi brandi di morte forieri.
D'ogni cor troveranno la stada;
Chi resister s'attenti, pria cada,
Sia delitto il sentire pietà.

CORO: Pronti vedi li tuoi cavalieri —
Per te spirano, sangue, vendetta,
Se di Silva la voce gli affretta,
Più gagliardo ciascuno sarà!
Questi brandi, di morte forieri.
(Brandendo le spade.)
D'ogni cor troveranno la strada —
Chi resistir s'attenti, pria cada:
Fia delitto il sentire pietà.
(Partono tutti)

FINE DELL' ACTO SECONDA.

ERNANI: It is that you should call
Your vengeance and your rage to share.

SILVA: No; you shall fall first.

ERNANI: Yet would I first aid your despair
For my Elvira's sake,
And afterwards I'll bare this breast;
That you may take vengeance.

SILVA: Will you pledge your word?
(Giving him a hunting-horn).

ERNANI: Yes, truly I will.
The moment you wish
Ernani to die,
Then on this our token
Wind one thrilling blast;
That sound for Ernani
On earth be the last.

SILVA: Your hand be laid on my right hand.

ERNANI: I swear it by my father's shade.

TOGETHER: Hear it, Heaven let your wrath
Be pitiless—let woe assail,
Your own pursue, your daylight fail
Him who breaks his oath.

SCENE XIII

Knights of SILVA, who enter hastily and unarmed, and the above.

CHORUS: You see us safe and prompt to obey,
Make trial of our truth!

SILVA: Follow the ravisher—away!
Rage brings me back to youth!

SILVA and ERNANI: To horse, to horse! vengeance and blood!
Be this our battle cry;
Silva himself will lead you on,
To conquer or to die.
Silva will find a worthy prize
To reward your valor;
The harbinger of death then be
Each shining sword.
Whoever dare resist us, let the rash one fall.
Let pity be a crime;
You hear it all.

CHORUS: Ready for blood and vengeance,
See your followers;
To all the harbingers of death
Our sword shall be.
(Brandishing their swords.)
If any dare resist us, let the rash one fall.
Let pity be a crime;
We swear it all.
(Exeunt all)

END OF ACT II.

ACTO III

SCENA I

Soterranei sepolcrali che rinserrano la tomba di CARLO MAGNO in Aquisgrana. A destra dello spettatore avvi il detto monumento con porta di bronzo, sopra la quale leggesi letteri cubitali l'inscrizione "KAROL MAGNO", in fondo scalea che mette alla maggior porta del sotterraneo, nel quale pur si vedranno altri minori sepolcri; sul piano nella scena altre porte che conducono ad altre catacombe. Due lampadependenti dal mezzo spandono una fioca luce su quegli avelli.
(D. CARLO e D. RICCARDO avvolti in ampi mantelli oscuri entrano guardinghi dalla porta principale: D. RICCARDO precede con una fiaccola).

CARLO: E questo il loco?

RICCARDO: Si.

CARLO: E l'ora?

RICCARDO: E' questa.
Qui s'aduna la Lega—

CARLO: Che contro me cospira—
Degli assassini al guardo
L'avel mi celerà di Carlo Magno
E gli Elettor?

RICCARDO: Raccolti,
Cribrano i dritti a cui spetti del mondo
La più corona, il lauro invitto
De' Cesari decoro.

CARLO: Lo so mi lascia.
(RICCARDO va per partire.)
Ascolta se mai prescelto io sia,
Tre volte il bronzo ignivomo.
Dalla gran torre tuoni,
Tu poscia scendi a me; qui guida Elvira.

RICCARDO: E vorreste?

CARLO: Non più—fra questi avelli
Converserò coi morti
E scorpiro i rebelli.
(RICCARDO parte).

SCENA II

CARLO: Gran Dio! costor sui sepolcrali marmi
Affilano il pugnal per trucidarmi!
Scettri! dovizie! onori!
Bellezza! gioventù! che siete voi?
Cimbe natanti sopra il mar degli

ACT III

SCENE I

Subterranean catacombs in Aquisgrana. To the right of the stage is placed the tomb of CARLO MAGNO, with a bronze door, over which is seen the inscription, "KAROLO MAGNO," in letters a cubit long; at the end of the stage is a staircase leading from the large door of the vault. Several smaller tombs are dispersed about the stage. There are also different doors leading to other catacombs. Two lamps hanging from the centre cast a dim light on the tombs.
(CARLO and RICCARDO, wrapped in large cloaks, enter stealthily by the principal entrance. Riccardo precedes with a lantern)

CARLO: Is this the spot?

RICCARDO: It is.

CARLO: And, the hour?

RICCARDO: The present one.
Here the League assembles—

CARLO: With coward hand to strike the assassin blow—
But the cold tomb shall hide me from the foe.
And the Electors?

RICCARDO: They assemble here this night,
To weigh the merit and discuss the right
Of each who'd wear the Caesar's laurel crown.
Or strive to grasp th sceptre of the world.

CARLO: I know it; leave me, I would be alone.
(RICCARDO moves toward the door.)
But listen, if their choice should fall on me.
Then let the cannon from the castle wall
Rejoicing, be heard three times, and then come
And bring ELVIRA with; you leave me now.

RICCARDO: You desire it?

CARLO: No, more.
In this sepulchral place,
I'd hold communion with the dead, and trace
The plot of the rebellious living—go!
(Exit RICCARDO)

SCENE II

CARLO: Great Heaven! that these holy tombs should be Defiled by the assassin's murderous scheme!
Duty! youth! honor! beauty! what are you?

anni,
Cui l'onda batte d'incessanti affanni,
Finchè giunte allo scoglio della tomba
Con voi nel nulla il nome vostro piomba!
Oh! de' verd'anni miei
Sogni e bugiarde larve,
Se troppo vi credei,
L'incanto ora disparve.
S'ora chiamato sono
Al più sublime trono,
Della virtù com'aquila
Sui vanni m'alzerò;
E vincitor dei secoli
Il nome mio farò.
(Apre con chiave la porta del monumento di CARLO MAGNO e vientra).

SCENA III

(Schiudonsi le porte minori del sotterraneo, e vi entrano guardinghi ed avvolti grandi mantelli i Personaggi della Lega, portando fiaccole.)

I: Ad augusta!

II: Chi va là?

I: Per augusta.

II: Bene sta.

TUTTI: Per la lega santo ardor;
L'alme invada, accenda i cor.

SCENA IV

Detti, SILVA, ERNANI e JAGO, VESTITI come i primi.

SILVA, ERNANI e JAGO: (a 3.)
Ad augusta.

CORO: Per augusta.

SILVA, ERNANI e JAGO: (a 3..)
Per la lega—

CORO: Santa e giusta.

TUTTI: Dalle tombe parlerà
Del destin la volontà

SILVA: (Salenào sopra una delle minori tombe). All'invito mancò alcuno?

CORO: Qui codardo avvi nessuno—

SILVA: Dunque svelisi il mistero:
Carlo aspira al sacro impero.

Barks that float lightly on time's rapid stream.
Washed ever and anon by sorrow's wave.
Then driven on that most certain shoal, the grave!
And every vestige whirled downward
In the black gulf of fathomless oblivion.
Oh! if the visions that beguile the world
Have also charmed my youth, the dream is fled—
The illusion gone! and if the late sublime
That waves me onward shall exalt my head.
I will become the conqueror of time—
Of ages, not of countries; I will rise
By virtue, on whose pinion to the skies
I'll mount, as the proud eagle soars upon her wing.
(He unlocks the door of the monument of CARLO MAGNO and goes in.)

SCENE III

(The smaller doors of the vault are opened, and members of the League, wrapped in large mantles, and carrying torches, enter looking stealthily around.)

I: Ad augusta.

II: Who goes there?

I: Per augusta.

II: All is well.

ALL: For the holy league we feel
True devotion, ardent zeal.

SCENE IV

The above, SILVA, ERNANI, and JAGO, wrapped in cloaks.

SILVA, ERNANI, and JAGO: Ad augusta.

CHORUS:
Per augusta

SILVA, ERNANI, and JAGO: For the League.

CHORUS: Holy and just.

ALL: Let the tomb speak!
Hear a voice from the dust!

SILVA: (Standing on one of the smaller tombs.) Is any one here wanting?

SILVA: All mystery vanish,
And distrust and fear;
Charles to the empire
Pleads his right.

CORO: Spento pria qual face ceda.
(Tutti spengono contra terra le faci.)
Dell'Iberia contrada
Franse i dritti—s'armerà
Ogni destra che qui sta.

SILVA: Una basti—la sua morte
Ad un sol fidi la sorte.
(Ognuno tra dal seno un porta foglio vi scrive la propria cifra, sopra un foglio e lo getta in un avello scoperchiato.)

CORO: E ognum pronto in ogni evento
A ferire od essere spento.
(SILVA s'appressa lentamente all'avello, ne cava una tavoletta; tutti ansiosi lo circondano.)

CORO: Qual si noma?

SILVA: Ernani.

CORO: E desso?

ERNANI: Oh qual gaudio m'è concesso.
(Con trasporto di giubilo.) Padre! Padre!

CORO: Se cadrai
Vendicato ben sarai.

SILVA: (ad ERNANI). L'opra, o giovane, mi cedi.

ERNANI: Me si vile, o vecchio, credi?

SILVA: La tua vita, gli aver miei
Io ti dono—

ERNANI: No.

SILVA: Potrei
(mostrandogli il corno.)
Ora astringerti a morir?

ERNANI: No—vorrei prima ferir—

SILVA: Dunque, o giovane, t'aspetta
La più orribile vendetta.

TUTTI: Noi fratelli in tal momento,
Strigna un patto, un giuramento.
(Tutti si abbracciano, e nelle massima esultazione traendo le spade prorompono come segue:)

CORO: Si ridesti il Leon di Castiglia,
E d'Iberia ogni monte, ogni lito
Ecco formi al tremendo ruggito.
Come un di contro i Mori oppressor
Siamo tutti una sola famiglia,
Pugnerem colle braccia, co' petti;
Schiavi inulti più a lungo e negletti
Non sarem finchè vita abbia il cor.
Sia che morte ne aspetti, o vittoria
Pugneremo, ed il sangue de' spenti
Nuovo ardire ai figliuoli viventi,
Forze nuove al pugnare darà. Sorga

CHORUS: (All throwing down their torches.) Let darkness be,
We need no light.
Each of us here
Has a bold hand
To strike for the right
Of Iberia's land.

SILVA: One will suffice the duty to fill.
(Each draws out a tablet and inscribes his name on a leaf therefrom throwing it into one of the uncovered tombs,)

ALL: Here all are ready
To die or to kill.
(SILVA slowly approaches the tomb, and draws forth a leaf—all draw round him with anxious looks.)

ALL: What is the name?

SILVA: Ernani!

CHORUS: Is it he?

ERNANI: (with a transport of joy.) Heaven,
I render thanks for this great favor!
O Father!
O Father!

CHORUS: Comrade, if you fall,
You shall have vengeance from us, one and all.

SILVA: Young man, I pray you yield
Your task to me—

ERNANI: Old man, I'm not so vile—what do you ask?

SILVA:
Think of your life: When one is young it is sweet to live.
Your life—I'll give my wealth to you.

ERNANI: No.

SILVA: (showing the horn).
Would you then, rather die!

ERNANI: Not till my hate is satisfied.

SILVA: Then, youth my vengeance waits

ALL: In this moment let us plight
Our faith and in one oath unite.
(All in the exultation of the moment draw their swords and burst forth in the following:)

CHORUS: Leon of Castile awakens
He who rose against the Moor,
The same sound in fair Iberia
Echoes back from mount to shore.
Brothers are we all; no longer
Will we drag these clashing chains,
Far more dear than life is freedom,
Plead her cause while life remains.
Whether death or victory await us,
We'll fight on: the valiant slain,
With their blood shall animate us,
Filling our exhausted vein.
Then, when the day of glory dawns alfine radiante di gloria,

Sorga un giorna a brillare su noi—
E imortal fra i più splendidi eroi,
Col lor nome anche il nostro sarà—

SCENA V

D. CARLO dalla porta del monumento e Detti. S'ode un colpo di canone.

CORO: Qual rumore!
Che sarà?
(Altro colpo di canone, e la porta del monumento si apre.)
Il destin si compirà.
(Tero colpo di canone, e CARLO si mostra sulla soglia.)
Carlo Magno imperator!

CARLO: (Picchia tre volte col pomo del pugnale sulla porticella di bronzo, poi esclama con terribile voce.) Carlo Quinto, o traditor!

SCENA VI

(S'apre la gran porta del sotterraneo, ed allo squillar delle trombe entrano sei Elletori vestiti di broccato d'oro seguiti dai Paggi, che portano sopra cuscini di velluto lo scettro, la corona, ed altre insegne imperiali. Ricco corteo di Gentiluomini e Dame Alemane e Spagnuole circonda l'imperatore. Fra le ulti mevedesi ELVIRA, seguita da GIOVANNA. Nel fondo saranno spiegate le bandiere dell'impero, e molte fiaccole portate dai soldati illumineranno la scena. D RICCARDO è alla testa del corteggio)

RICCARDO: L'Elettoral Concesso
v'acclamava
Augusto imperatore,
E le cesaree insegne,
O sire, ora v'invia—

CARLO: La voluntà del ciel sarà la mia—
(agli Elettori.)
Questi ribaldi contro me conspirano—
(ai Congiuri.)
Tremate, o vili, adesso—
E tardi! tutti in mano mia qui siete—
La mano stringerò— Tutti cadrete—
Dal volga si divida
(Alle Guardie, eseguiscono, lasciando ERNANI tra il volgo,)
Solo chi è conte o duca,
Prigion sia il volgo, ai nobili la scure.

ERNANI: Decreta dunque, o Re, morte a me pure.
(Avanzandosi fieramente tra i nobili e, coprendosi il capo.)

And that day shall dawn at last,
Be our names in history's story,
As the history of the past.

SCENE V

(CARLO enters by the door of the monument. The report of a cannon is heard.)

CHORUS: What sound is that?
(Another report and the door of the monument opens.)
It is destiny that works.
(A third report and CARLO appears.)
It is Carlo Magno the Emperor! (He strikes three times on the bronze door, and then exclaims, in a thundering voice:)

CARLO: Traitors! it is Charles the Fifth!

SCENE VI

(The large door of the vault opens, and at the report of cannon, six Electors enter, richly dressed in gold brocade, followed by Pages, carrying upon velvet cushions the crown, the sceptre and other imperial insignia. A suite of German and Spanish Gentlemen and Ladies surround the EMPEROR. Amongst the last is seen ELVRA, followed by GIOVANNA. At the end is found RICCARDO at the head of a numerous train; the whole is illuminated by torches.)

RICCARDO: The assembled Electorate have proclaimed you
Emperor, and crave your acceptance
Of the imperial dignity; receive
The signet of the state.

CARLO: (to the Electors). The will of Heaven be mine,
These robbers dared to form a plot against me.
(To the Conspirators).
Tremble, traitors in this hour
Just fate has thrown you in my power,
This hand shall not quit.
(To the Guards, who are obeying him, and leaving ERNANI amongst the Commoners.)
The plebeian, in the dungeon's gloom
Shall learn, within the living tomb,
To mock our royal power;
Away with them.
A darker doom
Awaits their betters: rank consigns
The noble to the block.

ERNANI: (advancing proudly amongst the Nobles, covering his head). Accord the right of nobility,
To me those rights belong;

Io son conte, duca sono
Di Segorbia, di Cardona—
Don Giovanni d'Aragona
Riconosca ognuno in me.
Or di patria e genitore
Mi sperai vendicatore—
Non t'uccisi—t'abbandono,
Questo capo—il tronca, o Re.

CARLO: Si cadrà—con altri appresso.
(gettandosi ai piedi di CARLO)

ELVIRA: Ah Signor, se t'è concesso.
Il maggiore d'ogni trono
Questa polvere negletta
Or confondi col perdono—
Sia lo sorezzo tua vendetta
Che il rimorso compirà.

CARLO: Tacci, o donna.

ELVIRA: Ah no, non sia,
Parlò il ciel per voce mia
Virtù augusta è la pietà
(si alza.)

CARLO: (Concentrato, fissando la tomba di CARLO MAGNO.) Oh sommo Carlo,—più nel tuo nome
Le tue virtudi—aver vogl'io, Sarò, lo giuro— a te ed a Dio,
Della tue gesta—imitator,
(Dopo qualche pausa.)
Perdono a tutti—
(Mie brame ho dome.)
(Guidando ELVIRA tra le braccia d'ERNANI.)
Sposi voi siate,—v'amate ognor.
A Carlo Magno—sia gloria e onor.

TUTTI: Sia lode eterna,—Carlo, al tuo nome Tu, re clemente— somigli a Dio, Perchè l'offesa—copri d'oblio,
Perchè perdoni — agli offensor.
Il lauro augusto— sulle tue chiome
Acquista insolito—divin fulgor.
A Carlo Quinto— sia gloria e onor.

SILVA: (Oh mie speranze—vinte non dome,
Tutte appagarvi— saprò ben io;
Per la vendetta—per l'odio mio
Avrà sol vita—in seno il cor.
Canute gli anni-mi fer le chiome;
Ma inestinguibile—è il mio livor—
Vendetta gridami—l'offeso onor!)

FINE DELL' ATTO TERZA.

■ ACTO IV

SCENA I

(Terrazzo nel palagio di D. GIOVANNI d'Aragona in Sargozza. A destra ed a man ce sonvi porte che mettone a varii appartamenti, il fondo è chiuso da cancelli attrver-

For I am lord of Aragon,
Of Cordova, of Segovia;
You will not wrong my claims.
You did escape my dagger.

CARLO: Yes, it shall fall but later.

ELVIRA: (throwing herself at the feet of CARLO) O sire!
O King! let pity wake
Within your heart, and if a throne,
The mightiest of the earth, be given
Awhile to you it is but a trust—
It is of the earth, it is but dust,
So leave vengeance to Heaven.

CARLO: Peace, woman, peace.

ELVIRA: For Heaven speaks by me (She rises).

CARLO: (Fixing his eyes on the tomb of CARLO MAGNO.)
I'd make your virtues too—my own,
I, too, am Charles—more than your throne.
I'd make your virtues too my own,
Let Heaven hear—that with your state,
I swear your deed—to emulate.
(After a pause).
Pardon to all—(I've stilled my heart.)
(Leading ELVIRA to ERNANI.)
Lovers, be happy,—never part.
To Carlo Magno—be glory, fame.

ALL: To you be praise—to Charles' name;
Merciful as—pitying Heaven.
The crimes are forgotten—the offenders forgiven,
The laurels round your brow shall twine,
With greener strength—and brighter shine.
Glory and honor—Charles to you!

SILVA: (My wishes I may hush—not quell.
I yet will satisfy them well.
For vengeance now—I live alone,
Yes hatred, I am all your own.
Age can not quench your raging flame
Revenge, revenge for wounded fame!

END OF ACT III.

■ ACT IV

SCENE I

(Terrace in the Palace of DON GIOVANNI of Aragon, in Saragossa. On the right and left, doors leading to the various apartments. Glass doors through which so i quali vedonsi i giardini del Palazzo illuminato, e parte di Saragozza. Nel fondo a destra dello spettatore, avvi una grande scalea che va nei giardini. Da una sala a sinistra di che guarda odesi la lieta musica delle danze.)

(Gentiluomini, Dame Maschere, Paggi ed Ancelle vanno e vengono gaiamente tra lor discorrendo.)

TUTTI: Or come felici—gioiscono gli sposi!
Saranno quai fiori—cresciuti a uno stel
Cessò la bufera—de di procellosi;
Sorrider sovr'essi—vorrà sempre il ciel.

SCENA II

(Comparisce una Maschera tutta chiusa in nero domino, che guarda impaziente d'intorno, come chi cerca con premura alcuno. ERNANI ed ELVIRA vengono dalla sala da ballo, avviandosi alla destra dello spettatore, ov'è la stanza nuziale.)

ERNANI: Cessaro i suoni, dispari ogni face,
Di silenzio e mistero si piace—
Ve' come gli astri stessi Elvira mia,
Sorridor sembrano al felice imene—

ELVIRA: Cosi brillar vedeali
Di Silvia dal castello—allor che mostra
Io ti attendeva—e all'impaziente core
Secoli eterni rassembravan l'ore—
Or meco alfin sei tu—

ERNANI: E per sempre.

ELVIRA: O gioia!

ERNANI: Si, si per sempre tuo—

ERNANI ed ELVIRA: (a 2.) Fino al sospiro estremo
Un solo core avremo.
(S'ode un contano suono di corno.)

ERNANI: (Maledizion di Dio!)

ELVIRA: Il riso del tuo volto fa ch'io veda.
(S'ode altro suono.)

ERNANI: (Ah! la tigre domanda la sua preda!)

ELVIRA: Cielo!—che hai tu!—che affanni?—

ERNANI: Non vedi, Elvira, un infernal sogghigno
Che me tra l'ombre, corruscante irride?
E il vecchio! il vecchio! mira!—

are seen the garden of the Palace illuminated, and part of Saragossa. To the left, an apartment; from whence are heard the sounds of music and dancing.)
(Dancers, Masks, and Pages pass gayly to and fro.)

ALL: O happy pair! like brilliant flowers
They'll grow and flourish on one stem.
The tempest's past, the stormy hours—
And heaven has nothing but smiles for them.

SCENE II

(A mask disguised in a black domino. He gazes impatiently round, as if seeking some one. ERNANI and ELVIRA, enter from the ball-room, and go to right of stage where the bridal chamber is.)

ERNANI: The music ceases, and with it the lights
Have disappeared.
In mystery love delights.
In mystery and in silence.
Look above,
The very stars are smiling on our love.

ELVIRA: It was thus I watched them, it was thus they shone.
When I in Silva's castle, sad and lone,
Waited for you each moment as it passed
Seemed as an age—but I am yours at last.

ERNANI: Yes, and forever.

ELVIRA: O happiness!

ERNANI: Yes, yes, forever.

ELVIRA and ERNANI: Till our last breath
Only one heart we'll have.
(The sound of a horn in the distance.)

ERNANI: (Heaven's malediction!)

ELVIRA: Ernani, smile, do not turn your head away.
(Another blast is heard.)

ERNANI: The tiger crouches and demands his prey.

ERNANI: (To ELVIRA). Through the darkness do you see Mocking me there, an infernal smile?
A devil's mocking grin that glares on me?
Elvira, look, it is the old man's look!

ELVIRA: Oime!—smarrisci i sensi!—
(I suoni ingagliardiscono appressandosi.)

ERNANI: (Egli mi vuole!)
Ascolta, o dolce Elvira,
Sol ora m'ange una ferita antica—
Va tosto per un farmaco, o dilette—

ELVIRA: Ma tu—signor!

ERNANI: Se m'ami, va, t'affretta.
(ELVIRA entra nelle stanze nuziali).

SCENA III

ERNANI: Tutto or tace intorno,
Forse fu vana illusion la mia!—
Il cor non uso ad essere beato
Sognò forse le angosce del passato
Andiam—
(Va per seguire ELVIRA.)

SCENA IV

Detto e SILVA mascherato.

ELVIRA: T'arresta.
(Fermandosi a capo della scala.)

ERNANI: (E desso! Viene il mirto a cangiarmi col cipresso!)

SILVA: Ecco il pegno, nel momento
In che Ernani vorrai spento,
Se uno squillo intenderà,
Tosto Ernani morirà,
(Appressandosi ad ERNANI e smascherandosi.)
Sarai tu menitor?

ERNANI: Ascolta un detto ancor—
Solingo, errante, misero,
Fin da prim'anni miei,
D'affanni amaro un calice
Tutto ingoiar dovei
Ora che alfine arridere
Mi veggo il ciel sereno,
Lascia ch'io libi almeno
La tazza dell'amor.

SILVA: Ecco la tazza—scegliere;
(Fieramente presentandogli; un pugnale ed un veleno.)
Ma tosto—io ti concedo.

ERNANI: Gran Dio!

SILVA: Se tardi od esiti—

ERNANI: Ferro e velen qui vedo!—
Duca—rifuggi l'anima—

SILVA: Dov'è l'ispano onore,
Spergiuro mentitore?—

ELVIRA: My senses reel!

ERNANI: (He summons me.) It is nothing;
It was but the pain of an old wound that shook
My frame an instant.
Sweet Elvira, go
And seek a doctor's aid.

ELVIRA: But you—

ERNANI: Go quickly if you love me.
(ELVIRA enters the bridal chamber.)

SCENE III

ERNANI: Yet all within is hushed—all are at rest;
It was a vain fancy, since it did not last.
My heart so little used to being blest,
Perchance dreams with anguish of the past.
I'll go—
(He goes to follow ELVIRA.)

SCENE IV

The same and Silva masked.

SILVA: I arrest you.
(Stopping at top of steps.)

ERNANI: So soon!
You would transform the tender myrtle leaves
To the dull cypress!)

SILVA: "The moment you wish Ernani to die,
On this then, our token,
Wind one thrilling blast,
That sound for Ernani
On earth be the last."
(Approaching him and unmasking.) Are you perjured?

ERNANI: A moment yet; from my first years
A wanderer on the earth, with tears
I've drained the cup of woe!
And now that Heaven seems to smile
An instant let me sip awhile
The blessed cup of love.

SILVA: The cup's prepared, and so rejoice;
And more, I'll let you have your choice.
(He proudly presents him a dagger and a cup of poison.)

ERNANI: Great Heaven!

SILVA: If you delay or hesitate —

ERNANI: Poison and steel I see await!
O duke, as to her refuge place
My soul to you shall fly.

SILVA: Spaniard and perjured! yet for grace can you sue?

ERNANI: Ebben . . . porgi . . . morrò.
(Prende il pugnale).

SCENA ULTIMA

Detti ed ELVIRA, dalle stanze nuziali

ELVIRA: (ad ERNANI). Ferma, crudele, estinguere
Perchè vuoi tu due vite? —
(a SILVA.)
Quale d'Averno demone
Ha tali trame ordite?
Presso al sepolcro mediti,
Compisci tal vendetta! —
La morte che t'aspetta,
O vecchio, affretterò.
(Va per avventarsi contro Silva.)
Mae che diss'io? perdonami —
L'angoscia in me parlò.

SILVA: E'vano, o donna, il piangere —
E' vano — io non perdono.

ERNANI: (La furia è inesorabile.)

ELVIRA: (a SILVA). Figlia d'un Silva io sono
Io l'amo — indissolubile
Nodo mi stringe a lui —

SILVA: L'ami? — morrà costui,
Per tale amor morrà.

ELVIRA: Per queste amare lagrime
Di lui, di me pietà.

ERNANI: Quel pianto, Elvira, ascondimi —
Ho d'uopo di costanza —
L'affanno di quest'amima

ERNANI: It is well — I die.
(He takes the dagger.)

LAST SCENE

The above and ELVIRA, who enters from the bridal chamber.

ELVIRA: (to ERNANI). Ernani, O do you forget
That blow two hearts must kill!
(To SILVA).
So near the grave! and vengeance yet fills your aged breast?
Death that so soon must claim his prey
I'll hasten with this stroke.
(She makes a movement to throw herself on him, but stops.)
Pardon, alas! what did I say?
It was grief, not I, that spoke.

SILVA: Lady, your vain prayer shall not stem
My fury's headlong flood.

ERNANI: (No, he is inexorable.)

ELVIRA: (to SILVA). Silva, I am of your blood;
I love him, and the link that binds us sacred as above.

SILVA: Ay, you do love him, there's his crime;
He dies for that same love.

ELVIRA: Oh! pity, mercy! see my tears!

ERNANI: Elvira, cease — control your vain complaints,
For I myself need courage, and my soul,

Ogni dolore avanza —
Un giuramento orribile
Ora mi danna a morte,
Fu scherno della sorte
La mia felicità
Non ebbe di noi miseri,
Non ebbe il ciel pietà!

SILVA: (Appressandosi minaccioso ad ERNANI.) °°Se uno squilio intenderà
Tosto Ernani morirà."

ERNANI: Intendo — intendo — compiasi
Il mio destin fatale.
(Si pianta il pugnale nel seno.)

ELVIRA: Che mai facesti, o misero?
Ch'io mora? a me il pugnale —

SILVA: No, sciagurata — arrestati,
Il delirar non vale —

ERNANI: Elvira! Elvira! —

ELVIRA: Attendimi —
Sol te seguir desio —

ERNANI: Vivi — d'amarmi e vivere,
Cara — t'impongo — addio.

ELVIRA, ERNANI: (a 2.) Per noi d'amore il talamo
Di morte fu l'altar.
(ERNANI spira ed ELVIRA sviene).

SILVA: (Della vendetta il demone Qui venga ad esultar!)

FINE.

By divers passions torn, groans beneath the weight
This dreadful oath imposes — that of death!
My bliss was but a mirage mocking fate,
Spread out before my eyes — it is gone, it is past!

SILVA: (Approaching with a menacing gesture.) "This sound for Ernani
On earth be the last."

ERNANI: I hear, I hear, my fatal destiny.
(He stabs himself).

ELVIRA: What have you done? - O misery!

SILVA: Hold, wretched girl! - it is madness that makes you rave.

ERNANI: Elvira! Elvira!

ELVIRA: Wait for me, Ernani, I'll share your grave.

ERNANI: Not so, I ask it with my latest breath —
Oh! live to love my memory; farewell.

ELVIRA and ERNANI: I love you, dearest, with my latest breath —
The torch of Hymen lights us to our death.
(ERNANI dies — ELVIRA faints).

SILVA: The demon of revenge has triumphed well.

END.

Luisa Miller (1849)

Louisa Miller

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY SALVATORE CAMMARANO

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Salvatore Cammarano (based on Friedrich Schiller's tragedy Kabale und Liebe), premiered at the Teatro San Carlo in Naples on December 8, 1849. The story takes place in the Tyrol during the eighteenth century. Luisa Miller has fallen in love with a stranger, although her father has serious doubts about him. Wurm, Luisa's rejected suitor, reveals the stranger's identity: Rodolfo, son of the Count of Walter. Walter is furious with his son, as he has arranged for Rodolfo to marry Federica, who is wealthy and in love with him. Miller reveals Rodolfo's true identity to his daughter. Rodolfo swears to marry Luisa in spite of his father. Walter arrests Miller and Luisa. Rodolfo blackmails his father, threatening to expose the ways in which Walter, with Wurm's assistance, gained his nobility and power, and Walter immediately orders Luisa's release. Walter and Wurm convince Luisa to sign a letter stating that she loves Wurm, not Rodolfo, so that her father's life will be spared. They force her to tell Federica this lie. Rodolfo discovers the letter and challenges Wurm, but his father convinces Rodolfo to marry Federica after all. When Miller is released from prison, on Rodolfo's wedding day, he learns that his daughter plans to take her own life. He persuades her that they should leave the country. Rodolfo enters and confronts Luisa about the letter. When she insists that she wrote it, he produces a flask. He drinks from it first, then hands it to her. He reveals that the flask contains poison. Luisa, dying, at last speaks the truth. Rodolfo kills Wurm and then collapses, dead, beside his love.

■ ATTO PRIMO.	■ ACT I.
L'AMORE.	LOVE.
Ameno villaggio: da un lato la modesta casa di Miller, dall' altro rustica chiesetta; in lontananza, le cime del castello di Walter. Un' alba limpidissima di primavera è sull' orizzonte: gli abitanti del villaggio si adunano per festeggiare il dì natilizio di Luisa.—Laure è fra essi.	Scene represents a beautiful village. On one side the modest cottage of Miller—on the other a little Rustic Church—in the distance a view of the Chateau of Walter. The rising Sun of a Spring morning gilds the horizon. The Inhabitants of the Village are assembled to celebrate the Anniversary of the birthday of Louisa. Laura is with them.
SCENA PRIMA.	SCENE I.
CORO e LAURA: Ti desta, o Luisa, regina de' cori; I monti già lambe un riso di luce; D'un giorno sì lieto insiem con gli albori Qui dolce amistade a te ne conduce; Leggiadra è quest' alba sorgente in aprile, Ma come il tuo viso leggiadra non è: È pura, soave quest' aura gentile, Pur meno è soave, men para di te.	LAURA AND CHORUS: Awake, Louisa! queen of our hearts! Already the rays of light caress the tops of the mountains. Adding a brightness, even to the joys of this day! The sweet ties of friendship have drawn us around you. Though bright beams of the Sun, so inviting on this morn, Its brightness can't equal your divine beauty, The breath of the morning is balmy and sweet,— But it cannot compare with the breath from your lips!
SCENA II.	SCENE II.
Luisa, Miller, e Detti.	Enter Louisa and Miller.
MILLER: Ecco mia figlia—	MILLER: Here is my daughter!
LUISA: O care amiche—	LOUISA: Ah! my dear friends!
CORO: Il cielo A te sia fausto.	CHORUS: Heaven bless and be propitious to you!
LAURA: In breve Ad invocarlo uniti andrem nel tempto.	LAURA: Within the holy temple presently Will we invoke the same for you!
MILLER: Il vostro affetto dal mio cìglior esprime Pianto di tenerezza— Al cor paterno è sacro Il di che spunta—esso mi diè Luisa! (Abbracciandola.)	MILLER: Dear friends! your attachment to my child Brings tears of joy and tenderness to my eyes. This day is sacred to a parent's heart— It is this day which, years ago, gave me my Louisa. (They embrace.)
LUISA: Padre! Nè giunge ancor! (Volgendosi d' intorno inquieta.) Da lui divisa Non v' ha gioja per me!	LÒUISA: My father! He hasn't come yet! Separated from him, there is no joy for me! (She looks around with much inquietude.)
MILLER: Figlia, ed amore, Appena desto in te, si vive flamme Già spande! Oh! mal non sia Cotanto amor locato! (Luisa vorrebbe parlare.) Del novello Signor qui gianto nella corte ignoto A tutti è questo Carlo Io temo!	MILLER: My child—my child! Love has but scarcely entered your young heart, And yet already it enfolds you in its vivid flame! Heaven grant this earnest, fervent love May not be misplaced. (Louisa going to speak) This Charles is unknown to the new Lord But lately arrived at the Chateau. And, indeed, unknown to all. I fear—
LUISA: Non temer: più nobil spirto, Alma più calda di virtù non mai Vestì spoglia mortal. M' amò—l' amal. Lo vidi, e 'l primo palpito	LOUISA: Fear not, my father! for a nobler mind— More generous soul, could never animate A mortal form! He loves me well, And I love him! I saw him, and my

Il corsenti d'amore:
Mi vide appena, e il core
Balzo del mio fedel.
Quaggiù si riconobbero
Nostr' alme in rincontrarsi—
Formate per amarsi
Iddio le aveva in ciel!

CORO e LAU.: Luisa un pegno ingenuo
Dall' amistade accetta.
(Presentandole tutti, pria le donne, poi gli nomini, un mazzettino di fiori.)

LUISA: Grata è quest' alma, o tenere
Compagne—Ah!
(Scorgendo un giovane cacciatore, che anch' esso fra gli altri le porge i suoi fiori.)

SCENA III.

Rodolfo, e Detti.

RODOLFO: Mia diletta!

MILLER: (Desso!)
(Turbato.)

RODOLFO: Buon padre!
(Andando verso Miller.)

LUISA: Abbraccialo—
T'ama qual figlio.

RODOLFO: Amici!
(Salutando i Cont.)
Sei paga?
(A Luisa.)

LUISA: Di letizia
Colma son io!

LAU., CORO: Felici
Appien vi tende amore.

LUISA, RODOLFO: Appien felici?—È ver!
A te dappresso il core
Non vive che al piacer.
T'amo d' amor eh' esprimere
Mal tenterebbe il detto;
Nè gel di morte spegnere
Può si cocente affetto:
Ha i nostri cori un Dio
Di nodo eterno avvinti,
E sulla terra estinti
Noi ci ameremo in ciel!

MILLER: (Non so qual voce infausta
Entro il mio cor favella—
Misero me, se vittima
D'un seduttor foss' ella!
Ah! non voler, buon Dio,
Che a tal destin soccomba—
Mi schiuderia la tomba Affanno si crudel!)

heart
Felt the first throb of passionate emotion.
Scarcely had he beheld me, when his heart
Beat with a throb responsive to my own.
Our souls mingled together as one being,
Inwrapt—eternal love!
Heaven created them to be inseparable!

CHORUS AND LAURA: Accept, Louisa, these gifts of affection.
(They present her in turns with bouquets of flowers.)

LOUISA: How well you bear me in remembrance.
My gentle, kind companions! Ah!
(Rodolphe, as a young hunter, enters and presents her with flowers.)

SCENE III.

Enter Rodolphe.

RODOLPHE: My beloved one!

MILLER: (Aside—troubled) It's him!

RODOLPHE: My father!
(He turns toward Miller.)

LOUISA: Embrace him! He loves you Charles
As if you were his son.

RODOLPHE: (Wishing "good morning" to the Villagers)
Friends.
(To Louisa)
Are you happy?

LOUISA: I am filled with joy!

LAURA AND CHORUS: Love fills your heart with happiness.

LOUISA AND RODOLPHE:
With perfect happiness—it's true!
near to you
My heart knows nothing but pleasure.
I love you with a Love that words cannot express;
A love that will outlive the chills of death.
Heaven has joined our hearts in bonds eternal!
And when we quit this world and all its joys
We shall still love in Heaven!

MILLER: What means this strange and sad misgiving,
That whispers sorrow to my heart?
Ah! what dire dismay, should she, so pure,
Fall a sad victim to the seducer's arts!
Father of Heaven avert such dreadful doom;
Nor let this aged head in shame sink to the tomb!

CORO e LAU.: Un' alma, un sol desio
Ad ambo avviva il petto!
Mai non si vide affetto
Più ardente, più fedel.
(Odesi la sacra squilla.)
Udiste? i bronzi squillano:
Andiam, ne invita il ciel.
(Tutti entrano nel tempietto, Miller li segue lentamente, ed è gia presso a loccare il sacro limite, quando alenno lo arresta.)

SCENA IV.

Wurm, e Detti.

WURM: Ferma, ed ascolta.

MILLER: Wurm!

WURM: Io tutto udia!
Furor di gelosia
M'arde nel petto!—Amo tua figlia—eppure,
Un anno volge, io la sua man ti chiesi:
Non dissentisti, ed or che più fortuna
A me spira seconda, or che il novello
Signor più che l' estinto
M'è largo di favor, tu la promessa
Calpesti, ed osi!

MILLER: Ah cessa—
Il mio paterno assenso
Promisi, ove la figlia
T'avesse amato.

WURM: E non potevi forse
Alle richieste nozze
Astringeria? non hai
Dritto sovr' essa tu?

MILLER: Che dici mai?
Sacre la scelta è d'un consorte,
Essere appieno libera deve:
Nodo che sciorre sol può la morte
Mal dalla forze legge riceve.
Non son tiranno padre son io.
Non si comanda de' figli al cor.
In terra un padre somiglia Iddio
Per la hontade non pel rigor

WURM: Costarti o vecchio debole.
Caro il tuo cicco affetto
Dovrà, ben caro!

MILLER: Spiegati.

WURM: Sotto mendace aspetto
Il preferito giovane
Si mostra a voi.

MILLER: Fia vero?
E tu conosci?

CHORUS AND LAURA: They have but one soul—one wish—
Who has ever seen such ardent faith,
Such earnest tenderness?
(The clock of the church strikes.)
Listen—the clock strikes—let us go—
The voice of Heaven seems to call us!
(They enter the chapel: Miller slowly follows, he has nearly passed the door when someone stays him.)

SCENE IV.

Enter Wurm.

WURM: Stop—and listen!

MILLER: Wurm!

WURM: I have heard all!
The pangs of jealousy devour my soul—
I love your daughter. A full year since
I asked you for her hand, and you did not deny it!
And now, when fortune smiles upon me.
When the new Lord shows me both confidence and favor,
You cast your promises at my feet, and dare—

MILLER: Oh! cease—I pray you cease!
I only promised you my daughter's hand,
If she returned your love.

WURM: And are you not able to force her to this marriage?
Have you not the right, a father's right,
Authority to use over a wilful child?

MILLER: What did you say? Do I hear right?
The choice of a husband is a sacred act,
And should be uncontrolled—it is a tie
That death alone can sever, and should not be Enforced against the will. I am no tyrant—
I am a father—have a father's love,
And seek not to command my daughter's heart.
A father should resemble our Heavenly Father.
In kindness, rather than in severity.

WURM: Foolish, weak, old man!
Your blind affection will cost you dear!

MILLER: Explain yourself.

WURM: Your daughter's new-found lover is not
What he appears to be.

MILLER: Can this be true? Do you know him?

WURM: Apprendilo
E figlio è dell' attero
Walter!

MILLER: O ciel!—Dicesti Figlio?—

WURM: Del tuo signor.
Addio.

MILLER: Pur—

WURM: M'intendesti.
(Parte.)

MILLER: Ei m'ha spezzato il cor!
(Rimane silenzioso qualche momento, come oppresso dal dolore.)
Ah! fu giusto il mio sospetto!
fra e deul m'invade il petto!
D'ogni bene il ben più santo.
Senza macchia io vo'l'onor.
D'una figlia il don soltanto
Ciel mi festi, e pago io sono—
Ma la figlia, ma il tuo dono
Serba intatto al genitor.
L'ogni bene il ben più santo.
Senza macchia io vo'l'onor.
(Parte.)

SCENA V.

Sala nel castello di Walter, con porta in fondo. Walter e Wurm. Alcuni Famigliari, che rimangono al di là dello soglia.

WALTER: (Inoltrandosi seguito da Wurm.) Che mai narrasti! Ei la ragione adunque Smarri!

WURM: Signor quel! esaltato capo
Voi como este!

WALTER: (Agitato.) La duchessa intanto
Mi segue! Digli ch'io lo bramo.
(Wurm si ritira co' servi.)
Ah! tutto
M'arride—tu mio figlio, tu soltanto
Osi!—La tua felicità non sai
Quanto mi costi
(E preso da subito tremore.)
Oh! mai nol sappia mai—
(Ceprendosi il viso d'ambo le mani. Lungo silenzio.)
Il mio sangue, la vita darei
Per vederlo felice, possente!
E a 'miei voti ed agli ordini miei
Si opporrebbe quel cor sconoscente?
Di dolcezze l'affetto paterno
A quest' alma sorgente non è—
Pena atroce, sapplizio d'inferno
Dio sdegnato l' ha reso per me!

WURM: I know him well; he is the son—
The darling son of the proud Lord Walter!

MILLER: O Heaven—you said—the son—

WURM: Of your Lord! Farewell!

MILLER: But—

WURM: You have understood me.
(Exit.)

MILLER: He has broken my heart.
(He pauses as though oppressed with grief.)
Ah! how just were my suspicions;
Anger and grief dispute their sway over my heart.
O Heaven! you have bestowed on me
One precious gift—my daughter!
Grant that the child so pure, so innocent,
Pass through this life spotless—without a stain
Upon that honor which is dearer than all earthly wealth.
The father would preserve her pure as snow.
Then grant, O Heaven, his earnest humble prayer.
(Exit.)

SCENE V.

A Saloon in the Chateau of Walter. Door in the back. Enter Walter and Wurm, afterwards some servants, who remain at the door.

WALTER: What have you told me?
Has the boy lost his senses?

WURM: My Lord, you know how strong of will he is!

WALTER: The Duchess will be here presently—
Tell him I wish to see him.
(Wurm retires with the servants.)
Ah! while all else smiles upon me, you my son,
You alone dare—but you do not know
How much your happiness has cost me.
(He is seized with a sudden terror.)
O that he may never, never know.
(He covers his face with his hands.)
I would give my life's best blood
To see him powerful and happy.
But he opposes all my wishes—all my commands!
His heart is ungrateful and insensible, alas!
To all my fatherly affection.
The fear of your vengeance, O Heaven! haunts me with a terror
More fearful than the torments of eternal fire.

SCENA VI.

Rodolfo, e Detto.

RODOLFO: Padre—

WALTER: M'abbraccia—Portator son io
Di lieto annunzio. Federica in breve
Sarà tua sposa.

RODOLFO: O cielo!

WALTER: Inseim crescinti
Nel tempo istesso, più di te quel core Apprezzar chi potria? Come l'offerta
Della tua man le feci, ebbra di gioja
Mi revelò, ch'ella per te nudria
Segreta flamma, pria
Che il paterno commando
Al Duca la stringesse.

RODOLFO: (Oh me perduto!)

WALTER: Fra l'armi estinto quel guerrier canuto.
Il nome, ed il retaggio
A lei ne resta, a lei cui man d'amica
Porge l' augusta donna
Che preme il trono di Lamagna. Il varco
S'aprea te della corte!

RODOLFO: Ambizïose
Voglie non alimento
la cor, l'è noto!

WALTER: Ia questo debil core
Trema che il guardo mio non scenda.

RODOLFO: Io voglio
A te scroprirlo—
(Odonsi lieti suoni.)

WALTER: Taci—È la Duchessa!

RODOLFO: Oh padre!

WALTER: Incontro ad essa
Moviam, quindi le nozze
Chiederne a te s'aspetta—

RODOLFO: E credi?—e speri?

WALTER: Obbedisci—son legge i miei voleri!
(Traendolo per mano all' incontro della Duchessa.)

SCENA VII.

La Duchessa con seguito di Damigelle: Paggi, Famigliari, Arcieri.

CORO: Quale un sorriso d'amica sorte
Gentil venite fra queste porte.
È senza orgoglio in voi bellezza,
È senza fasto in voi grandezza;
Ma pur modesta siccome bella
Nacque la rosa ad olezzar.
La pudibonda romita stella

SCENE VI.

Enter Rodolphe.

RODOLPHE: My father—

WALTER: Embrace me, my son! I am the bearer of most joyful tidings—
In but a few days Federica will be your bride.

RODOLPHE: O Heaven!

WALTER: You have grown up together from children.
Who can better appreciate her heart than you?
When I offered her your hand, transported with joy,
She revealed to me the secret of her heart.
Long before the paternal command
Compelled her to marry the Duke, she entertained for you
A secret fond affection!

RODOLPHE: Oh! I am lost—

WALTER: The old Warrior Duke died in battle
And she retains his name and wealth.
The august King, now seated on the throne of Lamagne,
Has tendered her his hand and love—
But her heart throbs only for you.

RODOLPHE: My heart has no thought of ambition
You know.

WALTER: Tremble—lest my gaze should penetrate
The depths of your weak heart!

RODOLPHE: I would open my heart to you.
(Sounds of rejoicing are heard.)

WALTER: No more—the Duchess has arrived.

RODOLPHE: Oh! my father!

WALTER: Let us go and welcome her.
All should be prepared for the espousals.

RODOLPHE: And you still believe—still do you hope?

WALTER: Obey!—my wishes should be your law!
(Takes Rodolphe by the hand and conducts him towards the Duchess)

SCENE VII.

Enter the Duchess, followed by Ladies, Pages, Servants, and Archers.

CHORUS: Like fortune's smiles you return again
To bless this place with your presence, O lovely one!
Your young beauty is without pride;
Your noble grandeur without pomp!

È destinata a sfolgorar.

DUCHESSA: (Nella più viva commozione) Congiunti!—amici miei!

WALTER: Nobil signora—
(La Duchessa gettasi amorosamente fra le sue braccia.)
Bella nepote, il mio Rodolfo implora
L'onor di favellarti.
Io la bandita caccia
Intanto affretterò. M'udisti?
(Piano al figlio: ad un suo cenno tutti partono con esso: Rodolfo e la Duchessa rimangono soli.)

RODOLFO: (È d'uopo Al suo cor generoso Fidarsi appien.) Duchessa—

DUCHESSA: Duchessa tu m'appelli!
Federica son io—non ho cessato
Per te d'esserla mai!
Se cangiò la fortuna, io non cangiai.
Dall'aule raggianti di vano splendore
Al tetto natio volava il desir—
Là dove sorgea dal vergin mio core
La prima speranza, il primo sospir!

RODOLFO: Degli anni primieri le gioje innocenti
Con me dividesti, divisi conte—
Le pene segrete degli anni più ardenti Or deggio svelarti, prostrato al tuo piè.

DUCHESSA: Deh! sorgi Rodolfo—
Tu sembri turbato!

RODOLFO: Non giova negarlo—pur troppo lo sono.

DUCHESSA: Ah! parla!

RODOLFO: M'astringe un padre spietato
Di tallo non mio a chieder perdono—

DUCHESSA: Che intendo!

RODOLFO: Si vaga, sì eccelsa consorte
A me destinato il cielo non ha—

DUCHESSA: Oh! spiegati.

RODOLFO: Ad altra mi avvince la sorte!

DUCHESSA: Ad altra!

RODOLFO: Giurai—

DUCHESSA: Ad altra!

RODOLFO: Pietà!
Deh! la parola amara
Perdona al labbro mio—
Petea condurti all'ara?
Mentir Dinanzi a Dio?

Like the Rose, modest and beautiful,
Born to shed perfume and joy around:
Or, like a lone and lovely star,
Shedding your timid light to bless and charm.

DUCHESS: (With visible emotion) Relations:—dear friends!

WALTER: Noble Lady!
(The Duchess tenderly throws herself in his arms.)
Dear niece, my son, your playmate, Rodolphe,
Asks the favor of some words with you.
And while you speak of pleasures of old times,
I will hasten on the preparations for the chase.
(To his son) You have heard me!
(At a sign from Walter, all retire. The Duchess and Rodolphe remain alone.)

RODOLPHE: (Aside) I must trust to her generous heart.
(Aloud) Duchess—

DUCHESS: I have not ceased
To be to you, Federica! I have not changed with fortune.
In vain they tempt me with the splendor of the courts.
My thoughts still turn towards my native home,
Where the first hope of my virgin heart was born;
Where first I drew the breath of life!

RODOLPHE: Together we have shared the innocent joys of early youth.
Now, prostrate at your feet, let me reveal
The secret of my later years.

DUCHESS: Rodolphe, arise!—You seem troubled!

RODOLPHE: Too true—I am too deeply troubled.

DUCHESS: Ah, speak!

RODOLPHE: My father, in his anger, bids me ask pardon
For a fault which is not mine!

DUCHESS: What do I hear!

RUDOLPHE: Heaven has not willed that I should be united
To one so amiable, so powerful as you!

DUCHESS: Quick, explain yourself!

RODOLPHE: Destiny has linked me to another!

DUCHESS: To another!!

RODOLPHE: I have sworn.

DUCHESS: To another!!

RODOLPHE: Pity and pardon me for uttering these sorrowful words!
How could I conduct you to the altar?
How basely lie before high Heaven?

Prima d'offrirti un core
Che avvampa d'altro amore,
La destra mia tratiggerlo
A' piedi tuoi saprà!

DUCHESSA: Arma, se vuoi, la mano.
In sen mi scaglia lì brando—
M'udrai, crudele, insano,
Te perdonar spirando;
Ma da gel so core
Non aspettar favore:
Amor sprezzato è furia
Che perdonar non sa.
(Partono da opposte via.)

SCENA VIII.

Interno della casa di Miller. Due porte laterali; una mette alla stanza di Miller, l'altra a quella di Luisa; accanto alla prima pende una spada ed una vecchia assisa da soldato: nel prospetto l'ingresso ed una finestra, da cui scorgesi parte della chiesetta.

Odonsi per le montagne e le vallate circostanti grida, rimbombo di strumenti da caccia.

VOCI IN LONTANANZA: Sciogliete i levrieri—spronate i destrieri—
Allegra, gioconda la caccia sarà—
Si cingan le selve—snidiamo le belve—
La preda è sicura, fuggir non potrà—

SCENA IX.

Luisa, quindi Miller.

LUISA: (Accostandosi alla finestra.) Nol veggo—Allontanarsi dalla caccia
E qui venir promise.
(Entra Miller, e si getta sopra una seggiola.)
O padre mio!
Che fu? Sembri agitato!

MILLER: Il mio timore
Non era vano—Sei tradita! (sorgendo)

LUISA: Io? Come?
Narra.

MILLER: Sembianza e nome
Colai mentì!

LUISA: Carlo? Fia ver?

MILLER: Del Conte di Walter figlio
qual comanda il padre,
Egli a stringer si appresta
Splendide nozze—

LUISA: Ria menzogna è questa—
Esser non puote—

Rather than offer you a heart, whose every hope
Is bound up in another, I will die at your feet.

DUCHESS: Arm your hand if you will, but not against yourself.
Let your dagger pierce my heart, and then,
Cold and insensible, I will pardon you with my dying breath.
Expect no charity from a jealous heart!
Condemned love is a fury who does not know
How to pardon or relent!
(They exit on opposite sides.)

SCENE VIII.

Interior of the house of Miller. On one side two doors are seen, one leading to the chamber of Miller, the other to that of Louisa. By the first is seen suspended an old sword, and badge of a soldier. At the back there is a passageway, and from the window can be seen a portion of the little church.

The Music of the Chase is heard on the Mountains, and in the Valleys.

VOICE IN THE DISTANCE: Unloose the dogs—
Spur on the horses, the chase is exciting and joyous
Let slip the game—the prey is sure—it cannot escape.

SCENE IX.

(Enter Louisa.)

LOUISA: (Looking from the window) I do not see him!
And yet he promised he would leave the chase
And hasten back to me!
(Miller enters, and throws himself on a chair.)
O my father—what is the matter?
Why are you so troubled—so agitated?

MILLER: My fears were not in vain—you are deceived.

LOUISA: Me!—how!—speak!

MILLER: He has concealed from you his rank and his name.

LOUISA: Charles! Is it possible?

MILLER: He is the son of Count Walter,
And, according to the wishes of his father,
Is about to wed a rich and noble lady!

LOUISA: It's false—It's slander!—It cannot be!

MILLER: Dal castello io vengo—
Giunta è la sposa—

LUISA: Taci—
Uccider vuoi tua figlia?

MILLER: Un seduttore
Accolse dunque il tetto mio?
(Aggirandosi per la stanza pieno d'ira, trovasi dinanzi all sua vacchia divisa.)
Per questa
D'onore assisa che il mio petto un giorno
Coprì, vendetta io giuro!

LUISA: Padre!
(Spaventata.)

SCENA X.

Rodolfo, e Detti.

RODOLFO: (Ancor sulla soglie, d'onde lui udito l'ultima parte della scena precedente.) Louisa, non temer—
(Miller fa an passo per andargli incontro, la figlia si frappone.)
Non faro
(Avanzandosi.)
Bugiarde le promesse
Di questo laboro—Il velo
Ben veggo è totto; ma cangiato il nome,
È sempre il cor lo stesso.

MILLER: Che intendi?

LUISA: Ahimè!

RODOLFO: (Pone Luisa in ginocchio a piè di Miller, e prostratosi anch'esso, stringendo nella sua la destra di lei, esclama con passione.) Sono
Tuo Sposo! Il padre testimone, e Dio
Chiamo del giuramento!

MILLER: Ahi, sconsigliato!
E chi sottrarci all' ira
Potrà del Conte?

LUISA: Io gelo!

RODOLFO: A me so'tanto è al ciel,
(Solennemente.)
Arcan tremendo è manifesto!
Arcano
Che da me rivelato, a piè cadermi
Farebbe—il Conte!

LUISA: Alcun s'avanza—

RODOLFO: (Che va verso la soglia.) È desso!
Mio padre!

LUISA: Ah!—son perduta!

MILLER: Egli?—egli stesso?

SCENA XI.

Walter, e Detti.

RODOLFO: Tu signor, fra queste soglie!
A che vieni?

MILLER: I have just returned from the Chateau;
The lady whom he weds, arrived just now!

LOUISA: Silence! Would you kill your child?

MILLER: A villain then has been beneath my roof.
(He walks angrily up and down the room, and at last finds himself opposite his old badge of honorable service.)
By this badge of honor,
Which in other days I won and wore
I swear a deadly vengeance.

LOUISA: (In terror) My father!

SCENE X.

Enter Rodolphe.

RODOLPHE: (Still at the door, where he has overheard the latter part of the preceding scene) Louisa, fear nothing!
(Miller takes a step towards Rodolphe; Louisa rushes between them.)

RODOLPHE: (Advancing) The promises I have made are not false!
The mystery is cleared, but my heart is still the same!

MILLER: What would you say?

LOUISA: Alas!

RODOLPHE: (Placing Louisa on her knees at her father's feet, and kneeling himself beside her, he clasps the hands of the young girl, exclaims with fervor.) I am your betrothed!
I take as witnesses of my oath
Your father and my God!

MILLER: Ah! unhappy! who can restrain
The anger of the Count?

LOUISA: I tremble!

RODOLPHE: (Solemnly) There is a dreadful secret
Known only to me and to my honor.
This, if I reveal it,
Will make the Count fall prostrate at my feet.

LOUISA: Someone comes—

RODOLPHE: (Going towards the door) It's him! my father!

LOUISA: Ah! I am lost!

MILLER: It's him! It's him!

SCENE XI.

Enter Walter.

RODOLPHE: You—my Lord!—in this house
Why have you come?

WALTER: A che? Nol rese
Lo spavento che vi coglie
Assai chiaro, assai palese?
Del mio dritto vengo armato
A stornar colpevol tresca.

MILLER, LUISA: Che!

RODOLFO: L'accento scellerato
Più dal labbro mai non t'esca!
Puro amor ne inflamma il petto—
Oltraggiarlo ad uom non lice.

WALTER: Puro amor, l'amore abbietto
Di venduta seduttrice?

MILLER, LUISA, RODOLFO: Ah!
(Luisa cade fra le braccia del padre: Rodolfo snuda la spada.)

RODOLFO: La vita mi donasti!
(Ripone il ferro.)
Lo rimembra—ti ho pagato
Ora il dono!

MILLER: (Che ha posto Luisa sopra una sedia.) A me portasti
Grave insulto!—Io fui soldato!
Trema—

LUISA: Oh Dio!
(Levandosi.)
Mi ribollisce.

MILLER: Nelle vene il sangue ancor—

WALTER: Ardiresti?

MILLER: Tutto ardisce
Padre offeso nell' enor!

WALTER: Folle or ti pentirai
Dell' audacia! Olà!

SCENE XII.

Accore un drapello d'Arcieri, seguito da molti Contadini e da Laura e Detti.

ARCIERI: Signore?

LUISA: Giusto ciel!

LAU., CON.: Che avvenne mai?

RODOLFO: E potresti, o genitore?

LAU., CON.: Ei suo figlio!

WALTER: Arretra, insano—

RODOLFO: Odi prima—

WALTER: Udir non vo'—
Ambo in ceppi—
(Accenando Mil. e Lui. agla Arcieri.)

RODOLFO, LAURA, CONTADINI: Ah!

MILLER: Disumano!!

WALTER: That for which I have come
The terror you display too plainly tells.
I come, by virtue of a parent's right.
To break this web of criminal intrigue!

MILLER, LOUISA: What?

RODOLPHE: Not even from your lips
Will I permit an insult to this lady.
A pure and holy love unites our hearts,
And no man has a right to outrage it.

WALTER: A pure love—indeed! pure—very pure!
A love most freely sold, and bought up by your gold!

LOUISA, MILLER, RODOLPHE: Ah!
(Louisa falls into the arms of her father.)

RODOLPHE: (Drawing his sword) But no—you are the author of my being!
I spare you—(Sheathing his sword)—and have paid you back
The life you gave;—remember! we now are equal!

MILLER: (Who has placed Louisa in a chair) You have insulted me beyond endurance!
I am a soldier—tremble!

LOUISA: (Rising) O Heaven!

MILLER: Blood still flows in these veins!

WALTER: Dare you?

MILLER: A parent's outraged honor dares everything!

WALTER: Insensate fool! You shall repent your audacity!
Ho! without there!

SCENE XII.

Enter Archers, followed by Villagers and Laura.

ARCHERS: My Lord!

VILLAGERS AND LAURA: What mean these angry words,
And looks so full of hate?

RODOLPHE: O! pause my father!
You cannot do this wrong!

WALTER: Retire, infatuated boy.

RODOLPHE: First listen to me; I implore you!

WALTER: I will listen to nothing,
(Showing Louisa and Miller to the archers)
Put them in chains!

RODOLPHE, LAURA AND VILLAGERS: Ah!

MILLER: Inhuman monster!!

LUISA: Al tuo piè—
(Cadendo alle ginocchia di Vatter.)

MILLER: Prostrata!—No.
(Rialzandola.)
Fra i mortali ancora oppressa
Non è tanto l'innocenza.
Che si vegga genuflessa
D'un superbo alla presenza.
A quel Dio ti prostra innante
De' malvagi punitor.
Non a tal che ha d'nom sembiante,
E di belva in petto il cor.

RODOLFO: Foco d'ira è questo pianto—
Cedi—cedi all'amor mio—
Non voier quel nodo infranto,
Che tra noi formava Iddio—
Negro vel mi sta sul ciglio!
Ho l'inferno in mezzo al cor!
Un istante ancor son figlio!
Un istante ho padre ancor!

WALTER: Tu piegarti, tu, non io,
Devi, o figlio, cieco, ingrato:
Il mio cenno, il voler mio
È immutabil come il fato!
Fra il suo core e il cor paterno
Frapponeste un turpe amor—
(A Mil. e Lui.)
Non può il ciel, non può l'inferno
Involarvi ai mio furor.

LUISA: (Alzando al cielo gli occhi lagrimosi.) Ad imagin tua creata.
O Signore, anch'io non fui?
E perchè son calpestata
Or qual fango da costui?
Deh! mi salva—deh! m'aita—
Deh! non m'abbia l'oppressor
Il tuo dono, la mia vita,
Pria ripigliati, Signor!

LAU., CONT,: (Il suo pianto al pianto sforza. Il suo duolo spezza il cor!)

ARCIERI: Obbedirlo a tutti è forza:
Egli è padre, egli è signor.

WALTER: I cenni miei si compiano.
(Agli Arcieri.)

RODOLFO: (Mettendosi innanzi a Luisa col ferro sguainato.) Da questo acciar svenato
Cadrà chi temerario
S'avanza.

WALTER: Forsennato!
(Prende Luisa e la spinge fra gli Arcieri.)
In me lo scaglia.

RODOLFO: Oh rabbia!
Se tratta è fra catene
La sposa mia, nel carcere
Giuro seguirla.

LOUISA: (Falling at the feet of Walter) At your feet I kneel.

MILLER: Prostrate—no! Innocence is not yet so oppressed
That it should kneel to pride and tyranny.
Prostrate yourself before your God,
He who is mighty to punish and to save;
And not before a man whose heart is filled
With the fell passions of ferocious beasts.

RODOLPHE: My eyes are filled with tears of rage!
Let love subdue the fury of my soul!
They cannot break the chain, which heaven itself has forged!
A dark veil seems spread before my sight!
Unquenchable fires rage within my breast.
O love! let me remember still—I am a son!
That still my father lives.

WALTER: It is those who should pray. O blind, ungrateful son!
My will and my orders are as immutable
As the decrees of destiny.
Between you and your father's heart there glides
The subtle serpent love. (To Miller and Louisa)
Neither Heaven nor Hell shall shield you from my vengeance!

LOUISA: (Raising her eyes full of tears to Heaven) And I, O Lord! was I not born in your image?
Then why should I crouch at the feet of this man?
Aid me! O, aid me, Heaven! Save me.
O draw me from the hands of the oppressor!
O Lord! rather than abandon me to his mercy,
Take back the life which you have given!

LAURA AND VILLAGERS: Our tears flow with hers!
Her grief will break our hearts.

ARCHERS: We must obey his orders, his commands—
He is a father—he is our Lord!

WALTER: See that my orders are fulfilled.

RODOLPHE: (Placing himself before Louisa with his sword drawn) Who dares approach my love,
This sword shall pierce his heart!

WALTER: Presumptuous boy.
(Seizes Louisa and pushes her towards the Archers)
Let your fierce sword strike me!

RODOLPHE: You cannot separate us—
Her prison shall be mine!

WALTER: Ebbene,
La segui.

RODOLFO: Ah! pria che l'abbiano.
Coloro in preda, il core
Io le trapasso.
(Lanciandosi fra gli Armageri, e mettendo la punta della spada sul petto di Luisa.)

WALTER: Uccidila.
Che tardi?

RODOLFO: O mio furore!
Tutto tentai—non restami
Che un infernal consiglio—
Se crudo, inesorabile
Tu rimarrai col figlio
(At orecchio di Walter, con terribile accento.)
Trema! svelato agli uomini
Sarà dal labbro mio
Come giungesti ad essere
Conte di Walter!
(Esce rapidamente.)

WALTER: Dio—
(Sembra colpito da folgore.)
Rodolfo—m'odi—arrestati—
(Tutto m'ingombra un gel!)
Coste lasciate—è libera—
(Convulso e pallido in volto più della morte, cerca raggiungere il figlio.)

LAURA, CONTADINI, ARCIERI: Fia ver!

LUISA, MILLER: Pietoso ciel!
(Gli Arcieri partono: Luisa cade in ginocchio mezzo svenuta: gli altri accorrono d'intorno.)

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO.

■ ATTO SECONDO.

L'INTRIGO.

SCENA PRIMA.

Interno della casa di Miller.

Laura e Contadini, poi Luisa.

LAU., CORO: Ah! Luisa, Luisa, ove sei? (Accorrendo agitati.)

LUISA: (Uscendo.) Chi m'appella?
(Notando lo smarrimento che si mostra negli atti e nel volto di ognuno.)
Voi certo recate
Tristo annunzio!

WALTER: Follow her then—if it pleases you!

RODOLPHE: (Wildly.) No, rather than see her fall the prey
To ruffians such as these,
My sword shall pierce her heart.
(He springs among the Archers, and places the point of his sword to the heart of Louisa.)

WALTER: Kill her!—Why do you hesitate to strike!

RODOLPHE: O madness!—I cannot slay my love!
I am tempted on every side. One way remains!
(To Walter) If you are inexorable to pleadings,
To the earnest pleadings of your son—
(With a whisper of terrible meaning in the ear of Walter)
Tremble! my lips shall reveal to the world
By what means you became Count Walter!
(Exit hurriedly.)

WALTER: Great Heaven!
(He seems stupefied by the blow.)
Rodolphe, listen to me! stay! stay!
What means this fearful chill
That penetrates through every vein?
Let her go free—give her her liberty.
(His face pale, and with convulsive gestures, he seeks to rejoin his son.)

LAURA, VILLAGERS AND ARCHERS: What can this mean?
What is this dreadful mystery?

MILLER, LOUISA: Merciful Heaven!
(Exit Archers.)
(Louisa, half fainting, falls upon her knees. The Villagers press around her.)

END OF FIRST ACT.

■ ACT II.

INTRIGUE.

SCENE I.

Interior of the Cottage of Miller.

Enter Laura and Villagers, in a hurried and agitated manner.

LAURA AND CHORUS: Ah, Louisa! Louisa! where are you?

LOUISA: (Coming out of her chamber) Who calls me?
(She remarks on the astonishment and fear depicted on the countenances of those who surround her.)
What do these saddened looks mean?
Do you bring more evil tidings?

LAURA: Pur troppo!

CORO: E tu dei.
Ascoltarlo—

LUISA: Parlate—parlate—

LAU., CORO: Al villaggio dai campi tornando
Della roccia pel ripido calle,
Un fragor, che veniasi accostando,
A noi giunse dall'ima convalle:
Eran passi e minaccie di armati.
Cui d'ambascia una voce frammista;
Al eiglion della rupe affacciati
Ne colpì deplorabile vista!
Crudi sgherri traenti un vegliardo
Fra catene!

LUISA: Ah! mio padre!

LAU., CORO: Fa cor—
Havvi un Giusto, un Possente che il guardo
Tien rivolto sui miseri ognor!

LUISA: (Rimasta oppressa dal cordoglio, scuotesi ad un tratto, e s'incammina per uscire.) Oh! padre, o padre mio!

LAURA: Dove?

LUISA: Al castello—

TUTTI: Wurm!

SCENA II.

Wurm, e Detti.

WURM: Ascoltarmi è d'uopo. (A Luisa.)
Uscite.
(Ai Contadini che partono.)

LUISA: (Io gelo!)

WURM: Il padre tuo!

LUISA: Finisci.

WURM: Langue in dura prigion.

LUISA: Reo di che fallo?

WURM: Ei, del Conte vassallo,
Farlo d'oltraggie e di minaccie segno
Ardì! Grave il delitto.
Grave la pena fia!

LUISA: D'interrogarti Tremo!

WURM: Che val tacerlo?
Sul canuto suo crin pende la scure.

LUISA: Ah!—Taci—taci—

WURM: Eppure,
Tu puoi salvarlo.

LUISA: Io!—Come?

WURM: A te m'invia
L'offeso Conte: un foglio
Vergar t'impone, e prezzo
Ne fia lo scampo di tuo padre.

LUISA: Un foglio?

LAURA: Alas! We bear most evil news!

CHORUS: Dare you to listen to it?

LOUISA: Speak—in mercy speak!

LAURA AND CHORUS: As by the mountain path we came this way,
We heard a sound beneath us in the valley;
It was the steps of armed men in motion,
And through this measured sound we heard a plaintive voice.
Too soon we saw the sad and tristful sight—
The archers bore away a poor old man in chains.

LOUISA: Oh heavens! my father!

LAURA AND CHORUS: Take courage; there is a Power above,
Whose justice punishes the wicked!

LOUISA: (Stupefied by grief, and agitated, starts forth to seek her father) O my father! my father!

LAURA: Where are you going?

LOUISA: To the Chateau!

ALL: (Surprised.) Wurm!

SCENE II.

Enter Wurm.

WURM: (To Louisa) Louisa, I must speak to you!
(To the Villagers) Retire.

LOUISA: I tremble with fear!

WURM: Your father!

LOUISA: O speak! what of him?

WURM: He languishes in prison.

LOUISA: Of what is he accused?

WURM: He, only a vassal,
Has dared to raise his hand against his Lord!
Has menaced him; the crime is serious—
The punishment severe!

LOUISA: I dread to ask you further!

WURM: It is best you know the whole.
Over his white hairs the axe now hangs suspended.

LOUISA: Ah!—silence!—mercy!—I implore you!!

WURM: Tremble not, but act!
It is in your power to save his life!

LOUISA: How?—speak!—speak!

WURM: The injured Count has sent me to you—
He bids me say your father shall be free,
If you will write as I shall dictate.

LOUISA: Write—I—what?

WURM: Scrivi. (Accennando a Luisa una tavola, su cui v'ha l'occurrente per iscrivere.)
"Wurm,—io giammai"
(Dettando.)
"Rodolfo non amai."
(Luisa guarda Wurm un istante, quindi abbassa gli occhi come rassegnata al sacrifizio, e scrive.)
"Il suo lignaggio ermai noto,—e volli Stringerlo fra mie reti"—

LUISA: E deggio?

WURM: Dei Salvar tuo padre.
(Luisa scrive.)
"Ambizïon mi vinse—
Tutto svanì—Perdona.—
Ritorno al primo affetto—
E di Rodolfo ad evitar gli sdegni—
Come la notte regni
Vieni ed insieme luggirem"—

LUISA: Che!

WURM: Scrivi.

LUISA: E segnar questa mano
Potrebbe l'onta mia?
(Sargendo con indignazione.)
Lo speri ivano—
Tu puniscimi, o Signore,
Se t' offesi, e paga io sono,
Ma de' barbari al furore
Noa lasciarmi in abbandono.
A scampar da fato estremo
Innocente genitor,
Chieggon essi—a dirlo io fremo.—
Della figlia il disonor!

WURM: Qui nulla s' attenta imporre al tuo core:
Tu libera sei! Ti lascio.
(In atto di partire.)

LUISA: (Trattenendolo.) Spietato!
Eil misero vecchio?

WURM: L'udisti: egli muore.
(Freddamente)

LUISA: E libera io sono!
(Torrendosi e convulsiramente le mani, quindi si accosta aila tavola e scrive.)
Il foglio è vergato.
(Lo dà a Wurm.)

WURM: (Depo avedo letto.)
Sal capo del padre, spontaneo lo scritto.
Luisa mi giura che all' nopo dirai.

LUISA: Lo giuro.

WURM: Un sol cenno ancor t'e prescritto.

LUISA: Io t'odo.

WURM: Al castello venirne dovrai
Ed ivi al cospetto di nobil signora
Accesa mostrarti di—Wurm.

LUISA: Dite?

WURM: Acerba è la prova!

LUISA: No.

WURM: Write. (He conducts Louisa to a table where she seats herself. He dictates; she writes.)
"I never loved Rodolphe!" (Louisa gazes up into his face for a moment, then lowering her eyes, seems resigned to the sacrifice, and writes on.)
"His rank was known to me.
And I tried to entangle him in my net."

LOUISA: Is it right to do this?

WURM: It is right to save your father.
(Louisa writes.)
"Ambition alone guided me. But all has vanished!
Pardon me—I return to my first love.
To avoid the anger of Rodolphe, when darkness covers the heavens—come—we will fly together."

LOUISA: What!—

WURM: Write—

LOUISA: And shall this hand sign my own shame?
(Rising indignantly) Your hope is vain!
You have punished me; O Lord,
If I have offended you I murmur not,
But do not abandon me to my enemies!
To save my aged father they ask—
I tremble to speak it—the dishonor of his child!

WURM: I will not press you! If your heart does not dictate the sacrifice,
You are free—I leave you. (He pretends to go.)

LOUISA: Cruel!—(Detaining him) and my father?

WURM: You have doomed him.
(Coldly.) He dies!

LOUISA: And I am free!—(She presses her hands together convulsively—then leans on the table and writes.)
It is finished.
(She gives it to Wurm.)

WURM: (After having read the note) By the life of your father,
Swear Louisa, you will say if required of you—
That this was written willingly—voluntarily.

LOUISA: I swear!

WURM: One other condition is yet to be exacted.—

LOUISA: I listen!

WURM: You will go to the Chateau, and there
In the presence of a lady, declare your love for—Wurm!

LOUISA: For you?

WURM: The trial is hard?—

LOUISA: No.

WURM: Duolmi!—

LUISA: Ed allora?—

WURM: Allora—

LUISA: Mio padre?—

WURM: Fia salvo.

LUISA: Mercè.—
(Un sorriso diabolico punta sul labbro di Wurm.)
A brani, a brani, o pertido.
Ancor tu m'hai squarciato!—
Almen t'affretta a rendermi (prorompendo)
Il padre sventurato—
Di morte il fero brivido
Tutta m' invade omai—
Mi chiuda almeno i rai
La man del genitor!

WURM: Coraggio: il tempo è farmaco
D'ogni cordoglio umano.
Di stringer la tua mano
Speranza ie nudro anco. (Escono.)

SCENA III.

Il Castello: appartamenti di Walter.

WALTER: Egli delira: sul mattin degli anni
Vinta da cieco affetto
Spesso è ragion! Del senno empia il difetto
Pel figlio il padre.—L' opra mia si compia—
Nulla cangiar mi debbe:
Esser pietoso crudeltà sarebbe.

SCENA IV.

Wurm, e Detto.

WALTER: Ebben?

WURM: Tutte apprestai
Della trama le fila.

WALTER: Oh! di'a Luisa?—

WURM: Come previdi già, vinta, conquisa
Da crudele spavento,
Alle minnacie s'arrendea: per calle
Recondito qui tratta
Verrà.

WALTER: Ma il foglio?—

WURM: Compra man recarlo
Dove a Rodolfo: la vittoria è certa.
Eppar dal primo assalto
Qual potervi respinse io non intendo!

WALTER: Inalteso periglio!—
Del figlio una minaccia!—

WURM: Ingrato figlio?—

WURM: I suffer—

LOUISA: And then?

WURM: Then!—

LOUISA: My father?—

WURM: Is saved!

LOUISA: Mercy! (A diabolical smile is seen to pass over the lips of Wurm.)
Monster! You have broken my heart!
You have torn it piece by piece asunder!
(With violence.) It is now in your hands.
I demand my poor unhappy father:
The chills of death are coursing through my veins.
But, at least a father's hand shall close my eyes!

WURM: Courage! Time is the certain remedy
For all the ills of frail humanity.
I yet hope to claim you as my bride!
(Exit both.)

SCENE III.

Room in the Chateau.
Walter, alone.

WALTER: He is delirious!—Now in his youth,
The morning of his days, to have his reason vanquished
By a blind and foolish attachment—is terrible.
But it is a father's duty to watch over his child.
So far my task is achieved—nothing can move me.

SCENE IV.

Enter Wurm.

WALTER: Well, what have you done?

WURM: I have prepared the net!

WALTER: Speak—Louisa?—

WURM: As I foresaw,
She acceded to the offer—the menaces subdued her.
She will come here today in secret.

WALTER: But the letter?—

WURM: Some messenger must take it to Rodolphe.
The victory is certain; but I've yet to learn
What so suddenly arrested your anger?

WALTER: An undreamed-of peril, a threat from Rodolphe!

WURM: Ungrateful son!

WALTER: L'alto retaggio non ho bramato
Di mio engiono che sol per esso!—
Ad ottenello contaminato
Mi son par troppo di nero eccesso!—

WURM: In puato feci del mio signore
Nel palesarvi lamente ascosa!
A me, cui sempre fidava il core,
Scorri lascelta ei d'una spoa—

WALTER: Timori nacquero in me ben tristi!—

WURM: Aver quel nodo figli potea!

WALTER: Ad acqueiarmi tu suggeristi Orribù mezzo!!

WURM: Varear dovea
L'irta foresta notturno il Conte—
Noi l'appostammo, e—

WALTER: Non seguir—
Sento drizzarsi le chiome in fronte!
Tutto il mio sangue rabbrividir!

WURM: E ver, che giova parlar d'evento
Cui notte eterna fra' misteri
Ha già sepolto?

WALTER: Sepolto?

WURM: Spento
Il sire antico da' masnadieri,
Qual noi spargemmo, tutti han creduto—

WALTER: Non tutti! (*) Al rombo mio figlio accorse (Sorpreso e turbamento di Wurm.)
Dell' armi nostre—Non era muto
Ancor quel labbro!—

WURM: Che intendo!—Ah! forse?—

WALTER: In quel supremo, terribil punto
Walter nomava!—

WURM: Chi?

WALTER: Gli assassini!

WURM: Oh me perduto!

WALTER: Sol tu? Congiunto
Non t' ha Satanno a' miei destini?—
O meco incolume sarai, lo giuro,
O sul patibolo verrò con te.

WURM: (Più questo capo non è sicuro!—
Potria del ceppo cadere a piè!)
Vien la Duchessa!—
(Ad un cenno di Walter si ritira.)

WALTER: I only coveted my cousin's wealth,
That Rodolphe might inherit it.
And to obtain it, how terrible the crime I have committed!

WURM: I forwarded your interests in every way,
By learning the secret thoughts of my master.
He confided in me and revealed his choice of a wife.

WALTER: At the news what dismal forebodings rose in my heart!

WURM: From such a match there was a chance
That heirs might spring and cut off your inheritance.

WALTER: Then you suggested to me a horrible means
To stay this act of folly and injustice.

WURM: The old Count was compelled to traverse the forest alone;
He was alone—we waited for him.

WALTER: No more! no more! I dare not think of it!
My blood seems freezing in my veins.

WURM: It is true! why should we speak of events
Which are entombed in the mysteries of eternal night?—

WALTER: Entombed?—

WURM: The old Lord is dead:—our story is believed by all,
That he, the poor old man, was slain by brigands!

WALTER: Not by all!—(Wurm is surprised, and shows signs of terror.)
Rodolphe, alarmed by the noise of our shots,
Rushed to the spot.—The old man still lived,
And by his dying lips our secret was revealed!

WURM: What do I hear?—Ah! perhaps—

WALTER: He named—

WURM: Who?—

WALTER: The assassins—

WURM: Then I am lost!—

WALTER: Not you alone!—Has the foul fiend not United me with your destiny?
Will you not be saved with me,
Or I be lost with you?

WURM: (Aside) There is no more security here for me;—
My head may fall at any moment.
(Aloud) My Lord, the Countess approaches.
(He retires at a sign from Walter.)

SCENA V.

La Duchessa, e Detto.

DUCHESSA: Conte—

WALTER: Il detto mio confermo:
Di Ridolfo nel sen, qual d' un infermo
Il delirio, s'apprese
Amor che spento lia–

DUCHESSA: Spento?—

WALTER: Ed in breve.

DUCHESSA: Io temo!—

WALTER: Indarno: di Luisa il core
Mai Rodolfo non ebbe:
D'altri è colei.

DUCHESSA: Fia vero?—E chi potrebbe Attestarlo?

WALTER: Ella stessa

DUCHESSA: Ella!—

WALTER: Qual tu chiedesti
Qui fu condotta.

DUCHESSA: Già!

WALTER: Non lo volesti?

SCENA VI.

La Duchessa siede, cercanao ricomporsi dal suo turbamenta. Walter apre una porta segreta, d' onde esce Luisa, accompagnata da Wurm.

WALTER: Presentarti alla Duchessa.
Puoi, Luisa—Intendi?

DUCHESSA: Appressa. (Con sussiego.)

WURM: Ti rammenta in qual periglio
È tuo padre! (Piano a Luisa.)

LUISA: (O mio terrore!)—
(S'avanza.)

DUCHESSA: (Dolce aspetto!—Il volto, il ciglio—Tutto spira in lei candore!)

LUISA: (A costei sarà concesso Quanto il ciel m'avea promesso!)

DUCHESSA: Par che manchi in te coraggio
D'erger gli occhi al mio sembiante!

WALTER: Ella nata in un villaggio!—

WURM: D'alta dama or tratta inante!—

LUISA: (Rea fucina d' empie frodi Son costor!)—

DUCHESSA: (Sorgendo s'accosta a Luisa.) Luisa, m' odi,
Farmi puote un sol tuo detto
Sventurata, o appien felice!
Non mentir!—Ma no, l'aspetto

SCENE V.

Enter the Duchess.

DUCHESS: My Lord Count—

WALTER: I am ready to fulfill my promise—
The infatuation of Rodolphe will prove but transient.
This love will soon vanish from his heart.

DUCHESS: Vanish?—

WALTER: Yes—within a day!—

DUCHESS: I fear—it cannot be!—

WALTER: Louisa never loved him—her heart was another's!

DUCHESS: Can this be true? who will prove it?

WALTER: Herself!

DUCHESS: She!

WALTER: At your request she has been brought here.

DUCHESS: So soon?

WALTER: Even as you desired it.

SCENE VI.

(The Duchess, striving to hide her agitation, seats herself. Walter opens a secret door from whence comes Louisa, accompanied by Wurm.)

WALTER: Wurm! you can present Louisa to the Duchess!
Do you hear?

DUCHESS: (With gravity) Approach!

WURM: (Whispering to Louisa as she approaches) Remember the peril in which your father lies!

LOUISA: (Aside) I tremble with fear! (She advances.)

DUCHESS: (Aside) How fair a countenance—her face, her eyes,
All speak of truth and candor.

LOUISA: (Aside) To her then will be accorded all the joy
I vainly thought that Heaven had promised me.

DUCHESS: It seems to me your courage fails you:
You cannot raise your eyes to my face!

WALTER: She is but a humble villager.

WURM: And brought before so high a lady is abashed!

LOUISA: (Aside.) This is some impious plot contrived between them,
To work my utter ruin!

DUCHESS: (Rising and approaching Louisa) Louisa! Do you hear me? Your lips can utter one word,
Which will render me miserable—utterly—forever,

Non hai tu di mentitrice!

LUISA: (Chi soffri maggiore affanno!)—

DUCHESSA: (Prendendo Luisa per mano, ed affiggendole avidamente lo sguardo negli occhi.) Arai tu?

LUISA: (Destin tiranno!—)
Amo.

DUCHESSA: E chi? chi?

LUISA: Wurm.
(Mostrandolo. Wurm s' inchina modestamente.) Indegno!

DUCHESSA: Ma Rodolfo?—

LUISA: Fra noi venne
Sconosciuto—A qual disegno
Io lo inogro—

DUCHESSA: E non ottenne
Mai d' amor lusinghe, accenti
Da Luisa?

LUISA: (Quai momenti!—)

DUCHESSA: Di.

LUISA: No, mai.

DUCHESSA: (La speme in core Mi si avviva!—)

LUISA: (Esulta!) (Freme di gelosia.)

DUCHESSA: Parmi!—
Sì—cangtasti di colore!—
Ah! che fia?—Non ingannarmi!
Non tradir te stessa!—

LUISA: (Oh Cielo!)

WALTER: (Obserebbe?)—

DUCHESSA: Parla—

WURM: (Io gelo!)

DUCHESSA: Dell' arcano squarcia il manto—
Se un arcano in sen tu chiudi.

LUISA: Io. (In procinto di svelare il secreto.)

DUCHESSA: Favella.

WALTER: Si, per quanto.
Ami il padre!

LUISA: (Reprimendosi ad un tratto.) (Il padre!)—
(Gli sguardi di Walter e Wurm stanno immobili sopra Luisa.)
Oh crudi!—

WURM: Via, che tardi?

DUCHESSA: Ebben?—

LUISA: Lo stesso
Da Luisa udrete ognor.
Che alimento sol per esso
(Accennando Wurm.)
Fido, immenso, ardente amor.
Come celar le smanie
Del mio geloso amore?—

Or make my heart bound with ecstatic joy.
Do not speak falsely—but no—so fair, so kind a face
Could never mask a treacherous heart!

LOUISA: (Aside) Did ever human heart suffer such misery?

DUCHESS: (Taking the hand of Louisa and fixing her gaze sternly upon her) Do you love?

LOUISA: (Aside) Cruel fate!
(Aloud) I do!

DUCHESS: His name—his name.

LOUISA: Wurm! (Pointing to him. Wurm bows modestly.)
(Aside.) The wretch!

DUCHESS: But Rodolphe?—

LOUISA: He came among us—disguised—
I know not for what purpose!

DUCHESS: Has he never heard words of love from Louisa?

LOUISA: O moments of torture!

DUCHESS: Answer me!

LOUISA: No!—never!

DUCHESS: (Aside) Hope again revives in my heart!

LOUISA: She triumphs.
(She trembles with jealousy)

DUCHESS: It seems to me—yes—it is true!
Your countenance changes—say—what does it mean?
Are you deceiving me?—you have betrayed yourself!

LOUISA: O, Heaven!

WALTER: (Aside) She would not dare.

DUCHESS: Speak!

WURM: I freeze!

DUCHESS: Unravel this mystery!
If you have a secret in your heart, reveal it!

LOUISA: (On the point of betraying herself).

DUCHESS: Speak—speak!

WALTER: (Pointedly) Yes, speak!
For the love you bear your father—speak!

LOUISA: (Endeavoring to hide the feelings which were betraying her) My father!—
(The eyes of Walter and Wurm are fixed upon Louisa.) Cruel!—

WURM: Proceed—why do you hesitate?—

DUCHESS: I wait!

LOUISA: I can but repeat what I have said.
(Pointing to Wurm)
It is for him alone that I have long cherished
A faithful, devoted, ardent love!
(Aside)

Ahimè, l'infranto core
Più reggere non può!
Se qui rimango, esanime
A' piedi suoi cadrò!)

DUCHESSA: (Un sogno di letizia
Par quel ch' io veggo e sento!—
No, mai si gran contento
Quest' alma non provò!—
Frena, mio core, i palpiti,
O di piacer morrò.)

WALTER, WURM: (Notando la gioia, che si manifesta in volto alla Duch.) (Piato ha di vivo giubilo
Il sorridente viso!
Fortuna in quel sorriso
Propizia baienò!—
Ben io fermarla, stringerne
L'infido crin saprè.)
(La Duchessa si ritira, seguita di Walter: Wurm riconduce Luisa per l'uscia segreto.)

SCENA VII.

Giardino pensile del castello: porta nel fondo che mette agli appartamenti di Rodolfo. Rodolfo viene precipitoso da un appartamento; ha il foglio di Luisa tra le mani, lo segue un Contadino.

RODOLFO: Il foglio dunque?

CON.: Io tutto
Già vi narrai.

RODOLFO: Mi giova
Udirlo ancor.

CON.: Segreta e viva prece
A man giunte mi fece
Luisa, onde recarlo
A Wurm—

RODOLFO: E d'evitar la mia presenza—

CON.: Mi ripetè più volte.
Sospetto incerto di non so qual trama,
E speme di mercede
A voi m'han tratto.

RODOLFO: (Gettandogli una borsa.)
Esci (il Contadino si ritira.) Olà! (comparisce un servo.)
Wurm (il servo parte.) Oh! fede
Negar potessi agli occhi miei—Se cielo
E terra, se mortali
Ed angeli attestarmi
Volesser ch'ella non è rea—mentite—
Io risponder dovrei—tutti mentite—
Son cifre sue!—(mostrando il foglio.) Tanta perfidia!—un'alma
Sì nera! sì mendace!—
Ben la conobbe il padre!—Io cieco, audace
Osai!—Ma dunque i giuri,
Le speranze la gioja,
Le lagrime, l' affanno?—
Tutto menzogna tradimento, inganno!—
Quando le sene, al placido
Charor d'un ciel stellato,
Meco figgea nell' etere
Le sguardo innamorato,
E questa mano stringermi
Dalla sua man sentia—
Ah!—mi tradia!—
Ailor, ch'io muto, estatico
Da' labbri suoi pendea.
Ed ella in suono angelico
—Amo te sol—dicca,
Tal che sembrò l'Empireo
Aprirsi all' alma mia!—
Ah!—mi tradia!

How shall I conceal the anguish of my jealous heart,
I am no longer mistress of my feelings!
If I remain here I shall fall insensible at their feet.

DUCHESS: It is for me like some bright dream of happiness!
A joy—an ecstasy never felt before!
O cease, my heart, to throb so wildly,
For it is more than life can bear.

WALTER AND WURM: (Observing the joy that irradiates the face of the Duchess) The light of joy now sparkles in her eyes,
Dame Fortune smiles most kindly on our plans.—
Let us retain the fickle queen—nor lose her from our grasp.
(The Duchess retires, followed by Walter, Louisa and Wurm by the secret door.)

SCENE VII.

A hanging Garden in the chateau; a door at the back leading to the apartments of Rodolphe. Rodolphe enters from the chamber. He has the note of Louisa in his hand. A peasant follows him.

RODOLPHE: This note then—speak!

PEASANT: I have told you.

RODOLPHE: I would hear it again!

PEASANT: Louisa begged me, with clasped hands and imploring looks,
To carry this note to Wurm, quickly and in secret.

RODOLPHE: And to avoid me?

PEASANT: She repeated her wish several times,
But the suspicion of an intrigue and the hope of a recompense,
Caused me to bring it to you at once.

RODOLPHE: (Throwing him a purse) Go! (The peasant retires.)
Can I believe my eyes!
If Heaven, earth, and man combine to prove it,
I will still say—she is not guilty!
But—this is her writing!—can such perfidy exist?
(Pointing to her note.) A heart so black, so deceitful!
My father knew her best—and I, blind, audacious, I dared!—
But then her vows—the hopes—the joy—the tears!—
All an illusion, all—all! Betrayed! deceived!
When at twilight's lonely hour,
Beneath the calm and gentle light of the holy stars,
When stillness reigned supreme over all around,
She raised her eyes to mine, beaming with love, almost divine.
Her small hand trembled at my touch—
But at that moment she was false!
And even, when her lips were pressed to mine in mute ecstasy,
And with angelic voice she whispered low—"I love you alone."
It seemed that all of Heaven's joys were mine;
But even then, O breaking heart! O ruined hopes!
That voice—those lips were false—false—perjured!
The light has fled from Heaven, and night's darkness
Has sunk into my soul. All is blank and hopeless.

SCENA VIII.

Wurm, e Detto.

WURM: Di me chiedeste?

RODOLFO: Appressati.—
Leggi. (Gli porge il foglio: quando Wurm ha finito di leggere lo riprende.)
Ad entrambi è questa
Ora di morte.

WURM: (Oh!–)

RODOLFO: Scegliere
Tu dei.
(Presentandogli due pistole.)

WURM: Signor!—
(Cercando allontanarsi.)

RODOLFO: T'arresta—
(Ponendogli fra mani una delle armi.)
Meco ad un punto solo
Spento cadere al suolo
T'è forza—
(Inarcando la pistola.)

WURM: (Inferno, ajutami—)
(Fa qualche celere passo verso il fondo, e scarica la pistola in aria.)

SCENA IX.

Accorrono d'ogni parte Armigeri e Familiari, quindi Walter.

CORO: Che avvenne?—O ciel!

RODOLFO: Codardo!—
(Wurm, confendendosi fra isopravvenuti, sparisce.)
L'ali ha viltade!

CORO: Orribile
D'ira vi splende il guardo!—

WALTER: Rodolfo!—

RODOLFO: Padre!—

WALTER: Oh Dio!
Calmati—

RODOLFO: Ah! padre mio!—
(Cade a' suoi piedi.)

WALTER: Deh! sorgi—M'odi—
Abbomino
Il mio rigor crudele—
Abbia virtude un premio—

SCENE VIII.

Enter Wurm.

WURM: I await your pleasure.

RODOLPHE: Come nearer—read.
(He gives him the note. When Wurm has read it he takes it again.)
This hour is the hour of death for both of us.

WURM: Ah!—

RODOLPHE: Take your choice.
(He hands him two pistols.)

WURM: (Stepping back) My Lord!

RODOLPHE: (Taking one of the pistols in his hand) Stop there.
You shall fall dead at the same moment that I fall,
We will leave this earth together!

WURM: Powers of darkness come to my aid!
(He makes some steps backwards, and fires in the air.)

SCENE IX.

Enter men-at-arms running in all directions; then Walter.

CHORUS: What noise is this?

RODOLPHE: Coward!
(Wurm mingles with the crowd that has just entered, and disappears.)

CHORUS: His eyes dart forth rays of anger!

WALTER: Rodolphe!

RODOLPHE: My father!

WALTER: O Heaven! calm yourself.

RODOLPHE: O my father.
(Falls at his feet)

WALTER: Arise! arise, my son! listen to me.
I regret—I repent me of my cruel resolve,

Cedo: alla tua fedele
Porgi la man—

RODOLFO: Che ascolto!
Tu vuoi?—

WALTER: Gioisci!—

RODOLFO: Ah! stolto
Io diverro!—
(S'aggira disperato per la scena.)

CORO: Quai smanie!—

WALTER: Figlio!—Nè pago sei?

RODOLFO: Pago?—

WALTER: Sperai—

RODOLFO: Compiangimi!—
Tradito m' ha colei!

WALTER: Tradito!—

RODOLFO: A me t'affretta,
O morte!

WALTER: No—vendetta!

RODOLFO: Come?

WALTER: Altre nozze attestino
Il tuo disprezzo ad essa.

RODOLFO: Che intendi?

WALTER: All' ara pronuba
Conduci la Duchessa.

RODOLFO: Io?—si, lo va'—Lo deggio—
Che parlo?–Ahimè, vaneggio!—

WALTER: Rodolfo, non pentirti—

RODOLFO: Ove mi sia non so!—

WALTER: T'arrendi a me—tradirti padre tuo no può—

RODOLFO: L'ara o l'avello apprestami
Al fato io m'abbandono—
Non temo—non desidero—
Un disperato io sono!—
Or la mia brama volgere
Nemmeno al ciel potrei,
Chè inferno senza lei
Sarebbe il ciel per me!

WALTER: Quell' empio cor dimentica.
Quell' alma ingannatrice—
Che un dì sarai felice
Promette il padre a te.

CORO: Del genitor propizio
Al senno v' affidate—
Nell' avvenir sperate;
Eterno il duol non è.
(Walter seco tragge Rodolfo: tutti li seguono.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

Virtue should have some recompense.
I yield. Give your hand to your faithful love!

RODOLPHE: What do I hear?—you will—

WALTER: I will make you happy.

RODOLPHE: Ah! too late—too late! I shall lose my senses!
(Walks agitatedly across the stage)

CHORUS: What folly!—

WALTER: My son, are you not happy?—

RODOLPHE: Happy! happy!—

WALTER: Do you doubt your success?—

RODOLPHE: Pity me! She has deceived me.

WALTER: Deceived you?—

RODOLPHE: O death—come to my aid!—

WALTER: No—call rather on vengeance.

RODOLPHE: How?—what do you mean?—

WALTER: Another marriage!—That will prove your contempt for her desertion.

RODOLPHE: What are you saying?

WALTER: Conduct the Duchess to the altar.

RODOLPHE: Me?—yes—I should do so—I will!—
Ah me! what have I said? Alas!—I am mad!

WALTER: Retract not—falter not—where is your pride?

RODOLPHE: I don't know where I am!—

WALTER: Have confidence in me;
Your father will not betray you.

RODOLPHE: Prepare the altar—or the tomb.
I abandon myself to my fate—I utterly despair:
I have neither fear nor desire.

WALTER: Forget that false heart—that deceitful soul!
You shall be happy—your father promises.

CHORUS: Confide in your father's love.
There is no grief that cannot have an end.
(Walter leads Rodolphe off. All follow.)

END OF ACT II.

ATTO TERZO.

IL VELENO.

La casa di Miller: la finestra è aperta, ed a traverso di essa vedesi il Tempio internamente illuminato.

SCENA PRIMA.

Luisa scrive presso una tavola, su cui arde una lampada: havvi sulla tavola medesima un cesto con frutta, ed una lazza colma di latte: in un canto della stanza Laura ed altre Paesane, che mestamente contemplano Luisa.

LAURA, e CORO: (fra loro.) Come in un giorno solo,
Come ha potuto il duolo
Stampar su quella fronte
Così funeste impronte?
Sembra mietuto giglio
Da vomere crudel
Un angiol, che in esiglio
Quaggiù mandava il ciel!

LAURA: (Accostandosi a Luisa.)
O dolce amica, e ristorar non vuoi
Di qualche cibo le affralite membra?

LUISA: No—

CON.: Cedi—all' amistà cedi, Luisa—

LUISA: La ripugnanza mia (Sorgendo.)
Rispettate—lo imploro. (A questo labbro
Più non s'appresserà terreno cibo!
Gia col pensier delibo
Le celesti dolcezze!)—
(Lo sguardo di lei ricorre involontariamente a Tempio.)
Il tempio, amiche,
Perchè splend cosi?
(Le contadine confuse guardansi l'un l'altra.) Tacete?

CON.: Ignare?
Siam—

LAURA: La novella Signoria con pompa
Sacre inaugura il Conte.
(Luisa torna a scrivere.)
Ah! l'infelice ignori
(Sommessamente alla compagne.)
Qual rito nuzial s' appresta, e quale
Esser lo sposo debbe!
A sì crudele annunzio ella morrebbe!

CON., LAU.: Sembra mietuto giglio
Da vomere crudel.
Un angiol che in esiglio
Quaggiù mandava il ciel!

ACT III.

POISON.

The house of Miller. Through the open window is seen the village church lighted up.

SCENE I.

(Louisa discovered writing at a table, on which there is a lighted lamp. On the same table are a basket of fruit and a cup of milk. In a corner of the room stand Laura and other peasants, gazing sadly at Louisa.)

LAURA AND PEASANTS: Behold how but a single day,
Grief has left its sad imprint on her young brow!
She resembles some fair lily over which the sharp plough has passed,
Or an angel who, from exile, has been called again to Heaven!

LAURA: (Approaching Louisa)
Say, dearest friend,
Will you not, for our sakes, take some food
To restore your wasted strength?

LOUISA: No!—thanks—but, no!—

LAURA: Yield, O yield to entreaty of friendship, Louisa.

LOUISA: Respect my grief, I pray you; (Rises)
These lips shall never more taste earthly aliment.
Already through hope I seem to taste celestial joys.
(Her eyes turn involuntarily towards the church.)
Dear friends, I pray you tell me,
Why the church is lighted in this manner?
(The peasants whisper and look at each other.)
You are silent.

CHORUS: We do not know!

LAURA: The title of the new Count is inaugurated this night
With solemn pomp.
(Louisa turns again to the table and recommences writing.)
Ah, poor unfortunate! she does not know that
It is a nuptial fête—nor who the bride.
She would die at the sad news.

CHORUS: She resembles some fair lily, over which the plough has passed,
Or an Angel who, from exile, has been called again to Heaven.

SCENA II.	SCENE II.
Miller e Dette.	Enter Miller.
MILLER: —Luisa!—figlia mia! (Luisa gettasi nelle sue braccia.)	MILLER: Louisa! my child! (Louisa throws herself into his arms.)
LUISA: Quel casto amplesso Deh! non turbiam—sia testimon soltanto Tra figlia e padre Iddio. (Si ritira con le compagne.)	LAURA: Ah! how tender this meeting! Let us leave them, Heaven alone should be the witness Of such joy and such affliction. (Villagers retire.)
MILLER: —Pallida—mesta sei—	MILLER: My child, you are pale and sad!
LUISA: No, padre mio, Tranquilla io son.	LOUISA: No, dear father—I am calm.
MILLER: Del genitore, oh! quanto Caro lo scampo a te costava!—Io tutta Da Wurm appresi.	MILLER: O, how dear has my safety cost you! I have heard all from Wurm!
LUISA: Tutto!	LOUISA: All?
MILLER: All' amor tuo, Per me rinunziasti.	MILLER: You have renounced your love for me?
LUISA: È ver. (Ma in terra!) (Va lentamente verso la tavola.)	LOUISA: It is true, (Aside) but only on this earth! (She moves slowly towards the table.)
MILLER: (Quella calma è funesta!—Il cor mi serra Non so qual rio presagio!—) (Luisa, che intanto ha piegato il foglio, ritorna presso Miller.) Che foglio è questo?	MILLER: This calmness is terrible! Some melancholy foreboding oppresses my heart. (Louisa, who has been folding a paper, returns towards Miller.) What is this letter?
LUISA: Al suo destin prometti, Se m' ami, o padre, che recato ei fia.	LOUISA: O! promise me, my father, if you love me, That this letter shall reach its destination.
MILLER: (Guarda fissamente Luisa, poi schiude il foglio, e legge.) Orribil tradimento Ne desgiunse o Rodolfo—un giuramento Più dir mi loglie—Havvi dimora, in cui Nè inganno può nè giuro Aver possanzo alcuna—ivi t' aspetto— Come di mezzanotte udrai la squilla Vieni— (Gli cade il foglio di mano.) Sotto al mio piede il suol vacilla!— (Resta un momento trambasciato e silenzioso, indivolgesi a Luisa con voce tremula.) Quella dimora—Mancar mi sento! Quella dimora saria!—	MILLER: (Gazing fixedly at Louisa, then opening the letter, he reads.) "O Rodolphe! do not believe this horrible deception. An oath prevents me from saying more. There is a home where neither intrigues nor oaths have power. There I await you. When you shall hear the clock strike the hour of midnight, come!" (The paper falls from his hands.) The earth rocks beneath my feet! (He pauses for a moment, then turning to Louisa, asks in a trembling voice) What home?—my senses fail me! Where is this home?
LUISA: La tomba. (Miller inorridisce.) Perchè t'invade sà gran spavento?	LOUISA: The tomb! Why so frightened, my father?
MILLER: Ah!—sul mio capo un fulmin piomba!	MILLER: Ah! the thunderbolt falls on my head?
LUISA: La tomba è un letto sparso di fiori, In cui del giusto la spoglia dorme, Sol pei colpevoli tremanti cori Veste la morte orride forme: Ma per due candide alme fedeli La sua presenza non ha terror— È dessa un angelo che schiude i cieli, Ove in eterno sorride amor!	LOUISA: The tomb is a bed strewn with flowers, On which sweetly sleep those wronged and deceived! It is only for those whose hearts are lost in crime, That the tomb wears an aspect dark and terrible! But for two tender and loving hearts Its contemplation is without horror. It is as an angel opening to our view the heavens, Which smile on our eternal love and peace!
MILLER: Figlia?—Compreso d' orrore in sono! Figlia—e potresti—contro—te stessa? Pel suicida non viè perdono!	MILLER: My child, I am stupefied with terror! My daughter—you cannot raise your hand against yourself! There is no pardon for the suicide!
LUISA: E colpa amore?	LOUISA: The fault is love!—life without love were valueless!
MILLER: Cessa—Deh! cessa— (Si allontana raccapricciato, e cade sopra una sedia: quindi prorompe in lagrime, sorge e stretta la figlia per mano le dicecon parole volte dal singhiezzo.) Di rughe il volto—mira—ho solcato— Il erin m' imbianca l' eta più greve L'amor che un padre ha seminato Ne' suoi tardi anni raccoglier deve— Ed apprestarmi crudel tu puoi Messe di pianto e di dolor?— Ah! nella tomba che schiuder vuoi Fia primo a scendere il genitor!	MILLER: Cease! Cease! (He turns sorrowfully away and throws himself upon a chair. The old man, weeping bitterly, rises, and taking his daughter by the hand, speaks with a voice choked by sobs.) Look at me—my face is full of wrinkles—age has blanched my hair! The love that a father bestows upon his child, Should be returned to him, in his old and helpless age! But you, O cruel one, prepare for me A harvest of tears and griefs. Ungrateful child! Your father will be the first to descend to that tomb You have prepared for him!
LUISA: Ah! no—ti calma, o padre mio— Quanto colpevole, ahimè, son io!— Non pianger—m' odi—	LOUISA: Ah! no—calm yourself my father! Listen to me!— How culpable I have been, alas!—weep no more—
MILLER: Luisa—	MILLER: Louisa!—
LUISA: Il foglio Lacero—annullo— (Facendolo in pezzi.)	LOUISA: Thus I destroy the letter— (She tears it in pieces.)
MILLER: Vuoi dunque?—	MILLER: You will then—
LUISA: Io voglio Per te, buon padre, restare in vita—	LOUISA: I will live—I will save this life for you, my father!—
MILLER: Fia ver?—	MILLER: Is it true—do I hear aright!—
LUISA: La figlia, vedi, pentita Al piè ti cade—	LOUISA: See your repentant child—I kneel at your feet.
MILLER: No, figlia mia— Sorgi—deh! sorgi—Qui, sul mio cor— (La rialza, e se la stringe al seno con tutta l'effusione della tenerezza paterna.)	MILLER: No my child—rise! rise!—here, here on my heart! (He raises her, and clasps her to his bosom with paternal affection.)
a 2: In questo amplesso l'anima obblia Quanti martiri provò finor!—	MILLER AND LOUISA: In this emotion our souls forget their griefs!—
LUISA: Però fuggiamo—quì rio periglio Mi cingerebbe—	LOUISA: Let us fly—there is danger here for me!—
MILLER: Sano consiglio!—	MILLER: Your resolve is good, my child!—
LUISA: I lumi al sonno chiudi brev' ora— Ancor lontano è troppo il dì. Come s'appressi la nuova aurora Noi partiremo.	LOUISA: Dear father, take some rest. It will be long before the day breaks. When the morning dawns we will away!—

MILLER: Sì, figlia, sì.
(Avviasi alla sua stanza, poscia ritorna, ed abbraccia ancora una volta la figlia.)

a 2: Andrem, raminghi e poveri,
Ove il destin ci porta—
Un pan chiedendo agli nomini
Andrem di porta in porta—
Forse talor le ciglia
Noi bagnerem di pianto,
Ma sempre al padre accanto
La figlia sua starà!—
Quel padre e quella figlia
Iddio benedirà!
(Miller entra nelle sue stanze.)

LUISA: (S'avvia lentamente all' opposto lato, quando la sua attenzione è richiamata dai sarri accordi che partono, dal Tempio.)
Ah! l'ultima preghiera
In questo caro suol dove felice
Trassi la vita!—e dove
—T'amo—ei mi disse!—Altrove
Domani pregherò!
(Inginocchiasi. Intanto ch' ella è tutta immersa in tacita preghiera, un uomo avvolto in lungo mantello si è fermato sulla porta; un famigliare lo segue.)

SCENA III.

RODOLFO: (Sommessamente.)
Riedi al castello,
E sappia il padre mio che presto il rito,
Io qui l' attendo.
(Il servo dileguasi.)
(Prega!
Ben di pregare è tempo.)
(Si trae dal seno un' ampolla, e ne versa il liquore nella tazza. Luisa sorge, e vistosi Rodolfo dinanzi trasalisce.)
Hai tu vergato questo foglio?
(Spiegandole sott' occhio la lettera scritta a Wurm: Luisa non puo rispondere.)
Ebbene?
L'hai—tu—vergato?
(Nel ripetere la domanda egli trema in tutta la persona, qual chi aspetta la sentenza di vita o di morte.)

LUISA: (Con lo sforzo d'un morente che profferisce l' ultima parola.) Sì!

RODOLFO: (Cadendo su d'un seggio.) M'arde le vene—
Le fauci—orrido foco—Una bevanda—
(Accenna verso la coppa: Luisa la porge ad esso.)
Amaro è questo nappo.
(Dopo aver bevuto.)

LUISA: Amaro?

MILLER: Yes, my child, yes.
(He turns toward his chamber, but returns again and embraces his daughter.)

BOTH: We will go, pure and fugitive, wherever destiny may lead!
We will go and beg our way from door to door.
Although our eyes may again be bathed in tears,
The father and child will separate no more.
And you, O Lord, will bless and aid them!
(Miller goes to his chamber. Louisa goes to the other side, when her attention is drawn to the sounds of sacred music which come from the church.)

LOUISA: Ah! It is my last prayer on this cherished spot.
Here, where my life has passed so peacefully away;
Where one loved voice has breathed the words—"I love!"
Tomorrow, far away, I shall pray amidst strangers.
(She kneels. While she is absorbed in a silent prayer, a man enveloped in a cloak pauses at the door. He is followed by a servant.)

SCENE III.

RODOLPHE: (Speaking softly)
Return to the chateau.
Say to my father all is ready for the ceremony.
I await him here.
(The servant retires.)
She prays. It is the time to pray.
(He takes a phial from his pocket, and pours some of the liquid into the cup on the table. Louisa rises; seeing Rodolphe, she trembles)
Did you write these words?
(He places the letter Louisa wrote to Wurm before her eyes. Louisa is unable to reply.)
Speak! did you write it!

LOUISA: (Gasping, and in agony, feebly utters—) Yes!

RODOLPHE: (Falling on a chair)
My blood seems on fire!
My throat is parched. That cup—
(Louisa gives him the cup.)
This drink is bitter!

LOUISA: Bitter?

RODOLFO: Bevi.
(Luisa beve: esso impallidisce, e volge altrove lo sguardo.)
(Tutto è compinto!)

LUISA: No—
(Silenzio terribile.)

RODOLFO: Fuggir tu devi—
Altr' uomo attende per seguirti: attende
Per seguirmi agli altari
Altra donna—

LUISA: Che parli?—Ah dunque!

RODOLFO: Invano
Attendon essi!
(Percorre a gran passi la stanza, si strappa la sciarpa e la spada, e la getta lungi da se.)
Addio
Spada su cui difender l'innocente,
E l'oppresso giurai!

LUISA: O giusto ciel! Che hai?

RODOLFO: Mi—si ebiude—il—respir!

LUISA: Deh! qualche stilla
Ne suggi ancor—ti lia
Ristoro—(Volendo nuovamente offrir gli la tazza.)

RODOLFO: Ah! quel che m' offre
Par che sappia l'infame!

LUISA: Rodolfo, e puoi scagliar sì rea parola
Contro la tua Luisa?

RODOLFO: Oh! lungi, lungi
Da me quel volto lusinghier—quegli occhi
In cui spiende degli astri
Raggio più vivo e terso—
Fattor dell' universo.
Perchè vestir d'angeliche sembianze
Un' anima d' inferno?

LUISA: E tacer deggio?
Deggio?

RODOLFO: T' arretra—in questi
Angosciosi momenti
Pietade almen d' un infelice, ah! senti!
(Prorompendo in lagrime.)

LUISA: Piangi, piangi—il tuo dolore
Più dell' ira è giusto, ahi quanto!
Oh! discenda sul tuo core
Come balsama quel pianto—
Se concesso al prego mio
E d' alzarsi fino a Dio,
Otterò che men funesto
De' tuoi mali sia l' orror.

RODOLFO: Allo strazio ch' io sopporto
Dio mi lascia in abbandono—
No, di calma, di conforto
Queste lagrime non sono—
Son le stille, il gel che piomba
Dalla volta d' una tomba!
Goccie son di vivo sangue
Che morendo sparge il cor.
(L' orinolo del castello batte te ore. Rodolfo stringe Luisa per RODOLPHE: Taste!

(Louisa drinks. Rodolphe turns pale and looks away.)
All is accomplished.
(Aside)

LOUISA: No.
(A long and terrible silence)

RODOLPHE: You should fly! Another awaits you—
Another bride also awaits me at the altar!

LOUISA: Ah! what say you? You!

RODOLPHE: They wait in vain.
(Paces the chamber with hasty strides, and throws his sword and scarf away from him)
Farewell sword, with which I have sworn
To defend the innocent and the oppressed.

LOUISA: Great Heaven! Rodolphe! what did you do?

RODOLPHE: My breath fails me!

LOUISA: (Offering him again the cup.) A few drops still remain.
Drink—it will recover you.

RODOLPHE: Ah! It would seem the perjured one knows what she offers!

LOUISA: Rodolphe, can you speak such cruel words to me?

RODOLPHE: O lovely vision—depart from me. Those eyes
In which burns a light more clear and pure than the stars!
How can a form so lovely cover a demon's heart!

LOUISA: And must I still be silent?

RODOLPHE: Retire. In this sorrowful moment,
At least, have pity on an unfortunate being!

LOUISA: Weep—weep—your grief is more than just the anger!
O may these tears descend as a balm upon your heart.
Could my prayers reach to Heaven,
They would loosen the bandage which now covers your eyes!

RODOLPHE: Heaven has abandoned me to my grief—I bear it unsupported!
These are not the tears of calm and resolution—
They are the dews of death—as the blood
Which gushes out from a dying heart!
(The clock of the Chateau strikes the hour. Rodolphe takes Louisa mano.)

Donna, per noi terribile
Ora squillò!—suprema!

LUISA: Rodolfo!

RODOLFO: Nel mendacio
Che non ti colga, oh trema:
—Amasti Wurm?

LUISA: Oh! calmati—

RODOLFO: Guai, se mentisci!—
guai!—
Prima che questa lampada
Si spenga, tu starai
Dinanzi a Dio!

LUISA: Che! spiegati!
Parla—

RODOLFO: Con me bevesti
La morte.
(Additando la coppa: Luisa accenna di cadere, egli la pone sovra un seggio.)
Al ciel rivolgiti
Luisa—

LUISA: (Depo qualche momento sorge come animata da un pensiero.) Tu dicesti
La morte? Ah! d' ogni vincolo
Sciolta per lei son io!
Il ver disvelo—apprendilo—
Moro innocente!

RODOLFO: (Con ispavento.) Oh Dio!

LUISA: Avean mio padre i barbar
Avvinto fra ritorte—
Ed io—

RODOLFO: Finisci.

LUISA: Io, misera—
Onde sottrarlo a morte—
Come quel mostro—Intendimi—
Wurm imponeva a me—
Il foglio scrissi.

RODOLFO: Oh fulmine!
Ed io t' uccisi!

LUISA: Ahimè!

RODOLFO: (Cacciandosi le mani fra' capelli, e col grido terribile della disperazione.) Maledetto il dì ch' io nacqui—
Il mio sangue—il padre mio—
Fui creato, avverso Iddio,
Nel tremendo tuo furor!

LUISA: Per l'istante in cuì ti piacqui—
Per la morteche s' appressa,
D' oltraggiar l'Eterno, ah! cessa—
Mi risparmia un tanto orror—

SCENA IV.

Miller, e Detti.

by the hand.)
Louisa! this is a terrible hour—it is the last hour
That intervenes between us and eternity!

LOUISA: Rodolphe!

RODOLPHE: Be sure that this last hour does not surprise you
In a falsehood! Have you loved Wurm?

LOUISA: O calm yourself!

RODOLPHE: Eternal misery to you
If you speak falsely! For before that lamp goes out
You will be in the presence of your Maker!

LOUISA: What? speak again!

RODOLPHE: You have drunk your death draught—
With me, Louisa!
(He shows her the cup—Louisa is nearly fainting with emotion—he places her in a chair.)
Turn your thoughts toward Heaven, Louisa!

LOUISA: (Rising, animated by a sudden thought) You have said that death is near—ah!
That will loose the chain from my lips—
And I will reveal to you the truth.
Rodolphe! Rodolphe! I die innocent!

RODOLPHE: (Terrified) Great Heaven!

LOUISA: The barbarous men put my father into prison
And to save his life—

RODOLPHE: Go on! I am prepared!

LOUISA: I, miserable, to save him from death—
Acted as this monster—understand me—
As Wurm ordered me to act—I wrote the note as he dictated!

RODOLPHE: O, desolation!—and I have murdered you!

LOUISA: Alas!

RODOLPHE: (Letting his head fall into his hands, with a terrible cry of despair) Cursed be the day on which I was born!
Cursed be my blood and that of my father!
In a moment of your anger, Lord, was I created!

LOUISA: Hold, Rodolphe! hold!
By the happy hours we have spent together;
By the death which is rapidly approaching?
Cease to outrage the Eternal!
Spare me at least this horror.

SCENE IV.

Enter Miller.

MILLER: Quai grida intesi!—Chi veggo, oh cielo!

RODOLFO: Chi? L'assassino, misero, vedi
Del sangue tuo!

MILLER: Che disse?—Io gelo!—

LUISA: Padre!—

MILLER: Luisa!—

RODOLFO: Ma voglio a' piedi
Colui svenarti—
(Raccogliendo la spada.)

LUISA: Rodolfo—arresta—
Già mi serpeggia—la morte—in sen—
(Rodolfo getta la spada sulla tavola, e corre a Luisa.)

MILLER: La morte! Ah!—dite—

RODOLFO: Scampo non resta—
Un velen bevve!

MILLER: Figlia! Un velen!—
(Cólto da quell' ambascia che non ha parola, si slancia verso la figlia, che annoda le braccia al collo paterno.)

LUISA: Padre—ricevi l' estremo—addio—
Mi benedici—o padre mio—
La man, Rodolfo—sento mancarmi—
Più non ti scerno—mi cinge un vel.
Ah! vieni meco! Ah! non lasciarmi—
Insieme accogliere—ne deve—il ciel—

RODOLFO: Ah! tu perdona il fallo mio,
E perdonato sarà da Dio—
Ambo congiunge un sol destino—
Me pure investe di morte il gel—
Sì, teco io vengo, spirto divino—
Insieme accogliere ne deve il ciel.

MILLER: O figlia, o vita del cor paterno,
Ci separiamo dunque in eterno?—
Di mia vecchiezza promesso incanto,
Sogno tu fosti, sogno crudel!
Non è più mio quest' angiol santo—
Me lo rapisce invido il ciel!
(Luisa muore.)

SCENE V.

Tutti gli altri Personaggi, e Detti.

VOCI CONFUSE: Profondi gemiti fra queste porte!—
(Di dentro.)
Che avvenne?

WALTER: (Che si è inoltrato per il primo.) Spenta!—

MILLER: What cry was that I heard—whom do I see?

RODOLPHE: Who? The assassin of your child?

MILLER: What are you saying? I freeze with horror.

LOUISA: My father!

MILLER: Louisa!

RODOLPHE: But I will expiate the crime—
I will die this moment at your feet.
(Draws his sword)

LOUISA: Rodolphe, stop—stop your hand—
Already I feel the calm of death stealing over me.
(Rodolphe throws his sword on the table, and rushes to Louisa.)

MILLER: Death!—explain—what do you mean?

RODOLPHE: There is no hope—she has drank poison.

MILLER: My child—poison!
(He rests for a moment immovable, without speaking, then turns to his daughter. Louisa throws her arms around her father's neck.)

LOUISA: My father! receive my last adieu!
Your blessing, Father—your hand, Rodolphe!
I feel myself dying—I can scarcely see you.
A mist is before my eyes—Ah! come to me!
Do not leave me! Heaven should receive us both together!

MILLER: O my child! life of my heart!
Must we part for ever!
Hope of my age, you have been to me as a dream
This angel, so pure, was sent to bless me—
But Heaven, jealous of my happiness, takes her again!

SCENE V.

Enter all the characters.

CONFUSED VOICES: What do these sounds of woe mean—
What horrors do they portend?

WALTER: (Who has entered in advance) Death!

DONNE: Dio di pietà!—
(Si fanno intorno al cadavere di Luisa, presso il quale è rimasto Miller in ginocchio, immoto e pallido più del cadavere istesso.)

RODOLFO: (Scorto Wurm, ch' è rimasto sulla soglia, afferra velocemente la spada, e lo trafigge.)
A te sia pena, empio, la morte—
(A Walter.) La pena tua—mira—
(Cade morto accanto a Luisa.)

WOMEN: Merciful Heaven!
(They surround the body of Louisa, by which Miller is kneeling.)

RODOLPHE: (Perceiving Wurm, who is standing in the doorway, seizes his sword, rushes to him and kills him.) Let death be your punishment, monster!
(To Walter) And yours—look!
(Falls dead at the feet of Walter)

WALTER: Figlio!
TUTTI: Ah!—

FINE.

WALTER: (In agony) My son!
ALL: Ah! horror!

THE END.

Rigoletto (1851)

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE

Rigoletto was first performed at the Teatro La Fenice in Venice on March 11, 1851. This three-act opera is set to a libretto by Francesco Maria Piave (based on Victor Hugo's verse drama Le Roi s'amuse). No woman at the court of Mantua is safe from the libidinous duke. No husband is safe from the remarks of the duke's jester, the hunchbacked Rigoletto. Ceprano, husband of the duke's most recent paramour, is Rigoletto's current target. Count Monterone, who has been sentenced to death for complaining about the duke's ravishment of his daughter, curses Rigoletto. Marullo decides to play a joke on Rigoletto by kidnapping the young woman Rigoletto has locked up in his house, whom everyone thinks must be Rigoletto's mistress. She is, in fact, Rigoletto's daughter Gilda. The duke has already spotted her. Disguised as a student, he sneaks into the house and swears his love for her. Meanwhile, Sparafucile, a professional murderer, offers his services to Rigoletto. The courtiers kidnap Gilda, and Rigoletto, who thinks they are breaking into Ceprano's palace instead, assists them. Too late, he realizes he's been duped. The duke is thrilled to discover that Gilda is in his palace. The court mocks Rigoletto, who keeps his grief to himself and swears vengeance on the duke. Gilda, now a ruined woman, tries to stop him.

At a shady inn, Sparafucile and his sister, Maddalena, are discussing payment for her next victim. Gilda and Rigoletto watch as the duke arrives and makes his move on Maddalena. Gilda now agrees that he fully deserves his fate. She agrees to go to Verona, traveling as a young boy, and wait there for the duke to join her, thus leaving Mantua for good. Maddalena doesn't want to kill the duke. She decides to kill the next visitor instead. Gilda, in an attempt to save her lover, walks into the trap. Sparafucile mortally wounds her, shoving her body into a sack, which he gives to Rigoletto. Rigoletto hears the duke singing his song of love. Opening the sack, he discovers that the actual victim is not the duke, but his beloved daughter. He collapses over her lifeless body, fulfilling Monterone's curse.

■ ATTO I

SCENA I

Sala magnifica nel Palazzo Ducale. Il Duca e Borsa che vengono da una porta del fondo.

DUCA: Della mia bella incognita borghese Toccare il fin del' avventura to voglio.

BORSA: Di quelli giovin che vedete al tempio?

DUCA: Da tre lune ogni festa.

BORSA: La sua dimora?

DUCA: In un remoto calle;
Misterioso un uom v' entra ogni notte.

BORSA: E sa colei chi sia
L' amante suo?

DUCA: Lo ighora.
(Un gruppo di Dame e Cavalieri attraversan la sala.

BORSA: Quante beltà!—Mirate.

DUCA: Le vince tutte di Cepran la sposa.

■ ACT I

SCENE I

A Ball-room in the Ducal Palace. Ladies and Gentlemen, Pages and Servants, cross the scene. Music is heard at a distance, and now and then bursts of laughter. Enter the Duke and Borsa.

DUKE: I am quite resolved to follow to the end
My new adventure with this youthful lady.

BORSA: You mean the one you meet while going to church?

DUKE: Yes, in a lonely street, and every day she receives a visit from a dubious man.

BORSA: But does she know him?

DUKE: Yes, every Sunday for the last three months.

BORSA: Know you where she resides?

DUKE: No, I think not.
(A group of Ladies and Gentlemen cross the scene.)

BORSA: Behold those charming ladies.

DUKE: Yes, but Ceprano's wife outshines them all.

BORSA: Non v' oda il Conte, o Duca—
(Piano.)

DUCA: A me che importa?

BORSA: Dirlo ad altra ei potria—

DUCA: Nè sventura per me certo saria.
Questa o quella per me pari sono
A quant' altre d' intorno mi vedo,
Del mio core l'impero non cedo
Meglio ad una che ad altra beltà.
La costoro avvenza è qual dono
Di che il fato ne infiora la vita;
S' oggi quelta mi torna gradita,
Forse un' altra doman lo sarà,
La costanza tiranna del core
Detestiamo qual morbo crudele,
Sol chi vuole si serbi fedele;
Non v' ha amor, se non v' è libertà.
De' mariti il geloso furore,
Degli amanti le smanie derido,
Anco d' Argo i cent' oechi disfido
Se mi punge una qualche beltà.

SCENA II

Detti, il Conte di Ceprano, che segue da lungi la sua sposa seguita da altro Cavaliere. Dame e Signora entrano da varie parti.

DUCA: (Alla Signora di Cep., movendo ad incontrarla con molta galanteria.) Partite? Crudele!

CEP: Seguire le sposo
M' è forza a Ceprano.

BORSA: Ah! but mind her husband, Duke.

DUKE: What matters?

BORSA: It might be spread about.

DUKE: What then—no great misfortune.
Amongst the beauties here around,
Over me none have control;
None can say, "I am preferred;"
Equal love I feel for all.
Yes, all women are to me
Like the flowers of the field.
Now to this, I am inclined,
Now to that by chance I yield.
As one flies from a great peril,
So from constancy I fly;
Those who will, may faithful be,
In freedom only does love lie.
I despise a jealous husband,
And I laugh at lover's sighs—
If a beauty strikes my fancy,
I defy one hundred eyes.

SCENE II

Enter Count Ceprano, watching at a distance the Countess, who is followed by a Gentleman. Ladies and Lords cross the scene.

DUKE: (To the Countess, with great politeness.) You go already, cruel one?

COUN: I must obey my husband, I am obliged to leave.

DUCA: Ma dee luminoso In Corte tal astro qual sole brillar. Per voi vuì ciascuno dovrà palpitar. Per voi già possente la fiamma d' amore Inebria, conquide, distrugge il mio core. (Con enfasi, baciandole la mano.)	DUKE: But you must shine at Court, As Venus amongst the stars— Here all must sigh for you. Already, behold here A victim of your charms.
CEP: Calmatevi—	COUN: Ah! silence—
DUCA: No. (Le da il braccio ed esce con lei.)	DUKE: No. (The Duke kisses her hand.)

SCENA III	SCENE III
Detti e Rigoletto che s' incontra nel Signor di Ceprano; poi Cortigiani.	Enter Rigoletto, who meets Count Ceprano and Courtiers.
RIG: In testa che avete, Signor di Ceprano? (Ceprano fa un gesto d' impazienza e segue il Duca.)	RIG: What troubles you, dear Count? You seem in deepest thought. (The Count makes a sign of impatience, and follows the Duke.)
RIG: (Ai Cortigiana.) Ei sbuffa, vedete	RIG: (To the Courtiers.) The Count is furious! See.
CORO: Che festa!	CHO: A fine ball!
RIG: Oh sì—	RIG: Indeed.
BORSA: Il duca quì pur si diverte	BORSA: And even the Duke enjoys the feast.
RIG: Così non è sempre? Che nuove scorpete. Il giuoco ed il vino, le feste, la danza Battaglie, conviti, ben tutto gli sta. Or della Contessa l' assedio egl avanza, E intanto il marito fremendo ne va (Esce)	RIG: Is it not always so? What news is this? Wine and feasting—dancing and games— Battles and banquets—for him all's the same. Now against the Countess he tries to lay the siege, And cares not for the jealousy of her liege. (Exit.)

SCENA IV	SCENE IV
Detti e Marullo premuroso	Enter Marullo, with great anxiety.
MAR: Gran nuova! gran nuova!	MAR: Great news! fine news!
DUCA: Che avvenne i pariate	CHO: Quick, what has happened, say?
MAR: Stupir ne dovrete—	MAR: You will all be surprised.
CORO: Narrate narrate	CHO: Speak on, speak on.
MAR: Ah! ah! Rigoletto—	MAR: Ah, ah! Rigoletto—
CORO: Ebben?	CHO: Well
MAR: Caso enorme!	MAR: Strange case.
CORO: Perduto ha la gobba? non è più difforme?	CHO: What, has he lost his hump? Is he now straight?
MAR: Più strana è la cosa! il pazzo possiede—	MAR: More strange still, the foolish man possesses—
CORO: Infine?	CHO: What? say—
MAR: Un amante—	MAR: A lover.
CORO: Amante! Chi il crede?	CHO: A lover! who could ever have thought of this?
MAR: Il gobbo in Cupido or s' è trasformato!	MAR: The hump-back is transformed into a Cupid.
CORO: Quel mostro Cupido! Cupido beato!	CHO: Oh, what a monstrous Cupid! charming Cupid!

SCENA V	SCENE V
Detti ed il Duca seguita da Rigoletto, indi Ceprano.	Enter the Duke, followed by Rigoletto, afterwards Ceprano.
DUCA: Ah, quanto Ceprano, importuno niun v' è! (A Rig.) La cara sua posà un angiol per me.	DUKE: No man can be more vexing than Ceprano. His wife is a sweet angel. (To Rig.)
RIG: Rapitela.	RIG: Steal her away.
DUCA: E detto! ma il farlo?	DUKE: 'Tis easier said than done.
RIG: Stassera—	RIG: This evening.
DUCA: Nè pensi tu al Conte?	DUKE: You think not of the Count.
RIG: Non c' è la prigione?	RIG: Have you no prisons?
DUCA: Ah, no.	DUKE: Ah! no.
RIG: Ebben—s' esilia.	RIG: Well, banish him.
DUCA: Nemmeno, buffone.	DUKE: No, no, buffoon.
RIG: Adunque la testa— (Indicando di farla togliare.)	RIG: His head, then. (Making signs of having it cut off.)
CEP: (Oh l' anima nera!) (Da se.)	CEP: (Villain!) (Aside.)
DUCA: Che di' questa testa?— (Battendo colla mano una spalla al Conte.)	DUKE: What do you mean? this head?— (Tapping the Count on the shoulder.
RIG: Che far di tal testa?—A cosa ella vale?	RIG: Yes, what is it good for? What can he do with it?
CEP: Marrano? (Infuriato battendo la spada.)	CEP: Miscreant! (Unsheathing his sword.)
DUCA: Fermate— (A Cep.)	DUKE: Stop—stop. (To the count.)
RIG: Da rider mi fa.	RIG: He makes me laugh.
CORO: In furia è montato! (Tra loro.)	CHO: He is frantic! (Among themselves.)
DUCA: Buffone, vien quà. (A Rig.) A sempre tu spingi lo scherno all' estremo. Quell' ira che sfidi colpir ti potrà.	DUKE: Now, buffoon, come here. (To Rig.) You carry your jokes too far, His sword might reach your heart.
RIG: Che coglier mi puote? Di lor non temo; Del duca un protetto nessun toccherà.	RIG: I fear him not. No one will dare to teach The favorite of the Duke.
CEP: Vendetta dal pazzo— (Ai Cortigiani, a parte.)	CEP: He must be punished. (Aside to the Courtiers.)
CORO: Contr' esso un rancore Pei trisi suoi modi, di noi chi non ha?	CHO: And who has not some injuries To avenge on him.
CEP: Vendetta!	CEP: Revenge, revenge!
CORO: Ma come?	CHO: But how?
CEP: Domani, chi ha core Sia in armi da me.	CEP: If you fear not, tomorrow Come with your swords to me.
TUTTI: Sì.	ALL: We will.
CEP: A notte.	CEP: At night.
TUTTI: Sarà. (La folla de' danzatori invade la sala.) Tutto è gioia, tutto è festa, Tutto invitaci a goder! Oh, guardate, non par questa Or la reggia del piacer!	ALL: Decreed. (A crowd of dancers invade the scene.) To dance, to feast, to pleasure, Here everything invite, Look around, does this not seem The palace of delight.

SCENA VI	SCENE VI
Detti ed il Conte di Monterone.	Enter Count Monterone.

MON: Ch' io gli parli. (Dall' interno.)

DUCA: No.

MON: Il voglio.
(Entrando.)

TUTTI: Monterone!

MON: (fissando il Duca con nobile orgoglio.) Si, Monteron—la voce mia qual tuono
Vi scuoterà dovunque—

RIG: (al Duca, contraffacendo la voce di Mon.) Ch' io gli parli.
(Si avanza con ridicola gravita.)
Voi congiuraste contro noi, signore,
E noi, clementi in vero, perdonammo—
Qual vi piglia or delirio—atutt el'ore
Di vostra figlia reclamar l' onere?

MON: (guardando Rig. con ira sprezzante.)
Novello insulto!—Ah sì, a turbare
(al Duca.)
Sarò vostr' orgie—verrò a gridare,
Fino a che vegga restarsi insulto
Di mia famiglia l' atroce insulto;
E se al carnefice pur mi darete
Spettro terribile mi rivedrete,
Portante il mano il teschio mio,
Vendetta chiedere al mondo e Dio.

DUCA: Non più, arrestatelo.

RIG: E matto!

CORO: Quai detti!

MON: Oh siate entrambi voi maledetti.
(Al Duca e Rig.)
Slanciare il cane al leon morente
E' vile, o duca—e tu serpente,
(a Rig.)
Tu che d' un padre ridi al dolore,
Sii maledetto!

RIG: Che sento? orrore!
(Da se colpito.)

TUTTI: (meno Rig.) Oh tu che la festa andace hai turbato,
Da un genio d' inferno qui fosti guidato;
E' vano ogni detto, quà t' allontana—
Va, trema, o vegliardo, dell' ira sovrana—
Tu l' hai provocata, plù speme non v' è.
Un' ora fatale questa per te.
(Mon. parte fra due alabardieri; tutti gli altra seguono il Duca in altra, stanza.)

ATTO II

SCENA VII

L' estremita piu deserta d' una via cieca, Casa di Rigoletto e terazzo. Rigoletto chiuso nel suo mantello. Sparafucile lo segue portando sotto il mantello una lunga spada.

MON: (from without) I must see him.

DUKE: No, no.

MON: I will. (Entering.)

ALL: Monterone!

MON: (looking at the Duke, with pride.) Yes, Monterone.—My voice
For ever I will raise against your crimes.

RIG: (to the Duke, counterfeiting Mon.'s voice.) I must see him.
You have conspired against our name, my lord.
And we have granted pardon—
What madness now is yours? In this glad hour
To come and claim the honor of your daughter!

MON: (looking at Rig. with contempt.) A new insult! but your nefarious orgies
I will disturb. Here I will raise my voice
Until the honor of an injured family
Shall be restored.
And even if you were
To sign my death and send me to the block,
My shade will claim revenge!

DUKE: No more—arrest him.

RIG: He is mad!

CHO: He is mad!

MON: Be both for ever accursed.
(To Rig. and the Duke.)
To strike the dying lion,
'Tis base—but you, reptile,
Who dares to laugh at an old father's grief
Malediction fall on you!

RIG: What do I hear!
Oh, terror! (Aside)

ALL, EXCEPT RIG: Rash man, your evil spirit
Has brought you to disturb this feast,
Your words are vain. Away!
The Duke's revenge you raise:
No hope for you remains,
This is your fatal day.
(Mon. is lead away by the soldiers, the others follow the Duke.)

ACT II

SCENE VII

The end of a Street. House and Garden of Rigoletto, with flight of stairs. Enter Rigoletto enveloped in his cloak, and followed by Sparafucile, carrying a long sword.

RIG: (Quel vecchio maledivami!)

SPA: Signor?—

RIG: Va, non ho niente.

SPA: Nè il chiesi—a voi presente
Un uom di spada sta.

RIG: Un ladro?

SPA: Un uom che libera
Per poco da un rivale,
E voi ne avete—

RIG: Quale?

SPA: La vostra donna è là.

RIG: (Che sento?) E quanto spendere
Per un signor dovrei?

SPA: Prezzo maggior vorrei—

RIG: Com' usasi pagar?

SPA: Una metà as' anticipa,
Il resto si da poi—

RIG: (Dimonio!) E come puo
Tanto securo oprar?

SPA: Soglio in cittade uccidere,
Oppure nel mio tetto.
L' uomo di sera aspetto—
Una stoccata, e muor.

RIG: E come in casa?

SPA: E facile—
M' aiuta mia sorella—
Per le vie danza—è bella—
Chi voglio attira—e allor—

RIG: Comprendo—

SPA: Senza strepito—
E' questo il mio stromento.
(Mostra la spada.)
Vi serve;

RIG: No—al momento—

SPA: Peggio ver voi—

RIG: Chi sa?

SPA: Sparafucile mi nomino—

RIG: Straniero?

SPA: Borgognone—(Per andarsene.)

RIG: E dove all' occasione?

SPA: Quì sempre a sera.

RIG: Va. (Spa. parte.)

SCENA IX

RIG: (guardando dietro a Sparafucile)
Pari siamo!—io la lingua, egli ha il pugnale;
L' uomo son io che ride, ei quel che spegne!
Quel vecchio maledivami—
O uomini!—o natura!—
Vil scellerato mi faceste voi!—
Oh rabbia!—esser difforme!—un buffone!—
Non dover, non poter altro che ridere!—
Il retaggio d' ogni uom m' è tolto il pianto!—

RIG: (That man has cursed me.)

SPA: Sir?

RIG: Go: I need you not.

SPA: I have not spoken! Only I showed myself
There with my dagger, ready for your orders.

RIG: You are a thief.

SPA: A man,
That for a trifle will free you from enemies,
And you have one.

RIG: Who is he?

SPA: Is your mistress here?

RIG: (What do I hear?) How much have I to pay
To rid me of this man?

SPA: A little more.

RIG: And when must you be paid?

SPA: One half before the deed,
The other after.

RIG: (O wretch!) And how can you
Be sure of the success?

SPA: I kill them in the street,
Or even in my own house.
I await my man at night;
A single blow—he dies.

RIG: But how in your own house?

SPA: Nothing can be more easy,
My sister helps me.
She dances in the streets—she is handsome;
And she attracts the man I want—I then—

RIG: I understand!

SPA: Without the slightest noise,
This is my trusty weapon!
(Shows his sword.)
Can I serve you?

RIG: Not now.

SPA: The worse for you.

RIG: Perhaps another day.

SPA: Sparafucile I am called.

RIG: A foreigner?

SPA: From Burgundy. (In the act of going away.)

RIG: But where could I meet you?

SPA: At this spot, always at night.

RIG: Well, go. (Spa. exit.)

SCENE IX

RIG: (looking after Sparafucile)
My weapon is my tongue—and his the dagger;
I make the people laugh, he makes them mourn!
We are alike!—That man has cursed me!
Men and nature,
'Tis you that made me wicked;
O rage! to be deformed—and a buffoon!
To be condemned to laugh against my will:
To ask in vain the common gift—of tears!

Questo padrone mio,
Giovin, giocondo, sì possente, bello
Sonnecchiando mi dice;
Fa ch' io rida, buffone.
Forzarmi deggio, e farlo!—Oh, dannazione!
Odio a voi, cortigiani schernitori!—
Quanta in mordervi ho gioia!
Se iniquo so, per cagion vostra solo—
Ma in altr' uom quì mi cangio!—
Quel vecchio maledivami!—Tal pensiero
Perchè conturba ognor la mente mia?—
Mi coglierà sventura? Ah no, follia.
(Apre con chiave, ed entra nel cortile)
(Detto e Gilda ch' esce dallo casa e si getta nelle sue braccia.)

RIG: Figlia—

GILDA: Mio padre!

RIG: A te dappresso
Trova sol gioia il core oppresso

GILDA: Oh quanto amore!

RIG: Mia vita sei!
Senza te in terra qual bene avrei?
(Sospira)

GILDA: Voi sospirate!—che v' ange tanto?
Lo dite a questa povera figlia—
Se v' ha mistero—per lei sia franto—
Ch' ella conosca la sua famiglia.

RIG: Tu non ne hai—

GILDA: Qual nome avete;

RIG: A te che importa?

GILDA: Se non volete
Di voi parlarmi—

RIG: Non usair mai. (Interrompendola)

GILDA: Non vo che al tempio.

RIG: Or ben tu fai.

GILDA: Se non di voi, almen chi sia
Fate ch' io sappia la madre mia.

RIG: Deh non parlare al misero
Del suo perduto bene—
Ella sentin' quell angelo,
Pietà delle mie pene—
Solo, difforme, povero
Per compassion mi amò.
Moria—le zolle coprano
Lievi quel capo amato—
Sola or tu resti al misero—
O Dio, sii ringarziaro!—
(Singhiozzande.)

GILDA: Quanto dolor!—che spremere
Si amaro pianto può?
Padre, non più, calmatevi—
Mi lacerta tal vista—
Il nome vostro ditemi,
Il duol che si v' attrista—

Alas! my master, young,
And full of mirth,
At every moment says,
Now make me laugh, buffoon.
I must do it. Oh! rage.
I hate you all, vile courtiers!
On you, therefore, my tongue delights to dwell;
For you I am depraved—
But here I am not the same;
That man has cursed me! But why does this thought Haunt my mind?
What can I have to fear? No, it's madness.
(He opens and enters.)
(Enter Gilda from house and throws herself in his arms.)

RIG: My daughter!

GILDA: Father.

RIG: Near to you, alone,
My poor dejected heart returns to joy.

GILDA: My father dear!

RIG: You are my only hope,
What else have I on earth except my Gilda?

GILDA: You sigh! What is the cause of your affliction?
Tell it to your poor daughter
Entrust me with your secrets,
And let me know my family

RIG: Ah! You have none!

GILDA: Your name

RIG: What does it matters to you?

GILDA: If you object to speak
Of our relations—

RIG: Do you ever leave this house?
(Interrupting her.)

GILDA: I only go to church.

RIG: That's right, my child.

GILDA: If you will not reveal your name or rank,
Ah, let me know, at least, who my mother is.

RIG: Ah, do not awake, I pray,
A memory so sad;
Of my dejected state
She alone had compassion,
Despised, deformed, and poor,
Through pity, she loved me,
She died—ah, may the earth
Lay lightly on her head—
You are my only treasure—
O God! Are you her aid?
(Sighing.)

GILDA: Alas, what grief! ah, never Saw I such bitter tears!
Ah, father, be calm,
Or you will break my heart.
To me reveal your name;
To me your grief impart.

RIG: A che nomarmi?—è inutile!—
Padre, ti sono, e basti—
Me forse al mondo temono,
D' alcuna ho forse gli asti—
Altri mi maledicono—

GILDA: Patria parenti, amici,
Voi dunque non avete!

RIG: Patria!—parenti!—dici?—
Culto, famiglia, patria,
(Con effusione.)
Il mio universo è in te!

GILDA: Ah, se può lieto rendervi,
Gioia è la vila a me!
Già da tre lune son quì ventua,
Nè la cittade ho ancor veduta;
Se il concedeto, farlo or potrei—

RIG: Mai!—mai!—uscita, dimmi, unqua sei!

GILDA: No.

RIG: Guai!

GILDA: (Che dissi?)

RIG: Ben te ne guarda!
(Potrian seguirla, rapirla ancora!
Quì d'un buffone si disonora
La figlia, e ridesi—Orror!) Olà?
(Verso la casa.)

SCENA X

Detti e Giovanna della casa.

GIO: Signor?

RIG: Tenendo mi vide alcuno?
Bada, dì il vero—

GIO: Ah no, nessuno.

RIG: Sta beh—la porta che dà al bastione
E sempre chiusa?

GIO: Lo fu e sarà.

RIG: Veglia, o donna, questo fiore
(A Gio.)
Che a te puro confidai;
Veglia attenta, e non sia mai
Che s' offuschi il suo candor
Tu dei venti dal furore,
Ch altri fiori hanno piegato,
Lo difendi, e immacolato
Lo ridonna al genitor.

GILDA: Quanto affetto!—quali cure!
Che temete, padre mio?
Lassù in cielo, presso Dio
Veglia un angiol protettor.
Da noi stoglie le sventure
Di mia madre il priego santo;
Non fia mai divelto o infranto
Questo a voi diletto fiore.

RIG: Why this?—I am your father,
This is enough for you.
I might perhaps be hated,
Or be by others feared.
Alas! I have been cursed!

GILDA: No country, no relations,
No friends, you then possess?

RIG: What do you say, my love?
You are my god, my country,
You are the world to me!

GILDA: If I could see you glad,
I would be happy too.
It has been three months now, since we here arrived,
And nothing I have seen yet of the city.
I wish to see it now, if you will grant it.

RIG: Have you never left this house?

GILDA: Never!

RIG: Mind!

GILDA: (What do I say?)

RIG: Nor must you ever leave it.
(She might be followed, she might be stolen,
And they would laugh at the dishonor
Of a buffoon. Oh shame!) Ho! there!
(Towards the house.)

SCENE X

Enter Giovanna from the house.

GIO: Sir?

RIG: Has no one seen me while coming here?
Mind, speak the truth.

GIO: No one.

RIG: That's well! The door that leads to the Ramparts, is it always closed?

GIO: Yes, it has always been so, and always shall.

RIG: Oh, woman, watch over this flower,
Which I trust unto your care;
Be mindful, it may never
Fall the victim of dark snare.
O, save this fragile stem
From the hail and from rain:
As it was to you confided,
May I receive it back again.

GILDA: O, be cheerful, my dear father.
Chase your starting tears away;
There, in heaven, is an angel
Who protects us night and day.
There the prayers of my mother
From all danger keeps us free;
Never, never, from your side,
Never distant will I be.

SCENA XI

Detti ed il Duca in costume borghese dalla strada.

RIG: Alcuno è fuori—
(Apre la porta della Corte, e mentre esce a sulla strada il Duca guizza furtivo nella corte e si nasconde dietro l' albero; gettando a Giovanna una borsa la fa tacer)

GIL: Cielo!
Sempre novel sospetto—

RIG: (a Gil. tornando.)
Vi seguiva alla chiesa mai nessuno!

GIO: Mai.

DUCA: (Rigoletto.)

RIG: Se talor quì picchiano
Guardatevi da aprir—

GIO: Nemmeno al duca?—

RIG: Meno che a tutti a lui—Mia figlia, addio.

DUCA: Sua figlia!

GIO: Addio, mia padre.
(S'abbraciano, e Rigoletto parte chiuden dosi dietro la porta.)

SCENA XII

Gilda, Giovanna, il Duca nella corte, poi Ceprano e Borsa a tempo sulla via.

GILDA: Giovanna, ho die rimorsi—

GIO: E perchè mai

GILDA: Tacqui che un giovin ne seguiva al tempio.

GIO: Perchè ciò dirgli?—l' odiate dunque
Cotesto giovin, voi?

GILDA: No, no, chè troppo è bello e spira amore—

GIO: E magnanimo sembra e gran signore.

GILDA: Signor nè principe—io lo vorrei,
Sonto che povero—più l' amerei.
Sognando o vigile—sempre lo chiamo,
E l' alma in estasi—gli dice t' a—

DUCA: (esce improvviso, fa cenno a Gio. d' andarsene, e inginocchiandosi a' piedi di Gil. termina la frase.) T' amo!
T' amo, ripetilo—sì caro accento,
Un puro schiudimi—ciel di contento!

GILDA: Giovanna?—Ahi misera!—non v' è più alcuno
Che quì rispondami!—Oh Dio!—nessuno!—

DUCA: Son io coll'anima—che ti rispondo—
Ah due che s' amano—son tutto un mondo!—

SCENE XI

The Duke in disguise arrives in the street.

RIG: Some one outside—(Rigoletto opens the street gate, and whilst he goes out, the Duke slides in, hiding himself behind a tree, and throwing a purse to Giovanna.)

GILDA: Oh, heavens!
He is always suspicious.

RIG: (To Gilda, returning.)
Has any one ever followed you to church?

GIO: No, never. (Aside.)

DUKE: (It is Rigoletto.)

RIG: If any one knocks here
You must not open.

GIO: Not even to the Duke?

RIG: Still less to him than others—
Child, adieu.

DUKE: His child!

GILDA: Adieu my father. (They embrace; and Rigoletto going out, shuts the door after him.)

SCENE XII

Gilda, Giovanna, the Duke in the court yard; afterwards Ceprano and Borsa in the street.

GILDA: Giovanna, I feel remorse.

GIO: And for what reason?

GILDA: I did not tell him who follows me to church.

GIO: And why would you tell this?
Do you dislike that man?

GILDA: No, no, he is too handsome.

GIO: And has the appearance of a rich signor.

GILDA: It is not the riches nor rank I wish;
To me if poor, he'd better prove.
I think of him by day and night;
For him my heart overflows with love—

DUKE: (throwing himself suddenly at the feet of Gilda.)
With love, with love, oh, let me hear it;
Oh, let my soul be rapt in joy.

GILDA: Giovanna! alas! Is no one here? (Gio. goes out at a sign from the Duke.)
No one defends me? Oh, heavens! no one.

DUKE: It is I, your lover, that speaks to you.
I will protect you against all worlds.

GILDA: Chi mai, chi giungere—vi fece a me?

DUCA: S' angelo o demone—che importa a te?
Io t' amo—

GILDA: Uscitene.

DUCA: Uscire!—adesso!
Ora che accendene—un fuoco istesso!—
A inseparabile—d' amore il dio
Stringeva, o vergine—tuo fato al mio!
E il sol dell'anima, la vita è amore,
Sua voce è il palpito—del nostro core—
E fama e gloria—potenza e trono.
Terrene, fragili—cose quì sono.
Una pur avvene—sola divina,
E amor che agli angeli—più ne avvicina!
Adunque amiamoci—donna celeste.
D' invidia agli uomini—sarò per te.

GILDA: (Ah de miei vergini—sogni son queste Le voci tenere—sì cara a me!)

DUCA: Che, m' ami—deh! ripetimi—

GILDA: L' udiste.

DUCA: Oh me felice!

GILDA: Il nome vostro ditemi—
Saperlo non mi lice?

CEP: Il loco è qui—(A bor. dalla via.)

DUCA: Mi nomino—(Pensando.)

BORSA: (Sta ben—) (A Cep. e partono.)

DUCA: Gualtier Maldè
Studente sono—povero—

GIO: Rumor di passi è fuore—
(Tornando spaventata.)

GILDA: Forse mio padre—

DUCA: (Ah cogliere Potessi il traditore Che sì mi sturba!)

GILDA: Adducilo (A Gio.)
Di quà al bastione—ite—

DUCA: Dì m' amerai tu!

GILDA: E voi

DUCA: L' intera vita—poi—

GILDA: Non più—non più—partite—

A2: Addio—speranza ed anima
Sol tu sarai per me.
Addio—vivrà immutabile
L' affetto mio per te.
(Il Duca entra in casa scortato da Giovanna. Gilda resta fissando la porta ond' e partito)

SCENA XIII

GILDA: (sola.) Gualtier Maldè!—nome di lui amate
Scolpisciti nel core innamorato!
Caro nome che il mio cor
Festi primo palpitar,

GILDA: Oh heaven! what fate has brought you here?

DUKE: That fate which rules a loving heart.
You are my love.

GILDA: Depart.

DUKE: No, no,
The same affection inflames our souls,
No power on earth can sever our love.
By fate united, by mutual sympathy,
Our bonds of love will last for ever.
My proudest conquest will be your faith—
My golden throne your heart so pure;
All else on earth is vain and frail,
True love alone is real and sure.
Love gives to men celestial bliss.
May nothing then our flame abate,
And all will envy my happy fate.

GILDA: Ah! these indeed are like the words
Which in my dreams I said and heard.

DUKE: O, let me hear again, I love you.

GILDA: You have heard it.

DUKE: Oh, joy!

GILDA: Tell me your name,
Or may I know it not?

CEP: This is the place. (To Bor. from the street.)

DUKE: My name—(Thinking.)

BOR: I see. (They depart.)

DUKE: Is Walter Maldè.
I am a poor student—poor—

GIO: A noise of steps outside. (Returning frightened.)

GIL: Perhaps my father.

DUKE: Ah, could I seize the traitor
Who dares disturb my joy
Of being with you.

GIL: Go quick,
And lead him on the ramparts.

DUKE: Do you love me?

GIL: And you?

DUKE: For ever, yes, and then—

GIL: No more, no more, depart.

BOTH: Farewell, my hope forever,
My blessing you shall be.
Farewell, farewell. Ah!
I'll never change my love for you.
(The Duke exit, escorted by Giovanna, and, Gilda follows him with her eyes.)

SCENE XIII

GILDA: (alone) Walter Maldè.
Sweet name,
You are already engraved on my heart.
Dear name! Your first has fallen

Le delizie dell' amor Mi dèi sempre rammentar Col pensiero il mio desir A te ognora volerà, E pur l' ultimo sospir, Caro nome, tuo sarà. (Sale al terrazzo con una lanterna)	So sweet upon my ear, You shall for ever be To me welcome and dear. My thoughts, all my desires, Will ever to you turn, Yes, even when my ashes Shall rest within the urn. (Gilda ascends the terrace with a lantern in her hand.)

SCENA XIV

SCENE XIV

Marullo, Ceprano, Borsa, Cortigiani armati e mascherati dalla via. Gilda sul terazzo, che tosto entra in casa.	Marullo, Ceprano, Borsa, Courtiers in masks, and armed, in the street; Gilda on the terrace, entering the house
BOR: E' là. (Indicando Gil. al Coro)	BOR: She is there.
CEP: Miratela—	CEP: Look,
CORO: Oh quanto è bella.	CHO: How beautiful she is!
MAR: Parfata ed angiol.	MAR: She is an angel!
CORO: L'amante è quella Di Rigoletto!	CHO: Is that the lover Of Rigoletto?

SCENA XV

SCENE XV

Detti e Rigoletto concentrato.	Enter Rigoletto, absorbed in thought.
RIG: (Riedo!—perche?)	RIG: (alone.) Do I return? why?
BOR: Silenzio—all' opra—badate a me.	BOR: Hush, to the work. Pay attention all to me.
RIG: (Ah da quel vecchio fui maledetto? Chi è là?)	RIG: Who is there?
	RIG: That man, alas! has cursed me! BOR: It was so dark I could not see.
BOR: Tacete—c' è Rigoletto. (Ai compagni)	BOR: Hush, Rigoletto is here.
CEP: Vittoria doppia!— l' uccideremo.	CEP: A double chance, we can now kill this man.
BOR: No, chè domani più rideromo—	BOR: No, no, tomorrow we shall have more laughter.
MAR: Or tutto aggiusto—	MAR: Ah! let me do—
RIG: (Chi parla quà?)	RIG: Who speaks?
MAR: Ehi, Rigoletto?—Di?	MAR: Ah, Rigoletto—say?
RIG: (Chi va là?) (Con voce terribile)	RIG: Who is there?
MAR: Eh, non mangiarci! Son—	MAR: Betray us not, I am—
RIG: Chi?	RIG: Who?
MAR: Marullo.	MAR: Marullo.
RIG: In tanto bujo lo sguardo e nullo.	RIG: We just came here to have some fun—
MAR: Quì ne condusee ridevol cosa— Torre a Ceprano vogliam la sposa.	MAR: We are going to steal away Ceprano's wife.
RIG: (Oime respiro!) Ma come entrare?	RIG: (Alas! I breathe again.) But where to enter?
MAR: (a. Cep.) La vostra chiave? (a Rig.) Non dubitare, Non dee mancarci lo stratagemma— Ecco le chiavi— (Gli da la chiave avuta da Cep.)	MAR: (to Cep.) Where is the key? (to Rig.) Don't be afraid, We cannot fail. Here are the keys. (Gives him the keys received from Cep.)
RIG: Sento il suo stemma. (Palpandole. (Ah, terror vano fu dunque il mio!) (Respirando.) N' e là il palazzo—con voi son io.	RIG: This is his crest. (Feeling the key.) (I feared in vain.) (Breathing more freely.) The house is there! (I come with you.)
MAR: Siam mascherati—	MAR: We are disguised.
RIG: Ch' io pur mi mascheri; A me una larva?	RIG: I must then do the same; Give me a mask!
MAR: Si, pronta e già. Terrai la scala— (Gli mette una maschera, e nello stesso tempo lo benda con un fazzoletto, e lo pone a reggere una scala, che avranno appostata al terrazzo.)	MAR: Yes, here is one. You will keep fast the ladder. (Puts a mask to his face, and after having bound it with a handkerchief, leads him to keep firm a ladder, which they have placed to the terrace.)
RIG: Fitta e la tenebra—	RIG: Never was it so dark.
MAR: La benda cieco e sordo il fa. (Ai compagni.)	MAR: The handkerchief has made him blind and deaf. (To his companions.)
TUTTI: Zitti, zitti moviamo a vendetto, Ne sia colto or che meno l' aspetta. A sua volto schernito sarà!— Cheti, cheti, rubiamgli l' amante, E la Corte doman riderà. (Alcuni salgono al terrazzo, rompon la porta del primo piano, scendono, aprono ad altri ch' entrano dalla strada, e riescono, trascinando Gilda la quale avra la bocca chiusa da un fazzoletto. Nel traversare la scena ella perde una sciarpa.	ALL: Hush, hush, let's take revenge, When least he thinks of it. The man that sneers at us, Tomorrow will be our sport Let's take his love away, And we shall laugh at court. (Some of them go up the terrace, break the window of the first floor, then descend and open the street door to others, who enter and drag away Gilda, who has her mouth tied with a handkerchief. In crossing the scene she loses a scarf.
GIL: Soccorso, padre mio—(Da lontano)	GIL: My father! help!
CORO: Vittoria!	CHO: Victory!
GIL: Aita! (Piu lontano.)	GIL: Help! (More distant.)
RIG: Non han finito ancor'—qual derisione! (Si toccha gli occhi.) Sono bendato! (Si strappa impetuosamente la benda e la maschera, ed al chiarore d' una lanterna scordata riconosee la sciarpa, vede la porta aperta, entra, ne trae Gio. spaventata; la fissa con istupore, si strappa i capelli senza porter gridare; finalmente dope molti sforzi, esclama—) Ah! la maledizione! (Sviene.)	RIG: They have not finished yet. What joke is this? (Touches his eyes.) A band upon my eyes! (He snatches off the band and the mask, and by the light of the lantern perceives the scarf, sees the door open, enters and drags out Gio., frightened; he stares at her, and after many efforts to speak, exclaims—) The curse! (Faints.)
Fine Dell' Atto Secunds.	End of the Second Act.

ATTO III

ACT III

SCENA I

SCENE I

Salotto nel palazzo ducale. Vi sono due porte laterali, una maggiore nel fondo che si chiude. A' suoi lati pendono i ritratti in tutta figura, a sinistra del Duca, a destra della sua sposa. V' ha un seggiolone presso una tavola coperta di velluto ed altri mobili. Il Duca dal mezzo agitato.	A room in the Ducal Palace. Doors right and left and one in front. On one side the portrait of the Duke, on the other side that of the Duchess. A table, arm-chair, Etc. Enter the Duke, much agitated.

Ella mi fu rapita!
E quando o ciel?—ne' brevi istanti, prima
Che un mio presagio interno
Sull' orma corsa ancora mi spingesse!
Schiuso era l' uscio!—la magion deserta!
E dove ora sarà quell' angiol caro!
Colei che potè prima in questo core
Destar la fiamma di constanti affetti?
Colei si pura, al cui modesto accento
Quasi tratto a virtù talor mi credo!
Ella mi fu rapita!
E chi l' ardiva?—ma ne avrò vendetta:
Lo chiede il pianto della mia diletta
Parmi veder le lagrime
Scorrenti da quel ciglio,
Quando fra il duolo e l' ansa
Del subito periglio,
Dell' amor nostro memore,
Il suo Gualtier chiamo.
Ned ei potea soccorrerti,
Cara fanciulla amata;
Ei che vorria coll' anima
Farti quaggiù beata;
Ei che le sfere agli angeli
Per te non invidiò.

SCENA II

Marullo, Ceprano, Borsa, ed altri Cortigiani, del mezzo.

TUTTI: Duca, duca!

DUCA: Ebben?

TUTTI: L' amante
Fu rapita a Rigoletto.

DUCA: Bella! e d' onde?

TUTTI: Dal suo tetto.

DUCA: Ah, ah! dite, come fu? (Siede.)

TUTTI: Scorrendo uniti remota via.
Brev' ora dopo caduto il dì;
Come previsto ben s' era in pria,
Rara beltade ci si scopri.
Era l' amante di Rigoletto
Che, vista appena, si dileguò.
Già di rapirla s' avea il progetto,
Quando il buffone ver noi spunto;
Che di Ceprano noi la contessa
Rapir volessimo, stolto, credè;
La scala quindi all' uopo messa,
Bendato ei stesso ferma tenè.
Salimmo, e rapidi la giovinetta
Ci venne fatto quinci asportar.
Quand' ei s' accorse della vendetta
Resto scornato ad imprecar.

DUCA: (Che sento?—è dessa la mia diletta!—
Ah, tutta il cielo non mi rapì!)
Ma dove or trovasi la poveretta? (Al Coro.)

They robbed me of my love!
And when? At the moment
A voice within my heart
Did call me back to her!
I found the door wide open; the house deserted.
And where now can that dearest angel be
Who first within my heart
Awoke such flames of love;—
That soul, whose magic charms
Would almost draw me back to virtue's path?
They tore her from her home;
But he who dared so much shall soon repent.
The grief of my beloved demands revenge.
I think I see a tear,
That's starting to her eyes,
Which 'midst the grief and fear
Of such a sad surprise,
In fond remembrance said
Ah! Walter, lend me aid.
But I was far away;
You had no help from me.
Yet, willingly my life
I would have lost for thee!
No bliss on earth—no bliss above—
Can equal your sweet love!

SCENE II

Enter Marullo, Count Ceprano, Borsa, and other Courtiers.

ALL: Duke, duke!

DUKE: What news?

ALL: Last night we stole away
The mistress of your jester.

DUKE: Is she pretty? Where was she then!

ALL: At her house.

DUKE: How did this happen?

ALL: As we went down a lane, when day had disappeared, there, as we had expected, a lady sweet appeared!
She was your jester's love;
But soon she ran away.
We thought to bring her here,
When he came in the way.
We come to steal Ceprano's wife,
Give us your aid, to him we told.
We put a band upon his eyes,
And then the ladder made him hold.
In haste we mounted, and broke the doors,
His lady-love was brought here straight;
When he found out he was deceived,
We left him there to curse his fate.

DUKE: (What do I hear? She is my love! Alas! My hopes are now all lost.)
(Aside.)
But where can this lady be?

TUTTI: Fu da noi stessi addotta or qui.

DUCA: (Possente amor mi chiama,
Volar io deggio a lei;
(Alzandosi con gioia.)
Il serto mio darei
Per consolar quel cor.
Ah1 sappia al fin chi l' ama,
Conosca appien chi sono,
Apprenda ch' anco in trono
Ha degli echiavi Amor.) (Esce frettoloso dal mezzo.) TUTTI: (Qual penisero or l'agita;

Come cagiò d' umor!)

SCENA III

Marullo, Ceprano, Borsa, altri Cortigiana, poi Rigoletto dalla destra, ch' entra cantarellando con reprezso dolore.

MAR: Povero Rigoletto!—

CORO: Ei vien—silenzio!

TUTTI: Buon giorno, Rigoletto—

RIG: (Han tutti fatto il colpo!)

CEP: Ch' hai di nuovo, Buffon?

RIG: Che dell' usato
Più noioso voi siete.

TUTTI: Ah! ah! ah!

RIG: (Dove l' avran nacosta?—) (Spiando inquieto dovunque.)

TUTTI: (Guardate com' e inquieto!)

RIG: Son felice
Che nulla a voi nuocesse
L' aria di questa notte—

MAR: Questa notte!—

RIG: Sì—Ah fu il bel colpo!—

MAR: S' hò dormito sempre!

RIG: Ah voi dormiste?—avro dunque sognato! (S' allontana, e vedendo un fazzoletto sopra una tavola, ne osserva inquieto la cifra.)

TUTTI: (Ve' come tutto osserva!)

RIG: (None è il suo.) (Gettandoto.)
Dorme il ducca tuttor?

TUTTI: Si, dorme encora.

SCENA IV

Detti e un Paggio dalla Duchessa.

PAG: Al suo sposo parlar vuol la duchessa.

CEP: Dorme.

PAG: Qui or con voi non era?

BORSA: E' a caccia

PAG: Senza paggi!—senz' a rmi!—

TUTTI: E non capisco.
Che vedere per ora non può alcuno?—

ALL: She is here in your own palace.

DUKE: (Yes, love now give me aid;
To her I must repair!
I would give up the world
To change to joy her care.
Ah! soon she will discover
My station, rank, and name,
And learn that love makes slaves
Amongst rich and poor the same.)
(The Duke exit hastily.)

ALL: The duke is wrapped in thought;
He seems no more the same.

SCENE III

Enter Rigoletto.

MAR: Poor Rigoletto!

CHORUS: He comes. Be silent.

ALL: Good morning, Rigoletto.

RIG: (They have deceived me!)

CEP: What news, Buffoon?

RIG: You are, I think,
More troublesome than ever.

ALL: Ah! ah! ah!

RIG: Ah! where can they have taken my dear child? (Looking round uneasily.)

ALL: (Look, how uneasy he appears!)

RIG: I am glad to find
The cold air of last night
Has done no harm to you.

MAR: Last night?

RIG: A fine affair it was.

MAR: I slept all night.

RIG: All night? I then have dreamed. (He walks about, and seeing a handkerchief on the table, observes the mask.)

ALL: (Look how he spies all things.)

RIG: (It is not hers.) (Throwing it away.)
Is the duke still asleep?

ALL: Yes, he sleeps still.

SCENE IV

Enter a Page of the Duchess.

PAGE: The duchess is anxious to see the duke.

CEP: He sleeps.

PAGE: Was he not here just now?

BORSA: Yes, but he went to hunt.

PAGE: Without his suite?

ALL: Do you not understand.
That for the moment he cannot be seen.

RIG: (Che a parte a stato attentissimo al dialogo balzando improvviso tra lore prorompe.) Ah ell' è qui dunque!—El è col duca!—

TUTTI: Chi!

RIG: La giovin che sta notte
A mio tetto rapiste—

TUTTI: Tu deliri!

RIG: M la saprò riprender—Ella è qui—

TUTTI: Se l' amante perdesti, la ricerca Altrove.

RIG: Io vo' mia figlia—

TUTTI: La sua figlia!

RIG: Sì, la mia figlia—D' una tal vittoria
Che?—adesso non ridete?
Ella è là—la vogl' io—la renderete.
(Corre verso la porta di mezze, ma i Cortigiani gli attraversano il passaggio.)
Cortigiani, vil razza dannata,
Per qual prezzo vendeste, il mi bene?
A voi nulla per l' oro sconviene,
Ma mia figlia è impagabil tesor.
La rendete—o se pur disarmata
Questa man per voi fora cruenta!
Nulla in terra più l' uomo paventa.
Se dei figli difende l' onor.
Quella porta, assassini, im' aprite;
(Si getta ancor sulla porta che gli e nuovamente contesa dai gentiluomini; lotta alquanto, poi torna spossato sul davanti del teatro.)
Ah! voi tutti a me contro venite!
(Piange)
Ebben piango—Marullo—signore,
Tu ch' hai l' alma gentil come il core
Dimmi or tu, dove l' hanno nascosta?—
E' là?—E' vero?—tu taci! perobè,
Miei signori—Perdono, pietate—
Al vegliardo la figlia ridate—
Ridonarla a voi nulla ora costa,
Tutto il mondo è tal figlia per me.

SCENA V

Detti e Gilda ch' esce dalla stanza a sinistra e si getta nelle paterne braccia.

GILDA: Mio padre!

RIG: Dio! mia Gilda!
Signori, id essa è tutta
La mia famiglia-Non temer più nulla,
Angelo mio—fu scherzo, non è vero?
(Ai cortig.)
Io che pur piansi or rido—E tu a che piangi?

GILDA: I ratto—l' onta, o padre!

RIG: Ciel! che dici?

RIG: (who has paid great attention to the dialogue, suddenly exclaims—) Ah! then she is here, she is with the duke.

ALL: Who?

RIG: The lady you have stolen
Last night from my own roof.

ALL: You are delirious.

RIG: But I shall rescue her. She must be there.

ALL: If you have lost your mistress,
It is not within these walls you have to search.

RIG: Ah! give me back my daughter.

ALL: His daughter!

RIG: Ah! yes, my daughter, of your action now
No, no, you cannot laugh!
She is there, give back to me my child.
(Rig. runs toward the door, but all prevent his passage.)
Impious courtiers, race of cowards,
For what price my child you sold?
For gain no crime your hand restrains;
To me my child is more than gold.
Give her back, or, though disarmed,
Against your life I'll raise my hand;
Nothing on earth a father fears
When he defends his children
Cowards, open at least that door.
(Rig. goes again to the door, but he is prevented from opening it.)
Alas! you come against me all;
Well, I weep—Marullo—yield,
I know you have a gentle heart,
Tell me where she is concealed.
Speak—she is there. You are all mute.
Give back the daughter to the old man:
My friends, my lords, have pity on me,
It costs you nothing to grant this boon;
But all my hopes in her I see.

SCENE V

Enter Gilda, who throws herself into the arms of her father.

GIL: My father!

RIG: My dear Gilda!
My lords, she is my only child!
Oh, fear no more! It was only for jest
I cried, but now I laugh—Why do you weep?

GIL: The fear—the shame—oh father!

RIG: Alas! what do you say?

GILDA: Arrossir voglio innanzi a voi soltanto—

RIG: (Trivolto ai Cortigiani con imperioso modo.)
Ite di quà, voi tutti—
Se il Duca vostro d' appresiassi osasse,
Che non entri gli dite, e ch' io ci sono.
(Si abbandono sul seggiolone.)

TUTTI: (Co' fanciulli e coi dementi
(Tra loro.)
Spesso giova il simular.
Partiam pur, ma quel ch' ei tenti
Non lasciamo d' osservar.)
(Escon dal mezzo a chiudon la porta.)

SCENA VI

Rigoletto e Gilda.

RIG: Parla siam soli.

GIL: (Ciel, dammi coraggio!)
Tutte le feste al tempio
Mentre pregava Iddio,
Bello e fatale un giovane.
S' offerse al guardo mio—
Se i labbri nostri tacquero,
Dagli occhi il cor parlò.
Furtivo fra le tenebre
Sol ieri a me giungeva—
Sono studente, provero,
Commosso mi diceva,
E con ardente palpito
Amor mi protestò.
Parti—il mio core aprivasi
A speme più gradita,
Quando improvvisi apparvero
Color che m' han rapita,
E a forza qui m' addussero
Nell' ansia più crudel.

RIG: Non dir—non più, mio angelo.
(T' intendo, avverso ciel!
Solo per me l' infamia
A te chiedeva, o Dio—
Ch' ella potesse ascendere.
Quanto caduto er' io—
Ah presso del pattibolo
Bisogna ben l' altare!
Ma tutto ora scompare—
L' altar si rovesciò!)
Piangi, fanciulla, e scorrere Fa il pianto sul mio cor.

GIL: Padre, in voi parla un angelo
Per me consolator.

RIG: Compiuto pur quanto a fare mi resta
Lasciare potremo quest' aura funesta.

GIL: Si.

RIG: (E tutto un sol giorne cangiare potè!)

SCENA VII

Detti, un Usciere, e il Conte di Monterone, che dalla destra attraversa il fon da della sala fra gli alabardieri.

GIL: I cannot speak in presence of so many.

RIG: (To the Courtiers, in an imperious manner.) Away, depart from here!
And if the Duke should dare to approach this room,
Tell him he must not come, that I am here.
(Throws himself upon a chair.)

ALL: With children and with fools
We must sometimes seem to yield;
Let us go, but what he does
We shall spy herein concealed.
(Exeunt from the door in front, shutting it behind them.)

SCENE VI

Rigoletto and Gilda.

RIG: Now speak, we are alone.

GIL: Now, Heaven, give me aid!
Each Sunday, while I went
To church, my prayers to say,
A youth of heavenly beauty
Did follow on our way;
And if our lips were silent,
The eyes betrayed our hearts.
In secret, only yesterday,
He came to me at night;
I am a student—poor—
Much moved, he said to me,
And ardently repeated,
I am in love with you.
He left me then; my heart
With brighter hopes did beat,
When suddenly appeared
Those men who took me away,
And brought me to this place,
Half fainting, in dismay.

RIG: Ah, speak no more my angel!
(Now I understand—
Upon my head alone
I asked you curse, O Heaven
I begged that she may rise
The moment I should die—
Ah! often by the scaffold
The altar raised we see!
Now all is lost forever,
No hope remains to me!)
Ah, weep, my child, and let your tears
Upon my bosom fall.

GIL: My father, your dear words
Consoles my grief forever.

RIG: I must settle some affairs,
And then forever we will leave this place.

GIL: Yes.

RIG: One day has changed our fate.

SCENE VII

Enter a Herald, and Count Monterone, who crosses the stage in the midst of Guards.

USC: Schiudete—ire al carcere Castiglion dee. (Alle guardie.)

MON: Poichè fosti invano da me maledetto, (Fermandosi verso il ritratto.)
Nè un fulmine o un ferro colpiva il tuo petto.
Felice pur anco, o duca, vivrai—
(Esce fra le guardie dal mezzo)

RIG: No, vecchio, t' inganni—un vendice avrai.

SCENA VIII

Rigoletto e Gilda

RIG: Si, vendetta, tremenda vendetta
Di quest' anima è solo desio—
Di punirti già l' ora s' affretta,
Che fatale pe te tuonerà.
Come fulmin scagliato da Dio
Il buffone colpirti saprà.

GIL: O mio padre, qual gioia feroce (Da se.)
Balenarvi negli occhi vegg' io!
Perdonate—a noi pure una voce
Di perdono dal cielo verrà.
(Mi tradiva, pur l' amo, gran Dio.
Per l' ingrato ti chiedo pietà!)
(Escon del mezzo)

Fine Dell' Atto Terzo.

ATTO IV

SCENA I

Deserta Sponda del Mincio. Gilda e Rigoletto inquieto sono sulla strada. Sparafucile nell' interno dell' osteria, seduto presso una tavola, sta ripulendo il suo cinturone, senza nulla intendere di quanto accade al di fuori.

RIG: E l' ami?

GIL: Sempre.

RIG: Pure
Tempo a guarirne t' ho lasciato.

GIL: Io l' amo

RIG: Povero cor di donna! Ah, il vile infame!
Ma avrai vendetta, o Gilda—

GIL: Pietà, mio padre—

RIG: E se tu certa fossi
Ch' ei ti tradisse, l'ameresti ancora?

GIL: Nol so, ma pur m' adora.

RIG: Egli!—

GIL: Sì.

RIG: Ebbene, osserva dunque. (La conduce presso una delle fessure del muro, ed ella vi guarda.

GIL: Un nomo vedo.

RIG: Per poco attendi.

HER: Open the door, the Count must pass to prison. (To the guards.)

MON: Since you have been accursed in vain by me,
Since no sword has yet entered in your breast,
And happy you must live—

RIG: No, no, old man, I shall avenge your wrongs. (Exeunt.)

SCENE VIII

Rigoletto and Gilda.

RIG: Ah, yes! I shall have vengeance,
It is my only wish.
The hour is not far distant
That your ruin will strike.
Upon your head my fury
Will fall, then, thunder-like.

GIL: Oh, father! what sad joy
Is sparkling in your eyes?
Ah! spare him;
Heaven will its mercy show to us also.
In spite of his deceit,
My heart beats for him.

End of the Third Act.

ACT IV

SCENE I

A desert spot on the banks of the river Mincio. Gilda and Rigoletto in the road. Sparafucile in the Inn, cleaning his leather belt.

RIG: And do you love him still?

GIL: I do.

RIG: Yet you have had Sufficient time to overcome this passion.

GIL: I cannot.

RIG: Weak is woman's heart;
But I will have revenge.

GIL: Oh, mercy, father!

RIG: Could you then forget him?

GIL: I cannot say. He loves me.

RIG: He?

GIL: Yes.

RIG: You must see. (He leads her to the door, and tells her to look through a crevice.)

GIL: A man is there.

RIG: But wait awhile.

SCENA II

Detti ed il Duca, che, in assisa di semplice officale di cavalleria entra nella sala terrena per una porta a sinistra.

GIL: Ah, padre mio! (trasalendo.)

DUC: Due cose e tosto—(a Sparaf.)

SPA: Quali?

DUC: Una stanza e del vino—

SIG: (Son questi i suoi customi!)

SPA: (Oh, il bel zerbino!) (Entra nella vicina stanza.)

DUC: La donna e mobile
Qual piuma al vento,
Muto d'accento—e di pensier.
Sempre un' amabile
Leggiadro viso,
In pianto o in riso—è menzogner.
E sempre misero,
Chi a lei s'affida,
Chi le confida—mal caute il cor!
Pur mai non sentesi
Felice appieno
Chi su quel seno—non liba amor.
(Spa. rientra con una bottiglia di vino e due bicchieri, che depone sulla tavola, quindi batte col pomo della sua lunga spada due colpi al soffillo. A quel segnale una ridente giovane, in costume di zingara scende a salti la scala. Il Duc. corre per abbracciarla, ma ella si sfugge.—Spa. uscito sulla vide, a parte a Rig.

SPA: E là il vostr' uomo—viver dee o morire?

RIG: Più tardi tornerò l'opra a compire. (Spa. si allontana dietro la casa lunge il fiume.)

SCENA III

Gilda e Rigoletto sulla via, il Duca e Maddalena nel piano terreno.

DUCA: Un dì, se ben rammentomi,
O bella, t' incontrai—
Mi piacque di te chiedere,
E intesi che qui stai.
Or sappi, che d' allora
Sol te quest' alma adora.

MAD: Ah, ah!—e vent' altre appresso
Le scorda forse adesso?—
Ha un' aria il signorino
Da vero libertino—

DUCA: Si?—un mostro son—(Por abbracciarla.)

MAD: Lasciatemi, Stordito.

DUCA: Ih, che fracasso!

MAD: Stia saggio.

SCENE II

The Duke, dressed as a private officer, enters the inn.

GIL: Ah! my father! (Surprised.)

DUKE: Two things I want, and then—(To Spa.)

SPA: Speak, sir,

DUKE: A room and wine.

RIG: This is the life he leads.

SPA: (A handsome youth, indeed!) (Aside. Spa. goes out.)

DUKE: The women are unsettled
As feathers in the wind,
Each moment changes their minds.
In tears, or even smiles,
Yes, woman's lovely face,
For ever beguiles us!
The man that is so mad
To trust a woman's heart
For ever must be sad.
But still there is no bliss,
Upon this earth compared
To that of a sweet kiss!
(Spa. enters with a bottle and two glasses, which he places on the table. He then beats the ceiling twice with the hilt of his sword. At this signal a pretty young girl, dressed as a gypsy, descends the stairs. The Duke rushes to embrace her, but she avoids him. Meanwhile Spa., having gone out upon the road, says aside to Rig:—

SPA: Your man is there. Must he now live or die?

RIG: Wait awhile, and you shall know my will. (Spa. goes slowly away.)

SCENE III

Gilda and Rigoletto on the road. Magdalen and the Duke in the Inn.

DUKE: If I remember well, my pretty girl,
I have seen your face before.
I tried to find your house,
At length I see you here.
Believe that from that time
I loved you to despair.

MAG: And others, score by score,
Do you forget them now?
To tell the truth, good sir,
You are a gay deceiver.

DUKE: Yes, yes, just so.

MAG: Leave me, rude man.

DUKE: Eh! eh! what noise!

MAG: Be quiet.

DUCA: E tu sii docile, Non farmi tanto chiasso. Ogni saggezza chiudesi Nel gaudio e nell' amore— (Le prende la mano.) La bella mano candida!—	DUKE: And you be kind, And do not scream so loud, For wisdom ever lies In pleasure and in love. What pretty hands! how white! (He takes her by the hand.)
MAD: Scherzate, voi signore.	MAG: You like to laugh at me.
DUCA: No, no.	DUKE: No, no.
MAD: Son brutta.	MAG: I know I am not pretty.
DUCA: Abbracciami.	DUKE: Kiss me.
MAD: Ebro—	MAG: Sir, you are drunk—
DUCA: D' amore ardente. (Ridendo)	DUKE: Yes, drunk of love for you.
MAD: Signor l' indifferente, Vi piace canzonar?—	MAG: And can you be so unkind, As thus to laugh at me.
DUCA: No, no, ti vo' sposar.	DUKE: I do not joke—I wish to marry you.
MAD: Ne voglio la parola—	MAG: If so, give me your word of honor.
DUCA: Amabile figliuola! (Ironico.)	DUKE: You are a charming girl! (Ironically.)
RIG: Ebben?—ti basta ancor?—(A Gilda che avra tutto osservato ed inteso)	RIG: Well then, is this not yet enough?
GIL: Iniquo traditor!	GIL: The cruel traitor!
DUCA: Bella figlia dell' amore, Schiavo son de' vezzi tuoi; Con un detto soi tu puoi Le mie pene consolar. Vieni , e senti del mio core Il frequente palpitar.	DUKE: Lovely woman, of your charms At your feet the victim see, But one word, and changed to joy All my sorrows soon will be. Yes, be assured, my lady sweet, This fond heart for you does beat.
MAD: Ah! ah! rido ben di core, Chè tai baie costan poco; Quanto valga il vostro giuoco, Mel credete, so apprezzar, Sono avvezza, bel signore, Ad un simile scherzar.	MAG: Do you take me for a fool, To think your words are true; Full well I know what they mean, I give them their right value, Jokes like these I often hear, But I laugh at them, dear sir.
GIL: Ah, cosi parlar d' amore! A me pur l' infame ho udito Infelice cor tradito, Per angoscia non scoppiar. Perchè, o credulo mio core, Un tal uom dovevi amar!	GIL: Thus my heart he did deceive, Thus the traitor spoke to me. All my joys, my hopes are gone, Now my wretched doom I see. O heavens! what a cruel fate! I love the man I ought to hate.
RIG: Taci, il piangere non vale; (A Gil.) Ch' ei, mentiva or sei secura— Taci, e mia sarà la cura La vendetta d' affrettar. Pronta fia, sara fatale; Io saprolla fulminar. M' odi, ritorna a casa— Oro prendi, un destriero, Una veste viril che t' apprestai, E per Verona parti— Sarovvi io pur domani—	RIG: Hush! your sorrows are all vain, That he deceived you is now sure— Hush! it now belongs to me Dreadful vengeance to procure. Your death only can assuage. Hear me, at once go home, and take what gold You want. Then dress yourself in male attire. All is prepared. Mount on the swiftest horse And hasten to Verona. Tomorrow I shall join you.
GIL: Or venite—	GIL: Come now.
RIG: Impossibil.	RIG: I cannot now.
GIL: Tremo.	GIL: I tremble.
RIG: Va. (Gilda parte.)	RIG: Go—(Gilda goes out.)

SCENA IV

SCENE IV

Sparafucile, Rigoletto, il Duca e Maddalena.	Sparafucile, Rigoletto, Duke and Magdalen.
RIG: Venti scudi hai tu detto? Eccome dieci, E dopo l' opera il resto. Ei qui rimane?	RIG: You said twenty crowns. Here are now ten. After the deed I shall give you the rest. Is he still here?
SPA: Si.	SPA: He is.
RIG: Alla mezze notte Ritornerò.	RIG: I shall return At midnight hour.
SPA: Non cale. A gettarlo nel flume basto io solo.	SPA: I don't require your aid; I can alone throw him into the river.
RIG: No, no, il vo' far io stesso.	RIG: No, no, I wish to throw him in myself.
SPA: Sia—il suo nome?	SPA: So be it. What is his name?
RIG: Vuoi saper anco il mio? Egli è Delitto, Punizion son io. (Parte. Il cielo si oscura e tuona.)	RIG: His name is Crime, and Punishment is mine. (Exit Rig. It becomes dark, and thunders.)

SCENA V

SCENE V

Detti, meno Rigoletto.	Sparafucile, the Duke, and Magdalen.
SPA: La tempesta è vicina! Più scura fia la notte.	SPA: The storm approaches. Good. The night will be darker.
DUCA: Maddalena? (Per prenderla)	DUKE: Magdalen! (Trying to take hold of her.)
MAD: (Sfuggendogli.] Aspettate—mio fratello Viene—	MAG: Wait! my brother Comes. (Avoiding him.)
DUCA: Che importa? (S' ode il tuona)	DUKE: Well! what's this?
MAD: Tuona?	MAG: It thunders!
SPA: E pioverà tra poco. (Entrande)	SPA: (Entering.) And we shall have some rain.
DUCA: Tanto meglio. Io qui mi tratterò—tu dormirai (A Spa.) In scuderia—all' inferno—ove vorrai	DUKE: So much the better. I shall stop here; you can sleep in the stable Below, or where you like.
SPA: Grazie.	SPA: Thanks, sir.
MAD: (Ah no—partite.) (Piano al Duc.)	MAG: Ah, no, depart!
DUCA: (Con tal tempo?) (A Mad.)	DUKE: How? in such weather!
SPA: Son venti scudi d' ore. (Piano al Mad.) Ben felice (Al Duc.) D' offririvi la mia stanza—se a voi piace Tosto a vederla andiamo. (Prende un lume e s' avvia per la scala.)	SPA: Twenty crowns of gold! (To Mag.) I shall be happy (To the Duke.) To offer you my room; and if you like, I will show it to you. (He takes a light, and goes toward the staircase.)
DUCA: Ebben, sono con te—presto, vediamo. (Dice una parola all' orecchio di Mad. e segue Spa.)	DUKE: With pleasure; yes, let's go. (Whispers a word to Mag., and follows Spa.)
MAD: (Poverro giovin! grazioso tanto! (Tuona.) Dio! qual mai notte è questa!)	MAG: Unfortunate young man; so good, so kind! Oh, Heaven! what a night!
DUCA: (Giunto al granaio, vendendone il balcone senza imposte.) Si dorme all' aria aperta? bene, bene— Buona notte.	DUKE: (Having gone up stairs, and seeing the window without shutters.) Here one must sleep quite in the open air. Well, well; good night!
SPA: Signor, vi guardi Iddio.	SPA: May God protect you, sir.
DUCA: Breve sonno dormiam— stanco son io. (Depone il capello, la spada, e si stende sul letto, dove in breve addormentasi. Mad. frat-	DUKE: I feel that I shall sleep; I am so tired. (He puts down his hat and his sword, and throws himself on the bed, and soon falls tanto siede presso la tavola. Spa. beve dalla bottiglia lasciata dal Duca. Rimangono ambidue taciturni per qualche istante, e preoccupati da gravi pensieri.)

MAD: E’ amabile in vero cotal giovinotto.

SPA: Oh si—venti scudi ne dà di prodotto.

MAD: Sol venti! son pochi—valeva di più.

RIG: La spada, s’ ei dorme, va, portami giù.

MAD: (Sale al granaio, e contemplando il dormente.) Peccato! è pur bello!
(Ripara alla meglio il bolcone, e scendo.)

SCENA VI

Detti e Gilda che comparise nel fondo della via in costume virile, con stivali e speroni, e lentamente si avanza verso l’ osteria, mentre Sparafucile continua beve. Spessi lampi e tuoni.

GIL: A più non ragiono!
Amor mi trascina!—mio padre, perdono—(Tuona.)
Qual notte d’ orrore!—Gran Dio, che accadra.

MAD: Fratello! (Sara discesa ed avra posata la spada del Duc. sulla tavola.)

GIL: Chi parla? (Osserva pella fessura.)

SPA: Al diavol ten va. (Frugando in un credenzone.)

MAD: Somiglia un Apollo quel giovine—io l’ amo—
Ei m’ ama—riposi—nè più l’ uccidiamo.

GIL: O cielo! (Ascoltando.)

SPA: Rattoppa quel sacco—

MAD: Perchè?

SPA: Entr’ esso il tuo Apollo, sgozzato da me,
Gettar dovrò al fiume.

GIL: L’ inferno qui vedo!

MAD: Eppure il danaro salvarti scommetto,
Serbandolo in vita.

SPA: Difficile il credo.

MAD: M’ ascolta—anzi facil ti svelo un progretto.
De’ scudi già dieci dal gobbo ne avesti;
Venire cogli altri più tardi il vedrai—
Uccidilo, e venti allora ne avrai,
Cosi tutto il prezzo goder si potrà.

asleep. Mag. down stairs stands sentry near the table, and Spa. finishes the bottle left by the Duke. They both remain some time in silence, and apparently in deep thought.)

MAG: He is, indeed, an amiable young man.

SPA: Oh, yes, I gain twenty crowns.

MAG: Twenty crowns! ’Tis little; he is worth much more.

SPA: Go up—and if he sleeps, bring down his sword.

MAG: (Goes up, and admiring him, exclaims:) It is a pity—he is so handsome!

SCENE VI

Enter Gilda from the road, disguised as a man, and slowly advancing toward the Inn, whilst Sparafucile drinks. It lightens and thunders.

GIL: Alas! I lose my reason.
Love overcomes me. Father, pardon,
What a dreadful night! What will become of me?

MAG: My brother! (Mag. having come down, has placed the Duke’s sword on the table.)

GIL: Who has spoken? (Looking through the crevices of the door.)

SPA: Away, do not disturb me.
(Searching in a cupboard.)

MAG: That youth is as handsome as Apollo; I love him,
And he loves me. Ah! kill him not!

GIL: (listening.) O heavens!

SPA: Mend soon that sack.

MAG: And why?

SPA: The handsome youth, Apollo, when killed by me,
I must throw in the river.

GIL: O heavens! what house is this?

MAG: You still may earn your money,
And spare his life.

SPA: That is not easy.

MAG: Listen, a plan I will disclose to you.
From the buffoon you have received ten crowns;
He will return here soon with the remainder;
Kill him, and you will take the other ten,
Then you will get the price you would have earned.

SPA: Uccider quel gobbo! che diavol dicesti!
Un ladro son forse? Son forse un bandito?
Qual altro c’iente da me fu tradito?
Mi paga vuest’ uomo—fedele m’avrà.

GIL: Che sento! mio padre!

MAD: Ah grazia per esso!

SPA: E’ d’ uopo ch’ ei muoia—

MAD: Fuggire il fo adesso. (Va per salire.)

GIL: Oh buona figliuola!

SPA: Gli scudi perdiamo. (Trattendola.)

MAD: E ver:

SPA: Lascia fare—

MAD: Salvarlo dobbiamo.

SPA: Se pria ch’ abbia il mezzo la notte toccato
Alcuno qui giunga, per esso morrà.

MAD: E’ buia la notte, il ciel troppo irato nessuno a quest’ ora di qui passera.

GIL: Oh qual tentazione; morir per l’ ingrato!
Morire!—e mio padre!—Oh cielo, pietà!
(Battono le undici e mezzo.)

SPA: Ancor c’ è mezz’ ora.

MAD: Attendi, fratello—(Piangendo.)

GIL: Che! piange tal donna!—Nè a lui darò aita!
Ah s’ egli al mio amore divema rabello
Io vo’ per la sua gettar la mia vita
(Picchia alla porta)

MAD: Si picchia?

SPA: Fu il vento. (Gil. torna a bussare.)

MAD: Si picchia, ti dico

SPA: E’ strano!

MAD: Chi è?

GIL: Pietà d’ un mendico;
Asil per la motte a lui concedete.

MAD: Fia lunga tal notte!

SPA: Alquanto attendete. (Va a cercare nel credenzione.)

GIL: Ah, presso alla morte, si giovane, sono!
Oh, cielo, pegli empi ti chiedo perdono.
Perdonna tu, o padre, a questa in felice!
Sia l’ uomo felice—ch’ or vado a salvar.

MAD: Su spicciati, presto, fa l’ opra compita:
Anelo vua vita’—con altra salvar

SPA: Ebbene—son pronto, quell uscio dis chiudi;
Piucch’ altro li scudi—mi preme salvar.

SPA: Kill the buffoon! What nonsense have you said?
Am I a thief? Have I ever lost my honor?
Is there a client that I have betrayed?
I must not break my faith. This man has paid.

GIL: What do I hear? My father!

MAG: I pray for him.

SPA: He must die.

MAG: No; I shall tell him to fly.

GIL: Good-hearted woman!

SPA: Now, let me.

MAG: We must save him.

SPA: Should any one come here before midnight,
I shall kill him instead.

MAG: The night is dark, the thunder roars,
No one will pass this way.

GIL: Oh, what temptation, to die for this cruel man.
To die, O father! Heavens! have pity on me!
(It strikes half-past eleven.)

SPA: Still half an hour.

MAG: Await, my brother. (Weeping.)

GIL: That woman weeps, and shall I not help him?
Ah: if he no more feels love for me,
I’ll give my life to save his own.
(Knocking at the door.)

MAG: One knocks.

SPA: It is the wind.

MAG: One knocks, I say.

SPA: It is strange!

MAG: Who is there?

GIL: Have pity upon a stranger
Grant him asylum for the night.

MAG: This night will be long!

SPA: Wait awhile. (Spa. searches at the sideboard.)

GIL: So near to death, and yet so young!
O heaven! pardon these impious men,
And you, my father, excuse your child,
May happy live the man I save.

MAG: Now hasten, quick, perform the deed,
To save one life I take another.

SPA: Well, I am ready. Now open the door,
To save the crowns is all my care.
(Spa. hides himself behind the door with a dagger. Mag. opens the door, then runs to shut the

SCENA VII

Rigoletto solo si avanza da fondo della scena chiuso nel suo mantello.

Della vendetta alfin giunge l' instante!
Da trenta di l' aspetto
Di vivo sangue a lagrime piangendo sotto la larva del buffon—Quest' uscio!
(Esaminando la casa)
E' chiusa!—Ah, non e tempo ancor!—S' attenda.
Qual notte di mistero!
Una tempesta in cielo!
In terra un omicicio!
Oh comee in vero quì grande mi sento! (Suona mezza notte.)
Mezza notte!

SCENA VIII

Detto e Sparafucile dalle casa

SPA: Chi è la?

RIG: Son io (Per entrare)

SPA: Sostare (Rentra e torna trascinando un sacco)
E qul spento il vostr' uomo.

RIG: Oh gioia!—Un lume.

SPA: Un lume?—No, il danaro. (Rig. gli da una borsa.)

SPA: Lesti, all' onda il gettiam

RIG: No—basto io solo.

arch in front, and whilst Gilda enters, Spa. shuts the door behind her, and everything remains buried in silence and darkness.)

SCENE VII

Rigoletto advances from the road enveloped in his cloak. The violence of the storm is diminished, only now and then the lightning is to be seen and the thunder heard.

RIG: At last the time of my revenge approaches.
For thirty days I waited this fatal hour
In tears most bitter,
Under the mask of a buffoon. That door
(Examining the house.)
Is shut—It's not the hour yet.
What a dreadful night is this!
In heaven a storm,
On earth a homicide—
I feel myself yet great.
It is midnight.
(It strikes twelve.)

SCENE VIII

Enter Sparafucile.

SPA: Who is there?

RIG: It is I. (On the point of entering.)

SPA: Await. (Re-enters, and comes out again, dragging a sack.)
Your man is here, quite dead.

RIG: Oh, joy! a light

SPA: A light! Not yet—the money! (Rig. gives him a purse)

SPA: Quick, let us throw him into the river.

RIG: I can do it alone.

SPA: Come pi piace—Quì men atto e il sito
Più avanti e più profondo il gorgo—Presto
Che alcun non vi sorprenda—Buona notte.

SCENA IX

Rigoletto, poi il Duca.

RIG: Egli è lâ!—morto!—O si—vorrei vederlo!
Ma che importa!—e ben desso!—
Ecco i suoi sproni.
Ora mi garda, o mondo—
Quest' è un buffone, ed un potente è questo!
Ei sta sotto a' miei piedi. E' desso! è desso!
E' giunta alfin la tua vendetta, o duolo!
Sia l' onda a lui sepolero,
Un sacco il suo lenzuolo!
(Fa per trascinare il sacco verso la sponda, quando e sorpreso dalla lontana voce del Duc. che nel fondo attraversa la scena.)
Qual voce! illusion notturna e questa!
No! no!—egli è desso! è desso!
(Trasalendo)
Maledizione! Olà dimon bandito?
(Verso la casa)
Chi è mai, chi è qui in sua vece!
(Taglia il sacco.)
Io tremo. E' umano corpo!
(Lampeggia.)

RIG: Mia figlia! Dio! mia figlia! Gilda!
(Strappandosi i rapelli cade sul cadevere della figlia.]

The End.

SPA: As you desire. This place is not the best.
Higher up the waves are deeper.
Be quick, that none may see you
Good night. (Re-enters the house)

SCENE IX

Rigoletto, and afterward the Duke.

RIG: He is here—he is dead. Oh yes! I would see him!
But why? 'Tis he. Here are his spurs.
The crowd
Can now look well at me.
I am the Jester, and he is the Duke.
Dying now at my feet.
I am at last revenged!
The wave shall be his grave,
A sack his shroud.
(He tries to drag the sack towards the shore, when he hears the distant voice of the Duke, who crosses the scene.)
What voice? Am I deceived?
No, no!—it is he—it is he!
(Surprised)
Ho, there! Demon!
(Towards the house.)
But who can be in this sack instead of him?
(He cuts the sack.)
A human body! I tremble.
(It lightens)

RIG: My daughter! Heaven! my Gilda!
(He falls despairingly at the side of his daughter.]

The End.

Il Trovatore (1853)

The Troubadour

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY SALVATORE COMMARANO

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Salvatore Cammarano (based upon Antonio García Gutiérrez' tragedy, El Trovador), was first performed at the Teatro Apollo in Rome on January 19, 1853. In early fifteenth century Spain, Ferrando, Captain of Count Di Luna's Guard, is recounting a story to his men. Many years ago, when the Count was a little boy, his brother was bewitched by an old gypsy woman. She was burned alive at the stake for her crime; her daughter, Azucena, avenged her death. One night the Count's brother disappeared; the bones of a child were found in the very spot the gypsy woman had been killed. Leonora, lady-in-waiting to the Princess of Aragon, is in love with Manrico, a troubador. One night she thinks she hears his voice and hastens to meet him—but it is Count Di Luna, also in love with her. The two men prepare to duel over Leonora. Manrico is injured, and Azucena nurses him back to health. He thinks that she is his mother; the truth is that when she stole Count Di Luna's brother so long ago she threw her own child into the fire by mistake so she kept Manrico as her own. Believing Manrico to be dead, Leonora decides to enter a convent. Di Luna and his men try to kidnap her, but Manrico arrives in the nick of time. Di Luna's men capture Azucena. When it becomes known that she is the daughter of the old gypsy woman, she too is sentenced to be burned at the stake. Manrico and Leonora are about to wed when he hears of Azucena's incarceration and rushes off to rescue her. Manrico is now a prisoner in Di Luna's jail; Leonora implores Di Luna to spare him. She offers up herself in his place and Di Luna accepts. Leonora swallows the poison hidden inside her ring. Manrico, now free, rejects his freedom when he realizes what she has done to gain it. Leonora dies in his arms. When Di Luna realizes he has been duped, he decrees that Manrico must be executed. As Manrico is beheaded, Azucena announces that Di Luna has in fact murdered his own flesh and blood—Manrico was his brother. Her mother's death is thus finally avenged.

■ ATTO PRIMO.

SCENA I.

Atrio nel Palazzo dell'Aliaferio: porta da un lato, che mette agli appartamenti del Conte de Luna.—FERRANDO e molti Famigliari del Conte, che giacciono presso la porta: alcuni Uomini di Arme che passeggiano in fondo.

FERRANDO: (Parla ai Famigliari.) All' erta, all' erta! Il Conte
N' è d' uopo attender vigilando; ed egli
Talor, presso i veroni
Della sua vaga, intere
Passa le notti.

FAMIGLIARI: Gelosia le fiere
Serpi gli avventa in petto!

FERRANDO: Nel trovator, che dai giardini muove
Notturno il canto, d' un rivale a dritto
Ei teme.

FAMIGLIARI: Dalle gravi
Palpèbre il sonno a discacciar, la vera
Storia ci narra di Garzia, germano
Al nostro Conte.

■ ACT I.

SCENE I.

Vestibule in the Palace of Aliaferia, with door on one side, opening to the Apartments of the Count de Luna.—FERRANDO, and the Servants of the Count, discovered lying near the doorway: Soldiers perambulate the background.

FERRANDO: (To the slumbering Servants.) Wake up, wake up! The Count
Must not find you sleeping.
You know how often
He passes the night
Beneath the balcony of his mistress.

SERVANTS: Her fiery serpents have let loose jealousy in his bosom!

FERRANDO: The troubadour, who within her garden
Serenades her nightly, a formidable rival
May well be reckoned.

SERVANTS: If from our eyes
You would dispel heavy sleep,
Tell us the story of Garzia,
The brother of our master.

FERRANDO: La dirò: venite
Intorno a me.
(Famigliari eseguiscono accostandos pur essi.)

UOMINI D' ARME: Noi pure—

FAMIGLIARI: Udite, udite.
(Tutti accerchiano Ferrando.)

FERRANDO: Di due figli vivea, padre beato,
Il buon Conte di Luna:
Fida nutrice del secondo nato
Dormia presso la cuna;
Sul romper dell' aurora un bel mattino
Ella dischiude i rai,
E chi trova d'accanto a quel bambino?

CORO: Chi!—Favella—chi mai?

FERRANDO: Abbietta zingara, fosca vegliarda!
Cingeva i simboli di maliarda!
E sul fanciullo, con viso arcigno,
L'occhio affiggeva torvo, sanguigno!
D'orror compresa la nutrice;
Acuto un grido all'aura scioglie;
Ed ecco, in meno che labbro il dice,
I servi accorrono in quelle soglie
E fra minacce, urli, percosse,
La rea discacciano ch'entrarvi osò.

FERRANDO: I will tell you: approach,
Draw close up to me.
(The Servants cluster about him.)

SOLDIERS: We, too?

SERVANTS: Listen, listen.
(All surround Ferrando.)

FERRANDO: The Count de Luna
Was the happy father of two beloved children:
The faithful nurse of the second-born
Slept near his cradle;
Awakening one morning at break of day,
She was horrified at seeing—what,
Think you, she saw by the side of that child?

CHORUS: What?—Tell us—what did she see?

FERRANDO: There stood a gipsy hag, withered and swarthy!
Clad in habiliments her race disclosing!
Fixed were those dark eyes, with fury gleaming,
On that child's features in peace reposing!
Horror and fear seized upon the child's attendant;
With her wild cries the mansion then resounded;
And, swiftly as words can describe rapid movement,
The servants all, in wild alarm,

CORO: Giusto quei petti sdegno commosse!
L'insana vecchia lo provocò!

SCENA II.

Giardini del Palazzo; sulla destra marmorea scalinata che mette negli appartamenti.—La notte è inoltrata, e dense nubi coprono la luna.
(Entra LEONORA ed INES.)

INES: Che più t' arresti?—l' ora è tarda; vieni,
Di te la regal donna
Chiese, l' udisti.

LEONORA: Un' altra notte ancora
Senza vederlo!

INES: Perigliosa fiamma
Tu nutri!—oh come, dove
La primiera favilla
In te s' apprese?

LEONORA: Ne' tornei. V'apparve.
Bruno le vesti ed il cimier, lo scudo
Bruno e di stemma ignudo,
Sconosciuto guerrier, che dell' agone
Gli onori ottenne—al vincitor sul crine
Il serto io posi—civil guerra intanto
Arse—nol vidi più!—come d' aurato
Sogno, fuggente imago!—ed era volta
Lunga stagion—ma poi—

INES: Che avvenne?

LEONORA: Ascolta!
Tacea la notte placida!
E bella in ciel sereno!
La luna il viso argenteo
Mostrava lieto a pineo!
Quando suonar per l'aere,
Infino allor sì muto,
Dolci s'udiro e flebili,
Gli accordi di un liuto,
E versi melanconici,
Un trovator cantò.
Versi di prece, ed umile,
Qual d' uom che prega Iddio!
In quella ripeteasi
Un nome—il nome mio!
Corsi al veron sollecita.
Egli era, egli era desso!—
Gioja provai che agli angeli
Solo è provar concesso!—
Al core, al guardo estatico
La terra un ciel sembrò!

there bounded:
That horrid beldame they soon ejected.
Who her accursed arts had ventured there.

CHORUS: Justly was their wrath excited!
The beldame her punishment provoked!

SCENE II.

The Gardens of the Palace; on one side a flight of marble steps, leading to the interior—Night, advanced, the moon obscured by dense clouds.
(Enter LEONORA and INES.)

INES: Why do you still remain?—It's late;
Come, the Queen, you know,
Desires your attendance.

LEONORA: Another night, then, must pass
Without seeing him!

INES: I fear, you are nourishing a dangerous passion!—But come,
Tell me when the first spark
Was kindled within you?

LEONORA: At the tournament. There.
Clad in black from head to foot,
And carrying a black shield,
An unknown warrior appeared—
He won the laurel, and on his brow
I placed it.
But soon the civil war broke out,
And I saw no more of him,
Unless in the golden visions of my sleep!
Once—some time had passed—but then—

INES: What happened?

LEONORA: Listen!
How calm how placid was the night!
The cloudless sky, how clear, how bright!
The moon in splendour shed her light,
And all was hushed in peace around!
Suddenly, on the midnight air,
In tones so sweet and thrilling,
Breathing to Heaven an earnest prayer,
My heart with deep joy filling,
I heard a voice oft heard before,
My long-loved troubadour.
The words were those of a prayer,
Humbly addressed to Heaven,
In which I heard a name repeated:
That name—it was my own!
I hastened to the balcony:
It was he—It was he himself!
The joy which I then felt
Angels in heaven alone can feel!—
To my delighted eyes
Earth seemed raised to heaven!

INES: Quanto narrasti di turbamento
M' ha piena l' anima!—Io temo—

LEONORA: Invano!

INES: Dubbio ma tristo presentimento
In me risveglia quest' uomo arcano!
Tenta obliarlo—

LEONORA: Che dici!—Oh, basti!

INES: Cedi al consiglio dell'amistà—
Cedi—

LEONORA: Obliarlo!—Ah! tu parlasti
Detto, che intendere l' alma non sa.
Di tale amor che dirsi
Mal può dalla parola,
D' amor, che intendo io sola,
Il cor s' inebrio.
Il mio destino compirsi,
Non può che a lui d'appresso.
S'io non vivrò per esso,
Per esso moriro!

INES: (A parte). Non debba mai pentirsi
Chi tanto un giorno amò!
(Ascendono agli appartamenti.)
(Entra il CONTE.)

CONTE: Tace la notte! Immersa
Nel sonno è, certo, la regal signora:
Ma veglia la sua dama—Oh! Leonora,
Tu desta sei; mel dice
Da quel verone tremolante un raggio
Della notturna lampa.
Ah! l' amorosa vampa
M'arde ogni fibra!—Ch' io ti vegga è d' uopo,
Che tu m' intenda, vengo.—A noi supremo
È tal momento!
(Cieco d' amore avviasi alla gradinata: odonsi gli accordi di un liuto; egli si arresta.)
Il trovator!—Io fremo!

MANRICO: Deserto sulla terra,
Col rio destino in guerra,
E' sola speme un cor,
Un cor al trovator!
Ma s' ei quel cor possiede,
Bello di casta fede,
È d' ogni re maggior
Il trovator!

CONTE: Oh, detti!—Oh, gelosia,
Non m' inganno.—Ella scende.
(Si avvolge nel suo mantello.)
(Entra LEONORA.)

LEONORA: (Correndo verso il Conte.) Anima mia!

CONTE: (Aparte). Che far?

INES: What you have related to me
Fills my mind with trouble!—I fear—

LEONORA: What?

INES: I don't know, but
This mysterious stranger excites a sad foreboding.
Try to forget.

LEONORA: What say you!—Oh, cease!

INES: Yield to the counsels of friendship—
Forget him.

LEONORA: Forget him!—Ah! you speak a language
Which the heart cannot comprehend.
Ah! no, it were vain concealing
This heart's deep-seated feeling,
For him my love revealing;—
In vain I try, in vain I try,—
It will hold while life remains.
Each sense, each thought enslaving,
For him all danger braving,
No other joy ever craving,
Till death with him, till death with him
I'd share each joy and pain!

INES: (Aside). May she never repent the day
On which she learned to love so madly!
(They ascend the steps of the Palace.) (Enter the Count.)

COUNT: How still the night! In its silence
The queen is, doubtless, wrapped in sleep;
But her attendant will keep watch.
Oh, Leonora! You sleep not, I know,
By the tremulous light of the lamp
Which I see through the casement.
Ah me! the love I feel
Throbs within each vein!—I come!
At your feet I will throw myself!—
Oh, what a blissful moment is this!
(Goaded by his passion, he rushes to the steps, but is arrested by hearing the tones of a lute.)
The troubadour!—Oh, revenge!

MANRICO: (Without). Ah! though deserted by all on earth,
And though by fortune deemed worth nothing,
Yet one dear hope remains,
For the troubadour!
If but that heart be his,
That heart so warm and pure,
Greater than any king
Is the troubadour!

COUNT: What says he!—Oh, jealousy,
Deceive not my ears.—But she comes.
(Draws his cloak about him.)
(Enter LEONORA).

LEONORA: (Quickly approaching the Count.) My beloved one!

COUNT: (Aside). What shall I do?

LEONORA: Più dell' usato
È tarda l' ora: io ne contai gl' instanti
Coi palpiti del core!—Alfin ti guida
Pietoso amor tra queste braccia.

LA VOCE DEL TROVATORE: Infida!
(La luna mostrasi dai nugli, e lascia scorgere una persona, di cui la visiera nasconde il volto.)
(Entra MANRICO.)

LEONORA: (Riconoscendo entrambi, e gettandosi ai piedi di Manrico.) Qual voce!—Ah, dalle tenebre Tratta in errore io fui!
A te credei rivolgere
L' accento, e non a lui—
A te, che l' alma mia
Sol chiede, sol desia!
Io t' amo, il giuro, io t' amo
D' immenso, eterno amor!

CONTE: Ed osi?

MANRICO: (Sollevandola). Ah, più non bramo!

CONTE: Avvampo di furor!
Se un vil non sei, discovriti!

LEONORA: Ohimè!

CONTE: Palesa il nome!

LEONORA: (Sommessamente a Manrico.) Deh, per pietà!—

MANRICO: Ravvisami,— Manrico io son!

CONTE: Tu!—Come?
Insano, temerario!
D' Urgel seguace, a morte
Proscritto, ardisci volgerti
A queste regio porte?

MANRICO: Che tardi!—or via le guardie
Appella, ed il rivale
Al ferro del carnefice
Consegna!

CONTE: Il tuo fatale
Istante assai più prossimo
E', dissenato! Vieni!

LEONORA: Conte!—

CONTE: Al mio sdegno vittima
È forza ch' io ti sveni!

LEONORA: Oh, ciel!—t' arresta!

CONTE: Seguimi!

MANRICO: Andiam!

LEONORA: (A parte). Che mai farò?
Un sol mio grido perdere lo puote!
(Al Conte.)
M' odi!

CONTE: No!
Di geloso amor sprezzato
Arde in me tremendo foco!
Il tuo sangue, o sciagurato,
Ad estinguerlo fia poco!
(A Leonora.)

LEONORA: You are behind your time:
I have numbered the wearying moments
By the beating of my heart!—But, at last,
Love takes pity, and brings you here.

VOICE Of TROUBADOUR: False one!
(The moon diverges from the clouds, and displays to view a man with a visor over his face.)
(MANRICO comes forward.).

LEONORA: (Recognizing each, and falling at the feet of Manrico.)
That voice!—Ah, by the darkness,
I've been brought into error!
For you alone I meant my words,
And not for any other—
For you, and you only,
My soul's desire!
It is you I love—to you I swear
My everlasting love!

COUNT: Dare she say this?

MANRICO: (Raising her). Ah! what more can I desire!

COUNT: I'm consumed with rage!
If you are no coward, uncover yourself!

LEONORA: Alas!

COUNT: Reveal your name!

LEONORA: (Imploring, to Manrico.) For pity's sake!—

MANRICO: Behold me,—
I am Manrico!

COUNT: You!—But how!
Rash daring man!
The accomplice of Urgel, condemned to death.
How dare you appear
Within this royal palace?

MANRICO: Why hesitate?—call the guard here,
And your rival, now before you,
You can consign
To the hands of the headsman.

COUNT: Your last hour
Is nearer, perhaps, than you think!
Villain, draw your sword!

LEONORA: My Lord!—

COUNT: To my rage the victim,
Here will I destroy him!

LEONORA: Oh heaven!—stay, stay!

COUNT: Follow me!

MANRICO: I will do so!

LEONORA: (Aside). What shall I do?
A single cry from me, and he is lost!
(To the Count.)
Pray, hear me!

COUNT: No!
The fury of a love despised
Rages within my breast!
Your blood, unhappy man,
That rage alone can quench!
(To Leonora.)

Dirgli, o folle—io t' amo— ardisti
Ei più vivere non può—
Un accento proferisti,
Che a morir lo condannò!

LEONORA: Un istante almen dia loco
Il tuo sdegno alla ragione:
Io, sol io di tanto foco
Son, pur troppo, la cagione!
Piombi, ah! piombi il tuo ruror
Sulla rea che t' oltraggiò!
Vibra il ferro in questo core,
Che te amar non vuol, non può!

MANRICO: Del suberbo vana è l' ira!
Ei cadrà de me trafitto!
Il mortal che amor t' inspira,
Dall' amor fu reso invitto!
(Al Conte.)
La tua sorte è già compita—
L'ora omai per te suonò!
Il tuo core e la tua vita
Il destino a me serbo!
(I due rivali si allontanano con le spade sguainate; Leonora cade priva di sentimento.)

FINE DELL'ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO SECONDO.

SCENA I.

Un diruto abituro sulle falde d'un monte della Biscaglia; nel fondo, quasi tutto operto, arde un gran fuoco.—I primi albori.

AZUCENA siede presso il fuoco.—MANRICO le sta disteso accanto sopra una coltrice, ed avviluppato nel suo mantello, ha l'elmo ai piedi, e fra le mani la spada, su cui figge immobile lo sguardo.—Una banda di Zingari è sparsa all'intorno.

ZINGARA: Vedi! le fosche notturne spoglie
De' cieli sveste l'immensa volta;
Sembra una vedova che alfin si toglie
I bruni panni ond'era involta.
All'opra—dàgli, martella!
Che' del gitano i giorni abbellla, La Zingarella!
(Dànno di piglio ai loro ferri di mestiere: al misurato tempestar dei martelli cadenti sulle incudini, ed uomini e donne e tutti in un tempo in fine intuonano la cantilena seguente):

UOMINI: (Alle donne, sostando un poco dal lavoro.) Versami un tratto: lena e coraggio
Il corpo e l'anima traggon dal bere.
(Le donne mescono ad essi in rozze coppe).

To him you have declared your love,—
Can I allow him still to live?
You have the words pronounced
Which to death have condemned him!

LEONORA: Let your anger
By reason be subdued for a moment:
It is I alone encouraged him
To offer homage to me!
Let your vengeance light on me,—
It is my offense his loving me!
Your sword may pierce my heart,
But it cannot feel love for you!

MANRICO: I scorn his pride and anger;
By this hand he shall fall!
The mortal by your love exalted Invincible must be!
(To the Count.)
Your fate is determined already—
Your hours are numbered already!
Over your life, as over your love,
Fate now gives me dominion!
(The rivals retire with their swords drawn; Leonora falls senseless.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

A Dwelling in the Ruins of a House at the Foot of a Mountain in Biscay; within it, fully in view, a large Fire.—Day breaking.

AZUCENA discovered, sitting near the fire.—MANRICO is lying near her, wrapped in a large cloak, his helmet at his feet, and his sword grasped in his hand.—Gipsies, in various positions, fill up the scene.

GIPSIES: See! the sombre hues of night
Depart from the face of heaven:
Thus the widow casts away
The tokens of her bereavement.
To our work—each to his hammer!
Who is it makes the gipsy life so gay? It is the Gitana!
(All take up their tools: to the measured clang of the hammers, first the Males, and then the Females, and ultimately all in chorus, sing the following:)

MEN: (To the Women, ceasing from their work.) Fill up my cup: both body and soul
By generous drink are refreshed.
(The Women hand them drink, in rustic cups.)

TUTTI: Oh, guarda, guarda! del sole un raggio Brilla più vivido nel tuo bicchiere! All'opra, all'opra—dàgli, martella Quale a voi splende propizia stella La Zingarella!	ALL: Oh, look, look here! the rising sunlight shines More brightly in our cups! To work, to work—the hammers hurl! Who is it makes our lives so gay? It is the Gitana!
AZUCENA: (Cantaigli Zingari le si fanno allato.) Stride la vampa!— La folla indomita Corre a quel fuoco Lieta in sembianza; Urli di gioia D'intorno echeggiano Cinta di sgherri Donna s'avanza! Sinistra splende, Sui volti orribili La tetra firamma Che s'alza al ciel! Stride la vampa, giunge la vittima Nero-vestita, discinta e scalza! Grido feroce di morte levasi; L'eco il ripete di balza in balza! Sinistra splende sui volti orribili La tetra fiamma che s'alza al ciel!	AZUCENA: (As she begins, the Gipsies gather around her). Fiercely the flames burn! Wildly the eager crowd Rushes forth, with wild shouts, Crying for vengeance: As they surround the fire, Echoed by all around, See! that pale woman, Thrust forth by— Higher and higher still, Reaching towards the sky, Thick wreaths of smoke ascent with speed: The fire each with fear appals. As the flames brighten, in funereal array, Barefooted, the helpless victim comes! Exulting cries from the crowd are heard, From hill to hill in echoes passed! On the beholders' faces the flame And smoke a ghastly hue overspread!
LA ZINGARA: Mesta è la tua canzon!	GIPSIES: A song of sadness, truly!
AZUCENA: Del pari mesta Che la storia funesta Da cui tragge argomento! (Rivolge il capo dalla parte di Manrico, e mormora cupamente) Mi vendica—mi vendica!	AZUCENA: Not more sad Than the terrible story From which it had its origin! (Turning towards Manrico, she whispers mournfully:) Vengeance—I must have vengeance!
MANRICO: (A parte). L'arcana Parola ognor!	MANRICO: (Aside). Again uttering These mysterious words!
VECCHIO ZING: Compagni, avanza il giorno: A procacciarci un pan, su su!—scendiamo Per le propinque ville.	ELDERLY GIPSY: Companions, the day advances: We must away, our bread to seek Among the neighbouring villages.
UOMINI: Andiamo. (Ripongono sollecitamente nei sacchi i loro arnesi).	MEN: Ay, let us go. (They put away their tools.)
DONNE: Andiamo. (Tutti scendono alla rinfusa giù per la china: tratto tratto e sempre a maggior distanza, odesi il loro conto).	WOMEN: Ay, let us go. (All ascend the mountain, singing: the sounds become piano by degrees, as they disappear in the distance.)
ZINGARA: Chi del gitano i giorni abbella? La Zingarella!	GIPSIES: Who makes the gipsy's life so gay? The Gitana!
MANRICO: (sorgendo) Soli or siamo, deh, narra Quella storia funesta.	MANRICO: (Rising). Now we are alone, pray tell me The whole of this dismal story.
AZUCENA: E tu la ignori, Tu pur!—Ma giovinetto i passi tuoi D'ambizion lo sprone Lungi traea! Dell'ava il fine acerbo E' quella storia, la incolpo' superbo Conte di malefizio, onde asseria Colto un bambin suo figlio, essa bruciata Fu dov'arde or quel foco!	AZUCENA: You know it Already?—It is true you were young When ambition drew you from me! The story is of an infant's evil end: Its haughty father charged my mother With sorcery practiced upon his child;— For that he caused her to be burned, Just where you now behold that fire!
MANRICO: Ahi! sciagurata! (Rifuggendo con raccapriccio dalla fiammma).	MANRICO: Ah! how horrible! (Looking towards the fire shudderingly.)
AZUCENA: Condotta ell'era in ceppi al suo destin tremendo Col figlio, teco in braccio, io la seguia piangendo: Infino ad esse un varco tentai, ma invano, aprirmi. Invan tento' la misera fermarsi, e benedirmi! Che, fra bestemmie oscene, pungendola coi ferri Al rogo la cacciavano gli scellerati sgherri! Allor, con tronco accento, mi vendica! esclamo'. Quel detto un'eco eterna in questo cor lascio'.	AZUCENA: In fetters they dragged her to her woeful fate: With you in my arms, weeping, I followed. In vain I strove to penetrate the crowd; In vain she prayed for time to bless her child; The soldiers with their lances drove her on, Amid brutal insults, to the flaming pile, While, in accent wild, she cried, 'Avenge me!' For ever in my heart will those words abide.
MANRICO: La vendicasti!	MANRICO: And did you avenge her?
AZUCENA: Il figlio giunsi a rapir del Conte; Lo trascinai qui meco, le fiamme ardean gia' pronte.	AZUCENA: The Count's young son I seized upon: I ran here, where the fire was ready blazing.
MANRICO: Le fiamme?—Oh, ciel!—Tu forse . . .	MANRICO: The fire?—oh, heaven!—you could not—
AZUCENA: Ei distruggeasi in pianto— Io mi sentivo il cor dilaniato, infranto! Quand'ecco agli egri spirti, come in un sogno, apparve La vision ferale di spaventose larve!— Gli sgherri ed il supplizio! La madre smorta in volto— Scalza, discinta! il grido, il noto grido ascolto, Mi vendica! La mano convulsa tendo, stringo La vittima—nel foco la traggo, la sospingo! Cessa il fatal delirio, l'orrida scena fugge— La fiamma sol divampa, e la sua preda strugge! Pur volgo intorno il guardo, e innanzi a me vegg'io Dell'empio Conte il figlio!	AZUCENA: The helpless infant screamed, And my heart was with pity touched! In a sudden trance I was absorbed; then Dreadful phantoms through my brain careered; The soldiers, the flaming pile, my mother pale For mercy praying;—amidst it all, The well-remembered cry for vengeance! Convulsively in my hand clenched The fated boy, and in the fire I hurled him: The flames alone remained with their struggling victim;— The living child of the accursed Count! I looked around, and beheld, approaching me,
MANRICO: Ah! come?	MANRICO: Ah! how was this?
AZUCENA: Il figlio mio— Mio figlio—aveva bruciato!	AZUCENA: It was my own son— My own darling boy—that I had burned!
MANRICO: Che dici—quale orror!	MANRICO: What did you say? It is too horrible!
AZUCENA: Sul capo mio le chiome sento drizzarsi ancor! (Azucena ricade trambasciata sul proprio seggio: Manrico ammutisce colpito d'orrore e di sorpresa.—Momenti di silenzio.)	AZUCENA: Even now I feel maddened with anguish! (Azucena falls, fainting, on her seat: Manrico, overwhelmed with surprise and horror, remains for some moments in silence.)
MANRICO: Non son tuo figlio?— E chi son io, chi dunque?	MANRICO: I, then, am not your son?— Tell me who I am!

AZUCENA: (Con sollecitudine di chi cerca emendare involontario fallo.)
Tu sei mio figlio!

MANRICO: Eppur dicesti—

AZUCENA: Ah! forse—
Che vuoi!—Quando al pensier s'affaccia il truce
Caso, lo spirto intenebrato pone
Stolte parole sul mio labbro.—Madre
Tenera madre non m'avesti ognora?

MANRICO: Potrei negarlo?

AZUCENA: A me, se vivi ancora,
Nol dei?—Notturna, nei pugnati campi
Di Pelilla, ove spento
Fama ti disse, a darti
Sepoltura non mossi? La fuggente
Aura vital no iscovri, nel seno
Non l'arrestò materno affetto?—E quante
Cure non spesi a risanar le tante Ferite!—

MANRICO: (con nobile orgoglio)
Che portai quel di fatale!
Ma tutte qui, nel petto? Io sol, fra mille
Già sbandati, al nemico
Volgendo ancor la faccia! Il rio De Luna,
Su me piombò col suo drapello: io caddi,
Però, da forte io caddi!

AZUCENA: Ecco mercede
Ai giorni, che l'infame
Nel singolar certame
Ebbe salvi da te!—qual t'acciecava
Strana pietà per esso?

MANRICO: Oh, madre, non saprei dirlo a me stesso!
Mal reggendo all'aspro assalto,
Ei già tocco il suolo avea:
Balenava il colpo in alto
Che trafiggerlo dovea.
Quando arresta un moto arcano,
Nel discender questa mano!
Le mie fibre acuto gelo
Fa repente abbrividir!
Mentre un grido vien dal cielo,
Che mi dice: non ferir.

AZUCENA: Ma nell'alma dell'ingrato
Non parlo' del cielo il detto!
Oh! se ancor ti spinge il fato

AZUCENA: (Hastily, as if to repair an involuntary admission.)
You are my son!

MANRICO: But you have just said—

AZUCENA: Ah! perhaps so—
What would you?—When to my mind
That awful scene occurs, sometimes
I know not what foolish things I say.
Your mother?—Have I not ever been to you a tender mother?

MANRICO: Have I ever denied it?

AZUCENA: And it is not through me
That you are living now?—Was it not I,
When report had numbered you with the dead
Who, in the dreariest hours of night,
Traversed the battle-field of Pelilla,
With my own hands to give you burial?
The vital spark still lingering in your breast
I found; and a mother's love revived it!
Who was it healed your many wounds?

MANRICO: (Proudly). All on that fatal day received!
And all in the breast!—I alone stood firm,
While thousands turned and fled!
The base De Luna, with his whole squadron,
Rushed on me: I fell,
But like a soldier did I fall?

AZUCENA: Such was his gratitude
For the life spared to him,
Though forfeited in single combat.
What strange infatuation was it
That thus blinded your reason!

MANRICO: Oh, mother, I know not how it was!
When contending, my arms proved victorious:
Struck to the earth, and at my mercy lying,
One stroke of vengeance on that form inglorious,
Pity alone restrained, no longer me defying.
Some, resistless power, withheld the arm uplifted;
Chilled and nerveless, it fell drooping at my side;
And I thought a mighty voice on high cried,
'Hold, and slay him not!'
Heeding its mandate—trembling with terror
Once again I heard the cry,
'Withhold your arm—slay him not!'

AZUCENA: But in the breast of that ingrate
Never was yet heard the voice of heaven!

A pugnar col maledetto,
Compi, o figlio, qual d'un Dio,
Compi allor il cenno mio:
Sino all'elsa questa lama
Vibra, immergi all'empio in cor!
(Odesi un prolungato suono di corno.)

MANRICO: L'usato messo Ruiz invia,
Forse.
(Dà fiato anch'esso al corno che tiene ad armacollo.)

AZUCENA: Mi vendica!
(Resta concentrata quasi inconsapevole di cio che succede)
(Entra il Messo.)

MANRICO: (al Messo) Inoltra il pie'.
Guerresco evento dimmi, seguia?
(Porgendo il foglio, che Manrico legge.)

MANRICO:
"In nostra possa e' Castellor; ne dei
Tu per cenno del Prence,
Vigilar le difese. Ove ti e' dato,
Affrettati a venir. Giunta la sera
Tratta in inganno di tua morte al grido,
Nel vicin claustro della croce il velo
Cingerà Leonora." (Con dolorosa esclamazione.)
Oh, giusto cielo!

AZUCENA: (scuotendosi) Che fia!

MANRICO: (al Messo) Veloce scendi la balza,
Ed un cavallo a me provvedi.

MESSO: Corro.

AZUCENA: (frapponendosi) Manrico!

MANRICO: Il tempo incalza—
Vola; m'aspetta del colle a' piedi.

AZUCENA: (Il Messo parte, affrettatamente.) E speri, e vuoi?

MANRICO: (a parte) Perderla!—
Oh, ambascia!
Perder quell'angelo!

AZUCENA: (a parte) E' fuor di sè!

MANRICO: Addio!
(Postosi l'elmo sul capo, ed afferrando il mantello.)

AZUCENA: No—ferma—odi!

MANRICO: Mi lascia!

AZUCENA: (autorevole) Ferma, son io che parlo a te!
Perigliarti ancor languente
Per cammin selvaggio de ermo!
Le ferite vuoi, demente!

Oh! should it ever again befall you
That man to encounter in battle,
Fulfill, as you would obey your God,
The command your mother now gives you:
Within the heart of the craven wretch
Let your dagger be buried to the hilt!
(The sound of a trumpet is heard.)

MANRICO: The accustomed messenger from Ruiz, Perhaps.
(Sounds the horn suspended from his neck.)

AZUCENA: Now shall I be avenged!
(She remains absorbed in thought, and almost unconscious of what follows.)
(Enter a Messenger.)

MANRICO: (To the Messenger.)
Approach. Tell me,
Has any engagement taken place?
(Presenting a letter, which Manrico reads.)

MANRICO: (Reading). "Castellor is in our power;
You, by order of the Prince, are chosen Henceforth to defend it. Waver not,
But come here, without delay.
Deceived by false rumors of your death,
This night, in a neighboring convent,
Leonora takes the veil."
(In despairing tones.) Oh, just heaven!

AZUCENA: (Recovering). What means this?

MANRICO: (To Messenger).
Quickly to the plain descend,
And bring me here a horse.

MESSENGER: I go.

AZUCENA: (Interposing). Manrico!

MANRICO: Be quick—time presses;
At the foot of the hill await my coming.
(Exit Messenger, hurriedly.)

AZUCENA: What would you do?

MANRICO: (Aside). To lose her!—
Oh, torment!
To lose that angel!

AZUCENA: (Aside). He seems beside himself!

MANRICO: Farewell!
(Puts on his helmet, and wraps his cloak around him.)

AZUCENA: No—stop—listen!

MANRICO: Leave me now!

AZUCENA: (Authoritatively).
Stay, it is I who speak to you!
While yet languishing, do not expose yourself
On a road so cold and desolate!

Riaprir del petto infermo?
NO, soffrirlo non poss'io,
Il tuo sangue è sangue mio!
Ogni stilla che ne versi
Tu la spremi dal mio cor!

MANRICO: Un momento puo' involarmi
Il mio ben, la mia speranza!
No, che basti ad arrestarmi,
Terra e ciel non han possanza.
Ah, mi sgombra, o madre i passi
Guai per te, s'io qui retassi;
Tu vedresti ai piedi tuoi
Spento il figlio di dolor!

AZUCENA: No, soffrirlo non poss'io

MANRICO: Guai per te, s'io qui restassi! . . .

AZUCENA: No, soffrirlo non poss'io,
Il tuo sangue? sangue mio!

MANRICO: Tu vedresti a' piedi tuoi
Spento il figlio di dolor!
(Si allontana, indarno trattenuto da Azucena.)

SCENA II.

Chiostro d'un cenobio, in vicinanza di Castellor.—E' notte.

Il CONTE DI LUNA, FERRANDO, ed alcuni seguaci, ed avviluppati nei loro mantelli inoltrandosi cautamente.

CONTE: Tutto e' deserto; ne' per l'aura ancora
Suona l'usato carme.
In tempo io guingo!

FERRANDO: Ardita opra, o signore, Imprendi.

CONTE: Ardita, e quel furente amore
Ed irritato orgoglio
Chiesero a me. Spento il rival, caduto
Ogni ostacol sembrava a' miei desiri;
Novello e più possente ella ne appresta—
L'altare!—Ah, no! non fia
D'altri Leonora—Leonora è mia!
Il balen del suo sorriso
D'una stella vince il raggio!
Il fulgor del suo bel viso
Nuovo infonde, a me coraggio.
Ah, l'amor, l'amore ond'ardo
Le favelli in mio favor! . . .
Sperda il sole d'un suo sguardo
La tempesta del mio cor.
(Odesi il rintocco de' sacri bronzi.)
Quel suono?—Oh, ciel!

Thus harshly you must not renew
Wounds in a body still so weak!
In the same veins flow your blood and mine,
I conjure you to remember!
Every drop that you shed
Is drawn from out my heart.

MANRICO: Ah, no! in vain—I must away,
One little fleeting moment may
Deprive me of, while here I stay.
This heart's own long-loved treasure.
Ah! mother dear, no longer try
To check my steps when I would fly;
I'd freely die—for her love.
I must, I must away!

AZUCENA: Ah, no, I will not suffer you to depart
From me.

MANRICO: Woe for you,
Should I remain here!

AZUCENA: No, I cannot suffer you to depart—
Your blood is my blood!

MANRICO: Your son at your feet
Will die of grief.
(Exit, Azucena vainly striving to detain him.)

SCENE II.

(The Cloisters of a Convent, in the vicinity of Castellor.—Night.)

Enter the COUNT DE LUNA. FERRANDO, and Followers, enveloped in cloaks, and advancing with caution.

COUNT: It is still; I do not even hear
The accustomed evening hymn.
I have arrived in time!

FERRANDO: A daring deed this, my Lord,
You have in hand.

COUNT: Daring, indeed, such as raging love
And wounded pride demand of me.
My rival dead, to my heart's longing
All obstacles appeared removed.
But now a greater one arises:
The altar!—Ah, no! even the altar
Shall not have her—Leonora shall be mine!
Brighter than the stars of heaven
Her bright eyes emit their glances!
Her fair cheek, the rose and lily
Sweetly blending,
Sweetly blending their entrances.
Yes, her glance with love inspires me;
Never from this breast it will depart!—
Soothe dear maid, the flame that burns me;
Still the tempest, still the tempest in my heart.
Yes, her glance with passion fires me;

FERRANDO: La squilla
Vicino il rito annunzia.

CONTE: Ah! pria che giunga
All'altar, si rapisca!

FERRANDO: Oh, bada!

CONTE: Taci!
Non odo!—Andate.—Di quei faggi all'ombra.
Celatevi!
(Ferrando e gli altri seguaci si allontanano.)
Ah! fra poco mia diverra';—
Tutto m'investe un foco!
(Ansioso, guardingo, osserva dalla parte onde deve giungere Leonora; mentre Ferrando e i seguaci dicono sotto voce.)

FERRANDO E GLI ALTRI:
Ardire!—Andiam—celiamoci
Tra l'ombre nel mister.
Ardire!—Andiam—silenzio!
Si compia il suo voler!

CONTE: (Nell'eccesso del furore).
Ora per me fatale,
I tuoi momenti affretta:
La gioja che m'aspetta,
Gioja mortal non è!
Esservi ancor rivale
Non puote all'amor mio!
Per me ti fece Iddio
E ti vorrà per me!
(Raggiunge i suoi nell'interno.)

CORO, interno, di religiose. Ah! se l'orror t'ingombra,
Oh, figlia d'Eva, i rai,
Presso a morir, vedrai
Che un'ombra, un sogno fu;—
Anzi del sogno un'ombra
La speme di quaggiu'!
Vieni, e t'asconda il velo
Ad ogni sguardo umano;
Aura, o pensier mondano
Qui vivo più non è!
Al ciel ti volgi, e il cielo
Si schiuderà per te!
(Entra LEONORA, INES, ed un seguite muliebre.)

LEONORA: Perche? piangete?

DONNE: Ah!—dunque
Tu per sempre ne lasci!

LEONORA: Oh dolci amiche,
Un riso, una speranza, un fior la terra
Non ha per me! Degg'io
Volgermi a quei che degli afflitti e' solo
Conforto, e dopo i penitenti giorni,
Può fra gli eletti al mio perduto bene

Never from this breast it will depart!
(Ringing of the convent bell heard.)
What sound is that?—Oh, heaven!

FERRANDO: The convent bell
An approaching rite announces.

COUNT: Ah! before she reaches the altar,
We must seize her.

FERRANDO: Be careful!

COUNT: Silence! I fear not!—
Come here—beneath the shade of those trees
Conceal yourselves!
(Ferrando and the others retire among the trees.)
In a little time she will be mine;
My raging love assures me of success!
(He looks anxiously in the direction in which Leonora is expected to come, while Ferrando and the others sing in undertones—)

FERRANDO and OTHERS:
What audacity!—But come—let us hide
In the shadows of the trees.
What audacity!—But come—be silent!
His orders we must obey!

COUNT: (Furiously). Oh hour of fate to me,
Hasten your lagging moments.
The joy that I anticipate
Is of more than mortal worth!
No rival can I have;
No one dare to thwart my love!
Fate has designed her for me;
And to me she shall belong!
(He joins his Followers among the trees.)

CHORUS Of NUNS: (Within). Ah! when the shades of night,
Oh, daughter of Eve, shall close on you,
Then will you know that life
Is but a shadow, a fleeting dream;—
Yes, like the passing of a shadow
Are all our earthly hopes!
Come, then, and let this mystic veil
From human eye enshroud you;
From here let care and worldly thought
For evermore be banished.
To heaven now turn and heaven
Will open to receive you!
(Enter LEONORA, with INES and Female attendants.)

LEONORA: Why do you weep?

LADIES: Ah! do you, then,
For ever thus forsake us?

LEONORA: Oh, my dear friends,
No joy, no hope, no other charm
Has now this world for me!
To Him alone who can the afflicted console,
And after many years of penitence,
May in heaven to my beloved unite me,—
To Him I turn. Dry, then your tears,

Ricongiungermi un dì. Tergete i rai,
E guidatemi all'ara. (Incamminandosi.)
(Entra il CONTE, irrompendo ad un tratto.)

CONTE: No, giammai!

DONNE: Il Conte!

LEONORA: Giusto ciel!

CONTE: Per te non havvi
Che l'ara d'Imeneo—

DONNE: Che arditezza!

LEONORA: Cotanto ardia!—
Insano! E qui venisti?

CONTE: A farti mia.
(E sì dicendo scagliasi verso Leonora onde impadronirsi di lei; ma fra esso e la preda trovasi, qual fantasma sorto di sottera, Manrico.—Un grido universale irrompe.)

LEONORA: E deggio?—E posso crederlo?—
Ti veggo a me d'accanto!
E' questo un sogno, un'estasi,
Un sovrumano incanto!
Non regge a tanto giubilo
Rapito il cor, sorpreso!
Sei tu dal ciel disceso,
O in ciel son io con te?

CONTE: Dunque gli estinti lasciano
Di morte il regno eterno
A danno mio rinunzia
Le prede sue l'inferno?
Ma se non mai si fransero
De' giorni tuoi gli stami,
Se vivi e viver brami,
Fuggi da lei, da me.

MANRICO: Nè m'ebbe il ciel, nè l'orrido
Varco infernal sentiero—
Infami sgherri vibrano
Colpi mortali, vero!
Potenza irresistibile
Hanno de' fiumi l'onde;
Ma gli empi un Dio confonde,
Quel Dio soccorse a me!

DONNE: (a Leonora) Il cielo in cui fidasti, Pietade avea di te.

FER. e SEG. (Al Conte.) Tu col destin contrasti:
Suo difensore egli è.
(Entra RUIZ, seguito da lunga tratta di armati.)

RUIZ: Urgel viva!

MANRICO: Miei prodi guerrieri!

RUIZ: Vieni.

MANRICO: (a Leonora) Donna, mi segui.

CONTE: (opponendosi) E tu speri?

LEONORA: Oh!

MANRICO: (Al Conte.) T'arretra.

And lead me to the altar.
(About to proceed.)
(Enter the COUNT, suddenly, from the wood.)

COUNT: No, never!

LADIES: The Count!

LEONORA: Merciful heaven!

COUNT: For you there is
No altar save that of Hymen!

LADIES: What boldness!

LEONORA: Rash man! for what do you come?

COUNT: To make you mine
(On saying so, he approaches, and seizes Leonora; but Manrico appears, like a phantom, and places himself between them.—General consternation.).

LEONORA: Can it be?—may I believe my eyes?
Is it you I see beside me?
Is this a waking dream, a phantasy,
A vision superhuman?
My heart can scarcely control
The joy of this surprise!
Oh! are you descended from heaven,
Or to heaven am I raised with you?

COUNT: Can then, the dead thus escape
The eternal regions of the dead?
For my loss and vexation
Does hell thus give up its prey?
But, if the thread of life
Has not been broken in you;
If you still live, and hope to live,
Fly alike from her and from me.

MANRICO: Nor heaven nor earth as yet
My earthly course has closed,
Although against my life
A vile traitor has plotted!
Wild and irresistible
Are the waves of the ocean,
But the God who the wicked curbs,
That God has sheltered me!

LADIES: (To Leonora). Heaven, on whom you have relied,
Has taken pity on you.

FERRANDO and FOLLOWERS: (To the Count.) Vainly against fate you strive;
For fate has been his protector.
(Enter RUIZ, followed by a Company of Soldiers.)

RUIZ: Long live Urgal!

MANRICO: My brave companions!

RUIZ: Come with us.

MANRICO: Lady, follow me.

COUNT: (Opposing him). Dare you ask it?

LEONORA: Oh!

MANRICO: (to the Count). Stop there!

CONTE: Involarmi costei!
No!
(Sguainando la spada.)

RUIZ E ARMATI: Vaneggi!
(Accerchiando il Conte.)

FERRANDO E SEGUACI: Che tenti, signor!
(Il Conte è disarmato da quei di Ruiz.)

CONTE: De ragione ogni lumi perdei!
(Con gesti ed accenti di maniaco furore.)

LEONORA: (M'atterrisce.)

COUNT: Ho lo furie nel cor!

RUIZ E ARMATI: Vieni; è lieta la sorte per te.
(A Manrico.)

FERRENDO E SERGUACI: Cedi; or ceder viltade non è!
(Manrico tragge seco Leonora—il Conte è respinto, le donne rifuggono al cenobio—scende subito la tela.)

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

ATTO III.

Il Figlio Della Zingara.

SCENA I.

Accampamento—A destra, il padiglione del Conte Di Luna, su cui sventola la bandiera in segno di supremo comando—da lungi Torreggia Castellor.—Scolte di uomini d'arme da per tutto; altri giocano, altri forbiscono le armi, altri passeggiano.

(Entra Ferrando, dal padiglione del Conte.)

ALCUNI UOMINI D'ARME: Or co' dadi, ma fra poco
Giocherem ben altro gioco!
Questo acciar, dal sangue or terso,
Fia di sangue in breve asperso!
(Odonsi strumenti guerrieri; tutti si volgono là dove e avanza il suono.)

ALCUNI: Il soccorso dimandato!
(Un grosso drappello di balestrieri, in completa armatura traversa il campo.)

ALTRI: Han l'aspetto del valor!

TUTTI: Più l'assalto ritardato
Or non fia di Castellor.

COUNT: Would you deprive me of her?
No!
(Drawing his sword.)

RUIZ AND SOLDIERS: He raves!
(Surrounding the Count.)

FERRANDO AND FOLLOWERS: What are you saying, sir?
(The Count is disarmed by the soldiers of Ruiz.)

COUNT: All my reason is lost in fury
(with gestures and accents of fury.)

LEONORA: (He frightens me!)

COUNT: Furies dwell in my heart!

RUIZ AND SOLDIERS: Come then, a future of smiles waits for you
(To Manrico.)

FERRANDO AND FOLLOWERS: Yield, since yielding implies no shame.
(Exit Manrico, leading Leonora—The Count is driven back, the ladies retreat to the Covent, as the curtain falls.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III.

The Gipsy's Son.

SCENE I.

A camp. On the right, the tent of the Count di Luna, on which is displayed a banner, indicative of his supremacy. The fortress of Castellor seen in the distance. The scene full of Soldiers, some playing, some polishing their accoutrements, some walking in apparent conversation, while others are on duty as Sentinels.

(Enter Ferrando, from the Tent of the Count.)

SOME OF THE SOLDIERS: Now with dice, may fortune speed us;
Other games will shortly need us!
From our swords we burnish this blood,
Coming deeds will furnish fresh stains.
(Sounds of warlike instruments are heard; all start and turn towards the sounds.)

SOME SOLDIERS: Lo! they come praying for succor!
(A strong band of soldiers crosses the camp.)

OTHER SOLDIERS: Still, they make a brave display!

ALL: Let us, without more delaying attack Castellor today.

FERRANDO: Sì prodi amici; al di novello, è mente Del capitan la rôcca Investir da ogni parte. Colà pingue bottino Certezza è rinvenir, più che speranza. Si vinca, è nostro.	FERRANDO: Yes, brave companions; at dawn, tomorrow, Our leader has now resolved On storming the fortress on all sides. We're sure to find great booty within its walls; more than hopeful; If conquered, it is ours!
UOMINI D'ARME: Tu c'inviti a danza!	SOME OF THE SOLDIERS: Pleasure invites us there.
FERRANDO e il CORO: Squilli, echeggi la tromba guerriera, Chiami all'armi, alla pugna, all'assalto; Sia domani la nostra bandiera Di quei merli piantata sull'alto. No, giammai non sorrise vittoria Di piu liete speranze finor! Ivi l'util ci aspetta e la gloria; Ivi opimi la preda e l'onor! (Entra il CONTE, uscito dalla tenda, e volge uno sguardo bieco a Castellor.	FERRANDO and CHORUS: Hark! now the trumpet is sounding the call to arms! Then let us haste to meet the foe in battle; Heeding no danger, and braving all in war's alarms, While sabres gleam, and flashing guns loud rattle. Soon shall our flag wave in triumph over the tower, And the castle with its treasure be our prize! Victory upon us her laurels soon will shower; Then to arms, my comrades, all danger we despise! Enter the COUNT, from the tent: he turns a sinister glance toward Castellor.
CONTE: In braccio al mio rival!—Questo pensiero Come persecutor demone ovunque M'inseque! in braccio al mio rival!— Ma corro, surta appena l'aurora, Io corro a separarvi.—Oh, Leonora! (Odonsi tumulti.) (Entra FERRANDO.)	COUNT: In the arms of my rival!—The thought Pursues me like a living demon! In the arms of my rival!—I'll pursue them, And, before the dawn of another day, They shall be parted.—Oh, Leonora! (Noise without.) (Enter FERRANDO.)
CONTE: Che fu?	COUNT: What is it?
FERRANDO: D'appresso il campo S'aggirava una zingara: sorpresa Da' nostri esploratori, Si volse in fuga; essi, a ragion temendo Una spia nella trista, L'inseguir.	FERRANDO: Near to the camp A gipsy has been hovering; Discovered by our sentinels, She tried to escape; but the sentinels, Taking her for a spy, Followed her.
CONTE: Fu raggiunta?	COUNT: Did they take her?
FERRANDO: E presa.	FERRANDO: They did.
CONTE: Vista l'hai tu?	COUNT: Have you seen her?
FERRANDO: No: della scorta Il condottier m'apprese L'evento. (Tumulto piu' vicino)	FERRANDO: No: the conductor Of the court apprised me Of the fact.
CONTE: Eccola. (Entra AZUCENA. Con le mani avvinte, e' trascinata dagli esploratori.—Un codazzo d'altri soldati.)	COUNT: Here she comes. (Enter AZUCENA, with her hands tied, conducted by a guard of Soldiers—other Soldiers following.)
ESPLORATORI: Innanzi, o strega, innanzi!	SOLDIERS: Go forward, witch, go forward!
AZUCENA: Aita?—Mi lasciate?— Oh, furibondi! Che mal fec'io?	AZUCENA: Help!—release me!— Oh, madmen, What harm have I done?
CONTE: S'appressi. (Azucena è tratta innanzi al Conte.) A me rispondi, E tremi dal mentri!	COUNT: Let her approach. (Azucena is led forward.) Now reply to me, And beware if you lie!
AZUCENA: Chiedi.	AZUCENA: Interrogate me.
CONTE: Ove vai?	COUNT: Where were you going?
AZUCENA: Nol so.	AZUCENA: I know not.
CONTE: Che?	COUNT: How?
AZUCENA: D'una zingara è costume Muover senza disegno Il passo vagabondo, Ed è suo tetto il ciel, sua patria il mondo.	AZUCENA: It is the gipsy custom To wander without any settled object, The whole world for their country, The canopy of heaven their only roof.
CONTE: E vieni?	COUNT: From where have you come?
AZUCENA: Da Biscaglia, ove finora Le sterili montagne ebbi ricetto.	AZUCENA: From Biscay, where, till lately, Her barren mountains were my home.
CONTE: (a parte) Da Biscaglia, ove finora . . .	COUNT: (Aside). From Biscay, says she?
AZUCENA: Oh, Dio! Oh, Dio!	AZUCENA: Oh, heaven! Oh, heaven!
CORO: Urla pure!	CHORUS: Let her howl on!
AZUCENA: E tu non m'odi, Oh, Manrico,—oh, figlio mio? Non soccorri all'infelice Madre tua!	AZUCENA: And you did not hear me, Oh, Manrico,—oh, my son! You did not succour bring To your unhappy mother!
CONTE: Sarebbe ver? Di Manrico genitrice!	COUNT: Can it be true? She the mother of Manrico!
FERRANDO: Trema!	FERRANDO: Tremble!
CONTE: Oh sorte, in mio poter!	COUNT: Oh, fate! and she in my power!
AZUCENA: Deh, rallentate, o barbari, Le acerbe mie ritorte— Questo crudel supplizio E' prolongata morte! D'iniquo genitore Empio figliuol peggiore, Trema, v'è Dio pe' miseri, E Dio ti punirà.	AZUCENA: Ah! relent, you cruel monsters: These cords awhile pray loosen; This torture is so barbarous But adds to the pangs of death! Oh, degenerate son Of an impious father, Tremble: there is a God of the forlorn, And that God will punish you?
CONTE: Tue parole, o turpe zingara! Colui, quel seduttore! Potrò col tuo supplizio Ferirlo in mezzo al core! Gioja m'inonda il petto, Cui non esprime il detto! Meco il fraterno cenere Piena vendetta avra'!	COUNT: He is your son, then, infamous witch! Your progeny, the vile seducer! Can I, then, in punishing you, Strike anguish into his heart? The joy which at that I feel Is more than I can tell! Now shall my brother's ashes Be terribly avenged!
FER. e CORO: Infame, pira sorgere, Empia, vedrai tra poco— Nè solo tuo supplizio Sarà l'orrendo foco! Le vampe dell'inferno Ivi penare ed ardere L'anima tuo dovrà! (Al cenno del Conte, i soldati traggono seco loro Azucena; egli entra nella sua tenda, seguito da Ferrando.)	FERRANDO and CHORUS: Vile gipsy, the fatal pyre You soon shall see arise: Nor will your punishment Terminate that fearful fire: The everlasting flames of hell Your further punishment will be; There, writhing in agony, Your wicked spirit will abide! (At a signal from the Count, the Soldiers drag off Azucena; he then enters the tent, followed by Ferrando.)

SCENA II.

Sala adiacente alla capella in Castellor, con verone in fondo.

SCENE II.

A Saloon adjoining the Chapel in Castellor, with verandah in background.

MANRICO, LEONORA e RUIZ

LEONORA: Quale d'armi fragore
Poc'anzi intesi?

MANRICO: Alto è il periglio!—
Vano
Dissimularlo fora!
Alla novella aurora
Assaliti saremo!

LEONORA: Ahimè!—che dici?

MANRICO: Ma de' nostri nemici
Avrem vittoria.—Lari
Abbiano al loro ardir, brando e coraggio.
(A Ruiz) Tu va. Le belliche opre,
Nell'assenza mia breve, a te commetto.
Che nulla manchi! (Ruiz parte)

LEONORA: Di qual tetra luce
Il nostro imen risplende!

MANRICO: Il presagio funesto,
Deh, sperdi, o cara!

LEONORA: È il posso?

MANRICO: Amor—sublime amore,
In tal istante ti favella al core.
Ah! si, ben mio, coll'essere
Io tuo, tu mia consorte,
Avrò piu l'arma intrepida,
Il braccio avrò più forte.
Ma pur, se nella pagina
De' miei destini è scritto
Ch'io resti fra le vittime,
Dal ferro ostil trafitto,
Fra quegli estremi aneliti,
A te, il pensier verrà,
E solo in ciel precederti,
La morte a me parrà!
(Odesi il suono dell'organo dalla vicina cappella.)
L'onda de' suoni mistici
Pura discende al cor!
Vieni; ci schiude il tempio
Gioje di casto amor!
(Mentre s'avviano giubilanti al tempio, Ruiz sopraggiunge frettoloso.)

RUIZ: Manrico!

MANRICO: Che?

RUIZ: La zingara,
Vieni, tra ceppi mira!

MANRICO: Oh, Dio!

INES: Per man de' barbari
Accesa è già la pira.

MANRICO: (accostandosi al verone) Oh, ciel! mie membra oscillano—
Nube me copre il ciglio!

LEONORA: Tu fremi!

MANRICO: E il deggio. Sappilo,
Io son!

LEONORA: Chi mai?

(MANRICO, LEONORA, and RUIZ discovered.)

LEONORA: What means that din of arms
Which just now reached my ears?

MANRICO: You are in danger!—
It would be useless to deny it!
Before to-morrow's dawn arrive,
We shall be assaulted!

LEONORA: Ah me!—what did you say?

MANRICO: But our foes we shall defeat.
Mightier than their audacity,
Our arms and bravery will prove.
(To Ruiz.)
You, go: the conduct of the war
For a brief time I leave to you.
Let nothing be neglected!
(Exit Ruiz.)

LEONORA: Sad the splendour
That our nuptials shines upon!

MANRICO: You must dispel dismal thoughts and presentiments,
My dearest!

LEONORA: How is that possible?

MANRICO: Love, noble and sublime, in your heart
Let that alone favor find.
Ah! yes, beloved maid, the thought
That you alone are mine
Will cheer my heart and nerve my arm—
Victory on my deeds will shine.
And yet, alas! if destiny
Ordain that I in battle fall,
The thought, dear maid, I die for you,
Will recompense for all!
And my last prayer on earth shall be,
When fading life my soul shall free,
To meet you in eternity,
In bliss supreme over all!
(Tones of an organ heard from adjoining Chapel.)
The sounds of mystic harmony
Let now our hearts overspread!
Come; to us the church tenders
The joys of a chaste love!
(As they are about to enter the Chapel, RUIZ enters, hurriedly.)

RUIZ: Manrico!

MANRICO: What now?

RUIZ: The gipsy,—
They've bound her in chains!

MANRICO: Oh, heaven!

RUIZ: Already the barbarians
Have ignited the fatal pile.

MANRICO: (Approaching the verandah.) Oh, heaven! my limbs all tremble—
A could obscures my sight!

LEONORA: You tremble!

MANRICO: And with reason!
Do you not know that
I am her son?

LEONORA: What did you say?

MANRICO: Suo figlio!
Ah, vili! Il rio spettacolo
Quasi il respir m'invola!
Raduna i nostri—affrettati!
Ruiz—va—torna—vola!
(Ruiz parte.)

Di quella pira! l'orrendo foco
Tutte le fibre m'arse, avvampò!
Empii, spegnetela, o ch'io fra poco
Col sangue vostro la spegnerò.
Ero giò figlio prima d'amarti,
Non puo' frenarmi il tuo martir!
Madre infelice, corro a salvarti
O teco almeno corro a morir!

LEONORA: Non reggo a colpi tanto funesti
Oh, quanto meglio saria morir!
(Entra Ruiz, tornauo gli armati.)

RUIZ: All'armi, all'armi, eccone presti
A pugnar teco, teco a morir!
(Manrico parte, frettoloso, seguito da Ruiz, e dagli armati, mentre odesi dell'interno fragor d'armi e di bellici strumenti.)

FINE DELL'ATTO TERZO

ATTO QUARTO

SCENA I.

Un'ala del palazzo dell' Aliaferia.—All'angolo uno torre, con finestre assicurate da spranghe di ferro.—Notte oscurissima. ii

Si avanzano due persone ammantellate: sono RUIZ e LEONORA.

RUIZ: (sommessamente) Siam giunti:
Ecco la torre, ove di stato
Gemono i prigionieri.—Ah, l'infelice
Ivi fu tratto!

LEONORA: Vanne.
Lasciami, nè timor di me ti prenda—
Salvarlo io potrò, forse.
(Ruiz si allontana.)
Timor di me?—Sicura,
Questa è la mia difesa!
(I suoi occhi figgonsi ad una gemma che la fregia la mano destra.)
In questa oscura notte ravvolta,
Presso a te son io, e tu nol sai! Gemente
Aura, che intorno spiri,
Deh, pietosa gli arreca i miei sospiri.
D'amor sull'ali rosee
Vanne, sospir dolente,
Del prigioniero misero

MANRICO: That I am her son!
Ah wretches!—This sad spectacle
Stifles the breathing within me!
Our forces collect—about it, be quick!
Ruiz—fly—return—depart! (Exit Ruiz)

MANRICO: Ah! sight of horror! see that pile blazing—Demons of fury stand gazing round it!
Madness inspiring, hate now is raging—
Tremble, for vengeance on you shall fall.
Oh! mother dearest, though love may claim me,
Danger, too, threaten, yet I will save you;
Your form shall be snatched from flames consuming,
Or with you, mother, I too will fall!

LEONORA: Against these woes I cannot struggle—
Better it would be, by far, to die!
(Re-enter RUIZ, with Soldiers.)

RUIZ: Speak! command! we are here,
Ready to fight, ready to die for you!
(Manrico rushes off, followed by Ruiz and Soldiers—the clash of arms heard within, as the curtain descends.)

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

A wing of the Palace of Aliaferia—at one end a window barred with iron.—Night, dark and gloomy.

(Two persons advance, enveloped in cloaks: they are RUIZ and LEONORA.)

RUIZ: (In an undertone). This is the place;
In this tower the state prisoners are confined.—
Ah! he was brought here.

LEONORA: Now go.
Let us part: and do not fear for me:
Perhaps I may yet save him.
(Ruiz retires.)
Why fear for me;—I am secure,
For here I carry my defender.
(Casting her eyes on a jewelled ring, which she displays on her right hand.)
In the darkness of night I hover near you,
And you do not know. Yet gentle winds,
That move around me in stillness,
My piteous sighs waft towards him.
Borne on love's own rosy wing,
Speed, my tender sighs, to him;
May they bring comfort to him.

Conforta l'egra mente—
Com'aura di speranza
Alleggia in quella stanza;
La desta alle memorie,
Ai sogni dell'amor.
Ma, deh! non dirgli, improvvido,
Le pene del mio cor!

CORO: Miserere d'un'alma già vicina
Alla partenza che non ha ritorno!
Miserere di lei, bontà divina,
Preda non sia dell'infernal soggiorno!

LEONORA: Quel suon, quelle preci
Solenni, funeste,
Empiron quell'aere
Di cupo terror!
Contende l'ambascia,
Che tutta m'investe,
Al labbro il respiro,
I palpiti al cor!

MANRICO: Ah! che la morte ognora,
E' tarda nel venir
A chi desia morir!

LEONORA: Oh ciel! sento mancarmi!

MANRICO: Addio, addio,
Leonora, addio!

LEONORA: Sull'orrida torre, ah!
par che la morte
Con ali di tenebre librando si va!
Ahi! forse dischiuse gli fian queste porte
Sol quando cadavere già freddo ei sarà!
(Rimane assorta: dopo qualche momento scuotesi, ed è in procinto di partire, allorchè viene dalla torre un gemito, e quindi un mesto suona; ella si ferma.)

MANRICO: (dalla torre) Sconto
col sangue mio,
L'amor che posi in te!
Non ti scordar di me!
Leonora, addio!

LEONORA: Di te, di te scordarmi!
(N'esce il Conte ed alcuni seguaci.—Leonora si pone in disparte.)

CONTE: Udiste? Come albeggi,
La scure al figlio, ed alla madre il
rogo.
(Entrano i seguaci per un piccolo uscio nella torre.)
Abuso io forse di quel poter che pieno
In me trasmise il Prence! A tal mi traggi
Donna per me funesta!—Ov'ella è mai?
Dipresso, Castellor, di lei contezza

Soothe the storm within his breast, Restore sweet hope to cheer his
heart,
While lying in the dungeon's gloom;
Though nothing can heal this bosom's smart,
If death, alas! should be his doom.
But ah! this poor heart can never know joy—
Ah me, it will break, it will break—
It is filled with grief and woe!

CHORUS: Miserere, the death-word of the dying!
There's no return from where his spirit's flying!
Miserere! to heaven for pity calling,
His soul to save from punishment appalling!

LEONORA: That sound and that praying, so sadly betraying,
In terrible accents, a soul must depart!
My breath is impeding, my warm blood receding,
From out of my veins, and from out of my heart.

MANRICO: Alas! that death, as ever,
Lingers in coming nigh,
When one desires, when one desires but to die!

LEONORA: Oh heaven! Hear me,
oh, hear me!

MANRICO: Leonora, adieu, Leonora, adieu!

LEONORA: From that fearful tower death himself
Does expand his dismal wings o'er
me:
Alas! never again will those gates open
Till through them his cold corpse shall be borne.
(For some time she remains absorbed in thought; then, preparing to depart, she is arrested by a groan from the Tower, followed by a plaintive melody.)

MANRICO: (In the Tower). With my life's blood I sanctify
The love I vowed to thee!
Therefore forget not me!
Leonora, fare well!

LEONORA: Said you, love, forget me not!
(Enter the COUNT and his Soldiers.—Leonora retires from sight.)

COUNT: Did you hear me? At the break of day,
The axe for the son, for the mother
the stake.
(The Soldiers enter a small door in the Tower.)
That I am overstepping the power
By the Prince to me entrusted, I admit,—
To such rash acts has this woman led me.
To where can she have fled?—No

Non ebbi, e furo indarno
Tante ricerche e tante!
Oh! dove sei, crudele?

LEONORA: (avanzandosi) A te dinante.

CONTE: Qual voce!—Come! tu, donna?

LEONORA: Il vedi.

CONTE: A che venisti?

LEONORA: Egli è già presso
All'ora estrema, e tu lo chiedi?

CONTE: Osar potresti?

LEONORA: Ah, sì, per esso
Pietà domando!

CONTE: Che! tu deliri!
Io del rivale sentir pietà?

LEONORA: Clemente il Nume a te l'ispiri!

CONTE: E' sol vendetta mio Nume.
Va!
(Leonora si getta disperata ai suoi piedi.)

LEONORA: Mira, di acerbe lagrime
Spargo al tuo piede un rio;
Non basta il pianto? svenami,
Ti bevi il sangue mio.
Calpesta il mio cadavere,
Ma salva il Trovator!

CONTE: Ali! dell'indegno rendere
Vorrei peggior la sorte—
Fra mille atroci spasimi
Centuplicar sua morte—
Pìu l'ami, e pìu terribile
Divampa il mio furor!
(Vuol partire.)

LEONORA: (Si avviticchia ad esso) Conte!

CONTE: Nè cessi?

LEONORA: Grazia!

CONTE: Prezzo non avvi alcuno
Ad ottenerla—scostati!

LEONORA: Uno ve n'ha—sol uno,
Ed io te l'offro.

CONTE: Spiegati,
Qual prezzo, di'?

LEONORA: (Stendendogli la sua destra con dolore.) Me stessa!

CONTE: Ciel! tu dicesti?

LEONORA: E compiere
Saprò la mia promessa.

CONTE: È sogno il mio?

LEONORA: Dischiudimi
La via tra quella mura;
Ch'ei mi oda—che la vittima
Fugga, e son tua.

CONTE: Lo giuri!

news of her,
Since the fall of Castellor, have I heard;
And all searching for her has been in vain!
Oh! cruel one, where are you?

LEONORA: (Advancing). In your presence.

COUNT: That voice!—How! is it you, lady?

LEONORA: You see me.

COUNT: Why have you come here?

LEONORA: Knowing who is doomed to die,
You yet ask this question.

COUNT: Do you dare?

LEONORA: Ah, yes!—to save him,
I humbly pray you.

COUNT: How! are you mad?
For my rival dares ask your pity!

LEONORA: Let Heaven inspire you with mercy!

COUNT: The God of vengeance alone reigns here. Go!
(Leonora casts herself in despair at his feet.)

LEONORA: See how I shed these bitter tears,
Imploring prostrate at your feet—
Wreak not your vengeance upon his head; Oh! grant the this heart's outpouring!
Spare his life—mine I'll give;
For him I'd freely cease to live;—
Yes, yes, I will bless you, and forgive,
If you will spare the Troubadour.

COUNT: Ah! rather would I render,
Were it my power within,
A hundred-fold more terrible
The fate of that vile criminal.
The more of love for him you show,
The fiercer does my fury glow!
(About to go.)

LEONORA: (Clinging to him).
Oh, Count!

COUNT: Desist.

LEONORA: Mercy!

COUNT: No price on earth could move me
To pardon him. Therefore begone!

LEONORA: There is one price—
one, I know,
And I offer that to you.

COUNT: Explain yourself.
What price? Say it.

LEONORA: (Extending her hands in anguish towards him.) Myself!

COUNT: Heaven! what do you say?

LEONORA: What I promise,
I will faithfully perform.

COUNT: Am I in a dream?

LEONORA: Open to my view
The gates of yonder prison:
Let him see me, and depart in safety
And I will be yours.

COUNT: Will you swear it?

LEONORA: Lo giuro a Dio, che l'anima
Tutta mi vede!

CONTE: Olà!
(Correndo all'uscio della torre.—Si presenta un custode.—Mentre il Conte gli parla all'orecchio, Leonara sugge il veleno chiuso nell'anello)

LEONORA: (A parte) M'avrai, ma fredda, esanime Spoglia.

CONTE: (Tornando a Leonora)
Colui vivrà.

LEONORA: (Da sè, alzando gli occhi, cui fan velo lagrime di letizia.) Vivrà! contento e giubilo!
Tu d'esti a me, Signore?
Ma coi frequenti palpiti
Mercè ti rende il core!
Or il mio fine impavida,
Piena di gioja attendo,
Potrò dirgli, morendo,
Salvo tu sei per me!

CONTE: Fra te che parli?
Volgimi, mi volgi il detto ancora,
E mi parrà delirio . . .
Quanto ascoltai finora—
Tu mia, tu mia! ripetilo,
Il dubbio cor, serena—
Ah! ch'io lo credo appena,
Udendolo da te!

LEONORA: Andiam.

CONTE: Giurasti—pensaci!

LEONORA: È sacra la mia fè!
(Entrano nella torre.)

SCENA II.

AZUCENA giacente sopra una specie di rozza coltre, MANRICO seduto a lei dappresso.

MANRICO: Madre, non dormi?

AZUCENA: L'invocai più volte,
Ma fugge il sonno a queste luce prego.

MANRICO: L'aura fredda è molesta
Alle tue membra, forse?

AZUCENA: No: da questa
Tomba di vivi sol fuggir vorrei,
Perchè sento il respiro soffocarmi!

MANRICO: (torcendosi le mani)
Fuggir!

AZUCENA: Non attristarti;
Far di me strazio non potranno crudi!

MANRICO: Ah! come?

LEONORA: Before the God who sees all hearts,
Here I swear to it!

COUNT: Ho! there!
(Going up to the gate of the Tower.—A Guard appears—while the Count is speaking to him, Leonora drinks the poison contained in her ring.)

LEONORA: (Aside). You shall have me,
But not till I am lifeless.

COUNT: (Returning to Leonora).
He shall live!

LEONORA: (Aside, her eyes filled with tears of joy.) Shall live! content and jubilee!
My heart is beating with joy!
Each moment seems a century
While those glad words repeating!
At length my life for him is given;
Death which him awaited
Is mine: my lips, with joy elated,
Shall tell him he is free!

COUNT: What words are these?
Ah, turn to me,
Once more, your promise swearing.
While even delirious I shall be,
If once your love I'm sharing.
You're mine—those words repeat again,
They bring me joy untasted.
Now all the sighs I've wasted
Are recompensed by you,
Ah! all the sighs I've wasted
Now are recompensed by you!

LEONORA: Let us go.

COUNT: Remember what you have sworn.

LEONORA: My word is sacred.
(They enter the Tower.)

SCENE II.

(AZUCENA discovered lying on a tattered mattress, MANRICO seated by the side of her.)

MANRICO: Mother, you do not sleep!

AZUCENA: In vain I invoke sleep,
It will not on these eyes await. I pray.

MANRICO: This air, so cold and moist, perhaps Thy strength overpowers.

AZUCENA: Ah! how I long
To be set free,—from this living tomb
Its air is suffocating to me.

MANRICO: (Wringing his hands.)
Could I but free you!

AZUCENA: Let it not grieve you;
They cannot make my sufferings long.

MANRICO: Ah! why not?

AZUCENA: Vedi? Le sue fosche impronte
M'ha già stampate in fronte
Il dito della morte!

MANRICO: Ahi!

AZUCENA: Troveranno
Un cadavere muto, gelido—anzi
Uno scheletro!

MANRICO: Cessa!

AZUCENA: Non odi?—gente s'appressa!
I carnefici son—vogliono al rogo
Trarmi!—Difendi la tua madre!

MANRICO: Alcuno,
Ti rassicura, qui non volge.

AZUCENA: Il rogo!
Parola orrenda!

MANRICO: Oh, madre!—oh, madre!

AZUCENA: Un giorno
Turba feroce l'ava tua condusse
Al rogo—mira la terribil vampa!
Ella n'è tocca già—l'arso crine
Al ciel manda faville!—
Osserva le pupille
Fuor dell'orbita lor:—Ahi—chi mi toglie
A spettacol sì atroce!
(Cadendo tutta convulsa tra le braccia di Manrico.)

MANRICO: Se m'ami ancor, se voce
Di figlio ha possa di una madre in core,
Ai terrori dell'alma
Oblii cerca nel sonno, e possa e calma
(La conduce presso la coltre.)

AZUCENA: Sì, la stanchezza m'opprime, o figlio.
Alla quiete io chiudo il ciglio;
Ma se del rogo arder si veda
L'orrida fiamma, destami allor!

MANRICO: Riposa, o madre! Iddio conceda
Men tristi immagini al tuo sopor.

AZUCENA: (Tra il sonno e la veglia) Ai nostri monti ritorneremo
L'antica pace ivi godremo!
Tu canterai, sul tuo liuto,
In sonno placido, io dormirò!

MANRICO: Riposa, o madre, io prono e muto
La mente al cielo rivolgerò.

AZUCENA: Tu canterai sul tuo liuto—
In sonno placido, io dormirò!

AZUCENA: Do you not see that on my brow
Already the finger of death has Placed his indelible mark.

MANRICO: Alas!

AZUCENA: Fear not—
Nothing will they find but a corpse,
Cold and silent!

MANRICO: Oh, cease!

AZUCENA: Do you not hear!—there's a noise without!
Here come the torturers,
To drag me to the stake!—Oh, protect your mother!

MANRICO: There's no one!
Calm yourself, no one approaches.

AZUCENA: The fire!
How horrible is that!

MANRICO: Oh, mother!—oh, mother!

AZUCENA: One fearful day
By a brutal crowd your mother's mother
Was sacrificed! The flames I see,
As her hair they wafted in the wind—
See her staring eyes from their orbits start,
As the terrible flames encompass her!
Alas! what demon causes me to behold again
This loathsome sight!
(Sinking in convulsions into the arms of Manrico.)

MANRICO: If you love me—if a son's voice has yet a spell
For a mother's heart,
From your mind banish those fancies,
And seek forgetfulness in sleep.
(He leads her to her resting-place.)

AZUCENA: Yes! my son, with fatigue oppressed,
I will seek some solace in sleep;
But, if again you see that burning pile,
Rouse me quickly from my slumber.

MANRICO: Sleep, mother dear! and may Heaven
From your mind dismiss those horrid thoughts.

AZUCENA: (As she sinks into a half-slumber.) Homeward returning to our green mountain.
We shall enjoy its freshening breezes;
There with your lute again, past joys recounting,
Lull me to sleep as when you were a boy!

MANRICO: Sleep, dearest mother, while I in prayer,
Appealing to heaven, my moments employ.

AZUCENA: There let your lute, past joys recounting,
Lull me to sleep, as when you were a boy!

MANRICO: La menta al cielo rivolgerò!
(Azucena si addormenta; Manrico resta genuflesso accanto a lei.)

SCENA III.

Si apre la porta, entra LEONORA: gli anzidetti, ed in ultimo il CONTE con seguito di armati.

MANRICO: Ciel!—non m'inganno! quel fioce lume!

LEONORA: Son io, Manrico!

MANRICO: Oh, mia Leonora!
Ah, mi concedi, pietoso Nume,
Gioja sì grande, anzi ch'io mora?

LEONORA: Tu non morrai—vengo a salvarti!

MANRICO: Come!—a salvarmi!—
Fia vero?

LEONORA: Addio!
Tronca ogni indugio!—
t'affretta!—parti!
(Accennandogli la porta.)

MANRICO: E tu non vieni!

LEONORA: Restar degg'io!

MANRICO: Restar! . . . .

LEONORA: Deh, fuggi!

MANRICO: No!

LEONORA: Guai se tardi!
(Cercando di trarlo verso l'uscio.)

MANRICO: No!

LEONORA: La tua vita!

MANRICO: Io la disprezzo—
Pur—figgi, o donna, in me gli sguardi!—
Da chi l'avesti!—ed a qual prezzo?—
Parlar non vuoi?—Balen tremendo!—
Dal mio rivale!—intento, intendo!—
Ha quest'infame l'amor venduto—
Venduto un core che mio giurò!

LEONORA: Ahi, come l'ira ti rende cieco!
Ahi, quanto ingiusto, crudel sei meco!
T'arrendi—fuggi, o sei perduto!—
O, il ciel nemmen salvar ti può!
(Leonora è caduta ai piedi di Manrico.)

AZUCENA: (Dormendo) Ai nostri monti ritorneremo—
L'antica pace—ivi godremo!
Tu canterai—sul tuo liuto—
In sonno placido—io dormirò!

MANRICO: Ti scosta.

LEONORA: Non respingermi—
Vedi?—Languenta, oppressa,
Io manco!

MANRICO: Appealing to heaven, my moments employ.
(Azucena yields herself to sleep, while Manrico remains kneeling by her.)

SCENE III.

(A door opens, and LEONORA enters; afterwards the COUNT, followed by a Troop of Soldiers.)

MANRICO: Heaven! does this weak light deceive my eyes?

LEONORA: It is I, Manrico!

MANRICO: Oh, my Leonora!
Ah, do you grant me, kind Heaven,
This joy so great before I die?

LEONORA: You shall not die!—I come to save you!

MANRICO: How?—To save me!—
Can this be true?

LEONORA: Farewell!
There must be no delay! be quick! depart!
(Pointing towards the doorway.)

MANRICO: Do you not go with me?

LEONORA: I must remain here.

MANRICO: Remain!

LEONORA: Will you not go?

MANRICO: No!

LEONORA: Delay will be fatal!
(Endeavoring to drag him to the doorway.)

MANRICO: No!

LEONORA: Your life will be lost!

MANRICO: I care not for that!
Look, lady, look!—Full in my face now look!
Who granted you my life, and what the price?
You do not speak—fearfully you tremble!
Was it my rival?—speak out—tell me all—
To my rival have you sold your love—
That love so often sworn to me?

LEONORA: Ah, how your anger blinds your senses!
You are cruel and unjust to me!
Delay not—quickly begone, or you are lost.
Oh! Heaven itself cannot save you now!
(Falling at the feet of Manrico.)

AZUCENA: (Asleep). Homeward returning to our green mountain,
We shall enjoy its freshening breezes;
There, with your lute again past joys recounting,
Lull me to sleep, as when you were a boy.

MANRICO: Pray, leave me.

LEONORA: Drive me not from you,
Do you not see? I am weak and faint,—
I am sinking!

MANRICO: Va—ti abbomino—
Ii maledico!

LEONORA: Ah, cessa!
Non imprecar; di volgere
Per me la prece a Dio
È questa l'ora!

MANRICO: Un brivido corre nel petto mio!

LEONORA: Manrico! (Cade boccone.)

MANRICO: (Accorrendo a sollevarla.) Donna, svelami—
Narra—

LEONORA: Ho la morte in seno.

MANRICO: La morte!

LEONORA: Ah, fu pìu rapida
La forza del veleno
Ch'io non pensava!

MANRICO: Oh, fulmine!

LEONORA: Senti!—la mano—gelo—
Ma qui—qui foco orribile
Arde! (Toccandosi il petto.)

MANRICO: Che festi?—Oh, cielo!

LEONORA: Prima che d'altri vivere—
Io volli tua morir!

MANRICO: Insano! ed io quest'angelo
Osavo maledir!

LEONORA: Pìu non—resisto!

MANRICO: Ahi, misera!
(Entra il CONTE, arrestandosi sulla soglia.)

LEONORA: Ecco l'istante—io muoio—
Manrico!—Or la tua grazia,
Padre del cielo, imploro!

MANRICO: Insano, ed io quest'angelo
Osavo maledir!

LEONORA: Prima che d'altri vivere,
Io volli tuo morir!
(Spira.)

CONTE: Ah! volle me deludere
E per costui morir!
Sia tratto al ceppo!
(Indicando agli armati Manrico.)

MANRICO: Madre!—Oh, madre, addio!
(Parte tra gli armati.)

AZUCENA: Manrico!—Ov'è mio figlio?
(Destandosi.)

CONTE: A morte ei corre!

AZUCENA: Ah, ferma! m'odi!

CONTE: (Trascinando Azucena presso la finestra.) Vedi?

MANRICO: Go!—I abhor you!
I curse you!

LEONORA: Ah, desist—
This is not the time to curse me,
For my soul now let your prayers
To heaven be directed!

MANRICO: A shivering through my heart courses.

LEONORA: Manrico!
(Falling to the ground.)

MANRICO: (Raising her anxiously.) Lady, what have you done? Tell me.

LEONORA: The hand of death is on me.

MANRICO: Death!

LEONORA: Ah! more rapid than I thought
The fatal drink has proved,
In its deadly purpose!

MANRICO: Oh! terrible blow!

LEONORA: Feel here—already are my hands cold,
But within my bosom a raging fire
Consumes me!
(Putting her hands to her breast.)

MANRICO: Oh! Heavens, what have you done?

LEONORA: Rather than for another to live,
For you I have preferred to die.

MANRICO: Madman! and on this angel
I have maledictions cast!

LEONORA: I cannot struggle any longer!

MANRICO: Unhappy me!
(Enter the COUNT, halting on the threshold.)

LEONORA: My hour is come, and I must die—
Manrico!—Your pardoning mercy,
Great Father of Heaven, I now implore!

MANRICO: Madman! and on this angel
I have maledictions cast!

LEONORA: Rather than for another to live,
I have preferred to die for you!
(Dies.)

COUNT: Ah! she has deceived me, then,
And for him chosen to die.
Let him be brought here in chains.
(Pointing out Manrico to Guards.)

MANRICO: Mother!—Oh, mother, farewell!
(Exit, escorted by the Guards.)

AZUCENA: Manrico!—Oh, where is my son?

COUNT: He has gone to death!

AZUCENA: Ah, stay! stay! hear me!

COUNT: (Dragging her to the window.) Behold!

AZUCENA: Cielo!

CONTE: È spento!

AZUCENA: È spento—hai detto—è spento!
Or dunque ascolta!—Udito
Hai tu mai d'un fratello
Che fu da abbietta zingara
Al padre tuo rapito?
Egli era tuo fratello!

AZUCENA: Oh, heavens!

COUNT: He is no more.

AZUCENA: Is he dead!—do you say he is dead?
Now listen to me. You have heard
That from the palace of his father
You once had a young brother
Who
Was by a gipsy stolen!—
Yonder that brother you behold!

CONTE: Eh! quale orror!

AZUCENA: Sie vendicata, o madre!
(Cade a piè della finestra.)

CONTE: (Inorridito) E vivo ancor!

FINE DELL'OPERA.

COUNT: Alas! how horrible!

AZUCENA: Thus you are avenged,
my mother!
(Falling near the window.)

COUNT: (With horror). And I am doomed to live!

END OF THE OPERA.

La Traviata (1853)

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Francesco Maria Piave (based on Alexandre Dumas the younger's novel, La Dame aux Camélias), was first performed at the Teatro La Fenice in Venice on March 6, 1853. At a dinner party at the home of the beautiful Parisian courtesan Violetta Valéry, Alfredo Germont, who had come to ask about Violetta's health every day when she was ill, makes a toast. Violetta responds, singing in praise of love. The guests depart, and she collapses, coughing. Alfredo stays behind to declare his love for her. Violetta tells him that she will only live a few more months, and that he can come back when the camellia she has given him has faded. Violetta and Alfredo end up living together at her country house. When Alfredo journeys to Paris to prevent Violetta's home from being sold to pay her debts, Alfredo's father pays Violetta a visit. She is ruining his son's life, he says, and implores her to give up the relationship. She gives in, asking only to tell Alfredo herself. Violetta leaves Alfredo, announcing that they are finished. Alfredo finds Violetta at her friend Flora's where she is on the arm of Baron Duphol, her former lover. Duphol gambles with Alfredo and loses. Alfredo confronts Violetta. Desperate, she tells him that she no longer loves him. Alfredo throws all his winnings in her face. His father disowns him, and Baron Duphol challenges Alfredo to a duel.

Time passes. Violetta is close to death and almost broke. She asks her maid, Annina, to give half of her remaining money to the needy. Alfredo's father writes to her, saying that Alfredo knows the whole story. They both wish to ask her for her forgiveness. "Too late," she replies, just as Alfredo enters. They sing of love, and Alfredo's father realizes that she has paid for his demands with her life. Having made peace with both men, she dies.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
Salotto in casa di Violetta; nel fondo è la porta che mette ad altra sala; ve ne sono altre due laterali; a sinistra caminetto con sopra uno specchio.—Nel mezzo è una tavola riccamente imbandita.	The banquet hall of Violetta's house in Paris. In the rear a door opens out onto a drawing room. Doors on either side lead to the rest of the house. On the left is a mantel hung with a mirror; in the center a table lavishly spread.
Violetta seduta su un divano sta discorrendo col Dottore e con alcuni amici, mentre altri vanno ad incontrare quelli che sopraggiungono, tra' quali sono il Barone e Flora al braccio del Marchese.	Violetta, seated on a sofa, is engaged in conversation with the Doctor and several friends. Some of her guests go out to greet the new arrivals among whom are the Baron and Flora, on the arm of the Marquis.
CORO 1: Dell'invito trascorsa è già l'ora— Voi tardaste.	CHORUS 1: It's long after the appointed hour. You are quite late.
CORO 2: Giuocammo da Flora, E giocando quell'ore volàr.	CHORUS 2: We were at Flora's, at cards, And the time seemed to fly as we played.
VIOLETTA: Flora, amici, la notte che resta D'altre gioie qui fate brillar— (Andando loro incontro.) Fra le tazze è più viva la festa.	VIOLETTA: Dearest Flora, my friends, let us light With new joy what is left of the night. (Going toward them.) In the bowl that is flowing is pleasure—
FLORA E MARQUIS: E goder voi potrete?	FLORA and MARQUIS: And you'll share in the fun?
VIOLETTA: Lo voglio; Al piacere m' affido, ed io soglio Con tal farmaco i mali sopir.	VIOLETTA: In full measure! For the dance is my greatest delight And the cure for all anguish and pain.
TUTTI: Sì, la vita s' addoppia al gioir. (Il Visoconte Gastone di Letorieres entrando con Alfredo Germont; servi affaccendati intorno alla mensa.)	ALL: Yes, in pleasure life doubles its gain! (Enter the Viscount de Letorieres, with Alfredo Germont. Servants busy themselves about the banquet table.)
GASTONE: In Alfredo Germont, o signora, Ecco un altro che molto v' onora; Pochi amici a lui simili sono.	GASTONE: In Alfredo Germont you will find Still another admirer—a kind And incomparable friend, I assure you.
VIOLETTA: Mio Visconte, mercè di tal dono. (Dà la mano ad Alfredo, che gliela bacia.)	VIOLETTA: Many thanks for the privilege, Count. (She holds out her hand to Alfredo who kisses it.)
MARQUIS: Caro Alfredo!	MARQUIS: Alfredo!
ALFREDO: Marchese! (Si stringono la mano.)	ALFREDO: Why, it's the Marquis! (They shake hands.)
GASTONE: (Ad Alfredo.) T'ho detto L'amistà qui si intreccia al diletto. (I Servi frattanto avranno imbandite le vivande.)	GASTONE: (Aside to Alfredo) Didn't I tell you?— Here pleasure and friendship are one. (Meanwhile the Servants have been preparing the places for the guests.)
VIOLETTA: (ai Servi.) Pronto è il tutto? (Un Servo accenna di sì.) Miei cari, sedete; È al convito che s' apre ogni cor.	VIOLETTA: Have you done? (One of the Servants nods.) Well, the banquet's begun!
TUTTI: Ben diceste—le cure segrete Fuga sempre l'amico licor. (Siedono in modo che Violetta resti tra Alfredo e Gastone; di fronte vi sarà Flora, tra il Marchese ed il Barone: gli altri siedono a piacere. Vi ha un momento di silenzio: frattanto passano i piatti,	ALL: Do be seated, my friends, And let joy fill your hearts to the brim. Right you are! Why regret and repine When all troubles are banished by wine? (They assume their places at table, Violetta between Alfredo and e Violetta e Gastone parlano sotto voce tra loro.)

GASTONE: Sempre Alfredo a voi pensa.

VIOLETTA: Scherzate.

GASTONE: Egra foste, e ogni dì con affanno
Qui volò, di voi chiese.

VIOLETTA: Cessate.
Nulla son io per lui.

GASTONE: Non v'inganno.

VIOLETTA: (Ad Alfredo.) Vero è dunque?—Onde ciò?—Nol comprendo.

ALFREDO: (Sospirando.) Sì, egli è ver.

VIOLETTA: Le mie grazie vi rendo.
(Al Barone.)
Voi, barone, non feste altrettanto.

BARONE: Vi conosco da un anno soltanto.

VIOLETTA: Ed ei solo da qualche minuto.

FLORA: (Piano al Barone.) Meglio fora, se aveste taciuto.

BARONE: (Piano a Flora.) M' è increscioso quel giovin.

FLORA: Perchè?
A me invece simpatico egli è.

GASTONE: (Ad Alfredo.) E tu dunque non apri più bocca?

MARQUIS: (A Violetta.) E a madama che scuoterlo tocca.

VIOLETTA: Sarò l'Ebe che versa.
(Mesca ad Alfredo.)

ALFREDO: E ch'io bramo
Immortal come quella.
(Con galanteria.)

TUTTI: Beviamo!

GASTONE: O barone, nè un verso, nè un viva
Troverete in quest' ora giuliva?
(Barone accenna di no.)
Dunque a te.
(Ad Alfredo.)

TUTTI: Sì, Sì, un brindisi.

ALFREDO: L'estro non m' arride.

GASTONE: E non sei tu maestro?

ALFREDO: (A Violetta.) Vi fia grato?

VIOLETTA: Sì.

ALFREDO: Sì? L'ho già in cor.
(Si alza.)

MARQUIS: Dunque attenti.

TUTTI: Sì, attenti al cantor.

Gastone. Facing them are Flora, the Marquis and the Baron. The rest distribute themselves as they please. During a momentary lull in the conversation, while the guests are being served, Violetta and Gastone are heard conversing in an undertone.)

GASTONE: Alfredo has thought of you often.

VIOLETTA: What nonsense!

GASTONE: In your illness he hurried here daily
To ask after you.

VIOLETTA: Oh, come now!
What can I be to him!

GASTONE: I'm in earnest.

VIOLETTA: (To Alfredo.) Can it be true?—How so? I'm puzzled, truly.

ALFREDO: (Sighing.) Yes, it is true.

VIOLETTA: Then I am indeed grateful.
(To the Baron.)
You, dear Baron, were not so attentive.

BARON: But I've known you for hardly a year.

VIOLETTA: And he's known me for barely a minute!

FLORA: (Aside to Baron.) Better for you had you held your tongue!

BARON: (Aside to Flora.) I find that young man most annoying.

FLORA: On the contrary, I find him quite charming.

GASTONE: (To Alfredo.) And you—have you no more to say?

MARQUIS: (To Violetta.) Violetta will have to inspire him.

VIOLETTA: I'll be Hebe and pour for you.
(Pours wine for Alfredo.)

ALFREDO: And like her
I would have you immortal.
(Gallantly.)

ALL: To friendship!

GASTONE: You Baron—have you no toast
To enliven this hour of mirth?
(The Baron shakes his head.)
It's up to you, then.
(To Alfredo.)

ALL: Yes, yes! A toast!

ALFREDO: I'm in no vein—

GASTONE: Come, you're pastmaster at it!

ALFREDO: (To Violetta.) Would it please you?

VIOLETTA: Yes.

ALFREDO: Yes? Then I'll be delighted.
(Rises.)

MARQUIS: Attention, all!

ALL: Yes, listen to the toastmaster!

ALFREDO: Libiamo, libiamo ne' lieti calici,
Che la bellezza infiora;
E la fuggevol, fuggevol ora
S'innebrii a voluttà.
Libiam ne' dolci fremiti
Che suscita l'amore,
Poichè quell' occhio al core
Omnipotente va.
Libiamo, amore, amor fra i calici
Più caldi baci avrà.

TUTTI: Ah, libiamo; amor fra i calici
Più caldi baci avrà.

VIOLETTA: Tra voi, saprò dividere
(S'alza.)
Il tempo mio giocondo;
Tutto è follia nel mondo
Ciò che non è piacer.
Godiam; fugace e rapido
E il gaudio dell' amore;
E un fior che nasce e muore
Nè più si può goder.
Godiam—c' invita un fervido
Accento lusinghier.

TUTTI: Godiam—la tazza e il cantico
La notte abbella e il riso;
In questo paradiso
Ne scopra il nuovo dì.

VIOLETTA: (Ad Alfredo.) La vita è nel tripudio.

ALFREDO: (A Violetta.) Quando non s' ami ancora.

VIOLETTA: (Ad Alfredo.) Nol dite a chi lo ignora.

ALFREDO: (A Violetta.) È il mio destin così.

TUTTI: Godiam—la tazza e il cantico
La notte abbella e il riso;
In questo paradiso
Ne scopra il nuovo dì.
(S'ode musica dall' altra sala.)
Che è ciò?

VIOLETTA: Non gradireste ora le danze?

TUTTI: Oh! il gentil pensier!—Tutti accettiamo.

VIOLETTA: Usciamo dunque—Ohimè!
(S'avviano alla porta di mezzo, ma Violetta è colta da subito pallore.)

TUTTI: Che avete?

VIOLETTA: Nulla, nulla.

TUTTI: Che mai v' arresta?

VIOLETTA: Usciamo! (Fa qualche passo, ma è obbligata a nuovamente fermarsi e sedere.) Oh Dio!

TUTTI: Ancora!

ALFREDO: Voi soffrite!

TUTTI: Oh ciel!—ch' è questo!

ALFREDO: In goblets wreathed with flowers
Come drink on this festive night,
And may the fleeting hours
Be filled with love's delight.
Drink to the magic glances
That kindling beauties dart!
Drink to those amorous lances
That pierce from eye to heart.
And love will find warmer kisses
in flower entwined cups.

ALL: And love will find warmer kisses
in flower entwined cups.

VIOLETTA: My golden time's sweet rapture
(Rises.)
Dear friends, is mine to give!
Ah, foolish not to capture
Youth's transient joys—and live!
Live and enjoy, for youthful love's delight is brief.
The faded flower
No more can bring our grief to light!

ALL: Ah, live then in the blisses
That sing of love and joy!
In laughter, wine and kisses
Let every night go by,
And in this paradise
Let dawn our loves surprise.

VIOLETTA: (To Alfredo.) For living is in pleasure—

ALFREDO: (To Violetta.) Till one discovers love.

VIOLETTA: (To Alfredo.) A knowledge I don't treasure.

ALFREDO: (To Violetta.) Then help me, stars above!

ALL: In laughter, wine and kisses
Let every night go by,
And in this paradise
let dawn our loves surprise.
(Music is heard from the drawing room.)
What is that music?

VIOLETTA: Would you not like to dance now?

ALL: How gracious of you!—Of course!

VIOLETTA: Shall we go then?—Alas!
(They walk toward the door, center, when Violetta suddenly totters and turns pale.)

ALL: What ails you, Violetta?

VIOLETTA: It's nothing—nothing!

ALL: Why do you linger, then?

VIOLETTA: Come, let's go on!
(She takes a few steps but is obliged to sink into a chair.) Oh, dear Heaven!

ALL: Again!

ALFREDO: You are in pain!

ALL: Alas! What can it be?

VIOLETTA: Un tremito che provo—Or là passate, (Indicando l' altra stanza.) Tra poco anch' io sarò.	VIOLETTA: I felt a sudden chill.— Do please go on. (Motioning them toward the drawing room.) I'll join you in a minute.
TUTTI: Come bramate. (Tutti passano all' altra sala, meno Alfredo, che resta indietro.)	ALL: As you wish. (All go out into the drawing room except Alfredo, who remains behind.)
VIOLETTA: (Si guarda nello specchio.) Oh, qual pallor! (Si volge e s' accorge d' Alfredo.) Voi qui!	VIOLETTA: (Rising and looking at herself in the mirror.) Goodness, how pale!—You, here? (On seeing Alfredo.)
ALFREDO: Cessata è l' ansia che vi turbò?	ALFREDO: Is it all over, that sudden illness?
VIOLETTA: Sto meglio.	VIOLETTA: I'm better.
ALFREDO: Ah, in cotal guisa v' ucciderete! Aver v' è d'uopo cura dell' esser vostro.	ALFREDO: You'll kill yourself, in that fashion. You must take better care of yourself.
VIOLETTA: E lo potrei?	VIOLETTA: You think I could?
ALFREDO: Ah, se mia foste, custode io veglierei Pe' vostri soavi dì.	ALFREDO: If you were mine, I would watch over your precious days.
VIOLETTA: Che dite? Ha forse alcuno cura di me?	VIOLETTA: What are you saying? Is there perhaps someone who cares?
ALFREDO: (Con fuoco.) Perchè nessuno al mondo v'ama.	ALFREDO: No one—because in all the world None really loves you.
VIOLETTA: Nessun?	VIOLETTA: No one?
ALFREDO: Tranne sol io.	ALFREDO: No one but me!
VIOLETTA: Gli è vero? (Ridendo.) Si grande amor dimenticato avea.	VIOLETTA: Ah, truly? (Laughing.) I had forgotten your tremendous love!
ALFREDO: Ridete!—e in voi v' ha un core?	ALFREDO: You're mocking me!— Have you no heart?
VIOLETTA: Un cor? Sì, forse—e a che lo richiedete?	VIOLETTA: Heart, did you say?— Perhaps.—But why do you ask?
ALFREDO: Oh, se ciò fosse, non potreste allora celiar.	ALFREDO: Ah, if you had, you could not make a jest of this.
VIOLETTA: Dite davvero?	VIOLETTA: Are you then serious?
ALFREDO: Io non v' inganno.	ALFREDO: I would not deceive you.
VIOLETTA: Da molot è che mi amate?	VIOLETTA: Is it long then that you've loved me?
ALFREDO: Ah sì, da un anno. Un dì felice, eterea Mi balenaste innante, E da quel dì tremante, Vissi d' ignoto amor. Di quell' amor, quell' amor ch' è palpito Dell' universo, dell' universo intero, Misterioso, misterioso altero, Croce e delizia, delizia al cor.	ALFREDO: Yes—a whole year. One happy day your image Appeared before my sight, And from its dazzling light I've glowed with secret love. A love that throbs like the heart of all nature, A love encompassing earth and the stars, A love mysterious, love high as heaven above, Exquisite rapture, rapture and pain.
VIOLETTA: Ah, se ciò è ver, fuggitemi— Solo amistade io v' offro; Amar non so, nè soffro Un così eroico amore. Io sono franca, ingenua; Altra cercar dovete— Non arduo troverete Dimenticarmi allor.	VIOLETTA: If that be so then leave me! Friendship alone I offer. I know not love, nor suffer Its burning pangs to grieve me. I must speak out!—Go seek A worthier to cherish, And in her love will perish All memory of me.
GASTONE: (Presentandosi sulla porta di mezzo.) Ebben?—che diavol fate?	GASTONE: (From the center door.) Well! What are you up to?
VIOLETTA: Si folleggiava.	VIOLETTA: Just talking nonsense.
GASTONE: Ah, ah!—sta ben—restate. (Rientra.)	GASTONE: So!—Very well—go on. (Disappears)
VIOLETTA: Amor, dunque, non più—vi garba il patto?	VIOLETTA: No more of love then. You agree to that?
ALFREDO: Io v' obbedisco—Parto. (Per andarsene.)	ALFREDO: I can only obey. I must be going. (About to leave.)
VIOLETTA: A tal giungeste? (Si toglie un fiore dal seno.) Prendete questo fiore.	VIOLETTA: So quickly resolved? (She takes a flower from her corsage.) Here, take this flower.
ALFREDO: Perchè?	ALFREDO: Why?
VIOLETTA: Per riportarlo.	VIOLETTA: To bring it back to me.
ALFREDO: Quando? (Tornando.)	ALFREDO: When? (Turning.)
VIOLETTA: Quando sarà appassito.	VIOLETTA: When it has faded.
ALFREDO: O ciel, domani?	ALFREDO: Tomorrow, then?
VIOLETTA: Ebben, domani.	VIOLETTA: Very well—tomorrow.
ALFREDO: Io son felice! (Prende con trasporto il fiore.)	ALFREDO: What happiness! (Takes the flower in a transport of joy.)
VIOLETTA: D' amarmi dite ancora?	VIOLETTA: And do you still say you love me?
ALFREDO: Oh, quanto v' amo! (Per partire.)	ALFREDO: Oh, I adore you! (About to leave.)
VIOLETTA: Partite?	VIOLETTA: Ah, you're going?
ALFREDO: Parto. (Torna a lei e le bacia la mano.)	ALFREDO: I am. (Goes back to her and kisses her hand.)
VIOLETTA: Addio.	VIOLETTA: Goodbye.
ALFREDO: Di più non bramo. (Esce.) Addio. (Violetta e tutti gli altri che tornano dalla sala della danza.)	ALFREDO: Could I desire more? (Exit.) (Violetta and the rest who come in from the ballroom.)
TUTTI: Si ridesta in ciel l' aurora, E n' è forza di partire; Mercè a voi, gentil signora, (A Violetta.) Di sì splendido gioir. La città di feste è piena, Volge il tempo del piacer; Nel riposo ancor la lena Si ritempri per goder. (partono dalla destra.)	ALL: In the east the dawn is breaking Warning us that day is near. We must now our leave be taking— Thanks, Violetta, for your cheer. In the city sounds of laughter Fill the silence of the night; But repose must follow after To renew us for delight. (All exit to the right.)
VIOLETTA: (sola) È strano!—è strano!—In core Scolpiti ho quegli accenti! Saria per me sventura un serio amore? Che risolvi, o turbato anima mia? Null' uomo ancora t' accendeve.— Oh, gioia, Ch' io non conobbi, esser amata amando! E sdegnarla poss' io Per l' aride follie del viver mio? Ah, fors' è lui che l' ianima, Solinga nè' tumulti, Godea sovente pingere, De' suoi colori occulti! Lui, che modesto e vigile,	VIOLETTA: (Alone) How strange! So strange! His words Are carved upon my heart. Would then a serious love be fatal to me? What say you now, my troubled soul? No man has yet stirred love in you. Oh, joy I've never known—to be beloved and loving! And can I spurn it now For all the empty follies of my life? Perhaps it is he my lonely soul Amid revels wants to muse, Would summon up in dream And paint in subtle hues—

Al l' egre soglie ascese,
E nuova febbre accese destandomi all' amor?
A quell' amor, quell' amor ch' è palpito;
Dell' universo intero misterioso, altero,
Croce e delizia, delizia al cor.
A me, fanciulla, un candido
E trepido desire
Quest' effigiò, dolcissimo
Signor dell' avvenire,
Quando ne' cieli il raggio
Di sua beltà vedea,
E tutta me pascea
Di quel soave error.
Sentia che amore è palpito
Dell' universo intero,
Misterioso, altero,
Pena e delizia al cor.)
(Resta concentrata un istante, poi dice.)
Follie!—follie!—delirio vano è questo!
Povera donna, sola,
Abbandonata in questo
Popoloso deserto,
Che appellano Parigi,
Che spero or più?—Che far degg' io?—Gioire.
Di voluttà nei vortici perir.
Giorir! gioir!
Sempre libera degg'io
Folleggiare di gioia in gioia.
Vo' che scorra il viver mio
Pei sentieri del piacer.
Nasca il giorno, il giorno muoia,
Sempre lieta ne' ritrovi
A diletti sempre nuovi
Dèe volare il mio pensier.
(Parte a sinistra.)

ATTO SECONDO

Casa di campagna presso Parigi. Salotto terreno. Nel fondo, in faccia agli spettatori, è un camino, sopra il quale uno specchio ed un orologio, fra due porte chiuse da cristalli, che mettono ad un giardino. Al primo piano due altre porte, una di fronte all' altra. Sedie, tavolini, qualche libro, l'occorrente per scrivere.

Alfredo entra, in costume da caccia.

ALFREDO: (Depone il fucile.) Lunge da lei per me non v' ha diletto!
Volaron già tre lune
Dacchè la mia Violetta
Agi per me lasciò, dovizie, onori,

He who with tender care
Came to me, then fevered,
And with another flame
Kindled in me to love.
A love that throbs like the heart of all nature,
A love encompassing earth and the stars,
A love mysterious, love high as heaven above,
Exquisite rapture, rapture and pain.
When yet a child, a vision came before my eyes—
A fair and gentle youth,
My future lord and prize.
When in the heavens his beauty
Shone like a wondrous fire,
My being throbbed ecstatic
With infinite desire.
I then knew love like the heart of all nature,
A love encompassing earth and the stars,
A love mysterious, love high as heaven above,
Exquisite rapture, rapture and pain.)
(For a moment she pauses in rapt concentration, then cries:)
Oh folly! Oh folly! This vain delirium!
What dreams delude me,
Poor lonely woman,
Forsaken here in this
Populous desert
That's known as Paris?
What more is there to hope? Or do?—Descend
In pleasure's vortex—in the vortex end!
Pleasure! pleasure!
Ever light, ever free
Flitting on from joy to joy,
May my hours forever flee
In sweet pleasure's company.
Whether day be born or die,
To be happy I aspire.
Toward new joys then let me fly
On the wings of my desire.
(Exit, left.)

ACT II

The livingroom of a country villa on the outskirts of Paris. In the background, facing the audience, is a chimney piece with a mantel above it and a clock upon it. On either side of the mantel, a glass door, now closed, gives access to the garden. Chairs and tables are tastefully arranged about the room, furnished also with books and a writing desk.

Enter Alfredo, dressed for the hunt.

ALFREDO: (Sets down his gun.) Away from her there's nothing that delights me.
Three months have now gone by Since my beloved Violetta
Forsook for me all luxury and pomp

E le pompose feste,
Ov' agli omaggi avvezza,
Vedea schiavo ciascun di sua bellezza—
Ed or contenta in questi ameni luoghi
Tutto scorda per me. Qui presso a lei
Io rinascer mi sento,
E dal soffio d' amor rigenerato,
Scordo ne' gaudi suoi tutto il passato.
De' miei bollenti spiriti
Il giovanile ardore
Ella temprò col placido
Sorriso dell' amor, dell' amor.
Dal dì che disse: vivere
Io voglio, io voglio a te fedel;
Dell' universo immemore,
Io vivo quasi in ciel.
Dal dì che disse: vivere,
Io voglio a te fedel,
Ah, sì! Dell' universo immemore,
Io vivo quasi in ciel.
(Detto ed Annina in arnese da viaggio.)

ALFREDO: Annina! donde vieni?

ANNINA: Da Parigi.

ALFREDO: Chi tel commise?

ANNINA: Fu la mia signora.

ALFREDO: Perchè?

ANNINA: Per alienar cavalli, cocchi, e quanto ancor possiede.

ALFREDO: Che mai sento?

ANNINA: Lo spendio è grande a viver qui solinghi.

ALFREDO: E tacevi?

ANNINA: Mi fu il silenzio imposto.

ALFREDO: Imposto! Or v'abbisogna?

ANNINA: Mille luigi.

ALFREDO: Or vanne—Andrò a Parigi—
Questo colloquio non sappia la signora—
I ie tutto valgo a riparere ancora.
Va!
(Annina parte.)

ALFREDO: (solo) Oh, mio rimorso!—Oh, infamia!—
Io vissi in tale errore?
Ma il turpe sogno a frangere
Il ver mi balenò.
Per poco in seno acquetati,
O grido dell' onore,
M' avrai securo vindice,
Quest' onta laverò.
O mio rossor! O infamia!
(Esce.)
(Violetta, ch' entra con alcune carte, parlando con Annina poi Giuseppe a tempo.)

VIOLETTA: Alfredo.

And gay festivities
Where she was known to reign,
The queen of all men, captives of her beauty.
Yet now contented in this pleasant spot,
She lives for me alone.
I feel myself reborn, here by her side
And regenerated by the breath of love,
Forget the past in all her dear delights.
My youth's rebellious passion,
My ardent soul's commotion,
She tempered with the calm
Sweet smile of her devotion.
Since first the words she spoke,
"I shall be ever yours,"
Oblivious of the world,
I made all heaven mine.
Since first the words she spoke,
"I shall be ever yours,"
Ah, yes, the world forgetting,
I made all heaven mine!
(Enter Annina in a traveling costume.)

ALFREDO: Annina! Where have you been?

ANNINA: To Paris, sir.

ALFREDO: Who sent you there?

ANNINA: My mistress, sir.

ALFREDO: But why?

ANNINA: To dispose of her horses, carriages and everything else she owns.

ALFREDO: What are you saying?

ANNINA: It's costly to be living here by yourselves.

ALFREDO: And you kept all this from me?

ANNINA: I was warned to say nothing.

ALFREDO: Warned!—How much money do you need?

ANNINA: A thousand louis.

ALFREDO: Go, now.—I'll be off to Paris.
But mind, not a word of this to your mistress.
I may be able to straighten out the business.
Go!
(Exit Annina.)

ALFREDO: (Alone) O pangs of conscience! Shame!
What error lulled my sense?
But now truth's rude awakening
Casts peace forever here!
Oh, hush within my breast
Affronted honor's cry!
This shameful stain at once
I'll wipe away, or die!
O infamy! O shame!
(Exit.)
(Enter Violetta with some papers in her hand. She is followed by Annina and, subsequently, Giuseppe.)

VIOLETTA: Alfredo!

ANNINA: Per Parigi or or partiva.	ANNINA: He has just left for Paris.
VIOLETTA: E tornerà?	VIOLETTA: And when is he coming back?
ANNINA: Pria che tramonti il giorno—dirivel! m'impose.	ANNINA: Before sunset, he said to tell you.
VIOLETTA: È strano!	VIOLETTA: That's odd!
GIUSEPPE: Per voi. (Le presenta una lettera.)	GIUSEPPE: (Handing her a letter.) For you.
VIOLETTA: (La prende.) Sta ben. In breve Giungerà un uom d' affari—entri all' istante. (Annina e Giuseppe escono.)	VIOLETTA: (Taking it.) Thanks— Very shortly a man will be arriving on business. Show him in at once. (Annina and Giuseppe exit.)
VIOLETTA: Ah, ah! (Leggendo la lettera.) Scopriva Flora il mio ritiro!— E m' invita a danzar per questa sera!— Invan m' aspetterà. (Getta il foglio sul tavolino e siede.)	VIOLETTA: Ah, ah! (As she reads the letter.) So Flora has ferreted out my retreat, And invites me to a ball tonight. She'll wait in vain. (She tosses the letter on a table and sits down.)
GIUSEPPE: È qui un signore.	GIUSEPPE: A gentleman here to see you.
VIOLETTA: Sarà lui che attendo. (Accenna a Giuseppe d'introdurlo.)	VIOLETTA: Ah, he must be the one I'm expecting. (Motions to Giuseppe to admit him.)
GERMONT: Madamigella Valery?	GERMONT: Mademoiselle Valery?
VIOLETTA: Son io.	VIOLETTA: That's I.
GERMONT: D' Alfredo il padre in me vedete.	GERMONT: You see in me Alfredo's father.
VIOLETTA: Voi? (Sorpresa gli accenna di sedere.)	VIOLETTA: You! (She shows surprise, but motions him to a chair.)
GERMONT: (Sedendo.) Sì, dell' incauto, che a ruina corre, Ammaliato da voi.	GERMONT: (Sits down.) Yes, the father of that mad youth who is rushing to his ruin, Infatuated by you.
VIOLETTA: (Alzandosi risentita.) Donna son io, signore, ed in mia casa; Ch' io vi lasci assentite, Più per voi, che per me. (Per uscire.)	VIOLETTA: (She rises, affronted.) Sir, I am a woman—and in my own house. You must permit me to leave, More for your sake than for mine. (As if to leave.)
GERMONT: Quai modi. Pure—	GERMONT: What gentility. But—
VIOLETTA: Tratto in error voi foste. (Torna a sedere)	VIOLETTA: You're under a misapprehension. (Sits down again.)
GERMONT: De' suoi beni egli dono vuol farvi.	GERMONT: But he's anxious to turn over his fortune to you—
VIOLETTA: Non l' osò finora.—Rifiuterei.	VIOLETTA: He has not dared to do such a thing—I would refuse it!
GERMONT: Pur tanto lusso—	GERMONT: Yet all this luxury!
VIOLETTA: A tutti è mistero quest' atto.—A voi nol sia. (Gli da le carte.)	VIOLETTA: Everyone wonders and is puzzled by it. But I'll explain this mystery to you. (Hands him the papers.)
GERMONT: (Dopo averle scorse coll' occhio.) Ciel! Che discopro D'ogni vostro avere or volete spogliarvi? Ah, il passato perchè, perchè v' accusa?	GERMONT: (After examining them.) You intend to sell all your belongings?— Ah, but your past—why does it accuse you?
VIOLETTA: Più non esiste—or amo Alfredo, e Dio Lo cancellò col pentimento mio.	VIOLETTA: The past is dead. I love Alfredo. Whatever was, Heaven has stricken out with my redemption.
GERMONT: Nobili sensi invero!	GERMONT: Noble sentiments indeed!
VIOLETTA: Oh, come dolce mi suona il vostro accento!	VIOLETTA: Oh, how soothing your words are to me!
GERMONT: (Alzandosi.) Ed a tai sensi un sacrifizio chieggo.	GERMONT: But from those sentiments a sacrifice I require.
VIOLETTA: (Alzandosi.) Ah no, tacete— Terribil cosa chiedereste, certo— Il previdi . . . v'attesi . . . Era felice troppo . . .	VIOLETTA: (Rising.) Ah, no! Don't say it! Surely a dreadful thing you'll ask of me. I felt it! I knew it! My happiness was too great.
GERMONT: D' Alfredo il padre la sorte, L' avvenir domanda or qui de' suoi due figli.	GERMONT: Fate demands of Alfredo's father To plead for the future, the good, of his two children.
VIOLETTA: Di due figli?	VIOLETTA: Two children?
GERMONT: Sì. Pura siccome un angelo Iddio mi diè una figlia; Se Alfredo nega riedere In seno alla famiglia, L' amato e amante giovane Cui sposa andar dovea, Or si ricusa al vincolo Che lieti, lieti ne rendea. Deh non mutate in triboli Le rose dell' amor. A' prieghi miei resistere, no, no, Non voglia il vostro cor, no, no.	GERMONT: Yes. A pure angelic daughter From heaven I possess Her brother she awaits To bless her wedding day. If Alfredo will not turn From his path of folly, The youth so loved and loving Will spurn my daughter's hand. Oh, do not change to grieving Their future, bright and fair. Oh, crown their joy—resist not— Accord a father's prayer.
VIOLETTA: Ah, comprendo—dovrò per alcun tempo Da Alfredo allontanarmi—doloroso Fora per me—pur.	VIOLETTA: I must then, for a time—do I understand you?— Leave my Alfredo. Painful it will be For me. Still—
GERMONT: Non è ciò che chiedo.	GERMONT: That is not what I demand.
VIOLETTA: Cielo!—che più cercate?—v'offersi assai.	VIOLETTA: Dear Heaven—what more, then? Too much Have I already offered!
GERMONT: Pur non basta.	GERMONT: It is not yet enough.
VIOLETTA: Volete che per sempre a lui rinunzi?	VIOLETTA: You would not have me give him up forever?
GERMONT: È d'uopo.	GERMONT: It must be done.
VIOLETTA: Ah no giammai! Non sapete quale affetto Vivo, immenso m'arda in petto? Che nè amici, nè parenti Io non conto tra' viventi? E che Alfredo m' ha giurato Che in lui tutto troverò? Non sapete che colpita D'atro morbo è la mia vita? Che già presso il fin ne vedo? Ch' io mi separi da Alfredo! Ah, il supplizio è si spietato, Che morir preferirò.	VIOLETTA: Ah, no, no—never! Do you know the immense love That consumes my every sense? That I have no friends, no kin No ties, left in the world? That Alfredo swore to be Friend and kin and all to me? Do you know the fatal ill That attacks my life—to kill? That already draws the end? And you'd part me from my friend!— Ah, death would be less cruel Than to deny Alfredo.
GERMONT: È grave il sacrifizio. Ma pur, tranquilla uditemi. Bella voi siete e giovane— Col tempo—	GERMONT: Yes, great is your atonement, Yet listen—brave and calm. You are still young, still beautiful. In time, perhaps—
VIOLETTA: Ah, più non dite—v' intendo— M' è impossibile.—Lui solo amar vogl' io.	VIOLETTA: No more! I guess your meaning. But that will never be. I love him only.
GERMONT: Sia pure—ma volubile sovente è l' uom.	GERMONT: I grant it. But remember, man is fickle.

VIOLETTA: (Colpita.) Gran Dio!	VIOLETTA: (Shocked.) Dear Heaven!
GERMONT: Un dì, quando le veneri Il tempo avrà fugate, Fia presto il tedio a sorgere— Che sarà allor?—Pensate— Per voi non avran balsamo I più soavi affetti! Poichè del ciel non furono Tai nodi benedetti.	GERMONT: Some day, when love's illusions, Outworn, will lose their spell, What will you, weary, satiated Do then, you two?—Think well! For you will find no balm In tenderest affection— For never had your ties The Heavens' benediction.
VIOLETTA: È vero!	VIOLETTA: Ah, true! True!
GERMONT: Ah, dunque, sperdasi Tal sogno seduttore— Siate di mia famiglia L' angel consolatore— Violetta, deh pensateci, Ne siete in temp ancor. È Dio che ispira, o giovine Tai detti a un genitor.	GERMONT: Ah, therefore, therefore shatter Such meretricious dreaming, And to my dear ones be An angel, kindly beaming. Ah, think, Violetta, think Upon my just desires. It is Heaven itself, my child, that inspires A father's words!
VIOLETTA: (Com estremo dolore.) Così alla misera ch' è un dì caduta, Di più risorgere speranza è muta! Se pur benefico le indulga Iddio L' uomo implacabil per lei sarà.	VIOLETTA: (In extreme sorrow.) So for the lost one fallen, unfriended, All hope of rising is forever ended. God will in mercy stretch out His hand, But man implacable ever will stand.
VIOLETTA: Dite alla giovine, si bella e pura, Ch' avvi una vittima della sventura, Cui resta un unico raggio de bene, Che a lei il sacrifica, e che morrà, e morrà.	VIOLETTA: Tell the young maiden, so chaste and fair That one, unfortunate, crushed by despair, Held but one treasure—of life's purest good but one ray,— And that, to her she resigns it—to die, but to die! But to die!
GERMONT: Piangi, piangi, piangi o misera, piangi; Piangi, piangi, supremo, il veggo, È il sacrifizio ch' ora ti chieggo: Sento nell' anima già le tue pene; Coraggio, e il nobile cor vincerà.	GERMONT: Weep, oh weep, unhappy one, weep! The sacrifice I am demanding is great. Yet in spite of my ruthless commanding My soul suffers your anguish and pain. Take heart—your sacrifice will triumph.
VIOLETTA: Imponete.	VIOLETTA: Then command me!
GERMONT: Non amarlo ditegli.	GERMONT: Tell him you do not love him.
VIOLETTA: Nol crederà.	VIOLETTA: He'll not believe it.
GERMONT: Partite.	GERMONT: Then leave him.
VIOLETTA: Seguirammi.	VIOLETTA: He will come after me.
GERMONT: Allor.	GERMONT: Then—
VIOLETTA: Qual figlia m'abbracciate—forte così sarò. (S'abbracciano.) Tra breve ei vi fia reso, ma afflitto oltre ogni dire; A suo conforto di colà volerete. (Indicandogli il giardino, va per scrivere.)	VIOLETTA: Come, clasp me like a daughter—so I'll take my resolve (They embrace.) Soon you will have him back—but, oh, so brokenhearted! You will then hurry here to console him. (She indicates the garden and then sits down to write.)
GERMONT: Che pensate?	GERMONT: What are you planning?
VIOLETTA: Sapendol v' opporreste al pensier mio.	VIOLETTA: If I told you, you would oppose it.
GERMONT: Generosa!—e per voi che far poss' io?	GERMONT: Ah, noble heart! Oh, how can I repay you?
VIOLETTA: (Tornando a lui.) Morrò!—la mia memoria Non fia ch' ei maledica, Se le mie pene oribili, Vi sia chi almen gli dica.	VIOLETTA: (Turning toward him.) I'll die!—But ah, He could not execrate my memory If someone but imparted My agony and fate—
GERMONT: No, generosa, vivere, E lieta voi dovrete, Mercè di queste lagrime Dal cielo un giorno avrete.	GERMONT: You must not die, you generous one, But live, forgetting woe, And for the tears you're shedding, The heavens will bestow grace.
VIOLETTA: Conosca il sacrifizio Ch' io consumai d' amore Che sarà suo fin l' ultimo Sospiro del mio cor.	VIOLETTA: If he knew the sacrifice Whereby love I atone— Knew that to my last breath I loved just him alone!
GERMONT: Premiato il sacrifizio Sarà del vostro cor. D' un' opra così nobile Sarete fiera allor.	GERMONT: For your supreme atonement, For your heart's agony, Be proud and noble, calm, Rewarded you shall be.
VIOLETTA: Qui giunge alcun; partite!	VIOLETTA: There's someone coming—go.
GERMONT: O, grato v' è il cor mio!	GERMONT: My grateful heart beats for you.
VIOLETTA: Non ci vedrem più forse. (S' abbracciano.)	VIOLETTA: We may not meet again. (They embrace.)
VIOLETTA E GERMONT: Felice siate—Addio! (Germont esce per la porta del giardino.)	GERMONT: Be happy—I implore you! (Germont goes out into the garden.)
VIOLETTA: Dammi tu forza, o cielo! (Siede, scrive, poi suona il campanello.)	VIOLETTA: God give me strength! (She sits down, writes, and then rings for Annina.)
ANNINA: Mi richiedeste?	ANNINA: You rang for me?
VIOLETTA: Sì, reca tu stessa questa foglio.	VIOLETTA: Yes. I want you to deliver this letter in person.
ANNINA: (Ne guarda la direzione, e se ne mostra sorpresa.) Oh!	ANNINA: (She looks at the address and shows surprise.) Ah!
VIOLETTA: Silenzio—Va all' istante (Annina parte.) Ed or si scriva a lui—che gli dirò? Chi men darà il coraggio? (Scrive e poi suggella)	VIOLETTA: Hush!—Go at once. (Exit Annina.) And now I must write to him. But what shall I say? Who shall give me the courage? (She writes, then seals the letter. Enter Alfredo.)
ALFREDO: Che fai?	ALFREDO: What are you doing?
VIOLETTA: (Nascondendo la lettera.) Nulla.	VIOLETTA: a (Concealing the letter.) Nothing.
ALFREDO: Scrivevi!	ALFREDO: You were writing?
VIOLETTA: (Confusa.) Sì—no—	VIOLETTA: (Confused.) No,—why, yes—
ALFREDO: Qual turbamento?—A chi scrivevi?	ALFREDO: Why this confusion? To whom were you writing?
VIOLETTA: A te.	VIOLETTA: To you.
ALFREDO: Dammi quel foglio.	ALFREDO: Give me that letter!
VIOLETTA: No, per ora.	VIOLETTA: No, not now.
ALFREDO: Mi perdona—son io preoccupato.	ALFREDO: Forgive, forgive me!—I'm not myself.
VIOLETTA: (Alzandosi.) Che fu?	VIOLETTA: (Rising.) What is it?
ALFREDO: Giunse mio padre.	ALFREDO: My father's in town.
VIOLETTA: Lo vedesti?	VIOLETTA: Have you seen him?

ALFREDO: Ah, no, severo scritto mi lasciava; però l'attendo—t'amerà in verderti.

VIOLETTA: (Molto agitata.) Ch'ei qui non mi sorprenda—
Lascia che m'allontani—tu lo calma—
Ai piedi suoi mi getterò—divisi
(Mal frenando il pianto.)
Ei più non ne vorrà; sarem felici
Perchè tu m'ami Alfredo, non è vero?

ALFREDO: Oh quanto!—Perchè piangi?

VIOLETTA: Di lagrime avea
d'uopo—or son tranquilla.
Lo vedi?—ti sorrido—
(Sforzandosi.)
Sarò là, tra quei fior, presso a te sempre—
Amami, Alfredo, quant'io t'amo.—Addio.
(Corre in giardino.)

ALFREDO: Ah! vive sol quel core all'amor mio!
(Siede, prende a caso un libro, legge alquanto, quindi s'alza guarda l'ora sull'orologio sovrapposto al camino.)
È tardi; ed oggi forse
Più non verrà mio padre.

GIUSEPPE: (Entrando frettoloso.) La signora è partita—L'attendeva un calesse, e sulla via Già corre di Parigi.—Annina pure
Prima di lei spariva.

ALFREDO: Il so, ti calma.

GIUSEPPE: (Da se.) Che vuol dir ciò!
(Esce.)

ALFREDO: Va forse d'ogni avere
Ad affrettar la perdita—
Ma Annina la impedirà—
(Si vede il Padre attraversare in lontano il giardino.)
Qualcuno è nel giardino!
Chi è là?
(Per uscire.)

COMMISSIONARO: (Alla porta.) Il signor Germont?

ALFREDO: Son io.

COMMISSIONARO: Una dama, da un cocchio, per voi,
Di qua non lunge mi diede questo scritto.
(Da una lettera ad Alfredo, ne riceve qualche moneta, e parte.)

ALFREDO: Di Violetta!—Perchè son io commosso?
A raggiungerla forse ella m'invita—
Io tremo!—Oh ciel!—Coraggio!
(Apre e legge.)
"Alfredo, al giungervi di questo

ALFREDO: No—but he left me a harsh note.
He will call on us here, though. I know he will love you once he sees you.

VIOLETTA: (Much agitated.) Oh, he must not find me here!
Let me leave while you appease him.
Then at his feet I'll fall. Surely (Unable to control her tears.)
He could not want to part us now—we shall be happy.
For you do love me, Alfredo—you do love me?

ALFREDO: To distraction!—But why your tears?

VIOLETTA: My heart was too full.
But see, I am calm now.
I can even smile.
(Forcing a smile.)
I shall be there, among those flowers, always near you
Oh my beloved Alfredo! Love me as I love you.—Good-bye.
(Rushes out into the garden.)

ALFREDO: That dearest heart lives only for my love!
(He sits down, takes up a book, reads a while. He then rises and looks at the clock on the mantel.)
It's late. Perhaps my father
Will not come in today.

GIUSEPPE: (Hurrying in.) The mistress has left—
A carriage was waiting for her, and now
She's on her way to Paris. Annina too Rushed off ahead of her.

ALFREDO: I know all that. Calm yourself.

GIUSEPPE: (Aside.) What can it all mean?
(Exit.)

ALFREDO: She's gone, probably to speed herself to ruin
By selling all she owns.
But Annina will prevent her.
(Germont is seen approaching from the garden.)
There's someone in the garden.
Who's there?
(He makes as if to go out.)

MESSENGER: (At the door.) Monsieur Germont?

ALFREDO: In person.

MESSENGER: A lady, not long since, sir, handed me this
From a carriage, to give to you.
(Gives Alfredo a note, receives his tip and goes out.)

ALFREDO: It's from Violetta. Why am I so perturbed?
Perhaps she's asking me to join her.—
I tremble!—O Heaven! Give me strength.
(Opens the letter and reads.)

foglio"—
(Come fulminato, grida. Volgendosi, si trova a fronti del Padre nelle cui braccia si abbandona, esclamando—)
Ah!—Padre mio?

GERMONT: Mio figlio!
Oh, quanto soffri—ah tergi il pianto—
Ritorna di tuo padre orgoglio e vanto.
(Alfredo disperato siede presso il tavolino col volto tra le mani.)
Di Provenza il mar, il suol
Chi dal cor ti cancellò?
Al natio fulgente sol
Qual destino ti furò?
Oh, rammenta pur nel duol,
Ch'ivi gioia a te brillò,
E che pace colà sol
Su te splendere ancor può;
Dio mi guidò!
Ah! il tuo vecchio genitor
Tu non sai quanto soffrì—
Te lontano, di squallor
Il tuo tetto si coprì—
Ma se alfin ti trovo ancor
Se in me speme non fallì.
Se la voce dell'onor
In te appien non ammutì—
Dio m'esaudì!
Nè rispondi d'un padre all'affetto?
(Abbracciandolo.)

ALFREDO: Mille furie divoramni il petto—
Mi lasciate—
(Respingendolo.)

GERMONT: Lasciarti?

ALFREDO: (Risoluto.) Oh, vendetta!

GERMONT: Non più indugi; partiamo—t'affretta.

ALFREDO: Ah fu Douphol!

GERMONT: M'ascolti tu?

ALFREDO: No!

GERMONT: Dunque invano trobato t'avrò?
No, non udrai rimproveri;
Copriam d'oblio il passato:
L'amor che m'ha guidato
Sa tutto perdonar.
Vieni, i tuoi cari in giubilo
Con me rivedi ancora;
A chi penò finora;
Tal gioia non negar.
Un padre ed una suora
T'affretta a consolar.

ALFREDO: (Scuotendosi, getta a caso gli occhi sulla tavola, vede la lettera di Flora, la scorre ed esclama.)
Ah! ell'è alla festa! volisi
L'offesa a vendicar.
(Fugge precipitoso seguito dal Padre.)

GERMONT: Che dici? Ah, ferma!

"Alfredo, by the time this letter reaches you . . . "
(He cries out, thunderstruck. On turning round, he finds himself face to face with his father who clasps him in his arms.)
Father!

GERMONT: My son!
What bitter grief! But cease, oh cease your weeping.
Again be to your father his honor and his vaunt.
(Alfredo sits, his head between his hands.)
Who Provence's soil and sea
Cancelled from your memory?
What, then, lured you from the blaze
Of our native, sunny days?
Ah, in sorrow still recall
That you knew happiness there,
That there peace again may fall
Over all that troubles you.
God led me here!
Ah, how can you ever know
What your aged father proved
When, you absent, shame and woe
Fell upon the home he loved.
But if truly I have found
Once again the son I lost,
If within your breast the sound
Of hope's voice you do not still,
God grants my will!
Can you be deaf to your father's affection?
(Embracing him.)

ALFREDO: A thousand furies rend me!—
Leave me!
(Pushes him off.)

GERMONT: Leave you?

ALFREDO: (Resolutely.) Oh, vengeance!

GERMONT: Come, no more delays.
We're leaving—at once.

ALFREDO: Ah, it was Douphol!

GERMONT: Don't you hear me?

ALFREDO: No!

GERMONT: Then I have found you in vain!
Ah, no, I shall not chide—
We must forget the past.
The love that was my guide
Has taught me to forgive.
Come, hasten then, to gladden
Our dear ones far away;
No more to sadden their lives—
Such joy is yours to give.
To father and to sister
Such joy is yours to give.

ALFREDO: (As he comes to himself he glances upon the table and sees Flora's letter. He reads it and exclaims:) Ah, she has gone to Flora's party!
Quickly—come with me! Such offense must be punished!
(He dashes out followed by his Father.)

GERMONT: What do you say? Stay here!

ATTO TERZO

Galleria nel Palazzo di Flora, riccamente addobbata e illuminata.—Una porta nel fondo e due laterali.—A destra più avanti, un taboliere con quanto occorre pel giuoco: a sinistra ricco tavolino con fiori e rinfreschi, varie sedie e un divano.

Flora, il Marchese, il Dottore, ed altri invitati entrano dalla sinistra, discorrendo tra loro.

FLORA: Avrem lieta di maschere la notte;
N' è duce il viscontino—
Violetta ed Alfredo anco invitai.

MARCHESE: La novità ignorate?
Violetta e Germont sono disgiunti.

DOTTORE E FLORA: Fia vero?

MARCHESE: Ella verrà qui col barone.

DOTTORE: Li vidi ieri ancor—parean felici.
(S' ode rumore a destra.)

FLORA: Silenzio—Udite?

TUTTI: (Vanno verso la destra.)
Giungono gli amici.
(Detti, e molte Signore mascherate da Zingare, che entrano dalla destra.)

ZINGARE: Noi siamo Zingarelle
Venute da lontano;
D' ognuno sulla mano
Leggiamo l' avvenir.
Se consultiam le stelle
Null' avvi a noi d' oscuro,
E i casi del futuro
Possiamo altrui predir.
(Prendono la mano a Flora, ed osservano.)

1: Vediamo!—Voi signora,
Rivali alquante avete.

2: (Fanno lo stesso al Marchese.)
Marchese, voi non siete
Model di fedeltà.

FLORA: (Al Marchese.) Fate il galante ancora?
Ben, vo' me la paghiate.

MARCHESE: (A Flora.) Che diacin vi pensate?
L'accusa è falsità.

FLORA: La volpe lascia il pelo,
Non abbandona il vizio—
Marchese mio, giudizio,
O vi farò pentir.

TUTTI: Su via, si stenda un velo
Sui fatti del passato;
Già quel ch' è stato,
Badate all' avvenir.

ACT III

The salon of Flora's Paris mansion, richly furnished and brilliantly illuminated. In the foreground toward the right, a gaming table and the necessary equipment. On the left an elegant table with flowers and refreshments. Various chairs and a settee.

Flora, the Marquis, the Doctor and other guests enter from the right, conversing.

FLORA: Our evening will be enlivened with masquers—
The Viscount's contribution.
Violetta and Alfredo are also invited.

MARQUIS: Don't you know the news?
Violetta and Alfredo have parted.

DOCTOR and FLORA: Can it be true?

MARQUIS: She's being escorted by the Baron.

DOCTOR: I saw them only yesterday. They seemed quite happy.
(Noise on the right.)

FLORA: Hush! Listen!
(Moving across stage toward the right.)
Our friends are arriving.
(The same and a number of Ladies dressed as Gypsies, who enter from the right.)

GYPSIES: We're gay young gypsy maidens
From distant foreign strands,
And on your dainty hands
We read what is to be.
When studying the skies
To scan your future deep,
No secret from our eyes
The stars and planets keep.
(One takes Flora's hand and examines it.)

1: Let's see, now. You, dear Flora,
Have rivalries aplenty.

2: (Another, reading the hand of the Marquis.)
You, Marquis, wear no aura
For faithfulness in love.

FLORA: (To Marquis.) What! do you still philander?
You'll pay me well for this!

MARQUIS: (To Flora.) You cannot be in earnest!
There is no truth to it.

FLORA: The fox may change his hair,
But his bad manners—never!
Dear Marquis, take care,
Or you will surely regret it.

ALL: Away, then, throw a veil
Over the past misdeed.
What's done no more bewail.—
Rather, your future heed.

(Flora ed il Marchese si stringono la mano.
Gastone ed altri mascherati da Mattadori e Piccadori spagnoli, ch' entranto vivacemente dalla destra.)

GASTONE E MATTADORI: Di Madride noi siam mattadori, Siamo i prodi del circo dei tori;
Testè giunti a godere del chiasso
Che a Parigi si fa pel Bue grasso'
E, una storia se udire vorrete,
Quali amanti noi siamo, saprete.

GLI ALTRI: Sì, sì, bravi; narrate, narrate;
Con piacere l' udremo.

GASTONE E MATTADORI: Ascolate:
È Piquillo un bel gagliardo
Biscaglino mattador;
Forte il braccio, fiero il guardo,
Delle giostre egli è signor.
D' Andalusa a giovinetta
Follemente innamorò;
Ma la bella ritrosetta
Così al giovane parlò:
Cinque tori in un sol giorno
Vò' vederti ad atterrar;
E se vinci, al tuo ritorno.
Mano e cor ti vo' donar.
Sì, gli disse, e il mattadore
Alle giostre mosse il piè;
Cinque tori, vincitore,
Sull' arena egli stendè.

GLI ALTRI: Bravo, bravo, il mattadore
Ben gagliardo si mostrò,
Se alla giovane l' amore
In tal guisa egli provò!

GASTONE E MATTODORI: Poi, tra plausi, ritornato
Alla bella del suo cor,
Colse il premio desiato
Tra le braccia dell' amor.

GLI ALTRI: Con tai prove i Mattadori
San le belle conquistar!

GASTONE E MATTODORI: Ma qui son più miti i cori;
A noi basta folleggiar.

TUTTI: Sì, sì, allegri—Or pria tentiamo
Della sorte il vario umor.
La palestra dischiudiamo
Agli audaci giuocator.
(Gli uomini si tolgono la maschera, chi passeggia e chi si accinge a giuocare.) (Detti ed Alfredo, quindi Violetta col Barone; un Servo a tempo.)

TUTTI: Alfredo!—Voi?

ALFREDO: Sì, amici.

FLORA: Violetta?

ALFREDO: (Secco.) Non ne so.

(Flora and the Marquis shake hands.)
(Gastone and others disguised as Spanish Matadors and Picadors, enter from the right.)

GASTONE and MATADORS: From Madrid we all hail, matadors
Bearing triumphs from bull rings galore,
Come to share in the rumpus you make
Here is Paris for our Fat Bulls' sake
If with patience you'll listen to a tale
You will learn of our prowess—in love.

ALL: Yes, yes, heroes! All hail! Tell your tale.
We shall listen with pleasure.

GASTONE and MATADORS: Then hear!
Our Piquillo, gay and handsome
Matador, comes from Biscay.
With a strong arm and a proud look;
He held sway in the bull ring.
A fair Andalusian maiden
Loved him with a fiery passion.
Nonetheless, this wayward girl
Did address him in this fashion:
"Five fierce bulls within a day
I would see you slay myself.
If you do as I command
I will give you heart and hand."
He agreed, did our Piquillo
And into the ring he flew,
And within the time allotted
Five fierce bulls our hero slew.

ALL: Valiant fighter, lover bold,
Brave indeed your matador,
So to prove to his proud lady
The devoted love he bore!

GASTONE and MATADORS: Then amid the wild acclaim
To his lady he knelt down
And from his own hands received
Love's and honor's priceless crown.

ALL: By such prowess matadors
Win the ladies of their choice.

GASTONE and MATADORS: But here hearts are easier won—
Let us therefore now rejoice!

ALL: Yes, rejoice, be gay! But first
Let us lucky chance importune.
To the games, then. All, come forward,
Valiant champions of Fortune!
(The men remove their masks. Some wander about while others begin to play.)
(The same, and Alfredo. Later Violetta and the Baron; then a Servant.)

ALL: Alfredo! You?

ALFREDO: Yes, my friends.

FLORA: And Violetta?

ALFREDO: (Sharply.) I don't know.

TUTTI: Ben disinvolto!—bravo!— Or via, giocar si può. (Gastone si pone a tagliare: Alfredo ed altri puntano.—Violetta entra al braccio del Barone.)	ALL: He's quite unconcerned.— Bravo!—Then let's to the games. (Gastone begins to cut the cards. Alfredo and several others put up their stakes. Violetta enters, escorted by the Baron.)
FLORA: (Andandole incontro.) Qui desiata giungi.	FLORA: (Going toward her.) You've been ardently wished for.
VIOLETTA: Cessi al cortese invito.	VIOLETTA: I could not resist your charming invitation.
FLORA: Grata vi son, Barone, d' averlo pur gradito.	FLORA: I'm grateful to you as well, Baron, for having accepted.
BARONE: (Piano a Violetta.) Germont è qui! il vedete?	BARON: (To Violetta in an undertone.) Germont is here!—Do you see him?
VIOLETTA: (Da sè.) Cielo!—gli è vero! (Piano a Barone.) Il vedo.	VIOLETTA: (Aside.) Dear Heaven! It's true. (Quietly to the Baron.) I see him.
BARONE: (Piano a Violetta.) Da voi non un sol detto si volga a questo Alfredo.	BARON: (Quietly to Violetta.) You're not to address a word to this Alfredo.
VIOLETTA: (Da sè.) Ah, perchè venni incauta! Pietà gran Dio di me!	VIOLETTA: (To herself.) Ah, why did I come so rashly? Dear God, have mercy on me!
FLORA: Meco t' assidi, narrami:—quai novità vegg'io? (A Violetta, facendola sedere presso di sè sul divano. Il Dottore si avvicina ad esse, che sommessamente conversano. Il Marchese si trattiene a parte col Barone; Gastone taglia; Alfredo ed altri puntano, altri passeggiano.)	FLORA: Sit here beside me. Tell me—what's all this I hear? (Flora leads Violetta to the settee. The Doctor stands by them as they converse in low tones. The Marquis and the Baron stand aside, talking to each other. Gastone cuts the cards. Alfredo and others stake while the rest walk about.)
ALFREDO: Un quattro!	ALFREDO: A four!
GASTONE: Ancora hai vinto?	GASTONE: You win again!
ALFREDO: Sfortuna nell' amore fortuna reca al giuoco. (Punta e vince.)	ALFREDO: Unlucky in love, lucky at cards!
TUTTI: È sempre vincitore!	ALL: He's always winning.
ALFREDO: Oh, vincerò stassera; e l' oro guadagnato poscia a goder fra' campi ritornerò beato.	ALFREDO: Oh, I shall win tonight—and the winnings I'll spend in country pleasures, as before.
FLORA: Solo?	FLORA: Alone?
ALFREDO: No, no, con tale, che vi fu meco ancora, poi mi sfuggia.	ALFREDO: Oh, no! With a certain person who was there with me—and then left me.
VIOLETTA: Mio Dio! (Da se.)	VIOLETTA: Dear God!
GASTONE: (Ad Alfredo, indicando Violetta.) Pietà di lei!	GASTONE: (To Alfredo, indicating Violetta.) Have pity on her!
BARONE: (Ad Alfredo, con mal frenata ira.) Signor!	BARON: (To Alfredo, with ill-concealed wrath.) Sir!
VIOLETTA: (Piano al Barone.) Frenatevi, o vi lascio.	VIOLETTA: (Softly, to the Baron.) Control yourself or I leave you!
ALFREDO: (Disinvolto.) Barone, m' appellaste?	ALFREDO: (Sarcastically.) Were you addressing me, Baron?
BARONE: (Ironico.) Siete in si gran fortuna, che al gioco mi tentaste.	BARON: (Ironically.) You're having such extraordinary luck that you tempt me to play you.
ALFREDO: Si?—la disfida accetto.	ALFREDO: Indeed?—I accept the challenge.
VIOLETTA: (Da sè.) Che fia?—morir mi sento! Pietà, gran Dio, pietà gran Dio, di mè!	VIOLETTA: (Aside.) What will happen? I feel life leaving me. Dear God, have pity—have pity on me!
BARONE: (Punta.) Cento luigi a destra.	BARON: (Stakes.) A hundred louis, to the right.
ALFREDO: (Punta.) Ed alla manca cento.	ALFREDO: (Stakes.) And to the left, a hundred.
GASTONE: (Tagliando.) Un asso—un fante— (Ad Alfredo.) hai vinto!	GASTONE: (Cutting the deck.) An ace—a jack— (To Alfredo.) you've won!
BARONE: Il doppio?	BARON: Will you double it?
ALFREDO: Il doppio sia.	ALFREDO: Agreed—I double.
GASTONE: (Tagliando.) Un quattro, un sette.	GASTONE: (Cutting the deck.) A four, a seven.
TUTTI: Ancora!	ALL: Again!
ALFREDO: Pur la vittoria è mia!	ALFREDO: Again the victory's mine!
CORO: Bravo davver!—La sorte è tutta per Alfredo!	CHOR: Bravo, truly!—Luck smiles only on Alfredo.
FLORA: Del villeggiar la spesa farà il Baron, già il vedo.	FLORA: I see now where the Baron will bear the expenses of the country pleasure.
ALFREDO: (Al Barone.) Seguite pur.	ALFREDO: (To the Baron.) Proceed, sir.
SERVO: La cena è pronta.	SERVANT: Supper is served.
FLORA: Andiamo.	FLORA: Let us go, then.
CORO: (Avviandosi.) Andiamo.	CHOR: (Proceeding.) Let us go.
ALFREDO: (Tra loro a parte.) Se continuar v'aggrada—	ALFREDO: (Aside to Baron.) If you'd like to continue—
BARONE: Per ora nol possiamo; più tardi la rivincita.	BARON: At present we cannot. Later, for the final victory.
ALFREDO: Al gioco che vorrete.	ALFREDO: At whatever game you choose.
BARONE: Seguiam gli amici; poscia . . .	BARON: Let's follow our friends. Then, later—
ALFREDO: Sarò qual bramerete. (Tutti entrano nella porta di mezzo: la scena rimane un istante vuota.) (Violetta, che ritorna affannata, indi Alfredo.)	ALFREDO: I shall be at your service. (All go out at the door center. The stage for a while remains empty.) (Violetta, much agitated, returns, soon followed by Alfredo.)
VIOLETTA: Invitato qui a seguirmi, Verrà desso!—vorrà udirmi? Ei verrà—chè l' odio atroce Puote in lui più di mia voce.	VIOLETTA: Will he follow? Will he hear me? Have my words still power to move? He will come!—The voice of his hate Will speak louder than my love!
ALFREDO: Mi chiamaste?—Che bramate?	ALFREDO: Did you call me? What's your will?
VIOLETTA: Questi luoghi abbandonate— Un periglio vi sovrasta.	VIOLETTA: Leave this place, I do implore! You're in danger, in great danger—
ALFREDO: Ah, comprendo!—Basta, basta— E sì vile mi credete?	ALFREDO: So that's it!—I pray—no more! Do you think me such a coward?
VIOLETTA: Ah, no, mai.	VIOLETTA: Ah, no—never!
ALFREDO: Ma che temete?	ALFREDO: Then why fear?
VIOLETTA: Tremo sempre del Barone.	VIOLETTA: It's the Baron. I—I tremble!
ALFREDO: È tra noi mortal quistione— S' ei cadrà per mano mia Un sol colpo vi torria Coll' amante il protettore— V' atterrisce tal sciagura?	ALFREDO: True, we have a deadly feud. If by my hand he should fall, At one blow you lose your all— Both the lover and protector. Such misfortune must appal!

VIOLETTA: Ma s' ei fosse l' uccisore!— Ecco l' unica sventura— Ch' io pavento a me fatale!	VIOLETTA: Ah, what if he prove the slayer? There's the agonizing dread! It is your death that would slay me.
ALFREDO: La mia morte!—Che v'en cale.	ALFREDO: My death? What is that to you?
VIOLETTA: Deh partite, e sull' istante.	VIOLETTA: Go, I beg you! Go this instant.
ALFREDO: Partirò ma giura innante Che dovunque seguirai I passi miei.	ALFREDO: I go—but before we sever Swear that where my footsteps lead me You will follow!
VIOLETTA: Ah no, giammai!	VIOLETTA: Ah no—never!
ALFREDO: No!—giammai!	ALFREDO: Never? No?
VIOLETTA: Va, sciagurato, Scorda un nome ch' è infamato— Va—mi lascia sul momento— Di fuggirti un giuramento Sacro io feci.	VIOLETTA: Go, unhappy love, And forget my shameful name, Go, ah, go! Another oath I have sworn, an oath most binding— To forsake you!
ALFREDO: A chi? Dillo. Chi potea?	ALFREDO: Who required it?
VIOLETTA: A chi dritto pien ne avea.	VIOLETTA: One whose right was beyond question.
ALFREDO: Fu Douphol!	ALFREDO: Douphol, then!
VIOLETTA: (Con supremo sforzo.) Sì.	VIOLETTA: (Bravely.) Yes!
ALFREDO: Dunque l' ami?	ALFREDO: Then you love him?
VIOLETTA: Ebben—l' amo.	VIOLETTA: Yes, I love him!
ALFREDO: (Corre furente alla porta e grida.) Or tutti a me. (Detti, e tutti i precedenti, che confusamente tornano.)	ALFREDO: (Rushes impetuously to the door and cries:) Come hither, all of you! (The same, and all the rest who return in confusion.)
TUTTI: Ne appellaste?—Che volete?	ALL: Did you call us? What's your wish?
ALFREDO: Questa donna conoscete? (Additando Violetta che, abbattuta, si appoggia al tavolino.)	ALFREDO: Is this woman known to you? (Pointing to the fainting Violetta who leans against a table for support.)
TUTTI: Chi?—Violetta?	ALL: Who?—Violetta?
ALFREDO: Che facesse Non sapete?	ALFREDO: Do you know What she has done?
VIOLETTA: Ah, taci.	VIOLETTA: Ah, spare me!
TUTTI: No.	ALL: No.
ALFREDO: Ogni suo aver tal femmina Per amor mio sperdea; Io cieco, vile, misero, Tutto accettar potea. Ma è tempo ancora! Tergermi Da tanta macchia bramo, Qui testimon vi chiamo, Che qui pagata io l' ho. (Alfredo getta con furente sprezzo una borsa ai piedi di Violetta ed essa sviene tra la braccia di Flora e del Dottore. In tal momento entra il Padre.) (Detti ed il Signor Germont, ch' entra all' ultime parole.)	ALFREDO: All that she owned this woman spent Upon her lover. I, blind, infatuate fool, Allowed it, well content It's not too late to clear me Of my dishonoring blame. Stand witness. Thus I pay My earlier debt of shame. (With violent scorn he flings a purse at the feet of Violetta who faints in Flora's arms. In a minute, his father enters.) (The same and Germont who enters in time to hear Alfredo's final words)
TUTTI: Oh, infamia orribile tu commettesti!— Un cor sensibile così uccidesti!— Di donne ignobile insultatore, Di qua allontanati, ne desti orror.	ALL: Dreadful injustice you have committed, To break a heart that so tenderly loved you! Begone!—You fill us with infinite horror, Ignoble man, insulter of women!
GERMONT: (Con dignitoso fuoco.) Di sprezzo degno sè stesso rende. Chi pur nell' ira la donna offende. Dov' è mio figlio?—Più non lo vedo, In te più Alfredo—trovar non so. (Da sè.) Io sol fra tanti so qual virtude Di quella misera il sen racchiude— Io so che l' ama, che gli è fedele; Eppur, crudele, tacer dovrò!	GERMONT: (With dignified reproach.) No scorn too bitter for any man Who, even in anger, taunts a woman! Where is my son? I do not see him. I do not find Alfredo in you. (Aside.) I alone know what a virtuous heart Beats in that woman's unhappy breast. I alone know she is loving and true, And yet—ah, cruel!—I cannot speak!
ALFREDO: (Da sè.) Ah, sì!—che feci!—ne sento orrore!— Gelosa smania, deluso amore Mi strazian l' alma—più non ragiono— Da lei perdono—più non avrò. Volea fuggirla—non ho potuto!— Dall' ira spinto, son qui venuto!— Or che lo sdegno ho disfogato,— Me sciagurato!—rimorso io n' ho.	ALFREDO: (Aside.) What have I done? My deed appals me! My jealous rage, my love's distress Destroy me utterly, drive me to madness! No more with pardon she'll come to bless! I would have fled her—I was not strong. Here my rage led me,—to do her wrong. But now I've vented my mad disdain— Ah, what can heal remorseful pain?
VIOLETTA: (Riavendosi.) Alfredo, Alfredo, di questo core Non puoi comprendere tutto l' amore! Tu non conosci che fino a prezzo Del tuo disprezzo—provato io l'ho. Ma verrà giorno in che il saprai— Com' io t' amassi confesserai— Dio dai rimorsi ti salvi allora— Io spenta ancora—pur t' amerò.	VIOLETTA: (Coming to.) Alfredo, Alfredo, who can impart The love I bear you within my heart! You'll never know your scorn I drew To prove how great my love for you. Some day you'll know and you will bow Your head, and my true love avow. May God then save you from your remorse— For even in death, I'll ever love you.
BARONE: (Piano ad Alfredo. Da sè.) A questa donna l' atroce insulto, Qui tutti offese, ma non inulto Fia tanto oltraggio—provar vi voglio Che il vostro orgoglio—fiaccar saprò.	BARON: (Aside to Alfredo.) Your insult to this lady all have heard, And to your hurt. But not the deed alone But arrant pride I'll know how to chastize.
TUTTI: (A Violetta.) Ahi quanto peni!—Ma pur fa core— Qui soffre ognuno del tuo dolore; Fra cari amici qui sei soltanto; Rasciuga il pianto—che t' inondò. (Germont trae seco il figlio; il Barone lo segue. Violetta è condotta in altra stanza dal Dottore e da Flora; gli altri si disperdono.)	ALL: (To Violetta.) Ah, what agony! But be comforted. Your anguish strikes a sympathetic chord. You are with friends, Violetta. Dry your tears. (Germont leads Alfredo out. The Baron follows. Flora and the Doctor help Violetta to retire to an adjoining room while the rest disperse.)

ATTO QUATRO	ACT IV
Camera da letto di Violetta.—Nel fondo è un letto con cortine mezzo tirate; una finestra chiusa da imposte interne; presso il letto uno sgabello su cui una bottiglia d'acqua, una tazza di cristallo, diverse medicine.—A metà della scena una toiletta, vicino un canapè; più distante un altro mobile, su cui arde un lume da notte, varie sedie ed altri mobili. La porta è a sinsitra; di fronte v'è un caminetto con fuoco acceso.	Violetta's bedroom. In the rear is a bed, its curtain partly drawn; also a window, with shutters from within. A nightstand near the bed holds a carafe of water, a glass, and various medicine bottles. Downstage a toilet table and mirror, and a chaise-longue. Other chairs and furniture, and a bureau on which a night lamp is burning. In the hearth, center, a fire is smoldering.
Violetta dorme sul letto—Annina, seduta presso il caminetto, è pure addormita.	Violetta is still in bed, asleep. Annina dozes in a chair by the fireplace.
VIOLETTA: (Destandosi.) Annina!	VIOLETTA: (Awaking.) Annina!
ANNINA: (Svegliandosi confusa.) Comandate?	ANNINA: (Starting up.) Ah! What do you wish, Madam?
VIOLETTA: Dormivi, poveretta?	VIOLETTA: Were you asleep, poor girl?
ANNINA: Sì, perdonate.	ANNINA: I was—forgive me.
VIOLETTA: Dammi d' acqua un sorso. (Annina eseguisce.) Osserva, è pieno il giorno?	VIOLETTA: A drink of water, please. (Annina gets it.) Look—is it day, already?
ANNINA: Son sett' ore.	ANNINA: It is seven o'clock.
VIOLETTA: Dà accesso a un po' di luce.	VIOLETTA: Let in a little light.
ANNINA: (Apre la imposte, e guarda nella via.) Il Signor di Grenvil!	ANNINA: (Opens the shutters and looks out.) Oh, there's Monsieur Grenvil!
VIOLETTA: Oh il vero amico! Alzar mi vo'—m' aita. (Si alza e ricade; poi, sostenuta da Annina, va lentamente verso il canapè ed il Dottore entra in tempo per assisterla ad adagiarvisi—Annina vi aggiunge dei cuscini.)	VIOLETTA: How kind a friend he is! Help me, I wish to get up. (She attempts to rise but falls back. Then, leaning on Annina, she totters toward the chaise-longue. The Doctor arrives in time to help her recline, while Annina arranges cushions about her.)
VIOLETTA: Quanta bontà—Pensaste a me per tempo!	VIOLETTA: How good of you! To be thinking of me so often!
DOTTORE: Sì, come vi sentite? (Le tocca il polso.)	DOCTOR: How are you feeling now? (Feels her pulse.)
VIOLETTA: Soffre il mio corpo, ma tranquilla ho l' alma. Mi confortò ier sera un pio ministro. Ah, Religione è sollievo ai sofferenti.	VIOLETTA: The body suffers, but the spirit is tranquil. Last night a holy man gave me a great comfort. Religion brings relief to the afflicted.
DOTTORE: E questa notte?	DOCTOR: What sort of night did you have?
VIOLETTA: Ebbi tranquillo il sonno.	VIOLETTA: I slept quite peacefully.
DOTTORE: Coraggio adunque—la convalescenza Non è lontana.	DOCTOR: Take heart, then. You'll soon be on the mend.
VIOLETTA: Oh, la bugia pietosa Ai medici è concessa.	VIOLETTA: Oh, the pious lie Is the doctor's prerogative!
DOTTORE: (Stringendole la mano.) Addio—a più tardi.	DOCTOR: (Clasps her hand.) Good-bye—I'll see you later.
VIOLETTA: Non mi scordate.	VIOLETTA: Do not forget me.
ANNINA: (Piano al Dottore, accompagnandolo.) Come va, Signore?	ANNINA: (In an undertone to the Doctor as she shows him out.) How is she, Doctor?
DOTTORE: La tisi non le accorda che poche ore. (Piano e parte.)	DOCTOR: Her sickness will not give her more than a few hours. (In an undertone, then exit.)
ANNINA: Or fate cor.	ANNINA: Cheer up, I beg you!
VIOLETTA: Giorno di festa è questo?	VIOLETTA: Is today a holiday?
ANNINA: Tutta Parigi impazza—è carnevale.	ANNINA: That it is, and all Paris goes mad. It is the carnival.
VIOLETTA: Oh, nel comun tripudio, sallo Iddio Quanti infelici soffron!—Quale somma V' ha in quello stipo? (Indicandolo.)	VIOLETTA: In all this merrymaking, Heaven only knows How many poor creatures are suffering! How much have we in that cupboard? (Pointing.)
ANNINA: (L'apre e conta.) Venti luigi.	ANNINA: (Opens it and counts.) Twenty louis.
VIOLETTA: Dieci ne reca ai poveri tu stessa.	VIOLETTA: Go out and distribute ten among the poor.
ANNINA: Poco rimanvi allora.	ANNINA: You'll have very little left, then.
VIOLETTA: Oh, mi saran bastanti!— (Sospirando.) Cerca poscia mie lettere.	VIOLETTA: Ah, there will be enough for me! (Sighs.) Then go for my letters.
ANNINA: Ma voi?	ANNINA: But you—?
VIOLETTA: Nulla occorrà—sollecita, se puoi. (Annina esce. Violetta, che trae dal seno una lettera e legge.) "Teneste la promessa—La disfida Ebbe luogo; il barone fu ferito. Però migliora—Alfredo È in stranio suolo; il vostro sacrifizio Io stesso gli ho svelato. Egli a voi tornerà pel suo perdono; Io pur verrò—Curatevi—mertate Un avvenir migliore. Giorgio Germont." (Desolata.) È tardi! (Si alza.) Attendo, attendo—Nè a me giungon mai. Oh! come son mutata! Ma il Dottore a sperar pure m' esorta!— Ah, con tal morbo ogni speranza è morta. Addio, del passato bei sogni ridenti, Le rose del volto già sono pallenti; L' amore d' Alfredo perfino mi manca, Conforto, sostegno dell' anima stanca. Conforto! Sostegno! Ah! della Traviata sorridi al desio! A lei deh perdona, tu accoglila, o Dio! Or, tutto, tutto finì . . . Le gioie, i dolori fra poco avran fine; La tomba ai mortali di tutto è confine! Non lagrima o fiore avrà la mia fos-	VIOLETTA: I shan't need anything. Only don't be long. (Annina exits. Violetta draws a letter from her bosom and reads.) "You kept your promise. The duel Took place. The Baron was wounded But is now recovering. Alfredo Is out of the country. Your sacrifice I have myself revealed to him. He will be coming to you for forgiveness. I too will see you. Get well. You deserve A better future. Giorgio Germont." (Desolately.) It's late! (She arises.) I wait and wait—will they never come? (Gazing at herself in the mirror.) Ah, how my face is altered! And yet of hope the Doctor talks!—In vain! Hope is slain by such an illness! Farewell, happy dreams of the time that has fled! My cheeks' blooming roses are faded and dead. The love of Alfredo, my weary heart's core, My comfort, my strength—that too is no more! My comfort! My strength! O God, to the prayer of the lost one award Your infinite mercy.—Receive her, dear Lord! Soon all, all will pass! Both rapture and pain now soon will be over— All things, in the end, the cold tomb will cover. But oh, neither flowers now tear-sa,

Non croce, col nome, che copra quest' ossa!—
Ah, della Traviata sorridi al desio,
A lei deh perdona, tu accoglila, O Dio!
Or tutto finì.
(Siede.)

CORO-BACCANALE: (Esterno.)
Largo al quadrupede
Sir della festa
Di fiori e pampini
Cinta la testa—
Largo al più docile
D' ogni cornuto,
Di corni e pifferi
Abbia il saluto.
Parigini, date passo
Al trionfo del Bue grasso.
L'Asia, nè l' Africa
Vide il più bello,
Vanto ed orgoglio
D' ogni macello—
Allegre maschere,
Pazzi garzoni,
Tutti plauditelo
Con canti e suoni!—
Parigini, date passo
Al trionfo del Bue grasso.
(Violetta ed Annina, che torna frettolosa.)

ANNINA: (Esitando.) Signora.

VIOLETTA: Che t' accadde?

ANNINA: Quest' oggi, è vero vi sentite meglio?

VIOLETTA: Sì, perchè?

ANNINA: D' esser calma promettete?

VIOLETTA: Sì; che vuoi dirmi?

ANNINA: Prevenir vi volli—
Una gioia improvvisa . . .

VIOLETTA: Uno gioia!—dicesti?

ANNINA: (Afferma col capo.) Si, o Signora.

VIOLETTA: Alfredo!—Ah, tu il vedesti!
Ei vien! T'affretta.
(Annina afferma col capo e va ad aprire la porta.)

VIOLETTA: Alfredo?—
(Andando verso l'uscio.)
(Alfredo comparisce, pallido per la commozione, ed ambedue, gettandosi le braccia al collo, esclamano:)

VIOLETTA: Amato Alfredo!

ALFREDO: Oh, gioia.—Oh, mia Violetta!—
Colpevol sono—so tutto, o cara—

VIOLETTA: Io so che alfine reso mi sei.

ALFREDO: Da questo palpito s' io t' ami, impara—
Senza te existere più non potrei.

drops will grace
The lone, unmarked sod of my burial place.
O God, to the prayer of the lost one award
Your infinite mercy!—Receive her, dear Lord!
(She sits.)

BACCHANALIAN CHORUS: (Offstage.) Make way for his lordship
The four-footed beast
With flowers and vine-leaves
Adorned for the feast.
Make way for this meekest
Of all horned males,
While all pay him homage
With pipe, horn and "hails!"
Come, Parisians—part the way
For the Fat Bull's holiday!
Asia and Africa
Can't find his peer,
The boast and pride
Of our career.
Hence, merry maskers
And madcap boys,
Greet him and cheer him
With thundering noise!
Come, Parisians—part the way
For the Fat Bull's holiday!
(Violetta and Annina, who comes in hastily.)

ANNINA: (Hesitant.) Madam—

VIOLETTA: What is it?

ANNINA: Today you are feeling better, aren't you?

VIOLETTA: Yes,—but why the question?

ANNINA: If you promise not to get excited—

VIOLETTA: Yes, yes—what is it you want to tell me?

ANNINA: I want to prepare you for—
A very happy surprise.

VIOLETTA: A happy surprise—did you say?

ANNINA: (She nods.) Yes, dear Madam.

VIOLETTA: It's Alfredo!—You've seen him!
He's coming! Tell him—quickly!
(Annina nods and goes to open the door.)

VIOLETTA: Alfredo?—
(Going toward the door.)
(Alfredo enters, pale with emotion. They fall into each other's arms.)

VIOLETTA: Alfredo! Beloved!

ALFREDO: My Violetta!
I've been to blame, love. Now I know all—

VIOLETTA: I only know that you've come back to me.

ALFREDO: Oh, let my heartbeats tell all my devotion—
Only with you, love, can life ever be!

VIOLETTA: Ah, s' anco in vita m'hai ritrovata,
Credi, che uccidere non può il dolor.

ALFREDO: Scorda l' affanno, donna adorata,
A me perdona e al genitor.

VIOLETTA: Ch' io ti perdoni?—La rea son io;
Ma solo amor tal mi rendè.

ALFREDO E VIOLETTA: Null' uomo o demone, angiol mio,
Mai più dividermi potrà da te.
Parigi, o cara, noi lasceremo,
La vita uniti trascorreremo,
De' corsi affanni compenso avrai—
La tua salute rifiorirà.
Sospiro e luce tu mi sarai,
Tutto il futuro ne arriderà.
Parigi, o caro, noi lasceremo;
La vita uniti trascorreremo.
De' corsi affanni compenso avrai—
La mia salute rifiorirà.
Sospiro e luce tu mi sarai.
Tutto il futuro ne arriderà.

VIOLETTA: Ah non più—a un tempio—Alfredo, andiamo,
Del tuo ritorno grazie rendiamo.
(Vacilla.)

ALFREDO: Tu impallidisci!

VIOLETTA: È nulla, sai? Gioia improvvisa non entra mai, senza turbarlo in mesto core.
(S'abbandona, come sfinita, sopra una sedia, col capo pendente all' indietro.)

ALFREDO: Gran Dio!—Violetta!
(Spaventato, sorreggendola.)

VIOLETTA: È il mio malore.
Fu debolezza—ora son forte—
Vedi?—Sorrido.
(Sforzandosi.)

ALFREDO: (Desolato.) Ahi, cruda sorte!

VIOLETTA: Fu nulla—Annina, dammi a vestire.

ALFREDO: Adesso?—attendi.

VIOLETTA: No—voglio uscire.
(Annina le presenta una veste ch' ella fa per indossare, e, impeditane dalla debolezza esclama:)
Gran Dio!—Non posso!
(Getta con dispetto la veste e ricade sulla sedia.)

ALFREDO: (Ad Annina.) Cielo, che vedo! Va pel Dottore.

VIOLETTA: Digli che Alfredo
È ritornato all' amor mio—
Digli che vivere ancor vogl'io.
(Annina parte.)

VIOLETTA: Let them not tell you that sorrow can kill!—
Look at me, dearest! I breathe for you still.

ALFREDO: All grief forget, my beloved, and live!
The son, the father, who wronged you—forgive!

VIOLETTA: Forgive you, Alfredo?
The fault is my own—
If love can be blamed for what I have done!

ALFREDO and VIOLETTA: Ourselves united, beloved, never
Can earthly power avail to sever.
To Paris, dearest, we bid adieu,
In love united our days will flow.
Grief turned to gladness will then renew
Your cheeks' dimmed roses to brighter glow.
All life and light you'll be to me,
Our future days entranced will be.
To Paris, dearest, we bid adieu,
In love united our days will flow.
Grief turned to gladness will then renew
Your cheeks' dimmed roses to brighter glow.
Such light and life you'll be to me,
Our future days entranced will be.

VIOLETTA: Ah, no more! Alfredo, to a temple let us go
To offer thanks for your return to me.
(She reels.)

ALFREDO: You've turned pale!

VIOLETTA: It's nothing—really. A sudden happiness
Always affects a troubled heart.
(She sinks down, spent, into a chair, her head falling back.)

ALFREDO: Violetta! Violetta!
(Alarmed, lifting her up.)

VIOLETTA: It's—it's my illness.
I felt myself growing faint.—Now I am stronger.
See—I am smiling!
(Forcing a smile.)

ALFREDO: (Desolate.) Ah, cruel fate!

VIOLETTA: It was nothing.—Annina, help me into a dress.

ALFREDO: Right now?—Wait a little.

VIOLETTA: No—I want to go out.
(Annina brings her a gown which Violetta tries to put on. But she is overcome with faintness and exclaims:)
Alas!—I cannot! (She throws the dress from her impatiently and falls back into the chair.)

ALFREDO: (To Annina.) Heavens! What's happened?
Get the doctor at once.

VIOLETTA: Tell him that Alfredo
Has come back to my heart—
Tell him—tell him I want to live—to live . . .

Ma se tornando non m'hai salvato,
(Ad Alfredo.)
A niuno in terra salvarmi è dato.
Ah, Gran Dio!—morir sì giovane,
Io, che penato ho tanto!—
Morir sì presso a tergere
Il mio sì lungo pianto!
Ah! dunque fu delirio
La credula speranza;
Invano di costanza
Armato avrò il mio cor!—
Alfredo—oh! il crudo termine
Serbato al nostro amor?

ALFREDO: Oh! mio sospiro e palpito
Diletta del cor mio!—
Le mie colle tue lagrime
Confondere degg' io—
Ma più che mai deh! Credilo
M'è d'uopo di costanza—
Ah! tutto alla speranza
Non chiudere il tuo cor!—
Ah, Violetta mia, deh, calmati
M' uccide il tuo dolor.
(Violetta si abbandona sul canapè.)
(Detti, Germont, ed il Dottore.)

GERMONT: (Entrando.) Ah! Violetta!

VIOLETTA: Voi, signor!

ALFREDO: Mio padre!

VIOLETTA: Non mi scordaste?

GERMONT: La promessa adempio—
A stringervi qual figlia vengo al seno,
O generosa.

VIOLETTA: Ahimè, tardi giungeste!—
Pure, grata ven sono—
(Lo abbraccia.)
Grenvil, vedete?—Tra le braccia io spiro
Di quanti ho cari al mondo.

GERMONT: (Da se.) Che mai dite!
(La osserva.)
O cielo! è ver!

ALFREDO: La vedi, padre mio?

GERMONT: Di più non lacerarmi—
Troppo rimorso l' alma mi divora—
Quasi fulmin m' atterra ogni suo detto—
Oh! mal cauto vegliardo!—
Il mal ch'io feci ora sol vedo!

(Exit Annina.)
But if by coming back you have not saved me,
(To Alfredo.)
Then no one on earth can save me now.
Alas! For me so young to die,
So young for all my sorrow!
To die when hope gives promise of
A happier tomorrow!
Ah, was it then illusion,
The faith that kept me strong
And armed my soul with constancy?
Ah, woe, to be so wronged!
Is this the cruel ending; love,
For all the bliss we longed?

ALFREDO: O my beloved! My breath! My life!
My very heart's own throbbing,
My soul goes out to yours, my love,
To share your tears and sobbing.
Our spirits more than ever now
Must rest on constancy.
And hope once more, Violetta,
You must shelter in your breast.
Ah, calm your misery!
Your grief brings death to me!
(Violette drops onto the couch.)
(The same, Germont and the Doctor.)

GERMONT: (Coming in.) Ah, Violetta!

VIOLETTA: You, sir?

ALFREDO: Father!

VIOLETTA: You've not forgotten me, then?

GERMONT: I'm fulfilling a promise—
To clasp you to my heart like my own child,
O generous-hearted woman!

VIOLETTA: Alas! You come too late!
Still, I am grateful.
(Embraces him.)
Do you see, Grenvil? I'll be dying in the arms
Of those I hold dearest in the world.

GERMONT: (Aside.) What are you saying?
(Looking at her.)
Too late, alas!

ALFREDO: You see her, Father!

GERMONT: Ah, don't torment me further!
My deep remorse gives me no peace—
Her every word shatters my being.
O rash old man that I was!
Ah, only now can I see the extent of my mischief!

VIOLETTA: (Frattanto avrà aperto a stento un ripostiglio della toilette, e, toltone un medaglione, dice:) Più a me t'appressa.
Ascolta, amato Alfredo.
Prendi, quest è l'immagine
De' miei passati giorni,
A rammentar ti torni
Colei che sì t' amò.

ALFREDO: No, non morrai, non dirmelo,
Dei vivere, amor mio—
A strazio sì terribile
Qui non mi trasse Iddio.

VIOLETTA: Se una pudica vergine
Degli anni suoi nel fiore
A te donasse il core—
Sposa ti sia—lo vo'.
Le porgi questa effigie,
Dille che dono ell' è
Di chi, nel ciel tra gli angeli
Prega per lei, per te.

ALFREDO: Sì presto—ah! no—dividerti
Morte non può da me—
Ah! vivi, o un solo feretro
M' accoglierà con te.

GERMONT: Cara, sublime vittima
D' un generoso amore,
Perdonami lo strazio
Recato al tuo bel core.

GERMONT, DOTTORE E ANNINA: Finchè avrà il ciglio lagrime
Io piangerò per te.
Vola a' beati spiriti;
Iddio ti chiama a sè.

VIOLETTA: È strano!
(Alzandosi rianimata.)

TUTTI: Che!

VIOLETTA: Cessarono
Gli spasmi del dolore.
In me rinasce, m' agita
Insolito vigore!
Ah!—ma io ritorno a vivere!—
(Trasalendo.)
Oh! gioia!
(Ricade sul canapè.)

TUTTI: O cielo!—muor!

ALFREDO: Violetta?

TUTTI: O Dio!—soccorrasi.

DOTTORE: (Dopo averle toccoto il polso.) E spenta!

ALFREDO E TUTTI: O rio dolor!
(Quadro, e cade la tela.)

FINE.

VIOLETTA: (After opening a drawer of her toilet table with difficulty, takes out a locket and says:) Draw nearer to me. Listen, beloved Alfredo!
Take it—This is my image
In happy days gone by,— Reminder, when I die,
Of one who loved you well.

ALFREDO: Ah, no! You shall not die
But live, dear heart, for me!
You could not doom me to Such cruel misery!

VIOLETTA: If some day a pure maiden
In all her youth's full May
Should love—ah, wed her, pray!
To her tell our story.
Put in her hand this likeness
And say it was the token
Of one who is in a better world
Prays for your bliss unbroken.

ALFREDO: Ah soon, too soon to part!
Death cannot now divide us!
Oh, live, or let destiny confide us to a common grave!

GERMONT: Ah, sacrifice sublime
To an exalted love!
Forgive the heart's deep anguish
I caused her, Powers above!

GERMONT, DOCTOR and ANNINA: Ah, ever shall I weep
And ever mourn your fate.
Unto a happier realm
may God take your spirit.

VIOLETTA: How strange! (She rises as if reanimated.)

ALL: What is it?

VIOLETTA: They're over now, the spasms of my pain.
A newborn strength revives me—
Fills me with life again!
Ah—I am coming back—to life!—
(In exaltation.)
Ah! Happiness!
(She falls back on the sofa.)

ALL: O Heaven! She is dying!

ALFREDO: Violetta!

ALL: O God—save her!

DOCTOR: (After feeling her pulse.) She is dead!

ALFREDO, ALL: O grief intolerable!
(The Curtain falls.)

THE END.

Un Ballo In Maschera (1859)

A Masked Ball

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY ANTONIO SOMMA

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by Antonio Somma (inspired by Eugène Scribe's Gustave III, ou Le Bal Masqué), premiered at the Teatro Apollo in Rome on February 17, 1859. The Governor of Boston, Riccardo of Warwick, is meeting with his officials, including Samuel and Tom who plan to assassinate him. Riccardo receives a list of the names of those invited to his masked ball, among them Amelia, wife of Riccardo's loyal secretary, Renato. Although Riccardo is secretly in love with her, he dares not betray his closest friend, especially as Renato has uncovered the plot to kill him. A judge banishes Ulrica, a black woman accused of witchcraft. Oscar and Riccardo pay her a visit to find out the truth of these charges. Amelia comes to see Ulrica to ask whether she can be cured—she is in love with someone other than her husband and she is afraid. Ulrica counsels her to make a potion from an herb growing by the scaffold; she tells her to pick the herb at night. Riccardo overhears all, including Ulrica's prophecy that he will be killed by the first to shake his hand. Renato enters in total ignorance of Ulrica's warning and shakes his hand. When Amelia picks the herb for the potion, she and Riccardo meet and sing together of their love and grief. They hear footsteps and Amelia veils herself. Renato informs Riccardo that the conspirators are about to murder him. As Riccardo escapes, the conspirators tear off Amelia's veil and Renato realizes he's been betrayed. Amelia begs his pardon and, awaiting death, gives her son a farewell kiss. Renato joins with the conspirators. They draw lots to choose who will kill Riccardo; Renato wins. Amelia warns Riccardo via the page. The page tells Renato what Riccardo will be wearing at the ball. Renato stabs Riccardo. When the other guests attack Renato, Riccardo defends him and clears Amelia's name. He promotes Renato, orders him to be transferred to England, pardons the conspirators, and then dies.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
SCENA PRIMA	SCENE I
E il mattino.—Una sala nella casa del Governatore. In fondo l' ingresso delle sue stanze. Deputati, Gentiluomini, Popolani, Uffiziali; sul dinanzi Samuel, Tom e loro Aderenti—tutti in attesa di Riccardo.	A Hall in the house of the Governor.—Deputies, gentlemen, officers, and people.—In the forepart of the stage, Samuel Tom, and their adherents—all waiting for the Count.
UFFIZIALI E GENTILUOMINI: Posa in pace, a ' bei sogni ristora, O Riccardo, il tuo nobile cor— A te scudo su questa dimora Sta d'un vergine mondo l' amor.	OFFICERS AND GENTLEMEN: O noble Richard, set your heart at rest, Here your devoted friends are offering Their hands and hearts for your protection Against the attacks of all your foes.
SAM, TOM E LORO ADERENTI: E sta l' odio, che prèpara il fio, Ripensando ai caduti per te— Come speri, desceso l' oblio Sulle tombe infelici non è.	SAMUEL, TOM, AND THEIR FRIENDS: Here also stand your enemies, Whose vengeance you deserve; Your victims in their sepulchres Are not by all forgotten!
SCENA II	SCENE II
Oscar dalle stanze del Conte, indi Riccardo.	Oscar, and then Richard, coming from the inner apartments.
OSC: S' avanza il Conte.	OSC: Here comes the Count!
RIC: (salutando gli astanti). Amici miei . . . Soldati. E voi del par diletti a me!.. (ai Deputati nel ricevere delle suppliche.) Porgete: A me s' aspetta—io deggio Su' miei fidi vegliar,—perchè sia pago Ogni voto, se giusto. Bello il poter non è, che de' soggetti Le lacrime non terge, e ad incorrotta Gloria non mira.	RICH: (Saluting the bystanders). Brave soldiers! My dear beloved friends— (To the deputies, while receiving some petitions.) Give me. It is my strictest duty To attend to the welfare Of all my faithful subjects. There is no charm in power When that is not exerted To succor those who languish Beneath an adverse fate.
OSC: (a lui) Leggere vi piaccia Delle danze l' invito.	OSC: (giving him a paper). Here is the list of all The persons invited to the ball.
RIC: Avresti alcuna Beltà dimenticato?	RICH: I hope that none has been forgotten.
OSC: (offrendogli un foglio). Eccovi i nomi.	OSC: (giving him the list). There all the names are written.
RIC: Amelia..ah dessa ancor! l'anima mia (leggendo, tra sè.) In lei rapita ogni grandezza oblia! La rivedrà nell' estasi Raggiante di pallore.. E qui sonar d' amore La sua parola udrà. O dolce notte, scendere Tu puoi gemmata a festa: Ma la mia stella è questa: Questa che il ciel non ha!	RICH: (reading aside). Amelia—dear, sweet name! Its mere sound fills my heart with joy! Her beauteous, charming image Inspires my soul with love; Here soon I shall behold her In all her real charms. Whatever may be the splendor Of your most brilliant stars, Sweet night, none is so shining As my love's dazzling eyes!

UFFIZIALI E GENTILUMONI: Entro sè stesso assorto Con generoso affetto IL nostro bene oggetto De' suoi pensier farà.	OFFICERS AND GENTLEMEN: He is now surely harboring noble thoughts In his mind: And scheming plans for helping All those who need his aid.
SAM, TOM E LORO ADERENTI: (sommesamente) L' ora non è—chè tutto Qui d' operar ne toglie. Dalle nemiche soglie Meglio l' useir sarà.	SAMUEL, TOM, AND THEIR ADHERENTS: (aside). Here, now, we can do nothing, So many people watch; From this hall it would be better For us now to retire. (Exeunt.)
RIC: Il cenno mio di là con essi attendi (ad Oscar.) (tutti s' allontanano.)	RICH: (to Oscar.) In the next room with them, wait for my orders.
OSC: Libero è il varco a voi. (verso Renato che s' avanza.)	OSC: (to Reinhart, who is advancing). Now you may come on.
SCENA III	SCENE III
Riccardo e Renato.	Richard and Reinhart.
REN: Deh come triste appar! (a parte.)	REIN: How sad he looks! (Aside.)
RIC: (tra sè.) Amelia!	RICH: (Aside.) Amelia!
REN: Conte. (chinandosi)	REIN: (Bowing.) Count!
RIC: O ciel! lo sposo suo! (c.s.)	RICH: Heavens! her husband!
REN: Turbato il mio (accostandosi.) Signor, mentre dovunque il nome suo. Inclito suona?	REIN: So sad, my lord, when all around you Are now so smiling?
RIC: Per la gloria è molto, Nulla pel cor—Secreta, acerba cura M'opprime.	RICH: Enough of glory I have, indeed, but empty is my heart! Uneasy thoughts . . . .
REN: E donde?	REIN: Where, then are they?
RIC: Ah no?..non piu..	RICH: I dare not tell . . . .
REN: Dirolla Io la cagion.	REIN: Well, it is enough, I know why you are sad.
RIC: (da sè.) Gran Dio!	RICH: (Aside.) Great God!
REN: So tutto..	REIN: Yes, I know all.
RIC: Che!	RICH: What?
REN: So tutto. Già questa soglia stessa Non t' è securo asilo.	REIN: I know all; You think this your mansion Unsafe . . . .
RIC: Prosegui.	RICH: Go on.
REN: Un veo disegno Nell' ombre si matura, I giorni tuoi minaccia.	REIN: A secret plan is plotted, Against your life, By your relentless foes.
RIC: Ah!..gli è di ciò che parli? (con gioia) Altro non sai? . . .	RICH: Is this all that you know? No more than this?
REN: Se udir t' è grato i nomi.	REIN: I know their names . . . .
RIC: Che monta? io li disprezzo.	RICH: What do I care; I despise them.
REN: Svelarli è mio dover.	REIN: It is my duty to reveal them.
RIC: Taci: Nel sangue Contaminarmi allor dovrei. Non fia Nol vo'—De' miei lo zelo Ognor mi guardi, e mi protegga il cielo.	RICH: No, no! I should then, spill, their blood. I am not willing to resort To such abhorred measures.

REN: Alla vita che t'arride Di speranze e glorie piena. D' altre mille e mille vite Il destino s' incatena! Nel tuo core il Genio palpita Del suo splendido avvenir! Ma sarà dovunque, sempre Chiuso il varco alle ferite, Perchè scudo del tuo petto È de' tuoi fidi l' affetto? Dell' amer più desto è l' odio Le sue vittime a colpir!	REIN: Your life is full of brightest hopes, And glory shines over your brow; Your fate is bound with that of thousands, Who firmly stand on your own side, And prop the power you are wielding With faithful hearts and ready hands. But, not for ever may successful Be their noble, virtuous efforts Against the plots of your ill-wishers, Who, soon or late, may well succeed. For hatred is often More active and steady in its pursuit than love.
SCENA IV	SCENE IV
Oscar, poi un Giudice, e detti.	Oscar and a Judge.
OSC: Il primo Giudice. (all' entrata.)	OSC: The first judge. (At the entrance.)
RIC: S' avanzi.	RICH: Let him advance.
GIU: Conte! (offrendogli dispacci a firmare.)	JUD: (Giving him some dispatches.) Count!
RIC: Che leggo!..il bando ad una donna! Or donde? Qual è il suo nome?.. di che rea?	RICH: What do I see! . . . a woman exiled? Who is she? What is her crime?
GIU: S'appella Ulrica-dell' abbietto Sangue de'negri.	JUD: Ulrica is her name. She is of the vile race of negroes.
OSC: Intorno a cui s' affollano Tutte le stirpi. Del futuro l'alta Divinatrice..	OSC: The astrologer to whom all people Apply to know their fate; The negro woman . . . .
GIU: Che nell' antro immondo Chiama i peggiori, d' ogni reo consiglio Sospetta già. Dovuto è l' esiglio: Nè muta il voto mio.	JUD: Within her dark abode She is receiving every set Of evil-doers; she is deserving The punishment there mentioned.
RIC: Che ne di' tu? (ad Oscar.)	RICH: (To Oscar.) What's your opinion?
OSC: Difenderla vogl'io. Volta la terrea—Fronte alle stelle Come sfavilla—La sua pupilla, Quando alle belle—Il fin predice Mesto o felice—Dei loro amor! Ed è con l'Erebo—D'accordo ognor!	OSC: She is not guilty! She turns her face towards the stars,— Her eyes beam forth a glorious light, She then tells all the pretty girls The fate and end of all their loves; And never fails to tell them right.
RIC: Che vaga coppia . . . — Che protettor!	RICH: They are a precious pair . . . a fine protector!
OSC: Chi la fatidica—Sua gonna afferra, O passi 'l mare.—Voli alla guerra, Le sue vicende—Soavi, amare Da questa apprende—Nel dubbio cor. Ed è con l'Erebo—D' accordo ognor!	OSC: Whoever can but touch her garment, Wherever he goes, by land or sea, He is sure to know what he is to meet, Of good or bad, throughout his way; And never fails to know what's right!
RIC: Che vaga coppia . . . Che protettor!	RICH: They are a precious pair . . . a fine protector!
GIU: Sia condannata.	JUD: But she must be condemned!
OSC: (verso il Conte.) Ah! voi Assolverla deguate.	OSC: (To the Count.) My lord, Please acquit her.

RIC: Ebben tutti chiamate:
Or v'apro un mio pensier.
(usciti.)
(Renato e Oscar invitano a rientrare gli)

SCENA V

Samuel, Tom e Seguaci, Gentiluomini, Uffiziali e detti.

RIC: Signori: oggi d'Ulrica
Alla magion v'invito-
Ma sotto altro vestito;
Io là sarò.

REN: Davver?

RIC: Sì, vo' gustar la scena.

REN: L' idea non è prudente.

RIC: La trovo anzi eccellente,
Feconda di piacer.

REN: To ravvisar taluno
Ivi potria.

RIC: Qual tema!

SAM, TOM: Ve', ve', di tutto trema.
(sogghignando.)
Codesto consiglier.

RIC: E tu m' appronta un abito
(ad Oscar)
Da prescator.

SAM, TOM E LORO ADERENTI:
Chi sa . . . .
(sotto voce.)
Che alla vendetta l'adito
Non s'apra alfin colà?

RIC: Ogni cura si doni al diletto,
E s' accorra nel magico tetto:
Tra la folla de' creduli ognuno
S'abbandoni e folleggi con me.

REN: E s'accorra, ma vegli 'l sospetto
Sui perigli che fremono intorno,
Ma protegga il magnanimo petto
Di chi nulla paventa per sè.

OSC: L indovina ne dice di belle,
E sta ben che l'interroghi anch'io;
Sentirò se m'arridon le stelle,
Di che sorti benefica m'è.

CORO: Scelga dunque ciascun la sua via
E risponda al festevole invito,
Perchè brilli d'un po d'allegria
Questa vita che il cielo ne diè.

SAM, TOM E SEGUACI: Senza posa vegliamo all' intento,
Nè si perda ove scocchi 'l momento;
Forse l'astro che regge il suo fato
Nell'abisso là spegnersi de'.

RIC: Dunque, signori, aspettovi,
Incognito, alle tre
Nell' antro dell' oracolo,
Della gran maga al piè.

TUTTI: Teco sarem di subito
Incogniti alle tre
Nell' antro dell' oracolo,
Della gran maga al piè.

RICH: Well!
Call in here all the people,
And then I will tell you my mind.
(Reinhart and Oscar call in all the persons that had gone out.)

SCENE V

Samuel, Tom, and their friends, Gentlemen, etc.

RICH: My friends, today, you are invited
To call at the Astrologer's;
There also I shall be present
With you, but in disguise.

REIN: Well thought!

RICH: Yes, I will enjoy the farce.

REIN: I think it is imprudent.

RICH: No, no, I think it excellent,
And full of mirth and pleasure.

REIN: Somebody might discover
Your real person there.

RICH: I think there is no danger.

SAM, TOM: Pshaw! what timid counsel!
He perceives danger everywhere.

RICH: (to Oscar.) Well, quick!
You must prepare me
A sailor's dress.

SAM, TOM, AND FRIENDS: Perhaps the farce may be propitious
To work out our revenge.

RICH: Let all prepare for mirth,
And hasten to the prophetess;
There with the foolish people
Let us enjoy the fun.

REIN: Let's go; but let's be watchful
Against the secret dangers
That there may be impending
On our beloved chief.

OSC: I'll also ask the Astrologer
About my future fate;
I'll know which way will fortune
Approach to my threshold!

CHOR: Let, then, every person
Choose slyly his own way
To the proposed amusement,
At the Divineress's house.

SAM, TOM AND FOLLOWERS: Let us watch every occasion
That may turn out propitious,
To put in execution
Our revengeful plans,

RICH: My friends, then, I shall meet you,
Disguised, at three o'clock,
Within the famous temple
Of the black prophetess.

ALL: Then we will surely meet you,
Disguised, at three o'clock,
Within the famous temple
Of the black prophetess.

SCENA VI

L' abituro dell' indovina. A sinistra un camino; il fuoco è acceso, e la caldaja magica fuma sovra un treppiè; dallo stesso lato l'uscio d'un oscuro recesso. Sul fianco a destra una scala che gira e si perde sotto la vòlta, e all' estremità della stessa sul davanti una piccola porta segreta. Nel fondo l'entrata della porta maggiore con ampia finestra d' allato.—In mezzo una rozza tavola, ee pendenti dal letto e dalle pareti stromenti ed arredi analoghi al luogo.
Nel fondo Uomini e Donne del Popolo. Ulrica presso la tavola; poco discosti un Fanciullo ed una Giovinetta che le domandano la buona ventura.

POPOLANI: Zitto l'incanto non dèssi turbare..
Par che Sàtana guizzi al focolare!

ULR: Re dell' abisso, affrettati, (ispirata)
Precipita per l'etra-
Senza libar la folgore
Il tetto mio penètra.
Omai tre volte l'upupa
Dall' alto sospirò;
La salamandra ignivora
Tre volte sibilò..
E delle tombe il gemito
Tre volte a me parlò!

SCENA VII

Riccardo da pescatore, avanzandosi tra la folla, nè scorgendo alcuno de' suoi.

RIC: Arrivo il primo!

POPOLANE: Villano, dà indietro.
(ei s'allontana ridendo.)

TUTTI: Deh! perchè tutto riluce di tetro?

ULR: È lui, è lui! ne' palpiti
Come risento addesso
La voluttà riardere
Del suo tremendo amplesso!
La face del futuro
Nella sinistra egli ha.
Arrise al mio scongiuro,
rifolgorar la fa:
Nulla, più nulla ascondersi
Al guardo mio potrà!
(batte il suolo e sparisce.)

TUTTI: Evviva la maga!

ULR: (di sottera). Silenzio, silenzio!

SCENA VIII

Silvano rompendo la calca, e detti.

SCENE VI

The abode of the Astrologer—On the left side there is a little path—a magic cauldron is smoking over a brisk fire—in the middle there is a rough table, and several magic instruments are hanging from the walls. Ulrica stands near the table, and the populace stand behind her—a boy and a girl near Ulrica are asking their fortunes.

PEOPLE: Hush! We must not break her incantations!
The devil seems to play over the fire!

ULR: (as if inspired.) Hasten, O King of the Abyss!
Fly through the ambient air
Without stirring the lightning,
And enter my abode
Three times has been heard screeching
The ominous lizard
Three times, too, has been hissing
The venomous red dragon
And three times have been groaning
The spirits from the grave.

SCENE VII

Richard, dressed as a sailor, comes in through the crowd, and discovering none of his friends, says:

RICH: I have arrived first! (Rough women from behind.)

WOMEN: Stand back, blockhead!
(Richard withdraws smiling.)

ALL: What is this misty light?

ULR: It is he! it is he!
I feel his presence within the fibers
That shake my inmost passions,
And rage with burning fire!
The future's hidden secrets
Are now revealed to me!
He has fully acceded
To all that I have asked;
To my strong conjurations
He fairly yields at last!
(She strikes the floor and vanishes.)

ALL: Live long the enchantress!

ULR: (from under the floor.) Silence! silence!

SCENE VIII

Sylvan breaking through the crowd.

SIL: Su fatemi largo, saper vo'il mio fato.
Son servo del Conte: son suo marinaro:
La morte per esso più volte ho sfidato;
Tre lustri son corsi del vivere amaro,
Tre lustri che nulla s' è fatto per me.

ULR: (ricomparendo.) E chiedi?

SIL: Qual sorte pel sangue versato
M' attende.

RIC: (a parte.) Favella da franco soldato.

ULR: La mano.

SIL: Prendete.

ULR: Rallegrati: omai
I poveri giorni mutarsi vedrai.
(Riccardo trae un rotolo e vi scrive su.)

SIL: Scherzate?

ULR: Va pago.

RIC: (Ponendolo in tasca a Silvano che non s'avvede) Mentire non de'.

SIL: A fausto presagio ben vuolsi mercè.
(frugando trova il rotolo su cui legge estatico.)
"Riccardo al suo caro Silvano Uffiziale."
Per bacco! non sogno!..dell'oro ed un grado!
Evviva la nostra Sibilla immortale,
Che spande su tutti ricchezze e piacer.
(picchiasi alla piccola porta.)

TUTTI: Si batte!

ULR: (va ad aprire ed entra un servo).

RIC: Che vegg, sull' uscio secreto, (tra sè)
Un servo d'Amelia!

SER: (sommessamente ad Ulrica, ma inteso da Ric.) Sentite: la mia Signora, che aspetta lì fuore, vorria Pregarvi, a quattr' occhi, d'arcano parer.

RIC: Me no..

ULR: Perchè possa rispondere a voi
È d'uopo che innanzi m'abbocchi a Satàno.
Uscite, e lasciate che io scruti nel ver.

TUTTI: Usciamo, e si lasci che scruti nel ver.
(mentre tutti s'allontanano, Riccards s' asconde.)

SCENA IX

Amelia, Ulrica e Riccardo in disparte.

ULR: Che v' agita così?

SYL: Clear off; it is my turn to hear my fate!
I am a servant of the Count; a sailor
I am, and often death for him I have braved;
Yet fifteen years of labor have gone by,
And I have had nothing for my reward!

ULR: (reappearing.). What do you ask?

SYL: What things am I to get for my spilt blood?

RICH: He speaks like a bold soldier! (aside.)

ULR: Show me your hand.

SYL: Here.

ULR: Be of good cheer, your gloomy days will soon turn bright!
(Richard draws a roll from his pocket and writes something on it.)

SYL: You jest!

ULR: No; go in peace.

RICH: (aside.) She must not lie!
(he puts the roll secretly into the pocket of Sylvan.)

SYL: Good luck must be paid for!
(Putting the hand into his pocket takes out the roll and reads on it.)
"Richard, to his dear officer Sylvan."
This is no dream; it is gold and a promotion!
Live long the immortal Sybil.
From whom so many riches flow!
(A knock is heard at the door.)

ALL: There is a knocking at the door.
(Ulr. goes to open.)

RICH: Whom do I see? a servant of Amelia!

SERV: (Secretly to Ulrica, but overheard by Richard.) My lady is waiting for you outside.
She'll ask advice on private matters.

RICH: Now it is my turn.

ULR: Yes, but before
I must speak awhile with Satan
Go out all, that I may search for truth

ALL: Let us go out that she may search for truth.
(While all retire, Richard conceals himself in a corner.)

SCENE IX

Amelia, Ulrica and Richard (aside.)

ULR: What frets you so?

AME: Funesta, ascosa Cura che amor destò..

RIC: (da sè). Quai detti?

ULR: E voi Cercate?..

AME: Pace-svellermi dal petto
Chi si fatale e desïato impera!
Lui—che su tutti il ciel arbitro pose.

RIC: (tra sè, ma con viva emozione di gioia). Anima mia!

ULR: L' oblio v' è dato. Arcane
Stille conosco d' una magic' erba,
Che rinnovano il cor. Ma chi n'ha d' uope
Spiccarla debbe di sua man nel fitto
Delle notti—funereo
È il loco.

AME: Ov' è?

ULR: L'osate Voi?

AME: Sì—qual esso sia.

ULR: Dunque ascoltate.
Della città all' occaso,
Là dove al tetro lato
Batte la luna pallida
Sul campo abbominato..
Abbarbica gli stami
A quelle pietre infami,
Ove la colpa scontasi
Coll' ultimo sospir!

AME: Cieli! qual loco!

ULR: Attoni!
E già tremante siete!

RIC: Povero cor!

ULR: V' esanima?

AME: Agghiaccio..

ULR: E l' oserete?

AME: Se tale è il dover mio
Troverò possa anch' io.

ULR: Stanotte

AME: Sì.

RIC: (c.s.) Non sola:
Chè te degg 'io seguir.

AME: Consentimi, o Signore,
Virtù ch' io lavi 'l core,
E l' infiammato palpito
Nel petto mio sopir!

ULR: Va, non tremar, l'incanto
Inaridisce il pianto.
Osa-e berrai nel farmaco
L' oblio de' tuoi martir.

RIC: (c.s.) Ardo, e seguirti ho fisso
Se fosse nell' abisso,
Pur ch'io respiri, Amelia,
L'aura de' tuoi sospir.
(Voci dal fondo.)
Figlia d'averno schiudi lo chiostra,
(spinte alla porta.)
E pigra meno vêr noi ti mostra.

AME: A secret anguish, the cause of which is love!

RICH: Love!

ULR: Well, what is, then, your wish?

AME: I wish for peace; the man I would forget
Who keeps such sway over my heart!

RICH: (Aside.) Gentle soul!

ULR: You shall forget the man!
I know an herb from which it is extracted,
A magic liquor that renews the heart.
But, then, the herb is to be gathered
By those who want its magic power.
During the night, in a most horrid place!

AME: Where is it?

ULR: Would you dare do it?

AME: Most certainly I would!

ULR: Hear me, then.
To the west side of this our city,
Where wicked men expiate their crimes,
Over the hated walls is creeping
The plant I have just mentioned.
The moon by night while beaming
Her pale rays on that silent
Abode of ghosts, then
You must gather the magic herb!

AME: Heavens!
What a fearful place!

ULR: Why! You are already trembling
At my description of the place!

RICH: Poor creature!

ULR: Are you frightened?

AME: I shudder!

ULR: Could you, then, go there?

AME: If such it be my duty,
I must, by force, do it.

ULR: Well, then, tonight!

AME: Tonight!

RICH: (Aside.) You shall not go alone;
I'll surely come with you!

AME: O Lord, grant me assistance
To conquer this affection,
That has so long been troubling
My feeble, weary heart!

ULR: Go, never fear,
You shall find a remedy in that liquor;
The flame shall be extinguished
That causes all your pain!

RICH: Dear soul!
I will follow you,
Were you to go to hell!
Your presence is a Heaven
Of pure delights to me!
(Voices from inside.)
Too long we have been waiting,
(Knocking at the door.)
Open the door, that we may enter!

ULR: (ad Amelia). Presto partite.

AME: Stantotte . . .

ULR: Addio . . .

SCENA X

Ulrica apre l'entrata maggiore: entrano Samuel, Tom e Seguaci, Oscar, Gentiluomini e Uffiziali travestiti bizzarramente, ai quali s'unisce Riccardo.

CORO: Su, profetessa, monta il treppiè;
Canta il presagio.

OSC: Ma il Conte ov' è?

RIC: (fattosi presso a lui). Taci, nascondile che qui son io.
(poi vólto rapidamente ad Ulrica)
E tu, sibilla, che tutto sai,
Della mia stella mi parlerai.
Di'tu se fedele
Il flutto m' aspetta,
Se molle di lacrime
La donna diletta
Dicendomi addio
Tradì l'amor mio
Con lacere vele
E l' alma in tempesta
I solchi so frangere
Dell' onda funesta,
L' averno ed il cielo
Irati sfidar.

CORO: Sollecita esplora,
Divina gli eventi,
Non possono i fulmini,
La rabbia de' venti,
La morte, l'amore
Svīarlo dal mar.

RIC: Sull' agile prora
Che m' agita in grembo,
Se scosso mi sveglio
Ai fischi del nembo,
Ripeto fra i tuoni
Le dolci canzoni.
Le dolci canzoni
Del tetto natio,
Che l' ora lamentano
Dell' ultimo addio,
E tutte ridanno
Le forze del cor.

CORO: Su, negra, risuoni
L' accesso scongiuro;
Spalanca la soglia
Che chiude il futuro
Nell' anime nostre
Non cape terror.

ULR: Chi voi siate, l'insana parola
Può nel pianto prorompere un giorno,
Se chi sforza l'arcano soggiorno
Va la colpa nel duolo a purgar,
Se chi sfida il suo fato insolente
Deve l'onta nel fato scontar.

RIC: Zitto, amici.

SAM: Ma il primo chi fia?

OSC: Io.

ULR: (To Amelia.) Go away, quick.

AME: Tonight!

ULR: Adieu!

SCENE X

(Ulrica opens the door—enter Samuel, Tom, and their friends—Oscar, Gentlemen, Officers, etc., all dressed in different costumes.)

CHORUS: Mount on your tripod, prophetess!
Tell us our fortunes!

OSC: (Aside.) Where is the Count?

RICH: (Going near him.) Hush! here I am!
(Suddenly turning to Ulrica.)
You prophetess, to whom all things are known,
Tell me about my planet!
Tell me if, when I go to sea,
I shall meet no fearful tempest;
Or, if the lady I am loving
Has remained faithful to me!
With tattered, broken sails
I fear not go to sea;
Against the waves while dashing
I can forget all danger!
And while my mind is troubled
With bad, uneasy thoughts,
I scorn the Demon's fury
And hope for better lot.

CHO: Tell him his fortune, Sybil,
Divine future events:
The fury of the winds,
The tossing of the tempest,
Cannot prevent the sailor
From going back to sea!

RICH: If, on the prow, while sleeping,
I am suddenly awakened
By the lord roaring thunder,
I sing my favorite songs!
My native songs I sing then,
That paint all the affections
Stirred up by the adventurous
And roaming sailor's life.
This way I am beguiling
My time amid the storms,
Which else would press too heavy
Upon my weary soul!

CHO: Go on, now, prophetess,
Press on your conjuration;
Force fast the restive Demons
To impart to you their gifts.
Here is a set of brave men.
Who scorn the wrath of hell!

ULR: Whoever you are, your profane words
May cost you dearly some future day!
Nobody can despise one's fate,
And then not feel its sting one day!
Hush, then, be wise and bear respect
To the high powers that rule above!

RICH: Hush, friends.

SAM: Who is to be the first?

OSC: I'll be the first.

RIC: L'onore a me cedi.
(offrendo la palma ad Ulr.)

OSC: E lo sia.

ULR: È la destra d' un grande, vissuto
Sotto l'astro di Marte.

OSC: Nel vero Ella colse.

RIC: Tacete.

ULR: (staccandosi da lui) Infelice..
Va—mi lascia—non chieder di più!

RIC: Su, prosegui.

ULR: No—lasciami.

RIC: Parla.

ULR: Te ne prego.

CORO: (a lei). Eh finiscila omai.

RIC: Te lo impongo.

ULR: Ebben, presto morrai.

RIC: Se sul campo d' onor, ti so grado.

ULR: No—per man d' un amico..

OSC: Gran Dio!
Quale orror!

ULR: Così scritto è lassù.

RIC: È scherzo od è follia
(guardando intorne pausa.)
Che da quel labbro uscia
Ma come fa da ridere
La lor credulità!

ULR: Eh voi, signori, a queste
(passando fra Tom e Sam.)
Parole mie funeste,
Voi non osate ridere,
Ben altro in cor vi sta.

OSC. E CORO: E sarà dunque spento
In breve a tradimento?
Al sol pensarci l'anima
Abbrividendo va.

SAM E TOM: (fissando Ulr.) La sua parola è dardo,
E fulmine lo sguardo,
Dal confidente demone
Tutto costei risà.

RIC: Di', chi fia dunque l'uccisor?

ULR: Chi primo Tua man quest' oggi stringerà.

RIC: Benissimo.
(poi offrendo la destra a' circostanti che non osano toccare.)
Qual è di voi, che provi
L' oracolo bugiardo?..
Nessuno!

SCENA XI

Renato all' entrata e detti.

RICH: (showing his hand to Ulrica.) No, yield your turn to me!

OSC: Well, then, let it be so.

ULR: It is the hand of a great personage,
Grown under Planet Mars.

OSC: That's true, is it not?

RICH: Hush! let her go on.

ULR: (withdrawing from him).
Go, ask me no more!

RICH: Go on.

ULR: I pray, ask me no more!

CHO: Go on!

RICH: I order you . . . go on!

ULR: Well, very soon you are to die!

RICH: If on the battle field, I am glad of it!

ULR: No, by the hand of a false friend!

OSC: Great God!
Can that be true?

ULR: It is written so above! (a pause.)

RICH: At follies of this kind,
Uttered by such a woman,
I can't refrain now laughing . . . .
They are to be despised!

ULR: (to Sam. and Tom.) But you, at my predictions,
Most surely will not laugh;
More serious thoughts they are breeding
Within your wary minds!

OSCAR AND CHORUS: Shall he, then, soon fall victim
By the hand of a false friend?
Alas! the mere thought is dire poison
That gnaws my very bones!

SAMUEL AND TOM: Her words are sharpened arrows
That go straight to our hearts;
Ah! surely from her Demons
She knows our inmost thoughts!

RICH: Go on, finish your prophecy;
Who, then, shall be the murderer?

ULR: The man who shall shake hands first,
With you today!

RICH: Well, then!
(Turning to the bystanders and offering them his hand, which nobody dares to touch.)
Who among you will offer a proof
That the oracle has been false?
Nobody!

SCENE XI

Enter Reinhart.

RIC: (accorrendo a lui.) Eccolo.
(e unisce la sua alla destra dell' amico.)

TUTTI: Desso!

SAM: Respiro—il caso ne salvò.
(ai suoi)

TUTTI: (contro Ulrica). L' oracolo
Mentiva.

RIC: Sì: perchè la man ch' io stringo
È del più fido amico mio..

REN: Riccardo!

ULR: Il Conte!.. (ravvisando il governatore.)

RIC: (a lei) Nè, chi fossi, il genio tuo
Ti rivelò—nè che voleano al bando
Oggi dannarti.

ULR: Me? (le una borsa.)

RIC: T' acqueta e prendi. (gettando.)

ULR: Magnanimo tu se', ma v' ha fra loro
Il traditor: più d' uno
Forse . . .

SAM, TOM: Gran Dio!
(a parte.)

RIC: Non più.

CORO: (da lontano). Viva Riccardo!

TUTTI: Quai voci?

SCENA XII

Silvano dal fondo, ove ristà, vólto all' aperto, e detti.

SIL: È lui, ratti movete, è lui:
Il vostro amico e padre.
(Marinai, Uomini e Donne del popolo s' affollano all' entrata.)
Si prostri ognuno; amor, dovere il chiede,
E l' inno suono della nostra dede.

CORO: O figlio d' Inghilterra,
Amor di questa terra:
Reggi felice, arridano
Gloria e salute a te.

OSC: Invidïato alloro
Che vince ogni tesoro,
Alla tua chioma intrecciano
Riconoscenza e fè.

URL: Non crede al proprio fato,
Ma pur morrà piagato;
Sorrise al mio presagio,
Ma nella fossa ha il piè.

RIC: E posso alcun sospetto
Alimentar nel petto,
Se mille cuori battono
Per immolarsi a me?

REN: Ma la sventura è cosa
Pur ne' trionfi ascosa,
Dove il destino ipocrita
Veli una rea mercè.

SAM, TOM E SEGUACI: (fra loro)
Vieta ogni moto ostile
Qui la ciurmaglia vile,
Che sta lambendo l'idolo
E che non sa il perchè.

RICH: (running to him.) There he is!
(shaking hands with him.)

ALL: He!

SAM: I breathe! we are safe!

ALL: (to Ulrica.) Then the oracle has lied!

RICH: Yes, the man with whom I shook hands
Is my most faithful friend!

REIN: Richard!

ULR: (recognizing the Governor.)
The Count!

RICH: Your spirit
Could not reveal to you my person!
Nor that you were to be exiled this day!

ULR: I?

RICH: Becalm yourself and take . . . (gives her a purse.)

ULR: You are mighty generous!
Yet, among these there stands the traitor,
Perhaps there is more than one!

SAM, AND TOM: Great God!
(aside.)

RICH: No more.

CHO: (from afar.) Live long, Richard!

ALL: Whose voices are those?

SCENE XII

Sylvan, from the place wherein he is standing, to the people outside.

SYL: It is he!
It is he! come quick!..
Here is your friend and father!
(Sailors, men, women, etc., rushing in.)
Let all kneel down! It is our duty,
And let us sing our native song!

CHO: O son of glorious England,
Beloved of this land,
Live long; may health and glory
Reward your noble soul!

OSC: A precious crown of glory,
That is above all treasures,
Unsullied faith and gratitude
Are setting on your brow!

RICH: Can I harbor suspicions
Of traitors in my mind,
While I am so beloved
By thousands faithful hearts?

REIN: But often lies misfortune
Hidden amid bright triumphs,
And seizes on its victim
When least he thinks on it!

SAM, TOM, AND FOLLOWERS:
Here, now, we can do nothing,
While there is such a vile mob
Adoring its cursed idol,
And knowing not for what.

Fine Dell' Atto Primo.

ATTO SECONDO

SCENA PRIMA

Campo solitario nei dintorni di Boston, appia d' un colle scosceso. A sinistra nel basso biancheggiano due pilastri; e la luna leggermente velata illumina alcuni punti della scena.

AMELIA: (dalle eminenze.) Ecco
l' orrido campo ove s'accoppia
Al delitto la morte!
Ecco là le colonne.
La pianta è la, verdeggia al piè.
S' innoltri.
Ah mi si aggela il core!
Sino il romor de' passi miei, qui tutto
M'empie di raccapriccio e di terrore!
E se perir dovessi?
Perire! ebben quando la sorte mia,
Il mio dover tal è, s'adempia, a sia.
(fa per avviarsi.)
Ma dall' arido stelo divulsa
Come avrò di mia mano quell' erba.
E che dentro la mente convulsa
Quell' eterea sembianza morrà
Che ti resta, perduto l'amor
Che ti resta, mio povero cor!
Oh! chi piange, qual forza m'arretra,
M'attraversa la squallida via?
Su corraggio..e tu fatti di pietra,
Non tradirmi, dal pianto ristà:
O finisci di battere e muor,
T' annienta, mio povero cor!
(s'ode un tocco d'ore, lantano)
Mezzanotte!—e che veggio? uno spettro
Di sotterra si leva..e sospira!
Ha negli occhi il baleno dell'ira
E m'affisa e terribile sta!
(cadendo sulle genoschia)
Deh! mi reggi, m' aïta, o Signor,
Risolleva il mio povero cor!

SCENA II

Riccardo e Amelia.

RIC: Teco io sto.

AME: Gran Dio!

RIC: Ti calma:
Di che temi?

AME: Ah mi lasciate..
Son la vittima che geme..
Il mio nome almen salvate..
O lo strazio ed il rossore
La mia vita abbatterà.

RIC: Io lasciarti? no, giammai:
Nol poss'io; chè m'arde in petto
Sovruman di te l'affetto.

AME: Conte, abbiatemi pietà.

End Of The First Act.

ACT II

SCENE I

A field near Boston—Two white pillars are to be seen on one side—It is moonlight.

AME: There is the horrid place,
Where crime is expiated by death!
There the fearful walls, on which
The magic plant I am to gather is creeping!
Alas!..I shudder..my heart fails!..
Here terror reigns all around!
Yet, stern duty spurs me on
To fetch the remedy that is to heal
The fatal sickness that consumes my heart!
But when the adored image
Shall be obliterated
From the enchanted mind,
And all its charm destroyed,
What shall make up the void?
But..now, I must proceed on,
Whatever may be the fright,
That strives to keep me back
From the directed place!
Let duty impart courage
To save me from my heart!
(The clock is heard striking in the distance.)
It is midnight! What do I perceive, yonder?
Is that a phantom, or a real man?
He seems to look at me with anger!
What may he want here?..Who is he?..
O Lord, grant me your gracious aid!
Sustain my drooping spirits!

SCENE II

Richard and Amelia.

RICH: Here I am with you.

AME: Great God!

RICH: What fright!
Are you afraid of me?

AME: Ah!
Let me alone..go off—
I am already too unfortunate!
Don't tempt my virtue any longer,
I am already weak enough!

RICH: Abandon you?..No, never!
It is beyond my power;
My love for you can know no bounds!

AME: Are you devoid of pity?

RIC: Così parli? a chi t'adora
Pietà chiedi, e tremi ancora?
Questo core innamorato
L'onor tuo rispetterà.

AME: Ma, Riccardo, io son d' altrui..
Dell amico più fidato..

RIC: Taci, Amelia.

AME: Io son di lui,
Che daria la vita a te..

RIC: Ah crudele, e mel rammemori,
Lo ripeti innanzi a me!
Non sai tu che se l'anima mia
Il rimorso dilacera e rode,
Quel suo grido non cura, non ode,
Sin che l'empie di fremiti amor?..
Non sai tu che di te resteria,
Se cessasse di battere il cor!
Quante notti ho vegliato anelante!
Come a lungo infelice lottai!
Quante volte dal cielo implorai
La pietà che tu chiedi da me!—
Ma per questo ho potuto un istante,
Infelice, non viver di te?

AME: Deh soccorri tu, cielo, all' ambascia
Di chi sta fra l'infamia e la morte;
Tu pietoso rischiara le porte
Di salvezza all' errante mio piè.
E tu va—ch' io non t' oda—mi lascia:
Son di lui, che il suo sangue ti diè.

RIC: La mia vita . . . l'universo,
Per un detto . . .

AME: O ciel pietoso!

RIC: Di' che m' ami..

AME: Ah va, Riccardo?

RIC: Un sol detto.

AME: Ebben, sì, t'amo . . .

RIC: M'ami, Amelia!

AME: Ma tu, nobile, Me difendi dal mio cor!

RIC: (fuori di sè.) M' ami, m' ami!..oh sia distrutto—Il rimorso, l'amicizia
Nel mio seno: estinto tutto:—Tutto sia fuorchè l'amor!
Quale soave brivido—L'acceso petto irrora!
Ah ch' io t' ascolti ancora—Rispondermi così!
Astro di queste tenebre—A cui consacro il core;
Irradiami d'amore—E più non sorga il dì!

RICH: Can you speak thus to me?
Is it from me you ask mercy?
Is not my love for you sufficient
To guard me against all offense?

AME: Consider who's the man whose wife I am,..
Your most devoted friend!

RICH: Don't mention such a thing at present!

AME: Yes, think how great would be the crime,
Were you to wrong such worthy man!

RICH: Do you think I am so hardhearted
As not to ponder over these things?
Yet there's no help, when love is burning
As it burns now, within my heart!
And then, what would a man's life be
If it was not cheered up by love?
Soon every thing would lose its charm
With him whose love had been extinguished! . . .
Still, very long I have been trying
To quench that fire that burns my heart;
But then, the more it has been raging
When I attempted to quench it!
It is, then, quite beyond my power
To stop the flame that burns for you!

AME: I am craving your assistance O lord,
In these trials that torture my soul;
Deign to graciously save me from crime,
Give strength to my weak, sinking heart!
Go off, then, and leave me alone;
Think on the man against whom is
Your offense!

RICH: My life I offer you . . . the universe—
Say just a single word . . .

AME: Alas!

RICH: Say that you love me!

AME: No more..

RICH: A single word.

AME: Well . . . I love you!
But, then, do save my honor?

RICH: (estatically.) O sweet, enchanting words!
Against such furious torrent
Of pure delight, can't honor
Resist . . . nor friendly faith!
Such an alluring sweetness
No man can overcome!

AME: Ahi sul funereo letto—Ove sognava spegnerlo,
Torna gigante in petto—L'amor che mi ferì!
Chè non m' è dato in seno—A lui versar quest' anima?
O nella morte almeno—Addormentarmi qui? (la luna illumina sempre più.) Ahimè!

RIC: Taci . . .

AME: S'appressa Alcun . . .

RIC: Chi giunge in questo Albergo della morte? . . .
(fatti pochi passi.)
Renato!

AME: Il mio consorte!
(abbassando il velo atterrita.)

SCENA III

Riccardo, Amelia e Renato.

RIC: Tu qui?
(incontrandolo.)

REN: Per salvarti da lor, che, celati
Lassù, t'hanno in mira

RIC: Chi son?

REN: Congiurati.

AME: O ciel!
(tra sè.)

REN: Trasvolai nel manto serrato,
Così ch m'han preso per un dell'agguato,
E intesi taluno prorompere: L' ho visto:
È il Conte: un'ignota beltade è con esso
Poi altri qui volto—fuggevole acquisto!
S' ei rade la fossa, se il tenero amplesso
Troncar, di mia mano, repente saprò.

AME: Io muoio . . . (tra sè)

RIC: (a lei.) Fa core.

REN: (coprendolo col suo mantello) Ma questo ti do.
(poi additandogli un viottolo a destra.)
E bada, lo scampo, t' è libero là.

RIC: Salvarti degg'io..(presa per mano Amelia.)

AME: (sottovoce a lui.) Me misera! Va..

REN: (passando ad Amelia.) Nè voi già vorrete segnarlo, o signora, Al ferro spietato!
(dilegua nel fondo a veder se s'avanzane.)

AME: Deh solo t'invola!

RIC: Che qui t'abbandoni?

AME: T'è libero ancora
Il passo, va fuggi..

AME: In vain I have been trying
To quench this fatal love;
To taste its tempting sweetness
It would be worth while to die!
Ah me!
(the moon is growing clearer.)

RICH: Hush..

AME: Somebody is coming towards us,..

RICH: Who is coming
To this abode of death?
Reinhart.. . . .

AME: It is he!..my husband!
(she covers her face with her veil.)

SCENE III

Richard, Amelia, Reinhart.

RICH: What brings you here?
(meeting Reinhart.)

REIN: I came to save you from the traitors,
Who lie in wait for you!

RICH: For what?

REIN: To take away your life!

AME: Heavens!

REIN: While coming to this place,
Wrapped in this cloak to avoid their suspicion,
They took me for one of their friends.. . .
I overheard them saying,
A lady is with him,—our chance is better
To dispatch him while love
Absorbs all his attention!

AME: (aside) I am near fainting!

RICH: (softly to her.) Courage!

REIN: Take this cloak and flee that way,
(pointing to him a path.)
So you shall not be observed!

RICH: (taking Amelia by the hand.) I must save you!

AME: (softly to him.) No, go away alone!

REIN: Madam, with him you shall not go;
You would be a mark for his assailants!

AME: Go off alone . . .

RICH: And leave you here?

AME: You are yet in time to save your life;
Go quick, or else it will be too late!

RIC: Lasciarti qui sola
Con esso? no mai—piuttosto morrò.

AME: O fuggi: o che il velo dal capo torrò.

RIC: Che dici?

AME: Risolvi.

RIC: Desisti.

AME: Lo vo'.

AME: Per esso quest'alma sol trepida e geme, (tra se)
Salvarlo, non altro desiro la preme,
E paga di tanto, se dato le fia.
Se stessa del fato ne' fremiti oblia.

RIC: (a Renato, solennemente)
Amico, gelosa t'affido una cura:
L'amor che mi porti, garante mi sta.

REN: Affidati, imponi.

RIC: (coll' indice verso Amelia.)
Promettimi, giura
Che tu l'addurrai, velata, in città,
Nè un detto nè un guardo sur essa trarrano.

REN: Lo giuro.

RIC: E che tocche le porte, Da solo all' opposto.

REN: Lo giuro e sarà.

AME: (sommessamente a Riccardo.) Odi tu come sonano cupi
Per quest' aure gli accenti di morte?
Di lassù, da quei negri dirupi,
Il segnal de' nemici partì.
Ne' lor petti scintillano d' ira..
E già piomban, t' accerchiano fitti..
Al tuo capo già volser la mira..
Per pietà, va t' invola di quì.

RIC: Traditor, sciagurati son essi, (tra se.)
Che minacciano il vivere mio?
Ma l'amico ho tradito ancor io.
Son colui che nel cor lo ferì!
Innocente, sfidati gli avrei;
Or d'amore colpevole.. fuggo—
La pietà del Signore su lei
Posi l' ale, protegga i suoi dì!

REN: (staccandosi dal fondo ove stava esplorando.)
Fuggi, fuggi: per l' orrida via Sento l' orma dei passi spietati.
Allo scambio dei detti esecrati
Ogni destra ia daga brandì.
Va, ti salva, o che il varco all' uscita
Qui fra poco serrarsi vedrai;
Va, ti salva, del popolo è vita
Questa vita che getti così. (Riccardo esce.)

SCENA IV

Renato e Amelia.

REN: Seguitemi.

AME: Mio Dio! (da sè.)

RICH: I can't leave you here with your husband!..
He may discover who you are!

AME: Oh, save yourself!

RICH: Come off with me!

AME: No.

REIN: Why, then?

AME: It would be your death!
Alas! forgetful of my honor,
I only fear now for his danger!
Let him be saved; whatever may happen.
It is preferable to his death!

RICH: (to Reinhart.) I'll ask from you a solemn promise
Pledged by the love you have for me!

REIN: Order—speak . . . I shall obey!

RICH: (pointing to Amelia.)
Promise, on thy oath, to take this lady
Back to the city, without lifting
Up her veil, or asking who she is!

REIN: I swear I shall do so!

RICH: And that upon arriving
Within the town you shall let her alone!

REIN: I do swear to do so!

AME: (softly to Richard.) Ah! can you not feel sensible
To the surrounding danger?
Your foes are now all watching
Their chance to take your life!
Ah! look now they are slyly advancing
Now, on all sides.
For God's sake, stay no longer;
Go off while yet in time!

RICH: (aside.) They are, indeed, all traitors,
Who strive to spill my blood!
Does not, also, my passion
Make me betray my friend?
Alas! that I were innocent!
Their snares I could despise;
But as I, too, am guilty
I must look for myself!

REIN: (coming forward.) Quick, quick, Richard, go off,
I hear the noise of steps
Advancing to this side;
Go quick, they are near at hand.
It's no time to tarry.
Or else it will be too late
To save you from the clutches
Of those who want you dead!
(Exit Richard)

SCENE IV

Reinhart and Amelia.

REIN: Follow me.

AME: Great God!
(aside.)

REN: Perchè tremate?
Fida scorta vi son, l' amico accento
Vi risollevi il cor!

SCENA V

Samuel, Tom con seguito, dalle alture e detti.

AME: Eccoli.

REN: Presto, Appoggiatevi a me.

AME: Morir mi sento!

CORO: (dall' alto). Si discenda, si trafigga,
Già scoccata è l' ultim' ora.
Il saluto dell' aurora
Sull' esanime cadrà.

SAM: Scerni tu quel bianco velo
Onde spicca la sua dea?

TOM: Si precipiti dal cielo
All' averno.

REN: (forte) Chi va là?

SAM: Non è desso!

TOM: O furor mio!

CORO: Non è il conte!

REN: No, son io Che dinanzi a voi qui sta.

SAM: Il suo fido! (beffardo.)

TOM: Men di voi
Fortunati fummo noi:
Chè il sorriso d' una bella.
Stemmo indarno ad aspettar.

SAM: Io per altro il volto almeno
Vo' a quest' Iside mirar.
(alcuni de' suoi rientrano con fiaccole accese.)

REN: (colla mano sull' elsa) Non un passo: se l' osate
Traggo il ferro . . .

TOM: E v' infiammate?

SAM: Non vi temo.

AME: O cieli, aïta!

CORO: Giù l' acciaro . . . (verso Renato.)

REN: Traditori!

TOM: (mentre va per istrappare il velo ad Amelia). Vo'finirla . . .

REN: (assalendolo) E la tua vita
Questo insulto pagherà.
(nell'atto che tutti s'avventano contro Renato. Amelia, fuori di sè inframmettendosi, lascia cadere il velo.)

AME: No: fermatevi . . .

REN: (colpito) Che! . . .
Amelia! . . .

SAM: Lei! . . .

TOM: Sua moglie!

AME: Ah! per pietà!

REIN: Never fear!
Cheer up, while you are with me
You'll be protected.

SCENE V

Samuel, Tom, and their friends coming forward

AME: There they are!

REIN: Quick, quick!
Give me your arm!

AME: I shudder.

CHOR: At last the time of vengeance
Has come.
Let us go down
And stab the hated felon,
To vindicate our wrongs!

SAM: (to Tom.) Oh! look at that white veil,
It is his lady-love.

TOM: We won't spare him on her account;
Courage!

REIN: Who goes there?

SAM: It is not the Count!

TOM: Alas! bad luck.

CHOR: It is not the Count.

REIN: It is I who stand here before you.

SAM: (aside.) Accursed Reinhart!

TOM: Ah! very, very unlucky,
We have been in your comparison;
Our lady-love, whom we expected,
Has disappointed us!

SAM: At least, this beauty I wish to contemplate,
Since mine has disappointed me.
(Some of the men exeunt.)

REIN: (brandishing his sword.)
Whoever dares insult this lady
Has to deal with me first!

TOM: Are you in earnest?

SAM: What do we care for you?

AME: God help us!

CHOR: (To Reinhart.) Put down your sword!

REIN: Stop, traitors!

TOM: (Attempting to take off Amelia's veil.) I'll see her by all means!

REIN: (Attacking him.) Your arrogance I will chastise!
(During the strife, Amelia through fright drops her veil.)

AME: Stop!

REIN: (Surprised.) Amelia!

SAM: She!

TOM: His wife!

AME: O, Lord!

SAM, TOM: Ve' se di notte qui colla sposa
L' innamorato campion si posa,
E come al raggio lunar del miele
Sulle rugiade corear si sa!

CORO: Ve' la tragedia mutò in commedia
Piacevolissima—ah! ah! ah! ah!
E che baccano sul caso strano
Andrà dimane per la città!

AME: A chi nel mondo crudel più mai,
Misera Amelia, ti volgerai? . . .
La tua spregiata lacrima, quale,
Qual man pietosa rascingherà!

REN: (fisso alla via onde fuggì Riccardo.) Così mi paga, se l' ho salvato!
Ei m' ha la donna contaminato!
Tal marchio fitto mi volle in fronte,
Macero il core per sempre m' ha!
(poi riscuotendosi, e come chi ha preso un grave partito, s' accosta a Samuel e Tom)
Converreste al tetto mio
Sul mattiino di domani?

SAM, TOM: Per subir dell' onta il fio?

REN: No—ben altro in cor mi sta,

SAM, TOM: Che ti punge?

REN: Lo saprete,
Se verrete.

SAM, TOM: E ci vedrai.
(nell' uscire seguiti dai loro)
Dunque andiam—per vie diverse
L' un dall' altro s' allentani.
Il mattino di domani
Grandi cose apprenderà.

REN: (rimasto solo con Amelia.)
Ho giurato che alle porte
V' addurrei della città.

AME: Come sonito di morte
(tra sè)
La sua voce al cor mi va!

Fine Dell'Atto Secondo.

Atto Terzo

SCENA PRIMA

Una stanza da studio nell' abitazione di Renato. Sovra un caminetto di fianco due vasi di bronzo, rimpetto a cui la biblioteca. Nel fondo v' ha un magnifico ritratto del conte Riccardo in piedi, e nel mezzo della scena una tavola. Entrano Renato e Amelia.

REN: A tal colpa è nulla il pianto,
(deposta la spada e chiusa la porta)
Non la terge e non la scusa
Altro sol non rivedrai,
Rea ti festi: e qui morrai.

AME: Ma se reo, se reo soltanto
È l'indizio che m'accusa!..

REN: Taci, o perfida.

SAM AND TOM: Ah! here by moonlight
He comes with his good wife,
To cool his burning flame
By the refreshing dew!!!

CHOR: Ah! ah! ah! ah! the tragedy
Has been turned into comedy.
The story will tomorrow
Be amusing all the town!!!

AME: Alas! I have forever
Now forfeited my honor;
Where shall I find a remedy
To my tremendous woes?

REIN: (Pointing towards the side by which Richard had gone.) Ah! this is then the gratitude
The Count has for his friends!
While I have saved his life
He has seduced my wife!
(Drawing near to Samuel and Tom.)
Would you call on me tomorrow?
I will tell you something important.

SAM AND TOM: Will you revenge yourself on us?

REIN: No, no; I am your friend!

SAM: What's the matter?

REIN: Come tomorrow
I'll tell you all!

SAM AND TOM: (while going).
Then we will come.
Let's cautiously disperse,
To avoid every suspicion;
Let's hear tomorrow morning
What Reinhart has to tell.

REIN: (alone with Amelia). I shall fulfill my promise
To take you to the city!

AME: His voice like a death warrant
Has sounded to my ears!

End Of The Second Act.

Act III

SCENE I

A room in the house of Reinhart. A table is placed in the middle, and a large portrait of Richard is seen hanging from the wall.
Enter Reinhart and Amelia.

REIN: Your crime deserves no pity!
You can have no excuse!
You have destroyed my happiness,
I must have my revenge!
(Deposits his sword on the table.)

AME: God knows that I am innocent,
In spite of all appearances!

REIN: Add not lying to your guilt!

AME: Gran Dio!

REN: Chiedi a lui misericordia.

AME: E ti basta un sol sospetto!
E vuoi dunque il sangue mio!
E m'infami, e più non senti
Nè giustizia, nè pietà?

REN: Hai finito!

AME: Se l' amai
Un istante, infelicissima,
Il tuo nome io non macchiai.
Sallo Iddio, che nel mio petto
Mai non arse indegno affetto.

REN: (ripigliando la spada.) Hai finito! è tardi omai . . .
Rea ti festi . . . e qui morrai.

AME: Ah! mi sveni! . . . ebbene sia . . .
Ma una grazia . . .

REN: Non a me.
La tua prece al ciel rivolgi.

AME: Solo un detto ancora a te,— (genuflessa)
M' odi, l' ultimo sarà.
Morrò—ma prima in grazia—Deh! mi consenti almeno
L'unico figlio mio—Avvincere al mio seno.
E se alla moglie nieghi—Quest' ultimo favor,
Non rifiutarlo ai prieghi—Del mio materno cor,
Morrò—ma quest viscere-Consolino i suoi baci,
Poi che l'estrema è giunta—Dell' ore mie fugaci.
Spenta per man del padre,—La mano ei stenderà
Su gli occhi d'una madre,—Che mai più non vedrà!

REN: Alzati, là tuo figlio
A te concedo riveder. Nell' ombra
E nel silenzio, là,
Il tuo rossore e l' onta mia nascondi.
(Amelia esce.)
Non è su lei, nel suo
Fragile petto che colpir degg' io.
Altro, ben altro sangue a terger dèssi
L'offesa . . . (fissando il ritratto). Il sangue tuo?
Nè tarderà il mio ferro
Tutto a versarlo dal tuo falso core:
Delle lacrime mio vendicatore!
E sei tu che macchiavi quell' anima,
La delizia dell' anima mia . . .
Che m'affidi e d' un tratto esecrabile
L' universo avveleni per me!
Traditor! che in tal guisa rimuneri
Dell' amico tuo primo la fè!
O dolcezze perdute! O memorie
D' un amplesso che mai non s' oblia!
Quando Amelia sì bella, sì candida
Sul mio seno brillava d' amor!
È finita—non siede che l' odio.
E la morte sul vedovò cor!

AME: O, Lord!

REIN: Prepare for death!

AME: Is then a dubious evidence Sufficient to convince
Your mind, that I am guilty
Of such enormous crime?

REIN: Have done!

AME: If any wrong affection
Has crept into my heart,
God knows that I prevented
Its taking root in it.

REIN: (Taking up his sword.)
Have done. I waited long enough!
You have broken your vows and you must die!

AME: If so . . . I'll die,
then . . . but before,
Allow me . . .

REIN: God alone can help you now!
Do turn your mind to
Him . . . and die.

AME: (kneeling down) Before I die, let me embrace,
For the last time, my child;
For him, I beg this grace
Of you . . . you must grant it!

REIN: Well, then, get up the child,
For the last time go and embrace;
And let his pure, innocent soul
Open your eyes to see your guilt!
(exit Amelia)
It is not so much against my frail wife
That I should vent my wrath,
Than against him who has so basely
Betrayed the faith of his best friend!
But, surely not much distant
May be the time of my revenge
His blood shall expiate his crime!
Ah! none can fully comprehend
The grief that preys upon my soul,
Now that I've lost what was most soothing
My weary heart, in this sad world!
What is this life, with all its pleasures,
When they are not sweetened by love?
Oh! how can I well bear the torture
Which the remembrance of past joys
Causes the sick mind, while comparing
Its present horror to past bliss?
Alas! my heart's forever poisoned!
Forever peace has gone from me!

SCENA II

Renato Samuel e Tom entrano salutandolo freddamente.

REN: Siam soli.—Udite. Ogni disegno vostro M'é note.
Voi di Riccardo la morte Volete.

TOM: Sogni.

REN: (mostrando alcune carte che ha sul tavelo). Ho qui le prove!

SAM: (fremendo) All' ora
La trama al Conte svelerai?

REN: No—voglio
Dividerla.

TOM: Tu scherzi.

REN: E non co' detti:
Ma qui col fatto struggero i sospetti.
Io son vostro, compagno m' avrete
Senza posa al medesimo intento:
Arra il figlio vi do. L' uccidete
Se vi manco.

TOM: Ma tal mutamento
E credibile appena.

REN: Qual fu
La cagion non cercate. Son vostro
Per la vita dell unico figlio!

SAM, TOM: Ei non mente.

REN: Esitate?
(fra loro)

SAM, TOM: Non più.

REN, SAM, TOM: Dunque l'onta di tutti sol una
Uno il cor, la nostra ira sarà,
Che tremenda, repente, digiuna
Su quel capo esecrato cadrà!

REN: D'una grazia vi supplica.

SAM, TOM: E quale?

REN: Che sia dato d' ucciderlo a me.

TOM: No, Renato: l' avito castello
A me tolse, e tal dritto a me spetta.

SAM: Ed a me, cui spegneva il fratello,
Cui decenne agonia di vendetta
Senza requie divora, qual parte Assegnaste?

REN: Chetatevi, solo
Qui la sorte or decidere de'.
(prende un vaso dal camino e lo colloca sulla tavola, Samuel scrive tre nomi e vi getto entro i viglietti.)

TOM: Ma chi vien?

SCENA III

Amelia e detti.

REN: (incontrandola.) Tu?

AME: V' è Oscarre che porta
Un invito del Conte.

SCENE II

Enter Samuel and Tom.

REIN: We are alone . . . So we can freely speak!
I know you are plotting Richard's death . . .
You need not fear . . .

TOM: You rave!

REIN: (showing them some papers). Here are all the proofs!

SAM: Well, then!
Will you denounce us to the Count?

REIN: No, no!
I'll join you in your schemes!

TOM: Are you in earnest?

REIN: As earnest as you are!
I swear that I will join you,
In all your plots, until we shall succeed
In our design . . . My child
I'll give you as a pledge
Of my sincerity!

TOM: But what has operated
So strange a change in you?

REIN: Don't ask of me the reason
That makes me hate the Count;
I do hate him . . . that is enough for you!

SAM: He seems to be in earnest?

REIN: Do you doubt it?

SAM, TOM: We believe you.

REIN, SAM, TOM: Let us, then, join our efforts
To obtain our common end:
Let us watch every occasion
To vindicate our wrongs!

REIN: You must grant me a favor!

SAM, TOM: Which, then?

REIN: That he may fall by my own hand!

TOM: No, no, that task belongs to me;
For, he has confiscated my estates!

SAM: It is I who must stab him,
To appease the wrath that has been gnawing
My heart for these ten years, for having wrongly Condemned to death my brother!

REIN: Well, then, let us draw lots,
To settle this dispute!
[He writes his and their names on three pieces of paper, and puts them inside a little urn).

TOM: Who's coming now?

SCENE III

Enter Amelia.

REIN: (meeting her.) Amelia!

AME: Here is Oscar, who brings you
An invitation from the Count!

REN: (impallidendo.) Di lui! . . .
Che m'aspetti.—E tu resta, lo dêi:
Poi che parmi che il cielo t' ha scorta.

AME: (fra sè) Qual tristezza m' assale, qual pena!
Qual terribile lampo balena!

REN: (additando sua moglie agli altri due)
Nulla sa—non temete. Costei
Esser debbe anzi l' auspice caro.
(traendola verso la tavola.)
V' ha tre nomi in quell'urna—un ne tragga
L' innocente tua mano.

AME: (tremante) E perchè?

REN: Ubbidisci—non chieder di più.

AME: (traendo dal vaso un viglietto che sue marota passa a Sam.) Non è dubbio: quest' ordine aaro
(fra sè)
Mi vuol parte ad un' opra di sangue.

REN: Qual è dunque l' eletto?

SAM: Renato.

REN: (fremente di gioia) Il mio nome!—O giustizia del fato:
La vendetta mi deleghi tu!

AME: Ah del Conte la morte si vuole!
(da sola.)
Nol celâr le crudeli parole!
Su quel capo snudati dall' ira
I lor ferri scintillano già.

REN, SAM E TOM: Sconterà dell'America il pianto
Lo sleal che ne fece suo vanto.
Se trafisse, soccomba trafitto,
Tal mercede pagata gli va!

REN: Il messaggio entri.
(alla porta.)

SCENA IV

Oscar e detti.

OSC: (verse Amelia) Alle danze
Questa notte, se gradite
Collo sposo, il mio signore
Vi desidera . . .

AME: (turbata) No! posso.

REN: Anche il conte vi sarà? (ad Oscar.)

OSC: Certo.

SAM E TOM: (fra loro). Oh sorte!

REN: (al paggio, ma collo sguardo a Tom). Tanto invito So che valga.

OSC: E un ballo in maschera Splendidissimo..

REN: (c.s.) Benissimo! Ella meco interverrà.
(accennando Amelia.)

REIN: Then let him wait . . .
You must remain here for a moment! . . .
You must do us a little service!
(ironically.)

AME: (aside) What may they want from me?
Alas! I shudder!

REIN: (to Sam. & Tom.) She knows nothing
Of our affiar . . . . There is no fear!
(Taking her near the table.)
There are three names inside that urn,
Draw out, now, one of them!

AME: (trembling) Wherefore?

REIN: Obey . . . and ask no more!

AME: (She draws one of the pieces of paper, which Reinhart hands over to Samuel.)
There is no doubt . . . I am sure,
That this is an affair of blood!

REIN: Which is the name extracted?

SAM: Reinhart!

REIN: (with joy) Providence is just!
The task belonged to me!

AME: (aside) It is clear they are designing
To assassinate the Governor!
Alas! that though unwilling
I should share in the deed!

REIN, SAM, TOM: Then let the felon perish,
And pay for all the wrongs
He has done his fellow creatures,
In the name of law!

REIN: Let in the messenger. (at the door.)

SCENE IV

Enter Oscar.

OSC: (to Amelia) Tonight
You are invited to the ball,
Together with your husband,
By the Governor.

AME: (agitated) I cannot go!—

REIN: Will the Count be present?

OSC: He will.

SAM AND TOM: This is good news.
(aside.)

REIN: (to Osc.) We accept the invitation.

OSC: It is a masked ball of great splendor!

REIN: Well, then,
We shall be present.

SAM E TOM: (a parte). E noi pur, se da quell' abito
Più spèdito il colpo va.

OSC: Di che fulgor, che musiche—
Esulteran le soglie,
Ove di tante giovani
Bellezze il fior s'accoglie, di quante altrice palpita
La genial città!

REN: Ed io medesma, io misera (fra sè)
Lo scritto inesorato
Trassi dall'urna complice,
Pel mio consorte irato:
Su cui del cor più nobile
Ferma la morte sta.

REN: Là delle danze al sonito (da solo)
Ecco il codardo afferro . . .
Ferma la punta vindice..E là dov'io l'atterro
Spira dator d'infamie
Senza trova pietà.

SAM E TOM: (fra loro). Una vendetta in domino
E ciò che torna all' uopo.
Nell' urto delle maschere—Non fallirà lo scopo:
E sarà urto delle maschere—Non fallirà lo scopo:
E sarà un ballo funebre—Fra pallide beltà.

AME: Prevenirlo potessi—e non tradire (da se.)
Lo sposo mio! . . .

OSC: Reina Delle danze sarete.

AME: Forse potrallo Ulrica.

SAM E TOM: E qual costume indosserem?

REN: Azzurra La veste, e da vermiglio
Nastro, le ciarpe al manco lato attorte.

SAM E TOM: E qual accento a ravvisarci?

REN: Morte!

SCENA V

Sontuoso gabinetto del Conte.—Tavolo con l'occorente per iscrivere; nel fondo un gran cortinas gio che scoprirà la festa da ballo.

RICCARDO: (solo.) Forse la soglia attinse,
E posa Alfin.—L' onore
Ed il dover fra i nostri petti han rotto
L' abisso.—Ah! sì, Renato
Rivedrâ l'Inghilterra . . . e la sua sposa
Lo seguirà. Senza un addio, l'immenso
Oceàn ne spàri . . . e taccia il core.
Esito ancor? ma, oh ciel, non lo degg' io?
(sottoscrive, e chiude il foglio in seno.)
Ah l' ho segnato il sacrifizio mio!
Ma se m'è forza perderti—Per sempre a luce mia.
A te verrà il mio palpito—Sotto qual ciel tu sia
Chiusa la tua memoria—Nell' intime del cor.
Ed or qual reo presagio—Lo spirito m' assale,
Che il rivederti annunzia—Quasi un desio fatale.
Come se fosse l' ultima—Ora de nostra amor

SAM, TOM: (aside). We also shall be there.
The blow will be more safe on such occasion!

OSC: There will surely assemble
All the most brilliant beauties
Our city can boast of!

AME: Alas! what strange fatality
Has made me an accomplice
To such a horrid crime?

REIN: There, while sweet sounds of music
Will stir up mirth and pleasure,
I'll spill the traitor's blood!

SAM, TOM: The occasion can't be better
Than the one which is offering
To accomplish our design!

AME: Could I at least warn Richard,
Without betraying my spouse

OSC: (to Amelia). You'll be there,
The belle of all the party!

AME: Ulrica may perhaps help us. (aside.)

SAM, TOM: How shall we dress to recognize each other?

REIN: We'll wear a blue dress, and on our left arm
A red tape

SAM, TOM: What shall be our word?

REIN: Death!

SCENE V

The private office of the Count

RICH: (alone). Yes, I'll have done with this affair!
Let duty and honor triumph!
Amelia with her husband
Shall go forever from my sight;
And all temptation then shall be removed
To violate the faith of a dear friend!
They shall both go to England.
(he signs a paper)
There's an end of it!
But if I am forever
To lose you, my dear love:
For ever in my memory
Your image shall remain!
But, once more before parting
I would like to see you!

SCENA VI

Oscar con una lettera, e detto.

OSC: Ignota donna questo foglio diemmi.
È pel Conte, diss' ella; a lui lo reca
E di celato.

RIC: (dopo letto.) Che nel ballo alcuno
Alla mia vita attenterà, sta detto.
Ma se m' arresto: allora,
Ch' io pavento diran.
Nol vo': nessuno
Pur sospettarlo de'.
Tu va: t'appresta,
E ratto per gioir meco la festa.
(Oscar esce, Ric. rimasto solo, vivamente prorompe.)
Vo', riverderti, Amelia,
E nella tua beltà,
Anche una volta l'anima
D'amor mi brillerà!

SCENA VII

Vasta e ricca sala da ballo splendidamente illuminata e parata a festa.

CORO GENERALE: Fervono amori e danze
Nelle felici stanza
Onde la vita è solo
Un sogno lusinghier.
Notte de' cari istanti,
De palpiti e' de canti
Perchè non fermi 'l volo.
Sull' onda de' piacer?

SCENA VIII

Samuels, Tom, e i loro Aderenti in domino azzurro col cinto vermiglio. Renato nello stesso costume s' avanza lentamente.

SAM: (additando Renato a Tom). Altro de' nostri è questo.
(e fattosi presso a Ren. sottovoce.)
La morte!

REN: (amaramente.) Sì, la morte.
Ma non verrà.

SAM E TOM: Che parli?

REN: Qui l'aspettarlo è vano.

SAM E TOM: Come? perchè?

SCENE VI

Oscar bringing a letter.

OSC: A lady, unknown, gave me this letter;
She said, it is for you,
And that it speaks on private matters!

RICH: (reads it). It is revealing a plot
To kill me at the ball . . . .
If I were to be absent,
I might be taken for a coward!
I must dissemble all the matter
And hasten to the ball.
(exit Oscar)

SCENE VII

A ball-room, splendidly decorated.

GENERAL CHORUS: Of all the charms that gladden
Our life, in this sad world,
Dance is the most alluring
The best that can be found!

SCENE VIII

Samuel, Tom, and their adherents, and Reinhart coming towards them.

SAM: (pointing Reinhart to Tom.) This is one of our friends..Death!
(softly.)

REIN: Yes; death!
But the Count won't come

SAM, TOM: Why; then?

REIN: I'll tell you by and by!

SAM: Bad luck!
Shall we miss him for ever?

TOM: What shall we do?

REN: Vi basti saperlo altrove.	REIN: Speak softly, we are noticed!
SAM: O sorte Ingannatrice!
TOM: (fremente) E sempre ne sfuggirà di mano!	TOM: By whom?
REN: Parlate basso, alcuno lo sguardo a noi fermò.	REIN: By the man on the left. (they disperse, Oscar follows Reinhart.)
SAM: E chi?
REN: Quello a sinistra, dal breve domino. (ei si disperdono, ma Ren. viene inseguito da Oscar in maschera.)
OSC: Più non ti lascio, o maschera; mal ti nascondi.	OSC: I know you . . .
REN: Eh via. (cansandolo.)	REIN: Well, then?
OSC: Tu se' Renato. (con vivacità.)	OSC: Yes, you are Reinhart!
REN: E Oscarre tu se'. (spiccandogli la maschera.)	REIN: Oscar! (snatching away his mask.)
OSC: Qual villania!	OSC: This is an insult!
REN: Ma bravo, e ti par dunque convenienza questa. Che mentre il conte dorme, tu scivoli alla festa?	REIN: Well done, Oscar! While the Count is sleeping You know how to enjoy yourself!
OSC: Il Conte è qui . . .	OSC: The Count is here!
REN: (trasalendo.) Che! . . . dove?	REIN: Is he? where?
OSC: (voltandogli le spalle.) Cercatelo da voi.	OSC: That's not for me to tell . . .
REN: (con accento amichevole.) Orsù—che dirmi almeno, del suo costume puoi?	REIN: Tell me at least something about his dress!
OSC: Saper vorreste (scherzando)—Di che si veste, Quando l' è cosa Ch'ei vuol nascosa. Oscar lo sa—Ma nol dirà, Tra là, là, là Là, là, là, là. Pieno d' amore Mi balza il core, Ma pur discreto Serba il secreto. Nol rapirà Grado o beltà, Tra là, là, là—Là, là, là, là.	OSC: You wish to know a thing That must remain a secret! It would be very wrong For me to tell it out! Though I am very merry, Through love and cheering wine, Still I am not so thoughtless, As to betray the Count!
REN: (raggiungendolo di nuovo.) Via, che tu sai distinguere gli amici suoi.	REIN: Am I not his best friend?
OSC: V'alletta Interrogarlo, e forse celiar con esso un po'?	OSC: Well, then, What do you want from him?
REN: Appunto.	REIN: I want to chat with him a little!
OSC: E compromettere di poi chi ve l'ha detto?	OSC: But, then, you may betray my confidence!
REN: M' offendi, è confidenza che quanto importi so.	REIN: Am I a child to blab about such things?
OSC: Vi preme assai . . .	OSC: The Count, then, may be angry . . .
REN: Degg'io di gravi cose ad esso, Pria che la notte inoltri, qui favellar. Su te Farò cader la colpa, se non mi fia concesso.	REIN: I have important things to tell him, Before the morning comes! It will be your fault if I can't find him out!
OSC: Dunque . . .	OSC: Well then?
REN: Fai grazia a lui, se parli, e non a me.	REIN: It is your duty to do it!
OSC: (più dappresso e rapidamente.) Veste una cappa nera, con roseo nastro al petto. (e fa per andarsene.)	OSC: His dress is black, and a red ribbon's on his breast! (trying to get off.)
REN: Una parola ancora..	REIN: (stopping him.) But one word more!
	OSC: Said enough!
AME: Ah perchè qui! fuggite . . .	AME: (coming forward with the Count.) Why did you come here? for God's sake, go off!
RIC: Sei quella dello seritto?	RICH: Are you the lady who sent me the letter?
AME: La morte qui v' accerchia.	AME: You'll be stabbed!
RIC: Non penetra nel mie Petto il terror.	RICH: I am not afraid of death!
AME: Fuggite, fuggite, o che trafitto Cadrete qui!	AME: Go—quick, quick, Or else you will be a dead man!
RIC: Rivelami il nome tuo.	RICH: Tell me your name!
AME: Gran Dio Nol posso.	AME: I can't! Go off—
RIC: E perchè piangi . . . mi supplichi atterrita? Oude, cotanta senti pietà della mia vita?	RICH: Why should you take so much pains on my account?
AME: (tra singulti che svelano la sua voce naturale.) Tutto, per essa, il mio sangue . . . tutto darei!	AME: (crying.) Alas, tarry no longer!
RIC: Ah, invan ti celi, Amelia: quell' angelo tu sei!	RICH: I know you now . . . you are Amelia!
AME: T' amo, sì t' amo, e in lacrime A' piedi tuoi m' atterro, Ove t' anela incognito Della vendetta il ferro. Cadavere domani Sarai se qui rimani: Salvati, va, mi lascia, Fuggi dall' odio lor.	AME: Ah! fly for God's sake: Ah, save, do save your life! You may be, next instant, In this room, a dead man!
RIC: Sin che tu m' ami, Amelia, Non curo il fato mio, Non ho che te nell' anima, E l' universo oblio. Nè so temer la morte, Perchè di lei più forte È l'aura che m' inebria Del tuo celeste amor.	RICH: So long as I'm the object, Amelia, of your affection! Ah! nothing from your presence Can make me basely fly!
AME: Dunque verdermi vuoi D' affanno morta e di vergogna?	AME: Will, then, you see me dying Through grief and shame? . . . .
RIC: Salva. Ti vo'—domani e con Renato andrai . . .	RICH: Your honor shall be saved. You shall go to England with your husband!
AME: Dove?	AME: To England!
RIC: Al natio tuo cielo.	RICH: Yes, to England!
AME: In Inghilterra!	AME: Is that true!
RIC: Mi schianto il cor . . . ma partirai . . .	RICH: Yes; though it may break my heart!
AME: Riccardo!	AME: Richard!
RIC: Amelia: anche una volta addio addio. L' ultima volta!	RICH: Amelia, farewell to you forever!
REN: (lanciatosi inosservato fra loro, lo trafigge di pugnale) E tu ricevi il mio!	REIN: (Stabbing him.) This is my farewell!
RIC: Ahimè!	RICH: O Lord!
AME: Soccorso!	AME: Help!

OSC: (accorrendo a lui) Oh ciel!

TUTTI: (affollandosi intorno). Ei trucidato

ALCUNI: Da chi?

ALTRI: Dov' è l'infame?

OSC: (accennando a Renato). Eccol . . .
(mentre lo circondano e gli strappano la maschera.)

TUTTI: Renato!
Morte . . . abomino
Sul traditor!

RIC: No, no . . . lasciatelo.
Tu m' odi ancor.
(a Renato.)
(e tratto il dispaccio, e fatto cenno a lui di accostarsi.)
Ella è pura, in braccio a morte,
Te lo giuro, il ciel m' ascolta:
Io che amai la tua consorte
Rispettato ho il suo candor,
(gli dà il foglia)
A novello incarco asceso
Te con lei partir dovevi . . .
Io l' amai, ma volli illeso
Il tuo nome ed il suo cor!

OSC: What's the matter?

ALL: (gathering around the Count). Who has done this?

SOME: Who has done this?

OTHERS: Where is the traitor?

OSC: (pointing out Reinhart.)
There he is!

ALL: (Snatching off his mask.)
Reinhart.
Death to the villain! . . . .
Death to the ungrateful wretch!

RICH: Stop, let him alone!
(To Reinhart.)
Hear me, for the last time
Your wife is pure and innocent!
God knows I speak the truth!
It is true that I have loved her,
But she has done no wrong!
(Gives him a paper.)
To avoid further temptation,
To send you, I had resolved,
Along with her, to England
To fill an honored post!

REN: Ciel, che feci! e che m'aspetta
Esecrato sulla terra! . . .
Di qual sangue e qual vendetta
M'assetò l'infausto error!

AME: O rimorsi dell'amore
Che divorano il mio core,
Fra un colpevole che sanguina
E la vittima che muor!

OSC: O dolor senza misura
O terribile sventura!
La sua fronte è tutta rorida
Già dell'ultimo sudor!

RIC: Grazia a ognun: signor qui sono:
Tutti assolve il mio perdono.

CORO: Cor si grande e generoso
Tu ci serba, o Dio pietoso:
Raggio in terra a noi miserrimi
È del tuo celeste amor!

RIC: Addio per sempre, o figli miei . . . per sempre
Addio . . . diletta America . . . (cade e spira.)

AME: Esso muore!

OSC: Qual anima passò!

TUTTI: Notte d'orrore!

Fine.

REIN: What crime have I committed,
Blinded by false suspicions!
Ah! what a fatal rashness
Has pushed me to this act?

AME: Oh! what a horrid destiny
Has darkened my career!
No end shall have my sorrow,
Except when in the grave!

OSC: What a horrible misfortune
Is this that has befallen
To the most noble hero
That can be found on earth.

RICH: Before I die I forgive all,—
Let none be punished on my account.

CHORUS: Great God, grant assistance
To our beloved Chief!
Restore his health, if possible,
Grant him a longer life!!!

RICH: Farewell, my dear, beloved friends,
I die!
(He expires.)

AME: He is dead!

OSC: What noble soul!

ALL: What crime!!

The End.

La Forza del Destino (1862)

The Force of Destiny

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY FRANCESCO MARIA PIAVE

La Forza del Destino is based on Don Alvaro o la Fuerza del Sino by Angel de Saavedra, Duke of Rivas. This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Francesco Maria Piave, premiered at the Imperial Theatre in St. Petersburg on November 10, 1862. Don Alvaro is in love with Donna Leonora, but her father, the Marquis, will not permit his daughter to marry Alvaro, a "half-caste." Alvaro and Leonora attempt to elope, but their escape is thwarted. In a confrontation with the Marquis, Alvaro defends his beloved. Alvaro throws his pistol down in frustration and it accidentally goes off, killing the Marquis, who curses his daughter before he dies. On her search for Alvaro, Leonora, disguised as a young boy, encounters her brother, Don Carlo, disguised as a student, who swears he will find her and murder Alvaro. Leonora flees to the monastery of the Madonna of the Angels, where Father Superior lets her live as a hermit in a nearby mountain cave protected by a holy curse. War between Napoleon and Spain breaks out in Italy. Sure that Leonora must have died, Don Alvaro enlists in the Spanish army using fake identification. During a battle he saves the life of Carlo, also fighting under a false name. They pledge eternal brotherhood. Alvaro, wounded, gives Carlo an envelope, instructing him to destroy it without looking inside. The letter contains Leonora's portrait, thus Carlo discovers Alvaro's identity. He challenges him to a duel once his wound has healed, but a camp patrol separates them. At the monastery, the needy, about to receive a free meal, compare Fra Melitone to Father Raffaele, who is really Alvaro. Carlo finds him and challenges him once more. Alvaro wounds his enemy and goes to the hermit in the cave—none other than Leonora—to be absolved for his sin. Alvaro recognizes Leonora and confesses that the dying man is her brother. Carlo stabs her as she administers his last rites; the Father Superior absolves her and she dies in Alvaro's arms.

■ ATTO I

SCENA I

Siviglia.—Una sala, tappezzata di damasco, con ritratti di famiglia, ed arme gentilizie, addobbata nello stile del secolo 18.0 pero in cattivo stato. Di fronte due finestre; quella a sinistra chiusa l'altra a destra aperta e praticabile, dalla quale si vede un cielo purissimo, illuminato dalla Luna, e cime d'alberi. Tra le finestre e un grande armadio chiuso, contenente vesti biancherie, ecc. Ognuna delle pareti laterali ha due porte. La prima a destra della spettatore e la comune; la seconda mette alla stanza di Curra. A sinistra in fondo e l'appartamento del Marchese; piu presso al proscenio quello di Leonora. A mezza scena, alquanto a sinistra, e un tavolino coperto da tappeto di damasco, e sopra il medesimo una chitarra, vasi di fiori, due candelabri d'argento accesi con paralumi, sola luce che schiarira la sala. Un seggiolono presso il tavolino; un mobile con sopra un oriuolo fra le due porte a destra; altro mobile sopra il quale e il ritratto, tutta figura, del Marchese, appoggiato all parete sinistra. La sal sara parapettata.

■ ACT I

SCENE I

Seville.—A room, hung with damask, family portraits, and arms of nobility, furnished in the style of the 18th century, all, however, in shabby condition. Two windows face the audience; that on the left is closed, that on the right open and practicable, from which is seen a clear sky, and the tops of trees with a bright moonlight. Between the windows a large wardrobe, containing clothes, etc. Each side has two doors. The first to the right of the spectator is the common door; the second leads to Curra's room. On the left side farthest off, is the apartment of the Marquis; that nearest the proscenium leads to Leonora's room. Halfway, a little to the left, is a table with a damask cover, and on it a guitar, vases of flowers, and two lighted silver candlesticks with shades, the only light in the room. A large chair near the table; a piece of furniture with a clock on it between the two doors on the right; other furniture on the left, above which, hung against the wall, is the full-length portrait of the Marquis. The room is entirely enclosed.

Il Marchese di Calatrava, con lume in mano, sta congedandosi da Donna Leonora preoccupata. Curra viene dalla sinistra.

MARCHESE: (Abbracciandola con affetto.) Buena notte, mia figlia! Addio, diletta!
Aperto ancora è quel verone!
(Va a chiuderlo.)

LEONORA: (Oh angoscia!)

MARCHESE: Nulla dice il tuo amor? Perchè si trista?
(Tornando a lei.)

LEONORA: Padre—Signor—

MARCHESE: La pura aura de' campi
Calma la tuo cor donova;
Fuggisti lo straniero di te indegno
A me lascia la cura
Dell' avvenir. Nel padre tuo confida,
Che t'ama tanto.

LEONORA: Ah, padre!

MARCHESE: Ebben, che t'ange?
Non pianger, io t'adoro!

LEONORA: (Oh, mio rimorso!)

MARCHESE: Ti lascio.

LEONORA: (Gettandosi con effusione tra le braccia del padre.) Ah, padre mio!

MARCHESE: Ti benedica il cielo!
Addio!

Marquis of Calatrava, with a light in his hand is taking leave of Donna Leonora, who is thoughtful. Curra comes from the left.

MARCHESE: (Embracing her affectionately.) Goodnight, my child! Adieu, my dear one!
That balcony window still open?
(goes and shuts it.)

LEONORA: (Oh, anguish!)

MARCHESE: Not a word of love?
Why so sad?
(turning to her.)

LEONORA: Father—sir—

MARCHESE: The pure air of the fields
Has brought peace to your heart,
You have left a stranger unworthy of you,
And leave the care
Of your future to me. Confide in your father
Who loves you so dearly.

LEONORA: Ah, my father!

MARCHESE: What disturbs you?
Do not weep—I love you dearly.

LEONORA: (Oh, what remorse!)

MARCHESE: I leave you.

LEONORA: (Throwing herself with transport into his arms.) Ah, dearest father!

MARCHESE: Heaven bless you! Adieu!

LEONORA: Addio!
(Il Marches bacia, riprende il lume, e va nelle sue stanze.)

SCENA II

Curra segue il Marchese, chiude la porta ond' e uscito, e riviene a Leonora abbandonatasi sul seggiolone piangente.

CURRA: Temea restasse qui fino a domani!
Si riapra il veron.
(Eseguisece.)
Tutto s'appronti. E andiamo.
(Toglie dall' armadio un sacco da notte in cui ripone biancherie e vesti.)

LEONORA: E si amoroso padre avverso
Fia tanto a' voti miei?
No, no, decidermi non so.

CURRA: (Affaccendata.) Che dite?

LEONORA: Quegli accenti nel cor come pugnalia
Scendevanmi. Se ancor restava, appreso
Il ver gli avrei.

CURRA: (Smette il lavoro.) Domani allor nel sangue
Suo saria don Alvaro,
Od a Siviglia prigioniero, e forse
Al patibol poi—

LEONORA: Taci!

CURRA: E tutto puesto
Perch' egli volle amar chi non l'amava.

LEONORA: Io non amarlo! Tu ben sai s'io l'ami!
Patria, famiglia, padre,
Per lui non abbandono!
Ahi troppo!—troppo sventurata sono!
Me pellegrina ed orfana
Lungi dal natio nido,
Un fato inesorabile
Trascina a stranio lido,
Colmo di triste immagini,
Da' suoi rimorsi affranto
E il cor di questa misera
Dannato a eterno pianto.
Ti lascio, ahimè, con lacrime,
Dolce mia terra!—Addio!
Ahimè, non avrà termine
Si gran dolore!—Addio!

CURRA: M'aiuti, signorina—
Più presto andrem.

LEONORA: S' ei non giungesse?
(Guarda l'orologie.)
E tardi.
Mezzanotte è suonata!
(Contenta.)
Ah no, più non verrà!

CURRA: Quale romore!
Calpestio di cavelli!

LEONORA: (Corre al verone.) E desso!

LEONORA: Adieu!
(the Marquis kisses her, takes up a light, and goes to his room.)

SCENE II

Curra follows the Marquis, closes the door, at which he went out, and returns to Leonora, who has thrown herself in the chair.

CURRA: I thought he would stay till daylight!
Let us re-open the balcony.
(open its.)
Prepare everything and let us go.
(takes traveling bag from the wardrobe, and fills it with linen and clothes.)

LEONORA: Can so fond a father
Oppose my dearest wishes?
No, no, I cannot leave.

CURRA: (Very busy.) What do you say?

LEONORA: His loving tones struck like a dagger
To my soul. Had he remained,
I would have spoken the truth.

CURRA: (Leaving off work.) Then tomorrow
Don Alvaro would lie weltering in his blood,
Or be a prisoner in Seville,
And perhaps on the scaffold—

LEONORA: Be silent!

CURRA: And all because he loves one
Who does not return his love.

LEONORA: Does not return it?
Well you know I love him!
Do I not abandon Country, family, father for him?
Ah me!—I am indeed unhappy!
A friendless wanderer,
Far from my native land!
An inexorable fate
Drags me to a foreign country,
Overwhelmed in dire woe,
Crushed with deep remorse,
My miserable spirit
Is condemned to constant grief.
With tears, alas! I leave you,
My own sweet native land.—Adieu!
This bitter woe will never, never end!
Adieu!

CURRA: Help me, signora—
We shall be ready soon.

LEONORA: If he should not come?
(looks at the clock.)
It is late—
Midnight has struck!
(contentedly.)
Ah no, he will not come.

CURRA: What noise is that?
It is the tread of horses!

LEONORA: (Running to balcony.) It is he!

CURRA: Era impossibil
Ch' ei non venisse!

LEONORA: Ciel!

CURRA: Bando al timore.

SCENA III

Detti.—Don Alvaro senza mantello, con giustacuore a maniche larghe, e sopra una giubetta da Majo, rete sul capo, stivali, speroni, entra dal verone e si getta tra le braccia de Leonora.

ALVARO: Ah, per sempre, o mio bell' angelo,
Ne congiunse il cielo adesso
L'universo in questo amplesso
Con me veggo giubilar.

LEONORA: Don Alvaro!

ALVARO: Ciel, che t'agita?

LEONORA: Presso è il giorno.

ALVARO: Da lung' ora
Mille inciampi tua dimora
M'han vietato penetrar;
Ma d' amor si puro e santo
Nulla opporsi può all' incanto,
E Dio stesso il nostro palpito
In letizia tramutò.
(A Curra.)
Quelle vesti dal verone
Getta.

LEONORA: (A Curra.) Arresta.

ALVARO: (A Curra.) No, no!
(A Leonora.)
Seguimi;
Lascia omai la tua prigiane.

LEONORA: Ciel! risolvermi non so!

ALVARO: Pronti destrieri di già ne attendono;
Un sacerdote ne aspetta all' ara!
Vieni, d'amore in sen ripara
Che Dio dal cielo benedirà!
E quando il sole, nume dell' India,
Di mia regale stirpe signore,
Il mondo innondi del suo splendore,
Sposi, oh diletta, ne troverà.

LEONORA: E tarda l' ora.

ALVARO: (A Curra.) Su via t' affretta!

LEONORA: Ancor sospendi!

ALVARO: Eleonora!

LEONORA: Diman.

ALVARO: Che parli?

LEONORA: Ten prego aspetta!

ALVARO: (Assai turbato.) Diman.

LEONORA: Domani si partirà.
Anco una volta il padre, veder desio;
E tu contento, gli è ver, ne sei?
Sì perchè m'ami—
(Si confonde.)
Nè opporti dèi—

CURRA: It was impossible
That he should fail to come.

LEONORA: Heavens!

CURRA: Away with fear.

SCENE III

The same,—Don Alvaro, without a cloak, wearing a tight vest, with large sleeves and a slashed doublet, a net on his head, boots and spurs, he enters through the balcony, and throws himself into Leonora's arms.

ALVARO: Ah, my lovely angel,
Heaven now unites us forever!
All the universe is glad
With me, in this embrace.

LEONORA: Don Alvaro!

ALVARO: Oh Heaven, why are you agitated?

LEONORA: The dawn is near.

ALVARO: For a long time
Many obstacles kept me
From reaching your dwelling,
But nothing can stop the power
Of a love so pure and holy,
And Heaven itself
Changes our fears to contentment.
(to Curra.)
Throw
Those vestments from the balcony.

LEONORA: (To Curra.) Stay.

ALVARO: (To Curra.) No, no!
(to Leonora.)
Follow me.
Leave your prison now forever.

LEONORA: Oh Heaven! I cannot decide!

ALVARO: Swift steeds are waiting,
A priest attends at the altar!
Come, find shelter in the love
Which Heaven will richly bless.
And when the sun, the god of India,
Sire of my royal race
Shall flood the earth with splendor,
Oh, beloved! it will find us united.

LEONORA: The hour is late.

ALVARO: (To Curra.) Away—make haste!

LEONORA: (To Curra.) Wait awhile!

ALVARO: Eleonora!

LEONORA: Tomorrow.

ALVARO: What did you say?

LEONORA: I pray you, wait!

ALVARO: (Much disturbed.) Tomorrow.

LEONORA: Tomorrow we will go.
Once more
I desire to see my father!
You are willing—is it not so?
Yes, for you love me, and will not refuse.
I too, you know, love you!

Oh anch'io, tu il sai—t' amo io tanto!
Ne son felice! oh cielo, quanto!
Gonfio de gioia ho il cor! Restiamo!
Sì, Don Alvaro, io t'amo, io t' amo!
(Piange.)

ALVARO: Gonfio hai di gioia il core—e lagrimi!
Come un sepolcro tua mano è gelida!
Tutto comprendo—tutto, signora.

LEONORA: Alvaro!—Alvaro!

ALVARO: Eleonora!
(Lunga pausa.)
Saprò soffrire io solo. Tolga Iddio
Che i passi miei per debolezza segua—
Sciolgo i tuoi giuri. Le nuziali tede
Sarebbero per noi segnal di morte,
Se tu, com' io non m' ami—se pentita—

LEONORA: Son tua, son tua col core e colla vita!
Ah! seguirti fino agl'ultimi
Confini della terra;
Con te sfidarimpavida
Di rio destin la guerra;
Mi fia perenne gaudio
D'eterea volutta.
Ti seguo, andiam dividerci,
Il fato, no, no, non potra.

ALVARO: Sospiro, luce ed anima
Di questo cor che t' ama;
Finchè mi batta un palpito,
Far paga ogni tua brama
Il solo ed immutabile
Desio per me sarà.
Mi segui! Andiam, dividerci
Il mondo non potrà.
(S'avvicinano al verone, quando ad un tratto si sente a sinistra un aprire e chiudere di porte.)

LEONORA: Quale rumor!

CURRA: (Ascoltando.) Ascendono le scale!

ALVARO: Presto, partiamo!

LEONORA: E tardi.

ALVARO: Allor di calma
E duopo.

CURRA: Vergin santa!

LEONORA: (A Alvaro.) Colà t' ascondi!

ALVARO: No. Degg' io difenderti.
(Traendo una pistola.)

LEONORA: Ripon quell' arma—contro al genitore Vorresti?

ALVARO: No, contro me stesso.
(Ripone la pistola.)

LEONORA: Orrore!

(confusedly.)
Am I not happy? O heaven!
How my heart swells with joy!—Let us wait!
Yes, Alvaro, I love you! I love you!
(weeps.)

ALVARO: Your heart swells with joy—then why these tears?
Your hand is cold as death!
I understand all, signora—all!

LEONORA: Alvaro!—Alvaro!

ALVARO: Eleonora!
(a long pause.)
I can suffer alone. Heaven forbid
That weakly you should follow me—
I absolve your vows. The nuptial tie
Would be the stroke of death for us,
If you love not as I do—if, repenting—

LEONORA: I am yours! Yours with heart and soul!
Ah! I'll follow ever in your path
To earth's far confines winging,
And boldly I defy with you
The terrors war is bringing,
I'll share all dangers by your side,
With love and joy elate;
I'll follow you whatever—may betide,
We win—a happy fate.

ALVARO: Hope, light and life
Of the heart that adores you!
Until my pulse beats no more
My sole desire will be
To meet your every wish,
To cherish you for always
Follow me—let us go!
The world has no power to part us.
(they approach the balcony when suddenly the opening and shutting of a door is heard.)

LEONORA: What is that noise?

CURRA: (Listening.) Someone is coming upstairs!

ALVARO: Quick! Let us go!

LEONORA: Too late!

ALVARO: Well, then,
We must be calm and firm.

CURRA: Holy Virgin!

LEONORA: (To Alvaro.) Conceal yourself there!

ALVARO: No. I must defend you.
(drawing out a pistol.)

LEONORA: Put back that weapon—
Would you use it against my father?

ALVARO: No, against myself.
(replaces the pistol.)

LEONORA: Horrible!

SCENA IV

Dopo vari colpi apresi con istrepito la porta del fondo a sinsitra, ed il Marchese di Calatrava entra infuriato brandendo una spada e seguito da due servi con lume.

MARCHESE: Vil seduttor!—infame figlia!

LEONORA: (Correndo a' suoi piedi.) No, padre mio!

MARCHESE: Più non le sono.
(La respinge.)

ALVARO: (Al Marchese) Il solo colpevole son io
Ferite, vendicatevi!
(Presentandogli l' petto.)

MARCHESE: (Al Alvaro.) No la condotta vostra
Da troppo abbietta origine uscito vi dimostra.

ALVARO: Signor Marchese!
(Risentito.)

MARCHESE: (A Leonora.) Scostati—
(Ai Servia.)
S' arresti l' empio!

ALVARO: (Cavando nuovamente la pistola) Guai
Se alcun di voi si move.
(Ai Servi, che retrocedono.)

LEONORA: (Currendo a lui.) Alvaro, oh ciel, che fai!

ALVARO: (Al Marchese.) Cedo a voi sol—ferite!

MARCHESE: Morir per mano mia!
Per mano del cranefice tal vita estinta fia.

ALVARO: Signor di Calatrava,
Pura siccome gli angeli è vostra figlia—
Il giuro—reo son io solo. Il dubbio
Che l' ardir mio qui desta, si tolga colla vita.
Eccomi inerme.
(Getta la pistola, che percuote al suolo, scarica il colpo e ferisce mortalmente il Marchese.)

MARCHESE: Io muoio!

ALVARO: (Disperato.) Arma funesta!

LEONORA: (Correndo a' piedi del padre.) Aita!

MARCHESE: (A Leonora) Lungi da me—
Contamina tua vista la mia morte!

LEONORA: Padre!

MARCHESE: Ti maledico!
(Cade tra le braccia dei Servi.)

LEONORA: Cielo pietade!

SCENE IV

After repeated blows the door at the back, on the left, is burst open, and the Marquis of Calatrava enters, enraged. Sword in hand, and followed by two servants with lights.

MARCHESE: Vile seducer!—shameless daughter!

LEONORA: (Rushing to his feet.)
No, father, no.

MARCHESE: I am your father no longer.
(repulsing her.)

ALVARO: (To the Marquis.) I alone am guilty.
Strike!—avenge yourself!
(presenting himself.)

MARCHESE: (To Alvaro.) No, your conduct
Shows you to be of origin too low.

ALVARO: Marquis!
(excitedly.)

MARCHESE: (To Leonora.) Stand aside—
(to the Servants.)
Seize the wretch!

ALVARO: (Again taking out his pistol.) Approach me, if you dare!
(to the Servants, who retire.)

LEONORA: (Running to him.) Alvaro, what madness is this?

ALVARO: (To the Marquis.) I yield to you alone—strike!

MARCHESE: You'll not die by my hand
So base a life belongs only to the executioner.

ALVARO: Signor de Calatrava, your child
Is innocent as an angel;
I alone am guilty.
Let the doubt which my rashness has raised
Be dispelled with my life. Behold me unarmed.
(throws away the pistol, which in falling, goes off, and kills the Marquis.)

MARCHESE: I am dying!

ALVARO: (In despair.) Ill-fated weapon!

LEONORA: (Rushing to her father.) Help!

MARCHESE: (To Leonora.) Begone—
Your presence disgraces me in death!

LEONORA: Father!

MARCHESE: My curse upon you!
(falls into the Servants' arms.)

LEONORA: Have mercy, kind Heaven!

ALVARO: Oh sorte!
(I Servi portano il Marchese alle sue stanze, mentre Don Alvaro trae seco verso il verone la sventurata Leonora. Cade la tela.)

FINE DELL'ATTO PRIMO.

ATTO II

SCENA I

Villaggio d'Hornachuelos e vicinanze.—Grande cucina d'una Osteria a pian terreno. A sinistra, e la porta d'ingresso che da sulla via; di fronte una finestra ed un credenzone con piatti, ecc. A destra, in fonda un gran focolare ardente con varie pentole; piu vicino alle bocca-scena breve scaletta che mette ad una stanza, la cui porta e praticabile. Da un lato gran tavola apparecchiata con sopra una lucerna accesa. L'Oste e l'Ostessa che non parlano, sono affaccendati ad ammanir la cena. L'Alcade e seduto presso al foco; uno Studente presso la tavola. Alquanti Mulattieri, fra quali Mastro Trabuco, ch'e al dinanzi sopra un suo basto. Due Contadini, due Contadine, la Serva, ed un Mulatierre, ballano la Seguidilla. Sopra altra tavola, vino, bicchieri fiaschi, una bottiglia d'acquavite.

L'Alcade, uno Studente, Mastro Trabuco, Mulattieri, Paesani Famigli, Parsane ecc. A tempo Leonora in vesti virile.

CORO: Holo, hola, hola!
Ben giungi, o mulattier,
La notte a riposar.
Hola, hola, hola!
Qui devi col bicchier
Le forze ritemprar!
(L'Ostessa mette sulla tavola una grande zuppiera.)

ALCADE: La cena è pronta.
(Sedendosi alla mensa.)

TUTTI: (Prenendo posto presso la tavolo.) A cena, a cena!

STUDENTE: (Frattanto sul d'avanti dice.) (Ricerco invan la suora e il eduttore.) Perfidi!

CORO: (All'Alcade.) Voi la mensa benedite?

ALCADE: Può farlo il Licenziato.

STUDENTE: Di buon grado. Benedetto
E il pane che il Padre del ciel ci manda.

TUTTI: (Sedendo.) Così sia.

ALVARO: O cruel fate!
(the Servants bear the Marquis to his apartments, while Don Alvaro drags the unhappy Leonora towards the balcony. The Curtain falls.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

SCENE I

The Village of Hornachuelos and neighborhood. A large kitchen on the groundfloor of an Inn. On the left, the entrance-door leading to the road, facing the audience; a window, and a large dresser, with plates, etc. On the right, at the back, a large fireplace, with cauldrons, etc., nearer the proscenium, a short staircase, leading to a room which has a practicable door. On one side a large table, laid out, and on it a lighted lamp. The Host and Hostess, who do not speak, are busy preparing the supper. The Alcade is seated near the fire; a Student is seated near the table. Some Muleteers, amongst others Master Trabuco, who is in front, leaning on his pack saddle. Two male and two female Peasants, the female Servant and a Muleteer dance the Seguidilla. On another table, wine, glasses, flasks, and a bottle of brandy.

The Alcade, A Student, Master Trabuco, Muleteers, Peasants Attendants, Female Peasants, etc. Later Leonora, in male attire.

CHORUS: Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
Now welcome, O muleteer,
Who comes to pass the night;
Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah!
Here is the brimming cup,
Your strength you can restore.
(the Hostess places a large soup tureen on the table.)

ALCADE: The supper is ready.
(seating himself at table.)

ALL: (Taking their places at table.) To supper, to supper!

STUDENT: (In the foreground.) I seek in vain my sister and her betrayer.
The ingrates!

CHORUS: (To the Alcade.) Will you not ask a blessing?

ALCADE: The Licentiate can do it.

STUDENT: With all my heart.
Blessed be
The bread that Heaven sends us from above.

ALL: (Seated.) Amen.

LEONORA: (Presentandosi alla potra della stanza a destra, che terra socchiusa) (Che vedo!—mio fratello!)
(Si ritira.)
(L'Ostessa avra gia distribuito il riso e siede cogli altri. Inseguito e servito altro piatto. Trabuco e in disparte, sempre appoggiato al suo basto.)

ALCADE: (Assaggiando.) Buono.

STUDENTE: (Mangiando.) Eccellente!

MULATTIERI: Par che dica mangiami.

STUDENTE: (All'Ostessa.) Tu das epulis accumbere divum.

ALCADE: Non sa Latino ma cucina bene.

STUDENTE: Viva l'Otessa!

TUTTI: Evviva!

STUDENTE: Non vien Mastro Trabuco?

TRABUCO: E Venerdi.

STUDENTE: Digiuna?

TRABUCO: Appunto.

STUDENTE: E quella personcina con lei guinta?

SCENA II

Detti, e Preziosilla, ch'entra saltellando.

PREZIOSILLA: Viva la guerra!

TUTTI: Preziosilla!—Brava!
Brava!

STUDENTE: Qui, presso a me.

TUTTI: Tu la ventura.
Dirne potrai.

PREZIOSILLA: Chi brama far fortuna?

TUTTI: Tutti il vogliam.

PREZIOSILLA: Correte allor soldati.
In Italia, dov' è rotta la guerra Contro al Tedesco.

TUTTI: Morte
Ai Tedeschi!

PREZIOSILLA: Flagel d' Italia eterno
E de' figluoli suoi.

TUTTI: Tutti v' andremo.

PREZIOSILLA: Ed io sarò con voi.

PREZIOSILLA ED CORO: Al suon del tamburo,
Al brio del corsiero,
Al nugolo azzurro,
Del bronzo guerrier!
Dei campi al susurro
S'esalta il pensier!
E bella la guerra,
E bella la guerra!
Evviva la guerra, evviva!
E solo obbliato
Da vile chi muore;
Al bravo soldato

LEONORA: (Appearing at the door of the room on the right, which she keeps half closed.) What do I see!—my brother!
(she retires.)
(the Hostess has already distributed the rice, and sits down with the others. Other dishes are served up. Trabuco on one side leans on his pack-saddle.)

ALCADE: (Tasting.) Capital!

STUDENT: (Eating) Excellent!

MULETEER: It seems to say, 'Come, eat me.'

STUDENT: (To the Hostess.) Tu das epulis accumbere divum.

ALCADE: She does not know Latin, but she cooks well.

STUDENT: Long live the Hostess!

ALL: Hurrah!

STUDENT: Does Master Trabuco not come to supper?

TRABUCO: It is Friday.

STUDENT: Oh, you are fasting?

TRABUCO: Just so.

STUDENT: And the little person who came with you?

SCENE II

The same, enter Preziosilla, dancing.

PREZIOSILLA: Success to war!

ALL: Preziosilla!—Bravo!
Bravo!

STUDENT: Here, sit by me.

ALL: You will be able
To tell us our fortunes.

PREZIOSILLA: Who wishes to make his fortune?

ALL: Everyone wishes it.

PREZIOSILLA: Haste, then, to Italy, as soldiers,
Where war has broken out
Against the Germans.

ALL: Death
To the Germans!

PREZIOSILLA: They are the eternal scourge
Of Italy and her sons.

ALL: We will all go.

PREZIOSILLA: And I shall be with you.

PREZIOSILLA and CHORUS: The drum gaily beating
The horses swift fleeting,
And volleys repeating
Give glory to war!
The busy sounds about the camp
Drive anxious thought afar!
In battle is glory,
In battle is glory!
Hurrah,—then, hurrah, hurrah—hurrah!
No coward can ever
Make a noble endeavor,

Al veto valor
E premio serbato
Di gloria d'onór!
Se vieni, fratello,
Sarai caporale,
E tu collonnello,
E tu generale
Il dio fur fantello dall' arco immortale
Farodi cappello
Al bravo uffizial.

STUDENTE: E che riserbasi
Allo studente?
(Le presenta la mano.)

PREZIOSILLA: (Osservando.) O tu miserrime
Vicende avrai.

STUDENTE: Che di'?

PREZIOSILLA: (Fissandolo.)
Non mente
Il labbro mai—
Ma a te—carissimo,
Non presto fè
(Poi sotto voce.)
Non sei studenti;
Non dirò niente,
Ma, gnaffe, a me,
Non se la fa,—
No per mai fè.
Tral la la là!

SCENA III

Detti, e Pellegrini, che passao da furoi.

VOCI IE: (Lontane.) Ah, pietade o Signor!

VOCI 2E: Pieta di noi.

VOCI IE: Sii clemente, o Signor!

VOCI 2E: Pietà di noi.

VOCI IE: (Piu vicine.) Te lodiamo, o Signor!

VOCI 2E: Pietà di noi.

VOCI IE: Deh, pietade, o Signor!

VOCI 2E: Pietà di noi.

TUTTI: Chi sono?
(Alzandosi e scoprendosi.)

ALCADE: Pellegrini,
Che vanno al giubileo.

LEONORA: (Ricomparendo agitatissima sulla stessa porta.) Fuggir potessi.

CORO: Che passino attendiamo.

ALCADE: Ebben, preghiam noi pure.

CORO: Si preghiamo.

TUTTI: (Lasciando la mensa s' inginocchiano.) Suo noi concordi e supplici, Stendi la man, Signore;
Dall' infernal malore
Ne salvi tua pietà.

But heroes in story
Will be remembered:
To them be the glory
By fortune's decree!
Good luck shall overtake you,
Make you a corporal,
And you'll take a colonel's place,
You'll be a general;
Be brave in the battles
When musketry rattles,
And the foe will flee forth in disorder.

STUDENT: And
What is reserved for the student?
(holding out his hand.)

PREZIOSILLA: (Observing him)
Miserable man,
Sorrow shortly will find you.

STUDENT: What do you say?

PREZIOSILLA: (Earnestly)
My lips
Never utter falsehoods,
But on you, dear sir,
I don't much rely.
(In an undertone.)
You are no student.
I'll say nothing,
But with me,
The ruse has failed,
By my faith!
Tra la la la!

SCENE III

The same, and Pilgrims, passing outside.

1st VOICE: (In the distance.) Pardon, gracious Heaven.

2nd VOICE: Have pity on us.

1st VOICE: Grant us grace!

2nd VOICE: Have pity on us.

1st VOICE: (Nearer.) We praise you, O Heaven!

2nd VOICE: Have pity on us.

1st VOICE: We thank you, O Heaven!

2nd VOICE: Have pity on us.

ALL: Who are these people?
(raising and showing themselves.)

ALCADE: They are Pilgrims,
Who are going to the jubilee.

LEONORA: (Appearing, in great agitation, at the same door.) If I could only escape!

CHORUS: Let us wait till they pass.

ALCADE: And let us also pray.

CHORUS: Yes, let us pray.

ALL: (Leaving the table and kneeling down.) We implore you,
Extend your hand over us, O Lord,
From the power of ill
Let your mercy save us.
And mercy protect us.

LEONORA: (Ah, da un fratello salvami
Che anela il sangue mio;
Se tu nol vuoi, gran Dio,
Nessun mi salverà!)
(Rientra nella stanza chiudendone la porta. Tutti riprendono i loro posti. Si passano un fiasco.)

STUDENTE: Viva la buona compagnia!

TUTTI: Viva!

STUDENTE: Salute qui, l' eterna gloria poi!
(Alzando il bicchiere)

TUTTI: Così sia.
(Fanno altrettanto.)

STUDENTE: Già cogli angioli, Trabuco?

TRABUCO: E che?—con questo inferno?

STUDENTE: E quella personcina con lei giunta,
Venne pel giubileo?

TRABUCO: Nol so.

STUDENTE: Per altro.
E gallo, oppur gallina?

TRABUCO: De; forastier non bado che al danaro.

STUDENTE: Molto prudente!
(Poi all' Alcade.)
Ed ella
Che giungere la vide—perchè a cena.
Non vien?

ALCADE: L'ignoro.

STUDENTE: Dissero chiedesse
Acqua ed aceto.—Ah ah!—per rinfrescarsi.

ALCADE: Sara.

STUDENTE: E ver ch' è gentile, e senza barba?

ALCADE: Non so nulla.

STUDENTE: (Parlar non vuol!) Ancora
(To Trabuco.)
A lei.
Stava sul mulo,
Seduta o a cavalcioni?

TRABUCO: (Impazientato.) Che noia!

STUDENTE: Onde veniva?

TRABUCO: So che andrè, presto o tardi, in Paradiso.

STUDENTE: Perchè?

TRABUCO: (Alzandosi.) Ella il purgatorio.
Mi fa soffrir.

STUDENTE: Or dove va?

TRABUCO: In istalla,
Dormir colle mie mule,
Che non san di Latino,
Nè sono Baccellieri.
(Prendre il suo basto e parte.)

LEONORA: Ah, save me from a brother,
Who thirsts for my blood;
Your hand alone, O Lord,
Can save me from his wrath.
(re-enters the room and shuts the door. All reseat themselves and pass the bottle.)

STUDENT: Long live this goodly company.

ALL: Hurrah!

STUDENT: Health here, and happiness hereafter!
(raises the goblet.)

ALL: So be it.
(they do the same.)

STUDENT: Already dreaming, Trabuco?

TRABUCO: What? in this uproar?

STUDENT: And the little person who came with you,
does she go to the Jubilee?

TRABUCO: I do not know.

STUDENT: By the by,
Is it man or woman?

TRABUCO: With strangers, I only think of the money.

STUDENT: Most prudent!
(to the Alcade)
And you,
Who saw her arrive, answer
Why she doesn't come to supper?

ALCADE: I cannot tell.

STUDENT: They say she asked—ha ha!—
For vinegar and water, as refreshment.

ALCADE: Maybe.

STUDENT: Is it true that she is pretty, and has no beard?

ALCADE: I really do not know.

STUDENT: (He will not speak.)
(to Trabuco.)
Once more,
Was she seated on the mule,
Or rode astride?

TRABUCO: (Impatiently.) What vexation!

STUDENT: Where did she come from?

TRABUCO: I know I shall go, sooner or later, to Paradise.

STUDENT: Why?

TRABUCO: (Rising.) Because you make me
Suffer purgatory here.

STUDENT: Where are you going now?

TRABUCO: To the stable,
To sleep with my mules,
Who don't know Latin,
And are not Bachelors of Arts.
(takes his pack-saddle and goes.)

SCENA IV

I Suddettie meno Mastro Trabuco.

TUTTI: Ah ah! è fuggito!

STUDENTE: Poich' è imberbe l'incognito facciamgli
Col nero du baffetti,
Doman ne ridermo.

ALCUNI: Bravo! bravo!

ALCADE: Protegger debbo il viaggiator; m'oppongo.
Meglio farebbe dirne
D'onde venga, ove vade, e chi ella sia?

STUDENTE: Lo vuol saper?—Ecco l'istoria mia.
Son Pereda, son ricco d'ornore,
Baccelliere mi fe Salamanca;
Saro presto in utroque Dottore,
Che di studio ancor poco mi manca.
Di la Vargas mi tolse da un anno
E a Siviglia con se mi guido,
Non trattenne Pereda alcun dano,
Per l'amico il suo core parlo.
Della suora, un amante straniero,
Colà il padre gli avea trucidato,
Onde il figlio, da pro' cavaliero,
La vendetta ne aveva giurato.
Gl'inseguimmo di Cadice in riva,
Nè la coppia fatal si trovò.
Per l'amico Pereda soffriva,
Chè l suo core per esso parlò.
Là e dovunque narrar che del pari
La sedotta col vecchio peria,
Chè a una zuffa di servi e sicari,
Solo il vil seduttore sfuggia,
Io da Vargas allor mi staccava;
Ei seguir l'assassino giurò.
Verso America il mare solcava,
E Pereda a' suoi studi torno.

CORO: Truce storia Pereda narrava,
Generoso il suo cor si mostrò.

ALCADE: Sta bene.

PREZIOSILLA: (Con finezza.) Ucciso fu quel Marchese?

STUDENTE: Ebben?

PREZIOSILLA: L'amante rapia sua figlia?

STUDENTE: Si.

PREZIOSILLA: E voi l'amico fido, cortese,
Andaste a Cadice, dopo Siviglia?
Ah, gnaffe, a me non se la fa,
No, per mia fê—tra la la là!

ALCADE: (S'alza, e guardato l'orinolo dice.) Figliuoli, è tardi;
poichè abbiam cenato
Si rendan grazie a Dio, e partiam.

TUTTI: Partiamo.

SCENE IV

The same, except Trabuco.

ALL: Ha ha! he is off!

STUDENT: As the unknown is a stripling,
Let us paint on him a pair of moustaches,—
That will make us all laugh tomorrow.

SOME OF THEM: Bravo! Bravo!

ALCADE: I am bound to protect travellers,
And therefore object.—You had better tell us
Where you come from where going, and who you are.

STUDENT: You wish to know?—
This is my tale.
I'm Pereda, from Salamanca,
Soon a Doctor will be my title;
As a student!
I am a ranker,
In my studies I never was idle.
With one Vargas, I went now a year,
And to Sevilla our way we did wend;
Toil and hardship never troubled Pereda,
For his heart ever was faithful to his friend.
A stranger, his sister's lover
Had there his father slain,
Wherefore his son, as true knight
Had sworn to be avenged.
We followed to the shores of Cadiz.
But never overtook the guilty pair.
Pereda felt for his friend's distress,
Whom he most truly loved.
Here it is needful to inform you,
That the seduced one perished with her sire:
In a struggle between servants and assassins,
The vile seducer fled alone.
From Vargas then I parted;
For he swore to follow the assassin:
He crosses the ocean to America,
And Pereda returns to his studies.

CHORUS: A dismal story Pereda has related,
Which shows a generous soul.

ALCADE: It is well.

PREZIOSILLA: (Slyly.) Slain was the Marquis?

STUDENTE: What then?

PREZIOSILLA: The lover carried off his daughter?

STUDENTE: Yes.

PREZIOSILLA: And you, the friend, faithful, chivalrous,
Went to Cadiz, afterwards to Seville?
Ah, truly, such tales to me
Carry no weight, tra la!

ALCADE: (Rising and looking at the clock.) My children, it is late,
and we have supped;
Let us give thanks and go.

ALL: Let us go.

ALCADE: Or buona notte!

CORO: Buona notte!

TUTTI: Andiamo.
(Partono.)

SCENA V

Una piccola spianata sul declivio di scoscesa Montagna. A sinistra precipizii e rupi; di fronte la facciata della chiesa della Madonna delgi Angeli, di povera ed umile architettura, a destra la porta del Convento, in mezzo allo quale una fine strella, da un lato la corda del companello. Sopra vi e una piccola tettoia sporgente. Al di la della chiesa alti monti col villaggio d'Hornachuelcos. La porta della chiesa e chiusa, ma larga, sopra dessa una finestra semicircolare lasciera vedere la luce interna. A mezza scene, un po' a sinistra, sopra quattro gradini s' erge una rozza croce ei pietra, corrosa dal tempo. La scena sara illuminata da luna chiarissima.

Donna Leonora giunge, ascendendo dalla destra, stanca, vestita da uomo, con pastrano a larghe maniche, largo capello e stivali.

LEONORA: Son giunta—grazie, o Dio!
Estremo asil quest' è per me—son giunta!
Io tremo! La mia orrenda storia è nota
In quell' albergo—e mio fratel narrolla!
Se Scoperta m'avesse! Cielo! Ei disse
Naviga verso occaso Don Alvaro!
Nè morto cadde quella notte in cui
Io, io del sangue di mio padre intrisa,
L'ho seguito, e il perdei! ed or mi lascia,
Mi fugge! ohimè, non reggo a tanta ambascia!
(Cade inginocchio.)

LEONORA ED CORE: Madre,
Madre, pietosa Vergine,
Perdonna al mio peccato,
M'ai ta quell'ingrato
Dal core a cancellar.
In queste solitudini Espiero,
espiero l'errore.
Pieta di me, pieta, Signor,
pieta di me, pieta, Signore,
Deh! non m'abbandonar, pieta,
Pieta di me, Signore!

LEONORA: Deh! non m'abbandonar, ah!
Pieta, pieta, di me, Signor!
Ah! que sublimi cantioi,
Dell' organo i concenti,
Che come incenso ascendono

ALCADE: Now goodnight!

CHORUS: Goodnight!

ALL: Let us go.
(they depart.)

SCENE V

A small level space, on the side of a steep Mountain. On the left, precipices and rocks; facing the audience, the facade of the Church of the Madonna degli Angeli, of simple architecture; on the right, the door of the Convent in the middle of which is a small window, on one side the cord of the bell, above which is a small projecting roof. On the other side of the church are high mountains, and the village of Hornachuelos. The door of the church is closed, but spacious; above it a semicircular window shows the light within. Halfway down the stage, a little to the left, on four steps, is a rough stone cross, corroded by time. There is a bright moonlight over the whole scene.

Donna Leonora arrives, in male attire, ascending from the right, wearing a cloak with large sleeves, a large hat, and boots.

LEONORA: I have arrived—thank Heaven!
This is my last refuge—I am here!
I tremble! My dreadful story is known:
In that inn my brother did recount it.
Oh Heavens! had he discovered me!
He said Don Alvaro was sailing westward,
And fell not on that fearful night
When, steeped in my father's blood,
I followed and lost him! Now he leaves me—
Flies from me!—Ah me, I cannot bear it!
(falls on her knees.)

LEONORA AND CHORUS: Mother,
O, Holy Mother, hear my prayer,
Forgive my sin appalling,
Then from this enthralling love,
May my poor soul be freed,
Repentant here in solitude
I'll make amends,
I'll make amends completely,
In mercy hear, in mercy hear,
in mercy hear my fervent pleading!
Forsake me not, forsake me not,
forsake me not, O Heaven!
Forsake me not.

LEONORA: Heaven! Forsake me not,
O Heaven,
Ah—forsake me not, forsake me not!
Ah! how sublime the anthem

A Dio sui firmamenti,
Inspirano, inspirano a quest' alma
Fede,
Conforto e calma!
Venite, adoremus et procedamus ante Deum, ploremus, ploremus coram Domino corum,
Domino qui fecit nos.

LEONORA: Al santo asilo accorrasi.
(S'avvia.)
E l'oserò a quest' ora?
(Arrestandosi.)
Ma si potria sorprendermi!
Oh, misera Leonora,
Tremi?—il pio frate accoglierti
No, non ricuserà.
Non mi lasciar, soccorrimi,
Pietrà, Signor, pietà.
(Va a suonare il campanello del Convento.)

SCENA VI

Si apre la finestrella della porta, e n'esce la luce d'una lanterna. Che riverbera sul volto di Donna Leonora, la quale si arretra speventata. Fra Melitone parla sempre all' interno.

MELITONE: Chi siete?

LEONORA: Chiedo il Superiore.

MELITONE: S'apre
Alle cinque la chiesa,
Se al giubileo venite.

LEONORA: Il Superiore—
Per carità!

MELITONE: Che carità a quest' ora!

LEONORA: Mi manda il Padre Cleto.

MELITONE: Quel sant' uomo? Il motivo?

LEONORA: Urgente.

MELITONE: Perchè mai?

LEONORA: Un infelice!

MELITONE: Brutta solfa—perè v' apro ond' entriate.

LEONORA: Nol posso.

MELITONE: No? Scomunicicato siete?
Chè strano fia aspettar a ciel sereno.
V'annuncio—e se non torno,
Buona notte.
(Chiude la finestrella.)

SCENA VII

Donna Leonora, sola.

LEONORA: Ma s' ei mi respingesse!
Fama pietoso il dice,
Ei mi proteggerà;—Vergin,
m'assisti!

sounds,
With solemn organ blending,
It floats like incense on the air,
To heaven's gate ascending,
Unto my soul, unto my soul it's bringing Calmness,
and unshaken faith.

LENORA: Let me hurry to the sacred asylum (going.)
But do I dare, at this hour?
(stopping.)
Yet I may be overtaken!
Oh, wretched Leonora,
Do you fear?—the holy friar
Will not refuse to receive you.
Have mercy, Heaven, mercy!
Aid me, do not desert me!
(Rings the convent bell.)

SCENE VI

The little window in the door opens, through which is seen a light, which is reflected in Donna Leonora's face, who starts back alarmed. Brother Melitone speaks from within.

MELITONE: Who is it?

LEONORA: I seek the Superior.

MELITONE: At five o'clock
The church will open,
If you come to the jubilee.

LEONORA: The Superior—
For charity's sake!

MELITONE: Charity at this hour!

LEONORA: I am sent by Father Cleto.

MELITONE: By that holy man? The reason?

LEONORA: Most urgent.

MELITONE: Why so?

LEONORA: An unfortunate creature!

MELITONE: A likely tale—however, I will let you in.

LEONORA: I cannot enter.

MELITONE: No? Are you excommunicated?
It is strange you should prefer the open air,
I will announce you—and if I don't return,
Good night.
(shuts the window)

SCENE VII

Donna Leonora, alone.

LEONORA: But if he should repulse me?
He is reputed merciful.
He will protect me;—Holy Virgin, aid me!

SCENA VIII

Donna Leonora, il Padre Guardiano, fra Melitone.

GUARDIANO: Chi mi cerca?

LEONORA: Son io.

GUARDIANO: Dite.

LEONORA: Un segreto—

GUARDIANO: Andate Melitone.

MELITONE: (Partendo.) (Sempre segreti!
E questi santi soi han da saperli!
Noi siamo tanti cavoli.)

GUARDIANO: Gratello
Mormorate?

MELITONE: Oibò, dico ch' è pesante
La porte, e fa romore.

GUARDIANO: Obbedite.

MELITONE: (Che tuon da Superiore!)
(Rientra in Convento socchiudendone la porta.)

SCENA IX

Donna Leonora e il Padre Guardiano.

GUARDIANO: Or siam soli.

LEONORA: Una donna son io.

GUARDIANO: Una donna a quest' ora!—gran Dio!

LEONORA: Infelice, dulusa, rejetta,
Dalla terra, e dal ciel maledetta,
Che nel pianto prostratavi al piede,
Di sottrarla all' inferno vi chiede.

GUARDIANO: Come un povero frate lo può?

LEONORA: Padre Cleto un suo foglio v'invò?

GUARDIANO: Ei vi manda?

LEONORA: Sì.

GUARDIANO: (Sorpreso.) Dunque voi siete
Leonora di Varges?

LEONORA: Fremete!

GUARDIANO: No: venite fidente alla croce,
Là del Cielo v' inspiri la voce.

LEONORA: (S'inginocchia presso la croce, la bacia, quindi torna meno agitata al Padre Guardiano.) Ah, tranquilla l' alma sento Dacchè premo questa terra;
De' fantasmi lo spavento
Più non provo farmi guerra;
Più non sorge sanguinante
Di mio padre l' ombra innante,
Nè terribile l' ascolto
La sua figlia maledir.

GUARDIANO: Sempre indarno qui rivolto
Fu di Satana l' ardir.

SCENE VIII

Donna Leonora, the Father Guardiano, Brother Melitone.

GUARDIANO: Who asks for me?

LEONORA: It is I.

GUARDIANO: Speak on.

LEONORA: A secret—

GUARDIANO: Go, Melitone.

MELITONE: (Going.) (Always secrets!
And these saints only know them!
We are nobodies!)

GUARDIANO: Brother,
Are you grumbling?

MELITONE: Oh no, I said the door
Was heavy, and creaked.

GUARDIANO: Obey.

MELITONE: (Quite the voice of the Superior!)
(re-enters the Convent, half-closing the door.)

SCENE IX

Donna Leonora and the Father Guardiano.

GUARDIANO: Now, we are alone.

LEONORA: I am a woman.

GUARDIANO: A woman at this hour!—good heavens!

LEONORA: Unhappy, deluded, rejected
Oh earth, and cursed by Heaven!
Who, prostrate at your feet, with tears
Implores you to save her from destruction.

GUARDIANO: How can a poor friar do so?

LEONORA: Father Cleto sent you a letter?

GUARDIANO: He sent you?

LEONORA: Yes.

GUARDIANO: (Surprised.) Then you must be Leonora di Vargas?

LEONORA: You shudder!

GUARDIANO: No; in confidence approach the cross,
There may Heaven inspire you.

LEONORA: (Kneeling close to the cross, kisses it, then turning with less agitation to Father Guardiano.) Ah, my soul is calm
Now I tread this soil;
I no longer feel the dread forebodings within me;
Nor does the bleeding shade of my sire;
rise before me;
I do not hear with horror
His curses on his child.

GUARDIANO: Never has Satan dared
To approach these precincts.

LEONORA: Perciò tomba qui desio, Fa le rupi ov' altra visse.	LEONORA: Therefore I seek a tomb Among the rocks where one other lived.
GUARDIANO: Che!—sapete—	GUARDIANO: What!—do you know—
LEONORA: Cleto il disse.	LEONORA: Cleto mentioned it.
GUARDIANO: E volete—	GUARDIANO: And you wish—
LEONORA: Darmi a Dio!	LEONORA: To devote myself to Heaven!
GUARDIANO: Guai per chi si lascia illudere Dal delirio d'un momento! Più fatal per voi, si giovane, Sorgerebbe il pentimento. Nel futuro chi può leggere, Chi immutabil farvi il cor. E l' amante?	GUARDIANO: Woe to those who delude themselves In the wild frenzy of a moment! More wretched for you, so young, Would repentance hereafter become. Who can read the future, Or make the heart steadfast? And thy lover?
LEONORA: Involontario Di mio padre è l' uccisor.	LEONORA: He by mischance killed My father.
GUARDIANO: Il fratello?	GUARDIANO: Your brother?
LEONORA: La mia morte Di sua mano egli giurò.	LEONORA: He has sworn my death By his own hand.
GUARDIANO: Meglio a voi la sante porte. Schiuda un chiostro.	GUARDIANO: For you it were best to seek A cloister's holy shelter.
LEONORA: Un chiostro? No. Se voi scacciate questa pentita, Andrò per balze gridando aita. Ricovro ai monti ciba, alle selve, E fin le belve ne avran pietà. Qui, qui del ciela udii la voce: Salvati all' ombra di questa croce— Voi mi scacciate? E questo il porto; Chi tal conforto mi toglierà? (Corre ad abbracciar la croce.)	LEONORA: A cloister? No. If you reject the penitent, Aid will I shrieking ask the rocks, Shelter the mountains, food the woods; The savage beasts at least will pity me. Here, where heaven's voice is heard Salvation in the shadow of the Cross I seek. You cast me out? This is the haven Of solace—you will tear me from it? (runs and clings to the cross.)
GUARDIANO: (A te sia gloria, o Dio clemente, Padre dei miseri onnipossente, A qui sgabello sono le sfere! Il tuo volere—si compirà!) E fermo il voto?	GUARDIANO: (Yours be the glory, O merciful Heaven! Father of sinners, omnipotent, Who reigns over all worlds, Let your will be accomplished.) You are resolved?
LEONORA: E fermo.	LEONORA: I am.
GUARDIANO: V' accolga dunque Iddio!	GUARDIANO: Heaven accept you!
LEONORA: Bontà divina?	LEONORA: Oh, divine clemency!
GUARDIANO: Sol io saprò chi siate. Tra le rupi è uno speco; ivi starete. Presso una fonte, al settimo, di scarso Cibo porrovvi io stesso.	GUARDIANO: I alone shall know who you are. Among the rocks is a cave, your future abode: Beside a spring, every seven days, I myself will bring your scanty food.
LEONORA: V' andiamo.	LEONORA: Let us go.
GUARDIANO: (Versa la porta.) Melitone! (A Melitone chi comparisce.) Tutti i fratelli con ardenti ceri, Dov' è l' ara maggiore, Nel tempio si raccolgan del Signore. (Melitone rientra.) Sull' alba il piede all' eremo Solinga volgerete Ma pria dal pane angelico Divin conforto avrete, Le sante lane a cingere Ite, sia fermo il cor. Sul nuovo calle areggervi V'assistera il Signor.	GUARDIANO: (Turning to the door.) Melitone! (to Melitone who enters.) Let all the brothers, with lighted torches, Before the high altar assemble, In the temple of our Lord. (Melitone withdraws.) To seek the lowly hermitage At dawn you must be stirring But first take of the sacrament, God's grace on you conferring, Embrace the cross with simple faith To set your mind at rest, And Heaven will not deny you aid, You will be richly blessed. (Enters the Convent, but returns immediately with the dress of the Franciscan order, and gives it to Leonora,)
LEONORA: Tua grazia, o Dio, Sorride alla rejetta! Oh, gaudio insolito! Io son, Io son ribenedetta! Gia sento in me rinascere A nuova vita il cor; Plaudite, o cori angelici, Mi perdono il Signor, Mi perdono il Signor Mi perdono il Signor.	LEONORA: My prayers and thanksgiving You on high are winging, And happiness unmerited Thy peace. To my poor heart is bringing, I feel new hope once more within, New courage in my breast; I think angelic songs I hear And pardon makes me blessed, And pardon, pardon makes me blessed, Your pardon makes me blessed.

SCENA X	SCENE X
La gran porta della Chiesa si apre. Di fronte vedesi l' altar maggiore, illuminato. L' organo suona. Dai lati del coro procedono due lunghe file di Frati, con cerei ardenti. Piu tardi il Padre Guardiano precede Leonora in abito da Frate. Egli la conduce fuor della chiesa, Frati che gli si schierano intorno. Leonora si prostra innanzi a lui, che stendendo solennemente le mani spora il suo capo intuona.	The great door of the Church opens. In front is seen the high altar, illuminated. The organ is sounded. From the sides of the choir proceed two long rows of Friars, with lighted tapers. A little later, Father Guardiano, followed by Leonora, in the Friar's dress. He leads her out of the church, followed by the Friars, who range themselves around. Leonora prostrates herself before him, he solemnly spreads his hands over her head, and chants.
GUARDIANO: Il sànto nome di Dio Signore Sia benedetto.	GUARDIANO: The holy name of the Lord Be blessed.
TUTTI: Sia benedetto.	ALL: Be blessed.
GUARDIANO: Un' alma a piangere viene l' errore, I queste balze chiede ricetto. Il santo speco noi la schiudiamo— V' è noto il loco?	GUARDIANO: A penitent soul, to atone for errors, Demands a shelter in these rocks. The holy cave we will open— Do you know the place?
TUTTI: Lo conosciamo.	ALL: We know the place.
GUARDIANO: A quell' asilo sacro inviolato nessun si appressi.	GUARDIANO: Let none approach the sacred holy asylum.
TUTTI: Obbediremo.	ALL: We will obey.
GUARDIANO: Il cinto umile non sia varcato. Che nel divide.	GUARDIANO: Let none pass the low boundary enclosing it.
TUTTI: Nol varcheremo.	ALL: We will not.
GUARDIANO: A chi il divieto frangere osasse, O di quest' anima scoprir tentasse Nome o mistero, maledizione!	GUARDIANO: Malediction to him who dares to break this rule, Or of this poor soul seeks to discover The name or story!
TUTTI: Maledizione! maledizione! Il cielo fulmini incenercisa L' empio mortale se tanto ardisca; Su lui scatenisi ogni elemento, L'immonda cenere ne sperda il ven-	ALL: Malediction! malediction! May the thunderbolt reduce to ashes The impious mortal who dares attempt it;

to.

GUARDIANO: (A Leonora.) Alzatevi, e partite.
Alcun vivente più non vedrete.
Dello speco il bronzo
Ne avverta se periglio vi sovrasti,
O per voi giunto s'a l' estremo giorno—
A confortarvi l' alma
Volerem, pria ch' a Dio faccia ritorno.
La Vergine degli angeli
Vo copra del suo manto,
E voi protegga vigile
Di Dio l' angelo santo.

TUTTI: La Vergine, ecc.
(Leonora bacia la mano del Padre Guardiano s' avvia all' cremo sola. Il Guardiano stendendo le braccia verso di lei, la benedice. Cade la tela.)

FINE DELLA'ATTO SECONDO.

ATTO III

In Italia presso Velletri.

SCENA I

Bosco. Notte oscurissima. Don Alvaro in uniforme di Capitano Spagnuolo de' Granatieri del Re, si avanza lentamente dal fondo. Si sentono voci interno a destra.

1A VOCE: Attneti, gioco.—Un asso a destra.

2A VOCE: Ho vinto.

1A VOCE: Un tre alla destra—cinque a manca.

2A VOCE: Perdo!

ALVARO: (Che si sara innoltrato.) La vita e inferno all infelice invano
Morte desio!—Siviglia!—Leonora!
Oh, rimembranze!—Oh notte!
Ch' ogni mio ben rapisti!
Sarò infelice eternamente è scritto.
Della natal sua terra il padre volle
Spezzar l' estranio giogo, el coll', unirsi;
All' ultima degli Incas la corona
Cingerne confidò—fallì l' impresa,
In un carcere nacqui; m' educava
Il deserto; sol vivo per chè ignota
E mia regale stirpe. I miei parenti
Sognaro un trono e, li destò la scure!
Oh, quando fine avran le mie sventure?
Oh, tuche in seno agl'angeli,
Eternamente pura
Salisti bella, incolume
Dal la mortal jattura.
Oh, tuche in seno agl'angeli,
Salisti bella e pura,
Non iscordar di volger.

May all the elements be loosed upon him,
And his impure ashes be scattered by the wind.

GUARDIANO: (To Leonora.) Rise and depart. No living soul
Will see you more. The bell in the cave
Will give us notice if you are in danger;
If your last hour be at hand,
We will haste to bring absolution
Before your soul returns to God.
The Virgin of the heavenly hosts.
Cover you with her holy mantle,
And the holy angels of God
Be to you watchful guardians.

ALL: The Virgin, etc.
(Leonora kisses the hand of Father Guardiano, and sets out alone for the hermitage. Guardiano, extending his arms towards her, blesses her. The curtain falls.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

In Italy, near Villeteri.

SCENE I

A wood. A dark night. Don Alvaro, in the uniform of a Captain of Royal Spanish Grenadiers, advances slowly from the back. Voices are heard on the right, from within.

1st VOICE: Attention, I play. An ace to the right.

2nd VOICE: I have won.

1st VOICE: A three to the right—five to the left.

2nd VOICE: I have lost.

ALVARO: (Who has come forward.) Life has no charms for unhappy souls.
In vain I seek to die!—Seville!—Leonora!
Oh, sad memories!—Fatal night,
Which deprived me of every good!
It is decreed that I shall ever be unfortunate.
My father sought to free his native land
From foreign rule;
United to the last of the Incas,
He hoped to obtain the crown.
He failed—and I was born in prison,
Reared in the desert, and only live because My royal birth is unknown. My parents
Dreamt of thrones, and suffered by the scaffold.
Ah, when will my sorrows end?
O sainted soul, in rest above,
You are dwelling with angels,
There, in the blessed realm of love,

Lo sguardo a me tapino,
Che senza nome ed esul,
In odio del destino,
Che senza nome ed esul,
In odio del destino,
Chiedo anelando, ahi misero,
Chiedo anelando, ahi misero,
La morte d' incontrar,
Leonora mia, soccorrimi,
Leonora mia, soccorrimi,
Pieta, pieta, pieta del mio penar;
Leonora, soccorrimi, pieta, del mio penar;
Leonora, mia, pieta, pieta del mio, penar, soccorrimi, pieta di me!

VOCE: (Dall' interno a destra.) Al tradimento!

VOCI: Muoia!

ALVARO: Quali grida?

VOCE: Aita!

ALVARO: Si soccorra!
(Accorre al luogo onde si udivano le grida. Si sente un picchiare di spade. Alcuni Ufficiali attraversano la scena, fuggendo in disordine da destra a sinistra.)

SCNEA II

Don Alvaro ritorna con Don Carlo.

ALVARO: Fuggir! Ferito siete?

CARLO: No, vi debbo
La vita.

ALVARO: Chi erano?

CARLO: Assassini.

ALVARO: Presso!
Al campo così?

CARLO: Franco
Dirè: fu alterco al gioco.

ALVARO: Comprendo, colà, a destra?

CARLO: Si.

ALVARO: Ma come,
Si nobile d' aspetto, a quella bisca
Scendeste?

CARLO: Nuovo sono.
Del general con ordini sol jeri
Giunsi; senza voi morto
Sarei. Or dite a chi miei giorni debbo?

ALVARO: Al caso.

CARLO: Pria il mio nome
Dirò—(non sappia il vero)—
Don Felice de Bornos, ajutante
Del Duce.

ALVARO: Io Capitan de' Granatieri
Don Federico Herreros!

You have found joy past telling.
O sainted soul in rest above,
With angels you are dwelling,
Turn your glances in pity upon my soul in sorrow,
Who wanders here in exile
And dreads each coming tomorrow,
Who wanders here in exile,
And dreads each coming tomorrow,
Yes, in this war and misery,
For ever seeking, ever seeking death amid the foe,
Oh, Leonora, pity me,
Oh, Leonora, pity, pity me,
And give me help,
And give me help to bear my woe;
Leonora, oh, pity me,
And give me help to bear my woe;—Oh, Leonora, give help, give help to bear my woe, give help to bear, to bear my woe!

VOICE: (From within.) Treachery!

VOICES: Down with him!

ALVARO: What cries are these?

A VOICE: Help!

ALVARO: To your aid!
(runs to the place from where the sounds proceed. A clashing of swords is heard. Some officers cross the stage in disorder flying right and left.)

SCENE II

Don Alvaro returns with Don Carlos.

ALVARO: They are fled! Are you wounded?

CARLOS: No; but I owe to you my life.

ALVARO: Who are they?

CARLOS: Assassins.

ALVARO: What, so near the camp?

CARLOS: Frankly, it was a gambling quarrel.

ALVARO: I understand; there on the right?

CARLOS: Yes.

ALVARO: But, how, seeming so noble,
Descend to such low company?

CARLOS: I am a stranger, with orders from the general.
I arrived yesterday, and but for you
I had died.
Say, to whom do I owe my life?

ALVARO: To chance.

CARLOS: I will first tell my name—
(Not my true one)—
Don Felice de Bornos,
Adjutant to the Duke.

ALVARO: I Captain of the Grenadiers,
Don Federico Herreros!

CARLO: La gloria dell' esercito!

ALVARO: Signore—

CARLO: Io l' amistà ne ambia, la chiedo, e spero.

ALVARO: Io pure della vostra sarò fiero.
(Si stringono le destre.)

VOCI: (Interne, a sinistra, e squillo di trombe.) All' armi!

A 2: Andiamo—all' armi!

CARLO: Ah più gradito questo suono or parmi!
Con voi scendere al campo d' onore,
Emularne l' esempio potrò.

ALVARO: Testimone del vostro valore,
Ammirarne le prove saprò.

SCENA III

E il Mattino. Salotto nell' abitazione d'un ufficiale superiore dell' esercito Spagnuolo in Italia non lungi da Velletri. Nel fondo sonvi due porte, quella a sinistra mette ad una stanza da letto, l'altra e la comune. A sinistra presso il proscenio a una finestra. Si sente il romore della vicina battaglia.

Un Chirurgo Militare, ed alcuni Soldati, ordinanze dalla comune corrono alla finestra.

SOLDATI: Arde la mischia!

CHIRURGO: (Guardando con cannocchiale.) Prodi i granatiere!

SOLDATI: Li guida Herreros.

CHIRURGO: (Guardando con cannocchiale.) Ciel! ferito o spento
Ei cadde! Piegano i suoi! l'Ajutante
Li raccozza alla carica li guida!
Già fuggono i Tedeschi! I nostril han vinto
Portan qui il Capitano.

SOLDATI: Ferito!
(Corrono ad incontrarlo.)

VOCI: (Fuori.) A Spagna gloria!

ALTRE: Viva l' Italia!

TUTTI: E nostra la vittoria!

SCENA IV

Don Alvaro, ferito e svenuto e portato in una lettiga da quattro Granatieri. Da un lato e il Chirurgo, dall' altro Don Carlo, coperto di polvere ed assai afflitto. Un Soldato depone una valigia sopra un tavolino. La lettiga e collocata quasi nel mezzo della scena.

CARLO: Piano—qui posi—approntisi il mio letto.

CHIRURGO: Silenzio.

CARLOS: The pride of the army!

ALVARO: Signor—

CARLOS: I desire and would obtain your friendship.

VOICES: I shall be proud to have yours.
(they shake hands.)

VOICES: (Within, to the left, with sound of a trumpet.) To arms!

TOGETHER: Let us go—to arms!

CARLOS: Ah, that sound is more agreeable now!
With you I will go to the field of honor,
And seek to emulate your bright example.

ALVARO: Witness of your valor,
In future I shall know how to admire it.

SCENE III

Morning. A small room in the house of a superior officer in the Spanish army, in Italy, not far from Velletri. At the back are two doors, one on the left leads to a bedroom, the other is the common door. On the left, near the proscenium, is a window. The noise is heard of the neighboring battle.

A Military Surgeon, and some common Soldiers, run to the window.

SOLDIERS: The battle rages!

SURGEON: (Looking through a telescope.) Brave grenadiers!

SOLDIER: Herreros leads them.

SURGEON: (Looking through a telescope.) Heavens! He falls
Wounded or dead! His men give way!
The Adjutant rallies and leads them to the charge!
The Germans fly! Our troops conquer!
They bring the Captain here.

SOLDIER: Wounded!
(they run to meet him.)

VOICES: (Without.) Glory to Spain!

OTHERS: Long live Italy!

ALL: Ours is the victory!

SCENE IV

Don Alvaro, wounded and insensible, is borne in on a litter by four Grenadiers. On one side the Surgeon, on the other Don Carlos, covered with dust and sorrowful. A Soldier places a traveling bag on a small table. The litter is placed nearly in the middle of the scene.

CARLOS: Gently—lay him here—get my bed ready.

SURGEON: Silence!

CARLO: V' ha periglio?

CHIRURGO: La palla che ha nel petto mi spaventa.

CARLO: Deh, il salvate.

ALVARO: (Rinviene.) Ove son?

CARLO: Presso l' amico.

ALVARO: Lasciatemi morire.

CARLO: Vi salveran le nostra cure premio
L' ordine vè sarà di Calatrava.

ALVARO: (Trasalendo.) di Calatrava! No—mai!

CHIRURGO: Siate calmo.

CARLO: (Chè! Inorridí di Calatrava al nome!)

ALVARO: Amico—

CHIRURGO: Se parlate—

ALVARO: Un detto sol.

CARLO: (Al Chirurgo.) Ven prefo ne, lasciate.
(Chirurgo si ritrae al fonde.)

ALVARO: Solenne in quest' ora guirarmi dovete far pago un mio voto.

CARLO: Lo giùro, lo giùro.

ALVARO: Sul core cercate.

CARLO: Una chiave!

ALVARO: Con essa trarrete
un piego celato l'affido all'onore Cola v'ha un mistero, che meco morra.
S'abbruci me spento.

CARLO: Lo giuro, sarà.
Amico fidate, fidate nel cielo, fidate nel ciel;
amico, fidate nel cielo, fidate.
Amico, fidate, fidate nel cielo, fidate nel ciel;
amico, fidate nel cielo, fidate.
Addio, addio, addio!

ALVARO: Or muoio tranquillo
Vi stringo al cor mio, al core,
or muoio tranquillo vi stringo al cor mio
or muoio tranquillo, vi stringo al cor mio
al core, or muoio tranquillo vi stringo al cor mio!
Addio, addio, addio!
(Il Chirurgo e le Ordinanze trasportano il ferito nella stanza da letto.)

SCENA V

Don Carlos, poi il Chirurgo.

CARLOS: Is there danger?

SURGEON: The bullet in his chest alarms me.

CARLOS: Ah, try to save him!

ALVARO: (Recovering his senses.) Where am I?

CARLOS: With your friend.

ALVARO: Leave me to die.

CARLOS: Our cares will save you. The Order of Calatrava will be conferred upon you.

ALVARO: (Shuddering.) Of Calatrava! No—never!

SURGEON: Be calm.

CARLOS: (He shuddered at the name of Calatrava!)

ALVARO: My friend—

SURGEON: If you speak—

ALVARO: Only one word.

CARLOS: (To the Surgeon.) Leave us, I pray you.
(the Surgeon retires to the back.)

ALVARO: In this solemn hour—
O swear to befriend me, and listen to my entreaty.

CARLOS: I swear it, I swear it.

ALVARO: Then search in my bosom.

CARLOS: It is a key!—

ALVARO: And there too is hidden a sealed faded letter;
To you I entrust it
The secret it holds
must die with my death.
I beg you to burn it.

CARLOS: On honor I swear.
My friend, put your faith now in Heaven,
faith now in Heaven above,
in Heaven above,
put your faith now in Heaven.
My friend, put your faith now in Heaven,
your faith now in Heaven above,
in Heaven above, put your faith now in Heaven.
Farewell now, farewell now for ever!

ALVARO: I die now contented,
As to my heart—I hold you, I hold you,—
Contented I die as I hold you upon my heart.
I die now contented, as to my heart I hold, I hold you,
Contented I die as I hold you upon my heart.
Farewell now, farewell now for ever!
(the Surgeon and Soldiers carry the wounded man into the bedroom.)

SCENE V

Don Carlos, afterwards the Surgeon.

CARLO: Morir! Tremenda cosa!
Sì intrepido, sì prode,
Ei pur morrà! Uom singolar costui!
Tremò di Calatrava!
Al nome! A lui palese
N' è forse il disonor? Cielo! qual lampo!
S' ei fosse il seduttore?
Desso in mia mano, e vive!
Se m' ingannassi? Questa chiave il dica.
(Apre convulso la valigia, e ne trae un plicco suggellato.)
Ecco i fogli.
(Fa per aprirlo.)
Che tento?
(S'arresta.)
E la fè che giurai? e questa vita
Che debbo al suo valor? Anch' io l' ho salvo!
E s' ei fosse quell' Indo maledetto
Che macchiò il sangue mio?
(Risoluto.)
Il suggello si franga.
(Sta per eseguire.)
Niun qui me vede; No!
(S'arresta.)
Ben mi vegg' io?
(Getta il plicco, e se ne allontana con raccapriccio.)
Urna fatale del mio destino,
Va, t' allontana, mi tenti insano;
L'onor a tergere qui venni, e insano
D' un onta nuova nol brutterò.
Un giuro è sacro per l' uom d' onore;
Que' fogli chiudano il lor mistero—
Disperso vada il mal pensiero;
Che all' atto indegno mi concitò.
E s' altra provar invenir potessi?
Vediam.
(Torna a frugare nella valigia e vi trova un astuccio.)
Qui v' ha un ritratto.
(Lo esamina.)
Suggel non v' e'—nulla ei ne disse—nulla—
Promisi—s' apra dunque.
(Eseguisce.)
Ciel! Leonora!
(Con estaltazione.)
Don Alvaro e' il ferito!
Ora egli viva—
Edi mai man poi mueoia.

CHIRURGO: (Si presenta lieto sulla porta della stanza.) Lieta novella è salvo.
(Rientra.)

CARLO: Oh gioia! oh gioia!
Ah! egli e salvo! o gioia immensa
Che m'innondi il cor, ti sento!
Potro al fine il tradimento
Sull' infame vendicar.
Leonora, ove t'ascondi?
Di': seguisti tra le squadre.
Chi del sangue di tuo padre,
Chi del sangue di tuo padre.
Ti fè il volto rosseggiar.
Ah, felice appien sarei
Se potesse il brando mio,
Amendue d'averno al Dio,
D' un sol colpo consacrar.
(Parte rapidamente.)

CARLOS: Die! How terrible!
So fearless, so brave.
Yet he must die! What a strange man!
He shuddered at the name of Calatrava!
Does he know it has been disgraced?
Heavens! a thought strikes me!
What if he were the vile seducer?
In my hands, and yet alive!
But if I should mistake? This key will tell.
(he hastily opens the bag, and draws out a sealed packet.)
Here are the papers.
(about to open them.)
What am I doing?
(stops.)
And the oath I swore? And the life
I owe to his valor?
But I have also saved him.
Yet if he were this vile Indian
Who has disgraced my name?
(resolutely.)
The seal shall be broken.
(is about to do it.)
No one shall see me! No!
(stops.)
Do I not see myself?
(throws away the packet, and turns from it with horror.)
Fatal urn of my destiny,
Away, in vain you tempt me;
I came here to clear my honor,
And will not stain it with a new disgrace.
An oath is sacred to a man of honor;
Those papers contain their own secret—
Away with the evil thought
That urged me to the base attempt.
But if I might obtain other proof;
Let me see.
(look into the bag, and finds a case.)
Here is a portrait.
(examines it.)
Here is no seal—he spoke not of it—
I promised nothing
(open it.)
Heavens! Leonora!
(excitedly.)
The wounded man is then Alvaro!
Let him live—then, later die by my hands!

SURGEON: (Appearing at the door of the room.) Here is the ball: he is saved!
(retires.)

CARLOS: Oh, happiness! oh, joy!
Oh, what a joy my heart is knowing
That before long my sword shall find him!
Soon his blood for vengeance flowing,
Shall repay me for the wrong.
Where, Leonora, are you hiding?
If with that vile man you're biding,
Who did slay your aged father,
Who did slay your aged father,
None can see you without scorn.
Ah, I should be truly happy
If with my own sword,
And with the same blow
I might send both to realms below.
(exit.)

SCENA VI

Accampamento Militare presso elletri. Sul davanti a sinistra e una bottega da rigattiere; a destra altra ove si vendono cibi, bevande, frutta. All' ingiro tende militari, baracche di rivendugliolі, ecc. E notte, la scena e deserta. Una Patt glia entra cautamente in scena, esplorando il campo.

CORO: Compagni, sostiamo,
Il campo esploriamo;
Non s' ode rumore,
Non brilla un chiarore;
In sonno profondo
Sepolto ognun sta.
Compagni, inoltriamo.
(Allontonandosi a poco a poco.)
Fra poco la sveglia
Suonare s' udra.

SCENE VI

Military Encampment, near Velletri. In front is a sutler's booth. To the right, others with food, fruits, bottles. Around are soldiers' tents, buxter's stalls etc. Night. The scene is vacant. The watchguards enter cautiously, and search the camp.

CHORUS: Comrades, halt!
The camp explore.
No sound is heard,
No light is seen,
In sleep profound
Now all repose.
Comrades, forward!
(go off gradually.)
Before long the morning call
Will rouse them.

SCENA VII

Spunta l' alba lentamente. Entra Don Alvaro pensoso.

ALVARO: Nè gustare m' è dato
Un' ora di quiete; affranta è l' alma
Dalla lotta crudel.
Pace ed oblio indarno io chieggo al Cielo.

SCENE VII

The day slowly dawns. Enter Don Alvaro, in deep thought.

ALVARO: Not one hour of rest
Can I enjoy. My soul is tortured
With the cruel struggle.
Peace and oblivion I ask of Heaven in vain.

SCENA VIII

Detto e Don Carlo.

CARLO: Capitan.

ALVARO: Chi mi chiama?
(Avvicinandosi e riconoscendo Carlo gli dice con affetto.)
Voi che sì larghe cure
Mi prodigaste?

CARLO: La ferita vostra
Sanata è appieno?

ALVARO: Sì.

CARLO: Forte?

ALVARO: Qual prima.

CARLO: Sosterreste un duello?

ALVARO: E con chi mai?

CARLO: Nemici non avete?

ALVARO: Tutti ne abbian—ma a stento
Comprendo—

CARLO: No?—Messaggio non v' inviava
Don Alvaro l' Indiano?

ALVARO: Oh tradimento!
Sleale? il segreto fu dunque violato?

CARLO: Fu illeso quel piego, l' effigie ha parlato;
Don Carlo di Vargas, tremate, io sono.

SCENE VIII

Enter Don Carlos.

CARLOS: Captain.

ALVARO: Who calls me?
(advancing recognizes Carlos with gladness.)
Is it you lavished such great care
Upon me?

CARLOS: Has your wound
Healed completely?

ALVARO: Yes.

CARLOS: Strong?

ALVARO: As ever.

CARLOS: Could you fight a duel?

ALVARO: And with whom?

CARLOS: Have you no enemy?

ALVARO: All have some—but I hardly Understand—

CARLOS: No?—Don Alvaro the Indian,
Did he not send you a message?

ALVARO: Oh, treachery? disloyal man?
The secret has been disclosed there?

CARLOS: The packet was unopened, but the portrait spoke;
Tremble, for I am Don Carlos di Vargas.

ALVARO: D' ardite, minaccie non m' agito al suono.

CARLO: Usciamo, all' istante un di noi dee morire.

ALVARO: La morte disprezzo, ma duolmi inveire
Contr' uom che per primo amistade m' offria.

CARLO: No, no profanato tal nome non sia.

ALVARO: Non io, fu il destino, che il padre v' ha ucciso;
Non io che sedussi quell' angiol d' amore—
Ne guardano entrambi, e dal paradiso
Ch' io sono innocente vi dicono al core—

CARLO: Adunque colei?

ALVARO: La notte fatale
Io caddi per doppia ferita mortale;
Guaritone, un anno in traccia ne andai—
Ahimè, ch'era spenta Leonora trovai.

CARLO: Menzogna, menzogna!
La suora—ospitavala antica parente;
Vi giunsi, ma tardi—

ALVARO: (Con ansia.) Ed ella—

CARLO: E fuggente.

ALVARO: (Trasalendo.) E vive! o amico, il fremito
Ch' ogni mia fibra scuote,
Vi dica che quest' anima
Infame esser non puote—
Vive! gran Dio, quell' angelo!

CARLO: Ma in breve morirà.

ALVARO: No, d' un imene il vincolo
Stringa fra noi la speme;
E s'ella vive, insieme
Cerchiamo ove fuggì.
Giuro che illustre origine
Eguale a voi mi rende,
E che il mio stemma splende
Come rifulge il dì.

CARLO: Stolto! fra noi dischiudesi
Insanguinato avello;
Come chiamar fratello
Chi tutto mi rapì?
D' eccelsa o vile origine,
E duopo ch' io vio spegna,
E dopo voi l'indegna
Che il sangue suo tradì.

ALVARO: Che dite?

CARLO: Ella morrà.

ALVARO: Tacete!

CARLO: Il giuoro
A Dio; cadrà l' infame.

ALVARO: Voi pria cadrete nel fatal certame.

ALVARO: Threats do not disturb me.

CARLOS: Come, on the instant one of us must die!

ALVARO: I despise death, but it grieves me to injure
Him who first offered me friendship.

CARLOS: Do not profane the word.

ALVARO: Not I, but fate, your father slew;
I never seduced that lovely angel;
Both look on us, and from heaven
Tell your heart I am innocent.

CARLOS: And she?

ALVARO: I fell that fatal night.
Through many mortal wounds;
Then, cured, I sought her for a year.
And found Leonora dead.

CARLOS: False, false!
My sister found refuge with a relative;
I arrived too late.

ALVARO: (With anxiety.) And she?

CARLOS: Has fled.

ALVARO: (Joyously.) She lives!
Ah, my friend.
The trembling which pervades my frame
Will tell you that my soul
Cannot be so debased.
She lives! Thank God!

CARLOS: But she will die shortly.

ALVARO: No,
Soon may we be united by the fond nupital tie;
If yet she lives, together
Let us seek her abode.
I swear that rank as noble
Even as yours, I own,
And that my birth is pure,
Unstained, as light of day.

CARLOS: Madman! rising between us
A river of blood is flowing;
How can I call him brother,
Who did my hopes efface?
Whatever your origin may be,
I live but to destroy you;
Then too shall die the unworthy one
Who did betray her race.

ALVARO: What are you saying?

CARLOS: She shall die!

ALVARO: Hold!

CARLOS: I swear to heaven
The infamous wretch shall die!

ALVARO: You shall first die yourself in mortal combat.

CARLO: Morte! ov 'io non cada esangue
Leonora giungerò.
Tinto àncor del vostro sangue
Questo acciar le immergerò.

ALVARO: Morte, sì!—col drando mio.
Un sicario ucciderò;
Il pensier volgete a Dio,
L' ora vostra alfin suonò.
(Sguainano le spade e si battono furiosamente.)

SCENA IX

Accore la Pattuglia del campo per separati.

CORO: Fermi, arrestate!

CARLO: (Furente.) No. La sua vita.

CORO: Lunge di qua si tragga.

ALVARO: (Forse—del ciel l' aita a me soccorre.)

CARLO: Colui morrà!

CORO: (A Carlo che cerca svincolarsi.) Vieni.

CARLO: (A Don Alvaro viene trascinato altrove dalla pattuglia.)
Carnefice del padre mio!

ALVARO: Or che mi resta! Pietoso Iddio
Tu inspira, illumina il mio pensier.
(Gettando la spada.)
Al chiostro, all' eremo, ai santi altari
L' obblio, la pace chiegga il guerrier.
(Esce.)

SCENA X

Spunta il sole.—il rullo dei tamburi e lo squillo delle trombe danno il segnale della sveglia. La scena va animandosi a poco a poco. Soldati Spagnuoli ed Italiani di tutte le armi sortono dalle tende ripulendo schioppi, spade, uniformi, ecc., ecc. Ragazzi militari giuocano ai dadi sui tamburi. Vivandiere che vendono liquori, frutta, pane, ecc., Preziosilla dall' alto d' una baracca predice la buona ventura. Scena animatissima.

CORO: Lorchè pifferi e tamburi
Par che assordino la terra,
Siam felici, ch' è la guerra
Gioia e vita al militar.
Vita gaia, avventurosa,
Cui non cal doman nè jeri,
ch' ama tutti i suoi pensieri
Sol nell' oggi concentrar.

PREZIOSILLA: (Alle Donne.)
Venite all' indovina.
Ch' è giunta di lontano,
E puote a voi l' arcano,
Futuro decifrar.
(Ai Soldati.) Corrette a lei d' intorno,

CARLOS: But before I fall, Leonora shall perish!
This sword, with your blood dyed red
I will plunge into her heart.

ALVARO: Die! with my steel
Will I slay the assassin;
Turn your thoughts to heaven,
For your last hour is near.
(they draw swords and fight furiously.)

SCENE IX

The Sentries of the Camp run to part them.

CHORUS: Hold! Stay!

CARLOS: (Raging.) No: his life!

CHORUS: Drag him here!

ALVARO: (Heaven has sent me aid.)

CARLOS: He shall die.

CHORUS: (Don Carlos, who tries to fight him.) Come away.

CARLOS: (to Don Alvaro, as he is dragged off by the Sentries.) Murderer of my father!

ALVARO: What now remains for me? Merciful Heaven,
A thought from above inspires me.
(throws down the sword.)
To the cloister I go and at the holy altar,
The warrior will seek peaceful oblivion.
(exit.)

SCENE X

Sunrise. The roll of drums and call of trumpets give the signal for waking. The scene gradually becomes full of life. Spanish and Italian soldiers emerge from their tents, cleaning muskets, swords, uniforms, etc. etc. Young recruits play at dice on the drum heads. Vivandiers sell liquors, fruit, bread, etc. Preziosilla, mounted on a stand, tells fortunes. Great animation.

CHORUS: When fife and drums
Deafen the world,
We rejoice, for war to the soldier
Is life and full delight
A life of joy and adventure
To him who cares nothing for tomorrow;
Who loves in his thoughts to dwell
On the bright hopes of today.

PREZIOSILLA: (To the Women.)
Come to the fortune-teller,
Who has come from distant parts;
She can reveal to you
What the future will bring.
(to the Soldiers.)
Come around her,

La mano le porgete.
Le amanti apprenderete
Se fide vi restar.

CORO: Corriamo all' indovina
La mano le porgiamo,
Le belle udir possiamo
Se fide vi restar.

PREZIOSILLA: Chi vuole il paradiso
Si accendo di valore,
E il barbaro invasore
S' accenga a debellar.
Avanti, avanti, avanti.
Predirvi sentirete
Qual premio coglierete
Dal vostro battagliar.
(Molti la circondano.)

CORO: Avanti, ec.

SOLDATI: Qua, vivandiere, un sorso.
(La Vivandiere versano loro.)

UNO: Alla salute nostra!

TUTTI: (Bevendo.) Viva!

ALTRO: A Spagna! ed all' Italia unite!

TUTTI: Evviva!

PREZIOSILLA: Al nostro eroe, Don Federico Herreros.

TUTTI: Viva! Viva!

UNO: Ed al suo degno amico
Don Felice de Bornos.

TUTTI: Viva! viva!

SCENA XI

L'attenzione e attirata da Trabuco, rivendugliolo, che dalla bottega a sinistra viene con una cassetta al colla portante vari oggetti di meschino valore.

TRABUCO: A buon mercato chi vuol comprare?
Forbici, spille, sapon perfetto!
(Lo attorniano.)
Io vendo e compero qualunque oggetto,
Concludo a pronti qualunque affare.

SOLDATO 1: Ho qui un monile, quanto mi dai?
(La mostra.)

SOLDATO 2: Ve' una collana? Se vuoi la vendo.
(Lo mostra.)

SOLDATO 3: Questi orecchini li pagherai?
(Lo mostra.)

CORO: Vogliamo vendere?
(Mostrando orologi, anelli, ecc.)

TRABUCO: Ma quanto vedo
Tutto è robaccia, brutta robaccia!

CORO: Tale, o furfante, è la tua faccia.

And hold out your hands;
So all of you can learn
If your maidens be true.

CHORUS: Let us haste to the teller of fortunes,
And show her our hands,
Thus we all can learn
If our fair ones are true.

PREZIOSILLA: He who longs for Paradise
Must show himself brave,
Prepare to subdue
The savage horde of invaders,
Come on, come on, come on,
And you shall hear foretold
What prize you shall win
In the war that you wage.
(many surround her.)

CHORUS: Come on, etc.

SOLDIERS: Here, vivandiers, give us a drink.
(the vivandiers give them drink.)

A SOLDIER: To our own health we drink!

ALL: (Drinking) Hurrah!

ANOTHER: To Spain and Italy united!

ALL: Hurrah!

PREZIOSILLA: To our hero, Don Federico Herreros!

ALL: Hurrah! hurrah!

A SOLDIER: And to his noble friend,
Don Felice de Bornos!

ALL: Hurrah! Hurrah!

SCENE XI

Trabuco, the Pedlar, attracts their attention, who, from the shop on the left, comes with a box at his waist, carrying various objects of small value.

TRABUCO: Who will buy at a bargain?
Scissors, pins, scented soap!
(they surround him.)
I buy and sell all sorts of things
And quickly conclude my bargains.

1ST SOLDIER: Here is a necklace—what will you give?
(showing it.)

2ND SOLDIER: Here is another—
I will sell it.
(showing it.)

3RD SOLDIER: Will you pay the price of these earrings?
(showing it.)

CHORUS: We'll sell.
(showing watches, rings, etc.)

TRABUCO: But what you show me
Is all rubbish, mere rubbish!

CHORUS: Just like yourself, you rogue!

TRABUCO: Pure aggiustiamoci; per ogni pezzo
Do trenta soldi.

TUTTI: (Tumultuando.) Da ladro è il prezzo.

TRABUCO: Ih! quanta furia! c' intenderemo,
Qualch' altro soldo v' aggiungeremo—
Date qua, subito!

CORO: Purchè all' istante
Venga il danaro bello e sonante.

TRABUCO: Prima la merce—qua—colle buone.

SOLDATI: A te.
(Dandogli gli affetti.)

ALTRI: A te.
(Dandogli gli affetti.)

ALTRI: A te.
(Dandogli gli affetti.)

TRABUCO: (Ritira le robe e paga.) A voi, a voi, benone!

CORO: Al diavol vattene!
(Cacciandolo.)

TRABUCO: (Da se contento.)
(Che buon affare!)
A buon mercato chi vuol comprare?
(Avviandosi ad altro lato del compo.)

SCENA XII

Detti, e Contadini questuanti, con Ragazzi a mano.

CONTADINI: Pane, pan per caritò!
Tetti e campi devastati
N' ha la guerra, ed affamati,
Cerchaim pane per pietà.

SCENA XIII

Detti, ed alcuni Reclute, piangenti, che giungono scortate.

RECLUTE: Povere madri deserte nel pianto!
Per dura forza dovemmo lasciar.
Della beltà n' han rapiti all' incanto,
A' nostre case vogliamo tornar.

VIVANDIERE: (Accostandosi gaiamente alle Reclute, e offerendo loro da bere.) Non piangete, giovanotti, Per le madri e per la belle;
V' ameremo quai sorelle,
Vi sapremo confortar.
Certo il diavolo non siamo;
Quelle lacrime tergette.
Al passato, ben vedete,
Ora è inutile pensar.

PREZIOSILLA: (Entrando fra le Reclute, ne prende alcune pel braccio, e dice loro burlescamente.) Che vergogna!—Su coraggio!
Bei figliuoli, siete pazzi?
Sè piangete quai ragazzi,

TRABUCO: However, we may agree: for each article
I will give thirty soldi.

ALL: (Enraged.) It is the price of a thief!

TRABUCO: Eh! what a fuss! we shall agree,—
Another soldo we will add:
Give them here—quick.!

CHORUS: Provided on the instant
We see the money sound and shining.

TRABUCO: The merchandise first—here—fair play.

SOLDIERS: There's for you.
(giving the things.)

OTHERS: For you.
(giving things.)

OTHERS: For you.
(giving things.)

TRABUCO: (Taking the things and paying.) To you, to you, very good!

CHORUS: Go to the devil!
(they drive him away.)

TRABUCO: (Highly pleased.)
(What good luck!)
Who will buy everything cheap?
(goes to the other side of the camp.)

SCENE XII

The same, and Peasants begging and leading Children.

PEASANTS: Bread, for charity's sake!
The war has destroyed
Our homes and our fields;
Starving, we ask for bread!

SCENE XIII

The same, and some Recruits, Weeping, With an Escort.

RECRUITS: Our poor mothers are deserted in their grief!
By force we were made to leave,
And from our lovers' arms torn away.
To our homes we wish to return.

VIVANDIERS: (Approaching gaily the Recruits, and offering them drink.) Do not repine, O young men,
For your mothers and your lovers;
Like sisters we will love you,
And seek to console you.
We are not truly fiends,
So dry your tears
And cease to think
Upon the happy past.

PREZIOSILLA: (Mixing with the Recruits, takes some of them by the arm, and says, jeeringly.)
Shame on you!—Show more courage!
Great babies, are you mad?
If you wail like little children

Vi farete corbellar.
Un' occhiata a voi d' intorno,
E scommetto che indovino;
Ci sarà più d' un visino,
Che sapravvi consolar.

TUTTI: Nella guerra è la follia
Che dee il campo rallegrar.
Viva! viva la pazzia,
Che qui sola ha da regnar!
(Le Vivandiere prendono francamente le Reclute pel braccio, o s' incominica vivacissima danza generale. Ben presto la confusione e lo schiamazzo giungono al como.)

SCENA XIV

Detti e Fra Melitone, che preso nel vortice della danza, e per un momento costretto a ballare colle Vivandiere. Finalmente, riuscito a fermarsi, esclama:

MELITONE: Toh, toh! poffare il mondo! oh che tempone!
Corre ben l'aventura!—Anch' io ci sono!
Venni di Spagna a medicar ferite,
Ed alme a medicar. Che vedo! è questo
Un campo di Christiani, o siete Turchi?
Dove s' è visto berteggiar la santa
Domenica cosi? Ben più faccenda
Le bottiglie vi dan che le battaglie!
E invece di vestir cenere e sacco
Qui si tresca con Venere, con Bacco?
Il mondo è fatto una casa di pianto;
Ogni convento, o qual profanazione!
Or è covo del vento! I Santuari
Spelonche diventàr di sanguinari
E perfino i tabernacoli di Cristo
Fatti son ricettacoli del tristo.
Tutto è soqquadro.
E la ragion? pe' vostri Peccati.

SOLDATI: Ah, frate! frate!

MELITONE: Voi le feste
Calpestate, rubate, bestemmiate—

SOLDATI ITALIANO: Togone infame!

SOLDATI SPAG: Segui pur, padruccio.

MELITONE: E membra e capi siete d' una stampa;
Tutti eretici.

ITALIANO: Or or l' aggiustiam noi.

MELITONE: Tutti, tutti, cloaca di peccati,
E finchè il mondo puzzi di tal pece
Non isperi mai la terra alcuna pace.

ITALIANO: Dàlle, dàlli!
(Serrandolo intorno)

You will be jeered and hooted.
Cast your eyes around,
And I'll wager you can find
More than one face here
To console your vain regrets.

ALL: In war it is folly only
That makes the camp resound.
Hurrah! long life to folly.
That alone has a right to reign!
(the Vivandiers boldly sieze the Recruits by the arm, and commence a dance all around. Soon the noise and confusion reach its height.)

SCENE XIV

The same, and Brother Melitone, who, seized in the whirl of the dance, is obliged to dance with the Vivandiers. At last, managing to release himself, he exclaims:

MELITONE: Oh, oh! good heaven! what a wild life!
Adventures are coming fast!—I am in for it!
I came from Spain to heal wounds,
And to cure souls. What do I see?
Is this a camp of Christians or of Turks?
Where do people make such a mockery
Of the holy Sabbath? You have more to do
With bottles than with battles!
And instead of putting on sackcloth and ashes,
You play tricks with Venus and Bacchus,
The world is made a place of tears;
Every convent—oh, what profanation—
Is open to the winds. The sanctuaries have become dens of murderers!
And, to crown all, the most sainted shrines
Made refuges for rascals,
All is upset; and how?
Through your sins.

SOLDIERS: Ah, friar! friar!

MELITONE: You despise the feasts of the Church,
You rob, you swear—

ITALIAN SOLDIER: Infernal friar!

SPANISH SOLDIER: Go on, old fellow.

MELITONE: And chiefs and soldiers all of a stamp,
All heretics.

ITALIAN: We will soon settle you.

MELITONE: All, all, sinks of iniquity;
And until the world is smothered with tar,
The earth cannot hope for peace.

ITALIAN: Give it to him!
(crowding round him.)

SPAGNO: (Difendendolo.) Scappa! scappa!

ITALIANO: Dàlle, dàlli sulla cappa!
(Cercano picchiarlo, ma egli se la svigna, declamando sempre.)

PREZIOSILLA: (A Soldati che lo inseguono uscendo di scena.) Lasciatelo, ch' ei vada.
Far guerra ad un cappuccio!—bella impresa!
Non m' odon?—sia il tamburo sua difesa.
(Prende a caso un tamburo, e imitata da qualche Tamburino, lo suona. I Soldati accorrono tosto a circondarla seguiti da tutta la turba.)

PREZIOSILLA ED CORO: Rataplan, rataplan, della gloria
Nel soldato ritempra l'ardor;
Rataplan, rataplan, di vittoria
Questro suono e segnal precursor!
Rataplan, rataplan,
rataplan, rataplan, rataplan,
rataplan, rataplan, plan, plan,
rataplan, rataplan, plan, plan.
Rataplan, si raccolgon le schiere,
Rataplan, son guidate a pugnar.
Rataplan, rataplan, le bandiere
Del nemico si veggon piegar!
Rataplan, pim, pum, pam, inseguite
Chi le terga, fuggendo, voltò.
Rataplan, le gloriose ferite
Col trionfo il destin coronò.
Rataplan, della patria la gloria,
Più rifulge de' fili al valor!
Rataplan, rataplan, la vittoria
Al guerriero conquista ogni cor.

FINE DELL' ATTO TERZO.

ATTO IV

SCENA I

Vicinanze d' Hornachuelos. Interno del Convento della Madonna degli Angeli. Meschino porticato circonda una Corticella con aranci, oleandri, gelsomini. Alla sinistra dello spettatore, e la porta che mette alla via; a destra altra porta, sopra la quale si legge 'Clausura.'

Il Padre Guardiano passeggia gravemente leggendo il breviario. Dalla sinistra entrano, molt Pezzenti, d' ogni eta e sesso, con rozze scodelle, alla mano pignatte o piatti.

CORO: Fate la carità,
E un' ora che aspettiamo!
Andarcene dobbiamo,
Fate la carità.

SPANISH: (Defending him) Escape! be off!

ITALIAN: Give it to him—knock him on the head!
(they try to beat him, but he avoids them, continuing to exclaim.)

PREZIOSILLA: (To the Soldiers, who follow him off the stage.) Let him alone, let him go.
Make war upon a friar!—a fine affair!
They do not hear me—the drum shall defend him.
(takes up a drum, and, imitated by a little Drummer, sounds it. The Soldiers immediately surround her, followed by the whole throng.)

PREZIOSILLA AND CHORUS: Rataplan, rataplan, songs of glo-ry
Make the soldier's hear! thrill with delight;
Rataplan, rataplan, in a story
All their valorous deeds we recite.
Rataplan, rataplan, rataplan,
rataplan, rataplan, rataplan,
rataplan, rataplan, plan, plan,
rataplan, rataplan, plan, plan.
Rataplan, the troops assemble,
Rataplan, are led to the fight,
Rataplan, rataplan, the banners
Of the enemy give way before us.
Rataplan, pim, pum, pam, pursue
The coward who flees from the foe.
Rataplan, the wounds of the brave
Are crowned by fate with triumph.
Rataplan, the glory of the country
Shines forth in the valor of her sons!
Rataplan, rataplan, victory
Has won each warrior's heart.

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

ACT IV

SCENE I

The neighborhood of Hornachuelos. Interior of the convent of the Madonna degli Angeli. A simple Colonade surrounds a small Court, filled with orange trees, oleanders, and jasmines. On left of the spectator, a door opening on the road; on the right another door, on which is written 'Clausura.'

The Father Guardiano walks about, seriously reading his breviary. From the left enter many Beggars, of each sex, with rough porringers, pipkins, or plates in their hands.

CHORUS: Alms we beg of you.
An hour we have waited,
And soon we must go.
Alms! Alms!

SCENA II

Detti e Fra Melitone, che viene dalla destra, caperto il ventre d' ampio grembiale bianco ed ajutato da altro Laico, porta una grande caldaja a due manichi, che depongono nel centro; il Laico riparte.

MELITONE: Che! siete all' osteria! Quieti.
(Incomincia a distribuire col ramaiuolo la ministra.)

DONNE: (Spingendosi fra loro.) Qui, presto a me.

VECCHI: Quante porzioni a loro.

ALTRI: Tutti vorrian per sè.

TUTTI: N' ebbe già tre Maria.

UNA: (A Melitone.) Quattro a me.

TUTTI: Quattro a lei!

DETTI: Sì, perchè ho sie figliuolì.

MELITONE: Perchè ne avete sei?

DETTA: Perchè li mandò Iddio.

MELITONE: Sì, sì, Dio—non li avreste
Se al par di me voi pure la schiena percoteste
Con aspra disciplina, e più le notti intere
Passaste recitando rosari e miserere.

GUARDIANO: Fratel—

MELITONE: Ma tai pezzenti son di fecondità.
Davvero spaventosa.

GUARDIANO: Abbiate carità.

VECCHI: Un po' di quel fondaccio ancora ne donate.

MELITONE: Il ben di Dio, bricconi, fondaccio voi chiamate?

ALCUNI: A me padre!
(Presentando le scodelle.)

ALTRI: A me.
(Presentando le scodelle.)

MELITONE: Oh andatene in malora,
O il ramajuol sul capo v' aggiusto bene or ora!
Io perdo la pazienza!

GUARDIANO: Oh, carità, fratello!

DONNE: Più carità ne usava il padre Raffaello.

MELITONE: Sì, sì ma in otto giorno, avutone abbastanza.
Di poveri e ministra, restò nella sua stanza.
E scaricò la soma sul dosso a Melitone,
E poi con tal canaglia usar dovrò le buone?

SCENE II

The above and Brother Melitone, who comes from the right, with a large white apron in front, and, aided by another Lay brother, carries a great cauldron with two handles, which they place in the middle; the Lay brother goes away.

MELITONE: What! do you take this for an inn? Be silent.
(begins to distribute the minestra with a ladle.)

WOMEN: (Pushing forward.) Quick, give me some.

OLD MEN: What a quantity for them.

OTHERS: Each wants for it himself.

ALL: Maria has already had three.

A WOMAN: (To Melitone.) Four for me.

ALL: Four for her!

WOMAN: Yes, for I have six children.

MELITONE: Why have you six?

WOMAN: Because Heaven sent them to me.

MELITONE: Ay, ay, Heaven—you would not have them
If, like me, you scourged your back
With a sharp scourge, and spent the night
In reciting rosaries and misereres.

GUARDIANO: Brother—

MELITONE: But these beggars are prolific
To such a wonderful degree.

GUARDIANO: Be merciful.

OLD MEN: Give us a little more of these dregs.

MELITONE: A godsend, you rogues, and you call it dregs!

SOME: To me, Father!
(presenting their porringers.)

OTHERS: To me?
(presenting theirs.)

MELITONE: Go to Jericho,
Or I will lay the ladle about your heads!
I lose all patience!

GUARDIANO: Be merciful, brother!

WOMEN: Father Raffaello was more kind.

MELITONE: True, true, but after a week of soup and beggars
He had enough and took to his bed.
He left his burden on the back of Melitone.
And how can I be gentle with such rabble?

GUARDIANO: Soffrono tanto i poveri: la carità è un dovere.

MELITONE: Carità con costoro che il fannoper mestiere?
Che un campanile abbattere co' pugni sarien buoni,
Che dicono fondaccio il ben di Dio? Bricconi!

ALCUNI: Oh, il padre Raffaele—

ALTRI: Era un angelo.

ALTRI: Un santo!

TUTTI: Se il padre Raffaele—

MELITONE: Non m'annojate tanto!
(Distribuisce in fretta il residuo, dicendo—)
Il resto, a voi, prendetevi,
Non voglio più parole!
(Fa rotolare la caldaia con un calcio.)
Fuori di qua, lasciatemi,
Sì fuori, al sole, al sole:
Pezzenti più di Lazzaro,
Sacchi di pravità,
Via, via, bricconi, al diavolo!
Toglietevi di qua!
(Indispettito le scaccia, confusamente, percuotendoli col grembiale che si sara tolto, e chiude la porta, restandone assai adirato e stanco.)

SCENA III

Il Padre Guardaino e Melitone.

MELITONE: (Asciugandosi il sudore con un fazzoletto bianco che avara cavato da una manica.)
Auf! pazienza non v'ha che basti!

GUARDIANO: Troppa
Dal Signor non ne aveste:
Facendo carità un dover s' adempie
Da render fiero un angiol.

MELITONE: (Prendendo tabacco.) Che a! mio posto
In tre dì finerebbe
Col ministrar de' schiaffi.

GUARDIANO: Tacete; umil sia Meliton, nè soffra
Se veda preferirsi Raffaele.

MELITONE: Io? no—amico gli son, ma ha certi gesti.
Parla da sè—ha cert' occhi.

GUARDIANO: Son le preci,
Il digiun.

MELITONE: Jer nell' orto lavorava
Cotanto stralunato, che scherzando,
Dissi: Padre, un mulatto
Parmi-Guardommi bieco,
Strinse le pugna,e—

GUARDIANO: Ebbene?

GUARDIANO: They suffer much: charity toward them is a duty.

MELITONE: Charity to those who make it their trade?
Who could fell a steeple with their fists?
Who call this godsend dregs? The rogues!

SOME: Oh, Father Raffaello—

OTHERS: Was an angel!

OTHERS: A saint!

ALL: Yes, Father Raffaello—

MELITONE: Don't bother me so!
(hastily distributing what remains, saying—)
Take what is left.
(makes the cauldron roll over with a kick.)
I will have no more words—go?
Out of here—leave me!
Yes, go and warm yourselves in the sun;
Beggars greater than Lazarus,
Bags of depravity,
Go, rascals, go to the devil!
Be off from here!
(he angrily drives them out, striking them with the apron he has taken off, and shuts the door, remaining very angry and tired.)

SCENE III

Father Guardiano And Melitone

MELITONE: (Wiping off the perspiration with a white handkerchief, which he takes from his sleeve.) Ouf! I have no more patience!

GUARDIANO: Truly Heaven has not
Blessed you with over much;
Giving charity is fulfilling a duty
Which might rejoice an angel.

MELITONE: (Taking snuff.) Who would be done for in my place
In three days.

GUARDIANO: Silence: be humble, Melitone, nor be vexed.
Though Raffaello be preferred.

MELITONE: I? no—I am his friend: but he has such ways.
He talks to himself—has such looks.

GUARDIANO: It is through his praying
And fasting.

MELITONE: Yesterday, as he worked in the orchard.
His eyes seemed so starting out, that jestingly
I said, 'Father, you look like a mulatto!'
He turned an angry glance on me,
Clenched his fist, and—

GUARDIANO: What then?

MELITONE: Quando cadde Sul campanil la fulgore, ed usciva Fra la tempesta gli fridai: Mi sembra Indo selvaggio un urlo Cacciò che mi gelava.	MELITONE: When the lightning struck the steeple, As he went out into the storm, I cried, 'You look to me like a wild Indian!' Whereupon he uttered a howl That froze my blood.
GUARDIANO: Che v' ha a ridir?	GUARDIANO: What followed?
MELITONE: Nulla, ma il guardo e penso Che il demonio, narraste, Qui stette un tempo in abito da frate, Gli fosse il padre Raffael parente?	MELITONE: Nothing; but I looked at him, and thought That the demon you told us of, Who once lived here in a friar's dress, Might be a relative of Father Raffaello.
GUARDIANO: Giudizzii temerarii. Il ver narrai; Ma n' ebbe il superior revilazione Allora. Io, no.	GUARDIANO: A rash judgment. I told the tale; But to the superior it was revealed, And not to me.
MELITONE: Ciò è vero! Ma strano è molto il padre! La ragione?	MELITONE: That is true; But the father is most strange! What is the cause?
GUARDIANO: Del mondo i disinganni, L' assidua penitenza. Le veglie, l' astinenza Quell' anima turbar.	GUARDIANO: Finding out the deceit of the world, Constantly performing penance, Vigils and abstinence, Have disturbed his mind.
MELITONE: Saranno i disinganni Adunque e l'astinenza. L' assidua penitenza, Che il capo gli guastar! (Si suona con forza il campanello alla porta.)	MELITONE: Discovering the world's deceit, The various abstinences, And the frequent penances, Have upset his brain! (the bell at the door is rung violently.)
GUARDIANO: Giunge qualcuno—aprite. (Parte.)	GUARDIANO: Someone has arrived—open. (exit.)
SCENA IV	SCENE IV
Fra Melitone e Don Carlo, che avviluppato in un grande mantello, entra francamente.	Father Melitone, and Don Carlos, who enters boldly, wrapped in a great cloak.
CARLO: (Alteramente.) Siete voi il portiere?	CARLOS: (Haughtily.) Are you the porter?
MELITONE: (E goffo ben costui!) S' ora v' apersi, parmi.	MELITONE: (The man must be a fool!) It appears to me I just let you in.
CARLO: Il padre Raffaele?	CARLOS: Father Raffaello?
MELITONE: (Un altro!) Due ne abbiamo; L' un di Porcuna, grasso, Sordo come una talpa, l' altro scarno, Bruno, occhi (ciel quali occhi!) voi chiedete?	MELITONE: (Another!) We have two of them; One from Porcuna, fat, Deaf as a post; the other lean, dark eyes, (Heavens, what eyes!) Which do you want?
CARLO: Quell dell' inferno.	CARLOS: The fiend.
MELITONE: (E desso!) E chi gli annuncio?	MELITONE: (It is he!) And whom shall I announce?
CARLO: Un cavalier.	CARLOS: A cavalier.
MELITONE: (Qual boria! è un mal arnese.) (Parte.)	MELITONE: (What arrogance! an ill-bred fellow.) (exit.)
SCENA V	SCENE V
Don Carlos, poi Don Alvaro in abito da frate.	Don Carlos, after him Don Alvaro, in a monk's habit.
CARLO: Invano Alvaro ti celasti al mondo E d'ipocrita veste Scudo fecesti alla viltà. Del chiostro Ove t' ascondi m' additàr la via L'odio e la sete di vendetta; alcuno Qui non sarà che ne divida; Solo il tuo sangue può lavar l' oltraggio Che macchiò l' onor mio; E tutto il verserò, lo giuro a Dio.	CARLOS: In vain, Alvaro, you hide from the world, And with hypocrite's garb You would shield villainy. To the cloister Which concealed you, hate And vengeance pointed out the way. None here shall hold me from you; Your blood alone can cleanse the stain From my outraged honor: And before heaven I swear to shed it!
ALVARO: Fratello—	ALVARO: Brother—
CARLO: Riconoscimi.	CARLOS: Behold and know me.
ALVARO: Don Carlo! Voi vivente!	ALVARO: Don Carlos! Alive!
CARLO: Da un lustro ne vo' in traccia, Ti trovo finalmente: Col sangue sol cancellasi L' infamia ed il delitto. Ch' io ti punisca è scritto Sul libro del destin. Tu prode fosti, or monaco, Un' arma qui non hai; Deggio il tuo sangue spargere, Scegli, due ne portai.	CARLOS: For five years I have been on your track, At length I find you; With blood alone can your infamy And misdeeds be blotted out. It is written in the book of fate That I shall punish you. You were then valiant, now a monk; You have no weapon here; As I must shed your blood, I have brought two: choose.
ALVARO: Vissi nel mondo—intendo; or queste vesti l'eremo, Dicon che i falli ammendo, Ah! cessi il sangue alfin! Lasciateme.	ALVARO: I have lived in the world—I understand; I wear the garments, this desert place, Proclaim my reformed errors, Ah! at least cease this strife;— Leave me.
CARLO: Difendere Quel sajo, nè il deserto. Codardo, non ti possono.	CARLOS: Coward, Neither the cassock, or the desert, Can protect you!
ALVARO: (Trasalendo.) Codardo! tale asserto— (Poi frenandosi.) (Ah no!—assistima, Signore!) (A Don Carlo.) La minaccie, i fieri accenti, Portin seco in preda i venti; Perdonatemi, pietà. A che offendere cotanto Chi fu solo sventurato! Deh chiniam la fronte al fato: O fratel, pietà, pietà!	ALVARO: (Shrinking.) Coward! that assertion— (restraining himself.) (Ah no!—help me, Heaven!) (to Don Carlos.) Threats, fierce and angry tones Are cast to the winds; Pardon and pity me. Why goad so far Him who was only unfortunate? Let us yield to fate; Brother, mercy, mercy!
CARLO: Tu contamini tal nome. Una suora mi lasciasti Chi tradita abbandonasti All' infamia, al disonor.	CARLOS: You contaminate the name. You have left me a sister Whom you did betray, and then abandoned To infamy and dishonor!
ALVARO: (Furente.) Ah, seguasti la tua sorte! Morte a entrambi! (Raccogliendo la spada.)	ALVARO: (Furiously.) Your death warrant is sealed! Death to both! (picks up the sword.)
CARLO: A entrambi morte!	CARLOS: Death to both!
A 2: Paga l'ira alfin sarà. Te l' inferno ingoierà! (Escono currendo dalla sinistra.)	BOTH: Wrong shall at last be avenged, And hell shall receive you! (they rush out towards the left.)

SCENA VI

Valle tra rupi inaccessibili, attraversata da un ruscello. Nel fondo, a sinistra dello spetattore, e una Grotta con porta practicabile, e sopra una campana che si potra suonare dall' interno. E il tramonto. La scena si oscura lentamente; la luna apparisce splendidissima.

Donna Leonora pallida, sfigurata, esce dalla grotta agitatissima.

LEONORA: Pace, pace, mio Dio! cruda sventura
M' astringe, ahimè, a languir;
Come il dì primo da tant' anni dura
Profondo il mio soffrir.
L'amai, gli è ver! ma di beltà e valore
Cotando Iddio l' ornò.
Che l' amo ancor, nè togliermi dal core
L'imagine saprò.
Fatalità! fatalità!—un delitto
Disgiunti n' ha quaggiù!
Alvaro, io t' amo, e su mel cielo è scritto;
Non ti vedrò mai più!
Oh, Dio, Dio fa ch'io muoia; chè la calma
Può darmi morte sol.
Invan la pace qui sperò quest'alma
In preda a lungo duol.
(Va ad un sasso, ove sono alcune provigione deposte da Padre Guardiano.)
Misero pane, a prolungarmi vieni
La sconsolata vita—ma chi giunge?
Profanare che ardisce il sacro loco?
Maledizione! maledizione!
(Torna rapidamente alla Grotta, e vi si rinchiude.)

SCENA VII

Si ode dentro la scena un cozzar di spade.

CARLO: (Dal' interno.) Io muoio!—Confession!—
L'alma salvate.
(Alvaro entra in scena colla spada sguainata.)
E questo ancor sangue d'un Vargas.
(Sempre dall' interno.)
Padre. Confession.

ALVARO: (Getta la spada.) Maledetto io son; ma è presso
Un eremita.
(Corre alla grotta e batte alla porto.)
A confortar correte
Un uom che muor.

LEONORA: (Dall' interno) Nol posso.

ALVARO: Fratello! in nome del Signor.

LEONORA: Nol posso.

SCENE VI

A valley among inaccessible rocks, traversed by a stream. At the back, on the left of the spectator, is a Grotto with a practicable door, and above it a bell, which can be sounded from within. The sun has set. The scene darkens gradually; the moon rises brightly.

Donna Leonora, pale, wan, enters agitated from the grotto.

LEONORA: Peace, grant me peace, O Lord;
By dire misfortune I'm condemned to languish;
As on the first day, during so many years,
Profound has been my grief.
I loved him! with beauty and courage
Heaven had so endowed him.
I love him still, nor can I banish his image from my heart.
O cruel fate!—a crime
Has parted us forever here below!
Alvaro, I love you and in heaven it is decreed
That I shall never see you again!
O Lord, suffer me to die, for peace
Comes to my soul only in death.
Here I hope in vain for peace,
A prey to lingering woe.
(she goes to a stone, on which are some provisions, placed there by Father Guardiano.)
Miserable food, you come to prolong
A wretched life—but who approaches?
Who dares profane this sacred spot?
Malediction! malediction!
(returns quickly to the Grotto and shuts herself in.)

SCENE VII

A clashing of swords is heard close at hand.

CARLOS: (Without.) I am slain!—
Absolution!
Save my soul.
(Alvaro enters, with unsheathed sword.)
Again the blood of Vargas is shed.
(Still without.)
A priest—absolution.

ALVARO: (Throwing down the sword.) I am accursed:
But here dwells a hermit.
(runs to cave, and beats at the door.)
Hasten to aid.
A dying man.

LEONORA: (From the cave.) I cannot.

ALVARO: Brother, in the name of heaven!

LEONORA: I cannot come.

ALVARO: (Batte con piu forza.) E d' uopo.

LEONORA: (Dall'interno suonando la campana.) Ajuto! Ajuto!

ALVARO: Deh venite.

SCENA VIII

Detto e Leonora che si presenta sulla porta.

LEONORA: Temerarii, del ciel l' ira fuggite!

ALVARO: Una donna! qual voce—ah no—uno spettro.

LEONORA: (Riconoscendo Don Alvaro.) Che miro?

ALVARO: Tu—Leonora!

LEONORA: Egli è ben desso. (Avvicinandosi ad Alvaro.) Io ti riveggo ancora.

ALVARO: Lungi—lungi da me—queste mie mani Grondano sangue. Indietro!

LEONORA: Che mai parli?

ALVARO: (Accennando.) Là giace spento un uom.

LEONORA: Tu l'uccidesti?

ALVARO: Tutto tentai per evitar la pugna.
Chiusi i meie dì nel chiostro.
Ei mi raggiunse—m' insultò—l'uccisi.

LEONORA: Ed era?

ALVARO: Tuo fratello!

LEONORA: Gran Dio?
(Corre ansante verso il bosco.)

ALVARO: Destino avverso
Come a scherno mi prendi!
Vive Leonora e ritrovarla deggio
Or che versai di suo fratello il sangue!

LEONORA: (Dall'interno, mette un grido.) Ah!

ALVARO: Qual grido!—che avvenne?

SCENA IX

Leonora ferita entra sostenuta dal Guardiano e detto.

ALVARO: Ella—ferita!

LEONORA: (Morente.) Nell' ora estrema perdonar non seppe.
E l'onta vendicò nel sangue mio.

ALVARO: E tu paga non eri
O vendetta di Dio!—Maledizione!

GUARDIANO: (Solenne.) Non imprecare; umiliati
A lui ch'è giusto e santo—
Che adduce a eterni gaudii
Per una via di pianto.
D'ira e furor sacrilego.

ALVARO: (Beating furiously.) His last moments are near.

LEONORA: (Ringing the bell in the cave.) Help! help!

ALVARO: Come quickly!

SCENE VIII

Leonora appears at the door of the cave.

LEONORA: Rash one, fly from the wrath of heaven!

ALVARO: A woman! that voice! ah, no it's a vision!

LEONORA: (Recognizing Don Alvaro.) What do I see!

ALVARO: Leonora!

LEONORA: It's he. (Advancing to Alvaro.)
Again I see you.

ALVARO: Away, away from me, my hands
Are stained with blood. Look there.

LEONORA: What do you mean?

ALVARO: (Pointing.) See, there lies a dying man.

LEONORA: You have killed him?

ALVARO: Vainly I tried to evade this fray.
I passed my life within the cloister's shelter.
He sought me out there—insulted me,—
I slew him.

LEONORA: And he was?

ALVARO: Your brother!

LEONORA: Great heaven!
(runs breathlessly towards the wood.)

ALVARO: Relentless destiny
Thus mocks me ever!
Leonora lives, and I meet her
With her brother's blood upon me.

LEONORA: (Shrieks without.)
Ah!

ALVARO: That cry! what has happened.

SCENE IX

Leonora enters, wounded, supported by Guardiano.

ALVARO: It is she—wounded!

LEONORA: (Dying) In his last hour he did not pardon;
And revenged his shame with my blood.

ALVARO: And you are thus repaid,
Oh, vengeance of heaven! malediction!

GUARDIANO: (Solemnly.) Curse not. Humble yourself
Before Him who is just and holy;
Who by a path of tears
To eternal joys conducts thee.
Do not pour forth words.

Non profferir parola,
Mentre quest' angiol vola
Al trono del Signor.

LEONORA: (Con voce morente.)
Si, piangi—e prega.

ALVARO: Un reprobe un maledetto io sono.
Flutto di sange inalzasi.
Fra noi.

LEONORA: Di Dio il perdono io ti prometto.

GUARDIANO: Prostrati!

LEONORA: Alvaro.

ALVARO: A quell' accento
Più non poss' io resistere.
(Gettandosi ai piedi di Leonora.)
Leonora, io son redento,
Dal ciel son perdonato!

LEONORA E GUARDIANO: Sia lode a te Signore.

Of ire and sacrilegious fury.
While this angel ascends
To the heavenly throne.

LEONORA: (With dying accents.)
Yes,—weep and pray.

ALVARO: Reprobate, I am accursed.
Barriers of blood between us
Have arisen.

LEONORA: Heaven grants me power to pardon you.

GUARDIANO: Kneel.

LEONORA: Alvaro—

ALVARO: Those loved tones I can no more resist.
(throwing himself at Leonora's feet.)
Leonora, I am saved,
Heaven has forgiven my sins.

LEONORA & GUARDIANO: Power eternal, praise be to your name!

LEONORA: (Ad Alvaro.) Lieta or poss' io precederti.
Alla promessa terra.
Là cesserà guerra.
Santo l'amor sarà.

ALVARO: Tu mi condanni a vivere,
E mi abbandoni intanto!
Il reo, il reo soltanto.
Dunque impunito andrà!

GUARDIANO: Santa del suo màrtirio
Ella al Signore ascenda.
E il suo morir ti apprenda
La fede e la pieta!

LEONORA: O Ciel ti attendo, addio!
Io ti precedo Alvaro.

ALVARO: Morta!

GUARDIANO: Salita a Dio.
(Cala lentamente la tela.)

FINE DELL' OPERA.

LEONORA: (To Alvaro.) Gladly now can I precede you
To the promised land;
There strife shall cease.
And holy love shall reign.

ALVARO: You condemned me to live
While thus forsaking me;
I, the guilty one,
Alone go unpunished.

GUARDIANO: Holy in her martyrdom,
She now departs to heaven;
And piety and faith
Her death will teach you.

LEONORA: Oh, heaven, I await you; farewell,
I do but precede you, Alvaro.

ALVARO: Dead!

GUARDIANO: Ascended to heaven!
(Curtain slowly falls.)

END OF THE OPERA.

Aïda (1871)

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY ANTONIO GHISLANZONI

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Antonio Ghislanzoni (based on a fragment by François Auguste Mariette which was elaborated on by Camille Du Locle together with the composer), was first performed at the Opera House in Cairo on December 24, 1871. At the Hall in the Royal Palace of Memphis, Ramfis, the High Priest, consults the gods for guidance. The Ethiopian enemy is advancing, threatening Thebes. Radamès has been chosen to lead the Egyptian army. Amneris, daughter of the king of Egypt, is in love with him, although she realizes that he is in love with Aida, the Ethiopian slave who is really the daughter of Amonasro, the Ethiopian king. Aida is torn between her loyalty to her country and her love for Radamès. At the temple of Vulcan, Radamès receives a sword and blessings for victory from Ramfis. The Egyptians win, but Amneris tells Aida that Radamès is dead—a lie. Amneris also tells Aida that she is Aida's rival for Radamès' love. Radamès returns to Thebes in triumph and Amneris crowns him the victor. Radamès asks the king to spare the lives of the Ethiopian prisoners. Aida's father is among them; he pleads with her not to reveal his identity. The priests demand either death for the prisoners or that Aida be kept in exchange for their freedom. The king promises Amneris to Radamès. Radamès and Aida swallow their grief. As the wedding approaches, Amneris prays at the temple of Isis. Amonasro gets Aida to obtain tactical information from Radamès. He tells her that the Napata pass is unprotected. Amonasro overhears this. Radamès realizes that he has given information to Amonasro. He turns himself in. Amneris pleads with him to give up Aida. He refuses, and is sentenced to be buried alive by the priests. Buried in a crypt below the Temple of Vulcan, he finds Aida there, waiting for him. Amneris mourns above while the lovers sing of their love and wait to die together.

■ ATTO I	■ ACT I
SCENA I	SCENE I
Sala nel Palazza del Re a Menfi. A destra et a sinistra una colonnata con statue e arbusti in flori Grande porta nel fondo, de cui appariccone i tempil, i palazzi di Menfi e le Piramidi.	Hall in the Palace of the King at Memphis; to the right and left a colonnade with statues and flowering shrubs; at the back a grand gate, from which may be seen the temples and palaces of Memphis and the Pyramids.
(Radames e Ramfis)	(Radames and Ramphis.)
RAMFIS: Sì: corre voci che l'Etiope ardisca Sfidarci ancora, e del Nilo la valle E Tebe miniacciar Fra breve un messo Recherà il ver.	RAMPHIS: Yes, a report runs that the Ethiopian dares Again defy us, and to threaten the Valley of the Nile And Thebes. A messenger shortly Will bring the truth.
RADAMES: La sacra Iside consultasti?	RADAMES: Did you consult the sacred Isis?
RAMFIS: Ella ha nomato Delle Egizie falangi El condottier supremo.	RAMPHIS: She has named the supreme leader. Of the Egyptian phalanxes
RADAMES: Oh lui felice!	RADAMES: Oh! happy man!
RAMFIS: (con intenzione, fissando Radames). Giovine e prode è desso Ora, del Nume Reco i decreti al Re. (Esce.)	RAMPHIS: (with meaning, gazing at Radames.) Young and brave is he. Now to the king I convey the decrees of the goddess. (Exit.)
RADAMES: (solo). Se quel guerrier Io fossi! se il mio sogno Si avverasse! Un esercito di prodi Da me guidato e la vittoria e il plauso Di Menfi tutta! E a te, mia dolce Aïda, Tornar di lauri cinto Dirti: per te ho pugnato e per te ho vinto!	RADAMES: (alone). If I were that warrior! If my dream Should be verified! An army of brave men Led by me victory the applause Of all Memphis! And to you my sweet Aïda, To return, crowned with laurels! To say to you, for you I have fought, and for you conquered!
RADAMES: Celeste Aida, forma divina, Mistico serto di luce e fior, del mio pensiero, tu sei regina, tu di mia vita sei lo splendor; Il tuo bel cielo vorrei ridarti, le dolci brezze del patria suol, un regal serto sul crin posarti, engerti un trono vicino al sol, al! Celeste Aida, forma divina, mistico raggio di luce e fior, del mio pensiero tu sei regina, tu di mia vita sei lo splendor. Il tuo bel cielo vorrei ridarti; le dolci brezze del patria suol; un regal serto sul crin posarti, ergerti un trono vicino al sol, un trono vicino al sol, un trono vicino al sol. (Amneris e detto.)	RADAMES: Heavenly Aida, beauty resplendent, Mysterious blending of flowers and light, Queen of my soul you reign transcendent, you are the splendor bright of my life. To your bright skies once more I'd restore you, To the soft air of your native land, Garlands imperial I would wreathe over you Raise you a throne near the sun to stand! ah! (Enter Amneris.)
AMNERIS: Quale insolita givia Nel tuo sguardo! Di quale Nobil fierezza ti balena il volto! Degna di invidia oh! quanto Saria la donna il cui bramato aspetto Tanta luce di gaudio in te destasse!	AMNERIS: What unwonted fire in your glance! With what noble pride glows your face. Worthy of envy oh, how much Would be the woman whose beloved aspect Should awaken in you this light of joy!
RADAMES: D'un sogno avventuroso Si beava il mio cuore Oggi, la diva Profferse il nome del guerrier che al campo	RADAMES: With an adventurous dream My heart was blessed. Today the goddess Declared the name of the warrior

Le schière Egizie condurrà S'io fossi A tale onor prescelto	who to the field The Egyptian troops shall lead. If I were To such honor destined!
AMNERIS: Nè un altro sogno mai Più gentil più soave Al cuore ti parlò? Non hai tu in Menfi Desiderii speranze?	AMNERIS: Has not another dream More gentle, more sweet, Spoken to your heart? Have you not in Memphis Desires hopes?
RADAMES: Io! (quale inchiesta!) Forse l'arcano amore Scoprì che m' arde in core Della sua schiava il nome Mi lesse nel pensier!	RADAMES: I! (What a question! Perhaps she has discovered the hidden love Which burns my heart The name of her slave She reads in my thoughts!)
AMNERIS: (Oh! guai se un altro amore Ardesse a lui nel core! Guai se il mio sguardo penetra Questo fatal mister!) (Aïda e detto.)	AMNERIS: (Oh! woe if another love Should burn in his heart; Woe, if my search should penetrate This fatal mystery!) (Enter Aïda.)
RADAMES: Dessa!	RADAMES: (seeing Aïda.) She!
AMNERIS: (Ei si turba e quale Sguardo rivolse a lei! Aïda! a me rivale Forse saria costei?) (Dopo breve silenzio volgendola ad Aïda.)	AMNERIS: (He is moved! And what A glance he turns to her! Aïda! My rival Perhaps is she?) (After a short silence turning to Aïda.)
AMNERIS: Vienio o diletta appressati schiava non sei ne an cella, Qui dove in dolce fascino Io ti chiamai sorella Piangi? delle tue lacrime svela il segreto, svela il segreto a me.	AMNERIS: Come, dearest friend, come near to me, Slave I no longer call you Here in affection's tender bonds, My sister I proclaim you, You weep? Why are these tears flowing, tell me your secret, your secret tell to me.
AÏDA: (Più mosso) Ohimè! di guerra fremere l'atroce grido io sento Per l'infelice patria, per me, per vio pavento.	AÏDA: Alas! the din of strife resounds, The warlike hosts assemble, For my unhappy nativeland, For me, for you I tremble.
AMNERIS: Favelli il ver? nè s'agita più grave cura in te? Trema, o rea schiava,	AMNERIS: Do you speak truly? no graver care disturbs your gentle heart?
RADAMES: Nel velto a lei balena	RADAMES: Tremble, O slave dissembling! Upon her face is gleaming.
AMNERIS: Ah! trema, rea schiava trema,	AMNERIS: Ah! tremble, Oh! slave dissembling!
RAD: Lo sdegno ed il sospetto
AMNERIS: Chio nel tuo cor discenda! Trema che il ver m'apprenda que! pianto e quel rossor	RADAMES: Disdain and dark suspicion Could I in your heart descending, Learn the truth of your offending, The tearful blush that starts
AÏDA: Ah! no, Sulla mia patria, Non geme il cor, il cor soltanto, Quello ch'io verso è pianto, E pianto, pianto disventurato amor! Ah! è pianto pianto disventurato amor! (Pianto) Disventurato amor è pianto di sventurato amor. (Il Re, precenduto dalle sue guardie e seguito da Ramfis da Ministri, Sacredoti, Capitani, ecc., ecc. Un ufficiale di Palazzo, indi un Messaggiero.)	AÏDA: Oh! land beloved, Your sorrow my heart, my heart's not grieving, These tears my lone heart relieving, Are flowing, flowing on love's unhappy part! Ah! are flowing, flowing from love's unhappy smart! Flowing From love's unhappy smart, Are flowing from love's unhap py smart! (Enter the King, preceded by his Guards and followed by Ramphis, his Ministers, Priests, Captains, etc., etc. An Officer of the Palace, and afterwards a Messenger.)
IL RE: Alta cagion vi aduna, O fidi Egizii, al vostro Re d'intorno, Dal confir d'Etiópia un Messaggiero Dianzi giungea gravi novelle ei reca Vi piaccia udirlo (Ad un Ufficiale.) Il Messaggier si avanzi!	KING: Great cause summons you, O faithful Egyptians, around your king. From the confines of Ethiopia a Messenger Just now arrived he brings grave news Be pleased to hear him. (To an Officer.) Let the messenger come forward.
MESSAGGIERO: Il sacro suolo dell' Egitto è invaso Dai barbari Etiope i nostri campi Fur devastati arse ie messi e baldi Della facil vittoria, i predatori Già marciano su Tebe.	MESSENGER: The sacred soil of Egypt is invaded By the barbarous Ethiopians! Our fields Are devastated! The crops burned! And emboldened by the easy victory, the depredators Already march on Thebes.
TUTTI: Ed osan tanto!	ALL: They dare so much!
MESSAGGIERO: Un guerriero indomabile, feroce, Li conduce Amonasro.	MESSENGER: A warrior indomitable and fierce Conducts them Amonasro.
TUTTI: Il Re!	ALL: The King!
AÏDA: (Mio padre!)	AÏDA: (My father!)
MESSAGGIERO: Già Tebe è in armi e dalle cento porte Sul barbaro invasore Proromperà, guerra recando e morte.	MESSENGER: Already Thebes is in arms, and from the hundred gates Breaks forth upon the invading barbarian, Carrying war and death.
IL RE: Si: guerra e morte il nostro grido sia.	KING: Yes, be war and death our cry!
TUTTI: Guerra! guerra!	ALL: War! War!
IL RE: Tramenda! inesorata! (Accostandosi a Radames.) Iside venerata Di nostre schiere invitte Già designava il condottier supremo: Radames.	KING: Tremendous! inexorable! (Addressing Radames.) Of our unconquered legions Venerated Isis Has already designated the supreme leader Radames.
TUTTI: Radames.	ALL: Radames!
RADAMES: Sien grazie ai Numi! I miei voti fur paghi.	RADAMES: Thanks be to the gods! My prayers are answered.
AMNERIS: (Ei duce!)	AMNERIS: (He leads!)
AÏDA: (Io tremo!)	AÏDA: (I tremble!)
IL RE: Or, di Vulcano al tempio Muovi, o guerrier Le sacre Armi ti cingi e alla vittoria vola, Su! del Nilo al sacro lido Accorrete, Egizii eroi; Da ogni cor prorompa il grido. Guerra e morte allo stranier!	KING: Now move, O warrior, To the temple of Vulcan. Gird yourself With the sacred arms, and fly to victory. Up! To the sacred bank of the Nile Hasten, Egyptian heroes; From every heart let burst the cry, War and death to the foreigner!
RAMFIS e SACERDOTI: Gloria ai Numi! ognun rammenti Ch'essi reggono gli eventi Che in poter d'e Numi solo Stan le sorti guerrier.	RAMPHIS AND PRIESTS: Glory to the gods! Remember all That they rule events; That in the power of the gods alone Lies the fate of warriors.
MINISTRI e CAPITANI: Su! del Nilo al sacro lido Sien barriera i nostri petti; Non echeggi che un sol grido: Guerra e morte allo stranier!	MINISTERS AND CAPTAINS: Up! Of the Nile's sacred shore Be our breasts the barrier; Let but one cry resound: War and death to the foreigner!

RADAMES: Sacro fremito di gloria
Tutta l'anima mi investe
Su! corriamo alla vittoria!
Guerra e morte allo stranier!

AMNERIS: (recando una bandiera e consegnandota a Radames).
Di mia man ricevi, o duce, Il vessillo glorioso;
Ti sia guida, ti sia luce
Della gloria sul sentier.

AÏDA: (Per chi piango? per chi prego?
Qual poter m'avvince a lui!
Deggio amarlo ed è costui
Un nemico uno strainer!)

TUTTI: Guerra! guerra! sterminio all' invasor!
Va, Radames, ritorna vincitor!
(Escono tutti meno Aïda.)

AÏDA: Ritorna vincitor! E dal mio labbro
Uscì liempi paraola! vincitore
Del padre mio di lui che impugna i'amor
Per me per ridonarmi
Una patria, una reggia! e il nome illustre che qui celar mie è froza Vincitore
De' miei fratelli ond' io lo! vegga, tinto
Del sangue amato, trionfar nel plauso
Dell' Egizie coorti! E dietro il carro,
Un Re mio padre di catene avvinto!
L'insana parola,
O Numi, sperdete!
Al seno d'un padre
La figlia rendete;
Struggete le squadre
Dei nostri oppressor!
Sventurata! che dissi? e l'amor mio?
Dunque scordar poss' io
Questo fervido amor che oppressa e schiava
Come raggio di sol qui mi beava?
Imprecherò la morte
A Radames a lui che amo pur tanto;
Ah! non fu in terra mai
Da più crudeli angoscie un core affranto.
I sacri nomi di padre di amante
Nè profferir poss' lo, nè ricordar
Per l'un per l'altro confusa tremante
Io piangere vorrei vorrei pregar.
Ma la mia prece inbestemmia si muta
Delitto è il pianto a me colna il sospir
In notte cupa la mente è perduta
E nell' ansia crudel vorrei morir.

Numi, pietà
Del mio soffrir!
Speme non v'ha pel mio dolor
Amor fatal, Tremendo amor
Spezza mì il cor, fammi morir!
Numi, pietà del mio sofrir,
Ah! pietà, Numi, pietà, del mio soffrir, Numi, pietà, del mio soffrir, pietà, pietà, del mio soffrir.

RADAMES: Holy rage of glory
Fills all my soul.
Up! Let us rush to victory:
War and death to the foreigner!

AMNERIS: (bringing a banner and consigning it to Radames.)
From my hand receive, O leader,
The glorious standard.
Be it your guide, be it your light,
On the path of glory.

AÏDA: (For whom do I weep? For whom pray?
What power binds me to him!
I must love him! And this man
Is an enemy an alien!

ALL: War! War! Extermination to the invader!
Go, Radames, return conqueror!
(Exeunt all but Aïda.)

AÏDA: Return victorious! And from your lips
Went forth the impious word! Conqueror
Of my father of him who takes arms
For me to give me again
A country, a kingdom; and the illustrious name
Which here I am forced to conceal! Conqueror
Of my brothers, with whose dear blood
I see him stained, triumphant in the applause
Of the Egyptian hosts; and behind the chariot
A king! my father bound with chains!
The insane word
Forget, O gods!
Return the daughter
To the bosom of her father;
Destroy the squadrons
Of our oppressors!
Unhappy one! What did I say? And my love
Can I ever forget,
This fervid love which oppresses and enslaves,
As the sun's ray which now blesses me?
Shall I call death
On Radames? On him whom I love so much?
Ah! Never on earth was heart torn
By more cruel agonies.
The sacred names of father, of lover,
I can neither utter, nor remember
For the onefor the otherconfused trembling
I would weep I would pray;
But my prayer changes to blasphemy.
My tears are a crime my sighs a wrong
In dense night the mind is lost
And in the cruel anguish I would die.

Pity, kind Heaven,
To you I fly;
Hope there is none in this my woe.
Oh! fatal love,
Your power I know,
Break you my heart, cause me to die.
Pity, kind Heaven,
Your power I know.
Oh, kind Heaven, pity my woe,
Your mercy show, pity, kind Heaven relieve my woe: relieve my woe, relieve my woe.

SCENA II

Interno del Tempio di Vulcano a Menfi. Una luce misteriosa scende dal' alto. Uno lunga fila di colonna l'una all' altra addossate, si perde fra le tenebre. Statue di varie Divinita. Nel mezza della scena, sovra un palco coperto da tappeti, sorge l'altare sormontato da emblemi sacri. Dai tripedi d'oro si innalza il fumo degli incensi.

Sacerdoti e Sacerdotesse Ramfis ai piede dell' altare A suo tempo, Radames Si sente dall' interno il canto dello Sacerdotesse accompagnato dalle arpe.

SACERDOTESSE: (nell' interno).
Immenso Fthà, del mondo
Spirito animator,
Noi ti invochiamo!
Immenso Fthà, del mondo
Spirito fecondator,
Noi ti invochiamo!
Fuoco increato, eterno,
Onde ebbe luce il sol,
Noi ti invochiamo!

SACERDOTI: Tu che dal nulla hai tratto
L'onde, la terra e il ciel,
Noi ti invochiamo!
Nume che del tuo spirito
Sei figlio e genitor,
Noi ti invochiamo!
Vita dell' Universo,
Mito di eterno amor,
Noi ti invochiamo!
(Radames viene introdotto senz' armi Montre va al' altare, le Sacerdotesse eseguiscono la danza sacra Sul capo di Radames vien steso un velo d'argento.)

RAMFIS: Mortal, diletto ai Numi A te fidate
Son d'Egitto le sorti, Il sacro brando
Dal Dio temprato, per tua man diventi
Ai nemici terror, folgore, morte.
(volgendozi al Nume.)
Nume, custode e vindice
Di questa sacra terra,
La mano tua distendi
Sovra l'Egizio suol.

RADAMES: Nume, che duce ed arbitro
Sei d'ogni umana guerra,
Proteggi tu, difendi
D'Egitto il sacro suol!
(Mentre Radames viene investito

SCENE II

Interior of the Temple of Vulcan at Memphis. A mysterious light descends from above; a long row of columns one behind another is lost in the darkness; statues of various deities; in the middle of the scene, above a platform covered with carpet, rises the altar, surmounted by sacred emblems; from golden tripods rises the smoke of incense.

Priests and Priestesses Ramphis at the foot of the altar, afterwards Radames The song of the Priestesses accompanied by harps, is heard from the interior.

PRIESTESSES: (in the interior).
Infinite Phthah, of the world
Animating spirit,
We invoke you!
The fructifying spirit,
We invoke you!
Fire uncreate, eternal,
From where the sun has light,
We invoke you!

PRIESTS: You who from nothing hast made
The waters, the earth and the heavens,
We invoke you!
God, who of your spirit
Are son and father,
We invoke you!
Life of the Universe
Gift of eternal love,
We invoke you.
(Enter Radames, introduced unarmed While he goes to the altar the Priestesses execute the sacred dance On the head of Radames is placed a silver veil.)

RAMPHIS: Mortal, beloved of the gods, to you
Is confided the fate of Egypt. Let the holy sword Tempered by the gods, in your hand become
To the enemy, terror a thunderbolt death.
(Turning himself to the gods.)
God, guardian and avenger
Of this sacred land,
Spread your hand
Over the Egyptian soil.

RADAMES: God, who is our leader and arbiter
Of every human war,
Protect and defend
The sacred soil of Egypt.
(While Radames is being invested delle armi sacra gli Sacerdotesse e Sacerdoti riprendono l'inno religiose e la mistica danza.)

FINE DELL' ATTO PRIMO

ATTO II

SCENA I

Una Sala nell' Appartmento di Amneris. Amneris circondata dalle Schiave che li abbigliano per la festa trionfale. Dia tripodi si eleva il profumo degil aromi. Giovani schiavi mori denzando agitano i ventagli di plume.

SCHIAVE: Chi mai fra gli inni e i plausi
Erge alla gloria il vol,
Al par di un Dio terribile,
Fulgente al par del sol?
Vieni; sul crin ti piovano
Conteste ai lauri i fior;
suonin di gloria i cantici
Coi cantici d'amor

AMNERIS: (Vieni, amor mio, mi inebria Fammi beato il cor!)

SCHIAVE: Or, dove son le barbare
Orde dello stranier?
Siccome nebbia sparvero
Al soffio del guerrier.
Vieni: di gloria il premio
Raccogli, o vincitor;
T'arrise la vittoria,
T'arriderà l'amor.

AMNERIS: (Vieni, amor mio, ravvivami D'un caro accento ancor!)
Silenzio! Aïda verso noi si avanza
Figlia dei vinti, il suo dolor mi è sacro.
(Ad un cenno di Amneris tutti allontanano.)
Nel riverderla, il dubbio
Atroce in me si desta
Il mistero fatal si squarci alfine!
(Amneris ed Aïda.)

AMNERIS: (ad Aïda con simulata amorevolezza.) Fu la sorte dell' armi a' tuoi funestra, Povera Aïda! Il lutto
Che ti pesa sul cor teco divido.
Io son l'amica tua
Tutto da me tu avrai vivrai felice!

AÏDA: Felice esser poss' io
Lungi dal suol natio qui dove ignota
M'è la sorte del padre e dei fratelli?

with the consecrated armor, the Priests and Priestesses resume the religious hymn and mystic dance.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

SCENE I

A Hall in the Apartments of Amneris.
Amneris surrounded by female Slaves, who are adorning her for the triumphal festival. From tripods arise aromatic perfumes. Moorish Slave Boys dancing and agitating feather fans.

SLAVE GIRLS: You who amid hymns and plaudits
Raise your flight to glory
Terrible even as a god!
Effulgent as the sun,
Come, on your tresses rain
Laurels and flowers interwoven;
Let sound the songs of glory
With the songs of love.

AMNERIS: (Come, my love, intoxicate me;
Make my heart blessed!).

SLAVE GIRLS: Now where are the barbarian
Hordes of the foreigner?
Like a mist they scatter
At the breath of the warrior.
Come; gather the reward
Of glory, O conqueror;
Victory smiled upon you
Love shall smile upon you.

AMNERIS: (Come, my love, revive me Again with your dear voice!)
Silence! Aïda approaches us;
Daughter of the vanquished, her grief to me is sacred.
(At a sign from Amneris all withdraw to a distance.)
In seeing her again, the fearful doubt
Awakens itself within me.
Let the fatal mystery be at last rent.
(enter Aïda.)

AMNERIS: (to Aïda, with feigned affection). The fate of arms was deadly to your people,
Poor Aïda. The grief
Which weighs down your heart I share with you.
I am your friend;
You shall have all from me you shall live happy.

AÏDA: Can I be happy,
Far from my native land; here where the fate of my father and brothers is unknown
To me?

AMNERIS: Ben ti compiango; pure hanno un confine
I mali di quaggiù Sanerà il tempo
Le angosce del tuo core
E più che il tempo, un Dio possente Amore.

AÏDA: Amore amore!
Gaudio tormento soave ebbrezza, ansia crudel!
Ne' tuoi dolori la vita iosento un tuo sorriso mi schiude il ciel, un tuo sorriso mi schiude il ciel,
Ne' tuoi dolori la vita iosento
Un tuo sorrioso mi schiude il ciel.

AMNERIS: Ah! quel pallore quel turbamento
Svelan l'arcana na febbre d'amor!
D'interrogarla quasi hò sgomento,
Divido l'ansie del suo terror.
Ebben qual nuovo fermito t'assai, gentil Aïda?
I tuoi segreti svelami, al l'amore mio, al l'amor mio t'affida,
Tra i forti che pugnarono della tua patria a danne,
Quelcuno un dolce affanno forse a te in cor destò?
A tutti barbara non si mostrò la sorte
Sein campo il duce impavido cadde trafitò amorte

AÏDA: Che mai dicesti!
misera! misera!
Per sempre io piangeró!
Avversi sempre a me furò i Numi

AMNERIS: Trema!
in corti lessi tu l'a mi!

AÏDA: Io!

AMNERIS: Non mentire!
Un deto ancora e il vero saprò
Fissa mi in volto io t'ingannava Radames vive!

AÏDA: Vive! ah grazie, o Numi!

AMNERIS: E ancor mentir tu speri?
Si, tu l'ami
Ma l'amo anch'io intendi tu?
son tua rivalle figlia de' Faraoni

AÏDA: Mia rivale!
ebben sia pure
Anch'io son tal
Ah!
Che dissi mai?
pietà! perdono!
Ah! pieta! ti prenda del mio dolor!
Evero, io l'amo d'immenso amore.
Tu sei felice, tu sei possente io vivo solo per questo amor.

AMNERIS: Deeply do I pity you!
Nevertheless they have an end,
The ills of this world. Time will heal
The anguish of your heart.
And more than time a powerful god love.

AÏDA: O love immortal!
O joy and sorrow,
Sweetest delirium, dark doubts and woes!
As in your trials new life I borrow,
A heaven of rapture they smiles disclose,
As in your trials new life I borrow,
A heaven of rapture your smiles disclose.

AMNERIS: This deathlike pallor, this strong emotion,
Plainly reveal the fever of love!
Her will I question feigning commotion,
As if her trouble to share or remove.
What new alarm disturbs you now, my gentle friend, Aïda?
Your secret thoughts unveil to me, to my affection, to my fond love confide!
Among the braves who fought so well, lost in their country's service,
Has some one a tender sorrow wakened in your heart?
To all the fates have not so cruelly intended.
If on the field the brave leader should fall, by death extended,

AÏDA: What are you saying!
Hapless me!
Hapless me!
My tears shall forever flow!
The gods have ever from childhood opposed me.

AMNERIS: Tremble!
I read your secret, you love him!

AÏDA: Love him!

AMNERIS: Lie no longer!
Yet one word further, the truth I will know,
Look firmly on me,
I have deceived you; Radames lives!

AÏDA: Lives thanks, kind Heaven!

AMNERIS: And still to lie you're ready?
Yes you love him
I love him too, do you not hear?
I am your rival, daughter of Egyptian kings

AÏDA: You, my rival! It's well, so be it!
And I am too
Ah!
What have I said? forgive, and pity,
Ah!
Let this my sorrow your warm heart move.
'It's true I adore him with boundless love you are so happy you are so mighty,
I cannot live apart from love!

AMNERIS: Trema, vil schiava!
spezza il tuo core!
Segnar tuo morte, pùo
quest'amore,
Del tuo destino arbitra sono, d'odio
e vendetta le furie ho in cor.

AÏDA: Tu sei felice, tu sei possente, io vivo solo per quest'amore! Pietà!
pietà!
ti prenda del mio dolor! pietà! pietà! ti prenda dal mio dolor.

AMNERIS: All pompa che si
appresta,
Meco, o schiava, assisterai;
Tu prostrata nella polvere,
Io sul trono, accanto al Re.
Vien mi segui e apprenderai
Se lottar tu puoi con me.

AÏDA: Ah! pietà! che più mi resta?
Un deserto è la mia vita:
Vivi e regna, il tuo furore
Io tra breve placherò.
Questo amore che ti irrita
Nella tomba spegnerò.

SCENA II

Uno degli ingressi della Città di Tebe. Sul davand un gruppo di palme; a destra il Tempio di Ammone; a sinistra un trono sormontato da un baldacchino di porpora; nel fondo una porta trionfale; la scena è ingombra di popolo.

Entra il Re, seguito dai Ministri, Sacerdoti, Capitani, venbelliferi, PortaInsegne, ecc., ecc. Quindi Amneris con Aïda e Schiave. Il Re va a sedere sul trono. Amneris se stessa posto alla sinistra del Re.

POPOLO: Gloria all Egitto e ad
Iside
Che il sacro suol protegge;
Al Re che il Delta ragge
Inni festosi alziam!
Vieni, o guerriero vindice,
Vieni a gioir con noi;
Sul passo degli eroi
I lauri e i fior versiam!

DONNE: S'intrecci il loto al lauro
Sul crin dei vincitori;
Nembo gentil di fiori
Stenda sull' armi un vel.
Danziam, fanciulle Egizie.
Le mistiche carole,
Come d'intorno al sole
Donzano gli astri in ciel!

SACERDOTI: Della vittoria agli arbitri
Supremi il guarde ergete;
Grazie agli Dei rendete
Nel forsunato di.
Così per noi di gloria
Sia l'avvenir segnato,

AMNERIS: Tremble, vile minion! be your heartbroken, Warrant of death this love shall be token,
What may your fate be, I am judge
only,
Hatred and vengeance hold sway in my heart.

AÏDA: You are so happy, you are so mighty,
I cannot live apart from love!
Forgive! forgive!
Let sor row your warm heart move,
forgive! forgive!
Let pity find place in your heart!

AMNERIS: Ah, the pomp which approaches, with me, O slave, you shall assist;
You prostrate in the dust
I on the throne beside the King;
Come, follow me, and you shall learn
If you can contend with me.

AÏDA: Ah pity! What more remains
to me?
My life is a desert;
Live and reign, your rage
I will quickly appease.
This love which angers you
I will extinguish in the tomb.

SCENE II

An entrance to the City of Thebes. In front a group of palms; to the right the Temple of Ammon; to the left a throne surmounted by a purple canopy; at the back a triumphal gate. The scene is crowded with people.

Enter the King, followed by Ministers, Priests, Captains, FanBearers, EnsignBearers, etc., etc. Afterwards Amneris, with Aïda and Slaves. The King seats himself on the throne; Amneris places herself to the left of the King.

PEOPLE: Glory to Egypt, and to Isis,
Who the sacred soil protects;
To the king who rules the Delta
Let us raise festal hymns.
Come, O champion warrior,
Come to rejoice with us;
In the path of the heroes,
Let us strew laurels and flowers.

WOMEN: Weave the lotus with the laurel
On the hair of the conqueror
A sweet shower of the flowers,
Spread on their arms a veil.
Let us dance, daughters of Egypt,
The mystic dances,
As around the sun
Dance the stars of heaven!

PRIESTS: To the supreme arbiters of victory
Raise your eyes;
Render thanks to the gods
On the happy day.
Thus
May the future be marked for us

Nè mai ci colga il fato
Che i barbari colpi.
(Le truppe Egizie precedute dalle fanfare afilano dinanze al Re Seguoni i carri di guerra, le insegne i vasi sacri, le statue degli Dei Un drapello di danzatrici che recano i tesori dei vinti Da ultimo, Radames, sotto un baldacchino portato da dodici Ufficiali.)

IL RE: (che scende dal trono per abbracciare Radames).
Salvator della patria, io ti saluto.
Vieni, e mia figlia di sua man ti porga
Il serto trionfale.
(Radames si inchina davanti Amneris che gli porge la corona.)

IL RE: (a Radames). Ora, a me chiedi
Quanto più brami. Nulla a te negato
Sarà in tal dì lo giuro
Per la corono mia, pei sacri Numi.

RADAMES: Concedi in pria che innanzi a te sien tratti
I prigionier
(Entrano fra le guardie i prigionieri Etiopi, ultimo, Amonasro, vestito da Uffiziale.)

AÏDA: Che veggo? Egli! mia padre!

TUTTI: Suo padre!

AMNERIS: Inpoter nostro!

AÏDA: (abbracciando il padre).
Tu! Prigionier!

AMNERIS: (piano ad Aïda). Non mi tradir!

IL RE: (ad Amonasro). Ti appressa
Dunque tu sei?

AMONASRO: Suo padre Anch' io
pugnai
Vinti noi fummo e morte invancercai.
(Accennando alla divisa che lo veste.)
Questa assisa ch' io vesto vi dica
Che il mio Re, la mia patria ho difeso:
Fu la sorte a nostr' armi nemica
Tornò vano dei forti l'ardir.
Al mio piè nella polve distesto
Giacque il Re da più colpi traffito;
Se l'amor della patria è delitto
Siam rei tutti, siam pronti a morir!
(Volgendosi al Re con accento supplichevole.)
Ma tu, o Re, tu signore possente,
A costoro ti volgi clemente
Oggi noi siam percossi dal fato
Doman voi potria il fato colpir.

AÏDA, PRIGIONIERI E SCHIAVA:
Sì: dal Numi percossi non siamo;
Tua pietà, tua clemenza imploriamo;
Ah! giammai di soffrir vi sia dato
Ciò che in oggi n'è dato soffrir!

with glory,
Nor may that fate seize us
That struck the barbarians.
(The Egyptian troops, preceded by trumpets, defile before the King the chariots of war follow the ensigns the sacred vases and statues of the gods troops of Dancing Girls who carry the treasures of the defeated and lastly Radames, under a canopy borne by twelve Officers.)

KING: (who descends from the throne to embrace Radames). Saviour of your country, I salute you.
Come, and let my daughter with her own hand
Place upon you the triumphal crown.
(Radames bows before Amneris, who places the crown upon him.)

KING: (to Radames). Now ask of me
What you most wish. Nothing denied to you
On such a day shall be I swear it
By my crown, by the sacred gods.

RADAMES: Deign first to let the prisoners
Be drawn up before you.
(Enter between the Guards the Ethiopian prisoners, Amonasro last, dressed as an Officer.)

AÏDA: What do I see? He! my father!

ALL: Her father!

AMNERIS: In our power!

AÏDA: (embracing her father)
Your prisoner!

AMONASRO: (softly to Aïda) Do not betray me!

KING: (to Amonasro). Draw near Then you are?

AMONASRO: Her father. I also fought
Was conquered, and death I sought
in vain.
(Pointing to the uniform in which he is dressed.)
This livery that I wear may tell you That I have defended my king and my country.
Fate was hostile to our arms;
Vain was the courage of the brave.
At my feet in the dust extended Lay the king, transfixed by many wounds;
If the love of country is a crime
We are all criminals all ready to die!
(Turning to the King with a supplicating motion.)
But you, O king, you powerful lord,
Be merciful to those men.
Today we are stricken by Fate,
Tomorrow Fate may smite you.

AÏDA, PRISONERS AND FEMALE SLAVES: Yes; by the gods we are stricken;
Your pity, your mercy we implore;
Ah! May you never have to suffer
What is now given to us to suffer.

RAMFIS E SACERDOTI: Struggi, o Re, queste ciurme feroci, Chiudi il core alle perfide voci,
Fur dai Numi votati alla morte,
Si compisca dei Numi il voler!

POPOLO: Sacerdoti, gli sdegni placate,
L'umil prece dei vinti ascoltate;
E tu, o Re, tu possente, tu forte,
A clemenza dischiudi il pensier.

RADAMES: (fissando Aïda). (Il dolor che in quel volte favella
Al mio sguardo la rende più bella;
Ogni stilla del pianto adorato
Nel mio petto ravviva l'amore.)

AMNERIS: (Quali sguardi sovr' essa ha rivolti!
Di qual fiamma balenano il volti!
E a tal sorte serbata son io?
La vendetta mi rugge nel cor.)

IL RE: Or che fausti ne arridon gli eventi
A costoro mostriamci clementi:
La pietà sale ai Numi gradita
E rafferma dei Prenci il poter.

RADAMES: (al Re). O Re: pei sacri Numi,
Per lo splendore della tua corona.
Compier giurasti il voto mio

IL RE: Giurai.

RADAMES: Ebbene: a te pei prigionieri Etiopi
Vita domando e libertà.

AMNERIS: (Per tutti!)

SACERDOTI: Morte ai nemici della patria!

POPOLO: Grazie
Per gli infelici!

RAMFIS: Ascolta, o Re
(A Radames.)
Tu pure
Giovine eroe, saggio consiglio ascolta:
Son nemici e prodi sono
La vendetta hanno nel cor,
Fatti audaci dal perdono
Correranno all' armi ancor!

RADAMES: Spento Amonasro il re guerrier, non resta
Sperenza ai vinti.

RAMFIS: Almeno,
Arra di pace e securtà fra noi
Resti col padre Aïda
Gli altri sien sciolti

IL RE: Al tuo consiglio io cedo.
Di securità, di pace un miglior pegno or io vuo; darvi Radames, la patria
Tutto a te deve D'Amneris la mano

RAMPHIS AND PRIESTS: Destroy, O king, these savage hordes,
Close your heart to their perfidious voices,
By the gods they were doomed to death,
Let the will of the gods be accomplished.

PEOPLE: Priests, soften your anger,
Hear the humble prayer of the conquered,
And you O king, powerful and strong,
Open your thoughts to mercy.

RADAMES: (fixing his eyes on Aïda). (The sorrow which speaks in that face
Renders it more beautiful to my sight;
Every drop of the beloved tears
Reanimates love in my breast.)

AMNERIS: (What glances on her he turns!
With what flame their faces flash!
To such a fate as this am I destined?
Revenge groans in my heart.)

KING: Now that events smile favor upon us,
To these people let us show ourselves merciful;
Pity ascends grateful to the gods,
And confirms the power of princes.

RADAMES: (to the King). O King! by the sacred gods,
By the splendor of your crown,
You sworest to fulfill my vow?

KING: I swore.

RADAMES: Well; of you for the Ethiopian prisoners,
Life I demand and liberty.

AMNERIS: (For all!)

PRIESTS: Death to the enemies of the country!

PEOPLE: Grace
For the unhappy.

RAMPHIS: Listen, O King,
(To Radames.)
Even you,
Young hero, listen to wise counsel:
They are enemies and they are warriors
They have revenge in their hearts.
Emboldened by your pardon
They will run to arms again.

RADAMES: Amonasro, the warrior king slain,
No hope remains to the vanquished.

RAMPHIS: At least
As an earnest of peace and security, among us
With her father let Aïda remain.
Let the rest be free.

KING: To your counsel I yield.
Of security and peace a better pledge
I will now give: Radames, the country

Premio ti sia. Sovra l'Egitto un giorno
Con essa regnerai

AMNERIS: (Venga or la schiava, Venga a rapirmi l'amor mio se l'osa!)

IL RE: Gloria all' Egitto e ad Iside
Che il sacro suol difende,
S'intrecci il loto al lauro
Sul crin del vincitor!

SACERDOTI: Inni leviamo ad Iside
Che il sacro suol difende;
Preghiam che i fati arridano
Fausti alla patria ognor.

AÏDA: (Qual speme omai più restami?
A lui la gloria e il trono
A me l'oblio le lacrime
Di disperato amor.)

PRIGIONIERI: Gloria al clemente Egizio
Che i nostri ceppi ha sciolto,
Che ci ridona ai liberi
Solchi del patrio suol!

RADAMES: (D'avverso Nume il folgore
Sul capo mio discende
Ah no! d'Egitto il soglio
Non val d'Aïda il cor.)

AMNERIS: (Dall' inatteso giubilo
Inebbriata io sono:
Tutti in un dì si compiono
I sogni del mio cor.)

AMONASRO: (ad Aïda). Fa cor: della tua patria
I lieti eventi aspetta;
Per noi della vendetta
Già prossimo è l'albor.

POPOLO: Gloria all' Egitto e ad Iside
Che il sacro suol difende!
S'intrecci il loto al lauro
Sul crin del vincitor!

FINE DELL' ATTO SECONDO.

ATTO III

Le Rive del Nilo. Roccie di granito fra cui crescono dei palmizii. Sul vertice delle roccie il Tempio d'Iside per metà nascosto tra le fronde. E notte stellata Splendore di luna.

CORO: (nel tempio). O tu che sei d'Osiride
Madre immortale e sposa,
Diva che i casti palpiti
Desti agli amani in cor;
Soccorri a noi pietosa,
Madre d'eterno amor.
(Da una barca che approda alla riva, discendono Amneris, Ramfis, alcune donne coperte da fitto velo e Guardie.)

Owes all to you. The hand of Amneris
Be your reward. Over Egypt one day
With her shall you reign.

AMNERIS: (Now let the slave come Let her come to take my love from me if she dares!)

KING: Glory to Egypt and to Isis,
Who defends the sacred soil,
Weave the lotus with the laurel
On the hair of the victors.

PRIESTS: Hymns let us raise to Isis,
Who the sacred soil defends;
Let us pray that the Fates may ever smile
Propitious on our country.

AÏDA: (What hope more remains to me?
To him glory and the throne.
To me, oblivion the tears
Of hopeless love.)

PRISONERS: Glory to the merciful Egyptian
Who has unloosed our fetters,
Who restores us to the free
Paths of our native land!

RADAMES: (The Thunder of the adverse gods
On my head descends
Ah! no, the throne of Egypt
Is not worth the heart of Aïda.

AMNERIS: (By the unexpected joy
I am intoxicated;
All in one day are fulfilled
The dreams of my heart.)

AMONASRO: (to Aïda). Take heart, for your country
Expects happy events;
For us the dawn of vengeance
Is already near.

PEOPLE: Glory to Egypt and to Isis,
Who defends the sacred soil.
Weave the lotus with the laurel
On the hair of the victors!

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

The Banks of the Nile. Rocks of granite, among which grow palm trees; on the top of the rocks the Temple of Isis, half concealed among the foliage; it is starlight and bright moonlight.

CHORUS: (in the temple). O you who are of Osiris,
Mother immortal and spouse,
Goddess who awakens the beatings
In the heart of human creatures,
Come piteous to our help,
Mother of eternal love.
(From a boat, which approaches the shore, descend Amneris, Ramphis, some Women closely veiled, and Guards.)

RAMFIS: (ad Amneris). Vieni d'Iside al Tempio alla vigilia Della tue nozze, implora Della Diva il favore Iside legge Dei mortali nel cuore ogni mistero Degli umani è a lei noto.	RAMPHIS: (to Amneris) Come to the Temple of Isis. On the eve of your nuptials implore The favor of the goddess. Isis rules The heart of mortals; every mystery Of mankind to her is known.
AMNERIS: Sì: pregherò che Radames mi doni Tutto il suo cor, come il mio core a lui Sacro è per sempre.	AMNERIS: Yes: I will pray that Radames may give me His whole heart, as mine to him Is consecrated forever.
RAMFIS: Pregherai fino all' alba io sarò teco. (Tutti entrano nel tempio. Il Coro ripete il canto sacro.)	RAMPHIS: Let us enter. You shall pray till dawn. I shall be with you (All enter the temple. The Chorus repeat the sacred song.)
AÏDA: (entra cautamente coperta da un velo). Qui Ramamès verrà Che vorrà dirmi? Io tremo Ah! se tu vieni A recarmi, o crudel, l'ultimo addio, Del Nilo i cupi vortici Mi daran tomba e pace forse e oblie.	AÏDA: (entering cautiously, covered with a veil). Here Radames will come. What would he say to me? I tremble ah, you come. To give me, O cruel one, the last farewell, The deep water of the Nile Shall give me a tomb and peace perhaps and oblivion.
AÏDA: O patria mia, mai più, mai più ti rivedrò! mai più! mai più! ti rivedrò! O cieli azzurri o dolci aure native, dove sereno il mio mattin brillò, o verdi colli o profumate rive, o patria mia, mai più ti rivedrò! O patri mia, mai più, ah mai più mai più ti rivedro! o patria mia, oh patria mia, mai più rivedro! mai più! no, no, mai più, mai più! O fresche valli o questo asil beato, che un di promesso dall'amor mi fù Or che d'amore il sogno è di le quato, o patria mia, non ti vedrò mai più! oh patria mia, non ti vedrò mai più, no, mai più, non ti vedrò, non ti vedrò mai più! oh, patria mia, mai più ti rivedrò!	AÏDA: O native land, no more to you shall I return! no more! no more to you return! O skies of tender blue, O soft airs blowing, Where calm and peaceful my dawn of life passed over O hills of verdure, O perfumed waters flowing, O beloved home. I never shall see you again! O beloved home, no more, ah, no more, never more shall I return! O native land, O beloved home, I shall no more return! O fresh and fragrant vales, O quiet dwelling, that bore promise of happy days of love, Now hope is banished, love's tender dream dispelling, O native land, no more shall I return!
AÏDA: (Amonasro e Aïda.) Cielo! mio padre!	AÏDA: (Enter Amonasro.) Heaven! My father!
AMONASRO: A te grave cagione Mi adduce, Aïda. Nulla sfugge al mio Sguardo D'amor ti struggi Per Radames ei t'ama e qui lo attendi. Dei Faraon la figlia è tua rivale Razza infame, aborrita e a noi fatale!	AMONASRO: Grave occasion Leads me to you Aïda. Nothing escapes My sight; you are destroying yourself with love For Radames. He loves you, and here you await him, The daughter of the Pharaohs is your rival An infamous race, abhorred and fatal to us.
AÏDA: E in suo potere io sto! Io d'Amonasro Figlia!	AÏDA: And I am in her power! I, the daughter of Amonasro.
AMONASRO: In poter di lei! No! se lo brami La possente rival tu vincerai, E patria, e trono, e amor, tutto avrai. Rivedrai le foreste imbalsamate, Le fresche valli, i nostri templi d'ôr	AMONASRO: In her power! No! If you wish This powerful rival, you shall defeat, And country, and throne, and love all shall be yours. You shall see again the balmy forests, The fresh valleys, our temples of gold!
AÏDA: (con trasporto). Rivedrò le foreste imbalsamate Le nostre valli i nostri tempii d'ôr!	AÏDA: (with transport). I shall see again the balmy forests, Our valleys, our temples of gold!
AMONASRO: Sposa felice a lui che amasti tanto, Tripudii immensi ivi potrai gioir	AMONASRO: Happy bride of him who you love so much, Great jubilee then shall be yours.
AÏDA: (con trasporto) Un'giorno solo di si dolce incanto. Un'ora di tal gaudio e poi morir!	AÏDA: (with transport). One day only of such sweet enchantment, One hour of such joy and then to die!
AMONASRO: Pur rammenti che a noi l'Egizio immite, Le case, i tempii e l'are profanò Trasse in ceppi le vergini rapite Madri, vecchi e fanciulli ei trucidè.	AMONASRO: Nevertheless you remember that the merciless Egyptian Profaned our houses, temples, and altars; He drew in fetters the ravished virgins Mothers, old men and children he has slain.
AÏDA: Ah! ben rammento quegli infausti giorni Rammento i lutti che il mio cor soffri Deh! fate o Numi che per noi ritorni L'alba invocata dei sereni dì.	AÏDA: Ah! well I remember those unhappy days. I remember the grief that my heart suffered. Ah! make return to us, O gods, The longedfor dawn of peaceful days.
AMONASRO: Non fia che tardi In armi ora si desta Il popol nostro tutto e pronto già Vittoria avrem Solo a saper mi resta Qual sentier il nemico seguirà	AMONASRO: Delay not. In arms now are roused Our people everything is ready We shall have victory. It only remains for me to know What path the enemy will follow.
AÏDA: Chi scoprirlo potria? chi mai?	AÏDA: Who will be able to discover it? Who?
AMONASRO: Tu stessa!	AMONASRO: You, alone!
AÏDA: Io!	AÏDA: I?
AMONASRO: Radamès so che qui attendi Ei t'ama Ei conduce gli Egizii Intendi?	AMONASRO: Radames will come here soon he loves you! He leads the Egyptians. Do you understand?
AÏDA: Orrore! Che mi consigli tu? No, no, giammai!	AÏDA: Horror! What do you counsel me? No, no! Never!
AMONASRO: (con impeto selvaggio). Su, dunque! sorgete Egizie coorti! Col fuoco struggete Le nostre città Spargete il terrore, Le stragi' le morti Al vostro furore Più freno non v'ha.	AMONASRO: (with savage fury.) Up, then! Rise, Egyptian legions! With fire destroy Our cities Spread terror, Carnage and death. To your fury There is no longer check.
AÏDA: Ah padre!	AÏDA: Ah, father!
AMONASRO: (respingendola). Mia figlia Ti chiami!	AMONASRO: (repulsing her). My daughter do you call yourself?
AÏDA: (atterrita e supplichevole). Pietà!	AÏDA: (terrified and beseeching). Pity!
AMONASRO: Flutti di sangue scorrono Sulle città dei vinti Vedi? dai negri vortici Si lebano gli estinti Ti additan essi e gridano: "Per te la patria muor."	AMONASRO: Rivers of blood pour On the cities of the vanquished Do you see? From the black gulfs The dead are raised To you they point and cry; "For you the country dies."

AÏDA: Pietà!

AMONASRO: Una larva orribile
Fra l'ombre a moi s'affaccia
Trema! le scarne braccia
Sul capo tuo levò
Tua madre ell'è ravvisala
Ti maledice

AÏDA: (nel massimo terrore). Ah, no!
Padre.

AMONASRO: (respingendola). Va, indegna! non sei mia figlia!
Dei Faraoni tu sei la schiava.

AÏDA: Padre, a costoro schiava io non sono
Non maledirmi non imprecarmi
Tua figlia ancora potrai chiamarmi
Della mia patria degna sarò.

AMONASRO: Pensa che un popolo, vinto, straziato
Per te soltanto risorger può

AÏDA: O patria! o patria quanto mi costi!

AMONASRO: Corraggio! ci giunge là tutto udrò
(Si nasconde fra i palmizii.)
(Radames e Aïda.)

RADAMES: Pur ti riveggo, mia dolce AÏDA

AÏDA: Ti arresta, vanne che speri ancor?

RADAMES: A te dappresso l'amor mi guida.

AÏDA: Te i riti attendono d'un altro amor.
D'Amneris sposo

RADAMES: Che parli mai?
Te sola, Aïda, te deggio amar.
Gli Dei mi ascoltano tu mia sarei

AÏDA: D'uno spergiuro non ti machiar?
Prode t'amai, non t'amerei spergiuro.

RADAMES: Dell' amor mio dubiti. Aïda?

AÏDA: E come
Speri sottrarti d'Amneris ai vezzi,
Del Re al voler, del tuo popolo ai voti,
Dei sacerdoti all' ira?

RADAMES: Odimi, Aïda.
Nel fiero anelito di nuova guerra
Il suolo Etiope si ridestò
I tuoi già invadono la nostra terra,
Io degli Egizii duce sarò.
Fra il suon, fra i plausi della vittoria,
Al re mi prostro, gli svelo il cor
Sarai tu il serto della mia gloria,
Vivrem beati d'eterno amor.

AÏDA: Pity!

AMONASRO: A horrible ghost
Among the shadows to us approaches
Tremble! the fleshless arms
Over your head it raised
It is your mother recognize her
She curses you.

AÏDA: (in the greatest terror). Ah, No!
Father.

AMONASRO: (repulsing her). Go, unworthy one! You're not my offspring
You are the slave of the Pharaohs!

AÏDA: Father, I am not their slave
Reproach me not curse me not;
Your daughter again you can call me
I will be worthy of my country.

AMONASRO: Think that a people conquered, torn to pieces,
Through you alone can arise

AÏDA: O my country, O my country how much you've cost me!

AMONASRO: Courage! he comes there I shall hear all.
(Conceals himself among the palm trees.)
(Enters Radames.)

RADAMES: I see you again, my sweet Aïda.

AÏDA: Stop! begone. What, you still hope?

RADAMES: Love guided me to you.

AÏDA: The rites of another love await you.
Spouse of Amneris.

RADAMES: What did you say?
You alone, Aïda, must I love.
Hear me, gods! You shall be mine!

AÏDA: Do not stain yourself with perjury.
Valiant I loved you; foresworn I should not love you.

RADAMES: Do you doubt my love, Aïda?

AÏDA: And how do you hope to free yourself from the love of Amneris,
From the King's will, from the vows of your people,
From the wrath of the priests?

RADAMES: Hear me, Aïda.
To the fierce pant of a new war
The land of Ethiopia has reawakened
Your people already invade our country.
I shall be leader of the Egyptians.
Amid the fame, the applause of victory,
I prostrate myself before the King, I unveil to him my heart.
You shall be the reward of my glory,
We shall live blessed by eternal love.

AÏDA: Nè d'Amneris paventi
Il vindice furor? la sua vendetta,
Come folgor tremenda
Cadrà su me, sul padre mio, su tutti.

RADAMES: Io vi difendo.

AÏDA: Invan tu nol potresti
Pur se tu m'ami ancor s'apre una vìa
Di scampo a noi

RADAMES: Quale?

AÏDA: Fuggire

RADAMES: Fuggire!

AÏDA: Fuggaim gli ardori i nos piti
Di queste lande ignuda; Una novella patria, nostro amor si schiude. Là tra foreste vergini, Di fiori progumate, in estasi beate la terra scorderem, in e stasi, in e stasi
la terra scorderem,

RADAMES: Sovra una terra estrania teco fuggir dovrei!
abbandonar la patria l'are de' nostri Dei! il suol dov' io raccolsi di gloria i primi allori;
il ciel de nostri amori
come scordar potrem?

AÏDA: La tra foresti vergini,
di fiori progumate,
in estasi beate
la terra scorderem,
in estasi, in estasi
la terra scorderem

RADAMES: Il ciel di nostri amori
come scordar potrem?

AÏDA: Sotto il mio ciel, più libere
l'amore ne fia concesso,
i vi nel tempio i stesso gli stessi Nu mi avrem
i vi nel tempio i stesso gli stessi Nu mi avrem,
I vi nel tempio i stesso gli stessi Nu mi avrem; fuggiam, fuggiam!

RADAMES: (esitante). Aïda!

AÏDA: Tu non m'ami Va!

RADAMES: Non t'amo!
Mortal giammi nè Dio
Arse d'amore al par del mio possente.

AÏDA: Va va ti attende all' ara
Amneris

RADAMES: No! giammai!

AÏDA: Giammai, dicesti?
Allor piombi la scure
Su me, sul padre mio

RADAMES: Ah no! fuggiamo!
(Con appassionata risoluzione.)
Sì: fuggiamo da queste mura,
Al deserto inseim fuggiamo;
Qui sol regna la sventura,
Là si schiude un ciel d'amor.
I deserti interminati

AÏDA: Do you not fear Amneris and
Her vindictive fury? Her revenge,
Like a dreadful thunderbolt,
Will fall on me, on my father, on all.

RADAMES: I protect you.

AÏDA: In vain! You could not
Still if you love me again a way
Of escape opens to us.

RADAMES: Which?

AÏDA: To fly!

RADAMES: To fly!

AÏDA: Ah! fly with me, and leave behind
These deserts bare and blighted;
Some country, new and fresh to find,
Where we may love united.
There amid the virgin forestgroves,
By fair and sweet flowers scented,
In quiet joy contented,
The world will we forget, in quiet joy, in quiet joy,
The world will we forget,

RADAMES: To some strange land far distant
Must I then with you fly!
Our home and country leaving,
Our gods and altars high!
The soil where first I gathered
The bays that deeds requited,
The sky our love that lighted,
How can we ever forget?

AÏDA: There beneath the virgin forest groves,
By fair and sweet flowers scented,
In quiet joy contented
The world will we forget,
In quiet joy, in quiet joy
The world will we forget,

RADAMES: The sky our love that lighted How can we ever forget?

AÏDA: Beneath my sky more light and free
Love's generous aid confiding;
In temples there abiding,
Gods like your own we'll find,
In temples there abiding,
The selfsame gods we'll find,
In temples there abiding the selfsame gods we'll find, then fly! ah! fly!

RADAMES: (hesitating). Aïda!

AÏDA: You do not love me go!

RADAMES: I do not love you?
Never mortal, nor god,
Burnt with love so powerful as mine!

AÏDA: Go, go! Amneris awaits you
At the altar.

RADAMES: No, never!

AÏDA: Never, you said?
Then falls the axe
On me, on my father.

RADAMES: Ah, no, let us fly!
(With impassioned resolution.)
Yes; let us fly from these walls,
To the desert let us fly together;
Here misfortune reigns alone.
There opens to us a heaven of love.
The boundless deserts

A noi talamo saranno,
Su noi gli astri brilleranno.
Di più limpido fulgor.

AÏDA: Nella terra avventurata
De' miei padri, il ciel ne attende;
ivi l'aura è imbalsamata,
Ivi il suolo è aromi e fior.
Fresche valli e verdi prati
A noi talamo saranno,
Su noi gli astri brilleranno.
Di più limpido fulgor.

AÏDA ET RADAMES: Vieni meco insiem fuggiamo
Questa terra di dolor
Vieni meco io t'amo, io t'amo!
A noi duce fia l'amor!
(Si allontanano rapidamente.)

AÏDA: (arrestandosi all' improvviso). Ma, dimmi; per qual via Eviterem le schiere
Degli armati?

RADAMES: Il sentier scelto dai nostri
A piombar sul nemico fia deserto
Fino a domani

AÏDA: E quel sentier?

RADAMES: Le gole
Di Nàpata?
(Amonasro e Aïda e Radames.)

AMONASRO: Di Nâpata le gole!
Ivi saranno i miei

RADAMES: Oh! chi ci ascolta?

AMONASRO: D'Aïda il padre e degli Etiopi il Re.

RADAMES: (agitatissimo). Tu! Amonasro! Tu il Re?
Numi! che dissi?
No! non è ver! sogno delirio è questo

AÏDA: Ah, no! ti calma ascoltami,
All' amor mio t'affida.

AMONASRO: A te l'amor d'Aïda
Un soglio innalzerà!

RADAMES: Per te tradii la patria!
Io son disonorato

AMONASRO: No: tu non sei colpevole
Era voler del fato.
Vieni: oltra il Nil ne attendono
I prodi a noi devoti,
Là del tuo core i voti
coronerà l'amor.
(Amneris, dal tempio, indi Ramfis, Sacerdoti, Guardie e detti.)

AMNERIS: Traditor!

AÏDA: La mia rivale!

AMONASRO: (avventandosi ad Amneris con un pugnale). Vieni a strugger l'opre mia!
Muori!

Shall be our nuptial couch,
On us the stars will shine
With a more limpid effulgence.

AÏDA: In the happy land
Of my fathers heaven awaits us;
There the air is perfumed,
There the ground is fragrant with flowers.
Fresh valleys and green fields
Shall be our nuptial couch,
On us the stars will shine
With a more limpid effulgence.

AÏDA AND RADAMES: Come with me together let us fly
This land of grief.
Come with me I love you, I love you!
Love shall be our leader.
(They go rapidly aside.)
(stopping suddenly.)

AÏDA: But tell me by what road
Shall we avoid the armed hosts?

RADAMES: The path chosen by our troops
To fall on the enemy will be deserted
Until tomorrow.

AÏDA: And that path?

RADAMES: The Pass
Of Napata.
(Enter Amonasro.)

AMONASRO: The Pass of Napata!
There my people shall be.

RADAMES: Oh! who hears us?

AMONASRO: The father of Aïda and King of the Ethiopians.
(greatly agitated).

RADAMES: You Amonasro! You, the King! Gods, what did I say?
No! It is not true! I dream this is delirium.

AÏDA: Ah no! calm yourself listen to me,
Trust yourself in my love.

AMONASRO: Aïda's love shall raise you
To a throne.

RADAMES: For you to betray my country!
I am dishonored.

AMONASRO: No; you are not guilty
It was the will of fate.
Come; beyond the Nile await us
The brave men devoted to us;
There the vows of your heart
Shall be crowned with love.
(Enter Amneris from the Temple, then Ramphis, Priests and Guards.)

AMNERIS: Traitor!

AÏDA: My rival!

AMONASRO: (rushing upon Amneris with a dagger). Come you to destroy my work?
Die!

RADAMES: (frapponendosi). Arresta, insano!

AMONASRO: Oh rabbia!

RAMFIS: Guardie, olà.

RADAMES: (ad Aïda e Amonasro) Presto! fuggite!

AMONASRO: (transciando Aïda). Vieni, o figlia!

RAMFIS: (alle Guardie). Li inseguite!

RADAMES: (a Ramfis). Sacerdote, io resto a te.

FINE DELL' ATTO TERZO.

ATTO IV

SCENA I

Sala nel Palazzo del Re. Alla sinistra, una gran porta che mette alla sala sotterranea della sentenze. Andite a destra che conduce alla prigione di Radames.

AMNERIS: (mes'amente atteggiata davanti la porta del sotterranea). L'abborrita rivale a me sfuggia
Dai sacerdoti Radamès attende
Dei traditor la pena, Traditore
Egli non è Pur rivelò di guerra
L'alto segreto egli fuggir volea
Con lei fuggire Traditori tutti!
A morte! A morte! Oh! che mai parlo? Io l'amo,
Io l'amo sempre Disperato, insano
E quest' amor che la mia vita strugge.
Oh! s'ei potesse amarmi!
Vorrei salvarlo E come?
Si tenti! Guardie: Radamès qui venga.
(Radames condotto dalle guardie, e Amneris.)

AMNERIS: Già i sacerdoti adunansi
Arbitri del tuo fato;
Pur della accusa orribile
Scolparti ancor ti è dato:
Ti scolpa, e la tua grazia
Io pregherò dal trono,
E nunzia di perdono,
Di vita, a te sarò.

RADAMES: Di mie discolpe i giudici
Mai non udran l'accento;
Dinanzi ai Numi e agli uomini
Nè vil, nè reo mi sento.
Profferse il labbro incauto
Fatal segreto, è vero,
Ma puro il mio pensiero
E 'l onore mio restò.

AMNERIS: Salvati dunque e scolpati.

RADAMES: No.

AMNERIS: Tu morrai

RADAMES: (interposing himself). Stop, madman!

AMONASRO: Oh, fury!

RAMPHIS: Guards, hither!

RADAMES: (to Aïda and Amonasro). Haste! fly!

AMONASRO: (drawing Aïda away). Come, O daughter!

RAMPHIS: (to the Guards). Follow them!

RADAMES: (to Ramphis). Priest, I remain with you.

END OF THE THIRD ACT.

ACT IV

SCENE I

Hall in the King's Palace; to the left a grand gate, which opens on the subterranean hall of judgment; passage to the right which leads to the prison of Radames.

AMNERIS: (in a sad attitude before the gate of the hall). My abhorred rival escapes me
Radames awaits from the priests
The punishment of a traitor. Traitor
He is not, though he revealed
The high secret of war. He wished to fly
To fly with her traitors all!
To death, to death! Oh, what did I say? I love him
I love him always desperate, mad
Is this love which destroys my live.
Oh! if he could love me!
I would save him and how?
Let me try. Guards: Radames comes.
(Enter Radames, guarded.)

AMNERIS: Already the priests assemble.
Arbiters of thy fate;
Of the horrible crime however
Still it is given you to exculpate yourself.
Exculpate yourself, and grace for you
I will beg from the throne;
And a messenger of pardon
Of life, to you I will be.

RADAMES: Of my exculpation the judges
Will never hear the sound.
Before gods and men
Neither vile nor guilty do I feel.
My incautious lips
Uttered the fatal secret, it is true,
But pure my thought
And my honor remained.

AMNERIS: Then save and exculpate yourself.

RADAMES: No.

AMNERIS: You will die.

RADAMES: La vita
Abhorro; d'ogni gaudio
La fonte inaridita,
Svanita ogni speranza,
Sol bramo di morir

AMNERIS: Morire! ah! tu dei vivere!
Si, all' amor mio vivrai;
Per te le angoscie orribili
Di morte io già provai;
T'amai, soffersi tanto
Vegliai le notti in pianto
E patria, e trono, e vita
Tutto darei per te

RADAMES: Per essa anch' io la patria
E l'onor mio tradiva

AMNERIS: Di lei non più!

RADAMES: L'infamia
Mi attende e vuoi che io viva?
Misero appien mi festi,
Aïda a me togliesti,
Spenta l' hai forse e in dono
Offri la vita a me?

AMNERIS: Io di sua morte origine!
No! vive Aïda

RADAMES: Vive!

AMNERIS: Nei disperati aneliti
Dell' orde fuggitive
Sol cadde il padre

RADAMES: Ed ella?

AMNERIS: Sparve, nè più novella
S'ebbe

RADAMES: Gli Dei l'adducano
Salve alle patrie mura,
E ignori la sventura
Di chi per lei morrà!

AMNERIS: Or, s'io ti salvo, giurami
Che più non la vedrai

RADAMES: Nol posso!

AMNERIS: A lei rinunzia
Per sempre e tu vivra

RADAMES: Nol posso!

AMNERIS: Anco una volta
A lei rinunzia

RADAMES: E vano

AMNERIS: Morir vuoi dunque, insano?

RADAMES: Pronto a morir son già.

AMNERIS: Chi ti salva, o sciagurato,
Dalla sorte che ti aspetta?
In furore hai tu cangiato
Un amor ch' equel non ha.
De' miei pianti la vendetta
Ora il cielo compirà.

RADAMES: E la morte un ben supremo
Se per lei morir m' è dato:
Nel subir l'estremo fato
Gaudii immensi il core avrà;
L'ira umana io più non temo,
Temo sol la tua pietà.
(Radames parte circondato dalle Guardia.)

RADAMES: Life
I abhor; the font
Of every joy dried up,
Every hope vanished,
I wish only to die.

AMNERIS: To die! Ah; you should live!
Yes, for my love you shall live;
For you I have undergone
The dreadful anguish of death.
I loved you I suffered so much
I watched through the nights in tears.
Country and throne and life
All I would give for you.

RADAMES: For her I too betrayed
The country and my honor.

AMNERIS: Of her no more

RADAMES: Infamy
Awaits me, and you wish that I live?
You made me utterly wretched;
Aïda you have taken from me;
Killed her perhaps! And for a gift
You offer life to me?

AMNERIS: I the cause of her death?
No! Aïda lives!

RADAMES: Lives?

AMNERIS: In the desperate struggle
Of the fugitive hordes
Fell her father alone

RADAMES: And she?

AMNERIS: She disappeared, nor had we more news.

RADAMES: May the gods lead her
Safe to her native walls,
And let her not know the unhappy fate
Of him who will die for her.

AMNERIS: Now, if I save you, swear to me
That you will not see her more.

RADAMES: I cannot do it!

AMNERIS: Renounce her
Forever, and you shall live!

RADAMES: I cannot do it!

AMNERIS: Yet, once more;
Renounce her!

RADAMES: It is in vain!

AMNERIS: Would you die, then, madman?

RADAMES: I am ready to die.

AMNERIS: Who saves you, O wretch,
From the fate that awaits you?
To fury have you changed
A love that had no equal.
Revenge for my tears
Heaven will now consummate.

RADAMES: Death is a supreme blessing,
If for her it is given me to die;
In undergoing the last extremity
My heart will feel great joy.
Human anger I fear no more,
I fear only your pity.
(Exit Radames, surrounded by Guards.)

AMNERIS: (cade desolata su un sedile). Ohimè! Morir mi sento Oh! chi lo salva?
E in poter di costoro
Io stessa lo gettai! Ora, a te impreco
Atroce gelosia, che la sua morte
E il lutto eterno del mio cor segnasti!
(Si volge e vede il Sacerdoti che attraversano la scena per entrare nel sotterraneo.)
Che veggo! Ecco i fatali
Gli inesorati ministri di morte
Oh! ch' io non veggo quelle bianche larve!
(Si copre il bolto colle mani.)

SACERDOTI: (nel sotterraneo).
Spirito de l'Nume sovra noi discendi!
Ne avviva al raggio dell' eterna luce;
Pel labbro nostro tua giustizia apprendi.

AMNERIS: Numi, pietà del mio straziato core
Egli è innocente, lo salvate, o Numi!
Disperato, tremendo è il mio dolore!
(Radames, fra le Guardie, attraversa la scena e scende nel sotterraneo Amneris al vederlo, mette un grido.)

RAMFIS: (nel sotterraneo). Radamès Radamès: tu rivelasti
Della patria i segretti allo straniero

SACERDOTI: Discólpati!

RAMFIS: Egli tace

TUTTI: Traditor!

RAMFIS: Radamès, Radamès: tu disertasti
Dal campo il dì che precedea la pugna.

SACERDOTI: Discólpati!

RAMFIS: Egli tace

TUTTI: Traditor!

RAMFIS: Radamès, Radamès: tua fè violasti,
Alla patria spergiuro, al Re, all' onor.

SACERDOTI: Discólpati!

RAMFIS: Egli tace

TUTTI: Traditor!
Radamès è deciso il tuo fato;
Degli infami la morte, tu avrai;
Sotto l'ara del Nume sdegnato
A te vivo fia schiuso l'avel.

AMNERIS: A lui vivo la tomba Oh! gli infami!
Nè di sangue son paghi giammai
E si chiaman ministri del ciel!
(Investendo i Sacerdoti che escono die sotterraneo.)
Sacerdoti: compiste un delitto
Tigri infami di sangue assetate
Voi le terra ed i Numi eltraggiate

AMNERIS: (falls desolate on a seat). Ah me! I feel myself dying.
Oh! who will save him?
And in their power
I myself threw him. Now I curse you,
Atrocious jealousy, who did cause his death
And the eternal grief of my heart!
(Turns and sees the Priests, who cross the stage to enter the subterranean hall.)
What do I see? Behold the fatal,
The merciless ministers of death!
Oh, that I might not see those white ghosts!
(Covers her face in her hands.)

PRIESTS: (in the subterranean hall). Spirit of the gods descend upon us!
Awaken us to the ray of your eternal light:
By our lips make your justice known.

AMNERIS: Gods, pity my torn heart.
He is innocent; save him, O gods!
Desperate, tremendous is my sorrow!
(Radames, between Guards, crosses the stage and descends to the subterranean hall Amneris on seeing him utters a cry.)

RAMPHIS: (in the subterranean hall). Radames, Radames: you did reveal
The country's secrets to the foreigner.

PRIESTS: Defend yourself!

RAMPHIS: He is silent.

ALL: Traitor!

RAMPHIS: Radames, Radames: you did desert
From the camp the day preceding the battle.

PRIESTS: Defend yourself!

RAMPHIS: He is silent.

ALL: Traitor!

RAMPHIS: Radames, Radames: you broke your faith, Foresworn to your country, king and honor.

PRIESTS: Defend yourself!

RAMPHIS: He is silent.

ALL: Traitor!
Radames your fate is decided:
You shall die the death of the infamous.
Under the altar of the angered god
To you alive be opened the tomb.

AMNERIS: To him alive the tomb!
Oh the infamous wretches!
Never satisfied with blood:
And then call themselves ministers of heaven!
(Attacking the Priests, who issue from the subterranean hall.)
Priests, you have done a wicked deed

Voi punite chi colpa non ha.

SACERDOTI: E traditor! morrà.

AMNERIS: (a Ramfis). Sacerdote! quest' uomo che uccidi,
Tu lo sai da me un giorno fu amato
L'anatéma d'un core straziato
Col suo sangue su te ricardrà!

SACERDOTI: E traditor! morrà.
(Si allontanano lentamente.)

AMNERIS: Empia razza! anatéma! su voi!
La vendetta del ciel scenderà!
(Esce disperata.)

SCENA II

La Scena è divisa in due piani. Il piano superiore rappresenta l'interno del Tempio di Vulcano splendente d'oro e di luce; il piano inferiore un sotterraneo. Lunghe file d'arcate si perdono nell' oscurità. Statue colossali d'Osiride colle mani incrociate sestengono i pilastri della volta.

Radames è nel sotteraneo sui gradini della scala per cui è disceso Al di sopra, due Sacerdoti intenti a chiudere la pietra del sotterraneo.

RADAMES: La fatal pietra sovra me si chiuse
Ecco la tomba mia. Del dì la luce
Più non vedrò Non rivedò più Aïda
Aïda, ove sei tu? Possa tu almeno
Viver felice e la mia sorte orrenda
Sempre ignorar! Qual gemito! Una larva
Una vision No; forma umana è questa Cielo! Aïda!

AÏDA: Son io

RADAMES: Tu in questa tomba!

AÏDA: Presago il core della tua condanna,
In questa tomba che per te si apriva
Io penetrai furtiva
E qui lontana da ogni umano sguardo
Nelle tue braccia desiair morire.

Infamous tigers! thirsting for blood;
You outrage earth and gods.
You punish him who has done no wrong.

PRIESTS: He is a traitor! he shall die.

AMNERIS: (to Ramphis). Priest, this man who you slay
You know it was loved by me.
The curse of a broken heart,
With his blood, will recoil on you!

PRIESTS: He is a traitor! He shall die!
(They withdraw slowly.)

AMNERIS: Impious band anathema! On you
The vengeance of heaven will fall!
(Exit in despair.)

SCENE II

The Scene is divided into two floors. The upper floor represents the Interior of the Temple of Vulcan, resplendent with light and gold; the lower floor a subterranean hall; long rows of arcades which are lost in the darkness; colossal statue of Osiris, with the hands crossed, sustains the pilasters of the vault.

Radames is in the subterranean hall, on the steps of the staircase by which he has descended; above, two Priests, engaged in closing the stone over the subterranean entrance.

RADAMES: The fatal stone is closed above me
Behold my tomb. The light of day
I shall see no more. I shall no more see Aïda.
Aïda, where are you? May you at least
Live happy, and my dreadful fate
Never know. What a groan! A ghost!
A vision No, it is a human shape
Heavens! Aïda!

AÏDA: It is I.

RADAMES: You in this tomb?

AÏDA: My heart, prophetic of your sentence,
Into this tomb which opened itself for you
I made my furtive way.
And here afar from every human glance
In your arms I wished to die.

RADAMES: Morir! si pura e bella!
Morir per me d'amore
Degli anni tuoi nel fiore
Fuggir la vita!
T'aveva il cielo per l'amor creata,
Ed io t'uccido per averti amata!
No, non morrai!
Troppo io t'amai!
Troppo sei bella!

AÏDA: (vaneggiando). Vedi? di morte l'angelo
Radiante a noi si appressa
Ne adduce a eterni gaudii
Sovra i suoi vanni d'ôr.
Su noi già il ciel dischiudersi
Ivi ogni affanno cessa
Ivi comincia l'estasi
D'un immortale amor.
(Canti e danze della Sacerdotesse nel Tempio.)

AÏDA: Triste canto!

RADAMES: Il tripudio
Dei Sacerdoti

AÏDA: Il nostro inno di morte

RADAMES: (cercando di smuovere la pietra del sotteraneo). Nè le mie forti braccia Smuovere ti potranno o fatal pietra!

AÏDA: Invan! tutto è finito
Sulla terra per noi

RADAMES: (con desolata rassegnazione). E vero! è vero!
(Si avvicina ad Aïda e la sorrege.)

AÏDA ET RADAMES: O terra, addio; addio valle di pianti
Sogno di gaudio che in dolor svani
A noi si schiude il cielo, e l'alme erranti
Volano al raggio dell' eterno di.
(Aïda cade dolcemente fra le braccia di Radames.)
(Amneris in abito di lutto apparisce nel Tempio e va à prostrarsi sulla pietra che chiude il sotterraneo.)

AMNERIS: Pace t'imploro salma adorata
Isi placata ti schiuda il ciel!

FINE.

RADAMES: To die! So pure and beautiful!
To die for love of me;
In the flower of your youth
To fly from life!
Heaven created you for love,
And I kill you by having loved you!
No, you shall not die!
Too much I loved you
You are too beautiful.

AÏDA: (raving). Do you see the angel of death approaches
Radiant to us?
He takes us to eternal joys
Under his golden pinions.
Above us heaven has already opened;
There every grief ceases;
There begins the ecstasy
Of an immortal love.
(Songs and dances of the Priestesses in the Temple.)

AÏDA: Sad song!

RADAMES: The jubilee
Of the priests!

AÏDA: Our hymn of death . . . .

RADAMES: (trying to move the stone of the vault.) My strong arms
Cannot move you, O fatal stone!

AÏDA: It is vain all is over
For us on earth.

RADAMES: (with desperate resignation). It is true it is true!
(Goes to Aïda and supports her.)

AÏDA AND RADAMES: O earth farewell! Farewell, vale of tears Dream of joy which vanished in grief.
Heaven opens itself to us, and the wandering souls
Fly to the rays of eternal day.
(Aïda falls gently into the arms of Radames.)
(Amneris in mourning robes appears in the temple, and goes to prostrate herself on the stone which closes the vault.)

AMNERIS: Peace I pray for you, O adored corse;
Isis appeased, may she unclose heaven to you!

THE END.

Othello (1887)

MUSIC BY GIUSEPPE VERDI ■ LIBRETTO BY ARRIGO BOITO

This four-act opera, set to a libretto by Arrigo Boito (based on Shakespeare's tragedy), premiered at the Teatro alla Scala in Milan on February 5, 1887. A violent storm rages at sea, but Otello, a Moor and the Venetian governor of Cyprus, reaches the harbor in safety and announces Venetian victory over the Turkish fleet. The people celebrate; Iago, Otello's ensign who despises Otello for promoting Cassio over him, plots his revenge. He tells Roderigo, who is in love with Desdemona, Otello's wife, that Cassio is also in love with her. He gets Cassio drunk and the two men fight; Cassio wounds Mantano, the former governor. Iago falsely informs his master of the events that have transpired, causing Cassio's dismissal. Desdemona and Otello sing a love duet. Iago convinces Cassio that Desdemona is pleading on his behalf. He then makes Otello think that Cassio and Desdemona are having a secret affair: She comes to Otello and tries to defend Cassio; Otello grows jealous. Iago's wife, Emilia, brings him a handkerchief that Otello has given Desdemona; Iago claims he has seen it in Cassio's hands. Otello swears revenge. Desdemona pleads once again for Cassio. Otello asks her to show him the handkerchief he gave to her but she cannot produce it; he accuses her of infidelity. Iago gets Otello to overhear him and Cassio talking about a prostitute. Otello thinks that they are discussing his wife. Otello sees Cassio toying with the handkerchief and decides to kill Desdemona. The Venetian ambassadors announce that Otello is to be recalled to Venice, to be replaced by Cassio. Otello, enraged, throws Desdemona to the ground. Iago persuades Roderigo to kill Cassio. Otello curses his wife. Desdemona prepares for bed with the assistance of Emilia. Upset by Otello's behavior, she recounts the story of her maid who was left by the man she loved. Otello enters as she finishes praying; accusing her of deception, he smothers her despite her protestations of innocence. Emilia rushes in and informs him that Roderigo died while trying to kill Cassio. She sees Desdemona's lifeless body and accuses Otello of killing an innocent woman, exposing Iago's plot. Iago escapes while Otello, realizing his mistake, stabs himself, kissing his wife for the last time as he dies.

■ ATTO PRIMO	■ ACT I
L'esterno del castello. Una taverna con pergolato. Gli spaldi nel fondo e il mare. È sera. Lampi, tuoni, uragano.	Outside the Castle. A tavern with an arbor. In the background a quay and the sea. It is evening. Lightning, thunder, hurricane.
SCENA I	SCENE I
Jago, Roderigo, Cassio, Montano, più tardi Otello. Cipriotti e soldati veneti.	Iago, Roderigo, Cassio, Montano, Cypriots, and Venetian Soldiers.
ALCUNI DEL CORO: Una vela!	SOME OF THE CHORUS: Ho! a ship!
ALTRI DEL CORO: Una vela!	OTHERS: A vessel!
IL PRIMO GRUPPO: Un vessillo!	FIRST GROUP: Sailing yonder!
IL SECONDO GRUPPO: Un vessillo!	SECOND GROUP: See her ensign.
MON: É l'alato Leon!	MON: It is the lion with his wings!
CAS: Or la folgor lo svela.	CAS: Now the lightning shows her clearly.
ALTRI CHE SOPRAGGIUNGONO: Uno squillo!	OTHERS OF THE CHO: (entering). Hark! the thunder!
ALTRI CHE SOPRAGGIUNGONO: Uno squillo!	STILL OTHERS: It is a signal!
TUTTI: Ha tuonato il cannon.	ALL: Hark, the cannon answer brings.
CAS: É la nave del Duce.	CAS: It is the vessel of the general.
MON: Or s'affonda, Or s'inciela—	MON: Now the upheaving, Swell enshrouds her.
CAS: Erge il rostro dall' onda.	CAS: Now her prow is cleaving the waves.
METÀ DEL CORO: Nelle nubi si cela e nel mar, E alla luce dei lampi ne appar.	PART OF THE CHORUS: She is lost in the sea and the night, But the lightning reveals her to sight.
TUTTI: Lampi! tuoni! gorghi! turbi tempestosi e fulmini! Treman l' onde, treman l'aure, treman basi e culmini! Fende l'etra un torvo e cieco spirto di vertigine, Iddio scuote il cielo bieco, come un tetro vel. Tutto é fumo! tutto è fuoco! l'orrida caligine Si fa incendio, poi si spegne più funesta, spasima L'universo, accore a valchi l'aquilon fantasima, I titanici oricalchi squillano ne ciel. (Entrano dal fondo molte donne del popolo.)	ALL: Roaring tempest, rolling thunder, bright as day the lightning's flash, Waves are surging high and monstrous where the battling whirlwinds clash. Through the air is blindly rushing now the spirit of the night, And the tempest-riven clouds are like a funeral pall. Chidden billows, gushing skyward, now reflect the lurid light Of the levin, now in darkness, doubly darkened lies the world. And the north wind sounds his trumpet, and the spectral cloud-racks hurled Onward ever, with abysmal blackness cover all.
TUTTI: (con gesti spavento e di supplicazione e rivolti verso lo spaldo). Dio, fulgor, della bufera! Dio, sorriso della duna! Salva l'arca e la bandiera Della veneta fortuna! Tu, che reggi gli astri e il Fato! Tu, che imperi al mondo e al ciel! Fa che in fondo al mar placato Posi l'àncora fedel.	ALL: (with gestures of horror and supplication, turning towards the sea). God, whose wrath has roused the waters, At whose smile the whirlwind tarries, Save, oh save the noble galley That Venetia's fortune carries! You, who rule earth and ocean, Stay the storm, command the tide! That the ship in sheltering harbor May safely ride at anchor
JAGO: È infranto l'artimon!	IAGO: Behold, the mainsail's burst

ROD: Il rostro piomba
Su quello scoglio!

CORO: Aita! aita!

JAGO: (a parte). (L' alvo Frenetico del mar sia la sua tomba!)

CORO: É salvo! salvo!

VOCI INTERNE: Gittate i palischermi! Mano alle funi! Fermi!

PRIMA PARTE CORO: Forza ai remi!

SECONDA PARTE: (scendono la scala dello spaldo). Alla riva!—

VOCI INTERNE: All' approdo! allo sbarco!

ALTRE VOCI INTERNE: Evviva! Evviva!
(Ote. dalla scala della spiaggia salendo sullo spaldo con seguito di marinai e di soldati.)

OTE: Esultate! L' orgoglio musulmano Sepolto è in mar, nostra e del cielo è gloria!
Dopo l' armi lo vinse l' uragano.

TUTTI: Evviva Otello!—Vittoria! vittoria!!
(Ote. entra nella rôcca, seguito da Cas., da Mon. e dai soldati.)

CORO: Vittoria! Sterminio!
Dispersi, distrutti,
Sepolti nell' orrido
Tumulto piombâr.
Avranno per requie
La sferza dei flutti,
La ridda dei turbini,
L' abisso del mar.

CORO: Si calma la bufera.

JAGO: (in disparte a Rod.). Roderigo!
Ebben, che pensi?

ROD: D'affogarmi—

JAGO: Stolto
E chi s' affoga per amor di donna.

ROD: Vincer nol so.
(Alcuni del popolo formano da un lato una catasta di legna: la folla s'accalca intorno turbolento e curiosa.)

JAGO: Suvvia, fa senno, aspetta
L'opra del tempo. A Desdemona bella,
Che nel segreto de' tuoi sogni adori,
Presto in uggia verranno i foschi baci
Di quel selvaggio dalle gonfle labbra.
Buon Roderigo, amico tuo sincero
Mi ti professo, nè in più forte ambascia
Soccorrerti potrei. Si un fragil voto
Di femmina non è tropp' arduo nodo
Pel genio mio nè per l' inferno, giuro
Che quella donna sarà tua. M' ascolta.
Bench' io finga d' amarlo' odio quel Moro—
(Entra Cassio: poi s'unisce a un crocchio di soldati. Jago sempre in disparte a Roderigo.)
E una cagion dell' ira, eccola, guarda. (Indicando Cas.)
Quell' azzimato capitano usurpa
Il grado mio, il grado mio che in cento
Ben pugnate battaglie ho meritato;
Ta' fu il voler d' Otello, ed io nun ange
Di sua Moresca signoria l' alfiere!
(Dalla catasia incominciano ad alzarsi dei globi di fumo sempre più denso.)
Ma, come è ver che tu Rodrigo sei,
Così è pur certo che se il Maro io fossi
Vedermi non vorrei d' attorno un Jago.
Se tu m' ascolti—
(Jago conduce Rod. verso il fondo: il fuoco divampa. I soldati s' affollano intorno alle tavole della taverna.)

CORO: (mentre dura il canto intorno al fuoco di gioia, i taverneri appenderanno al pergolato dell' osteria delle lanterne veneziane a varî colori che illumineranno galamente la scena. I soldati si saranno adunati intorno alle tavole, parte seduti, parte in piedi, ciarlando e bevendo). Fuoco di gioia! l' ilare vampa
Fuga la notte col suo splendor,
Guizza, sfavilla crepita, avvampa
Fulgido incendio che invade il cor.
Dal raggio attratti vaghi sembianti
Movono intorno mutando stuol,
E son fanciulle dai lieti canti,
E son farfalle dall' igneo vol.
Arde la palma col sicomoro,
Canta la sposa col suo fedel,
Sull' aurea flamma sul gaio coro
Soffia l' ardente spiro del ciel.
Fuoco di gioia rapido brilla!
Rapido passa fuoco d' amor!
Splende, s' oscura palpita, oscilla,
L' ultimo guizzo lampeggia e muor.
(Il fuoco si spegne a poco a poco: la bufera è cessata. Jago, Rod., Cas. e parecchi altri uomini d' arme intorno a un tavolo dove c' è det vino: parte in piedi, parte seduti.)

JAGO: Roderigo, beviam! qua la tazza, Capitano.

ROD: Her bow is hurried
To yonder cliff.

CHO: Bring rescue, rescue!

IAGO: (to Rod.). Buried,
I fain would leave the waves to cover her.

CHO: The danger's over!

VOICES: (from behind). Abaft the halyards ready!
Lower the cockboat, steady!

CHO: (first part). Man the shoreboats!

SECOND PART: (descending the steps of the quay). Hurry strandward!

VOICES: (behind). Pull together, to the landward!

OTHER VOICES: (behind). Welcome! Welcome!
(Enter Oth., followed by sailors and soldiers. He ascends the steps leading from the shore to the quay.)

OTH: Glad tidings hear, our wars are done. The ocean
Has whelmed the Turk. Heavens be and ours the glory!
Those whom our swords had left the storm has scattered.

ALL: Long live Othello!—Vittoria! Vittoria!!
(Exit Oth. into the castle, followed by Cas., Mon., and soldiers.)

CHO: Vittoria! Vittoria!
Dispersed all, and broken,
Their galleys are buried
Deep under the sea.
Let howling of whirlwinds
And rushing of waters,
And rolling of thunder,
Their requiem be!

CHO: The tempest is subsiding.

IAGO: Roderigo!
Well, now what do you have to say?

ROD: I'm drowning.

IAGO: Fool,
Who talks of drowning for the love of woman!

ROD: What can I do?
(Some of the people form a large pile of wood. The crowd gathers round, noisy and curious.)

IAGO: Ho now! have courage, wait for time working changes. The fair Desdemona Whom in your secret dreamings you adore
Will soon be weary of the dark embraces
And of the swollen lips of yonder savage.
Good Roderigo, sincere friend, I've Professed my allegiance to you;
Now trust me; If a frail vow
Between a Venetian and this Moor is not too hard
For my shrewd wits and all the tribe of hell
You shall enjoy and hold her as your own.
Now listen! though in semblance, his true friend
I hate Othello for the best of reasons,
Which you shall hear and judge.
(Enter Cas., who joins a group of soldiers. Iago points to him, always talking to Rod.)
That masterly arithmetician has Usurped my place, a place which I had earned
In many a well-contested battle, Christian
And heathen. Yet in good time this Cassio
Must be his lieutenant,
And I—God bless the mark! his Moorship's ancient!
(Clouds of smoke, growing denser and denser, begin to rise from the pile.)
It is as sure as you are Roderigo.
Were I the Moor I would not be Iago,
In following him I follow but myself.
No,
(He leads Rod. towards the back. The fire flares up. The soldiers seat themselves round the tables of the tavern.)

CHO: (during this song round the bonfire the drawers hang Venetian lanterns of various colors to the branches of the arbor, and they gaily illumine the scene. The soldiers are grouped round the tables, some seated, some standing, talking and drinking). Flame brightly burning, flickering fire,
That with its splendor lightens the night,
Glittering, roaring, still rising higher,
Filling the bosom with rays of light.
Drawn to your glowing, shapes of vague semblance
Are seen flitting here and there.
Now they bear resemblance to sweet maidens.
Now they seem goblins born of the sheen.
Palmwood is burning, sycamore glowing,
List the lover sing his love!
And on the gladness softly are blowing
Sweet-scented breezes, breath from above.
Flame brightly burning, first love's desire
Vanish as quickly as they arise.
Lost is the splendor, spent is the fire,
See where the last spark flickers and dies.
(The fire is slowly dying; the storm has ceased altogether. Iago, Rod., Cas. and some soldiers are grouped round a table, some sitting, some standing.)

IAGO: A glass, Roderigo; now's your turn my brave Lieutenant.

CAS: Non bevo più.	CAS: I drink no more.
JAGO: (avvicinando il boccale alla tazza di Cas.). Ingoia Questo sorso.	IAGO: (pushing the can towards the glass of Cas.) Just this one cup To please me.
CAS: (ritirando il bicchiere). No.	CAS: No!
JAGO: Guarda! oggi impazza Tutta Cipro! è una notte di gioia, Dunque—	IAGO: But listen, in all Cyprus This is a night of revel, and the gallants Desire it. Therefore—
CAS: Cessa. Già m' arde il cervello Per un nappo vuotato.	CAS: Leave me. I have drunk One cup tonight and lo! I am unsteady.
JAGO: Si, ancora Ber tu devi. Alle nozze d' Otello E Desdemona!	IAGO: This toast you cannot shrink from; here's the health Of great Othello and of Desdemona!
TUTTI: (tranne Rod.). Evviva!	ALL: (except Rod.). We hail them!
CAS: (alzando il bicchiere e bevendo un poco). Essa infiora Questo lido.	CAS: (raising his glass and sipping at it). The blossom of this isle.
JAGO: (sottovoce a Rod.). (Lo ascolta.)	IAGO: (aside to Rod.). You hear him.
CAS: Col vago Suo raggiar chiama i cuori a raccolta.	CAS: To whose bright-beaming glances Must every heart surrender.
ROD: Pur modesta essa è tanto.	ROD: Yet I think She is right modest.
CAS: Tu, Jago, Canterai le sue lodi	CAS: Iago, you shall chant Her praises.
JAGO: (a Rod.). (Lo ascolta.) (Forte a Cas.) Io non sono che un critico.	IAGO: (softly to Rod.). You hear him. (Aloud to Cas.) I am nothing If not critical.
CAS: Ed ella D' ogni lode è più bella.	CAS: And far above all praises Her beauty!
JAGO: (come sopra, a Rod., a parte). (Ti guarda.) Da quel Cassio.	IAGO: (aside to Rod., as above). Beware of this Cassio.
ROD: Che temi?	Rod: Wherefore?
JAGO: (sempre più incalzante) Ei favella Già con troppo bollor, la gaglïarda Giovinezza lo sprona, è un astuto Seduttor che t' ingombra il cammino. Bada—	IAGO: (more and more persuasively). He's handsome, young, a voluble knave. Very nature Will instruct her to love him. He's subtle knave. The woman has found him already. Listen!
ROD: Ebben?	ROD: What then?
JAGO: S' ei s' inebbria è perduto! Fallo ber. (Ai tavernieri.) (Jago riempie tre bicchieri: uno per sè, uno per Rod., uno per Cas. I tavernieri circolane colle enfore.)	IAGO: If he drinks he's ruined. Make him drink! (Calling to the attendants.) Ho! drawers! Some wine, boys! (Iago fills three glasses for himself, Rod. and Cas. The waiters go round with cans.)
JAGO: (A Cas. col bicchiere in mano: la folla gli si avvicina e lo guarda curiosamente). Inaffia l' ugola! Trinca, tracanna! Prima che svampino Canto e bicchier.	IAGO: (to Cas., with his glass in hand, while the crowd draws near, watching them curiously). And let me the clink canakin! A soldier's a man, A life's but a span, Why then let a soldier drink.
CAS: (a Jago, col. bicchiere in mano). Questa del pampino Verace manna Di vaghe annugola Nebbie il pensier.	CAS: (to Iago, glass in hand). This is the noble wine. Nectar so red, That with a mist divine Enshrouds the head.
JAGO: (a tutti). Chi all' esca ha morso Del ditirambo Spalvaldo e strambo Beva con me.	IAGO: (to all) He who once kissed, This magic brink, Cannot resist it, Ever must drink.
CORO: Chi all' esca ha morso Del ditirambo Spavaldo e strambo Beve con te.	ALL: Who once has kissed it This magic brink Cannot resist is, Ever must drink.
JAGO: (piano a Rod. indicando Cas.). (Un altro sorso E brillo egli è.) (Ad alta voce.) Il mondo palpita Quand' io son brillo! Sfido l' ironico Nume e il destin!	IAGO: (softly to Rod., pointing to Cas.). One other goblet And he will sink. (Aloud.) The world looks all awry When I'm imbibing; Drinking, I can defy Fate, and its gibing.
CAS: (bevendo ancora). Come un armonico Lïuto oscillo; La gioia scalpita Sul mio cammin!	CAS: (drinking again). Like an harmonious Lute I resound. Happy and glorious The world around.
JAGO: (come sopra). Chi all' esca ha morso Del ditirambo Spavaldo e strambo Beva con me!	IAGO: (as before). Who once has kissed it, This magic brink, Cannot resist it, Ever must drink.
TUTTI: Chi all' esca ha morso Del ditirambo Spavaldo e strambo Beve con te!	ALL: Who once has kissed it, This magic brink, Cannot resist it, Ever must drink.
JAGO: (a Rod.). (Un altro sorso Ed ebbro egli è.) (Ad alta voce.) Fuggan dal vivido Nappo i codardi Che in cor nascondono Frodi e mister.	IAGO: (to Rod.). One other goblet And he must sink. (To all, in a loud voice.) From this good company Cowards avaunt! Whose bosom treacherously Mysteries haunt.
CAS: (alzando il bicchiere, al colmo dell' esaltazione). In fondo all' anima Ciascun mi guardi! Non temo il ver— (Barcollando beve.) Non temo il ver—e bevo—	CAS: (raising his glass in great excitement). My heart is open to Every good fellow (he drinks). I do not fear, not I—(tottering) I do not—while drinking.
TUTTI: (ridendo). Ah! Ah!	ALL: (laughing). Ha! ha!
CAS: Del calice Gli orli s' imporporino!—	CAS: The beaker's brimming With noble wine—
JAGO: (a Rod., in disparte mentre gli altri ridono di Cas.) (Egli è briaco fradicio.) Ti scuoti. Lo trascina a contesa; è pronto all' ira, T' offenderà—ne segui à tumulto! Pensa che puoi cosi del lieto Otello Turbar la prima vigilia d' amore!	IAGO: (aside to Rod., while the others laugh at Cas.). He is as drunk as man can be, now go To provoke him to combat; he is rash in choler And he may strike you, and some tumult follow. Then cry a mutiny and disturb The Moor in the arms of his love.
ROD: (risoluto). Ed è ciò che mi spinge.	ROD: (with determination). Trust in me for the issue.
MON: (entrando e rivolgendosi a Cas.). Capitano, V' attende la fazione ai baluardi.	MON: (entering and addressing Cas.). Good lieutenant, Go to keep the watch upon the bastion.
CAS: (barcollando). Andiam!	CAS: (tottering). Let's go!
MON: Che vedo?!	MON: What see I?
JAGO: (a mon.). Ogni notte in tal guisa Cassio preludia al sonno.	IAGO: (to Mon.). It is evermore the prologue That goes before his sleeping.
MON: Otello il sappia.	MON: The Moor should know it!

CAS: (come sopra). Andiamo ai baluardi—

ROD POI TUTTI: Ah! Ah!

CAS: Chi ride?

ROD: (provocandolo). Rido d' un ebro—

CAS: (scagliandosi contro Rod.).
Bada alle tue spalle!
Furfante!

ROD: (difendendosi). Briaco ribaldo!

CAS: Marrano!
Nessun più ti salva.

MON: (separandoli a forza e dirigenosi a Cas.). Frenate la mano, Messer, ve ne prego.

CAS: (a Mon.). Ti spacco il cerèbro
Se qui t' interponi.

MON: Parole d' un ebro—

CAS: D' un ebro?!
(Cas. sguaina la spada. Mon. s' arma anch' esso. Assalto furibondo. La folla si ritrae.)

JAGO: (a parte a Rod. rapidamente). (Va al porto, con quanta più possa
Ti resta, gridando: sommossa! sommossa!
Va! spargi il tumulto, l' orror. Le campane Risuonino a stormo.)
(Rod. esce correndo. Jago ai combattenti, esclamando):
Fratelli! l' immane
Conflitto cessate!

MOLTE DONNE DEL CORO: (fuggendo). Fuggiam!

JAGO: Ciel! già gronda
Di sangue Montàno! Tenzon furibonda!

ALTRE DONNE: Fuggiam.

JAGO: Tregua!

TUTTI: Tregua!

DONNE: (fuggendo). S' uccidono!

UOMINI: (ai combattenti). Pace!

JAGO: (agli astanti). Nessun più raffrena quell' ira pugnace!
Si gridi l' allarme! Satàna li invade!!

VOCI: (in scena e dentro). All' armi!!
(Compane a stormo.)

TUTTI: Soccorso!!

SCENA II

Otello, Jago, Cassio, Montano, Popolo, Soldati: più tardi Desdemona.

OTE: (seguito da genti con fiaccole). Abasso le spade!
(I combattenti s' arrestano. Mon. s' appoggia a un soldato. Le nubi si diradano a poco a poco.)

CAS: (as before). Who follows to the bastion?

ROD. AND OTHERS: Ha! ha!

CAS: Who laughs there?

ROD: (provoking him). I laugh at drunkards.

CAS: (pushing against Rod.).
Knave, I will punish you.
Take this then!

ROD: (defending himself). Oh, ribald drunkard!

CAS: Villain!
Nothing shall save you!

MON: (separating them, to Cas.).
Peace, good lieutenant.
No bloodshed, let me pray you.

CAS: (to Mon.). I'll knock your brains out
If you dare to thwart me.

MON: Come, you're tipsy.
(Cas. draws his sword, as does also Mon. Furious onslaught. The crowd moves away.)

IAGO: (aside to Rod. speaking rapidly). Hasten with all the speed you can command Crying: a riot, help! Thus spread the tumult Abroad, and let them ring the bell in the fortress.
(Exit Rod., running.)
(Iago, calling out to the antagonists). I pray you, Cassio, good Montano, cease Your fighting.

WOMEN: (flying). Away!

IAGO: Zounds! here's Montano bleeding
To death. Oh, terrible fight!

OTHER WOMEN: Away! Away!

IAGO: Part them!

ALL: Part them!

WOMEN: Their blood is up.

MEN: Peace! Peace!

IAGO: (to the bystanders).
There's nothing to allay the murderous fury.
Call an alarm! Now the devil's rampant.

VOICES: (on the stage and behind). Alarm!
(Bells are rung.)

ALL: Help! Help!

SCENE II

Enter Othello, followed by people and Soldiers bearing torches.

OTH: Put up your weapons.
(The fighting ceases, Mon. leans on a soldier; the clouds are gradually dispersing.)

OTE: Olà! che avvien? son io fra i Saraceni?
O la turchesca rabbia è in voi trasfussa
Per sbranarvi l' un l' altro?—Onesto Jago,
Per quell' amor che tu mi porti, parla.

JAGO: Non so—qui tutti eran cortesi amici,
Dianzi, e giocondi—ma ad un tratto, come
Se un pianeta maligno avesse a quelli
Smagato il senno, sguainando l' arme
S' avventano furenti—avess' io prima
Stroncati i piè che qui m' adduser!

OTE: Cassio,
Come obliasti te stesso a tal segno?—

CAS: Grazia—perdon—parlar non so—

OTE: Montàno—

MON: (sostenuto da un soldato).
Io son ferito—

OTE: Ferito!—pel cielo
Già il sangue mio ribolle. Ah! l' ira volge
L' angelo nostro tutelare in fuga!
(Entra Des.; Ote accorre ad essa.)
Che?—la mia dolce Desdemona anch' essa
Por voi distolta da' suoi sogni!—Cassio,
Non sei più capitano.
(Cas. lascia cadere la spada che è raccolta da Jago.)

JAGO: (porgendo la spada di Cas. a un ufficiale). (Oh! mio trionfo!)

OTE: Jago, tu va nella città sgomenta
Con quella squadra a ricompor la pace.
(Jag. esce.)
Si socorra Montàno.
(Mon. è accompagnato nel castello.)
Al proprio tetto
Ritorni ognun,
(A tutti, imperiosamente.)
Io da qui non mi parto
Se pria non vedo deserti gli spaldi.
(La scena si vuota.)

SCENA III

Otello e Desdemona.

OTE: Già nelle notte densa
S' estingue ogni clamor.
Già il mio cor fremebondo
S' ammansa in quest' amplesso e si risensa.
Tuoni la guerra e s' inabissi il mondo
Se dope l' ira immensa
Vien questo immenso amor!

OTH: Why, how now, ho! from where does this arise?
Are we turned Turks, and to ourselves do that
From which Heaven's mercy saved us? Honest Iago, Speak, who began this? On your love I charge you.

IAGO: I do not know—Friends all but now in terms
Like bride and groom; when suddenly like men
Who by some madness are smitten, or by the planet
Of opposition,
They draw their swords, tilt one another's breast—
Ah! would in action I had lost the legs
That brought me here!

OTH: Cassio, how comes it you are forgotten

CAS: I pray you pardon me, I cannot speak.

OTH: Montano!

MON: I am wounded.

OTH: Wounded; by heaven
My blood begins my safer guides to rule,
And passion assays to show the way to judgment.
(Enter Des.; Oth. runs towards her.)
Look if sweet Desdemona,
My gentle love, be not raised up from slumber.
Cassio, you are no longer my lieutenant!
(Cas. drops his sword, which Iago picks up and hands to an officer.)

IAGO: (aside). At last I triumph!

OTH: Iago look with care about the town
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.
(Exit Iago.)
All give aid to Montano (Mon. is led into the castle), and now to rest.
Let all return; alone I shall be watching
Until I see that the city is peaceful.
(All leave but Oth. and Des.)

SCENE III

Othello And Desdemona.

OTH: The night is dark and silent,
All blatant clamors cease.
My bosom's angry passion
Is stilled to perfect peace in this embrace.
May the winds blow till they have wakened death
If after every tempest come such calms of love.

DES: Mio superbo guerrier! quanti tormenti,
Quanti mesti sospiri e quanta speme
Ci condusse ai soavi abbracciamenti!
Oh! com' è dolce il mormorare insieme
Te ne rammenti!
Quando narravi l' esule tua vita
E i fieri eventi e i lunghi tuoi dolor,
Ed io t' udia coll' anima rapita
In quei spaventi e coll' estasi in cor.

OTE: Pingea dell' armi il fremito, la pugna
E il vol gagliardo alla breccia mortal,
L' assalto, orribil edera, coll' ugna
Al baluardo e il sibilante stral.

DES: Poi mi guidavi ai fulgidi deserti,
All' arse arene, al tuo materno suol,
Narravi allor gli spasimi sofferti
E le catene e dello schiavo il duol.

OTE: Ingentilìa di lagrime l'istoria
Il tuo bel viso e il labbro di sospir;
Scendean sulle mie tenebre la gloria,
Il paradiso e gli astri a benedir.

DES: Ed io vedea fra le tue tempie oscure
Splender del genio l' eterea beltà.

OTE: E tu m' amavi per le mie sventure
Ed io t' amavo per la tua pietà.

OTE: Venga la morte! mi colga nell' estasi
Di quest' amplesso
Il momento supremo!
(Il cielo si sarà rasserenato.)
Tale è il gaudio dell' anima che temo,
Temo che più non mi sarà concesso
Quest' attimo divino
Nell' ignoto avvenir del mio destino.

DES: Disperda il ciel gli affanni
E Amor non muti col mutar degli anni.

OTE: A questa tua preghiera
Amen risponda la celeste schiera.

DES: Amen risponda.

OTE: (appoggiandosi ad un rialzo degli spaldi). Ah! la gioia m' innonda
Si fieramente—che ansante mi giacio—
Un bacio—

DES: Otello!—

DES: My noble warrior, what bitter sorrows,
What long-drawn sighs, what deferred hopes have guided
Us two to these embraces.
Ah, it is sweet to whisper to each other:
Do you remember
When you spoke of some distressful stroke
Your youth had suffered from your boyish days?
I seriously inclined to hear this,
And devoured your discourse with greedy ear.

OTH: When I spoke of sieges and of battles,
Of hairbreadth escapes in the imminent deadly breach,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
And of impending death.

DES: Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was your hint to speak, and of the torments
Borne by your noble self to slavery sold.

OTH: And I did beguile you of your tears
And for my pains receive a world of sighs:
Then on the darkness of my soul would break
The heavenly light that is of paradise.

DES: I saw Othello's visage in his mind
And to him did consecrate my soul.

OTH: You loved me for the dangers I had passed,
And I loved you, that you did pity them.

OTH: If it were now to die,
I would most happy, while your arms
(The sky is now quite clear.)
Surround me in embraces; for I fear
My soul has her content so absolute
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

DES: By heaven's all-gracious powers,
Our love shall increase, even as our days
Do grow.

OTH: Ah! may a choir of Heavenly voices
Sing 'Amen' to your sweet prayer

DES: Amen to this, sweet powers!

OTH: (leaning against the parapet of the quay). Ah! this joy will overwhelm me.
It is too much, it stops me here—I stagger—
A kiss—

DES: Othello!

OTE: Un bacio—ancora un bacio,
(Fissando una plaga del cielo stellato.)
Già la pleiade ardente al mar discende.

DES: Tarda è la notte.

OTE: Vien—Venere splende.
(S' avviano abbracciati verso il castello.)

■ ATTO SECONDO

Una sala terrena nel castello. Due vacti veroni ai lati: una porta nel mezzo che dà sul giardino.

SCENA I

Jag al di qua del verone. Cassio al de là.

JAGO: Non ti crucciar. Se credi a me, tra poco,
Farai ritorno ai folleggianti amori
Di Monna Bianca, altiero capitano,
Coll' else d' oro e col balteo fregiato.

CAS: Non lusingarmi—

JAGO: Attendi a ciò ch' io dico.
Tu dêi saper che Desdemona è il Duce
Del nostro Duce, sol per essa ei vive.
Pregala tu, quell' anima cortese
Per te interceda e il tuo perdono è certo.

CAS: Ma come favellarle?

JAGO: È suo costume
Girsene a meriggiar fra quelle fronde
Colla consorte mia. Quivi l' aspetta.
Or t' è aperta la via di salvazione;
Vanne.
(Cas. s' allontana.)

SCENA II

Jago solo seguendo coll' occhio Cassio.

JAGO: Vanne; la tua meta già vedo.
Ti spinge il tuo dimone,
E il tuo dimon son io,
E me trascina il mio, nel quale io credo
Inesorato Iddio:
(Allontanandosi dal verone senza più guardar Cas. che sasà scomparso fra gli alberi.)
Credo in un Dio crudel che m' ha creato
Simile a sè, e che nell' ira io nomo.
Dalla viltà d' un germe o d' un atòmo
Vile son nato.
Son scellerato

OTH: A kiss— And yet a kiss!
(Looking up to the starlit sky.)
See where the Wain is fading in the sky.

DES: Late is the night.

OTH: Come, Venus stands on high.
(Exeunt, clinging close to each other, towards the castle.)

■ ACT II

A hall on the ground floor of the castle. Two large colonnades to right and left. In the center a door opening into the garden.

SCENE I

Iago in the hall. Cassio in one of the colonnades.

IAGO: No, do not fret, trust in me, I promise
You'll bask once more in the bright beaming glances
Of Mistress Bianca, as dapper a lieutenant
As ever you were with gilded hilt and baldric.

CAS: Do not deceive me.

IAGO: Hear what I counsel:
Our general's wife, as you full well must know,
Is now our general's general, he her servant;
Importune her; hers is so kind, so blessed,
A disposition, she will work your pardon.

CAS: But how to gain her presence?

IAGO: It is her custom
To rest at noon of day in yonder arbor Together with my wife. Here, then, await her,
The road I've shown that leads to your salvation.
Go then!
(Cas. goes towards the back.)

SCENE II

Iago alone, following Cassio with his eyes.

IAGO: Go then! I can decry your fate,
Your demon drives you onward,
And I am that demon
Even as my own impels me
On whose command I wait,— Relentless Fate.
(He comes forward without taking further notice of Cas., who disappears among the trees.)
Cruel is the God who
Hath fashioned me in his image and whom in wrath I worship.
From some vile germ of nature, some paltry atom
I took my issue;

Perchè son uomo;
E sento il fango originario in me.
Sì! questa è la mia fè!
Credo con fermo cuor, siccome crede
La vedovella al tempi,
Che il mal ch'io penso e che de me predo
Per mio destino adempio.
Credo che il giusto è un istrïon beffardo
E nel viso e nel cuor,
Che tutto è in lui bugiardo:
Lagrima, bacio, sguardo,
Sacrificio ed onor.
E credo l' uom gioco d' iniqua sorte
Dal germe della culla
Al verme dell' avel.
Vien dopo tanta irrisïon la Morte.
E poi?—La Morte è il Nulla
E vecchia fola il Ciel.
(Dal verone di sinistra si vede passar giardino Des. con Emi. Jago si slano verone, al di là del quale si sarà appostato.)

JAGO: (parlando a Cas.). Eccola—Cassio—a te—questo è il momento Ti scuoti—vien Desdemona.
S' è mosso; la saluta
E s' avvicina
Or qui si tragga Otello—aiuta, aiuta
Sàtana il mio cimento!
(Sempre al verone, osservando, ma un discosto, si vedono ripassare nel giardino e Des.)
Già conversano insieme—ed essa inclina
Sorridendo, il bel viso.
Mi basta un lampo sol di quel sorriso
Per trascinare Otello alla ruina.
Andiam—
Ma il caso in mio favor s' adopra.
Eccolo—al posto, all' opra.

SCENA III

Jago e Otello.

JAGO: Ciò m' accora—

OTE: Che parli?

Vile is my tissue,
For I am human.
I feel the primal mud-flow of my breed.
This is my creed.
As firmly I believe, as ever did woman
Who prays before the altar,
Of every ill, whether I think or do it,
It is Fate that drives me to it.
You're an honest man, but a wretched player,
Your life is but a part,
A lie each word you say, your tear, your kiss, your prayer,
Are as false as you are
Man's Fortune's fool even from his earliest breath.
The germ of life is fashioned
To feed the worm of death.
Yea, after all this folly all must die.
And then? And then there's nothing,
And heaven an ancient lie.
(From the right-hand colonnade Des. and Emi. are seen to enter the arbor. Iago goes towards the colonnade, beyond which Cas. has taken his position.)

IAGO: (calling gently to Cas.). Take care, Cassio! to her! this is the moment.
Now, Desdemona comes.
(Cas. goes to Des., bows to her and joins her.)
He's near her.
He greets her, does accost her. Now must I fetch Othello.
Divinities of hell, I call upon your succor!
(Still standing in the colonnade watching at some distance Cas. and Des., who are seen passing backwards and forwards in the garden.)
They are talking in whispers. Now
To him has she inclined her gentle visage.
Ay! smile upon her, do! an excellent courtesy!
This smile shall lure Othello to his ruin.
To work! and in this web I will enslave him.
(He goes rapidly towards the outlet on the left, but suddenly stops.)
He comes. Good luck! I have him.
(He leans motionless against a column on the right looking intently towards the garden where Cas. and Des. are standing together)

SCENE III

Iago And Othello.

IAGO: (pretending not to see Oth., who is quite close to him, and to be talking to himself). I don't like that.

OTH: What did you say?

JAGO: Nulla—voi qui? una vana
Voce n' uscì dal labbro—

OTE: Colui che s' allontana
Dalla mia sposa, é Cassio?

JAGO: (e l' uno e l' altro si staccano dal verone). Cassio? no—quei si scosse
Come un reo nel verdervi.

OTE: Credo che Cassio ei fosse.

JAGO: Mio signore—

OTE: Che brami?—

JAGO: Cassio, nei primi di
Del vostro amor, Desdemona non conosceva?

OTE: Sì.
Perchè fai tale inchiesta?

JAGO: Il mio pensiero è vago
D' ubbie, non di malizia.

OTE: Di' il tuo pensiero, Jago.

JAGO: Vi confidaste a Cassio?

OTE: Spesso un mio dono o un cenno
Portava alla mia sposa.

JAGO: Dassenno?

OTE: Sì, dassenno.
Nol credi onesto?

JAGO: Onesto?

OTE: Che ascondi nel tuo core?

JAGO: Che ascondo in cor, signore?

OTE: "Che ascondo in cor, signore?"
Pel cielo! tu sei l' eco dei detti miei, nel chiostro
Dell' anima ricetti qualche terribil mostro.
Sì, ben t' udii poc' anzi mormorar: ciò m' accora.
Ma di che t' accoravi? nomini Cassio e allora
Tu corrughi la fronte. Suvvia, parla se m' ami.

JAGO: Voi sapete ch' io v' amo.

OTE: Dunque senza velami
T' esprimi e senza ambagi. T' esca fuor dalla gola
Il tuo più rio pensiero colla più ria parola!

JAGO: S' anco teneste in mano tutta l' anima mia
Nol sapreste.

OTE: Ah!

CAS: (avvicinandosi molto ad Ote. e sottovoce). Temete, signor, la gelosia!
E un' idra fosen, livida, cieca, col suo veleno
Sè stessa attosca, vivida piaga le squarcia il seno.

IAGO: Nothing. You here?—If anything some idle words Escaped me.
(Both come forward, away from the colonnade.)

OTH: Was he who just now parted
From Desdemona Cassio?

IAGO: Cassio? No!
In suchwise, guilty-like, he would not leave her.

OTH: I do believe was Cassio.

IAGO: No, my lord!

OTH: What do you think?

IAGO: Nothing—
Did Michael Cassio when you wooed my lady
Know of your love?

OTH: Yes. Why ask the question?

IAGO: But for the satisfaction of my thought,
No further harm.

OTH: Why of your thought, Iago?

IAGO: And did you trust in Cassio?

OTH: He went between us often
Taking a tender message to my lady.

IAGO: Indeed?

OTH: Yes, indeed! Is he not honest?

IAGO: Honest?

OTH: You discern anything in that?

IAGO: I discern anything in that?

OTH: "I discern anything in that?"
By heaven, he echoes every word I say!
As if there were some monster in his thought
Too hideous to be shown. Yea, I myself
Have heard you say even now "I don't like that!"
Say, then, what did you not like?
Looking at Cassio
You did contract your brow together. Speak
If you love me!

IAGO: Well you know I love you.

OTH: I beg you speak to me, as to your thinkings,
As you ruminate, and give your worst of thoughts,
The worst of words!

IAGO: You should not know my thoughts, even if my heart
Were in your hands, nor shall not.

OTH: Ah!

IAGO: (going close up to him, almost in a whisper). Beware,
My lord, of jealousy!
It is the green-eyed monster, which mocks
The meat it feeds on, and which with its poison
Changes our nature.

OTE: Miseria mia!! No! il vano sospettar nulla giova.
Pria del dubbio l' indagine, dopo il dubbio la prova,
Dopo la prova (Otello ha sue leggi supreme)
Amore e gelosia vadan dispersi insieme!

JAGO: (con piglio più ardito). Un tal proposto spezza di mie labbra il suggello.
Non parlo ancor di prova; pur, generoso Otello, Vigilate, soventi le oneste e ben create
Coscïenze non vedono la frode: vigilate.
Scrutate le parole di Desdemona, un detto
Può ricondur la fede, può affermare il sospetto—
Eccola; vigilate—
(Si vede ricomparire Des. nel giardino, dalla vasta apertura del fondo: è circondata da Donne, da Fanciulli, da Marinai Cipriotti e Albenesi che si avanzano e le offrono fiori ed altri doni, Alcuni s' accompagnano, cantando, sulla Guzla altri su dellé piccole arpe.)

CORO: (nel giardino). Dove guardi splendono
Raggi, avvampan cuori,
Dove passi scendono
Nuvole di fiori.
Qui fra gigli e rose
Come a un casto altar,
Padri, bimbi, spose
Vengono a cantar.

FANCIULLI: (spargendo al suolo fiori di giglio) T' offriamo il giglio
Soave stel
Che in man degli angeli
Fu assunto in ciel,
Che abbella il fulgido
Manto e la gonna
Della Madonna
E il santo vel.

DONNE E MARINAI: Mentre all' aura vola
Lieta la canzon,
L' agile mandòla
Ne accompagna il suon.

MARINAI: (offrendo a Des dei monili di corallo e di perle). A te le porpore,
Le perle e gli ostri,
Nella voragine
Côlti del mar.
Vogliam Desdemona
Coi doni nostri
Come un' imagine
Sacra adornar.

FANCIULLI E DONNE: Mentre all' aura vola
Lieta la canzon,
D' agile mendòla
Ne accompagna il suon.

LE DONNE: (sporgendo fronde e fiori). A te la florida
Messe dai grembi
A nembi, a nembi,
Spargiamo al suol.

OTH: Oh misery!
You think I'll make a life of jealousy?
I'll see before I doubt, when I doubt, prove;
And on the proof—Othello thus decrees—
Away at once with love or jealousy!

IAGO: (more frank in manner). I'm glad, for I can show the love and duty
I bear you. I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife! I would not have
Your free and noble nature be abused.
Observe her well with Cassio! One unguarded word,
One gesture may to your first faith restore you,
Or confirm your suspicion. She comes, be watchful!
(Des. is seen to return to the garden through the large door at the back; she is surrounded by women, children and Cypriot and Albanian soldiers, who come forward in turn, offering her flowers and other gifts. They sing, accompanying themselves, some on guzla, others on small harps.)

CHO: (in the garden). Where ever your glances shed
Brightness, hearts must meet you
Where ever your footsteps tread,
Flowers spring forth to greet you.
Rose and lily bringing
We approach your shrine.
Old and young are singing,
And our songs are yours

CHILDREN: (strewing lilies on the ground). We bring lilies
On slender stem.
In heaven the hand of angels
Proffers them.
Our Lady's gown is strewn with their petals bright;
Her sacred crown is Gemmed with their light.

WOMEN AND SAILORS: Rising ever higher
Sounds our song afar,
With our voices blending
Zither and guitar.

SAILORS: (offering necklaces of corals and pearls). To you we proffer
Rich pearls and corals
Which we have gathered
Deep in the sea.
Desdemona,
Like a fair image, we are crowning
With all our treasures.

WOMEN: (strewing leaves and flowers)
For you we gathered
Blossoms of springtime,
Gladly we strew them,

L' April circonda
La sposa bionda
D' un' etra rorida
Che vibra al Sol.

FANCIULLI E MARINAI: Mentre all' aura vola
Lieta la canzon,
L' agile mandòla
Ne accompagna il suon.

TUTTI: Dove guardi splendono
Raggi, avvampan cuori,
Dove passi scendono
Nuvole di fiori.
Qui fra gigli e rose,
Come a un casto altar,
Padri, bimbi, spose
Vengono a cantar.

DES: Splende il cielo, danza
L' aura, olezza il fiore.
Gioia, amor, speranza
Cantan nel mio core.

CORO: Vivi felice! Addio. Qui regna Amore.
(Durante il Coro, Ote. osserva con Jag.)

OTE: (soavemente commosso). Quel canto mi con quide.
No, no, s' ella m' inganna, il ciel sè stesso irride!

JAGO: (Beltà, letizia, in dolce inno concordi!
I vostri infrangerò soavi accordi.)

SCENA IV

Finito il Coro, Des. bacia la testa d' alcuni tra i fanciulli, e alcune donne le baciano il lembo della veste, ed essa proge una borsa ai marinai. Il Coro s' allontana: Des., segita poi da Emi., entra nella sala e s' avanza verso Ote.

DES: D' un uom che geme sotto il tuo disdegno
La preghiera ti porto.

OTE: Chi è costui?

DES: Cassio.

OTE: Era lui
Che ti parlava sotto quelle fronde?

DES: Lui stesso, e il suo dolor che in me s' infonde
Tanto è verace che di grazia è degno.
Intercedo per lui, per lui ti pregro.
Tu gli perdona.

OTE: Non ora.

DES: Non oppormi il tuo diniego.
Gli perdona.

OTE: Non ora.

DES: Perchè torbida suona
La voce tua? qual pena t' addolora?

OTE: M' ardon le tempie—

For they are yours
Your silken tresses
April shall fan them,
The morn surround them
With golden shine.

WOMEN AND SAILORS: Rising ever higher
Sounds our song afar,
With our voices blending
Zither and guitar.

ALL: Where ever your glances shed
Brightness, hearts must meet you.
Where ever your footsteps tread,
Flowers spring forth to greet you.
Rose and lily bringing
We approach your shrine.
Old and young are singing,
And our songs are yours.

DES: Sunlight, blowing breezes,
Rose and heliotrope
Fill my heart with gladness,
Waken love and hope.

CHO: Live long and happy, yours be hope and love.
(During the singing Iago and Oth. have been watching the scene.)

OTH: (softly moved). Their song has wrung my bosom.
If she be false, Oh, then heaven mocks itself.

IAGO: (aside). See love and beauty here together dwelling,
Until I come their harmony dispelling.

SCENE IV

When the singing is over Des. kisses some of the children, and some of the women kiss the hem of her gown. She gives a purse to the sailors, Exit Chorus slowly. Des., followed by Emi., comes forward into the hall where Oth. stands.

DES: I have been talking with a suitor here.
Who has felt your displeasure.

OTH: Who do you mean?

DES: Cassio.

OTH: Then it was he who spoke to you
Even now in yonder arbor?

DES: He, none other,
Ay, sooth, he went away so humbled
That he has left part of his grief with me.
If I have any grace of power to move you
You must forgive him.

OTH: Not now!

DES: Nay, I'll take
Not your denial, forgive him!

OTH: Not now!

DES: Why do you speak so faintly?
Are you not well, does any pain afflict you?

OTH: Here on my forehead.

DES: (spiegando il suo fazzoletto come per fasciare la fronte d' Ote.). Quell' ardor molesto
Svanirà, se con questo
Morbido lino la mia man ti fascia.

OTE: (getta il fazzoletto a terra). Non ho d' uopo di ciò.

DES: Tu sei crucciato Signor.

OTE: (aspramente). Mi lascia! (Emi. raccoglie il fazzoletto dal suolo.)

DES: Se inconscia, contro te, sposo, ho peccato
Dammi la dolce e lieta
Parola del perdono.
La tua fanciulla io sono
Umile e mansueta;
Ma il labbro tuo sospira,
Hai l' occhio fiso al suol.
Guardami in volto e mira
Come favella amore.
Vien ch' io t' allieti il core,
Ch' io ti lenisca il duol.

OTE: (a parte). (Forse perchè gli inganni
D' arguto amor non tendo,
Forse perchè discendo
Nella valle degli anni,
Forse perchè ho sul viso
Quest' atro tenebror,
Ella è perduta e irriso
Io sono e il cor m' infrango
E ruinar nel fango
Vego il mio sogno d' ôr.)

JAGO: (a Emi. sottovoce). Quel vel mi porgi
Ch' or hai raccolto.

EMI: (sottovoce a Jago). Qual frode scorgi?
Ti legge in volto.

JAGO: T' opponi a vôto
Quan l' io commando.

EMI: Il tuo nefando
Livor m' è noto.

JAGO: Sospetto insano!

EMI: Guardia fedel
È questa mano.

JAGO: Dammi quel vel!
(Jag. affera violentemente il braccio di Emi.)

JAGO: Su te l' irosa
Mia man s' aggrava!

EMI: Son la tua sposa,
Non la tua schiava.

JAGO: La schiava impura
Tu sei di Jago.

EMI: Ho il cor presago
D' una sventura.

JAGO: Nè mi paventi?

EMI: Uomo crudel!

JAGO: A me—

EMI: Che tenti?

JAGO: A me quel vel!
(Con un colpo di mano Jag. ha carpito u fazzoletto ad Emi.)

DES: (spreading out her handkerchief, as if to tie it round the forehead of Oth.). It will away again.
Within this hour it will be well, if you
Will let me bind it with this napkin.

OTH: (throws the handkerchief down). It is too little.

DES: I am very sorry,
My Lord.

OTH: (roughly). Let it alone! (Emi picks up the handkerchief.)

DES: If ever against my will I have offended,
Dear husband, let me pray it,
The word of pardon say it.
I am your child, your servant,
Of your least hint observant.
Your silence speaks of sadness,
Your face is turned from me.
See in my eyes the token
Of vows of love unbroken,
Oh! let me cheer your sadness,
Oh! let me comfort you!

OTH: (aside). Haply because I lack Soft parts of conversation,
Or that I am declined
Into the vale of years;
Haply because my visage
Is dyed of deepest black,
Her life is lost, a byword
Am I, my heart is broken,
And in the dust is scattered
My golden dream of love.

IAGO: (aside to Emi). That napkin give me,
I have been watching.

EMI: (aside to Iago). Some scheme you're hatching;
You'll not deceive me.

IAGO: How dare you show defiance to me?

EMI: Your wicked scheming
Too well I know it.

IAGO: Surely you're dreaming!

EMI: In mine own trust
I place reliance.

IAGO: Give it you must.
(Iago violently grasps the arm of Emi.)

IAGO: My hand in strife
You cannot brave.

EMI: I am your wife
And not your slave!

IAGO: My bondsmaid are you,
Believe my message.

EMI: My heart has presage
Of boding grief.

IAGO: Now, do I scare you?

EMI: Ah! cruel man!

IAGO: Give me—

EMI: No, never!

IAGO: That handkerchief!
(With a sudden wrench he tears the handkerchief from Emi.)

JAGO: (Già la mia brama
Conquido, ed ora
Su questa trama
Jago lavora!)

EMI: (Vinser gli artigli
Truci e codardi.
Dio dai perigli
Sempre ci guardi.)

OTE: Escite! Solo vo' restar.

JAGO: (sottovoce ad Emi. che sta per escire). (Ti giova Tacere. Intendi?)
(Des. ed Emi. escono. Jag. finge d' escire dalla, porta del fondo, ma giuntovi s' arresta.)

SCENA V

Otello: Jago nel fond.

OTE: (accasciato, su d' un sedile). Desdemona rea!

JAGO: (nel fondo guardando di nascosto il fazzoletto, poi riponendolo, con cura nel giustacuore). Con questi fili tramerò la prova
Del peccato d' amor. Nella dimora
Di Cassio ciò s' asconda.

OTE: Atroce idea?

JAGO: (fra se, fissando Ote.). (Il mio velen lavora.)

OTE: Rea contro me! contro me!!!

JAGO: (Suffri e ruggi!)

OTE: Atroce!!!—atroce!!!—

JAGO: (dopo essersi portato accanto ad Ote. bonariamente.)
Non pensateci più.

OTE: (balzando). Tu? Indietro! fuggi!!
M' hai legato alla croce!—
Ahimè!—Più orrendo d' ogni orrenda ingiuria
Dell' ingiuria é il sospetto.
Nell' ore arcane della sua lussuria
(E a me furate!) m' agitava il petto
Forse un presagio? Ero baldo, giulivo—
Nulla sapevo ancor; io non sentivo
Sol suo corpo divin che m' innamora
E sui labbri mendaci
Gli ardenti baci
Di Cassio! Ed ora!—ed ora.
Ora e per sempre addio sante memorie,
Addio sublimi incanti del pensier!
Addio schiere fulgenti, addio vittorie,
Dardi volanti e volanti corsier!
Addio vessillo trïonfale e pio!
E dïane squillanti in sul mattin!
Clamori e canti di battaglia, addio!—
Della gloria d' Otello è questo il fin.

IAGO: Spent is my anger;
Firmly I hold them
Here in my meshes.
Iago's master.

EMI: Lurking disaster
Spreads out its meshes.
God, in their danger
Strengthen, uphold them.

OTH: Leave me, I would rather be alone.

IAGO: (aside to Emi., who is about to go). Of this no word, I charge you.
(Exeunt Des. and Emi. Iago goes towards the door at back, as if about to leave, but remains standing there.)

SCENE V

Othello and Iago (behind).

OTH: (exhausted, throws himself into a chair) False Desdemona!

IAGO: (at the back, looking at the handkerchief and then carefully replacing it in his doublet). Trifles light as air
Are to the jealous proofs of holy writ.
Now will I lose in Cassio's house this napkin.

OTH: The thought is monstrous!

IAGO: (to himself, watching Oth.). He changes with my poison.

OTH: False to me! ha, to me!

Iago: (aside). Yea, writhe and foam!

OTH: Oh monstrous, monstrous!

IAGO: (going up to Oth., cordially.) General, no more of that!

OTH: Avaunt you have set me on the rack!
Ah me!
I swear it is better to be much abused
Than but to know it a little.
What sense had I of her stolen hours of lust
Though stolen from me?
I saw it not, thought it not, it harmed not me;
Free and merry was I, not knowing anything.
I did not wince, when I clasped her sweet body
In tender love, nor did find on her lips
The burning kiss of Cassio. Oh, now for ever Farewell the tranquil mind, farewell content
And noble thoughts of war!
Farewell the plumèd troop, the impending battle,
The swiftly-flying shaft, the neighing steed,
Pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war,

	The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing pipe, Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.
JAGO: Pace, signor.	IAGO: Peace, peace, my lord!
OTE: Sciagurato! mi trove Una prova secura Che Desdemona è impura— Non sfuggir! non sfuggir! nulla ti giova! Vo' una secura, una visibil prova! (Afferrando Jag. alla gola e atterrandolo.) O sulla tua testa S' aceen la e precipiti il fulmine Del mio spaventoso furor che si desta!	OTH: Villain! Make me to see it or at the least to prove it That my love is a strumpet. No escape Shall now avail you. Be sure of it, give me the ocular proof. (He grasps Iago by the throat and throws him down.) Or on your head Shall accumulate all my waked wrath, And with the fire of lightning smite you.
JAGO: (rialzandosi). Divina grazia difendimi!—Il cielo Vi protegga. Non son più vostro alfiere. Voglio che il mondo testimon mi sia Che l' onestà è periglio. (Fa per andarsene.)	IAGO: (rising). Oh grace of heaven forgive me! Be God's own mercy with you, take mine office! Take note, oh world, that it is no longer safe To be direct and honest. (He makes pretense of leaving.)
OTE: No—rimani. Forse onesto tu sei.	OTH: No, stay, you should be honest.
JAGO: (sulla soglia fingendo d' andarsene). Meglio varrebbe Ch' io fossi un ciurmador.	IAGO: (on the threshold, still pretending to withdraw). I should be wise, for honesty's a fool.
OTE: Per l' universo! Credo leale Desdemona e credo Che non lo sia; te credo onesto e credo Disleale—La prova io voglio! voglio La certezza!!	OTH: The world be witness: I think my wife be honest, and think she is not; I think that you are just, and think you are not. I'll have some proof, would I were satisfied!
JAGO: (ritornando verso Ote.). Signor, frenate l' ansie. E qual certezza v' abbisogna? Avvinti Vederli forse?	IAGO: (returning to Oth.). I do not like the office. What shall I say, where's satisfaction? Would you see this?
OTE: Ah! Morte e dannazione!!	OTH: Death and damnation!
JAGO: Ardua impresa sarebbe; e qual certezza Sognate voi se quell' immondo fatto Sempre vi sfuggirà?—Ma pur se guida E la ragione al vero, una sì forte Congettura riserbo che per poco Alla certezza vi conduce. Udite: (Avvicinandosi molto ad Ote. e sottovoce.) Era la notte, Cassio dormia, gli stavo accanto. Con interrotte voci tradia l' intimo incanto. Le labbra lente, lente, movea, nell' abbandono Del sogno ardente; e allor dicea, con flebil suono: Desdemona soave! Il nostro amor s' asconda. Cauti vegliamo! l' estasi del ciel tutto m' innonda. Seguia più vago l' incubo blando; con molle angoscia, L' interna imago quasi baciando, ei disse poscia: Il rio destino impreco che al Moro ti donò. E allora il sogno in cieco letargo si mutò.	IAGO: It were difficult, truly. There's no satisfaction For you. Will not the hideous deed Escape your eyes forever? But yet I say If imputation and strong circumstance Grossly suspicious Will give you satisfaction you may have it. (He goes closely up to Oth.; in a whisper.) I lay with Cassio lately, and myself Sleepless, I watched his slumbers. Suddenly He began to mutter of what he was dreaming. Moving his lips gently and slowly, words Of deepest import then I heard him utter, Saying in tearful and in passionate accents: “Sweet Desdemona, Let us be wary ever, let us hide What to you and to me is heavenly sweetness.” Then in his dream he moved towards me, sighing And kissing softly now his fancy's image, Thus did he murmur: “Ah cursed Fate that gave you to the Moor!” And after that, the dream forsaking him, Calmly he slept.
OTE: Oh! monstruosa colpa!	OTH: Oh, monstrous, monstrous!
JAGO: Io non narrai Che un sogno.	IAGO: No it was but his dream.
OTE: Un sogno che rivela un fato.	OTH: But this denoted a foregone conclusion.
JAGO: Un sogno che può dar forma di prova Ad altro indizio.	IAGO: It may thicken other proofs that do demonstrate thinly.
OTE: E qual?	OTH: And how?
JAGO: Talor vedeste In mano di Desdemona un tessuto Trapunto a fiori e più sottil d' un velo?	IAGO: Have you not seen in your wife's hands A handkerchief spotted with strawberries And of most subtle texture?
OTE: È il fazzoletto ch' io le diedi, pegno Primo d' amor.	OTH: Such is the handkerchief I gave to her, It was my first gift.
JAGO: Quel fazzoletto ieri (Certo ne son) lo vidi in man di Cassio.	IAGO: That handkerchief Lately, upon my oath, was in the hands of Cassio.
OTE: Ah! mille vite gli donasse Iddio! Una è povera preda al furor mio!! Jago, ho il cuore di gelo. Lungi da me le pïetose larve! Tutto il mio vano amor esalo al cielo, Guardami—ei sparve. Nelle sue spire d' angue L' idra m' avvince! Ah! sangue! sangue! sangue!! (S' inginocchia.) Si, pel ciel marmoreo giuro! Per le attorte folgori! Per la Morte e per l' oscuro mar sterminator D' ira e d' impeto tremendo presto fia che sfolgori Questa man ch' io levo e stendo! (Levando la mano al cielo.)	OTH: Oh, that the slave had forty thousand lives! One is too weak and poor for my revenge. Listen Iago. All my fond love I blow to heaven, Arise, black vengeance, from your hollow cell! Look on me, it is gone! Yield up, oh love, your crown to tyrannous hate! Oh blood! blood! blood! (He kneels.) Witness you marble heaven, Witness eternal lights above, Elements that clip us round about; Never shall cease my hatred, never ebb My wrath, until this hand has wrought my vengeance! (He lifts up his hand.)
JAGO: (Ote. fa per alzarsi, Jag. lo trattiene inginocchiato e s' inginocchia anch' esso). Non v' alzate ancor! Testimon è il Sol ch' io miro, che m' irradia e inanima, L' ampia terra e il vasto spiro del Creato inter, Che ad Otello io sacro ardenti, core, braccio ed anima S' anco ad opere cruenti s' armi il suo voler!	IAGO: (Oth. is about to rise, when Iago holds him down and kneels himself). No, rise not yet! Witness the Sun which illuminates us here, Earth on which we live, ambient air, In which we breathe the all-Creator's breath, Witness that here Iago gives up His hand, his heart, his wit to wronged Othello's service.
JAGO E OTE: (insieme, alzando le mani al cielo come chi giura). Si, pel ciel marmoreo giuro! per le attoret folgori! Per la Morte e per l' oscuro mar stermin ter! D' ira e d' impeto tremendo presto	BOTH: (raising their hands as for a solemn oath). Witness yon marble heaven, Witness eternal lights above, Elements that clip us round about! Never shall cease my hatred, never ebb

fia che sfolgori
Questa man ch' io levo e stendo.
Dio vendicator.

ATTO TERZO

La gran sala del castello. A destra un vasto peristilio a colonne. Questo peristilio è annesso ad una sala di minori proporzioni; nel fondo della sala un verone.

SCENA I

Otello, Jago, L'Araldo.

ARA: (dal peristilio, a Ote. che sarà con Jag. nella sala). La vedetta del porto l a segnalato La veneta galea che a Cipro adduce Gli ambasciatori.

OTE: (all'Araldo, facendogli cenno di allontanarsi). Bene sta. (L' Araldo esce.) OTE: (a Jag.). Continua.

JAGO: Qui trarrò Cassio e con astute inchieste
Lo adescherò a ciarlar, Voi là nasosto
(Indicando il vano del verone.)
Scrutate i modi suoi, le sue parole,
I lazzi, i geslii. Paziente siate
O la prova vi sfugge. Ecco Desdemona.
Finger conviene—io vado.
(S'allontana come per escire, poi s'arresta e si riavvicina ad Ote.)
Il fazzoletto—

OTE: Va! volentieri obliato l' avrei.
(Jag. esce.)

SCENA II

Otello. Desdemona dalla porta di sinistra.

DES: (ancora presso alla soglia). Dio ti giocondi, o sposo dell' alma mia sovrano.

OTE: (andando incontro a Des. e prendendole la mano). Grazie, madonna, datemi la vostra eburnea mano.
Caldo mador ne irrora la morbida beltà.

DES: Essa ancor l' orme ignora del duolo e dell' età.

OTE: Eppur qui annida il demone gentil del mal consiglio,
Che il vago avorio allumina del piccioletto artiglio.
Mollemente alla prece s' atteggia e al pio fervore—

My wrath, until this hand has wrought my vengeance!
So help me God!

ACT III

The great hall of the castle. To the left a large portico, which leads to another smaller hall; at the back of the hall a colonnade.

SCENE I

Othello, Iago and a Herald.

HER: (from the portico to Oth., who is with Iago in the hall). Sir, the watch of the port has just signaled the arrival of the galley which brings to Cyprus the ambassadors.

OTH: (to the Herald, beckoning him to go). It is well. (To Iago.) Go on then.
(Exit Herald.)

IAGO: I spoke to Cassio, bade him anon return, which he promised.
Do but encave yourself
(Pointing to the colonnade.)
And mark the slurs, the gibes and scornful actions,
I say, mark but his gestures. Marry patience!
Or the proof will escape you.
See, yonder comes your wife, you must be cunning.
I leave you.
(He moves away as if to leave, then stops and returns to Othello.)
That handkerchief is—

OTH: Go, do not name it; I would gladly forget it.
(Exit Iago.)

SCENE II

Othello and Desdemona, who enters from the right.

DES: (still almost on the threshold). How is it with you, my husband,
My heart's sole lord and master?

OTH: (going to meet Des. and taking her hand). Well, my good lady. Give me your hand, as white as virgin snow,
Yet hot and moist; which argues
A frank and liberal heart.

DES: It yet has felt no age, nor known of sorrow.

OTH: And yet within this hand there is a young
And melting devil, that commonly rebels.
It is a good hand, a frank one; it requires
Much fervent prayer and castigation.

DES: Eppur con questa mano io v' ho donato il core,
Ma riparlar vi debbo di Cassio.

OTE: Ancor l' ambascia
Del mio morbo m' assale; tu la fronte mi fascia.

DES: (porgendogli un fazzoletto). A te.

OTE: No il fazzoletto voglio ch' io ti donai.

DES: Non l' ho meco.

OTE: Desdemona, guai se lo perdi! guai!
Una possente maga ne ordia lo stame arcano:
Ivi è reposta l' alta malia d' un talismano.
Bada! smarrirlo, oppur donarlo, è ria sventura!

DES: Il vero parli?

OTE: Il vero parlo.

DES: Mi fai paura!—

OTE: Che!? l' hai perduto forse?

DES: No—

OTE: Lo cerca.

DES: Fra poco—
Lo cercherò.

OTE: No tosto!

DES: Tu di me ti fai gioco,
Storni cosi l' inchiesta di Cassio; astuzia è questa
Del tuo pensier.

OTE: Pel cielo! l' anima mia sia desta!
Il fazzoletto!!!

DES: Gran Dio! nella tua voce v' è un grido di minaccia!

OTE: Alza quegli occhi!
(Prendendola a forza sotto il mento e alla spalla e obligandola a guardarlo.)

DES: Atroce idea!

OTE: Guardami in faccia!
Dimmi chi sei!

DES: La sposa fedel d'Otello.

OTE: Giura!
Giura e ti danna—

DES: Otello fedel mi credo.

OTE: Impura
Ti credo.

DES: Iddio m' aiuti!

OTE: Corri alla tua condanna,
Di' che sei casta.

DES: (fissandolo). Casta—lo son—

OTE: Giura e ti danna!!!

DES: It was this hand
That gave away my heart. But I must speak to you of Cassio.

OTH: I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me.
Lend me your handkerchief.

DES: (offers him her handkerchief). It is here.

OTH: Lend me the handkerchief I gave you
Not this.

DES: I have it not about me.

OTH: Take heed on it.
Woe to you should you lose it. My mother had it
From an Egyptian, a mighty charmer.
A potent spell is hidden in its texture,
To lose it or give it away were sure perdition.

DES: It it true you say?

OTH: Most veritable.

DES: You frighten me.

OTH: What? Tell me have you lost it?

DES: No!

OTH: Go fetch it!

DES: Believe me it is not lost.

OTH: Go fetch it!

DES: Why, so I can, Sir, but I will not now.
I pray let Cassio be received again.
This is a trick to put me from my suit.

OTH: By heaven! my mind misgives me. That handkerchief—

DES: To Cassio's suit you must listen!

OTH: That handkerchief!

DES: Great heaven! you seem to threaten. There is fury
In your words.

OTH: (putting his hand under her chin and forcing her to look at him). Lift up your eyes,
Look in my face! Say what are you?

DES: Your loyal wife, Othello!

OTH: Swear it, damn yourself!

DES: Heaven most truly knows it.

OTH: I think you are a strumpet.

DES: Oh heaven forgive us!

OTH: Once more your falsehood utter, say you're honest!

DES: (looking firmly at him). I am honest.

OTH: Swear it and damn yourself!

DES: Esterrefatta fisso lo sguardo tuo tremendo,
In te parla una Furia, la sento e non l' intendo.
Mi guarda! il volto e l' anima ti svelo; il core infranto
Mi scruta; io prego il cielo per te con questo pianto.
Per te con queste stille cocenti aspergo il suol,
Guarda le prime lagrime che da me spreme il duol.

OTE: S' or ti scorge il tuo dèmone un angelo ti crede
E non t' afferra.

DES: Vede l' Eterno la mia fede!

OTE: No! la vede l' inferno.

DES: La tua giustizia impetro, Sposo mio!

OTE: Ah! Desdemona! Indietro! indietro! indietro!!

DES: Tu pur piangi?!—e gemenido freni del cor lo schianto
E son io l' innocente cagion di tanto pianto!—
Qual è il mio fallo?

OTE: E il chiedi?—Il più nero delitto
Sovra il candido giglio della tua fronte è scritto.

DES: Ahimé!

OTE: Che? non sei forse una vil cortigiana?

DES: Ciel! No—no—pel battesmo della fede cristiana!—

OTE: Che?—

DES: Non son ciò che esprime quella parola orrenda.
(Ote. prende Des. per mano e la conduce alla porta d'onde entro.)

OTE: Datemi ancor l' eburnea mano, vo' fare ammenda.
Vi credea (perdonate se il mio pensiero è fello)
Quella vil cortigiana che è la sposa d' Otello.
(Alle ultime parole, Ote. che sarà sul l' mitare della porta di sinistra, sforza con und inflessione del braccio, Des. ad eseire. Poi ritorna verso il centrol dalla scena nel massimo grado dell'abbattimento.)

SCENA III

Otello

OTE: Dio! mi potevi scagliar tutti i mali
Della miseria, della vergogna,
Far de' miei baldi trofei trionfali
Una maceria, una menzogna—'
E avrei portato la croce crudel
D' angoscie e d' onte
Con calma fronte

DES: Upon my knees, beneath your glance I tremble.
I understand the fury in your words,
But not the words.
Behold, my face and soul lie open to you,
Oh, look into my broken heart, I pray.
My sighs rise up to heaven with a prayer
For you; for you these tears bedew the earth,
The first I ever shed.

OTH: The fiends themselves would fear to seize you
Being like one of heaven in mien and semblance.

DES: God sees my heart, and knows that I am honest.

OTH: He knows you're perjured.

DES: Be just to your loyal wife, Othello!

OTH: Oh, Desdemona, away, away, away!

DES: Why do you weep? Alack the heavy day!
Win it you must.
Whose is the fault? Am I the motive of these tears?
Have I offended?

OTH: You ask me! See the foul word written
On the white page of this most goodly book!

DES: Alas!

OTH: What, are not you an impudent strumpet?

DES: No! Your vile charge is false, as I'm a Christian!

OTH: What!

DES: No! I am not a strumpet; I grasp not the horrid word.
(Oth. takes Des. by the hand and leads her to the door by which she had entered.)

OTH: Once more give my your hand as white as snow!
I cry your mercy then, for I mistook you—
Pray parden if in thought or word I wronged you—
For that strumpet of Venice, who married with Othello.
(At the last word Oth., who by this time has reached the door on the right, pushes Des. out of the room. Then he returns to the center of the stage in great dejection.)

SCENE III

Othello

OTH: Had it pleased heaven to try me with affliction,
Had it rained sorrow and shame on my bare head,
And to the very lips in poverty steeped me.
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes

E ressegnato al volere del ciel.
Ma, o pianto, o duol! m' han rapito il miraggio
Dov' io, giulivo, l' anima acqueto.
Spento è quel sol, quel sorriso, quel raggio
Che mi fa vivo, che mi fa lieto!
Tu alfin, Clemenza, pio genio immortal
Dal roseo riso,
Copri il tuo viso
Santo coll' orrida larva infernal!

SCENE IV

Otello, poi Jago.

OTE: Ah! Dannazione!
Pria confessi il delitto e poscia muoia!
Confession! Confessione!—(Entra Jag.)
La prova!—

JAGO: (accanto ad Ote. e indicando l' ingresso). Cassio è là!

OTE: Là?! Cielo! gioia!!
(Poi con subito racapriccio.)
Orror!—Supplizi immondi!!

JAGO: Ti frena! Ti nascondi.
(Conduce rapidamente Ote., nel fondo a sinistra dove c' è il vano del verone corre verso il fondo del peristilio dove incontra Cas. che esita ad entrare.)

SCENA V

Otello nascosto. Jago e Cassio.

JAGO: Vieni l' aula è deserta.
T' inoltra, Capitano.

CAS: Questo nome d' onor suona ancor vano.
Per me.

JAGO: Fa cor, la tua ausa è in tal mano
Che la vittoria è certa.

CAS: Io qui credea di ritrovar Desdemona.

OTE: (nascosta). (Ei la nomò.)

CAS: Vorrei parlarle ancora,
Per saper se la mia grazia è profferta.

JAGO: (galamente). L'attendi; e intanto, giacchè non si stanca
Mai la tua lingua nelle fole gaie,
Narrami un po' di lei che t' innamora.
(Conducendo Cas. accanto alla prima colonna del peristilio.)

I could have borne it, though bitter it were and shameful.
A drop of patience I would still have found
In some place of my soul.
But there, where I have garnered up my heart
Where either I must live or bear no life,
The fountain from which my current runs
Or else dries up, to be discarded!
Turn your complexion there,
Patience, you young and rose-lipped cherubin!
Ay, there look grim as hell!

SCENE IV

Othello, afterwards Iago.

OTH: Death and damnation! to me you shall confess
And die hereafter! Handkerchief! handkerchief!
Confess it! (Enter Iago.)

IAGO: (coming up to Oth. and pointing to the entrance). Cassio's there.

OTH: There? Heaven, I thank you. (Suddenly relapsing into his first mood.)
Oh, monstrous! Their stolen pleasures—

IAGO: Hide there
And listen in patience.
(He rapidly leads Oth. to the right wing of the colonnade, and then runs to the portico through which enter Cas.)

SCENE V

Othello (hidden), Iago and Cas.

IAGO: Come, then! the hall's deserted.
How goes it, good lieutenant?

CAS: All the worse.
That by the name you call me I have lost.

IAGO: Take heart! in such hands is your case, that surely
You must win it.

CAS: Here did I hope to meet with Desdemona.

OTH: (aside). He's named her name!

CAS: Once more I fain would ask her
To bring my anxious suit unto an issue.

IAGO: (gaily). Await her then; and meantime
I know your tongue is burning now to tell me
Your amorous follies; say then, and speak of her
Whom you adore.
(He leads Cas. to the first column of the portico.)

CAS: Di chi?	CAS: Of whom?
JAGO: (sottovoce assai). Di Bianca.	IAGO: (very softly). Of Bianca.
OTE: (Sorride!)	OTH: (aside). He's laughing!
CAS: Baie!—	CAS: Nonsense!
JAGO: Essa t' avvince Coi vaghi rai.	IAGO: Say, will you wed her? Say, are you conquered?
CAS: Rider mi fai.	CAS: I can't help laughing
JAGO: Ride chi vince.	IAGO: He wins who laughs last.
CAS: (ridendo). In tai disfide—per verità, Vince chi ride—Ah! Ah!	CAS: (laughing). It is the monkey's own giving out. He wins who laughs last, ha! ha!
JAGO: (come sopra) Ah! Ah!	IAGO: Ha! ha!
OTE: (L' empio trionfa, il suo scherno m' uccide; Dio frena l' ansia che in core mi sta!)	OTH: (aside). The villain triumphs! his laughter smites my bosom; God give me patience to bear all this grief.
CAS: Son già di baci Sazio e di lai.	CAS: I loathe her kisses, They pall upon me.
JAGO: Rider mi fai.	IAGO: I can't help laughing.
CAS: O amor' fugaci!	CAS: Yea, love is fleeting.
JAGO: Vagheggi il regno—d' altra beltà. Colgo nel segno?	IAGO: Some other beauty has you in thrall. Say, have I caught you?
CAS: Ah! Ah!	CAS: Ha! ha!
JAGO: Ah! Ah!	IAGO: Ha! ha!
OTE: (L' empio m' irride—il suo scherno m' uccide; Dio frena l' ansia che in core mi sta!)	OTH: (as before). The villain laughs, his laughter smites my bosom; God give me patience to bear all this grief.
CAS: Nel segno hai côlto. Si, lo confesso. M' odi—	CAS: Yea, you have caught me, I must confess it, Hear me—
JAGO: (assai sottovoce). Sommesso Parla. T' ascolto.	IAGO: (very softly). Speak gently, Gently! I hear you.
CAS: (assai sottovoce, mentre Jag. lo conduce in posto più lontano da Ote.) (Or sì, or no si senton le parole.) Jago, t' è nota La mia dimorea— (Le parole si perdono.)	CAS: (speaking very gently, while Iago leads him to a place further from Oth.; his words are audible and inaudible at intervals.) Do you know Iago, Where is my lodging? (His words are lost.)
OTE: (avvicinandosi un poco e cautamente per udir cio che dicono). (Or gli racconta il modo, Il mago e l' ora—)	OTH: (cautiously approaching to hear what they are saying). Now does he tell him The manner, place, and hour.
CAS: (continuando il racconto sempre sottovoce). Da mano ignota— (Le parole si perdono ancora.)	CAS: (continuing his story and always speaking very gently). An unknown hand (Again the words are lost.)
OTE: Le parole non odo— Lass m'udir le vorrei! Dove son giunto!!	OTH: (aside). His words I cannot hear. Woe's me! I would know! Has it come to this?
CAS: Un vel trapunto— (Come sopra.)	CAS: A broidered napkin (Inaudible as above.)
JAGO: È strano! è strano!	IAGO: Curious, most curious!
OTE: (D' avvicinarmi Jago mi fa cenno.) (Passo passo con lenta cautela, Ote., nascondendosi dietro le colonne, arriverà più tardi vicino ai due.)	OTH: (aside). Iago beckons nearer to approach him. (Walking cautiously and hiding behind the columns, Oth. draws nearer to them.)
JAGO: (sottovoce). Da ignota mano? (Forte.) Baie!	IAGO: (softly). An unknown hand? (Aloud.) Nonsense!
CAS: Da senno. (Jag. gli fa cenno di parlar ancora sottovoce.) Quanto mi tarda Saper chi sia—	CAS: No, truly, (Iago makes signs to him to speak more gently.) I cannot fathom Who has placed it there.
JAGO: (guardando rapidamente dalla parte d' Ote., fra sè). (Otello spia.) (A Cas. ad alta roce.) L' hai teco?	IAGO: (looking to where Oth. stands; to himself). Othello sees us. (To Cas., aloud.) Where is it?
CAS: (estrae dal giustacuore il fazzoletto di Des.). Guarda.	CAS: (drawing Des.'s handkerchief from his doublet). Here it is.
JAGO: (prendendo il fazzoletto). Qual mera viglia! (A parte.) (Otello origlia. Ei s' avvicina Con mosse accorte.) (A Cas. inchinandosi scherzosamente e passando le mani dietro la schiena perchè Ote. possa osservare il fazzoletto.) Bel cavaliere—nel vostro ostel. Perdono gli angeli—l' aureola e il vel.	IAGO: (taking the handkerchief). Wonder of wonders! (Aside). Othello listens, Still drawing nigher With stealthy caution. (Holding the handkerchief behind him so as to let Oth. see it, and bowing laughingly to Cas). You gay young courtier, visiting angels In your fair house, forget their crown and wings.
OTE: (avvicinandosi assai al fazzoletto, dietro e spalle di Jag. e nascosto dalla prima colonna). (È quello! è quello! Ruina e Morte!)	OTH: (looking at the handkerchief and standing close to Iago, hidden by the first column). I know it, I know it! Oh monstrous, monstrous!
JAGO: (Origlia Otello.)	IAGO: (to himself). Othello listens.
OTE: (nascosto dietro la colonna e guardando di tratto in tratto il fazzoletto nelle mani da Cas.). Tutto è spento! Amore e duol. L' alma mia nessun più smova Tradimento, la tua prova Spaventosa mostri al Sol.	OTH: (hidden behind the column and looking at the handkerchief in Cas.'s hands). All has vanished, grief and love. Nothing more can move my heart. Latent treason, hatched in night, Now lies open to the light.
JAGO: (a Cas. indicando il fazzoletto). Quest' è una ragna Dove il tuo cuor Casca, si lagna, S' impiglia e muor. Troppo l' ammiri, Troppo la guardi, Bada ai deliri Vani e bugiardi. Quest' è una ragna Dove il tuo cuor Casca, si lagna, S' impiglia e muor.	IAGO: (to Cas., pointing to the handkerchief). This is a spider's web Where your poor heart Is caught and languishes, Never to part. While you are feeling Raptures unceasing, Firmly she holds you Never releasing. This is a spider's web Where your poor heart Is caught and languishes, Never to part.
CAS: (guardando il fazzoletto che avrà ritolto a Jag.) Miracolo vago Dell' aspo e dell' ago Che in raggi tramuta Le fila d'un vel; Più bianco, più lieve Che fiocco di neve, Che nube tessuta Dall' aure del ciel. (Squillo di tromba interno, poi un colpo di canonne; Ote. sarà ritornato nel vano del verone.)	CAS: (looking at the handkerchief, which he has taken from Iago). This is a wonder, wrought By thread and thimble; Unto a ray of light The fabric's changed. No snowdrift is whiter, No gossamer lighter, It is like a cloudlet That floats in the sky. (Trumpet signals, and afterwards a gun fired behind; Oth. has again retired to the colonnade.)

JAGO: Quest' è il segnale che annucia l' approdo
Della trireme veneziana. Ascolta.
(Squilli da varie parti.)
Tutto il castel co' suoi squilli risponde.
Se qui non vuoi con Otello scontrarti Fuggi.

CAS: Addio.

JAGO: Va.
(Cas. esce vetocemente dal fondo.)

SCENA VI

Jago. Otello.

OTE: (avvicinandosi a Jag.). Come la ucciderò?

JAGO: Vedeste ben com' egli ha riso?

OTE: Vidi.
(Di tanto in tanto salve di gioia e squilli che si avvicinana.)

JAGO: E il fazzoletto?

OTE: Tutto vidi.

VOCI: (dal di fuori, lontane). Evviva!

VOCI: Alla riva!

VOCI: Allo sbarco!

OTE: È condannata.
Fa ch' io m' abbia un velen per questa notte.

VOCI: (più vicine). Evviva! Evviva il Leon di San Marco!

JAGO: Il tosco no, val meglio soffocarla,
Là nel suo letto, là dove ha peccato.

OTE: Questa giustizia tua mi piace.

JAGO: A Cassio
Jago provvederà.

OTE: Jago, fiu d' ora
Mio Capitano t' eleggo.

JAGO: Mio Duce,
Grazie vi rendo.
(Il tumulto è sempre più vicino. Fanfare e grida.)
Ecco gli Ambasciatori.
Li accogliete. Ma ad evitar sospetti
Desdemona si mostri a quei Messeri.

OTE: Si, vui l' adduci.
(Jag. esce dalla prota di sinistra: Ote. s' avvia verso il fondo per ricevere gli Ambasciatori.)

SCENA VII

Otello, Lodovico, Rodorigo, L' Araldo.—Dignitari della Repubblica Veneta—Gentiluomini e Dame—Soldati—Trombettieri, dal fondo—poi Jago con Desdemona ed Emilia dalla sinistra.

IAGO: This is the signal announcing that the galley from Venice (trumpets from various sides) is at anchor. Listen! With all its trumpets the castle gives answer; if you wish not Othello to meet you, hasten!

CAS: Farewell then.

IAGO: Go!
(Exit Cas. quickly at back.)

SCENE VI

Iago. Othello.

OTH: (going up to Iago). How shall I murder him?

IAGO: Did you perceive him gaily laughing?

OTH: Truly.
(Guns and trumpets heard at intervals, coming nearer.)

IAGO: The napkin did you see?

OTH: Ay, well I saw it.

VOICES: (in the distance, behind). Be welcome!

OTHERS: To the shoreward!

OTHERS: Pull together!

OTH: Her fate is settled;
This same night she must die. Give me some poison.

VOICES: (nearer). Welcome! welcome! the lion of San Marco!

IAGO: Do it not with poison; better to strangle her,
There in her bed, the bed she has defiled.

OTH: Good, good, the justice of it pleases.

IAGO: For Cassio
I will myself provide.

OTH: You, from this hour, Iago,
Are my lieutenant.

IAGO: My general, I proffer thanks.
(The noise outside approaches more and more; shouts and flourish of trumpets.)
There's some one come from Venice, go receive him,
And, to avoid suspicion,
Let Desdemona be present with yourself.

OTH: Yea, go to call her.
(Exit Iago right. Oth. goes towards back to receive the Ambassadors.)

SCENE VII

Othello, Lodovico, Roderigo, the Herald—Dignitaries of the Venetian Republic—Ladies and Cavaliers—Soldiers—Trumpeters at back. Afterwards Iago with Desdemona and Emilia entering from right.

LOD: (tenendo una pergamena). Il Doge ed il senato
Salutano l' eroe trionfatore
Di Cipro. Io reco nelle vostre mani
Il messaggio dogale.

OTE: (prendendo il messaggio e baciando il suggello). Io bacio il segno
Della Sovranna Maestà.
(Lo spiega e legge.)

LOD: (avvicinandosi a Des.). Madonna,
V' abbia il cielo in sua guardia.

DES: E il ciel v' ascolti.

EMI: (a Des., a parte). (Come sei mesta.)

DES: (ad Emi., a parte). Emilia! una gran nube
Turba il senno d' Otello e il mio destino.

JAGO: (andando a Lod.). Messer, son lieto di vedervi.
(Lod., Des. e Jag. formano crocchio insieme.)

LOD: Jago,
Quali nuove?—ma in mezzo a voi non trovo Cassio.

JAGO: Con lui crucciato è Otello.

DES: Credo Che in grazia tornerà.

OTE: (a Des. rapidamente e sempre in atto di leggere). Ne siete certa?

DES: Che dite?

LOD: El legge, non vi parla.

JAGO: Forse
Che in grazia tornerà.

DES: Jago, lo spero;
Sai se un verace affetto io porti a Cassio—

OTE: (sempre in atto di leggere e febbrilmente a Des. sottovoce). Frenate dunque le labbra loquaci—

DES: Perdonate, Signor—

OTE: (avventandosi contro Des.). Demonio taci!!

LOD: (arrestando il gesto d' Ote.). Ferma!

TUTTI: Orrore!

LOD: La mente mia non osa
Pensar ch' io vidi il vero.

OTE: (repentinamente all' Araldo e con accento imperioso). A me Cassio!
(L' Araldo esce.)

JAGO: (passando rapido accanto ad Ote., e a bassa voce). (Che tenti?)

LOD: (holding a parchment). The Duke and Senate
Of Venice greet the glorious hero
Of Cyprus. To your own hands I here deliver
Their gracious message.

OTH: (taking the letter and kissing the seal). I kiss the symbol of their sovereign majesty.
(Opens the letter and reads.)

LOD: (going up to Des.). My lady, may the angels protect you!

DES: May
Heaven hear you.

EMI: (to Des., aside). Why this sadness?

DES: (to Emi., aside). Oh, Emilia,
A heavy cloud hangs over Othello's mind,
And over my future.

IAGO: (to Lod., going up to him). Most Welcome!
I am very glad to see you.
(Lod., Des. and Iago form a group.)

LOD: Thank you, Iago. What news, how does Lieutenant Cassio?

IAGO: Othello's annoyed with him.

DES: But soon he will regain his grace.

OTH: (to Des., speaking rapidly and continuing to read). Are you So certain?

DES: What say you?

LOD: He's reading and did not listen.

IAGO: Perhaps he will regain his grace.

DES: Firmly I hope so, I would do much
For the love I bear to Cassio.

OTH: (always pretending to read, excitedly to Des. in a whisper). Pray keep Your eloquent tongue from wagging.

DES: Pray forgive me,
My lord.

OTH: (about to strike Des.). Be silent, devil!

LOD: (holding back Oth.) Spare her!

ALL: Horror!

LOD: My mind cannot believe this deed, although
I saw it.

OTH: (to the Herald, in a commanding voice). Call Cassio.
(Exit Herald.)

IAGO: (going rapidly up to Oth., softly). Wherefor?

OTE: (a Jag. a bassa voce). (Guardala mentr' ei giunge.)	OTH: (aside to Iago). Watch her When first he enters!
LOD: Ah! triste sposa! (A bassa voce avvicinandosi a Jag. che si sara un po' allontanato da Ote.) Quest' è dunque l' eroe? quest' è il guerriero Dai sublimi ardimenti?	LOD: Unhappy lady! (aside to Iago, who has gone a little distance from Oth.) Is this the noble Moor, whom our full Senate Call all in all sufficient?
JAGO: (a Lod. alzando le spalle). E quel ch' egli è.	IAGO: (to Lod., shrugging his shoulders). He's that he is.
LOD: Palesa il tuo pensiero.	LOD: What think you? Let me know.
JAGO: Meglio è tener su ciò la lingua muta.	IAGO: Pray pardon me, I dare not breathe my censure.

SCENA VIII

SCENE VIII

Cassio Seguìto dall' Araldo, e detti.	Enter Cassio, followed by the Herald.
OTE: (che avrà sempre fissato la porta). (Eccolo! È lui!) (Avvicinandosi a Jag. mentre Cas. è sulla soglie.) (Nell' animo lo scruta.) (ad alta voce a tutti). Messeri! Il Doge— (Ruvidamente ma sottovoce a Des.) —(ben tu fingi il pianto) (A tutti ad alta voce.) Mi richiama a Venezia.	OTH: (who has been intently looking towards the door). He comes, it is he! (Aside to Iago, while Cas. is on the threshold). Watch him with all your senses. (In a loud voice, to all.) Good Sirs, the Duke here—(furiously in a whisper to Des.). (Oh, well-painted passion!) Has recalled me to Venice.
ROD: (Infida sorte!)	ROD: (aside). Then all is over.
OTE: (continuando ad alta voce e dominandosi). E in Cipro elegge Mio successor colui che stava accanto Al mio vessillo, Cassio.	OTH: (in a loud voice, controlling himself). In Cyprus is chosen in my place even he Who was for these years my lieutenant, Cassio.
JAGO: (fieramente e sopreso). (Inferno e morte!)	IAGO: (aside, surprised and furious). Death and perdition!
OTE: (continuando come sopra e mostrando la pergamena). La parola Ducale è nostra legge.	OTH: (speaking as above, and pointing to the document). Sir, I obey the mandate of the Duke.
CAS: Obbedirò.	CAS: (bowing to Oth.). I, too, obey,
OTH: (rapidamente a Jag. in segreto ed indicando Cas.). (Vedi? non par che esulti L' infame.	OTH: (to Iago, in a rapid whisper, pointing to Cas.). You see? the villain seems not To like it.
JAGO: No.)	IAGO: No!
OTE: (ad alta voce a tutti). La ciurma e la corte (A Des. sottovoce e rapidissimo.) (Continua i tuoi singulti—) (Ad alta voce a tutti, senza più guardar Cas.) E le navi e il castello Lascio in poter del nuovo Duce.	OTH: (aloud). The city and the army— (To Des., very rapidly and in a whisper.) (Pray do not stop your weeping!)— (Aloud again, and taking no further notice of Cas.) And the ships And fortress I leave in charge of my successor.
LOD: (a Ote. additando Des. che s' avvicina supplichevolmente). Otello, Per pietà, la conforta, o il cor le infrangi.	LOD: (to Oth., pointing to Des., who comes near in an imploring attitude). Othello, speak to her and comfort her, Her heart is breaking.
OTE: (a Lod. e Des.). Noi salperem domani. (Afferra Des furiosamente.) A terra!—e piangi!— (Des. cade. Emi. e Lod. la raccolgono e la sollevano pietosamente.)	OTH: (to Lod. and Des.). We shall sail tomorrow. To earth, on your knees! (Takes hold of Des. furiously.) (Des. falls, Emi. and Lod. lift her up and try to comfort her.)
DES: A terra!—sì, nel livido Fango—percossa—io giacio— Piango—m' agghiaccia il brivido Dell' anima che muor. E un di sul mio sorriso Fioria la speme e il bacio Ed or—l' angescia in viso E l' agonia nel cor. Quel Sol sereno e vivido Che allieta il cielo e il mare Non può asciugar le amare Stille del mio dolor.	DES: Yea, prostrate here, I lie in the dust, My heart is beating with anguish I feel the icy breath Of ill, that augurs death. The light upon his brow His smile, his tender greeting, His kiss, where are they now? Weep then for aye I must. The sun who from his cloudless sky Illumes the earth with splendor, No comfort can he tender, My tears he cannot dry.
EMI: (Quella innocente un fremito D' odio non ha nè un gesto, Trattiene in petto il gemito Con doloroso fren. La lagrima si frange Muta sul volto mesto: No, chi per lei non piange Non ha pietade in sen.)	EMI: (to herself). Her innocence is silent all, No rancor bears her constant heart. Deep in her bosom dies the sigh Wrung from her by her grief; The bitter teardrops, as they fall, Can never bring relief. Oh, weep for her who meekly Thus her misfortune bears.
ROD: (Per me s' oscura il mondo, S' annuvola il destin; L' angiol soave e biondo Scompar dul mio cammin.)	ROD: (to himself). Now all the world is darkened, All sunless is the day; She whom my heart did worship Has vanished from my way.
CAS: (L' ora è fatal! un fulmine Sul mio cammin l' addita. Già di mia sorte il culmine S' offre all' inerte man. L' ebbra fortuna incalza La fuga della vita. Questa che al ciel m' innalza E un' onda d' uragan.)	CAS: (to himself). Fatal the hours, a lightning's flash Shows me the threatening danger; Honor and riches crowd on, Their brightness brings no joy. A fickle fortune's anger Too soon will overtake me, And from this dream awake me, As with the thunder's crash.
LOD: (Egli la man funerea Scuote anelando d' ira, Essa la faccia eterea Volge piangendo al ciel. Nel contemplar quel pianto La carità sospira, E un tenero compianto Stempra del core il gel.	LOD: (to himself). His hand is raised against her, Wrath every word is breathing; She with a gentle meekness For rescue looks above. Gazing upon her sadness Moved is my heart with pity. Ah! could my help avail her Soon to regain his love.
IL CORO: (A gruppi dialogando.)	CHO: (in various groups, talking together).
DAME: Pietà!	LADIES: Alas!
CAV: Mistero!	CAV: A secret!
DAME: Anisia mortale, bieca, Ne ingombra, anime assorte in lungo orror.	LADIES: Some mortal anguish dark and undefined With thoughts of evil shrouds his mind.
CAV: Quell' uomo nero è sepolcrale, e cieca Un' ombra è in lui di morte e di terror.	CAV: Black are his visage and his soul, his eyes Are lighted with a presage of some ill.
DAME: Vista crudel!	LADIES: A mournful sight!

CAV: Strazia coll' ugna l' orrido
Petto! Figge gli sguardi immoti al suol.
Poi sfida il ciel coll' atre pugna, l' ispido
Aspetto ergendo ai dardi alti del Sol.

DAME: Ei la colpì! vuel viso santo, pallido,
Blando, si china e tace e piange e muor.
Piangon così nel ciel lor pianto gli angeli
Quando perduto giace il perccator.

JAGO: (avvicinandosi a Ote. che resterà accascio su d'un sedile).
(Una parola.

OTE: E che?

JAGO: T' affretta! Rapido Slancia la tua vendetta! il tempo vola.

OTE: Ben parli.

JAGO: E l' ira inutil ciancia. Scuotiti!
All' opra ergi tua mira? All' opra sola!
Io penso a Cassio. Ei le sue trame espia.
L' infame anima ria l'averno inghiotte!

OTE: Chi gliela svelle?

JAGO: Io.

OTE: Tu?

JAGO: Giurai.

OTE: Tal sia.

JAGO: Tu avrai le sue novelle in questa notte—)
(Abbandona Ote. e si dirige verso Rod.) (ironicamente a Rod.) (I sogni tuoi saranno in mar domani
E tu sull' aspra terra!

ROD: Ahi triste!

JAGO: Stolto! Se vuoi tu puoi sperar; gli umani
Orsù! cimenti afferra, e m' odi.

ROD: Ascolto.

JAGO: Col primo albor salpa il vascello. Or Cassio
È il Duce. Eppur so avvien che a questi accada (toccando la spada.)
Sventura—allor qui resta Otello.

ROD: Lugubre
Luce d' atro balen!

JAGO: Mano alla spada!
A notte folta io la sua traccia viglio,
E il varco e l' ora scruto, il resto a te.
Sarò tua scolta. A caccia! a caccia! Cingiti ROD: Sì! t' ho venduto onore e fè).
L' arco!

CAV: With clenched hands, wildly
He beats his bosom;
His eyes are fixed upon the ground,
Now he looks up as if defying
With threatening glance the power's above.

LADIES: Her face he struck, so pale, so like unto an angel's;
She stands in silence weeping there.
It is thus that angels weep, when from high heaven above
They see a sinner writhing in despair.

IAGO: (approaching Oth., who remains seated). Let me advise you.

OTH: What in?

IAGO: Strike quickly, do not tarry
In your revenge, for time flies swiftly.

OTH: Well spoken!

IAGO: Your wrath is like to slacken; let it not!
To work! without delay and without pity!
I'll see to Cassio; I know where to find him.
His soul shall tinge Avernus with deeper dye.

OTH: Who will dispatch him?

IAGO: I!

OTH: You?

IAGO: I have sworn it.

OTH: So be it.

IAGO: You shall have certain news this very evening.
(He leaves Oth. and goes to Rod.)
(ironically to Rod.). Your true love will be on the sea tomorrow
And you on dry land.

ROD: It is too certain!

IAGO: Coward!
For brave men there is hope; bestir then,
Use every effort, and hear me!

ROD: I hear you.

IAGO: At break of day will sail the vessel. Then Cassio
Is General. If meanwhile he should meet with (Laying his hand on his sword.)
Some accident, then here remains Othello.

ROD: What baneful plan does your counsel imply?

IAGO: Unsheath
Your weapon! From early fall of night I'll watch his traces I'll tell you place and moment,
Then must you act. I will be near you.
The hunt is up, good luck my noble huntsman!

ROD: Yea, I am yours and must obey.

JAGO: (Corri al miraggio! il fragile tuo senno
Ha già confuso un sogno menzogner.
Segui l' astuto ed agile mio cenno,
Amante illuso, io seguo il mio pensier.)

ROD: (Il dado è tratto! Impavido t' attendo
Ultima sorte, occulto mio destin.
Mi sprona amor, ma un avido, tremendo
Astro di morte infesta il mio cammin.)

OTE: (ergendosi e rivolto alla folla, terribilmente). Fuggite!

TUTTI: Ciel!

OTE: (slanciandosi contro la folla). Tutti fuggite
Otello!
(Fanfara interna.)

JAGO: (agli astanti). Lo assale una malìa
Che d' ogni senso il priva.

OTE: (con forza). Chi no si scosta è contro me rubello.

LOD: (fa per trascinare lontano Des.). Mi segui—

VOCI: (dal di fuori). Evviva!

DES: (sciogliendosi da Lod. e accorrendo verso Ote.). Mio spose!

OTE: (a Des.). Anima mia
Ti maledico!

TUTTI: (escono inorriditi). Orror!—
(Des., fra Emi. e Lod., esce.)

SCENA IX

Otello e Jago soli.

OTE: (sempre più affannoso).
Fuggirmi io sol non so!— Sangue!
Ah! l' abbietto
Pensiero!—ciò m' accora!
(Convulsivamente, delirando.)
Verderli insieme avvinti—il fazzoletto!—Ah!
(Sviene.)

JAGO: (Il mio velen lavora.)
(Fanfare e Voci dal di fuori.)
Viva Otello!

JAGO: (ascoltando le grida, poi osservando Ote. disteso a terra tramortito). L' eco della vittoria Porge sua laude estrema.
(Dopo una pausa.)
Chi può vietar che questa fronte io prema
Col mio tallone?
(Fanfare e voci esterne più vicine).

IAGO: (to himself). Idle the visions, empty as air, you follow;
Such is the path my will for you has wrought;
Go then and do the deed even as I bid you,
Deluded swain, you act what I have thought.

ROD: (to himself). I will not falter, the die is cast, I follow
Wherever you lead me, unknown destiny.
Love is my guide. Ah, deep, resistless longing
Be it to death, I still must follow you.

OTH: (rising and turning to the crowd, with terrible expression).
Avaunt!

ALL: Heaven!

OTH: (rushing towards the crowd). All fly before Othello!

IAGO: (to the bystanders).
(Flourish behind.)
He's taken with a sickness which of all sense
Deprives him.

OTH: (in a loud voice). He is declared a rebel
Who any longer tarries.

LOD: (trying to draw Des. away).
Follow me.

VOICES: (outside). Vittoria!

DES: (freeing herself from Lod., and rushing towards Oth). My husband!

OTH: (to Des.). Wife of my bosom, my curses on you!

ALL: Great heaven!
(Exeunt in terror. Des. is led away by Emi. and Lod.)

SCENE IX

Othello and Iago.

OTH: (more and more excited). I alone cannot fly. Murder! Ah! too monstrous
To think of! "I do not like that!"
(In convulsions.)
To see them clasp each other! That handkerchief!
Ah!
(He swoons.)

IAGO: (to himself). He changes with my poison.
(Flourish of trumpets.)

VOICES: (outside). Hail Othello!

IAGO: (listening to the cries, then looking at Oth., who lies stretched out before him). Echo's loud with his glory, praising his valor.
(After a pause.)
Who here can prevent me to plant my bootheel
Upon his forehead?
(Flourishes and voices outside coming nearer.)

Evviva Otello! Gloria
Al Leon di Venezia!
(ritto e con gesto d' orrendo trionfo, indicando il corpo inerte d' Ote.). Ecco il Leone!—

■ ATTO QUARTO

La camera di Desdemona. Letto, inginocchiatoio, tavolo, specchio, sedie. Una lampada arde appesa devanti all' immagine della Madonna che sta al di sopra dell' inginocchiatoio. Porta a destra. È notte. Un lume acceso sul tavolo.

SCENA I

Desdemona. Emilia.

EMI: Era più calmo?

DES: Mi parea. M' ingiunse
Di coricarmi e d' attenderlo. Emilia,
Te ne prego, distendi sul mio letto
La mia candida veste nuzïale.
M' odi. Se pria di te morir dovessi
Mi seppellisei con un di quei veli.

EMI: Scacciate queste idee.

DES: (sedendo macchinalment davanti allo specchio). Son mesta tanto.
Mia madre aveva una povera ancella
Innamorata e bella;
Era il suo nome
Barbara. Amava
Un uom che poi l' abbendono, cantava
Una canzone: la canzon del Salice.
(a Emi.)
Mi disciogli le chiome—
Io questra sera ho la memoria piena
Di quella cantilena:
"Piangea cantando
Nell' erma landa,
Piangea la mesta.
O Salce! Salce! Salce!
Sedea chinando
Sul sen la testa!
O Salce! Salce! Salce!
Cantiamo! il Salce funebre
Sarà la mia ghirlanda."
Affrettati; fra poco giunge Otello.
"Scorreano i rivi fra le zolle in fior,
Gemea quel core affranto,
E dalle ciglia le sgorgava il cor
L' amara onda del pianto.
O Salce! Salce! Salce!
Cantiam la nenia blanda.
Cantiamo! il Salce funebre
Sarà la mia ghirlanda."
"Scendean gli augelli a vol dai rami cupi
Verso quel dolce canto.
E gli occhi suoi piangevan tanto, tanto,

Vittoria! Long live Othello!
Hail to the lion of Venice!
(standing erect and pointing with horrible triumph to the motionless body of Oth.). See here, the Lion!

■ ACT IV

The bedroom of Desdemona. A bed, prie-Dieu, table, looking glass, chairs. A burning lamp is suspended in front of the image of the Madonna, which is above the prie-Dieu. Door to left. It is night. A candle on the table.

SCENE I

Desdemona. Emilia.

EMI: He looked more gentle?

DES: So it seemed. He bade me
Soon to await him, and to go to bed.
Emilia, let me ask you, before you go,
Lay on my bed the same sheets that were there
Upon my wedding night. And pray,
If I should die before you, let me be shrouded
In one of those same sheets.

EMI: Come, come, you talk of fancies.

DES: (sitting down mechanically before the looking glass). I am sad tonight and weary.
My mother, long ago, had a poor maid,
As fair as she was faithful, and her name
Was Barbara.
She was in love, and he she loved proved mad
And did forsake her. She had a song of Willow.
(To Emi.)
Loose my hair, and go. That song this evening
Will not go from my mind; like that poor maid
I even must sing it:—
"The poor soul sat pining
Alone and lonely,
There on the lonely strand.
Sing willow, willow, willow!
Upon her bosom her head inclining.
Sing heigho, sing heigho!
Sing all a green willow shall be my garland."
(To Emi.)
Please, go, anon will come Othello.
"The fresh stream ran by her,
Where the rushes grow,
And murmured all her moaning;
And from her eyes the sad tears did flow
Which in her heart were rising.
Sing willow, willow, willow!
Sing heigho, sing heigho!
Sing all a green willow shall be my

Da impietosir le rupi."
(A Emi. levandosi un anello dal dito)
Riponi questo annello.
Povera Barbara!—Solea la storia con questo semplice—suono finir:
"Egli era nato—per la sua gloria,
Io per amarlo."
(Interrompende)
Ascolta. Odo un lamento.
(Emi. fa qualche passo)
Taci. Chi batte a quella porta?—

EMI: È il vento.

DES: "Io per amarlo e per morir."
Emilia, addio. Come m' ardon le ciglia!
E presagio di pianto.
(Abbraccia Emi., che esce)
Buona notte.

SCENA II

Desdemona sola.
Va all' inginocchiatoio.

DES: Ava Maria piena di grazia, eletta
Fra le spose e le vergini sei tu,
Sia benedetto il frutto, o benedetta,
Di tue materne viscere, Gesú.
Prega per chi adorando a te si prostra,
Prega pel peccator, per l' innocente
E pel debole oppresso e pel possente,
Misero anch' esso, tua pietà dimostra.
Prega per chi sotto l' oltraggio piega
La fronte e sotto la malvagia sorte;
Per noi tu prega
Sempre e nell' ora della morte nostra.
(Resta ancora inginocchiata ed appoggia la fronte sul l'inginocchiatoio come chi ripetamentalmente una orazione. Non s' odono che le prime e le ultime parole della preghiera.)
Ave Maria . . . . . .
. . . . . . nell' ora della morte.
Amen.
(S' alza e va a coricarsi.)

SCENA III

Desdemona. Otello.

garland."
"Down from the branches all the birds came flying,
Listening to her sweet sighing.
So full of sorrow was her tender ditty
The stones were moved to pity."
(To Emi., taking a ring from her finger.)
Lay by this ring and guard it.
Alas, poor Barbara! I think her story
In sad and simple wise thus used to end.
"For he was born to live in glory
And I to love him . . . .
(Interrupting herself.)
Do harken! Was that a sigh?
(Emi. goes towards the window.)
Listen! Who is it
That knocks at this hour?

EMI: The wind.

DES: "And I to love him and to die."
Farewell, Emilia! My eyes itch this evening.
Do you think it bodes weeping?
(She embraces Emi., who exit.)
Good-night.

SCENE II

Desdemona, alone.
(She kneels before the image of the Madonna.

DES: Hail Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with You, blessed are you amongst women, and Blessed is the fruit of your womb, Jesus.
Ah, pray for her who lies in prayer before you!
Pray for the sinner, and for the sinless,
Give aid to the oppressed and to the mighty—
He too will need it—pray for all who implore you,
Pray for her who is sadly sighing
As all the hopes of happiness betray her.
Oh, grant my prayer!
Pray for us now and in the hour of dying.
(She remains kneeling, resting her head on the prie-Dieu as if she were repeating a prayer, only the first and last words of which are audible.)
Holy Mary . . . . . .
. . . . . . at the hour of our death.
Amen.
(She rises and lies down on the bed.)

SCENE III

Desdemona. Othello.

Ote. entra da una porta segreta, depone una scimitarra sul tavolo, s' arresta davanti alla face, titubante se spegnerla o no. Guarda Des. Spegne la face. La scena resta rischiarata dal solo lume dell' inginocchiatoio. Ote. spinto da un impeto di furore, s' avvicina al letto; ma là s' arresta. Contempla lungamente Des. che dorme. La bacia tre volte. All' ultimo bacia Des. si desta.	Oth. enters by a secret door, and places a scymitar on the table. He stands before the candle doubtful whether to blow it out or not. He looks at Des. and then extinguishes the candle. The only light on the stage is that of the lamp above the prie-Dieu. Oth., in an impulse of fury, goes towards the bed, but there stops himself. He looks for a long time on the sleeping Des., then kisses her three times. At the last kiss Des. awakens.
DES: Chi è la?— Otello?	DES: Who's there? Othello?
OTE: Si. Diceste questa sera Le vostre preci?	OTH: Ay. Have you prayed tonight, Desdemona?
DES: Orai.	DES: I have.
OTE: Se vi sovviene Di qualche colpa commessa che attenda Grazia dal ciel, imploratela tosto.	OTH: If you think of any crime Unreconciled as yet to heaven and grace, Solicit for it straight.
DES: Perchè?	DES: My lord?
OTE: T' affretta. Uccidere non voglio L' anima tua.	OTH: Well, do it! For heaven forefend, I would not kill your soul.
DES: D' uccider parli?	DES: Talk you of killing?
OTE: Si.	OTH: Yes.
DES: Pietà di me, mio Dio.	DES: Then Lord have mercy On me.
OTE: Amen.	OTH: Amen!
DES: E abbiate Pietà voi pure.	DES: Ah, then you too have mercy!
OTE: Pensa ai tuo peccati.	OTH: Think of your sins.
DES: Mio peccato è l' amor.	DES: They are loves I bear to you.
OTE: Perciò tu muori	OTH: For that you die.
DES: E perchè t' amo m' uccidi?	DES: Because I love you you kill me?
OTE: Ami Cassio.	OTH: You love Cassio.
DES: No! sull' anima mia!!	DES: No, I swear it by my soul.
OTE: Quel fazzoletto Ch' io ti donai gli desti.	OTH: That handkerchief I loved you gave to Cassio.
DES: Non è vero!	DES: It is a falsehood.
OTE: Nella sua man lo vidi.	OTH: I saw it in his own hands.
DES: Io rea non sono!	DES: And yet I'm guiltless.
OTE: Confessa!	OTH: Confess!
DES: Giuro!	DES: Guiltless!
OTE: Bada allo spergiuro— Pensa che sei sul tuo letto di morte.	OTH: Take heed of perjury. Know that you are lying Upon your deathbed.
DES: Non per morir.	DES: But not yet to die.
OTE: Per morir tosto.	OTH: Yes, presently.
DES: Aita! Cassio non amo—ch' ei qui venga—ei parli.	DES: Lord help me! I love not Cassio. Call him here and ask him!
OTE: Muto è per sempre.	OTH: He's mute for ever.
DES: Cielo! Morto?	DES: Heaven! Dead?
OTE: Morto.	OTH: Dead!
DES: Son perduta—ei tradito!	DES: Alas! he is betrayed, and I undone.
OTE: E pianger l' osi?	OTH: Do you weep, strumpet?
DES: Otello—non uccidermi—	DES: Oh, banish me, my lord, But do not kill me!
OTE: Tu invano Ti difendi.	OTH: No, nothing now will save you.
DES: Ch' io viva ancor—	DES: Oh, spare me, let me live.
OTE: Giù! cadi, Prostituta!—	OTH: Down with you strumpet!
DES: Pietà!	DES: Have pity!
OTE: Muori!!	OTE: No.
DES: Ch' io viva Questa notte—	DES: Let me but live tonight!
OTE: No.	OTH: No!
DES: Un' ora—	DES: An hour!
OTE: No.	OTH: No!
DES: Un instante. Sol ch' io dica un' Ave.	DES: One moment, But while I say my prayer!
OTE: No!
OTE: È tardi! È tardi!— (La soffoca. Un grido di Des. S' ode bussare alla porta.)	OTH: It is too late! (He stifles her. Shriek of Des. Knocking at the door.)
OTE: (contemplando il corpor inerte di Des.). Calma come la tomba.	OTH: (looking on the motionless form of Des.). Still as the grave!
EMI: (dal di fuori). Aprite! Aprite!	EMI: (outside). Within there, open!
OTE: (trabalzando). Chi è là!— Chi batte!	OTH: (faltering). Who's there? Who knocks thus?
EMI: (come sopra). Signor mio—ven prego, Lasciate ch' io vi parli—Aprite!	EMI: (still outside). Good my lord, do hear me. I would but speak a word with you; pray open!
OTE: (aprendo). Emilia, Che avvenne?	OTH: (opening the door). Emilia, what is it?
EMI: (entrando). Un gran delitto! Cassio uccise Rodrigo.	EMI: (entering). It is foul murder! Cassio has killed Roderigo.
OTE: E Cassio?	OTH: And Cassio?
EMI: Vive.	EMI: Lives.
OTE: Cassio vive!!	OTH: Cassio lives?
EMI: (dal letto). Ingiustamente—uccisa ingiustamente—	DES: (from the bed). I die here guiltless, I've been slain unjustly.
EMI: (accorrendo al letto). Chi geme là? Orror!	EMI: (running to the bed). What cry is that? Ho, help!
DES: Muoio innocente—	DES: I die here guiltless.
EMI: Gran Dio! Chi fu?	EMI: Great heaven! who did this deed?
DES: Nessuno—io stessa–al mio Signor mi raccomanda—Emilia—Addio— (Muore.)	DES: No one;—myself. Unto my lord—pray you commend me—I die Guiltless—farewell, Emilia. (Dies.)
OTE: O mentitrice! io l' uccisi.	OTH: She dies a liar; It was I that killed her.
EMI: Assassino!	EMI: Vile assassin!
OTE: Fu di Cassio la druda. A Jago il chiedi.	OTH: Strumpet She was to Cassio. It was your husband told me.
EMI: A Jago?	EMI: My husband?
OTE: A Jago.	OTH: Ay, your husband!
EMI: Stolto!! e tu il credesti?—	EMI: Fool! and did you believe him?
OTE: Negarlo ardisci? (Fa per avventarsi contro Emi.)	OTH: (threatening Emi.). Dare you deny it?
EMI: Non ti temo.	EMI: You I fear not.
OTE: (la afferra). Bada!	OTH: (taking hold of her). Tarry!

EMI: (si svincola e corre verso la porta gridando disperatamente). Olà! Soccorso! Aiuto! Otello uccise Desdemona!	EMI: (frees herself and runs to the door, crying loudly). Ho, help! The Moor has killed my mistress.
SCENA IV	SCENE IV
Otello, Emilia, Lodovico, Cassio, Jago. Poi Montano con gente armata.	Othello, Emilia, Lodovico, Cassio, Iago; afterwards Montano and Soldiers.
TUTTI: (tranne Ote. ed Emi.). Quai grida! Orrore! Orrore!	ALL: (except Oth. and Emi.). Oh! horror! horror!
EMI: Jago, smentisci quel vile assassino. Hai tu creduto Desdemona infida? Parla!	EMI: (to Iago). Speak if you are a man, disprove this villain. He says, you told him that his wife was false.
JAGO: Tal la credea.	IAGO: So I believed.
OTE: Quel fazzoletto Che un di le diedi, a Cassio essa donava.	OTH: The pledge and token Which first I gave her, I saw it in Cassio's hand.
EMI: O potenza divina!	EMI: Oh, heavenly powers!
JAGO: (ad Emi.). Taci.	IAGO: (to Emi.). Silence!
EMI: No, Tutto revelo	EMI: No, I will reveal it.
JAGO: Taci.	IAGO: Be silent!
EMI: No! costui Dalla mia man quel fazzoletto svelse A viva forza.	EMI: No! That handkerchief he took from me, And begged me oft to steal it.
CAS: E nella mia dimore Trovai quel vel.	CAS: And I found in my chamber A handkerchief.
MON: (entrando ed indicando Jag.). Rodrigo morente Mi svelò di quest' uom l' arti nefande.	MON: (entering and pointing to Iago). The dying Roderigo Has told me all the dark plots.
OTE: (a Jag.). Ah! discolpati!!	OTH: (to Iago). Refute their charges!
JAGO: (fuggendo). No.	IAGO: No!
LOD: Ferma.	LOD: Stop him!
MON: S' insegua. (Alcuni escono inseguendo Jag.)	MON: Arrest him! (Exeunt attendants after Iago.)
TUTTI: Afferratelo!	ALL: Let him not escape.
OTE: (slanciandosi per afferrar la spada). E il ciel non ha più fulmini?!—	OTH: Great heaven! Have you no lightning left?
LOD: La spada a me!	LOD: Give me your sword.
OTE: Tant' osi?—Niun mi tema S' anco armato mi vede. Ecco la fine Del mio cammin—Oh! Gloria! Otello fu. (Lascia cadere la spada. Va presso al letto e contempla Des.) E tu—come sei pallida! e stanca, e muta, e bella, Pia crëatura nata sotto maligna stella. Fredda come la casta tua vita, e in cielo assorta. Desdemona! Desdemona!—Ah!—morta!—morta!—morta! (Estraendo furtivamente dalle vesti un pugnale.) Ho un' arma ancor! (Si ferisce.)	OTH: What would you? do not fear me, though I still have A weapon. Here is my butt, here is my journey's end. Othello's gone. (He drops his sword and goes to the bed, looking upon Des.) And you, how do you look now? So pale, so still, so beautiful. Oh ill-fated wench, And noble! Battered by evil fortune, now Even as your chastity, most fit for heaven. Oh, Desdemona, Desdemona dead! (He draws furtively a dagger from his vest) This still remains. (Stabs himself)
CAS: Ah! Ferma!	CAS: Ah! hold him.
TUTTI: Sciagurato!	ALL: Oh! Othello!
OTE: Pria d' ucciderti—sposa—ti baciai. Or morendo—nell' ombra—ov' io mi giacio— Un bacio—un bacio ancora—un altro bacio— (Muore.)	OTH: I kissed you until I killed you. No but this, Killing myself, a kiss, another kiss, and yet another kiss! (Dies)
FINE.	THE END.

Der Fliegende Holländer (1843)

The Flying Dutchman

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by the composer based on Heinrich Heine's Memoirs of Herr von Schnabelewopsk, premiered at the Hofoper in Dresden on January 2, 1843. The flying Dutchman is a sea captain who sailed around the Cape of Good Hope during a violent storm, only to keep on sailing until Judgment Day; the only way out is to find a young woman who will love him until death. Every seven years he leaves the ship to seek this woman. As the work opens, Daland, a Norwegian sea captain, is sailing through a storm that sends his ship into a faraway bay. The Dutchman's ghostly vessel comes upon him. Daland, who is impressed by the Dutchman's wealth, agrees that he should marry Daland's daughter. The two ships set off. A picture of the Dutchman hangs on the wall of Daland's house, and Senta, Daland's daughter, sings about the legendary figure. Erik, a would-be suitor, pleads with her to love him instead. He has dreamed about her father returning in a ghostly ship with a strange man. Daland arrives with the Dutchman, and Senta falls in love with him at first sight. The Dutchman's crew sends up a wild chorus that thoroughly frightens Daland's sailors and their girlfriends, who have been celebrating. Erik berates Senta for her infidelity. The Dutchman, overhearing them, is afraid that she could be unfaithful to him as well and departs. Erik prevents her from pursuing the Dutchman, who declares his identity and sails away. Senta pledges eternal loyalty and throws herself off a cliff into the sea below. The Dutchman's ship vanishes in the mists, and the lovers, united at last, rise up to heaven.

■ ERSTER AKT

ERSTER AUFTRITT

MATROSEN: Hohoje! Hohoje! Halloho!

DALAND: Kein Zweifel! Sieben Meilen fort
Trieb uns der Sturm vom sichern Port.
So nah' dem Ziel nach langer Fahrt.
War mir der Streich noch aufgespart!

STEUERMANN: Ho! Capitän!

DALAND: Am Bord bei Euch, wie steht's?

STEUERMANN: Gut, Capitän! Wir sind auf sicherm Grund.

DALAND: 's ist Sandwyk-Strand, genau kenn' ich die Bucht.—
Verwünscht! schon sah am Ufer ich mein Haus,
Senta, mein Kind, glaubt' ich schon zu umarmen.
Da bläst er aus dem Teufels-Loch heraus . . . .
Wer baut auf Wind, baut auf Satans Erbarmen!
Was hilft's? der Sturm lässt nach,— Wenn so er tobte, währt's nicht lang.
He! Bursche! lange war't ihr wach;
Zur Ruhe denn, mir ist's nicht bang!
Nun, Steuermann! die Wache nimmst Du wohl für mich?
Gefahr ist nicht, doch gut ist's, wenn Du wachst.

■ ACT I

SCENE I

SAILORS: Heigho! Heigho! Hallo-ho!

DALAND: No doubt!
Drove us full seven miles away the storm at break of day
So near the port, and to be met
By adverse wind—It's useless to fret!

MATE: Ho! Captain!

DALAND: I am on deck with you.
How do things progress?

MATE: Well, captain, we are in home waters.

DALAND: It is Sandwyk beach,
I full well the bay know.
Confound the luck! I saw my house; a welcome sight!
Senta, my child, I dreamed I held in my arms,
When all of a sudden the wind changed,
And blew a gale, as if in league with Satan's power;
But now the worst is past, and its fury
The storm has spent in fitful blasts.
Well, boys, you've had to work with giant power.
And you may rest, now that the danger is past;
And you, mate, you may take the watch for me;
There's no danger now, still keep a sharp look-out!

STEUERMANN: Seid ausser Sorg's! Schlaft ruhig, Capitän!
Mit Gewitter und Sturm aus fernem Meer—
Mein Mädel, bin dir nah'.
Über thurmhohe Fluth vom Süden her—
Mein Mädel, ich bin da!
Mein Mädel, wenn nicht Südwind wär'.
Ich nimmer wohl käm' zu dir;—
Ach, lieber Südwind! blas' noch mehr,
Mein Mädel verlangt nach mir!
Hohohe! Jolohe! Hoho! Ho! Ho!
Von des Südens Gestad', aus weitem Land'—
Ich hab' an dich gedacht;
Durch Gewitter und Meer vom Mohrenstrand
Hab' ich dir was mitgebracht.
Mein Mädel, preis' den Südwind hoch,
Ich bring' dir ein gülden Band:—
Ach, lieber Südwind, blase doch!
Mein Mädel hätt' gern den Tand.
Hoho! Ho jolohe!

MATE: Rely on me! Good night, captain.
In tempest's roar, on the wide sea,
My girl, I think of you!
The gale, ah, well! it came from the South,
Lucky for you and me!
My girl, if it hadn't been Southwind,
I wouldn't see you again!
Ah, come and blow, my Southwind fair,
Else waits my love in vain.
Hohohe! Jolohe! Heigho! Heigho!
On Southland's coast, in far off land,
My girl, I thought of you!
All over the main, from tropic coast,
A gift I brought for you;
I bring my love a golden toy—
Come, Southwind, blow again!
Southwind, you are a lovely boy,
If you will blow again.
Hoho! ho! jolohe! heigho!

ZWEITE SCENE

HOLLÄNDER: Die Frist ist um, und abermals verstrichen
Sind sieben Jahr!—Voll Überdruss wirft mich
Das Meer an's Land . . . Ha, stolzer Ocean!
In kurzer Frist sollst du mich wieder tragen! Dein Trotz ist beugsam—doch ewig meine Qual.
Das Heil, das auf dem Land ich suche, nimmer werd' ich es finden!
Euch, des Weltmeers Fluthen,

SCENE II

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: The time is up, and to Eternity's tomb consigned Another seven years! Disgusted is the main,
And throws me on the strand. Ah! sea so proud.
The waves, before many days are past, I'll ride again.
What of your scorn with my torment in the balance weighed? The rest which on land I seek, oh! never

Bleib' ich getreu, bis eure letzte Welle sich bricht und euer letztes Nass versiegt!— Wie oft in Meeres tiefsten Schlund Stüzt' ich voll Sehnsucht mich hinab, doch ach! den Tod, ich fand ihn nicht! Da, wo der Schiffe furchtbar Grab, Trieb mein Schiff ich zum Klippengrund, doch ach! mein Grab, es schloss sich nicht! Verhöhnend droht' ich dem Piraten, im wilden Kampfe hofft' ich Tod:—
"Hier"—rief ich—"zeige deine Thaten! Von Schätzen voll ist Schiff und Boot!" Doch ach! des Meers barbar'scher Sohn schlägt bang' das Kreuz und flieht davon! Nirgends ein Grab! Niemals der Tod! Dies der Verdammniss Schreck-Gebot. Dich frage ich, gepries'ner Engel Gottes, der meines Heils Bedingung mir gewann, war ich Unsel'ger Spielwerk Deines Spottes, als die Erlösung Du mir zeigtest an?
—Vergeb'ne Hoffung! Furchtbar eitler Wahn! Um ew'ge Treu' auf Erden ist's gethan!— Nur eine Hoffnung soll mir bleiben, nur eine unerschüttert steh'n!
So lang' der Erde Keim' auch treiben, so muss sie doch zu Grunde gehn.
Tag des Gerichtes, jüngster Tag!
Wann brichst du an in meine Nacht? Wann dröhnt er, der Vernichtungsschlag;
Mit dem die Welt zusammenkracht? Wann alle Todten aufersteh'n,
Dann werde ich in Nichts vergeh'n!
Ihr Welten, endet euren Lauf!
Ew'ge Vernichtung, nimm mich auf!

CHOIR: Ew'ge Vernichtung, nimm uns auf!

DRITTE SCENE

DALAND: He! Holla! Steuermann!

STEUERMANN: 's ist nichts! 's ist nichts!—
Ach, lieber Südwind, blas' noch mehr,
Mein Mädel . . .

DALAND: Du siehst nichts? Gelt! Du wachest brav, mein Bursch! Dort liegt ein Schiff!—Wie lange schliefst du schon?

STEUERMANN: Zum Teufel auch!—Verzeiht mir, Capitän! Werda! Werda!

DALAND: Es scheint, sie sind gerad' so faul als wir.

STEUERMANN: Gebt Antwort! Schiff und Flagge!

DALAND: Lass sein. Mich dünkt, ich seh den Capitän.— He! Holla! Seemann! Nenne Dich! Wess Landes?

shall I find; for my destiny is bound to the ocean waves, until the last wave ceases to flow, and evaporates into air. How often into deepest abyss of the sea have I thrown my ship and hapless me; But, alas! the death I sought I never found. Where yawns the grave for ship and sailor, I drove my ship to craggy rock. But the watery grave was not my lot. Where sails the pirate's dreaded craft, have often I waited for bloody strife; 'Now,' thus I challenged, 'show your pluck, my ship with treasures rich is freighted:' But he, the sea's barbarian son, in horror did he cross himself, and take to flight. No grave for me! No death for me! Such is damnation's inflexible law. I ask you heavenly angel mine, who my salvation's condition has secured, was I the foot-ball of your caprice. When the way to salvation did you show to me? Ah! Lost the hope, Lost as is my prayer! Faith has taken wings, and soared to other worlds. But one hope now remains. But one hope I cherish! Though the globe still sails through space, it, too, must end its course some day. Last day of Earth, eh! Judgment day, you will end my misery. When comes the day, the dreaded day, that solves Life's great mystery? When the sea gives up its dead. Then will my requiem be said! Die out, stars, in heaven's dome, Father above, oh, call me home!

CHORUS: Father above, oh call us home!

SCENE III

DALAND: Ho! Heigho! Mate!

MATE: Nothing there, nothing! Ah! come and blow, Southwind fair.
My girl—

DALAND: You see nothing, and I thought that you'd keep sharp lookout.
There lies a ship! Answer me: How long did you sleep?

MATE: Damnation! Pardon, captain! Who's there? Who's there?

DALAND: Seems to me they are just as lazy dogs as we.

MATE: Answer! From where have you come & to where are you going?

DALAND: Cease your questioning! I think I see the captain—
You! holo! you over there; From where have you come & to where are you going?

HOLLÄNDER: Weit komm' ich her. Verwehrt bei Sturm und Wetter ihr mir den Ankerplatz?

DALAND: Behüt' es Gott! Gastfreundschaft kennt der Seemann.
— Wer bist du?

HOLLÄNDER: Holländer.

DALAND: Gott zum Gruss!—So trieb auch dich
Der Sturm an diesen nackten Felsenstrand?
Mir ging's nicht besser, wenig Meilen nur
Von hier ist meine Heimath; fast erreicht,
Musst' ich auf's Neu' mich von ihr wenden.—Sag', Woher kommst du? Hast Schaden Du genommen?

HOLLÄNDER: Mein Schiff ist fest, es leidet keinen Schaden.—
Durch Sturm und bösen Wind verschlagen,
Irr' auf den Wassern ich umher;—
Wie lange? weiss ich kaum zu sagen,
Schon zähl' ich nicht die Jahre mehr.
Unmöglich dünkt mich's, dass ich nenne
Die Länder alle, die ich fand:
Das Einz'ge nur, nach dem ich brenne,
Ich find' es nicht; mein Heimathland!
Vergönne mir auf kurze Frist dein Haus,
Und deine Freundschaft soll dich nicht gereu'n,
Mit schätzen aller Gegenden und Zonen
Ist reich mein Schiff beladen:— willst du handeln,
So sollst du sicher deines Vortheils sein.

DALAND: Wie wunderbar! Soll deinem Wort ich glauben?
Ein Unstern, scheint's, hat dich bis jetst verfolgt.
Um dir zu dienen, biet' ich, was ich kann;
Doch—darf ich fragen, was dein Schiff enthält?

HOLLÄNDER: Die seltensten der Schätze sollst du sehn, Kostbare Perlen, edelstes Gestein.
Blick' hin und überzeuge dich vom Werthe
Des Preises, den ich für ein gastlich Dach
Dir biete!

DALAND: Wie? Ist's möglich? Diese Schätze!
Wer ist so reich, den Preis dafür zu bieten?

HOLLÄNDER: Den Preis? So eben hab' ich ihn genannt:
Dies für das Obdach einer einz'gen Nacht!
Doch was du siehst, ist nur der kleinste Theil

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: I come from afar. In such dreadful weather.
Will you deny me safe anchorage?

DALAND: God forbid! the mariner knows full well hospitality's worth. Who are you?

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Dutch.

DALAND: Be welcome then! I perceive the storm
Drove you, too, to this craggy shore;
I fared no better; but my home is a few miles distant.
Almost within its charmed circle.
I had to change my course. But, say, from where do you come? Has damage sustained your ship?

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: My ship is sound, and wind and tempest proof.
Storm and adverse wind, in league,
Keep me away from the shore;
How long? How should I know it still,
When I keep not count any more?
I cannot tell the scenes I saw,
Nor name the ports I sought to reach;
The only scene I long to see,
I cannot find—my native beach!
And now, my friend, come take me home,
Give me shelter and give me rest.
My ship is freighted with treasures rare,
Choose the rarest, take the best—
Your humble roof, oh, let me share!

DALAND: How strange this sounds. Can I believe such a tale?
It will seem that yours is a strange fate.
If I can serve you; you will find me ready;
But, may I ask, what does your ship contain?

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: The rarest of treasures I'll show you,
Gold and pearls and precious stones;
See how they glitter! Is the price
Ample, and does it compensate
For hospitable roof?

DALAND: What! Is it possible?
These treasures!
Who has riches enough to outweigh their value?

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: I told you how to repay for these treasures all;
I give them for the shelter of a single night.
Still what you see is but a small por-

Von dem, was meines Schiffes Raum verschliesst. Was frommt der Schatz? Ich habe weder Weib Noch Kind, und meine Heimath find' ich nie. All' meinen Reichthum biet' ich Dir, wenn bei Den Deinen du mir neue Heimath giebst.	tion Of the riches stored in my ship's hold. Of what value is all these treasures? I have no wife, Nor child, and I'll never reach my native land. All my riches shall be yours, as the price I pay with all my heart for the home I crave.
DALAND: Was muss ich hören?	DALAND: What must I hear?
HOLLÄNDER: Hast du eine Tochter?	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Do you have a daughter?
DALAND: Fürwahr, ein treures Kind.	DALAND: I have, and she is dear to me.
HOLLÄNDER: Sie sei mein Weib!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Then give her to me for wife.
DALAND: Wie? Hör' ich recht? Meine Tochter sein Weib? Er selbst spricht aus den Gedanken:— Fast fürcht' ich, wenn unentschlossen ich bleib', Er müsst' im Vorsatze wanken. Wüsst' ich, ob ich wach' oder träume; Kann ein Eidam willkommener sein? Ein Thor, wenn das Glück ich versäume: Voll Entzücken schlage ich ein.	DALAND: My child shall be his; why should I delay, When great is the wealth that will be my part? The bargain is good, I'll close it this day, In case he might change his mind, and depart; I will give him my child to be his bride, So she will be a rich man's happy wife; I would be a fool if I denied such a good offer, It's the best bargain I made in my life.
HOLLÄNDER: Ach ohne Weib, ohne Kind bin ich, Nichts fesselt mich an die Erde. Rastlos verfolgte das Schicksal mich, Die Qual nur war mein Gefährte. Nie werd' ich die Heimath erreichen; Zu was frommt mir der Güter Gewinn? Lässt du zu dem Bund dich erweichen, O, so nimm meine Schätze dahin!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: No heir, no child, no wife are given me, And no earthly joy have ever I known; Fate, relentless through all eternity, Wildly pursues me like a hunted fawn. Whenever I can reach my home again, What shall I do with all my riches rare? The terms are good; let us close the bargain, And my ship's whole cargo shall be your share.
DALAND: Wohl, Fremdling, hab' ich eine schöne Tochter, Mit treuer Kindeslieb' ergeben mir; Sie ist mein Stolz, das höchste meiner Güter, Mein Trost im Unglück, meine Freud' im Glück.	DALAND: Truly, stranger, a pretty daughter I call mine. With filial love she is attached to me; She is my pride, the best of all I have. And I feel for her as only a father feels.
HOLLÄNDER: Dem Vater stets bewahr' sie ihre Liebe. Ihm treu, wird sie auch treu dem Gatten sein.	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: For the father she may always cherish filial love, If true to him, true she will be to him she weds.
DALAND: Du giebst Juwelen, unschätzbare Perlen, Das höchste Kleinod doch, ein treues Weib . . .	DALAND: While jewels and pearls are costly things, The costliest still is a loving wife.
HOLLÄNDER: Du giebst es mir?	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: And she shall be mine?
DALAND: Ich gebe dir mein Wort. Mich rührt dein Loos; freigebig, wie du bist, Zeigst Edelmuth und hohen Sinn Du mir:— Den Eidam wünscht' ich so, und wär' dein Gut Auch nicht so reich, wählt' ich doch keinen Andern.	DALAND: My word I pledge to you, Your fate has won my heart; you're lavish; Thus must be he who weds my daughter, And if you were less rich, no other would I choose.
HOLLÄNDER: Hab' Dank! Werd' ich die Tochter heut' noch seh'n?	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Thanks! Will I see your girl before sinks the day to rest?
DALAND: Der nächste günst'ge Wind führt uns nach Haus. Du sollst sie seh'n, und wenn sie dir gefällt—	DALAND: With change of wind we set our sails homeward; Once on shore, and if my daughter suits you, then—
HOLLÄNDER: So ist sie mein . . . Wird sie mein Engel sein? Wenn aus der Qualen Schreckgewalten Die Sehnsucht nach dem Heil mich treibt, Ist mir's erlaubt, mich festzuhalten An einer Hoffnung, die mir bleibt. Darf ich in jenem Wahn noch schmachten. Dass sich ein Engel mir erweicht? Der Qualen, die mein Haupt umnachten, Ersehntes Ziel hätt' ich erreicht. Ach! ohne Hoffnung wie ich bin. Geb' ich mich doch der Hoffnung hin!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Then she will be mine—my angel she shall be. When out of torment's iron hold, I long to see salvation near, I cling—for so have I been told— To one hope still remaining dear. May still I hope—I cannot pray— That pity feel might angel-wife? Then will I praise this happy day, When over at last, this woeful strife. Though hope has died, and left no trace, I hope again for joy and grace.
DALAND: Gepriesen seid, des Sturms Gewalten, Die ihr an diesen Strand mich triebt. Fürwahr! Blos brauch ich festzuhalten, Was sich so schön von selbst mir giebt. Die ihn an diese Küste brachten Ihr Winde sollt gesegnet sein! Ja, wonach alle Väter trachten, Ein reicher Eidam, er ist mein. Dem Mann mit Gut und hohem Sinn Geb' froh ich Haus und Tochter hin!	DALAND: When from the South it blew a gale that drove me to this rocky shore, I did at first my fate bewail; But now I wail and grieve no more. I praise the wind that drove me here, For here I met a lucky fate, For here I found a treasure dear: A rich man with my child to mate! He who with treasure sails the sea, Shall be welcome to my daughter!
STEUERMANN: Südwind! Südwind! Ach! lieber Südwind, blas' noch mehr!	MATE: Southwind! Southwind! Come, Southwind, blow again!
MATROSEN: Holloje! Hollajo!	SAILORS: Heigho! Heigho! Heigho!
DALAND: Du siehst, das Glück ist günstig dir: Der Wind ist gut, die See in Ruh'. Sogleich die Anker lichten wir Und segeln schnell der Heimath zu.	DALAND: We are lucky, indeed; for the wind is good, And smooth as a sea of glass is the sea; Let us weigh the anchors without delay, And set sail for the sheltering port.
MATROSEN: Hohohe! Hohohe! Halloho! Jo!	SAILORS: Heigho! ho! Heigho! ho! ho!
HOLLAENDDER: Darf ich dich bitten, segelst du voran: Der Wind ist frisch, doch, meine Mannschaft müd'. Ich gönn' ihr kurze Ruh', und folge dann.	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: You sail ahead, if it so pleases you, The wind is good, but my men are fatigued; I'll give them rest, and then I follow.
DALAND: Doch unser Wind?	DALAND: But if the wind should change?

HOLLÄNDER: Er bläst noch lang' aus Süd'. Mein Schiff ist schnell, es holt dich sicher ein.	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: It will blow from the South, be assured. My ship sails fast, and will reach you soon.
DALAND: Du glaubst? Wohlan! Es möge denn so sein. Leb' wohl! mög'st heute du mein Kind noch sehn!	DALAND: As you say, so be it. Farewell! And my child, will you see her this day?
HOLLÄNDER: Gewiss!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: This day I shall see her.
DALAND: Hei! Wie die Segel schon sich bläh'n! Hallo! Hallo! Frisch, Jungen! Greifet an!	DALAND: See how the sails swell in the wind! Hallo! Hallo! Be up and doing, boys!
MATROSEN: Mit Gewitter und Sturm aus fernem Meer. Mein Mädel, bin dir nah'? Über thurmhohe Fluth, vom Süden her— Mein Mädel, ich bin da! Mein Mädel, wenn nicht Südwind wär', Ich nimmer wohl käm' zu dir! Ach, lieber Südwind, blas' noch mehr! Mein Mädel verlangt nach mir! Hohoje! Halloho! Hoho! Ho! Ho! Ho!	SAILORS: In tempest's roar, on the wide sea, My girl, I think of you! The gale, ah, well! it came from the South— Lucky for you and me! My girl, if it hadn't been Southwind, I wouldn't see you again! Ah! come and blow, my Southwind fair, Else waits my love in vain. Hohohe! Johohe! Heigho! Heigho!

ZWEITER ACT

ACT II

ERSTE SCENE

SCENE I

MÄDCHEN: Summ' und brumm', de gutes Rädchen, Munter, munter dreh' dich um! Spinne, spinne tausend Fädchen, Gutes Rädchen, summ' und brumm'! Mein Schatz ist auf dem Meere draus, Er denkt nach Haus An's fromme Kind: Mein gutes Rädchen saus' und braus'! Ach, gäb'st du Wind, Er käm' geschwind! Spinnt, spinnt! Fleissig, Mädchen! Summ', brumm', Gutes Rädchen!	GIRLS: Hum and buzz! What cheerful sound! Turn round the wheel, quick, quick, quick! Spin the golden thread around! Hum and buzz like a magic trick! My love sails over stormy sea, And thinks of me, His own sweetheart, Pray, O pray, for him and me, That storm depart, Fair wind his part! Spin and spin The wheel around, Hum and buzz With cheery sound!
MARY: Ei! Fleissig, fleissig, wie sie spinnen! Will jede sich den Schatz gewinnen.	MARY: See, how quick they turn the wheel! Must be love they feel for him.
MÄDCHEN: Frau Mary, still! denn wohl ihr wisst, Das Lied noch nicht zu Ende ist.	GIRLS: You mustn't speak! While floats our song On airy wings, please hold your tongue!
MARY: So singt! dem Rädchen lässt's nicht Ruh'. Du aber, Senta, schweigst dazu?	MARY: Then sing your song the lifelong night! But, Senta! child you are so quiet.
MÄDCHEN: Summ' und brumm', du gutes Rädchen, Munter, munter dreh' dich um! Spinne, spinne tausend Fädchen, Gutes Rädchen, summ und brumm! Mein Schatz da draussen auf dem Meer Im Süden er Viel Gold gewinnt. Ach, gutes Rädchen, braus' noch mehr! Er giebt's dem Kind, Wenn's fleissig spinnt. Spinnt, spinnt! Fleissig, Mädchen! Summ', brumm', Gutes Rädchen!	GIRLS: Hum and buzz! What cheerful sound Turn round the wheel, quick, quick, quick! Spin the golden thread around! Hum and buzz like magic trick! My love sails over stormy sea, On Southland's coast He seeks for gold. Pray, O pray, that I may boast, And share his gold. And now behold How turns the wheel With cheery sound, While sure I feel For home he's bound!
MARY: Du böses Kind, wenn du nicht spinnst, Vom Schatz du kein Geschenk gewinnst!	MARY: You bad child, if you will not spin, You never shall win the gold your love brings.
MÄDCHEN: Sie hat's nicht noth, dass sie sich eilt. Ihr Schatz nicht auf dem Meere weilt: Bringt er nicht Gold, bringt er doch Wild. Man weiss ja, was ein Jäger gilt!	GIRLS: Why should she spin and work as we? Her love does not sail over stormy sea, Her love's a huntsman gay and bold, He brings her game instead of gold.
MARY: Da seht ihr's! Immer vor dem Bild!— Wirst du dein ganzes junges Leben Verträumen vor dem Konterfei?	MARY: Look at her! Always before the picture! Senta, are you to dream away your young life, Contemplating this portrait?
SENTA: Was hast du Kunde mir gegeben, Was mir erzählet, wer es sei! Der arme Mann!	SENTA: Yours the blame! From you I learned his history— A poor man is he!
MARY: Gott sei mit dir!	MARY: May God protect your young life!
MÄDCHEN: Ei, ei! Ei, ei! Was hören wir? Sie seufzet um den bleichen Mann.	GIRLS: What! what's this! listen well! She sighs for him, this pale man.
MARY: Den Kopf verliert sie noch darum.	MARY: Her head will be turned, God knows!
MÄDCHEN: Da sieht man, was ein Bild doch kann!	GIRLS: This a simple picture's power shows.
MARY: Nichts hilft es, wenn ich täglich brumm': Komm', Senta! wend' dich doch herum!	MARY: All my scolding is in vain. Come, Senta, be a good child.
MÄDCHEN: Sie hört euch nicht,— sie ist verliebt. Ei, ei! Wenn's nur nicht Händel giebt! Denn Erik hat gar heisses Blut, Dass er nur keinen Schaden thut! Sagt nichts, er schiesst sonst wuthentbrannt Den Nebenbuhler von der Wand.	GIRLS: She does not mind you; she's in love, A bad affair this will be, You know how jealous Erik is, Why! he'll be apt to act quite rash, And, blinded by his jealousy, shoot His rival hanging on the wall.
SENTA: O schweigt! Mit eurem tollen Lachen Wollt ihr mich ernstlich böse machen?	SENTA: Cease this talk, you foolish things, Or I will be angry in earnest.
MÄDCHEN: Summ' und brumm', du gutes Rädchen, Munter, munter dreh' dich um! Spinne, spinne tausend Fädchen, Gutes Rädchen, brumm' und summ'!	GIRLS: Hum and buzz! What cheerful sound! Turn round the wheel, quick, quick, quick! Spin the golden thread around! Hum and buzz like a magic trick!
SENTA: O macht dem tollen Lied ein Ende, Es summt und brummt mir vor dem Ohr! Wollt ihr, dass ich mich zu euch wende, So sucht was Besseres hervor!	SENTA: O, put an end to this wild song, It hums and buzzes in my ear; If I must join your busy throng, Then sing the song I hold so dear.
MÄDCHEN: Gut, singe du!	GIRLS: We are tired; sing it for us.
SENTA: Hört, was ich rathe. Frau Mary singt uns die Ballade.	SENTA: For me it is too long; Why can't Mary sing the song?

MARY: Bewahre Gott! das fehlte mir! Den fliegenden Holländer lasst in Ruh'.	MARY: Heaven forbid! It's no time to jest, Leave the Flying Dutchman at rest.
SENTA: Wie oft doch hört' ich sie von Dir! Ich sing' sie selbst, hört, Mädchen, zu. Lasst mich's euch recht zu Herzen führen, Des Ärmsten Loos, es muss Euch rühren.	SENTA: Why not sing it now as well? Come, girls, I will sing you the song, That you may hear how relentless fate Ever and ever pursues this man
MÄDCHEN: Uns ist es recht.	GIRLS: Give us the song!
SENTA: Merkt auf die Wort'!	SENTA: Be quiet and listen.
MÄDCHEN: Dem Spinnrad Ruh'!	GIRLS: The wheels at rest!
MARY: Ich spinne fort.	MARY: Not mine! I turn my wheel quick, quick!
SENTA: Johohoe! Johohohoe! Traft ihr das Schiff im Meere an, Blutroth die Segel, schwarz der Mast? Auf hohem Bord der bleiche Mann, Des Schiffs Herr, wacht ohne Rast. Hui! Wie saust der Wind!—Johohe! Hui! Wie pfeift's im Tau!—Johohe! Hui! Wie ein Pfeil fliegt er hin—ohne Ziel—ohne Rast—ohne Ruh! Doch kann dem bleichen Manne Erlösung einstens noch werden, Fänd' er ein Weib, das bis in den Tod getreu ihm auf Erden. Ach, wann wirst du bleicher Seemann, sie finden! Betet zum Himmel, dass bald Ein Weib Treue ihm halt'! Bei bösem Wind und Sturmes Wuth Umsegeln wollt' er einst ein Cap; Er flucht' und schwur in tollem Muth: "In Ewigkeit lass' ich nicht ab!"— Hui!—Und Satan hört's—Johohe! Hui!—Nahm ihn bei'm Wort!—Johohe! Hui!—Und verdammt zieht er nun durch das Meer, ohne Rast, ohne Ruh'. Doch, dass der arme Mann noch Erlösung fände auf Erden, Zeigt' Gottes Engel an, wie sein Heil ihm einst könne werden! Ach! möchtest du, bleicher Seemann, es finden! Betet zum Himmel, dass bald Ein Weib Treue ihm halt'!— Vor Anker alle sieben Jahr, Ein Weib zu frei'n, ging er an's Land. Er freite alle sieben Jahr', Noch nie ein treues Weib er fand.— Hui! "die Segel auf!"—Johohe! Hui! "den Anker los!"—Johohe! Hui! falsche Lieb', falsche Treu'! Auf in See! Ohne Rast, ohne Ruh!	SENTA: Heigho! ho! heigho! ho! heigho! ho! There sails a ship over the deep main, With blackened mast and crimsoned sail, On deck you see the man of pain, His eyes so dark, his face so pale. Huzza! Listen the wind! Heigho! Heigho! Heigho! ho! Huzza! See the sails spread! Heigho! heigho! Huzza! She leaps and leaps, from wave forever, evermore! But he can be saved, this captain so pale, If woman's heart in her mission not fail! But when will he find this woman so rare, this woman so rare? Pray for the man at sea, That his woman be true to him! Around a cape he once would sail, And thus it was that he did hail: 'I'll sail, I'll sail, I'll sail evermore!' Huzza! Satan, he heard him hail! ho! heigho! Huzza! And damned he! His ship, she leaps from wave to wave forever, evermore! But that he might be saved, this captain so pale, An angel points to a woman's heart without fail. Oh! that he may soon find this woman so rare, this woman so rare! Pray, for the man at sea That his woman be constant! Once in seven years he sought, Still love for gold he never bought! Once in seven years he tried, Still a woman constant he never spied! Huzza! "Spread the sails!" heigho! ho! Huzza! "The anchor weigh!" heigho! ho! Huzza! False Love! Woman frail! Leap, ship—leap from wave to wave forevermore!
MÄDCHEN: Ach, wo weilt sie, die dir Gottes Engel einst könne zeigen? Wo triffst du sie, die bis in den Tod Dein bliebe treu eigen?	GIRLS: Where, oh, where is the woman so rare, His love to win, his treasures to share?
SENTA: Ich sei das Weib! Meine Treu' soll dich erlösen! Mög' Gottes Engel mich dir zeigen; Durch mich sollst du das Heil erreichen!	SENTA: This mission is mine! My love shall be your salvation! Angel above, oh! bring to me The pale man sailing over the sea!
MARY UND DIE MÄDCHEN: Hilf Himmel! Senta! Senta!	MARY AND ALL THE GIRLS: Heaven help us! Senta! Senta!
ERIK: Senta! Senta! Willst du mich verderben?	ERIK: Senta! Senta! think of me who owns your love!
MÄDCHEN: Hilf uns, Erik, sie ist von Sinnen!	GIRLS: Erik, help, help! Her head is turned.
MARY: Vor Schreck fühl' ich mein Blut gerinnen! Abscheulich Bild, du sollst hinaus, Kommt nur der Vater erst nach Haus!	MARY: I can feel my blood curdling from the shock. Abhorred picture, out you go, As soon as her father returns.
ERIK: Der Vater kommt.	ERIK: The father! he's coming!
SENTA: Der Vater kommt?	SENTA: My father, does he come?
ERIK: Vom Fels sah ich sein Schiff sich nahen.	ERIK: His ship is sailing round the rock.
MARY: Nun seht, zu was euer Treiben frommt! Im Hause ist noch nichts gethan.	MARY: Be up and doing, girls, and put the house in order.
MÄDCHEN: Sie sind daheim!— Auf, eilt hinaus!	GIRLS: See them land! let us greet them!
MARY: Halt! Halt! Ihr bleibet fein im Haus! Das Schiffsvolk kommt mit leerem Magen!— In Küch' und Keller! Säumet nicht! Lasst euch nur brav die Neugier plagen, Vor Allem geht an eure Pflicht!	MARY: Easy, my beauties! in the house you'll stay, The crew, they'll be quite hungry Coming from the stormy sea. Set the table without delay, Fill the glasses on the tray.

ZWEITE SCENE	SCENE II
ERIK: Bleib', Senta! Bleib' nur einen Augenblick! Aus meinen Qualen reisse mich! Doch willst du— Ach! so verdirb mich ganz!	ERIK: Stay, Senta, stay! one moment stay! End my torment, end it quick, Pity, pity my despair!
SENTA: Was soll's, Erik . . . ?	SENTA: Erik, what is this?
ERIK: O Senta, sprich, was aus mir werden soll? Dein Vater kommt,—eh' wieder er verreis't Wird er vollbringen, was schon oft er wollte . . .	ERIK: Tell me, Senta, tell me true what's to become of me? Your father comes; home he sails again, He will accomplish what he did often contemplate . . .
SENTA: Und was, Erik?	SENTA: What, Erik?
ERIK: Dir einen Gatten geben.— Mein Herz voll Treue bis zum Sterben, Mein dürftig Gut, mein Jägerglück:— Darf so um Deine Hand ich werben, Stösst mich dein Vater nicht zurück? Wenn sich mein Herz in Jammer bricht, Sag', Senta, wer dann für mich spricht?	ERIK: Choose a man for you; a man for you; But little I call mine save this trusty rifle; It will weigh quite lightly in the scale, And your father will reject my suit. When then my heart needs strong comfort Say, Senta, say, who pleads for me?
SENTA: O schweige jetzt, Erik! Lass mich hinaus, Den Vater zu begrüssen! Wenn nicht, wie sonst, an Bord die Tochter kommt, Wird er nicht zürnen müssen?	SENTA: Why discuss this question now? let me go To welcome home father. If he does not see his daughter on board, He will be quite angry.
ERIK: Du willst mich flieh'n?	ERIK: Why evade me?
SENTA: Ich muss zum Port.	SENTA: To the ship I must go.

ERIK: Du weichst mir aus?

SENTA: Ach! lass mich fort!

ERIK: Fliehst Du zurück vor dieser Wunde,
Die Du mir schlugst, den Liebeswahn?
O höre mich zu dieser Stunde,
Hor' meine letzte Frage an!
Wenn dieses Herz in Jammer bricht.
Wird's Senta sein, die für mich spricht?

SENTA: Wie? zweifelst du an meinem Herzen?
Du zweifelst, ob ich gut dir bin?—
Doch sag', was weckt dir solche Schmerzen?
Was trübt mit Argwohn deinen Sinn?

ERIK: Dein Vater—ach! nach Schätzen geizt er nur . . .
Und Senta, Du! Wie dürft' auf dich ich zählen?
Erfülltest du nur eine meiner Bitten?
Kränkst du mein Herz nicht jeden Tag?

SENTA: Dein Herz?

ERIK: Was soll ich denken? Jenes Bild . . .

SENTA: Das Bild?

ERIK: Lässt Du von deiner Schwärmerei wohl ab?

SENTA: Kann meinem Blick Theilnahme ich verwehren?

ERIK: Und die Ballade, heut' noch sangst du sie!

SENTA: Ich bin ein Kind und weiss nicht was ich singe . . . !
Erik, sag'! fürchtest du ein Lied, ein Bild?

ERIK: Du bist so bleich . . . sag', sollt ich es nicht fürchten?

SENTA: Soll mich des Ärmsten Schreckensloos nicht rühren?

ERIK: Mein Leiden, Senta, rührt es Dich nicht mehr?

SENTA: O! schweige doch. Was kann dein Leiden sein?
Kennst jenes Unglücksel'gen Schicksal du?
Fühlst du den Schmerz, den tiefsten Gram,
Mit dem herab auf mich er sieht?
Ach, was die Ruh' ihm ewig nahm,
Wie schneidend Weh' durch's Herz mir zieht!

ERIK: Weh' mir! Es mahnt mich ein unsel'ger Traum!
Gott schütze Dich! Satan hat dich umgarnt.

SENTA: Was erschreckt dich so?

ERIK: Senta, lass dir vertrau'n:—
Ein Traum ist's,—höre ihn zur Warnung an:
Auf hohem Felsen lag' ich träumend,

ERIK: My presence does not please you?

SENTA: Let go, I say, let go!

ERIK: Do no evade me now,
For my grief is great,
But one word more, then go!
Let me ask, and give answer,
When this heart needs strong comfort,
Will it Senta be who pleads for me?

SENTA: Why doubt my heart, why doubt my love,
Why doubt my devotion's faith and strength?
Why now these thoughts that give but pang,
Why this suspicion all at once?

ERIK: You know well that gold is all your father cares for,
And he that can offer riches will wed his daughter sure.
These are thoughts that fill my heart with grief,
And then, Senta, you too, add to my anguish.

SENTA: I? And how?

ERIK: Your worship for that picture—

SENTA: This picture?

ERIK: It is a strange infatuation which—

SENTA: Why should I not feel sympathy?

ERIK: And the song you love to sing.

SENTA: I am a child, and know not what I sing. Say, Erik, does a song fill you with fear, a picture?

ERIK: You are so pale, and that is what I fear.

SENTA: Why should I not sympathize with the poor man's fate?

ERIK: Why not rather feel sympathy with my deep grief?

SENTA: Enough of this! You have no grief;
But do you know the pale man's horrid fate
And do you feel how anguish wrung
The look he casts at me in wild despair?
His fate, relentless, bitter fate.
It is a pang that wrings my heart.

ERIK: Alas! alas my dream will then come true!
May God protect you! You are in Satan's power.

SENTA: What is it that so frightens you?

ERIK: Listen, Senta, listen well!
A dream it was—let warning voice it be!
The rock that overhangs the sea
Was my bed, and dreaming, I fancied

Sah unter mir des Meeres Fluth;
Die Brandung hört' ich, wie sich schäumend
Am Ufer brach der Wogen Wuth:—
Ein fremdes Schiff am nahen Strande
Erblickt ich, seltsam, wunderbar:—
Zwei Männer nahten sich dem Lande,
Der Ein', ich sah's, dein Vater war . . .

SENTA: Der And're?

ERIK: Wohl erkannt' ich ihn:
Mit schwarzem Wams und bleicher Mien'.

SENTA: Und düst'rem Aug' . . .

ERIK: Der Seemann, er.

SENTA: Und ich?

ERIK: Du kamst vom Hause her,
Du flogst den Vater zu begrüssen;
Doch kaum noch sah' ich an dich langen,
Du stürztest zu des Fremden Füssen—
Ich sah dich seine Knie umfangen . . .

SENTA: Er hob mich auf . . .

ERIK: An seine Brust;—
Voll Inbrunst hingst du dich an ihn,
Du küsstest ihn mit heisser Lust—

SENTA: Und dann . . . ?

ERIK: Sah ich auf's Meer Euch flieh'n.

SENTA: Er sucht mich auf! Ich muss ihn sehn! Mit ihm muss ich zu Grunde geh'n!

ERIK: Entsetzlich! Ha, mir wird es klar;
Sie ist dahin! Mein Traum sprach wahr!

SENTA: Ach, wo weilt sie

DRITTE SCENE

DALAND: Mein Kind, du siehst mich auf der Schwelle . . .
Wie? kein Umarmen? keinen Kuss?
Du bleibst gebannt an Deiner Stelle..
Verdien' ich, Senta, solchen Gruss?

SENTA: Gott dir zum Gruss!—
Mein Vater sprich!
Wer ist der Fremde?

DALAND: Drängst du mich?
Mögst du, mein Kind, den fremden Mann willkomnmen heissen!
Seemann ist er, gleich mir, das Gastrecht spricht er an;
Lang' ohne Heimath, stets auf fernen, weiten Reisen.

I saw the waves roll in and out,
And heard the billow's ceaseless roar.
Near the shore I saw a ship,
And strange to tell, for strange the sight:—
Near and nearer two seamen approached,
And one, well I knew his face, was your father—

SENTA: And who was the other, pray?

ERIK: All only I know him too well,
Dressed in black in contrast strong to his pale face—

SENTA: And dark and sad his eye—

ERIK: Yes, black as jet his eye.

SENTA: And I? Where was I?

ERIK: Fleet as a fawn, startled in fear
I saw you rush toward the beach
To bid your father welcome home,
But scarce arrived, I saw you kneel
At the feet of the pale man accursed.

SENTA: And he gently drew me to his breast.

ERIK: He folded you to his treacherous heart,
And you with fervor wild, unbridled,
Returned kiss for kiss impassionate.

SENTA: And then? What then?

ERIK: He took you on board his shadowy ship.

SENTA: He longs for me! I'll follow him,
Even if I should in the attempt perish.

ERIK: It is horrid! I see it clear,
My dream, my fearful dream spoke true.

SENTA: Where, oh where is the woman so rare,
His love to win, his treasures to share?

SCENE III

DALAND: Home again, my child, my darling!
But how is this? No kiss for me?
Why! It is a cool reception, sure.

SENTA: Welcome home, my father!
But say, speak quick.
Who is this stranger that comes with you?

DALAND: Bid him welcome with all your heart! Many a year he sailed the sea.
No home is his, no kin his part.
Though rich he is as rich can be,
To him his native land is lost.
And home he seeks, a new home

In fremden Landen er der Schätze viel gewann.
Aus seinem Vaterland verwiesen,
Für einen Herd er reichlich lohnt;
Sprich, Senta, würd' es dich verdriessen,
Wenn dieser Fremde bei uns wohnt?
Sagt, hab' ich sie zu viel gepriesen?
Ihr seht sie selbst,—ist sie Euch recht?—
Soll noch vom Lob ich überfliessen?
Gesteht, sie zieret ihr Geschlecht!
Mögst du, mein Kind, dem Manne freundlich dich erweisen!
Von deinem Herzen auch spricht holde Gab' er an.
Reich' ihm die Hand, denn Bräutigam sollst du ihn heissen;
Stimmst du dem Vater bei, ist morgen er dein Mann.
Sieh' dieses Band, sieh' diese Spangen!
Was er besitzt, macht dies gering.
Muss, theures Kind, dich's nicht verlangen?
Dein ist es, wechselst du den Ring?
Doch—Keines spricht.—Sollt' ich hier lästig sein?
So ist's! Am besten lass ich sie allein.
Mögst du den edlen Mann gewinnen!
Glaub' mir, solch' Glück wird nimmer neu.
Bleibt hier allein; ich geh' von hinnen.
Glaubt mir, wie schön, so ist sie treu!

HOLLÄNDER: Wie aus der Ferne längst vergang'ner Zeiten
Spricht dieses Mädchens Bild zu mir;
Wie ich geträumt seit langen Ewigkeiten,
Vor meinen Augen seh' ich's hier.
Wohl hob auch ich voll Sehnsucht meine Blicke
Aus tiefer Nacht empor zu einem Weib:
Ein schlagend Herz liess, ach! mir Satans Tücke.
Dass eingedenk ich meiner Qualen bleib'!
Die düst're Gluth, die hier ich fühle brennen,
Sollt' ich Unseliger sie Liebe nennen?
Ach nein! die Sehnsucht ist es nach dem Heil!
Würd es durch solchen Engel mir zu Theil!

SENTA: Versank ich jetzt in wunderbares Träumen,
Was ich erblicke, ist es Wahn?—
Weilt' ich bisher in trügerischen Räumen, Brach des Erwachen's Tag heut' an?—
Er steht vor mir mit leidenvollen Zügen,
Es spricht sein unerhörter Gram zu mir:
Kann tiefen Mitleids Stimme mich

dear;
Come, Senta, come, be the host,
And bid the stranger welcome here!
And you, my new-found friend, say true.
Does she suit to be your wife?
Why should I praise what's only true
And will be blessing all your life?
And you, my child, be good and true,
Give him your hand and hold him dear,
And, Senta, you will never rue
That I have brought your husband here.
See the golden things I've brought—
Quite worthless trifles when compared
With the riches in his vessel's hold.
And all his treasures will be shared,
All his diamonds and all his gold.
With you, my child, if you will say
That you will bless him with your love,
And be his wife without delay;
Wed him, Senta, give him your love!
I leave you now alone, my child,
To speak to him as bids your heart;
I trust in you, my darling child—
Think how happy will be our part.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Like to a vision, seen in days long by gone,
This maiden's face and form appear:
What I have sought through countless years of sorrow
Am I at last beholding here!
Often amid the torment of my night eternal,
Longing I gazed upon some being fair!
But I was driven by Satan's power infernal
On my dread course, in anguish and despair!
The glow that warms my heart with strange emotion,
Can I, accursed one, call it love's devotion?
Ah! no, it is yearning blessed repose to gain,
That such an angel might for me obtain!

SENTA: And am I sunk in wondrous depths of dreaming?
Is this a vision which I see,
Or am I now set free from long delusion?
Has morning truly dawned on me?
See, there he stands, his face clouding with sorrow—
He tells me all his mingled hope and fear;
Is it the voice of sympathy that cheats me?

belügen?
Wie ich ihn oft geseh'n, so steht er hier.
Die Schmerzen, die in meinem Busen brennen,
Ach! dies Verlangen, wie soll ich es nennen
Wonach mit Sehnsucht es ihn treibt—das Heil, würd'es, du Ärmster, dir durch mich zu Theil!

HOLLÄNDER: Wirst du des Vaters Wahl nicht schelten?
Was er versprach, wie? dürft'es gelten?—
Du könntest dich für ewig mir ergeben,
Und deine Hand dem Fremdling reichtest du?
Soll finden ich nach qualenvollem Leben
In deiner Treu' die lang ersehnte Ruh?—

SENTA: Wer du auch sei'st, und welches das Verderben,
Dem grausam dich dein Schicksal konnte weih'n;
Was auch das Loos, das ich mir sollt' erwerben:
Gehorsam stets werd' ich dem Vater sein.

HOLLÄNDER: So unbedingt, wie? könnte dich durchdringen
Für meine Leiden tiefstes Mitgefühl?

SENTA: O, welche Leiden! Könnt' ich Trost Dir bringen!

HOLLÄNDER: Welch holder Klang im nächtigen Gewühl!—
Du bist ein Engel!—Eines Engel's Liebe
Verworf'ne selbst zu trösten weiss!—
Ach, wenn Erlösung mir zu hoffen bliebe,
Allewiger, durch diese sei's!

SENTA: Ach! wenn Erlösung ihm zu hoffen bliebe,
Allewiger, durch mich nur sei's!

HOLLÄNDER: O könntest das Geschick du ahnen,
Dem dann mit mir du angehörst:
Dich würd' es an das Opfer mahnen,
Das du mir bringst, wenn Treu' du schwörst.
Es flöhe schaudernd deine Jugend,
Dem Loose, dem du sie willst weih'n:
Nennst du des Weibes schönste Tugend,
Nennst heil'ge Treue du nicht dein!

SENTA: Wohl kenn' ich Weibes hohe Pflichten,— Sei d'rum getrost, unsel'ger Mann!
Lass über die das Schicksal richten,
Die seinem Spruche trotzen kann!
In meines Herzens höchster Reine
Kenn' ich der Treue Hochgebot:

As he has often in dreams, so stands he here!
The sorrow which is burning within my breast—
Ah, this compassion, what dare I call it?
Your heart is longing after rest and peace,
And you at last through me shall find release.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Will you, your father's choice fulfilling,
Do what he said? Say, are you willing?
Will you, indeed, give yourself to me forever?
Shall I in truth, a stranger, thus be blessed?
Say, shall I find the time of sorrow ended—
In your true love my long-expected rest?

SENTA: Whoever you are, wherever your curse may lead you, and me, when I your lot my own have made—Whatever, the fate which I with you may share in,
My father's will by me shall be obeyed.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: So full of trust? what? can you in your gladness,
For these my sorrows deep compassion know?

SENTA: Unheard-of sorrows!
If only I could bring you joy!

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: How sweet the sound that breaks my night of woe!
You are an angel, and a love angelic
Can bring comfort to one like me.
Ah, if redemption shall be mine to hope for,
Heaven, grant that she be my savior!

SENTA: Ah, if redemption still be his to hope for,
Heaven, grant that I be his saviour!

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Ah, you, the certain fate foreknowing,
Which must indeed with me be borne,
Would not have made the vow you made—
Would not to be my wife have sworn!
You would have shuddered before devoting,
To aid me, all your golden youth—
Before you had surrendered woman's joys,
Before you had bid me trust your truth?

SENTA: Well I know woman's holy duties;
O hapless man, be at ease!
Leave me to fate's unbending judgment—
Me, who defy its dread decrees.
Within the secret realm of con-

Wem ich sie weih', schenk' ich die Eine;
Die Treue bis zum Tod!

HOLLÄNDER: Ein heil'ger Balsam meinen Wunden,
Dem Schwur, dem hohen Wort entfliesst!

SENTA: Von mächt'gem Zauber überwunden,
Reisst mich's zu seiner Rettung fort.

HOLLÄNDER: Hört' es: mein Heil hab' ich gefunden,
Mächte, die ihr zurück mich stiess't!
Du Stern des Unheils, sollst erblassen!
Licht meiner Hoffnung, leuchte neu.
Ihr Engel, die mich einst verlassen,
Stärkt jetzt dies Herz in seiner Treu'!

SENTA: Hier habe Heimath er gefunden, hier ruh' sein Schiff im ew'gen Port! Was ist's, das mächtig in mir lebet?
Was schliesst berauscht mein Busen ein? Allmächt'ger, was mich hoch erhebet, lass es die Kraft der Treue sein!

DALAND: Verzeiht, mein Volk hält draussen sich nicht mehr;
Nach jeder Rückkunft, wisset, giebt's ein Fest:—Verschönern möcht' ich's, komme deshalb her, ob mit Verlobung sich's vereinen lässt?— ich denk', Ihr habt nach Herzenswunsch gefreit?— Senta, mein Kind sag', bist auch du bereit?—

SENTA: Hier meine Hand, und ohne Reu'
Bis in den Tod gelob' ich Treu'!

HOLLÄNDER: Sie reicht die Hand: gesprochen sei
Hohn Hölle dir, durch ihre Treu'!

DALAND: Euch soll dies Bündniss nicht gereu'n!
Zum Fest! heut' muss sich Alles freu'n!

DRITTER AKT

ERSTE SCENE

CHOR DER NORWEGISCHEN MATROSEN: Steuermann, lass die Wacht!
Steuermann, her zu uns!
He! He! Je! Ha!
Hebt die Segel auf! Anker fest!
Steuermann, her!—
Fürchten weder Wind noch bösen Strand,
Wollen heute 'mal recht lustig sein!
Jeder hat sein Mädel auf dem Land,
Herrlichen Tabak und guten Branntewein.

science
Know I the high demands of faith:
Him whom I chose, him I love only,
And loving even till death!

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: A healing balm for all my sorrows
From out her plighted word does flow.

SENTA: It was surely wrought by power of magic
That I should be his deliverer.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Hear this! Release at last is granted!
Hear this, O mighty one.
Your power is now laid low!
Star of misfortune, you are paling!
Hope's glorious light now shines anew!
Angels, who once forsook me,
Aid now my heart, and keep it true!

SENTA: Here may a home at last be granted,
Here may he rest, from danger free!
What is the power working within me?
What is the task it bids me do?
Almighty, now that you have raised me high,
Grant me your strength, that I be true!

DALAND: Pardon my intrusion; my men will be quite impatient,
On each arrival home we have a frolic,
And this time, I hope, it will be a marriage feast.
Say, Senta, child, are you inclined to wed my friend?

SENTA: Here, my hand to the man of the sea:—
Until death I will be faithful.

THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Gladly she gives her fond heart to me,
And ended is now my misery.

DALAND: May happiness forever be your part!
To the feast now with joyous heart!

ACT III

SCENE I

CHORUS OF NORWEGIAN SAILORS: The sea! the sea! the open sea!
The blue, the fresh, the ever free!
Heigho! ho! heigho!
It runs the earth's wide region round! Heigho! heigho!
It plays with the clouds; it mocks the skies,
Or lies like a cradled creature,
Heigho! ho! heigho!
We're home again, home again!
Heigho! heigho!
Home again! home again! Heigho!

Hussassahe!
Klipp' und Sturm draus—
Jallolohe!
Lachen wir aus!
Hussassahe!
Segel ein! Anker fest! Klipp' und Sturm lachen wir aus!
Steuermann, lass die Wacht!
Steuermann her, trink' mit aus!

MÄDCHEN: Nein! Seht doch an! Sie tanzen gar!
Der Mädchen bedarf's da nicht fürwahr!

MATROSEN: He! Mädel! Halt! wo geht ihr hin?

MÄDCHEN: Steht euch nach frischem Wein der Sinn?
Eu'r Nachbar dort soll auch was haben,
Ist Trank und Schmaus für euch allein?

STEUERMANN: Fürwahr, tragt's hin den armen Knaben,
Vor Durst sie scheinen matt zu sein.

MATROSEN: Man hört sie nicht?

STEUERMANN: Ei, seht doch nur!
Kein Licht! Von der Mannschaft keine Spur.

MÄDCHEN: He! Seeleut'! He!
Wollt Fackeln ihr?
Wo seid ihr doch? Mann sieht nicht hier.

MATROSEN: Weckt sie nicht auf; sie schlafen noch.

MÄDCHEN: He! Seeleut'! He! Antwortet doch!

STEUERMANN UND MATROSEN: Haha! Wahrhaftig, sie sind todt.
Sie haben Speis' und Trank nicht noth.

MÄDCHEN: Wie, Seeleute? Liegt Ihr so faul schon im Nest?
Ist heute für euch denn nicht auch ein Fest?

STEUERMANN UND MATROSEN: Sie liegen fest auf ihrem Platz, Wie Drachen hüten sie den Schatz.

MÄDCHEN: Wie, Seeleute? Wollt ihr nicht goldenen Wein?
Ihr müsset wahrlich doch auch durstig sein.

STEUERMANN UND MATROSEN: Sie trinken nicht, sie singen nicht,
In ihrem Schiffe brennt kein Licht.

MÄDCHEN: Sagt, habt Ihr denn nicht auch ein Schätzchen am Land?
Wollt ihr nicht mit tanzen auf freundlichem Strand?

MATROSEN: Sie sind schon alt und bleich statt roth,
Und ihre Liebsten, die sind todt.

MÄDCHEN: He, Seeleut'! Seeleut'! wacht doch auf!
Wir bringen Euch Speis' und Trank zu Hauf!

MATROSEN: Sie bringen Euch Speis' und Trank zu Hauf!

heigho!
Home again the sailor boy.
He his lassie's only joy!
Let us quaff the golden wine!
Mate, leave the watch!
Let us drink, drink, drink!

GIRLS: See! how wildly they dance a jig
On deck of their safely-anchored brig.

SAILORS: Ho, girls, you mustn't go away!

GIRLS: We'll fill the glasses on the tray.
Your neighbor, too, must have his share
Of golden wine and woman's care.

MATE: Yes, you must give those boys a share
Of golden wine and your own care.

SAILORS: They keep so quiet.

MATE: A strange sight!
No sailors on deck and no light!

GIRLS: Ho, sailors, ho! shall we bring light,
And make your ship look bright?

SAILORS: Don't awake them; they are sleeping still.

GIRLS: Ho! Sailors! ho! give us answer!

MATE AND SAILORS: Ha! ha! they are dead, indeed.
No meat and drink they will need.

GIRLS: Sailors, ho! you are lazy boys,
Don't care for frolic and joys.

MATE AND SAILORS: They watch the treasures in the hold,
They guard the gems and stones and gold.

GIRLS: Come, neighbors, come and have your share
Of golden wine and woman's care.

MATE AND SAILORS: They quaff no wine, they sing no song;
They must be dead ever so long.

GIRLS: Are there no sweethearts on the strand
Waiting for you from foreign land?

SAILORS: Ah, well! their sweethearts on the strand
Died while they were in foreign land.

GIRLS: Ho! sailors! ho! don't be lazy boys!
Come, partake of our frolicking joys!

SAILORS: Come and join in our frolicking joys!

MÄDCHEN: Wahrhaftig! Ja, sie scheinen todt.
Sie haben Speis' und Trank nicht noth.

MATROSEN: Vom fliegenden Holländer wisst Ihr ja!
Sein Schiff, wie es leibt, wie es lebt, seht Ihr da.

MÄDCHEN: So wecket die Mannschaft ja nicht auf,
Gespenster sind's, wir schwören drauf!

MATROSEN: Wie viel hundert Jahre schon seid Ihr zur See?
Euch thut ja der Sturm und die Klippe nicht weh'!

MÄDCHEN: Sie trinken nicht, sie singen nicht!
In ihrem Schiffe brennt kein Licht!

MATROSEN: Habt Ihr keine Brief', keine Aufträg' für's Land?
Unsern Urgrossvätern wir bringen's zur Hand.

MÄDCHEN: Sie sind schon alt und bleich statt roth;
Ach! ihre Liebsten, die sind todt!

MATROSEN: Hei! Seeleute! Spannt Eure Segel doch auf!
Und zeigt uns des fliegenden Holländers Lauf!

MÄDCHEN: Sie hören nicht,—uns graust es hier!
Sie wollen nichts,— was rufen wir?

MATROSEN: Ihr Mädel, lasst die Todten ruh'n!
Lasst's uns Lebend'gen glücklich thun!

MÄDCHEN: So nehmt, Eu'r Nachbar hat's verschmäht!

STEUERMANN UND MATROSEN: Wie? Kommt Ihr denn nicht selbst an Bord?

MÄDCHEN: Ei jetzt noch nicht, es ist nicht spät.
Wir kommen bald, jetzt trinkt nur fort.
Und, wenn Ihr wollt, so tanzt dazu,
Nur lasst dem müden Nachbar Ruh'!

MATROSEN: Juchhe! Juchhe! da giebt's die Fülle!
Ihr lieben Nachbarn, habet Dank!

STEUERMANN: Zum Rand sein Glas ein Jeder fülle!
Lieb Nachbar liefert uns den Trank!

MATROSEN: Halloho! Halloho!
Ho! ho! ho!
Lieb Nachbarn, habt Ihr Stimm' und Sprach',
So wachet auf, und macht's uns nach!
Steuermann, lass die Wacht!
Steuermann, her zu uns!
Ho! He! Je! Ha!
Hisst die Segel auf! Anker fest!—
Steuermann, her!—
Wachten manche Nacht bei Sturm und Graus,
Tranken oft des Meer's gesalz'nes Nass;—
Heute wachen wir bei Saus und Schmaus,
Besseres Getränk giebt Mädel uns vom Fass!
Hussassahe!
Klipp' und Sturm draus!

CHOR DER MANNSCHAFT DES FLIEGENDEN HOLLÄNDERS: Johohe! Johohohoe! hohohohoe!
Hoe! Hoe! Hoe!
Huissa!
Nach dem Land treibt des Sturm—
Huissa!
Segel ein! Anker los!
Huissa!
In die Bucht laufet ein!
Schwarzer Hauptmann, geh' an's Land!
Sieben Jahre sind vorbei;
Frei' um blonden Mädchens Hand;
Blondes Mädchen, sei ihm treu!
Lustig heut', hui!
Bräutigam! hui!
Sturmwind heult Brautmusik,
Ocean tanzt dazu.
Hui!—Horch, er pfeift!
—Capitän, bist wieder da?—
Hui!—"Segel auf."—
—Deine Braut, sag', wo sie blieb?—
Hui! "Auf in See!"—
Capitän! Capitän! Hast kein Glück in der Lieb'!
Hahaha!
Sause, Sturmwind, heule zu!
Uns'ren Segeln lässt du Ruh':
Satan hat sie uns gefei't,
Reissen nicht in Ewigkeit!

NORWEGISCHE MATROSEN: Welcher Sang! Ist es Spuk? Wie mich's graut!
Stimmet an unser Lied! Singet laut!
Steuermann, lass die Wacht

ZWEITE SCENE

ERIK: Was musst' ich hören? Gott! was musst' ich sehen!
Ist's Täuschung? Wahrheit? Ist es That?

SENTA: Frag' nicht. Erik! Antwort darf ich nicht geben.

ERIK: Gerechter Gott! Kein Zweifel! Es ist wahr!
Welch' unheilvolle Macht riss dich dahin?
Welche Gewalt verführte dich so schnell,
Grausam zu brechen dieses treuste Herz?
Dein Vater? ha, den Bräut'gam bracht er mit,—
Wohl kenn' ich ihn,—mir ahnte, was geschieht.
Doch du? Ist's möglich!—reichest Deine Hand
Dem Mann, der deine Schwelle kaum betrat!

SENTA: Nicht weiter! Schweig'! Ich muss! Ich muss!

GIRLS: They quaff no wine, they sing no song!
They must be dead ever so long.

SAILORS: You've heard of the Flying Dutchman, perhaps,
And this must be one of his ugly traps.

GIRLS: Then leave them alone, leave them at rest:
It's really no time for such jest.

SAILORS: How long, how long are you at sea?
Quite a pretty crew you must be.

GIRLS: They quaff no wine, they sing no song; They must be dead ever so long.

SAILORS: Have you no letter, no message to send
To great grandfather or other old friend?

GIRLS: Ah, well! they have no loved ones on the strand;
Their sweethearts died while they roamed in foreign land.

SAILORS: Ho! sailors, ho! hoist the sails, quick, quick!
And show us the Flying Dutchman's trick.

GIRLS: They hear us not, so let them rest;
They might revenge this sport and jest.

SAILORS: We'd better leave the dead at rest,
And return to our sport and jest.

GIRLS: Then drink you the wine your neighbor declines.

MATE AND SAILORS: Come on board our safely-anchored brig.
And join us dancing a jolly jig.

GIRLS: Plenty of time for dance and sport,
Now that you're safely in port.
And, if you wish, go dance away,
Only leave the tired neighbors in peace!

SAILORS: Hurrah we have enough!
Our good neighbors, thanks to you!

MATE: Boys, fill your goblets to the brink,
Let us have a jolly old drink.

SAILORS: Hal-lo-ho-ho!
Good neighbors, you can speak at least!
Come, wake up, and join our feast!
Steersman, leave the watch!
Steersman, come to us!
Ho, hey, hey, ha!
See the sails are in! Anchor fast!
Steersman, come!
We have often watched during howling storm;
We have often drunk the briny wave;
Watching takes today a fairer form—
Good and tasty wine our sweethearts let us have!
Hus-sas-sa-hey!

CHORUS OF THE CREW OF THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Yo-ho-ho!
Ho! ho!
Huissa!
To the land drives the storm.
Huissa!
Sails are in! Anchor down!
Huissa!
To the bay hurry in!
Gloomy captain, go on land,
Now that seven long years have flown,
Seek a faithful maiden's hand!
Faithful maiden, be his own!
Joyful, hui!
Bridegroom, hui!
Winds be your wedding song,
Ocean rejoices with you!
Hui! Hark! He pipes!
What! captain, have you returned?
Hui! "Spread the sails!"
And your bride, say, where is she?
Hui! "Off to sea!" As of old,
No good fortune for you! Ha-ha-ha!
Blow, storm wind, howl and blow!
What care we how fast we go?
We have sails from Satan's store,
Sails that last forevermore—hohoe!

CHORUS OF THE NORWEGIAN SAILORS: What a song! Are they ghosts?
How I fear! Let them hear!
All unite in our song.
Steersman, leave the watch!

SCENE II

ERIK: What must I hear! what must I see!
Oh, God above! how can this be!

SENTA: Ask me not! I can give no answer.

ERIK: Eternal God! no doubt prevails! It is true!
An evil power has ensnared you,
Strange infatuation possesses you,
You will break this loving heart!
Your father, ha! the bridegroom he did bring;
I know him well: I feared what might occur!
Yet you—amazing!—have given him your hand
When scarcely across the threshold he had come.

SENTA: No more! Cease! I must!

ERIK: O des Gehorsams, blind wie Deine That! Den Wink des Vaters nanntest du willkommen. Mit einem Streich vernichtest du mein Herz!	ERIK: Oh, this obedience, blind as your act! Your father's hint you did not fail to follow; A single blow crushes my loving heart!
SENTA: Nicht mehr! Nicht mehr! Ich darf dich nicht mehr seh'n! Nicht an dich denken. Hohe Pflicht gebeut's!	SENTA: No more! No more may I see you, Nor think of you: higher calls are mine!
ERIK: Welch' hohe Pflicht? Ist Höh're nicht zu halten Was du mir einst gelobet, ew'ge Treue?	ERIK: What higher calls? The highest is to render What you did vow to give to me—love eternal.
SENTA: Wie? Ew'ge Treue hätt' ich Dir gelobt?	SENTA: What love eternal did I vow to give?
ERIK: Senta! O Senta! Läugnest du? Willst jenes Tags du nicht dich mehr entsinnen, Als du zu dir mich riefest in das Thal? Als, dir des Hochlands Blume zu gewinnen, Muthvoll ich trug Beschwerden ohne Zahl, Gedenkst du, wie auf steilem Felsenriffe Vom Ufer wir den Vater scheiden sah'n? Er zog dahin auf weiss beschwingtem Schiffe. Und meinen Schutz vertraute er Dich an:— Als sich dein Arm um meinen Nacken schlang, Gestandest du mir Liebe nicht auf's Neu'? Was bei der Hände Druck mich hehr durchdrang, Sag', war's nicht die Versich'rung Deiner Treu'?	ERIK: Senta! O Senta! Do you deny it? Is that fair day no more by you remembered, When from the vale you called me to the height, When fearlessly over rugged peaks I clamored, And gathered for you many a wild flower bright? Remember, as on rocky summit standing, Your father's ship we saw ride on the tide? We watched the sails with favored breeze expanding, Did he not into my care confide you, Your arm so sweetly round my neck entwining, Did pledge your love again, how happy both! Did press my hand, as on my breast reclining, Say, was not that, indeed, the sealing of your betrothal?
HOLLÄNDER: Vorloren! Ach! verloren! Ewig verlor'nes Heil!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Lost to me, forever lost! Salvation will not come to me!
ERIK: Was seh' ich? Gott!	ERIK: What must I see?
HOLLÄNDER: Senta, leb' wohl!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Senta, fare well!
SENTA: Halt ein, Unsel'ger!	SENTA: Stay, oh, stay! Unhappy!
ERIK: Was beginnst du?	ERIK: Senta, Senta, what are you doing?
HOLLÄNDER: In See, in See! In See für ew'ge Zeiten! Um deine Treue ist's gethan, Um deine Treue, um mein Heil. Lebwohl, ich will dich nicht verderben!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: To the sea! back to the sea! To the sea for all eternity! You have broken faith, I cannot be saved! Farewell! I'll not be your ruin!
ERIK: Entsetzlich, dieser Blick!	ERIK: Horrid! This diabolical glance!
SENTA: Halt ein! Von dannen sollst du nimmer flieh'n.	SENTA: Desist! desist! You must not go!
Der Holländer gibt ein gellendes Zeichen auf seiner Pfeife und ruft der Mannschaft seines Schiffes zu.	(The Flying Dutchman gives a shrill signal on his whistle, and hails his crew.)
HOLLÄNDER: Segel auf! Anker los! Sagt Lebwohl auf Ewigkeit dem Lande!	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Hoist the sails once more, Bid the shore farewell forevermore!
SENTA: Ha, zweifelst du an meiner Treue? Unseliger,—was verblendet dich! Halt ein! Halt ein! Halt ein! Das Bündniss nicht bereue, Was ich gelobte, halte ich. Halt ein! Halt ein!	SENTA: Do not doubt my faith! Do not act rashly! Desist! desist! In faith I'll keep What I've promised. Do not act rashly! Hold on! hold on!
ERIK: Was hör' ich, Gott, was muss ich sehn! Muss ich dem Ohr, muss ich dem Auge trau'n! Was hör' ich, Gott, Senta! Willst du zu Grunde gehen? Zu mir, zu mir: du bist in Satans Klau'n!	ERIK: What must I hear! what must I see! Oh, God above! how can this be! Senta, Senta, You will perish! Come to me! oh, come to me! You are in Satan's power!
HOLLÄNDER: Fort auf das Meer treibt's mich auf's Neue. Ich zweifl' an dir! Ich zweifl' an Gott! Dahin, dahin ist alle Treue. Was du gelobtest war dir nur Spott! Erfahre das Geschick, vor dem ich dich bewahr'! Verdammt bin ich zum grässlichsten der Loose! Zehnfacher Tod wär' mir erwünschte Lust. Vom Fluch ein Weib allein kann mich erlösen, Ein Weib, das Treue bis in den Tod mir hält. Wohl hast du Treue mir gelobt, Doch vor dem Ewigen noch nicht, dies rettet dich! Denn wiss'! Unselige, welches das Geschick, Das Jene trifft, die mir die Treue brechen, Ewige Verdammniss ist ihr Loos! Zahllose Opfer fielen diesem Spruch durch mich. Du aber sollst gerettet sein. Lebwohl, fahr' hin, mein Heil in Ewigkeit.	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Once more to the sea forth must I wander. I cannot trust you! I cannot trust God! Away, there, with all that's trustworthy! What you promised was only in jest. Learn now the doom from which I save you! Mine is a cruel, horrid fate; Tenfold death would preferable be! Woman alone can rescue me from my curse. Woman who will be true to death. I have your vow of constancy, But not in the Eternal's presence: This from cruel fate will save you; For those who break their vow to me, Will be damned in all eternity! You shall be saved, you only! Farewell, farewell! for all eternity My curse will stay with unlucky me!
ERIK: Zu Hülfe, rettet, rettet Sie!	ERIK: Help! help quick! Save, oh save her!
SENTA: Wohl kenn' ich dich! Wohl kenn' ich dein Geschick; Ich kannte dich, als ich zuerst Dich sah! Das Ende deiner Qual ist da! Ich bin's, durch deren Treu' dein Heil du finden sollst!	SENTA: Your identity is No mystery to me! I know your fate, Your cruel fate; It's not too late;— I'll be your mate! For all eternity Saved you shall be By woman's constancy!
ERIK: Helft ihr, Sie ist verloren!	ERIK: Save, oh, save her!
MARY: Was erblicke ich?	MARY: What must I see!
DALAND: Was erblicke ich? Gott!	DALAND: Oh, God, what must I see!
HOLLÄNDER: Du kennst mich nicht, du ahn'st nicht, wer ich bin! Befrage die Meere aller Zonen. Befrage den Seemann, der den Ocean durchstrich, Erkenn' dies Schiff, der Schrecken aller Frommen: den Fliegenden Holländer nennt man mich.	THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: You do not know my identity, It is to you a mystery. Do you know this ship with spectral light?— The Flying Dutchman I am called.
DIE MANNSCHAFT DES FLIEGENDEN HOLLÄNDERS: Jo ho, hoe!	CREW OF THE FLYING DUTCHMAN: Heigho! ho! heigho!

MARY, ERIK, DALAND: Senta, Senta, was willst du thun?

SENTA: Preis deinen Engel und sein Gebot,
Hier steh' ich, treu dir bis zum Tod.

(Sie stürzt sich in das Meer:—zugleich versinkt das Schiff des Holländers mit aller Mannschaft. Das Meer schwillt hoch auf und sinkt in einem Wirbel wieder

MARY, ERIK, DALAND: Senta, Senta, are you raving?

SENTA: Be cheerful in mind, be joyous in heart!
Yours will I be until death shall us part!

(She casts herself into the sea. The Dutchman's ship, with all her crew, sinks immediately. The sea rises high, and sinks back in a whirlpool. In the glow of the sunzurück. Im Glüroth der aufgehenden Sonne sieht man über den Trümminern des Schiffes die verklärten Gestalten Senta's und des Holländer's sich umschlungen haltend dem Meere entsteigen und aufwärts schweben.)

ENDE.

set are clearly seen, over the wreck of the ship, the forms of Senta and the Dutchman, embracing each other, rising from the sea, and floating upwards.)

THE END.

Tannhäuser (1845)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by the composer, premiered at the Hofoper in Dresden on October 19, 1845. The story takes place in Thuringia during the early thirteenth century. Venus, surrounded by her court comprised of nymphs, bacchantes and fauns, holds captive Tannhäuser, a knight and poet. He has had enough of her pleasures and implores Venus to give him his freedom. She threatens him in order to make him change his mind, but he declares the name of the Virgin Mary and causes Venus to vanish. Tannhäuser is now in a valley near Wartburg castle. Spring's arrival is heralded by a singing shepherd as Tannhäuser falls to his knees to pray. A group of pilgrims passes, headed towards Rome, and a horn announces the arrival of the Landgrave Hermann. Accompanied by his retinue of noblemen, they recognize Tannhäuser and invite him to return with them to the castle. Wolfram von Eschenbach reminds him that Elisabeth, niece of the Landgrave, is in love with him and is waiting for his return after his one-year absence. At the Hall of Minstrels in the Wartburg, Elisabeth greets her beloved, and a song contest is announced for which the grand prize is the marriage of the winner to Elisabeth. The Landgrave suggests that the theme of the contest be love. Wolfram is the first contestant; he stands and sings of the true worth of spiritual love. Tannhäuser impulsively sings a hymn to Venus which praises physical passion. The others are deeply offended by this, and the men draw swords against him. Elisabeth protects her lover, appealing to their Christian decency, and the Landgrave commands him to seek atonement by going with the pilgrims to Rome. Wolfram and Elisabeth are waiting for Tannhäuser to return, but he is not among the pilgrims travelling back. She is close to death and prays to the Madonna to grant pardon to Tannhäuser. Wolfram prays to the Evening Star to watch out for Elisabeth. Tannhäuser enters, his clothes in tatters and completely spent. The Pope has refused to grant him absolution and tells him that his soul will be saved only when the Pope's staff grows leaves once more. Tannhäuser is resigned to damnation forever and calls upon Venus, who appears in a vision of sensational, beguiling beauty. When Wolfram tells him that Elisabeth is praying for him, he rejects Venus again. Elisabeth's coffin is borne by a funeral procession; Tannhäuser embraces her lifeless body and, absolved at last, he dies. The sun rises, and the Roman pilgrims carry in the Pope's staff on which the leaves have grown. They sing praises of God's forgiveness, and the opera ends.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG.

ERSTE SCENE.

Die Bühne stellt das Innere des Venusberges dar. Weite Grotte, welche sich im Hintergrunde durch eine Biegung nach rechts wie unabsehbar dahinzieht. Im fersten sichtbaren Hintergrunde dehnt sich ein bläulicher See aus; in ihm erblickt man die badenden Gestalten von Najaden; auf seinen erhöhten Ufervorsprüngen sind Sirenen gelagert. Im äussersten Vordergrunde links liegt Venus auf einem Lager ausgestreckt, vor ihr halb knieend Tannhäuser, das Haupt in ihrem Schoosse. Die gauze Grotte ist durch rosiges Licht erleuchtet. Den Mittelgrund nimmt eine Gruppe tanzender Nymphen ein; auf etwas erhöhten Vorsprüngen au den Seiten der Grotte sind liebende Paare gelagert, von denen sich einzelne nach und nach in den Tanz der Nymphen mischen. Ein Zug von Bacchantinnen kommt aus dem Hintergrunde in wildem Tanz dahergebraust, sie durchziehen mit trunkenen Gebärden die Gruppen der Nymphen und liebenden Paare, welche durch sie bald zu grösserem Ungestüme hingerissen werden.

■ ACT I.

SCENE I.

The hill of Venus. The stage represents the interior of the Hill of Venus. A wide cave, bending at the back toward the right side where it appears to be indefinitely prolonged. In the farthest visible background a bluish lake is seen, in which Naiads are bathing; on its undulating banks Sirens are reclining. In the extreme foreground Venus is extended on a couch; before her, in a kneeling attitude, is Tannhäuser, his head sunk on her knees. The whole cave is illuminated by a rosy light. In the centre of the stage is a group of dancing Nymphs. There are mounds at the sides of the cave where tender couples are reclining, some of whom join the dances of the Nymphs in the course of the scene. A train of Bacchantes rush from the back of the cave in a tumultuous dance; they widly dart through the groups of Nymphs and tender couples, inciting them to a frantic excitement.

GESANG DER SIRENEN: Naht euch dem Strande, naht euch dem Lande,
wo in den Armen
glühender Liebe seelig Erwachen still eure Triebe!

SIRENS: Come to these bowers,
Radiant with flowers.
Here love shall bless you—
Here endeth longing;
Soft arms shall press you,
Amid blessings thronging.

(Die Tanzenden halten in der leidenschaftlichsten Grupp plötzlich an und lauschen dem Gesange, worauf sich der Tanz von Neuem belebt und zu dem äussersten Grade wilden Ungestümes gelangt. Mit dem Momente der trunkensten bacchantischen Wuth tritt eine schnell um sich greifende Erschlaffung ein. Die liebenden Paare scheiden sich allmählich vom Tanze aus und lagern sich wie in an genehmer Ermattung auf den Vorsprüngen der Grotte; der Zug der Bacchantinnen verschwindet nach dem Hintergrunde zu, vor welchem sich ein immer dichter werdender Dunst ausbreitet. Auch im Vordergrunde senkt sich allmählig (The dancers suddenly pause from their wild tumult and listen to the singing, after which the dance recommences and rises to the wildest excitment. When the Bacchic frenzy is at its height a sudden weariness is seen to spread amongst the dancers. The tender couples separate themselves from the dance and rest near the entrance of the cave. The train of Bacchantes disappear in the background, where a mist gathers and spreads in density. In the foreground also a thick mist gradually sinks and envelops the groups of sleepers in rosy clouds, so that only a small space in the front of the stage remains visible, where Venus and Tannhäuser re-ein dichterer Duft herab und verhüllt die Gruppen der Schlafenden wie in rosige Wolken, so dass endlich der sichtbare Theil der frei gelass'nen Bühne sich nur noch auf einen kleinen Raum berschränkt, in welchem Venus und Tannhäuser in ihrer früheren Stellung allein zurückbleiben.)

ZWEITE SCENE.

Venus—Tannhäuser.

(Tannhäuser zuckt mit dem Haupte empor, als fahre er aus einem Traume auf.—Venus zieht ihn schmeichelnd zurück.—Tannhäuser führt die Hand über Augen, als ob er ein Traumbild fest zu halten suche.)

VENUS: Geliebter, sag', wo weilt dein Sinn?

TANNHÄUSER: Zu viel! Zu viel! O
dass ich nun erwachte!

VENUS: Sprich, was kümmert dich?

TANNHÄUSER: Im Traum war
mir'a ● hörte ich—was meinem Ohr ● fremd?
also hörte ich der Glocken froh Geläute.
O, sag'! Wie lange hört' ich's doch
nicht mehr?

VENUS: Wohin verlierst du dich?
Was ficht dich an?

TANNHÄUSER: Die Zeit, die hier ich weil' ich kann sie nicht ermessen:—Tage, Monde,— giebt's
für mich nicht mehr, denn nicht
mehr
sehe ich die Sonne, nicht mehr des Himmels freundlich Gestirne;— den Halm seh' ich nicht mehr, der frisch ergrünend
den neuen Sommer bringt;—
die Nachtigall nicht hör' ich mehr, die mir den Lenz verkünde:—
hör ich sie nie, seh' ich sie niemals
mehr?

VENUS: Ha! Was vernehm' ich?
welche thör'ge Klagen!
Bist du so bald der holden Wunder müde,
die meine Liebe der bereitet? Oder wie? Reu't es dich so sehr, ein Gott zu sein?
Has du so bald vergessen, wie du einst
gelitten, während jetzt du dich erfreu'st?
Mein Sänger, auf! Ergreife deine
Harfe!
Die Liebe fei're, die so herrlich du besingst,
dass du der Liebe Göttin selber dir
gewannst!
Die Liebe fei're, da ihr höchster
Preis dirward!

main alone in their former attitude.)

SCENE II.

Venus—Tannhäuser.

(Tannhäuser raises his head suddenly, as though starting from a dream. Venus draws him back again lovingly. Tannhäuser draws his hand across his eyes, as though to recall a dream.)

VENUS: Oh, say, my love, where stray your thoughts?

TANNHÄUSER: No more, no more!
O that I now might waken.

VENUS: Say, what grief is yours?

TANNHÄUSER: I dreamt I heard upon the air
Sounds that to me were long estranged;
The silvery chime of bells was borne on the breezes—
Oh, say, how long has earth been lost to me?

VENUS: What folly seizes you? Why are you so disturbed?

TANNHÄUSER: The time I dwelt here with you
I cannot measure by day
Seasons pass me, how I scarcely know;
The radiant sun I see no longer;
Strange has become the heavens'
starry splendor,
The sweet verdure of spring,
The gentle token of earth's renewing life;
The nightingale no more I hear
Who sings of hope and promise.
All these delights, are they forever lost?

VENUS: What! are you wavering?
Why these vain lamentings?
Can you be weary of the blisses
That love immortal has cast around
you?
Can it be—do you now repent that you're divine?
Have you so soon forgotten how your heart was mourning
Till by me you were consoled?
My minstrel, come; let not your harp be silent;
Recall the rapture—sing the praise and bliss of love
In tones that won for you love's self to be your slave.
Of love sing only, for her treasures are all yours.

TANNHÄUSER: (zu einem plötzlichen Entschlusse ermannt, nimmt die Harfe und stellt sich feierlich vor Venus hin).
1.
Dir töne Lob!
Die Wunder sei'n gepreisen, die deine Macht mir Glücklichem erschuf!
Die Wonnen süss, die deiner Huld entspriessen,
erheb' mein Lied in lautem Jubelruf!
Nach Freude, ach! nach herrlichem
Geniessen
verlangt' mein Herz, est dürstete mein Sinn:
da, was no Göttern einstens du erwiesen, gab deine Gunst mir Sterblichem dahin.
Doch sterblich, ach! bin ich geblieben,
und übergross ist mir dein Lieben;
wenn stets ein Gott geniessen kann, bin ich dem Wechsel unterthan;
nicht Lust allein liegt mir am Herzen, aus Freuden sehn' ich mich nach Schmerzen;
aus deinem Reiche muss ich
flieh'n,—
O Königin, Göttin! Lass mich
zieh'n!

VENUS: (wie aus einem Traume erwachend). Was muss ich hören!
Welch' ein Sang!
Welch' trübem Ton verfällt dein
Lied!
Wohin floh die Begeist'rung dir,
die Wonnesang dir nur gebot?
Was ist's? Worin war meine Liebe lässig?
Geliebter, wessen klagest du mich
an?

TANNHÄUSER: (zur Harfe).
2.
Dank deiner Huld! Gepriesen sei dein Lieben!
Beglücht für immer, wer bei dir
geweilt!
Beneidet ewig, wer mit warmen
Trieben
in deinen Armen Götterglut getheilt!
Entzückend sind die Wunder deines Reiches,
den Zuber aller Wonnen athm' ich hier;
kein Land der weiten Erde bietet Gleiches,
was sie besitzt, scheint leicht entbehrlich dir.
Doch ich aus diesen ros'gen Düften verlange nach des Waldes Lüften, nach unsres Himmels klarem Blau, nach unsrem frischen Grün der Au',
nach unsrer Vöglein liebem Sange, nach unsrer Glocken trautem
Klange:—
Aus deinem Reiche muss ich
flieh'n,—

TANNHÄUSER: (inspired with sudden resolution, takes his harp and stands in an earnest attitude before Venus).
1.
All praise be yours! Immortal fame attend;
Songs of joy be ever sung to you!
Each soft delight did lend me your bounty sweet
Shall wake the harp while time and love are young!
It was joy alone, a longing thirst for pleasure,
That filled my heart and darkened
my desire;
And you, whose bounty gods alone
can measure,
Gave me, poor mortal, all its wealth
to know.
But while you have enchanted my sense,
By thy great love my heart is daunted.
A god alone can dwell in joy—
To mortal, frail, its blisses cloy;
I would be swayed by pain and
pleasure
In Nature's sweet alternate measure.
I must away from you, or die—
Oh, Queen beloved! Goddess, let me fly!

VENUS: (as though awaking from a dream). Is this your fealty? This your song?
It is fraught with dim and sorrowful tones!
On, where now are the lays inspired
That ecstacy fired within you?
Oh, say in what my love has ever been wanting?
Beloved one, oh, what doubt have you of me?

TANNHÄUSER: (taking his harp).
2.
Oh gracious fair! in numbers sweet
I'll praise you.
The ice blessed he who has known your delights!
Grace from the skies with every charm arrays you;
To be your slave is every bliss to own!
In your domain the willing heart is captured
In never-ending train of soft delights;
No dark remembrance dims the soul enraptured,
And at your feet all joys of earth it slights.
But far from these, I long to meet your rosy bowers,
The breath of flowers, long for the enfolding heavenly blue,
Long for the verdure fresh with dew,
Carols of birds, so sweet and tender,
Earth's fair expanse in noontide

O Königin, Göttin! Lass mich zieh'n!

VENUS: (leidenschaftlich aufspringend). Treuloser! Weh'! Was lässest du mich hören?
Du wagest meine Liebe zu verhöhnen?
Du preisest sie und willst sie dennoch flieh'n:
Zum Ueberdruss ist dir mein Reiz gedieh'n?

TANNHÄUSER: O, schöne Göttin!
Wolle mir nicht zürück!
Dein übergrosser Reiz ist's, ich meide.

VENUS: Weh' dir! Verräther!
Heuchler! Undankbarer!
Ich lass dich nicht! Du darfst nicht von mir zieh'n!

TANNHÄUSER: Nie war mein Lieben grösser, niemals wahrer, als jetzt, da ich für ewig dich muss flieh'n!
(Venus hat mit heftiger Geberde ihr Gesicht, von ihren Handen bedeckt, abgewandt. Nach einem Schweigen wendet sie es lächelnd und mit verführerischem Ausdrucke Tannhäuser wieder zu.)

VENUS: (mit leiser Stimme beginnend). Geliebter, komm'! Sieh' dort die Grotte von ros'gen Düften mild durchwallt!
Entzücken böt' selbst einem Gotte der süss'sten Freuden Aufenthalt:
besänftigt auf dem weichsten Pfühle,
flieh' deine Glieder jeder Schmerz, dein brennend Haupt umwehe Kühle, wonnige Glut durchschwell' dein Herz.
Aus holder Ferne mahnen süsse Klänge dass dich mein Arm in trauter Näh' um schlänge;
von meinen Lippen schlürfst du Göttertrank,
aus meinen Augen strahlt dir Liebesdank:—
ein Freudenfest soll unsrem Bund entstehen, der Liebe Feier lass uns froh begehen!
Nicht sollst du ihr ein scheues Opfer weih'n,— nein!—mit der Liebe Göttin schwelge im Verein!

SIRENEN: (aus weiter Ferne, unsichtbar). Naht euch dem Strande, naht euch dem Lande!

VENUS: (Tannhäuser sanft nach sich ziehend). Mein Ritter! Mein Geliebter! Willst du flieh'n?

splendor!
I must away from here or die—
Oh! Queen beloved, Goddess, let me fly!

VENUS: (springing from her couch). Ungrateful! What, shall my love be slighted this way
But you, in whom so dear my heart delighted?
What praise is yours of joys you yet would flee?
My vaunted charms, alas! have wearied you.

TANNHÄUSER: Oh, fair perfection! frown not on your servant!
Your charms' excess, O goddess, has unmanned me!

VENUS: Traitor, beware, then! Serpent heart ungrateful!
Ah! we'll not part this way. Ah, no; you shall not leave me.

TANNHÄUSER: But, bereft of your sweet presence, joy is hateful;
But fate sternly impels me—I sigh for liberty.
(Venus with a cry turns away from him, burying her face in her hands. A long silence. She seeks gradually to win Tannhäuser's glance again, and suddenly turns toward him with a seductive smile.)

VENUS: (beginning in a soft voice). Beloved one, come! Soft dreams of wonder Within yon grot shall wrap you round;
The purple shadows breaking yonder
Shall resound with murmuring music.
There I'll shower joys unknown upon you,
Within these arms you shall have rest
Until for mine again I've won you—
Till faith renewed your lips have confessed.
The odorous airs shall tell in dulcet voices
That bliss divine once more our hearts rejoices.
Love has a solace for your restless heart;
It were worse than dying, to part from sweet love
This day renew those tender vows we plighted—
In joy immortal be our hearts united.
You shall no more adore the power of love—
No! love itself to worship you, beloved, shall move.

SIRENS: (in the far distance, invisible). Come to these bowers,
Radiant with flowers!

VENUS: (drawing Tannhäuser lovingly toward her). My hero and my heart's love! Will you fly me?

TANNHÄUSER: (auf das äusserste hingerissen, nochmals die Harfe ergreifend).
3.
Stets soll nur dir, nur dir mein Lied ertönen!
Gesungen laut sei unr dein Preis von mir!
Dein süsser Reiz ist Quelle alles Schönen, und jedes holde Wunder stammt von dir.
Die Glut, die du mir in das Herz gegosten, als Flamme lod're hell sie dir allein!
Ja, gegen alle Welt will unverdrossen fortan ich nun dein kühner Streiter sein.
Doch hin muss ich zur Welt der Erden, bei dir kann ich nur Sklave werden;
nach Freiheit doch verlange ich,
nach Freiheit, Freiheit dürstet's mich;
zu Kampf und Streite will ich stehen, sei's auch auf Tod und Untergehen:—
d'rum muss aus deinem Reich ich flieh'n!
O Königin! Göttin! Lass mich zieh'n!

VENUS: (ihm heftigsten Zorne). Zieh' hin, Wahnsinniger, zieh' hin!
Verräther, sieh', nicht halt' ich dich!
Ich geb' dich frei,—zieh' hin! zieh' hin!
Was du verlangst, das sei dein Loos!
Hin zu den kalten Menschen flieh', vor deren blödem, trübem Wahn der Freude Götter wir entfloh'n tief in der Erde wärmenden Schoos.
Zieh' hin, Bethörter! Suche dein Heil, suche dein Heil—und find' es nie!
Bald weicht der Stolz aus deiner Seel',— Demüthig seh' ich dich mir nahn,— Zerknirscht, zertreten suchst du mich auf
Flehst, um die Zauber meiner Macht.

TANNHÄUSER: Ach schöne Göttin, lebe wohl!
Nie kehre ich zu dir zurück!

VENUS: Ha, kehrest du mir nie zurück!—
Kehrst du nicht wieder, ha! so sei verfluchet!
Von mir das ganze menschliche Geschlect!
Nach meinen Wundern dann vergebens suchet!
Die Welt sei öde, und ihr Held ein Knecht!—
Kehr' wieder! Kehre mir zurück!

TANNHÄUSER: Nie mehr erfreu' mich Liebesglück!

VENUS: Kehr' wieder, wenn dein Herz dich zieht!

TANNHÄUSER: (in the greatest emotion takes his harp once more).
3.
While I have life, alone my harp shall praise you,
No meaner thing shall my song inspire.
Nothing can have grace or charm but it obeys you,
Of all that lives you best and chief desire.
The fire you've kindled in my longing spirit
An altar flame shall burn for you alone;
My song shall be divine, but by the merit
That, as your champion, harp and sword I own.
And yet for earth I'm yearning.
In your soft chains I'm burning with shame;
It is freedom I must win, or die —
For freedom I can all defy.
I go forth to strife or glory,
Come life or death, come joy or woe,
No more will I sigh in bondage!
Oh, Queen, beloved goddess, let me fly!

VENUS: (in great fury). Then go, oh traitor heart! away,
You madman! Go! I hold you not!
I set you free! Away!
Go forth — your heart's desire shall be your doom!
Go to the cold and joyless earth,
Where neither love nor life can bloom,
From where every smiling god has flown,
Where dark suspicion first had birth
Go forth, madman!
There seek joy, and seek in vain.
Soon will this fever quit your soul;
Humbled and sorrowing you'll return —
Remorse will gnaw you, nothing will console;
For joys remembered you shall burn!

TANNHÄUSER: Ah, fair enchantress, farewell!
Never can I return to you.

VENUS: Ah, if you never should return
If you forget me —
Oh, to lasting torments I doom
The accursed and faithless race of man!
For my delights they all shall vainly languish —
The world a desert, and its lord a slave.
Go forth, then — go, your doom to brave!

TANNHÄUSER: Love never more will bless your slave.

VENUS: Go forth, then, till your heart awake.

TANNHÄUSER: Für ewig dein Geliebter flieht.

VENUS: Wenn alle Welt dich von sich stösst!—

TANNHÄUSER: Von Bann werd' ich durch Buss' erlöst!

VENUS: Nie wird Vergebund dir zu Theil,—
Kehr' wieder, schliesst sich dir das Heil!

TANNHÄUSER: Mein Heil! Mein Heil ruht in Maria!
(Furchtbarer Schlag.—Venus verschwindet.)

DRITTE SCENE.

Tannhäuser. Ein junger Hirt. Pilger.
(Tannhäuser, der seine Stellung nicht verlassen, befindet sich plötzlich in ein schönes Thal versetzt. Blaue Himmel, heitere Sonnenbeleuchtung. Rechts im Hintergrunde die Wartburg; durch die Thalöffnung nach links erblickt man den Hörselberg.—Rechts führt auf der halben Höhe des Thales ein Bergweg von der Richtung der Wartburg her nach dem Vordergrunde zu, wo er dann seitwärts abbiegt; in demselben Vordergrunde ist ein Muttergottes-Bild, zu welchem ein niedriger Bergvorsprung hinaufführt. Von der Höhe links vernimmt man das Geläute von Herde-Glocken; auf einem hohen Vorsprunge sitzt ein junger Hirt mit der Schalmei.)

HIRT: Frau Holda kam aus dem Berg hervor, zu ziehen durch Flur und Auen;
gar süssen Klang vernahm da mein Ohr, mein Auge begehrte zu schauen:—
da träumt, ich manchen holden Traum, und als mein Aug' erschlossen kaum da strahlte warm die Sonnen, der Mai, der Mai war kommen.
Nun spiel ich lustig die Schmalmei:— der Mai ist da, der liebe Mai!
(Er spielt auf der Schalmei. Man hört den Gesang der älteren Pilger, welche, von der Richtung der Wartburg her kommend, auf dem Bergwege sich nähern.)

GESANG DER ÄLTEREN PILGER: Zu dir wall' ich mein Herr und Gott, der zu des Sünders Hoffnung bist!
Gelobt sei, Jungfrau süss und rein,
der Wallfahrt wolle günstig sein!
(Der Hirt, den Gesang vernehmend, hält auf der Schmalei ein und hört andächtig zu.) Ach, schwr drückt mich der Sünden Last, kann länger sie nicht mehr ertrangen;

TANNHÄUSER: Ah, love, I go, although it break.

VENUS: You'll be received with hate and scorn.

TANNHÄUSER: Repentance heals a forlorn heart.

VENUS: Never will heaven open to you;
Return, then, if there is no hope.

TANNHÄUSER: No hope! My hope rests in heaven.
(A fearful crash — Venus disappears.)

SCENE III.

Tannhäuser. A Young Shepherd. Pilgrims.
(Tannhäuser, who has not quitted his position, suddenly finds himself in the midst of a beautiful valley. Blue skies and sunlight. To the right in the background the Wartburg; to the left, through an opening in the vale, the Hörsel Mount is visible. To the right, halfway the height of the valley, a mountain path leads down from the direction of the Wartburg toward the foreground, where it turns aside. In the same foreground is a shrine to the Virgin, reached by ascending a slight eminence. From the heights to the left the tinkle of sheep-bells is heard; on a high cliff sits a young Shepherd playing his pipe.)

A YOUNG SHEPHERD: Dame Holda stepped from the mountain's heart,
To roam the wood and the meadow;
Sweet sounds did start low around me—
I longed I might follow her shadow.
And there dreamt I a golden dream,
And when again the day did gleam
The spell was gone that bound me:
It was May, sweet May, around me.
Now songs of joy attune my lay,
For May has come — the balmy May!
(He plays upon the pipe. The song of the elder Pilgrims, approaching by the mountain path from the Wartburg, is heard.)

CHORUS OF ELDER PILGRIMS: To You, O Lord, my steps I bend;
In You both joy and sorrow end!
Oh, Mary, pure and gracious one,
Bless the road we have begun!
(The Shepherd, hearing the song, stops playing, and listens reverently.)
Oh, see my heart, oppressed by guilt—
I faint, I sink beneath my burden!
Nor will I cease, nor will I rest,
Till heavenly mercy grants me pardon.

drum will ich auch nicht Ruh' noch Rast,
und wähle gern mir Müh' und Plagen.
Am hohen Fest der gnadenhuld in Demuth sühn' ich meine Schuld;
gesegnet, wer im glauben treu:
er wird erlöst durch Buss' un Reu'.

HIRT: (als die Pilger auf derr ihm gegenüberliegenden Höhe angekommen sind den Hut Schweukend und den Pilgers laut zurufend). Glück auf! Glück auf nach Rom!
Betet für meine arme Seele!

TANNHÄUSER: (der in der Mitte der Bühne wie festgewurzelt gestanden, sinkt heftig erschüttert auf die Kniee). Allmächt' ger dir sei Preis!
Hehr sind die Wunder deiner Gnade.
(Der Zug der Pilger biegt von hier an auf dem Bergwege bei dem Muttergottes-Blide links ab und verlässt so die Bühne; der Hirt entfernt sich ebenfalls mit der Schalmei rechts von der Höhe. —Man hört die Herdeglocken immer entfernter.)

PILGERGESANG: Zu dir wall' ich mein Herr und Gott, der du des Pilgers Hoffnung bist!
Gelobt sei, Jungfrau süss und rein,
der Wallfahart wolle günstig sein!

TANNHÄUSER: (singt auf den Knien, wie in brünstiges Gebet versunken, weiter.—Die Pilger haben hier bereits die Bühne verlassen). Ach, schwer drückt mich der Sünden Last, kann länger sie nicht mehr ertragen;
drum will ich auch nicht Ruh' noch Rast
und wähle gern mir Müh' und Plagen.
(Thränen ersticken seine Stimme, er neigt das Haupf tief zur Erde und scheint heftig zu weinen.—Aus dem Hintergrunde, sehr entfernt, hört man Glockengeläute. Der Gesang verliert sich hier gänzlich. Während sich der Klang von Jagdhörnern von der Höhe links her immer mehr nähert, schweigt das entfernte Glockengläute. Von der Anhöhe links herab, ans einem Waldwege treten der Landgraf und die Sänger in Jägertracht einzelud auf.)

VIERTE SCENE.

Tannhäuser. Der Landgraf und die Sänger.

LANDGRAF: (aus halber Höhe Tannhäuser erblickend). Wer ist der dort in brünstigem Gebete?

WALTHER: Ein Büsser wohl.

At your august and holy shrine
I go to seek the grace divine;
Thrice blessed who your promise know,
Absolved by penance shall they go.

SHEPHERD: (The Shepherd, when the Pilgrims reach the opposite height, calls loudly to them, waving his cap.) God speed, God speed to Rome!
There, for my soul, oh breathe a prayer!

TANNHÄUSER: (standing in the middle of the stage as though spell-bound, falls, deeply overcome, upon his knees). Almighty, praise to you!
Great are the marvels of your mercy.
(The procession of Pilgrims turns to the left here, on the mountain way, passing the Virgin's shrine and so leaving the stage; the Shepherd, with his pipe, also disappears from the heights and to the right. The sheep-bells are heard farther and farther in the distance.)

PILGRIMS:
To You, O Lord, my steps I bend;
In You both joy and sorrow end!
Oh, Mary, pure and gracious one,
Bless the road we have begun!

TANNHÄUSER: (on his knees as though absorbed in fervent prayer. The Pilgrims here have already left the stage). Oh, see my heart, oppressed by guilt—
I faint, I sink beneath the burden!
Nor will I cease, nor will I rest
Till heavenly mercy grants me pardon!
(Tears choke his voice. He bows his head low to the ground and seems to weep bitterly. From the far distance the chime of bells is heard. The Pilgrims' song dies entirely away here, while the sound of hunting horns, from the heights on the left, draws nearer and nearer. The bells in the distance are silent. The Landgrave and the Minstrels, in hunting dress, one by one, are seen descending from the hills to the left, by a forest path.)

SCENE IV.

Tannhäuser. The Landgrave and the Minstrels.

LANDGRAVE: (halfway descended, seeing Tannhäuser). Who is that knight, so deep absorbed in prayer?

WALTER: A pilgrim, sure.

BITEROLF: Nach seiner Tracht ein Ritter.

WOLFRAM: (eilt zunächst auf Tannhäuser zu und erkennt ihn). Er ist es!

DIE SÄNGER UND DER LANDGRAF: Heinrich! Heinrich! Seh' ich recht?
(Tannhäuser, der überrascht schnell aufgefahren ist, ermannt sich und verneigt sich stumm gegen den Landgrafen, nachdem er einen flüchtigen Blick auf ihn und die Sänger geworfen.)

LANDGRAF: Du bist es wirklich?
Kehrest in den Kreis zurück,
den du in Hochmuth stolz verliessest?

BITEROLF: Sag', was uns deine Wiederkunft bedeutet?
Versöhnung? Oder gilt's erneutem Kampf?

WALTHER: Nah'st du als Freund uns oder Feind?

DIE ANDERN SÄNGER AUSSER WOLFRAM: Als Feind?

WOLFRAM: O flaget nicht! Ist dies des Hochmuths Miene?—
Gegrüsst sei uns, du kühner Sänger, der ach! so lang, in uns'rer Mitte fehlt!

WALTHER: Willkommen, wenn du friedlich nah'st!

BITEROLF: Gegrüsst, wenn du uns Freunde nennst.

ALLE SÄNGER: Gegrüsst! Gegrüsst! Gegrüsst sei uns!

LANDGRAF: So sei willkommen denn auch mir.
Sag' an, wo weiltest du so lang!

TANNHÄUSER: Ich wanderte in weiter, weiter Fern',— da, wo ich nimmer Rast noch Ruhe fand.
Fragt nicht! Zum Kampf mit euch nicht kam ich her.
Seid mir versöhnt, und lasst mich weiter zieh'n.

LANDGRAF: Nicht doch! Der Uns're bist du neu worden.

WALTHER: Du darfst nich zieh'n.

BITEROLF: Wir lassen dich nich fort.

TANNHÄUSER: Last mich! Mir frommet kein Verweilen, und nimmer kann ich rastend steh'n;
mein Weg heisst mich nur vorwärts eilen,
denn räckwärts darf ich niemals seh'n.

DER LANDGRAF UND DIE SÄNGER: O bleib', bei uns sollst du verweilen, wir lassen dich nicht von uns geh'n.
Du suchtest uns, warum enteilen
Nach solchem kurzen Wiederseh'n?

BITEROLF: By every sign, a noble.

WOLFRAM: (hurries first to Tannhäuser and recognizes him). Our lost one!

ALL: Henry! Henry! is it you?
(Tannhäuser, who, astonished, rises hastily, controls himself and bows mutely to the Landgrave after casting a hasty glance on him and on the Minstrels.)

LANDGRAVE: Is it no delusion?
Do you, then, return to us,
Whom you so rashly abandoned?

BITEROLF: Say, what does your return this day forebode us?
Is it friendship? or a challenge, as of old?

WALTER: Do you come as friend, or scornful foe?

ALL, EXCEPT WOLFRAM: As foe?

WOLFRAM: Oh, ask him not! His looks bespeak not scorning!
We welcome you, gallant minstrel;
Alas! too long you were estranged from us.

WALTER: Yes, welcome, if you come in peace!

BITEROLF: All hail! if we can greet as friends.

ALL: All hail, all hail! we welcome you!

LANDGRAVE: I, too, would welcome your return;
But say, where did you linger for so long?

TANNHÄUSER: In strange and distant realms I wandered far,
Where neither peace nor rest were ever found.
Ask not! at enmity I am with none;
We meet as friends—let me in peace depart.

LANDGRAVE: Depart, you shall not—we claim you for our own.

WALTER: You must not go.

BITEROLF: You shall not part from us.

TANNHÄUSER: I must! Onward I'm driven ever;
Never upon earth can I have rest.
The past to me is closed for ever—
I'm doomed to roam alone, unblest.

ALL: Oh stay; be ours—let us not sever;
Amid friends and home you shall find rest;
What do you seek with vain endeavor?
Why is your soul oppressed with grief?

WOLFRAM: (Tannhäuser in den Weg tretend, mit erhobener Stimme). Bleib' bei Elisabeth!

TANNHÄUSER: (heftig und freudig ergriffen). Elisabeth!–O Macht des Himmels, rufst du den süssen Namen mir?

WOLFRAM: Nich sollst du feind mich schelten, dass ich ihn genanut! — Eelaubest du mir, Herr dass ich Verkünder seines Glück's ihn sei?

LANDGRAF: Nenn' ihm den Zauber, den er ausgeübt, und Gott veleih' ihm Tugend, dass würdig er ihn löse! —

WOLFRAM: Als du in kühnem Sange uns bestrittest, bald siegreich gegen uns're Lieder sangst, durch uns're Kunst Besiegung bald erlittest:
ein Preis doch war's, den du allein arrangst.
War's Zauber, war es reine Macht, durch die solch' Wunder du vollbracht, an deinen Sang voll Wonn' und Leid gebannt die tugendreichste Maid?
Denn ach! als du uns stolz verlassen,
verschloss ihr Herz, sich uns'rem Lied;
wir sahen ihre Wang' erblassen,
für immer uns'ren Kreis sie mied. —
O kehr' zurück, du kühner Sänger, dem uns'ren sei dein Lied nicht fern, — den Festen fehle sie nicht länger, auf's Neu leuchte uns ihr Stern!

DIE SÄNGER: Sei unser, Heinrich! Kehr' uns wieder
Zwietracht und streit sei abgethan!
Vereint ertönen uns're Lieder,
und Brüder nenne uns fortan!

TANNHÄUSER: (Tannhäuser von heftiger Rührung ergriffen, stürzt sich in Wolfram's Arme, begrüsst der Reihe nach jeden Sänger und verneigt sich innig dankend vor dem Landgrafen.) Zu ihr! Zu ihr!
Oh, führet mich zu ihr.
Ha jetzt erkenne ich sie wieder,
die schöne Welt, der ich entrückt!
Der Himmel blickt auf mich hernieder, die Fluren prangen reich geschmücht.
Der Lenz mit tausend holden Klängen zog jubelnd in die Seele mir;
in süssem, ungestümen Drängen
ruft laut mein Herz: zu ihr! zu ihr!
(Während des vorhergehenden hat sich nach und nach der ganze Jagdtross des Landgrafen mit Falkenträgern u. s. w. auf der WOLFRAM: (intercepting him, in a loud voice). Here dwells Elisabeth.

TANNHÄUSER: (in deep and joyful agitation). Elisabeth! Oh ruth of heaven!
That name adored once more I hear!

WOLFRAM: He is no foe who recalls that name to you.
My sovereign lord, permit that I may tell him of the prize he won.

LANDGRAVE: Tell him the marvel that his song has wrought;
And keep him, Heaven, in virtue, that nobly he may own it.

WOLFRAM: When we were contending for the palm in song,
And often your conquering strain the wreath had won,
Our songs anon your victory suspending,
One glorious prize was won by you alone.
Was it magic, or a power divine, that wrought through you the wondrous sign, of royal maids the flower!
Your harp and song, in blissful hour enthralled;
For ah, when you had left us in scorn
Her heart was closed to joy and song.
Of her sweet presence she bereft us,
For you in vain she wearied long;
Ah, for you in vain she wearied long.
Oh, minstrel bold, return and rest,
Once more awake the joyous strain!
Cast off the burden that oppressed you,
And her fair star will shine again!

ALL: Return, oh, Henry—you, our brother!
Anger and strife shall be no more;
In joy and peace with one another
Our strains united let us pour.

TANNHÄUSER: (Tannhäuser, deeply touched, throws himself into Wolfram's arms, greets the Minstrels in turn, and bows in tender gratitude to the Landgrave.) What joy! what joy! oh, guide my steps to her!
Ah! do you smile once more upon me,
Radiant world that I had lost?
Oh, sun of heaven, you do not shun me,
By stormy clouds no longer crossed!
It is May, sweet May, its thousand carols'
Tender rejoicing set my sorrows free!
A ray of new, unwonted splendor
My soul illumes. Oh joy! it is she!
(During the foregoing, the whole hunting retinue of the Landgrave, Bühne versaumelt. Die Jäger stossen in die Hörner.)

LANDGRAF UND DIE SÄNGER: Er kehrt zurück, den wir verloren!
Ein Wunder hat ihn hergebracht.
Die ihm den Uebermuth beschworen, gepriesen sei die holde Macht!
Nun lausche Euren/unsren Hochgesängen von Neuem der Gepries'nen Ohr!
Es tön' in frohbelebten Klängen das Lied aus jeder Brust hervor!
(Das ganze Thal wimmelt jetzt von immer noch stärker angewachsenem Jagdtross. Der Landgraf und die Sänger wenden sich den Jägern zu; der Landgraf stösst in sein Horn, lautes Hornschmettern und Rüdengebell autowortet ihm. Während der Langraf und die Sänger die Pferde, die ihnen von der Wartburg zugeführt worden sind, besteigen, fällt der Vorhang.)

ZWEITER AUFZUG.

ERSTE SCENE.

(Die Sängerhalle auf der Wartburg; im Hintergrunde freie Aus sicht auf dem Burghof und das Thal.)

ELISABETH: (tritt feudig bewegt ein).
Dich, theure Halle, grüss' ich wieder, froh grüss' ich dich, geliebter Raum!
In dir erwachen seine Lieder und wecken mich aus düst rem Traum.
Da er aus dir geschieden,
wie öd' erschienst du mir! —
Aus mir entfloh der Frieden, die Freude zog aus dir. —
Wie jetzt mein Busen hoch sich hebet, so scheinst du jetzt mir stolz und hehr;
der dich und mich so neu belebet,
nicht länger weilt er ferne mehr,
Sei mir gegrüsst! sei mi gegrüsst!

ZWEITE SCENE.

(Tannhäuser von Wolfram geleitet tritt mit diesem aus der Treppe im Hintergrunde auf.)

WOLFRAM: (zu Tannhäuser).
Dort ist sie;—nahe dich ihr ungestört!
(Er bleibt an die Mauerbrüstung gelehnt im Hintergrande.)

TANNHÄUSER: (ungestüm zu den Füssen Elisabeth's stürzend.). O Fürstin!

with falcon-bearers, etc., have assembled themselves upon the stage. The hunters sound their horns.)

ALL: He returns no more to wander;
Our loved and lost is ours again.
All praise and thanks to those we render
Who could persuade, and not in vain.
Now, let your harps indite a measure
Of all that hero's hand may dare—
Of all that poet's heart can pleasure,
Before the fairest of the fair.
(The whole valley fills now with an ever-increasing train of hunters. The Landgrave and the Minstrels join the hunters; the Landgrave sounds his horn, and loud bugle calls and the baying of hounds answer him. While the Landgrave and the Minstrels are mounting the horses, which have been led to them from the Wartburg, the curtain falls.)

ACT II.

SCENE I.

(The Hall of the Minstrels in the Wartburg. In the background an open view of the court and the valley.)

ELISABETH: (entering joyfully).
Oh, Hall of Song! I give you greeting!
All hail to you, hallowed place!
It was here that dream, so sweet and fleeting,
Upon my heart his song did trace.
But since by him forsaken
You do seem a desert—
Your echoes only waken
Remembrance of a dream!
But now the flame of hope is lighted,
Your vault shall ring with glorious war;
For he whose strains my soul delighted
No longer roams afar!

SCENE II.

(Tannhäuser, led by Wolfram, enters from a stairway in the background.)

WOLFRAM: (to Tannhäuser). Behold her! Nothing shall disturb your meeting.
(He remains in the background, leaning against a pillar.)

TANNHÄUSER: (throws himself impetuously at the feet of Elisabeth). Oh, Princess!

ELISABETH: (in schüchterner Verwirrung). Gott!—Steht auf! — Lasst mich!
Nicht darf ich euch hier seh'n!
(Sie will sich entfernen.)

TANNHÄUSER: Du darf'st! O bleib' und zu deinen Füssen mich!

ELISABETH: (sich freundlich zu ihm wendend.) So stehet auf!
Nicht sollet hier ihr knien, denn diese Halle ist euer Königreich. O, stehet auf!
Nehmt meinen Dank, dass ihr zurück-gekehrt!— Wo wiltet ihr so lange?

TANNHÄUSER: (sich langasam erhebend). Fern von hier, in weiten, weiten Landen.
Dichtes Vergessen hat zwischen heut' und gestern sich gesenkt.
All' mein Erinnern ist mir schnell geschwunden, und nur des Einen muss ich mich entsinnen,
dass nie mehr ich gehofft, euch zu begrüssen,
noch je zu euch mein Auge zu erheben.—

ELISABETH: Was war es dann, das euch zurückgeführt?

TANNHÄUSER: Ein Wunder war's, ein unbegreiflich hohes Wunder!

ELISABETH: (freudig aufwallend). Gepriesen sei dies Wunder aus meines Herzens Tiefe!
(Sich mässigend in Verwirrung).
Verzeiht, wenn ich nicht weiss, was ich beginne!
Im Traum bin ich und thör'ger als ein Kind, — machtlos der Macht der Wunder preisgegeben.
Fast kenn' ich mich nicht mehr; o, helfen mir, dass ich das Räthsel meines Herzens löse!—
Der Sänger klugen Weisen
lauscht' ich sonst gern und viel!
ihr Singen und ihr Preisen schien mir ein holdes Spiel.
Doch welch' ein seltsam neues Leben rief euer Lied mir in die Brust!
Bald wollt' es mich wie Schmerz durchbeben,
bald drang's in mich wie jähe Lust:
Gefühle, die ich nie empfunden!
Verlangen, das ich nie gekannt!
Was einst mir lieblich, war verschwunden vor Wonnen, die noch nie genannt!
Und als ihr nun von uns gegangen,— war Frieden mir und Lust dahin;
die Weisen, die die Sänger sangen, erschienen matt mir, trüb' ihr Sinn;
im Traume fühlt' ich dumpfe Schmerzen mein Wachen ward trübsel'ger Wahn; die Freude zog aus meinem Her-

ELISABETH: (in timid confusion). Heaven! do not kneel! leave me
Here, thus we should not meet.
(She moves to depart.)

TANNHÄUSER: We may! oh, stay,
And let me kneel forever here!

ELISABETH: (turning toward him gently). I pray you rise!
It is not for you to kneel where you have conquered.
This hall is your domain. Rise, I implore!
Thanks be to heaven that you returned to us!
Where have you tarried so long?

TANNHÄUSER: (slowly rising).
Far away, in strange and distant regions —
And between yesterday and today oblivion's veil has fallen.
Every remembrance has forever vanished,
Save one thing only, rising from the darkness —
That I then dared not hope I should behold you,
Nor evr raise mine eyes to your perfection.

ELISABETH: How were you led now to return to us?

TANNHÄUSER: A marvel it was, by heaven wrought within my spirit.

ELISABETH: (in joyful emotion).
I praise the power that wrought it
From my heart's recesses!
(More quietly and in confusion.)
Forgive — I scarcely know what I am saying:
Your presence here, a vision it seems —
Strange dream of life, mysterious and alluring.
The world to me is changed. Can you declare
What this emotion betokens to my heart!
In minstrels' lays delighting
I marked and listened long and often;
Their subtle, sweet inditing
To me seemed dalliance soft.
But now the past to me is darkened—
Repose and joy from me have flown;
Since fondly to your lays I've hearkened
The pangs and bliss of woe I've known.
Emotions that I comprehend not,
And longings never guess before —
Upon my biddings they depend not,
But fled are all delights of yore.
And when this land you had forsaken
Repose and joy for me were fled;
No minstrel could my heart awaken—
To me their lays seemed sad and dead.

zen:—
Heinrich! Was thatet ihr mir an?

TANNHÄUSER: (hingerissen).
Den Gott der Liebe sollst du preisen, er hat die Saiten mir berührt,
er sprach zu dir aus meinen Weisen,
zu dir hat er mich hergeführt!

ELISABETH: Gepriesen sei die Stunde!
gepriesen sei die Macht,
die mir so holde Kunde
von eurer Näh' gebracht!
Von Wonneglanz umgeben
lacht mir der Sonne Schein;
erwacht zu neuem Leben,
nenn' ich die Freude mein.

TANNHÄUSER: Gepriesen sei die Stunde,
gepriesen sei die Macht.
die mir so holde Kunde
aus deinen; Mund gebracht.
Dem neu erkannten Leben darf ich mich muthig weih'n.
ich nenn' in freud'gem Beben sein schönstes Wunder mein!

WOLFRAM: (in Hintergrunde).
So flieht für dieses Leben mir jeder Hoffnung Schein!
(Tannhäuser trennt sich von Elisabeth; er geht auf Wolfram zu, umarmt ihn heftig und entfernt sich mit ihm durch die Treppe. Elisabeth blickt Tannhäuser vom Balkon aus nach.)

DRITTE SCENE.

(Der Landgraf tritt aus einem Seitengange auf. Elisabeth eilt auf ihn zu und birgt ihr Gesicht an seiner Brust.)

Landgraf: Dich treff' ich hier in dieser Halle, die so lange du gemieden? Endlich denn lockt dich ein Sängerfest, das wir bereiten?

ELISABETH: Mein Oheim! O, mein gut'ger Vater!

LANDGRAF: Drängt es dich, dein Herz mir endlich zu erschliessen?

ELISABETH: Blick' mir in's Auge! Sprechen kann ich nicht.

LANDGRAF: Noch bleibe denn unausgesprochen dein süss Geheimniss kurze Frist;
der Zauber bleibe ungebrochen,
bis du der Lösung mächtig bist.—
So sei's! Was der Gesang so Wunderbares erweckt und angeregt, soll heute er enthüllen auch und mit Vollendung Krönen.
Die holde Kunst, sie werde jetzt zur That!
Schon nahen sich die Edlen meiner

In slumber often near broken-hearted,
Awake, each pain fondly recalled,
All joy has departed from my life.
Henry, Henry, why am I enthralled?

TANNHÄUSER: (ennraptured).
All praise to love for this fair token!
Love touched my harp with magic sweet —
Love through my song, to you has spoken,
And leads me captive at your feet.

ELISABETH: Oh blessed hour of meeting,
Oh blessed power of love!
At last I give you greeting,
No longer you will rove!
Now life renewed awakens,
Within this heart of mine,
The cloud of sorrow breaks,
The sun of joy shall shine!

TANNHÄUSER: Oh blessed hour of meeting,
Oh blessed power of love,
At last I give you greeting,
No more to rove from here!
Now life renewed awakes us
The hope that once was mine,
The cloud of sorrow breaks,
I know but joy divine!

WOLFRAM: (in the background).
My heart forsakes all hope,
Never will her heart be mine!
(Tannhäuser parting from Elisabeth, goes to Wolfram and, embracing him fervently, disappears with him by the stairway. Elisabeth watches his departure from the balcony.)

SCENE III.

(The Landgrave enters from a side entrance. Elisabeth hastens to meet him hiding her face upon his breast.)

LANDGRAVE: You've come at last to grace the contest?
Will you shun these walls no longer?
What has lured you from your solitude
To come among us?

ELISABETH: My sovereign, oh, my more than father!

LANDGRAVE: Will you, then, at last reveal to me your secret?

ELISABETH: I cannot tell it; read my eyes, and know.

LANDGRAVE: This day it shall still be unspoken—
Your treasured thought you need not own;
The spell shall yet remain unbroken
Till what the future brings is known.
So be it. The wondrous flame that song has kindled
This day shall brightly soar;
Your joy, all hearts rejoicing,
Shall on this day be crowned:

Lande,
die ich zum selt'nen Fest hieher beschied!
zahlreicher nahen sie als je, da sie gehört, dass du des Festes Fürstin sei'st.

VIERTE SCENE.

(Trompeten im burghofe. Der Landgraf und Elisabeth treten an den Balkon, um nach der Ankunft der Gäste zu sehen. Vier Edelknaben treten auf und melden an. Sie erhalten vom Landgrafen Befehl für den Empfang u. s. w. Die Ritter und Grafen treten einzeln mit Edelfrauen und Gefolge ein, welches im Hintergrunde bleibt und werden vom Landgrafen und von Elisabeth empfangen.)

CHOR: Freudig begrüssen wir die edle Halle, wo Kunst und Frieden immer nur verweil', wo lange noch der frohe Ruf erschalle:
Thüringens Fürsten, Landgraf Hermann, Heil!
(Die Versammelten haben alle die ihnen angewiesenen, einen grossen Halbkreis bildenden Plätze eingenommen. Die Sänger treten auf, begrüssen feierlich die Versammlung und werden von den Edelknaben nach ihren Sitzen geleitet.)

LANDGRAF: Gar viel und schön ward hier in dieser Halle von euch, ihr lieben Sänger schon gesungen:
in weisen Räthseln wie in heit'ren Liedern erfreutet ihr gleich sinnig unser Herz.—
Wenn unser Schwert in blutig ernsten Kämpfen stritt für des deutschen Reiches Majestät, wenn wir dem grimmen Welfen widerstanden und dem verderbenvollen Zwiespalt wehrten:
so ward von euch nicht mind'rer Preiserrungen.
Der Anmuth und der holden Sitte, der Tugend und dem reinen Glauben erstrittet ihr durch eure Kunst gar hohen, herrlich schönen Sieg.—
Bereitet heute uns denn auch ein Fest, heut, wo der kühne Sänger uns zurückgekehrt,
den wir so ungern lang' vermissten.
Was wieder ihn in uns're Nähe brachte,
ein wunderbar Geheimniss dünkt es mich:

What has been sung shall spring to life for you.
This day will see our nobles all assembled—
To grace the solemn feast they now approach!
None will be absent, since they know,
That once again your hand bestows the victor's wreath.

SCENE IV.

(The Landgrave and Elisabeth go on to the balcony, to watch the arrival of the guests. Four noble Pages enter and announce them. They receive commands from the Landgrave for their reception, etc. The Knights and Counts with their Ladies and retinue, which remains in the background enter singly and are received by the Landgrave and Elisabeth.)

CHORUS: Hail, bright abode, where song the heart rejoices,
May lays of peace within you never fail,
Long may we cry with loyal voices,
Prince of Thuringia, Landgrave Hermann. hail!
(The assembly have all taken the places assigned them forming a large half-circle. The Minstrels enter, greet the assembly in stately fashion and are led to their places by the noble Pages.)

LANDGRAVE: (rising). Minstrels assembled here, I give you greeting.
Often within these walls your lays have sounded;
In veiled wisdom, or in mirthful measures
They ever gladdened every listening heart.
And though the sword of strife was loosed in battle,
Drawn to maintain our German land secure,
When against the southern foe we fought and conquered,
And for our country braved the death of heroes,
Unto the harp be equal praise and glory!
The tender graces of the homestead,
The faith in what is good and gracious—
For these you fought with word and voice:
The meed of praise for this is due.
Your strains inspiring, then, once more attune,
Now that the gallant minstrel has to us returned
Who from our land too long was parted.
To what we owe his presence her durch Liedes Kunst soll't ihr es uns enthüllen, deshalb stell' ich die Frage jetzt an euch

könnt ihr der Liebe Wesen mir ergründen?
Wer es vermag, wer sie am würdigsten besigt, dem reich' Elisabeth den Preis:
er ford're ihn so hoch un kühn er wolle,
ich sorge, dass sie ihn gewähren solle.—
Auf! liebe Sänger! Greifet in die Saiten!
Die Aufgab' ist gestellt, Kämpft um den Preis und nehmet all' im vorans uns'ren Dank!

CHOR, DER RITTER UND EDELKNABEN: Heil! Heil! Thüringens Fürsten Heil
Der holden kunst Beschulzer Heil!
(Alle setzen sich. Die Vier Edelknaben treten hervor sie sammeln in einem goldenen Becher von jedem der Sänger seinen auf ein zusammengerolltes Blättchen gezeichneten Namen und reichen den Becher Elisabeth welche eines der Blättchen herauszieht und es wiede rum den Edelknaben reicht; diese lesen den Namen und treten dann feierlich in die Mitte.)

VIER EDELKNABEN: Wolfram von Eschenbach, beginne!
(Sie setzen sich zu Füssen des Landgrafen und Elisabeths nieder. Wolfram erhebt sich.—Tannhäuser stützt sich, wie in Träumerei verfallen, auf seine Harfe.)

WOLFRAM: Blick' ich umher in diesen edlen Kreise, welch' hoher Anblick macht mein Herz erglüh'n!
So viel der Helden, tapfer, deutsch und weise, ein stolzer Eichwald, herrlich, frisch und grün.
Und hold und tugendsam erblick' ich Frauen,— lieblicher Blüthen düftereischsten Krans.
Es wird der Blick wohl trunk mir vom hauen, mein Lied verstummt vor Anmuth Glanz.—
Da blick' ich auf zu einem nur der Sterne, der an dem Himmel, der mich blendet,steht:
es sammelt sich mein Geist aus jeder Ferne, andächtig sinkt die Seele in Gebet.
Und sieh'! Mir zeiget sich ein Wunderbronnen, in den mein Geist voll hohen Staunens blickt:
aus ihm er schöpfet gnadenreiche Wonnen,
durch die mein Herz er namenlos erquickt.
Und nimmer möcht' ich diesen Bronnen trüben, berühren nicht den Quell mit frevlem Muth:
in Anbetung möcht' ich mich opfernd üben,
vergiessen froh mein letztes Herzensblut.
Ihr Edlen mög't in diesen Worten lesen, wie ich erkenn' der Liebe reinstes Wesen!

among us
In strange, mysterious darkness still is wrapped;
The magic power of song shall not reveal it.
Therefore here now you all shall sing the theme.
Say, what is love? by what signs shall we know it.
This be your theme. Whoso most nobly this can tell,
Him shall the Princess give the prize.
He may demand the fairest guerdon:
I vouch that whatever he ask is granted.
Up, then, arouse—sing, oh, gallant minstrels!
Attune your harps to love—great is the prize.
Before you begin, let all receive our thanks!

CHORUS: Hail! Hail! Lord of Thuringia!
Hail! protector of gentle song!
(All seat themselves. The four Pages advance, collecting the names of the singers (which each has written on a folded slip of paper) in a golden cup. This cup they present to Elisabeth, who draws one of the papers out and hands it to the Pages, who read the name and then advance ceremoniously into the midst of the assembly.)

FOUR PAGES: Wolfram from Eschenbach, begin!
(*They seat themselves at the feet of the Landgrave and Elisabeth. Wolfram rises.
Tannhäuser leans, as though dreaming, upon his harp.*)

WOLFRAM: Gazing around upon this fair assembly,
How the heart expands to see the scene!
These gallant heroes, valiant, wise and gentle—
A stately forest soaring fresh and green.
And blooming by their side, in sweet perfection,
I see a wreath of dames and maidens fair;
Their blended glories dazzle the beholder—
My song is mute before this vision rare.
I raised my eyes to one whose stately splendor
In this bright heaven with mild effulgence beams,
And gazing on that pure and tender radiance,
My heart was sunk in prayerful, holy dreams.
And lo! the source of all delights and power
Was then revealed unto my listening soul,
From whose unfathomed depths all joy showers—
The tender balm in which all grief is healed.
Oh, never may I dim its limpid waters,
Or rashly trouble them with wild desires!
I worship you kneeling, with soul devoted:
My heart aspires to live and die for you!
I know not if these feeble words can render
What I have felt of love both true and tender.

DIE RITTER UND DIE FRAUEN: (in beifälliger Bewegung). So ist's! So ist's! Gepriesen sei dein Lied!
(Tannhäuser fährt wie ans dem Traume auf; seine trotzige Miene nimmt sofort den Ausdruck der Entzückung an, mit welchem er in die Luft vor sich hinstarrt; ein leises Zittern der Hand, die bewusstlos nach den Saiten der Harfe sucht, ein unheimliches Lächeln des Mundes zeigt an, dass ein fremder Zauber sich seiner bemächtigt. Als er dann, wie erwachend, kräftig in die Harfe greift, verräth seine ganze Haltung, dass er kaum mehr weiss, wo er ist und namentlich Elisabeth nicht mehr beachtet.)

TANNHÄUSER: O Wolfram, der du also sangest, du hast die Liebe arg entstellt!
Wenn du in solchem Schmachten bangest, versiegte wahrlich wohl die Welt.
Zu Gottes Preis in hoch erhab'ne Fernen, blickt auf zum Himmel, blickt zu seinen Sternen!
Aubetung solchen Wundern sollt,
da ihr sie nicht begreifen sollt!
Doch, was sich der Berührung beuget, mir Herz und Sinnen nahe liegt, was sich, aus gleichem Stoff erzeuget,
in weicher Formung an mich schmiegt, dem ziemt Genuss in freud'gem Triebe und im Genuss nur kenn ich Liebe!
(Allgemeines Erstaunen. Elisabeth im Widerstrebt mit Hiugerissenheit und banger Befremdung.)

BITEROLF: (sich mit Ungestüm erhebend). Heraus zum Kampfe mit uns Allen!
Wer bliebe ruhig, hört er dich?
Wird deinem Hochmuth es gefallen,
so höre, Läst'rer, nun auch mich!
Wenn mich begeistert hohe Liebe, stählt sie die Waffen mir mit Muth;
dass ewig ungeschmäht sie bliebe,
vergöss' ich stolz mein letztes Blut.
Für Frauenehr' und hohe Tugend
als Ritter kämpf' ich mit dem Schwert;

CHORUS OF NOBLES AND LADIES: (applauding). They do! They do! We praise your noble song!
(Tannhäuser as though arising from a dream; his defiant mien changes to an expression of exquisite delight as he gazes into vacancy; a slight trembling of the hand, which has sought unconsciously the strings of the harp, an uncanny smile of the mouth, indicate that a strange Magic has control of him. As he then, as though awaking, sweeps his harp strings powerfully, his whole bearing betrays that he scarce knows now where he is and seems no more to be aware of Elisabeth's presence.)

TANNHÄUSER: Oh, minstrel, if it is thus you sing,
You never have known or tasted love!
If cold and timid heart you bring,
A weary lot your joy must prove!
If you desire an unapproached perfection—
Behold the stars—adore their bright reflection—
They were not made to be beloved:
They never by human prayer were moved!
But what can yield to soft caresses,
And, framed with me in mortal mould,
Gentle persuasion's rule confesses,
And in these arms I may enfold—
This is for joy, and knows no measure,
For love's fulfillment is its pleasure!
(General consternation. Elisabeth in conflicting emotions of rapture and anxious surprise.)

BITEROLF: (arises quickly and angrily). To mortal combat I defy you!
Shameless blasphemer, draw your sword!
As brother henceforth we deny you:
Your words profane too long we've heard!
If I have spoken of love divine,
Strengthening in valor, sword and heart,
Its glorious spell shall be unbroken,
Although I part from life this hour.

doch, was Genuss beut deiner Jugend, ist wohlfeil, keines Streitches werth.

DIE ZUHORER: (in tobendem Beifalle). Heil, Biterolf! Hier unser Schwert!

TANNHÄUSER: (mit immer steigender Hitze auffahrend). Ha, thör'ger Prahler, Biterolf!
Singst du von Liebe, grimmer Wolf?
Gewisslich hast du nicht gemeint, was mir geniessenswerth erscheint.
Was hast du Aermster wohl genossen?
Dein Leben war nicht liebereich, und was von Freuden dir entprossen,
das galt wohl wahrlich keinen Streich!

RITTER: (in grösster Aufregung). Lass't ihn nicht enden!— Wehret seinen Kühuheit!

LANDGRAF: (zu Biterolf, der das Schwert zieht). Zurück das Schwert! Ihr Sänger, halten Frieden!
(Wolfram erhebt sich; bei seinem Beginn tritt gleich die grösster Ruhe ein.)

WOLFRAM: O Himmel, lass dich jetzt erflehen, gieb meinem Lied der Weihe Preis!
Gebannt lass mich die Sünde sehen aus diesem edlen, reinen Kreis!
Dir, hohe Liebe, töne begeistert mein Gesang,
die mir in Engels-Schöne
tief in die Seele drang!
Du nah'st als Gottgesandte, ich folg' aus holder Fern',— so fürst du in die Lande, wo ewig strahlt dein Stern.

TANNHÄUSER: (in äusserster Verzückung). Dir, Göttin der Liebe, soll mein Lied ertönen!
Gesungen laut sei jetzt dein Preis von mir!
Dein süsser ist Quelle alles Schönen, und jedes Wunder stammt von dir!
Wer dich mit glut in seinen Arm geschlossen, was Liebe ist, kennt er, nur er allein:—
Armsel'ge, die ihr Liebe nie genossen, zieht hin, zieht in den Berg der Venus ein!
(Allgemeiner Aufbruch und Entsetzen.)

ALLE: Ha, der Verruchte! Fliehet ihn!
Hört es! Er war im Venusberg!

For womanhood and noble honor I would go
Through death and danger;
But for the cheap delights that won you
I scorn them as not worth a blow!

CHORUS OF NOBLES AND LADIES: (applauding wildly). Hail Biterolf! Come, draw your sword!

TANNHÄUSER: (with ever increasing vehemence). Yea, idle boaster, Biterolf!
Shall love be sung by you, grim wolf?
Not that you have ever known of bliss;
Its sweetness your fierce heart must miss.
Poor weary soul, what joy has blessed you?
What rapture could you ever know?
If any pale delight possessed you,
That were indeed not worth a blow!

NOBLES: (in the greatest excitement). We will not hear him; stay his daring madness!

LANDGRAVE: (to Biterolf, who has drawn his sword). Put up your sword! There must be peace between you.
(Wolfram arises; as he begins, the most profound quiet ensues.)

WOLFRAM: O Heaven! let me here implore you!
Hallow my song to holy praise.
Let sin crouch in the dust before you,
Nor dare among us to raise its head!
Your noble love, inspire me,
Let me sing your glory—
Your flame immortal fire me,
Fanned by an angel's wing!
You've come, descended from Heaven;
I follow you afar.
Attended by every joy,
Your star forever shines!

TANNHÄUSER: (in the most extreme exaltation). Goddess of love, you shall now inspire my measure;
In joyful strains your praise be ever sung!
You are the source of all in life we treasure,
Your sweet delights are ever fair and young!
Whose burning soul once with ardor embraced you
Can speak of love; none else can prove its joys!
Dull mortals, who have never tasted love;
Go forth! Venus alone can show you love!
(General disorder and horror.)

ALL: Ah, hear the miscreant! hence, away!
Hear him! He has been with Venus!

DIE EDELFRAUEN: Hinweg! Hinweg aus seiner Näh'!
(Die Frauen verlassen in grösster Bestürzung und mit Gebärden des Abscheu's die Halle. Elisabeth, die dem Streite der Sänger mit wachsender Angst zugehört hatte, bleibt von den Frauen allein zurück,—bleich, nur mit dem grössten Aufwande ihrer Kraft an einer der hölzernen Säulen des Baldachins sich aufrecht erhaltend. Der Landgraf, alle Ritter und Sänger haben ihre Plätze verlassen und treten zusammen. Tannhäuser, zur äussersten Linken, verbleibt noch eine Zeit lang wie in Verzückung.)

LANDGRAF, RITTER UND SÄNGER: Ihr habt's gehört! Sein frevler Mund that das Bekenntniss schrecklich kunk.
Er hat der Hölle Lust getheilt, im Venusberg hat er geweilt!—
Eutsetzlich! Scheusslich! Fluchenswerth!
In seinem blute netzt das Schwert!
Zum Höllenpfuhl zurückgesandt, sei er gefehmt, sie er gebannt!
(Alle dringen mit gezücktem Schwerte auf Tannhäuser ein; Elisabeth stüzt dazwischen.)

ELISABETH: Haltet ein! — (Alle halten in grösster betroffenheit an.)

LANDGRAF, RITTER UND SÄNGER: Was seh' ich? Wie, Elisabeth!
Die keusche Jungfrau für den Sünden?

ELISABETH: (Tannhäuser mit ihrem Leibe deckend). Zurück!
Des todes achte ich sonst nicht
Was ist die Wunde eures Eisens gegen den Tödesstoss, den ich von ihm empfingt.

LANDGRAF, RITTER UND SÄNGER: Elisabeth! Was muss ich hören?
Wie liess dein Herz dich so bethören.
von dem die Strafe zu beschwören,
der auch so furchtbar dich verrieth?

ELISABETH: Was liegt an mir?
Doch er,—sein Heil Wollt ihr sein ewig Heil ihm rauben?

LANDGRAF, RITTER UND SÄNGER: Verworfen hat er jedes Hoffen, niemals wird ihm des Heil's Gewinnt
Des himmels Fluch hat ihm getroffen, in seinen Sünden fahr' er nin!
(Sie dringen von Neuem auf Tannhäser ein.)

LADIES: Away! away! nor near him stay!
(The ladies leave the hall in the greatest dismay and with gestures of horror. Elisabeth, who has listened to the strife among the Minstrels with growing anxiety, alone remains behind,—pale and trembling, supporting herself against one of the wooden pillars of the royal Dais. —The Landgrave and all the Knights and Minstrels have left their seats and are gathered together. Tannhäuser at the extreme left, remains still a long time as though enraptured.)

LANDGRAVE, KNIGHTS AND NOBLES: You all have heard,
His mouth has confessed,
That he has shared the joys of Hell
In Venus' dark abode that dwell.
Disown him—curse him—banish him!
Or let his traitor life-blood flow!
Anathema, we call on you
In hellish fires forever glow!
(All press with swords drawn toward Tannhäuser; Elisabeth rushes between them.)

ELISABETH: Stay your hands!
(All forbear in the greatest amazement.)

LANDGRAVE, KNIGHTS AND NOBLES: Oh, wonder! You, Elisabeth,
The peerless maiden, shield the guilty?

ELISABETH: (shielding Tannhäuser with her body). Stand back!
or pierce this bosom with your swords!
Death and its terrors cannot crush me
Like to the deadly wound that he has struck me here.

LANDGRAVE AND NOBLES: O royal maid, can we believe you?
Let not your guileless heart deceive you?
Nor let his fate accursed grieve you.
You more than all the wretch should scorn!

ELISABETH: Think not of me! He must be saved!
You would not rob his hope of Heaven?

LANDGRAVE AND NOBLES: Forever lost his hope for Heaven—
Madly his joy he cast aside!
A crime like his is never forgiven:
The curse of Heaven with him abide
(They rush again upon Tannhäuser.)

ELISABETH: Zurück von ihm!
Nicht ihr seid sein Richter!
Grausame! Werft von euch das wilde Schwert und gebt Gehör der reinen Jungfrau Wort!
Vernehmt durch mich, was Gottes Wille ist!—
Der Unglücksel'ge, den gefangen ein furchtbar mächt'ger Zauber hält, wie? sollt' er nie zum Heil gelangen durch Reu' und Buss' in dieser Welt Die ihr so stark im reinen Glauben, verkennt ihr so des Höchsten Rath?
Wollt er des Sünders Hoffnung rauben.
so sagt, was euch er Liedes that?
Seht mich, die Jungfrau, deren Blüth mit einem jähen Schlag er brach—die ihn geliebt tief im Gemüthe, der jubelnd er das Herz zerstach:—
ich fleh' für ihn, ich flehe für sein Leben zur Busse lenk' er reuevoll den Schritt!
Der Muth des Glaubens sei ihm neu gegeben, dass auch für ihn einst der Erlöser litte.

TANNHÄUSER: (in furchtbarer Zerknirschung zusammenstürzend). Weh'! Weh' mir Unglücksel'gem!

LANDGRAF, RITTER und SÄNGER: (allmählich beruhigt und gerührt). Ein Engel stieg aus lichtem Aether, zu künden Gottes heil' gen Rath. —
Blick' hin, du schändlicher Verräther, werd' inne deiner Missethat!
Du gabst ihr Tod, sie bittet für dein Leben;
wer bliebe rauh, hört er des Engels Fleh'n?
Darf ich auch nicht dem Schuldigen vergeben,
dem Himmelswort kann ich nicht widersteh'n.

TANNHÄUSER: Zum Heil den Sündigen zu führen, die Gottgesandte nahte mir:
doch, ach! sie frevelnd zu berühren
hob ich den Lästerblick zu ihr!
O du, hoch über diesen Erdengründen, die mir den Engel meines Heil's gesandt, erbarm' dich ach! so tief in Sünden
schmachvoll des Himmels Mittlerin verkannt!
(Der Langraf tritt feierlich in die Mitte.)

LANDGRAF: Ein furchtbares Verbrechen ward begangen: — es schlich mit heuchlerischer Larve sich zu uns der Sünde fluchbelad'ner Sohn.
Wir stossen dich von uns, bei uns darfst du

ELISABETH: Away from him! It is not for you to judge him!
Shame on you! He is one against you all!
Oh, let a spotless maid your grace implore.
Let Heaven declare through me what is its will!—
The erring mortal, who has fallen
Within the weary toils of sin,
How dare you close the heavenly portal
Where he on earth his shrift may win?
If you are strong in faith and honor,
Why do you not obey His word
Who gave to us the law of mercy—
Who never from sinner turned away?
On me, a maiden young and tender,
That knight has struck a cruel blow;
I, who so deeply, truly loved him,
Am hurled in dark abyss of woe!
I pray for him—spare him! oh, I implore you!
Let not the hope of pardon be denied!
To life renewed his sinking faith restore you.
Think that for him, too, once the Savior died.

TANNHÄUSER: (in fearful contrition falls to the floor). Oh! lost, and forever!

LANDGRAVE, KNIGHTS AND NOBLES: (gradually quieted and touched). An angel has descended from heaven
To bear us God's most high behest.
Behold and see whom you've offended!
Your crime forever haunt your rest!
You gave her death — she prays that your life be spared!
Who would not yield who heard the heavenly maid?
Though as accursed and guilty I declared you,
The voice of Heaven by me shall be obeyed.

TANNHÄUSER: From door of wrath to save the sinner
An angel was sent from on high,
But ah! profanely here to win her
I would have dared with mad intent!
O you, throned above our mortal frailty,
You who have sent this guardian saint to me,
Have mercy! I cry to you despairing!
Oh, from the gulf of error set me free!
(The Landgrave in great solemnity steps into their midst.)

LANDGRAVE: A crime dark and unheard of has befallen;
In mask of loyal knight there treacherously
Stole amongst us Sin's accursed child.
You are disowned by us—
You are banished from this land.

nicht weilen; schmachbefleckt ist unser Herd durch dich, und dräuend blickt der Himmel selbst auf dieses Dach, das dich zu lang' schon birgt Zur Rettung doch vor ewigem Verderben steht offen dir ein Weg; von mir dich stossend zeig' ich ihn dir: — nütz ihn zu deinem Heil! — Versammelt sind aus meinen Landen bussfert'ge Pilger, stark an Zahl:
die ält'ren schon voran sich wandten,
die jüng'ren rasten noch im Thal,
Nur um geringer Sünde willen,
ihr Herz nicht Ruhe ihnen lässt,
Der Busse frommen Drang zu stillen, zieh'n sie nach Rom zum Gnadenfest.

LANDGRAF, RITTER und SÄNGER: Mit ihnen sollse du wallen zur Stadt der Gnadenhuld, im Staub' dort niederfallen
und büssen deine Schuld!
Vor ihm stürz' dich darnieder der Gottes Urtheil spricht;
doch kehre nimmer wieder,
ward dir sein Segen nicht!
Musst' uns're Rache weichen,
weil sie ein Engel brach:
des Schwert wird dich erreichen,
harrst du in Sünd' und Schmach.

ELISABETH: Lass hin zu dir ihn wallen, du Gott der Gnad' und Huld!
Ihm, der so lief gefallen, vergieb der Sünden Schuld.
Für ihn nur will ich flehen,
mein Leben sei Gebet;
lass ihn den Leuchten sehen,
eh' er in Nacht vergeht!
Mit freudigem Erbeben
lass der ein Opfer weih'n!
Nimm hin, o nimm mein Leben nicht neun' ich es mehr mein.

TANNHÄUSER: Wie soll ich Gnade finden, wie büssen meine Schuld?
Mein Heil sah ich entschwinden, mich flieht des Himmels Huld.
Doch will ich büssend wallen, zerschlagen meine Brust,
im Staube niederfallen, —
Zerknirschung sei mir Lust:
O, dass nur er versöhnet,
der Engel meiner Noth,
der sich, so frech vernönet,
zum Opfer doch mir bot!
(Alle haben unwillkürlich ihre Gebärden gemässigt. Elisabeth, wie um Tannhäuser nochmals zu schützen, hatte sich den von neuem Andringenden entgegengestellt; sie verweist jetzt auf den verheissungsvolen Gesang der jungen Pilger. — Tannhäuser

You have stained this threshold pure with shame.
The wrath of heaven may strike the roof
That shelters you, too long defiled by guilt.
One path alone can save you from perdition,
From everlasting woe — by earth abandoned —
One way is left. That way you now shall know.
A band of pilgrims now assemble
From every part of my domain.
This morn the elders went before them;
The rest yet remain in the vale.
It is not for crimes like yours they tremble
And leave their country, friends and home —
Desire for heavenly grace is over them —
They seek the sacred shrine at Rome.

LANDGRAVE, KNIGHTS AND NOBLES: It is there, repentant kneeling
Before the shrine of grace,
Your heart in tears annealing,
Your sin you shall efface.
In dust bow down before him
Who holds the keys of Heaven,
But nevermore returning
Unless by him forgiven!
Our just revenge we resigned,
Because an angel prayed;
But yet this sword shall find you
Unless you seek Heaven's aid!

ELISABETH: Great Heaven, repentant kneeling,
A sinner sues for grace;
revealing your bounteous love,
Turn not away your face.
In dust bending before him
Who holds the keys of Heaven,
Oh, let your light restore him,
Oh, let him be forgiven!
All hope on earth resigning,
I implore you for aid;
My life, without repining,
I offer up, a maid!

TANNHÄUSER: Oh, where shall I find mercy?
Oh, where shall I find rest?
All hope from me has vanished.
Despair within my breast!
I'll go, repentant kneeling
Before the throne of grace;
If bitter tears are healing,
In dust I'll hide my face.
Oh, let me be forgiven
By her, the heavenly maid
Whose heart by me was riven —
Whom basely I betrayed!
(All have involuntarily moderated their gestures. Elisabeth as though again to shield Tannhäuser places herself between him and the approaching Pilgrims, she calls attention now to the comforting promise of the Pilgrim's song.) hält plötzlich in den Bewegungen der leidenschaftlichen Zerknirschung ein und lauscht dem Gesange.)

GESANG DER JUNGEREN PILGER: (wie aus dem Thale heraufschallend). Am hohen Fest der Gnadenhuld, in Demuth sühnet eure Schuld!
Geseget, wer im Glauben treu:
Er wird erlös't durch Buss' und Reu'.

TANNHÄUSER: (Ein jäher Hoffnungsstrahl leuchtet ihm; er stürzt sich mit kramfhafter Heftigkeit zu Elisabeth's Füssen, küsst inbrünstig, hastig den Saum ihres Gewandes und bricht dann von ungeheurer Erregung taumelnd auf, mit dem Rufe.) Nach Rom!
(Eilt ab.)

ALLE: (rufen ihm nach). Nach Rom!
(Der Vorhang fällt.)

■ DRITTER AUFZUG.

Einleitung.

(Tannhäuser's Pilgerfahrt.)

ERSTE SCENE.

(Thal vor der Wartburg, links der Hörselberg, wie am Schluss des ersten Aufzuges. Der Tag neight sich zum Abend. — Auf dem kleinen Bergvorsprunge rechts liegt Elisabeth vor dem Muttergottesbilde betend augestreckt. Wolfram kommt links von der waldige Höhe herab; auf halber Höhe hält er an, als er Elisabeth gewahrt.)

WOLFRAM: Wohl wusst' ich hier zie im Gebet zu finden, wie ich so oft sie treffe, wenn ich einsam
aus wald'ger Höh' in das Thal verirre. —
Den Tod, den er im gab, im Herzen, dahingestreckt in brünst'gen Schmerzen,
fleht für sein Heil sie Tag und Nacht: —
O heil'ger Liebe ew'ge Macht! —
Von Rom zurück erwartet sie die Pilger, schonn fällt das Laub, die Heimkehr steht bevor: — kehrt er mit den Begnadigten urück?
die ist ihr Fragen, dies ihr Flehenn, —
ihr Heil'gen, lasst erfüllt es sehen!
Bleibt auch die Wunde ungeheilt, — o, würd' ihr Lind'rung ur ertheilt!
(Als er tiefer in das Thal hinabsteigen will, vernimmt er den Gesang der älteren Pilger und hält an.)

ELISABETH: (erhebt sich dem Gesange lauschend). Die ist der Sang, — sie sid's, sie kehren heim.
Ihr Heil'gen, zeigt mir jetzt mein Amt, dass ich mit Würde es erfülle!

WOLFRAM: Die Pilger sind's, es ist die fromme Weise, die der empfang'nen Gnade Heil verkündet. —
O Himmel, stärke jetzt ihr Herz für die Entscheidung ihres Lebens!

GESANG DER ALTEREN PILGER: (aus grosser Ferne langsam der Bühne nähernd). Beglückt darf nun dich, o Heimath, ich schauen, und grüssen froh deine lieblichen Auen;
nun lass' ich ruh'n den Wanderstab,
weil Gott getreu ich gepilgert hab'.
(Allmählich der Bühne näher.)
Durch Sühn' und Buss' hab' ich versöhnt den Herren, dem mein Herze fröhnt, der meine Reu' mit Segen krönt, den Herren, dem mein Lied ertönt.
(Hier betreten sie Pilger die Bühne von rechts im Vordergrund her. Sie ziehen während des Folgenden an dem Bergvorsprunnge vorbei langsam das Thal entlang dem Hintergrunde zu.)
Der Gnade Heil ist dem Büsser beschieden, er geht einst ein in der Seligen Frieden!
Vor Höll' und Tod ist ihm nicht bang', drum preis' ich Gott mein Lebenlang.
Halleluja Ewigheit!
Halleluja Ewigheit!
(Die Pilger haben sich bereits dem Hintergrunde zugewendet. — Elisabeth, die von ihrem erhöhten Standpunkte aus mit grosser Aufregung unter den vorüberziehenden Pilgern nach Tannhäuser geforscht hat, ist in schmerzlicher, aber ruhiger Fassung. — Die Pilger entfernen sich unter dem Folgenden immer mehr und verschwinden endlich durch die Thalöffnung nach rechts.)

ELISABETH: Er kehret nicht zurück! — (Mit grosser Feierlichkeit sich auf die Knie senkend.)
Allmächt'ge Jungfrau, hör' mein Flehen
Zu dir, Gepries'ne, rufe ich!
Lass mich im Staub' vor dir vergehen,
o, nimm von dieser Erde mich!
Mach', dass ich rein und engelgleich eingehe in dein selig Reich! —
Wenn je n thör'gem Wah befangen, mein Herz sich abgewandt von

CHORUS OF YOUNGER PILGRIMS: (in the extreme background as though echoing from the valley). At your august and holy shrine
I go to seek the grace divine.
Thrice blessed who your promise know;
Absolved by penance shall they go!

TANNHÄUSER: (A sudden ray of hope inspires him; he throws himself in the most convulsive agony at Elisabeth's feet, kisses devoutly, hastily the hem of her robe, and breaks away from them, calling in the highest exaltation:) To Rome!
(Hastens away.)

ALL: (call after him). To Rome!
(The curtain falls.)

■ ACT III.

Introduction.

(Tannhäuser's Pilgrimage.)

SCENE I.

(Valley before the Wartburg, to the left the Hörselberg, as at the close of Act I. Day is declining. On the slight eminence to the right, Elisabeth is prostrated before the Virgin's shrine, in prayer. Wolfram, at the left, coming down from the wooded heights, halfway descended stops as he becomes aware of Elisabeth's presence.)

WOLFRAM: By yonder shrine I'm ever sure to find her
Kneeling in fervent prayer,
When my lonely and joyless way
Back to the valley leads me.
The death-blow struck by him within her —
She prays that Heaven may shrive the sinner,
His well-being imploring day and night.
O blessed love, how great your might!
The pilgrims soon from Rome will be returning;
The year declines — before long they must be here.
Will he return repentant and absolved?
This she prays, for Heaven entreating.
Saints, oh grant them happy meeting.
Although my wound may never heal,
Oh, may she never feel my anguish!
(As he is about to go down further into the valley, he hears the song of the elder Pilgrims and stops.)

ELISABETH: (arises, listening to the song). The pilgrims' song! It is they; they have returned!
Saints, oh let me know my task,
That I may worthily fulfil it!

WOLFRAM: They come at last; it is the pious chant,
Telling of the sin absolved and pardon granted!
O Heaven, let her heart be strong
If now her fate must be decided.

CHORUS OF ELDER PILGRIMS: (at a great distance, slowly nearing the stage). Once more with joy,
O my home, I may meet you;
Once more, fair flowery meadows, I greet you;
My pilgrim staff henceforth may rest,
Since Heaven's sweet peace is within my breast.
(Gradually nearing the stage.)
The sinner's plaint on high was heard,
Accepted by a gracious Lord;
The tears I laid before his shrine
Are turned to hope and joy divine.
(Here the Pilgrims come, from the right of the foreground, on to the stage. During the following they pass by the Shrine and slowly down through the valley into the background.)
O Lord, eternal praise be yours!
The blessed source of your mercy overflowing
On souls repentant who seek you bestowing;
Of hell and death I have no fear,
My gracious Lord is ever near.
Hallelujah eternally!
(The Pilgrims have here reached the extreme background. — Elisabeth, who from her elevated position has been seeking in the greatest excitement for Tannhäuser among the returning Pilgrims, in sorrowful but quiet composure. — The Pilgrims withdraw during the following, farther and farther away, and at last disappear by the valley opening to the left.)

ELISABETH: He will return no more! (With the greatest solemnity, falling upon her knees.)
O blessed Virgin, hear my prayer!
Star of glory, look on me!
Here in the dust I bend before you,
Now from this earth, oh set me free!
Let me, a maiden pure and white,
Enter into your kingdom bright!
If vain desires and earthly longing
Have turned my heart from you away,
The sinful hopes within me thronging

dir, —
wenn je ein sündiges Verlangen, ein weltlich Sehnen keimt' in mir, —
so rang ich unter tausend Schmerzen, dass ich es tödt' in meinem Herzen!
Doch, konnt' ich jeden Fehl nicht büssen, so nimm dich gnädig meiner an,
dass ich mit demuthvollen Grüssen als würd'ge Magd dir nahen kann:
um deiner Gnaden reichste Huld nur anzufleh'n für seine Schuld!
(Sie verbleibt eine Zeit lang wie in andächtiger Entrücktheit; als sie sich dann langsam erhebt, erblickt sie Wolfram, welcher sich ihr nähert, um sie anzureden. Sie bittet ihn durch eine Gebärde, nicht mit ihr zu sprechen.)

WOLFRAM: Elisabeth, dürft' ich dich nicht geleiten?
(Elisabeth drückt ihm abermals durch Gebärden aussie danke ihm und seiner treuen Liebe aus vollem Herzen; ihr Weg führe sie aber gen Himmel, wo sie ein hohes Amt zu verrichten habe; er solle sie daher ungeleitet gehen lassen, ihr auch nicht folgen. Sie besteigt die halbe Berghöhe und verschwindet allmählich auf dem Fussteige, welcher auf dieser nach der Wartburg führt, nachdem man ihre Gestalt lange noch in der Entfernung erblickt hat.)

ZWEITE SCENE.

WOLFRAM: (der Elisabeth lange noch mit den Augen verfolgt hat, setzt sich am Fusse des linken Thalhügels nieder und beginnt auf der Harfe zu spielen). Wie Todesahnung Dämm'rung deckt die Lande, umhüllt das Thal mit schwärzlichem Gewande;
der Seele, die nach jenen Höh'n verlangt, vor ihrem Flug durch Nacht und Gransen bangt: — da scheinest du, o lieblichster der Sterne, dein sanftes Licht entsendest du der Ferne;
die nächt'ge Dämm'rung theilt dein lieber Strahl, und freundlich zeigst den Weg du aus dem Thal, —
O du mein holder Abendstern, wohl grüsst' ich immer dich so gern!
Vom Herzen, das sie nie verrieth, grüss' sie, wenn sie vorbei dir zieht,
wenn sie entschwebt dem Thal der Erden, ein sel'ger Engel dort zu werden!
(Er verbleibt mit gen Himmel gerichtetem Auge, auf der Harfe fortspielend.)

Before your blessed feet I lay.
I'll wrestle with the love I cherished
Until its flame has perished in death.
If of my sin you will not shrive me,
Yet in this hour, O grant your aid!
Till your eternal peace you give me
I vow to live and die your maid.
And on your bounty I will call,
That heavenly grace on him may fall!
(She remains for a long time in prayerful rapture; as she slowly rises, she glances at Wolfram, who is approaching to speak to her. She bids him, by a gesture not to speak to her.)

WOLFRAM: O royal maid, shall I not guide you homeward?
(Elisabeth again expresses to him by gesture that she thanks him from her heart for his faithful love; her way however leads to heaven, where she has a high purpose to fulfil; she wishes him not to accompany or follow her now. She ascends halfway up the height and disappears gradually on the footpath leading toward the Wartburg after her retreating form has long been visible in the distance.)

SCENE II.

WOLFRAM: (who follows Elisabeth with his eyes for a long time, seats himself at the foot of the hill in the valley and begins to play upon his harp). Like Death's dark shadow, Night extends her gloom,
Her sable wing over all the vale she bends;
The soul that longs to tread that path of light,
Yet dreads to pass the gate of Fear and Night.
I look on you, O star in heaven the fairest —
Your gentle beam through trackless space you bear;
The hour of darkness is made bright by you,
You lead us upward with pure kindly light.
O evening star, your holy light
Was never so welcome to my sight,
With glowing heart that never disclosed;
Greet her when she reposed in light;
When parting from this vale, a vision,
She rises to an angel's mission.
(He continues to play, his eyes raised to heaven.)

DRITTE SCENE.

(Es ist gänzlich Nacht geworden. Tannhäuser tritt auf; er trägt zerrissene Pilgerkleidung, sein Gesicht is bleich und entstellt; er wakt matten Schrittes auf senen Stab gestützt.)

TANNHÄUSER: Ich hörte Harfenschlag, — wie klang er traurig!
Der kam wohl nicht von ihr.

WOLFRAM: Wer bist du, Pilger, der du so einsam wanderst?

TANNHÄUSER: Wer ich bin?
Kenn' ich doch dich recht gut?
Wolfram bist du (höhnisch)
Er wohlgeübte Sänger.

WOLFRAM: (heftig auffahrend). Heinrich! du?
Was bringt dich her in diese Nähe?
Sprich!
Wagst du es, unentsündigt wohl den Fuss nach dieser Gegend herzuleken?

TANNHÄUSER: Sei ausser Sorg', mein guter Sänger.
Nicht such' ich dich, noch deiner Sippschaft Einen.
Doch such' ich wen, der mir den Weg wohl zeige, den Weg, den einst so wunderleicht ich fand.

WOLFRAM: Und welchen Weg?

TANNHÄUSER: (mit unheimlcher Lüsternheit). Den Weg zum Venusberg!

WOLFRAM: Entsetzlicher! Entweihe nnicht mein Ohr!
Trebt es dich dahin?

TANNHÄUSER: (leise). Kennst du wohl den Weg?

WOLFRAM: Wahnsinn'ger!
Grauen fasst mich, hör ich dich!
Wo war'st du? Say', zogst du denn nicht nach Rom?

TANNHÄUSER: (wüthend). Schweig' mir von Rom!

WOLFRAM: War'st nicht beim heil'gen Feste?

TANNHÄUSER: Schweig' mir von ihm!

WOLFRAM: So warst du nicht?
Sag', ich beschwöre dich!

TANNHÄUSER: (wie sich besinnend, mit schmerzlichem Ingrimme). Wohl war auch ich in Rom.

WOLFRAM: So sprich! Erzähle mir, Unglücklicher Mich fasst ein tiefes Mitleid für dich an.

TANNHÄUSER: (Wolfram lange mit gerührter Verwunderung betrachtend). Wie sagst du, Wolfram? Bist du nicht mein Feind?

SCENE III.

(It is now night. Tannhäuser appears; he wears a ragged Pilgrim's dress and his face is pale and drawn; he comes with faltering step supported by his staff.)

TANNHÄUSER: The sound of a harp I heard: It spoke of sadness.
It was not she who sang.

WOLFRAM: Who are you, pilgrim,
Pursuing this lonely path?

TANNHÄUSER: Who am I?
I who knew you so well! You are Wolfram — (mockingly)
The wise and skillful minstrel!

WOLFRAM: (excitedly). Henry! You?
What means your coming thus dejected?
Speak! Tell me not that you, unabsolved,
Have dared to set your foot within these precincts!

TANNHÄUSER: No; have no fear, O sapient minstrel;
I do not seek you, nor yet your proud companions.
A path I seek, or one to guide my footsteps
To find that path which once I trod with ease.

WOLFRAM: What path is that?

TANNHÄUSER: (in unnatural longing). It leads to Venus' hill.

WOLFRAM: You godless man!
Your words defile my ear.
That is your mission?

TANNHÄUSER: (softly). Do you know the path?

WOLFRAM: Oh madman! Your words inspire dread unknown
Where did you come from? Have you not been in Rome?

TANNHÄUSER: (in rage). Speak not of Rome!

WOLFRAM: Have you not sued for pardon?

TANNHÄUSER: Speak not of that.

WOLFRAM: You were not there?
Oh, I conjure you, speak!

TANNHÄUSER: (as though meditating, in painful bitterness). Yes, I have been in Rome.

WOLFRAM: Say on! Oh tell me all, unhappy man!
With deep compassion I will hear your words.

TANNHÄUSER: (gazes long at Wolfram, touched and in wonder). What do you say Wolfram? Say, are you not my foe?

WOLFRAM: Nie war ich es, so lang' ich fromm dich wähnte! — Doch sprich! Du pilgertest nach Rom?

TANNHÄUSER: Wohl denn!
Hör' an! Du, Wolfram, du sollst es erfahren.
(Er setzt sich am Fusse des Bergvorsprunges nieder; Wolfram will sich an seiner Seite ebenfalls niederlassen.) Bleib' fern von mir! Die Stätte, wo ich raste, ist verflucht. Hör' an, Wolfram; hör' an!
(Wolfram bleibt in geringer Entfernung von Tannhäuser stehen.) Inbrunst im Herzen, wie kein Büsser noch sie je gefühlt, sucht' ich den Weg nach Rom.
Ein Engel hatte, ach! der Sünde Stolz dem Uebermüthigen entwunden:—
für ihn wollt' ich in Demuth büssen, das Heil erfleh'n, das mir vernein't,
um ihn die Thräne zu versüssen,
die er mir Sünder einst geweint!
Wie neben mir der schwestbedrückte Pilger die Strasse wallt', erschien mir allzuleicht:—
betrat sein Fuss den weichen Grund der Wiesen, der nackten Sohle sucht' ich Dorn und Thorn;
liess Labung er am Quell den geniessen, sog' ich der Sonne heisses Glühen ein;—
wenn fromm zum Himmel er Gebete schickte, vergoss mein Blut ich zu des Höcksten Preis;—
als das Hospiz die Wanderer erquickte, die Glieder bettet' ich in Schnee und Eis:
verschloss'nen Aug's, ihr Wunder nicht zu schauen, durchzog ich blind Italiens holde Auen.
Ich that's–denn in Zernirschung wollt ich büssen, um meines Engls Thränen zu versüssen.
Nach Rom gelangt' ich so zur heiligen Stelle, lag betend auf des Heiligthumes Schwelle;—
der Tag brach an:—da läuteten die Glocken, hernieder tönten himmlische Gesänge;
da jauchzt' es auf in brünstigem Frohlocken,
denn Gnad und Heil verhiessen sie der Menge.
Da sah ich ihn, durch den sich Gott verkündigt.
vor ihm all' Volk im Staub sich niederliess;
und Tausenden er Gnade gab, entsündigt er
Tausende sich froh erheben hiess.—
Da naht' auch ich; das Haupt gebeugt zur Erde, klagt' ich mich an mit jammernder Gebärde der bösen Lust, die meine Sinn' empfanden, des Sehnens, das kein büssen noch gekühlt:
und umi Erlösung aus den heissen Banden
rief ich ihn an, von wildem Schmerz durchwühlt.—
Und er, den so ich bat, hub an:

"Hast du so böse Lust getheilt, dich an der Hölle Glut entflammt, hast du im Venusberg geweilt:
so bist nun ewig du verdammt!
Wie dieser Stab in meiner Hand
nie mehr sich schmückt mit frischem Grün kann aus der Hölle heissem Brand
Erlösung nimmer dir erblüh'n!"
Da sank ich in Vernichtung dumpf darnieder, die Sinne schwanden mir. Als ich erwacht', auf ödem Platze lagerte die Nacht,— von fern her tönten frohe Gnadenlieder.
Da ekelte mich der holde Sang,— von der Verheissung lügnerischem Klang,
der eiseskalt mir durch die Seele schnitt,
trieb Grauen mich hinweg mit wildem Schritt.—
Dahin zog's mich, wo ich der Wonn' and Lust so viel genoss an ihrer warmen Brust!
(In grauenhafter Begeisterung.)
Zu dir, Frau Venus, kehr' ich wieder, in deiner Zauber holde Nacht;
zu deinem Hof steig' ich darnieder,
wo nun dein Reiz mir ewig lacht!

WOLFRAM: Halt' ein! Halt ein, Unseliger!

TANNHÄUSER: Ach, lass mich nicht vergebens suchen, wie leicht fand ich doch einstens dich!
Du hörst, dass mir die Menschen fluchen, nun, süsse Göttin, leite mich!

WOLFRAM: (in heftigen Grausen). Wahnsinniger, wen rufst du an?
(Finstere Nacht; leichte Nebel umhüllen allmählich die Scene.)

TANNHÄUSER: Ha! fühlest du nicht milde Lüfte?

WOLFRAM: Zu mir! Est ist um dich gethan!

WOLFRAM: No; nevermore while you are true to honor.
But tell — your pilgrimage to Rome?

TANNHÄUSER: I will—I will.
You, Wolfram, shall know what befell me.
(He seats himself at the foot of a rocky projection; Wolfram is about to seat himself beside him.)
Away from me! The refuge where I rest myself
Is cursed! Now mark, Wolfram—mark well!
(Wolfram remains standing a short distance from him.)
Contrite in spirit as no pilgrim yet on earth has been,
I bent my steps to Rome.
An angel has dispelled the pride of sin,
Its mad profaneness from my bosom;
For her sake I went forth a pilgrim,
To reconcile offended Heaven;
She who had pleaded with tears for me
Should know my sins had been forgiven.
When I beheld a heavy-burdened pilgrim
It seemed to me his load was all too light;
And if he sought a pathway over the meadow,
I trod unshod amid the rocks and thorns;
If he refreshed his lips by cooling fountain,
The brazen sun poured on my head forlorn;
When he besought the saints in murmured prayers,
I shed my life-blood in the cause divine;
When in the hospice he sought rest and shelter,
It was on ice and snow that I sought mine.
Lest Italy's fair scenes my heart had gladdened,
I passed them blindfold, so my soul was saddened.
I went—my wasted heart remorse was burning
That for my sake an angel waited mourning.
Thus Rome I gained at last. With tears imploring,
I knelt before the rood in faith adoring.
When daylight broke, the silvery bells were pealing;
Through vaulted roof a song divine was stealing;
A cry of joy breaks forth from thousand voices—
The hope of pardon every heart rejoices.
There him I saw who holds the keys of Heaven,
And prostrate fell they all before his face,
And thousands he forgave that day, and blessed them.
And sent them forth, renewed in heavenly grace.
Then I drew near, my glances earthward bending;
I made my plaint, despair my bosom rending—
I told what mad desires my soul had darkened,
By sinful earthly pleasure long enslaved.
To me it seemed that he in mercy hearkened—
A gracious word in dust and tears I craved.
Then he whom thus I prayed replied:

"If you have shared the joys of Hell,
If you unholy flames have nursed
That dwell in the Hill of Venus,
You are forevermore accurst!
And as this barren staff I hold
Never will put forth a flower or leaf,
Thus shall you nevermore behold
Salvation, or your sin's relief!"
Then hopeless, dumb despair obscured my senses;
I sank down motionless. When I awoke
It was night, and I alone, by all forsaken.
I heard afar the songs of praise and prayer;
With loathing I fled to escape the sound.
What were to me the tidings of their joy,
An outcast, spurned, in whom all hope was dead!
With horror in my breast, I turned and fled.
Then longed my soul to taste those joys again
Which once before my earth-born pains had slain.
(in appalling ectasy.)
To you fair Venus, I surrender—
Let your sweet magic round me play;
I'll be your slave, my star of splendor:
You only can allay these pangs!

WOLFRAM: Oh, stop your godless raving!

TANNHÄUSER: Oh, guide my steps that I might find you—
How well erstwhile the road I knew!
Behold! men have with curses spurned me.
Come, lovely goddess, guide me true!

WOLFRAM: (in intense horror). You godless one! Who do you call?
(Darkest night; light clouds gradually veil the Scene.)

TANNHÄUSER: Ah! Do you not feel balmy breezes?

WOLFRAM: Away! Oh, fly, or you are lost!

TANNHÄUSER: Und athmest du nicht holde Düfte? (Die Nebel beginnen in rosiger Dämmerung zu erglühen.).
Hörst du nicht die jubelnden Klänge?

WOLFRAM: In wildem Schauer bebt die Brust!

TANNHÄUSER: Das ist der Nymphen tanzende Menge. — (immer aufgeregter je näher der Zauber kommt.) Herbei, herbei zu Wonn' und Lust!
(Wirre Bewegungen tanzender Gestalten werden erkennbar.)

WOLFRAM: Weh böser Zauber thut sich auf!
Die Hölle naht in wildem Lauf.

TANNHÄUSER: Entzücken dringt durch alle Sinne, gewahr' ich diesen Dämmerschein;
dies ist das Zauberreich ber Minne, (ausser sich.)
im venusberg drangen wir ein!
(In heller, rosiger Beleuchtung erscheint Venus auf ihrem Lager ruhend.)

VENUS: Willkommen, ungetreuer Mann!
Schlug dich die Welt mit Acht und Bann? And findest nirgends du Erbarmen, suchst Liebe nun in meinem Armen?

TANNHÄUSER: Frau Venus, o Erbarmungsreiche! Zu dir, zu dir zieht es mich hin?

WOLTRAM: Du Höllenzauber, weiche, weiche!
Berücke nicht des Reinen Sinn!

VENUS: Nah'st du dich wieder meiner Schwelle,
sei dir dein Uebermuth verzieh'n;
ewig fliesst dir der Freuden Quelle, und nimmer sollst du von mir flieh'n!

TANNHÄUSER: (indem er sich in wilder Entschlossenheit von Wolfram losreisst). Mein Heil, mein Heil hab' ich verloren, nun sei der Hölle Lust erkoren!

WOLFRAM: (ihn heftig zurückhaltend). Allmächt'ger, steh' dem Frommen bei!
Heinrich, ein Wort, es macht dich frei: dein Heil — !

VENUS: Zu mir!

TANNHÄUSER: (zu Wolfram). Lass ab von mir!

VENUS: O komm'! Auf ewig sei nun mein!

WOLFRAM: Noch soll das Heil dir Sünder werden!
(Tannhäuser und Wolfram ringen heftig.)

TANNHÄUSER: Nie! Wolfram, nie! Ich muss dahin!

TANNHÄUSER: What ecstasy seizes my senses! (The clouds begin to glow in rosy light.)
Do you not hear rapturous music?

WOLFRAM: Oh were you rather in your grave!

TANNHÄUSER: In crowded dance the nymphs now are flying—
(more and more excited the nearer they approach.)
Come on— come on! ye fair, come on—receive your slave!
(A confused whirl of dancing forms becomes visible.)

WOLFRAM: Woe! Evil demons fill the air,
That hell may ensnare its victim!

TANNHÄUSER: Oh, come on Pleasure's rosy pinion!
I feel your breath ambrosial!
This is of love the sweet dominion—
(beside himself)
O Venus! I will call on thee!
(Venus appears, reclining upon her couch in a bright, rosy light.)

VENUS: I welcome you perfidious man;
Earth laid you low beneath its ban.
Have you by all, then, been forsaken,
In my arms blissfully to waken?

TANNHÄUSER: Sweet Venus, oh! in bliss receive me!
With you, with you, oh let me fly!

WOLFRAM: You hellish phantoms, leave him!
All hope is lost when you are near!

VENUS: You come relying on grace from me?
I will forgive your rash resolve.
Come where joy is fed from source undying,
In Pleasure's bright abode to live.

TANNHÄUSER: (tearing himself away from Wolfram in wild resolution). Accursed, they have bereft me of hope;
Now joys of hell alone are left me!

WOLFRAM: (he holds Tannhäuser once more). O mighty Lord! in mercy see!
Henry, one word, and you are free—
Repent!

VENUS: Come to me!

TANNHÄUSER: (to Wolfram). No more! Away from me!

VENUS: O come, beloved! Forever you are mine.

WOLFRAM: Yet can you gain your soul's salvation!
(Tannhäuser and Wolfram struggle violently.)

TANNHÄUSER: No, Wolfram, no! the heavens are closed!

WOLFRAM: Ein Engel bat für dich auf Erden—bald schwebt er segnend über dir:
Elisabeth!

TANNHÄUSER: (der sich soeben losgerissen, bleibt plötzlich wie die Stelle geheftet) Elisabeth!
(Die Nebel verfinstern sich allmählich, heller Fackelschein leuch tet danu durch sie auf).

MÄNNERGESANG: (hinter der Scene). Der Seele Heil, die nun entfloh'n dem Leib der frommen Dulderin!

WOLFRAM: (nach dem ersten Eintritt des Gesanges). Dein Engel fleht für dich an Gottes Thron, — er wird erhört!
Heinrich, du bist erlöst!

VENUS: (bereits unsichtbar). Weh'! Mir verloren!
(Sie versinkt. Die Nebel verschwinden gänzlich Morgendämmerung. — Von der Warburg her schreite ein Trauerzug mit Fackeln der Tiefe des Thales zu.)

MÄNNERGESANG: Ihr ward der Engel sel'ger Lohn, himmlischer Freuden Hochgewinn.

WOLFRAM: (Tannhäuser sanft umschlunger haltend). Und hörst du diesen Sang?

TANNHÄUSER: (ersterbend). Ich höre!
(Hier betritt der zug die Bühne in der Tiefe des Thales, die älteren Pilger voran, — die Sänger zunächst dem offenen Sarge, in welchem Elisabeth's Leiche von ihnen getragen wird; der Landgraf, Ritter und Edle folgen dem Sarge.)

MÄNNERGESANG: Heilig die Reine, die nun vereint göttlicher Schaar vor dem Ewigen steht.
(Hier macht Wolfram eine Gebärde, weiche din Sänger, als sie Tannhäuser erkennen, bewegt, dee Sarg nieder zu setzen.)
Selig der Sünder, dem sie gerweint, dem sie des Himmels Heil erfleht!

TANNHÄUSER: (ist von Wolfram zum Sarge geleitet worden; über Elisabeth's Leiche hingebengt, sinkt er enlseelt langsam nieder). Heilige Elisabeth, bitte für mich!
(Er stirbt. Alle senken die Fackeln zur Erde und löschen sie so aus, Morgenroth erhellt vollends die Scene.)

DIE JUNGEREN PILGER: (auf dem vorderen Bergvorsprunge einherziehend). Heil! Heil! Der Gnade Wunder Heil!
Erlösung ward der Welt zu Theil!
Es that in nächtlich heil'ger Stund'

WOLFRAM: It hears an angel's supplication,
Who now for you its grace implores—
Elisabeth!

TANNHÄUSER: (who has just released himself, remains suddenly as though bound to the spot). Oh, maid divine!
(The clouds gradually darken and through them bright torchlights are gleaming.)

CHORUS OF MEN: (behind the scene). Receive the soul, O bounteous Lord,
That now to you has taken flight.

WOLFRAM: (after the first strains of the song). Your angel prays for you before the throne,
And Heaven relents!
Henry, you are absolved!

VENUS: (already invisible). Woe! I have lost him!
(She vanishes. The clouds disappear entirely. The dawn of morning. From the Wartburg a funeral procession with torches winds down into the valley.)

CHORUS OF MEN: Hers be the angels' blest reward!
Bright be her glory in your sight!

WOLFRAM: (holding Tannhäuser gently in his arms). O say, do you hear this strain?

TANNHÄUSER: (dying). I hear it.
(Here the funeral train reaches the stage, at the foot of the valley, the elder Pilgrims in advance; the Minstrels nearest the open bier on which Elisabeth's body is carried; the Landgrave, Knights and Nobles follow.)

CHORUS OF MEN: Sainted forever through all the spheres,
She who through love attained your salvation.
(Here Wolfram makes a gesture which moves the Minstrels, as they recognize Tannhäuser, to set down the bier.)
Blessed is the sinner saved by her tears,
Now he has reached the heavenly gate.

TANNHÄUSER: (has been led by Wolfram to the bier, bending over Elisabeth's body, he, swooning, sinks slowly down). Holy Saint Elisabeth, oh pray for me!
(He dies.—All invert their torches and so extinguish them. The morning light completely illumines the scene.)

CHORUS OF YOUNGER PILGRIMS: (approaching from the height in the foreground). Hail! hail! the Lord has wrought marvels!
He has brought redemption to all!
One night in blessed, propitious der Herr sich durch ein Wunder kund:

den dürren Stab in Priesters Hand hat er geschmücht mit frischem Grün:
dem Sünder in der Hölle Brand
soll so Erlösung neu erblüh'n!
Ruft ihm es zu durch alle Land'
der durch dies Wunder Gnade fand!
Hoch über aller Welt ist Gott, und sein Erbarmen ist kein Spott!
Halleluja! Halleluja!
Halleluja!

ALLE: (in höchster Ergriffenheit). Der Gnade Heil ist dem Büsser beschieden, er geht nun ein in der Seligen Frieden.

ENDE.

hour,
He left a sign of His dread power;
The barren staff of priestly rule
He made to bloom with summer's green!
Now the Lord annuls man's curse,
His pitying love shall make us clean!
Declare it loud through every land:
None who condemn at last shall stand!
High He thrones above sin and death!

MINSTRELS AND CHORUS OF PILGRIMS: (in the highest emotion). The Lord Himself now has broken your bondage Go, enter in with the blest in His Heaven!

THE END.

Lohengrin (1850)

MUSIC AND LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act romantic opera, set to a libretto by the composer, was first performed at the Hoftheater in Weimar on August 28, 1850. The story takes place in Antwerp during the early tenth century. King Henry the Fowler of Germany comes to Antwerp to gather an army which will fight against the invading Hungarians. Frederick of Telramund, married to Ortrud, and Elsa, daughter of the late duke, are fighting over the succession to the dukedom. Elsa's brother, who has disappeared under mysterious circumstances, is the rightful heir. Frederick and Ortrud accuse Elsa of his murder in order to succeed to the title. The King decrees that one combat, to be held between Frederick and Elsa's champion, will settle the issue. No one will fight for her, and she prays that her dream of a knight arriving to defend her cause will come to pass. The herald's trumpets sound as a boat, drawn by a swan, sails down the river. Lohengrin, the knight on board, arrives and offers to be her champion. She promises to marry him if he wins, and he asks her to promise never to attempt to find out his true identity. Of course, he resoundingly defeats Frederick. Frederick and Ortrud are banished from Antwerp but plan to bring Elsa down. Ortrud begs Elsa to forgive them, and Elsa promises to help them as much as she can. Elsa is about to enter the cathedral for her wedding to Lohengrin when Ortrud denounces him, saying that he practices black magic. Elsa denies this but now has doubts, upon which Frederick feeds. Lohengrin and Elsa, now married, sing of their love, but Elsa asks Lohengrin who he is. Frederick and his cronies break in, but Lohengrin kills him and the others run away. He unhappily tells his wife that he must leave her when she knows the answer to her question. The King gathers an army which the people invite Lohengrin to lead. He refuses and reveals who he is–he is a Knight of the Holy Grail, Parsifal's son, and now he must return to Monsalvat (where the Grail is kept) since his identity is no longer a secret. He says good-bye to Elsa, and the swan comes to draw his boat once more. Ortrud declares that this swan is actually Elsa's brother, the rightful duke, enchanted by an evil spell cast by Ortrud. If Elsa had kept her promise, Lohengrin could have broken this spell. Lohengrin prays that this can yet be accomplished, and the swan is transformed back into Elsa's brother. She collapses in his arms as Lohengrin sails off, the boat now drawn by the white dove of the Holy Grail.

■ ERSTER AUFZUG

ERSTE SCENE

(Eine Aue am Ufer der Schelde bei Antwerpen. König Heinrich. Friedrich von Telramund. Ortrud. Der Heerrufer. Sächsische und brabantische Grafen, Edle and Volk. Vier Heerhornbläser. Die Bläser blasen den Königsruf.)

DER HEERRUFER: Hört! Fürsten, Edle, Freie von Brabant!
Heinrich, der Deutschen König, kam zur Start,
Mit euch zu dingen nach des Reiches Recht.
Gebt ihr nun Fried' und Folge dem Gebot?

DIE BRABANTER: Wir geben Fried' und Folge dem Gebot, Willkommen! Willkommen, König in Brabant!

■ ACT I

SCEBE I

(A plain on the banks of the Scheldt, near Antwerp; the river winds towards the background, so that on the right a portion of it is hidden by trees, and it is only visible again at a farther distance. In the foreground, to the left, King Henry is seated under a tall, sturdy oak; near him stand the Saxon and Thuringian nobles. On the other side are Frederick of Telramund and Ortrud. The background is occupied by retainers. An open circle in the middle into which the Herald and four Trumpeters advance. Trumpets sound.)

HERALD: Listen! Nobles, lords and freemen of Brabant:
Henry, the King of Germans, comes here
To parley with you as the law provides.
With loyal feeling hear his command!

MEN OF BRABANT: With loyal feeling we hear his command;
So welcome, King Henry! Welcome to Brabant!

KÖNIG HEINRICH: Gott grüss euch, liebe Männer von Brabant!
Nicht müssig that zu euch ich diese Fahrt;
Der Noth des Reiches seid von mir gemahnt.
Soll ich euch erst der Drangsal Kunde sagen,
Die deutsches Land so oft aus Osten traf?
In fernster Mark hiess't Weib and Kind ihr beten:
Herr Gott, bewahr' uns vor der Ungarn Wuth!
Doch mir, des Reiches Haupt, musst' es geziemen,
So wilder Schmach ein Ende zu ersinnen:
Als Kampfes Preis gewann ich Frieden auf
Neun Jahr', ihn nützt' ich zu des Reiche Wehr;
Beschirmte Städt' and Burgen liess ich bau'n,
Den Heerbann übte ich zum Widerstand.
Zu End' ist nun die Frist, der Zins versagt,
Mit wildem Drohen rüstet der Feind.
Nun ist es Zeit, des Reiches Ehr' zu wahren;
Ob Ost, ob West, das gelte Allen gleich

KING: (rising). Heaven save you, loving subjects of Brabant!
I did not come here through idleness.
The kingdom's deep distresses learn from me.
First shall I tell you of the weary troubles
That, from the East, threaten Germany.
About the March were women—children praying:
"Heaven shield us from the wild Hungarian's rage!"
With me, the kingdom's head, it was a duty
To put an end to such abhorred disorder.
A seven years' truce by force of arms I gained
And this I used to give the realm new strength.
The towns I fenced and fortresses I built,
Our men of arms I fitly exercised.
Now tribute we refuse—the term expires—
And we are once more threatened by the foe.
Now it is time to guard the kingdom's honor.
The East—the West—both are alike to all.
The German nation calls upon her

Was deutsches Land heisst, stelle Kampfesschaaren Dann schmäht wohl Niemand mehr das deutsche Reich!	children, And foes will tremble when they hear the call.
DIE SACHSEN UND THÜRINGER: Mit Gott wohlauf für deutschen Reiches Ehr'!	SAXONS AND THURINGIANS: (striking their arms). We all fight For German honor!
KÖNIG: Komm' ich zu euch nun, Männer von Brabant, Zum Heergefolg nach Mainz euch zu entbieten, Wie muss mit Schmerz und Klagen ich erseh'n, Dass ohne Fürsten ihr in Zwietracht lebt! Verwirrung, wilde Fehde wird mir kund, Drum frag' ich dich, Friedrich von Telramund: Ich kenne dich, als aller Tugend Preis, Jetzt rede, dass der Drangsal Grund ich weiss.	KING: (reseating himself). You now I summon, subjects of Brabant! At once proceed to Maintz with all your forces. Much to our grief are we compelled to hear, I am told That you live in discord and disorder Of factions and confusion, Therefore explain, Frederick of Telramund. I know full well that you are virtue's self; Explain, then, and tell the cause of mischief.
FRIEDRICH: Dank, König, dir, dass du zu richten kamst! Die Wahrheit künd' ich, Untreu' ist mir fremd. Zum Sterben kam der Herzog von Brabant, Und meinem Schutz empfahl er seine Kinder, Elsa, die Jungfrau, and Gottfried, den Knaben: Mit Treue pflog ich seiner grossen Jugend, Sein Leben war das Kleinod meiner Ehre. Ermiss nun, König, meinen grimmen Schmerz, als meiner Ehre Kleinod mir geraubt! Lustwandelnd führte Elsa einst den Knaben zum Wald, doch ohne ihn kehrte sie zurück; mit falscher Sorge frug sie nach dem Bruder, da sie, von ungefähr von ihm verirrt, Bald seine Spur—so sprach sie—nicht mehr fand. Fruchtlos war all' Bemüh'n um den Verlor'nen; als ich mit Drohen nun in Elsa drang, da liess in bleichem Zagen and Erbeben der grässlichen Schuld Bekenntniss sie uns seh'n. Es fasste mich Entsetzen vor der Magd: dem Recht auf ihre Hand, vom Vater mir Verliehn, entsagt'ich willig da und gern, und nahm ein Weib, das meinem Sinn gefiel, Ortrud, Radbod's des Friesenfürsten Spross. Nun führ'ich Klage gegen Elsa von Brabant: des Brudermordes zeih' ich sie. Dies Land doch sprech' ich für mich an mit Recht, da ich der Nächste von des Herzogs blut, mein Weib jedoch aus dem Geschlecht, das einst auch diesem Lande seine Fürsten gab. Du hörst die Klage! König, richte recht!	FREDERICK: Thanks to you King that you are here to judge, I tell you the truth—I never learned falsehood. Brabrant's late Duke upon his deathbed lay, And confided both his children to me, Elsa the maiden and her brother Godfrey. Faithfully through growing boyhood, His life I deemed the jewel of my honor. King Henry, measure all my depth of grief. When I was despoiled of that fair jewel. Once Elsa through the forest took the boy To stroll; but woe is me! returned alone, With show of sorrow asking for her brother. From him, she said, she heedlessly had strayed, And not a trace of Godfrey could she find. Vainly we sought the lost one to recover. Elsa at last I terrified with threats, Till by her faltering tongue and pallied features The fearful deed was told that she had done. With deepest horror shrank I from the maid. Her sire gave me the right to make her mine But this too gladly I resigned, And took a wife whom I could truly love, Ortrud the child of Radbod, Friesland's prince. Now do I accuse Elsa of Brabrant— Her brother perished by her guilty hand! This land, as lawfully my own, I claim, Being nearest kinsman to the Duke. My wife, besides, is of the race that once Unto this land a line of princes gave. You know my cause—judge it, noble King.
ALLE MÄNNER: Ha schwerer Schuld zeiht Telramund? Mit Grau'n werd'ich der Klage kund.	ALL THE MEN: (with horror). Who could have thought of crimes like this? A heavy charge this count has brought.
KÖNIG: Welch' fürchterliche Klage sprichst du aus! Wie wäre möglich solche grosse Schuld?	KING: A heavy accusation indeed. A heavy charge this count has brought. A crime so fearful seems impossible
FRIEDRICH: O Herr, traumselig ist die eitle Magd, die meine Hand voll Hochmuth von sich stiess. Geheimer Buhlschaft klag' ich sie drum an: sie wähnte wohl, wenn sie des Bruders ledig, dann könnte sie als Herrin von Brabant mit Recht dem Lehnsmann ihre Hand verwehren, und offen des geheimen Buhlen pflegen.	FREDERICK: My King, she whom I rightly cast aside Is given to folly and to vanity, And I accuse her now of hidden sin. She thought, having removed her brother That she could, as the mistress of Brabant, Reject the hand of him who fairly claims it, And openly protect her secret minion.
KÖNIG: Ruft die Beklagte her!— Beginnen soll Nun das Gericht! Gott lass' mich weise sein!	KING: Call the accused one here; the trial shall Proceed at once. Heaven guide my judgment right! (He solemnly hanges his shield on the oak. The Saxons and Thuringians thrust their drawn swords into the ground; the men of Brabant lay theirs before them.)
DER HEERRUFER: Soll hier nach Recht und Macht Gericht gehalten sein?	HERALD: (advances into the middle). Now shall the cause be tried as ancient use requires.
KÖNIG: Nicht eh'r soll bergen mich der Schild, Bis ich gerichtet streng und mild!	KING: I shall never again wear my shield, Till judgment is pronounced, I swear!
ALLE MÄNNER: Nich eh'r zur Scheide kehr' das Schwert Bis Recht durch Urtheil hier gewährt!	CHORUS: (men). Never to the sheath the sword, Till justice speaks the mighty word.
HEERRUFER: Wo ihr des Königs Schild gewahrt, dort Recht durch Urtheil nun erfahrt! Drum ruf' ich klagend laut und hell: Elsa erscheine hier zur Stell'!	HERALD: There, where the royal shield you see, You soon will hear the King's decree. Therefore I call, in accents clear, Elsa, appear without delay.

ZWEITE SCENE

SCENE II

(Elsa tritt auf: ein langer Zug ihres Frauen folgt ihr.)	(Elsa enters in a simple white dress; a long train of her ladies similarly attired. These remain in the background while Elsa advances slowly and timidly into the center of the foreground.)
DIE MÄNNER: Seht hin! Sie naht, die hart Beklagte! Ha, wie erscheint sie licht und rein! Der sie so schwer zu zeihen wagte, Gar sicher muss der Schuld er sein.	CHORUS: (men). Behold, she comes! The charge how heavy. Yet does she look—ah, so bright and pure! He who could venture to accuse her, Must doubtless be sure of her guilt.

KÖNIG: Bist du es, Elsa von Brabant? (Elsa macht eine bejahende Bewegung.) Erkennst du mich als deinen Richter an? (Elsa blickt dem König in das Auge und bejaht dann wiederum.) So frage ich weiter: ist die Klage dir bekannt, die schwer hier wider dich erhoben? (Elsa erblickt Friedrich, erbebt, wendet schüchtern das Haupt und bejaht traurig.) Was Entgegnest du der Klage? (Elsa durch eine Gebärde sprechend: "nichts!"). So bekennst du deine Schuld?	KING: Are you, then, Elsa of Brabant? (Elsa bows acknowledgement.) And do you recognize me as your judge? (She bows again.) I question further Do you know the heavy charge Brought against you? Can you answer your accuser? (She shakes her head.) You own your guilt, then?
ELSA: Mein armer Bruder!	ELSA: (after a pause). My hapless brother!
ALLE MÄNNER: Wie wunderbar! welch' seltsames Gebaren!	CHORUS: Most wonderful! How strange is her demeanor!
KÖNIG: Sag', Elsa! Was hast du mir zu vertrau'n?	KING: Come, Elsa, what would you confide to me?
ELSA: Einsam in trüben Tagen hab'ich zu Gott gefleht, Des Herzens tiefstes Klagan ergoss' ich in Gebet. Da drang aus meinem Stöhnen, ein Laut so klagevoll, der zu gewalt'gem Tönen weit in die Lüfte schwoll: Ich hört'ihn fern hin hallen, bis kaum mein Ohr er traf; mein Aug' ist zugefallen, ich sank in süssen Schlaf.—	ELSA: (after a pause, as in a trance) Lonely, amid my sorrow yearning, I called on Heaven. And forced to prayer, the anguish with which my heart was racked Then burst forth from my bosom—so dolorous a sound, That, as it spread it carried grief to the air around. I heard it in the distance until it died away; My heavy eyelids sank then, and I lay wrapped in sleep.
ALLE MÄNNER: Wie sonderbar! Träumt sie? Ist sie entrückt?	ALL THE MEN: (softly). She dreams or is she mad!
KÖNIG: Elsa, vertheid'ge jetzt dich vor Gericht!	KING: Elsa, defend yourself before your judge.
ELSA: In lichter Waffen Scheine ein Ritter nahte da, so tugendlicher Reine ich keinen noch ersah. Ein golden Horn zu Hüften, Gelehnet auf sein Schwert, so trat er aus den Lüften zu mir, der Recke werth. Mit züchtigem Gebaren gab Tröstung er mir ein: Des Ritters will ich wahren, er soll mein Streiter sein!	ELSA: (as before). Equipped in glittering armor, then drew near to me A knight of angelic manner—the like I never knew. His golden horn hung lightly; upon his sword he leaned. Heaven sent him here to save me, that knight of good intent. Sweet words of consolation he spoke courteously. Believe me, for my champion no other will I take.
KÖNIG UND ALLE MÄNNER: Bewahre uns des Himmels Huld, Dass klar wir sehen, wer hier schuld!	KING AND ALL THE MEN: May heaven endow our minds with light, That we may see which cause is right.
KÖNIG: Friedrich, du ehrenwerther Mann, Bedenke wohl, wen klagst du an?	KING: Frederick, it were ill to lose this cause. Remember the one that you accuse.
FRIEDRICH: Mich irret nicht ihr träumerischer Muth; Ihr hört, sie schwärmt von einem Buhlen! Wes'ich sie zeih', des' hab' ich sich'ren Grund: Glaubwürdig ward ihr Frevel mir bezeugt. Doch eurem Zweifel durch ein Zeugniss wehren, Das stünde wahrlich übel meinem Stolz! Hier steh' ich, hier mein Schwert! Wer wagt's von euch, zu streiten wider meiner Ehre Preis?	FREDERICK: I'm not misled by these her dreamy words. You hear she raves about a minion. On valid grounds do I maintain my charge, Based as it is on surest evidence. Regardless, to stifle doubts by any witness, Most gracious King, would sorely wound my pride Here I stand. Here's my sword. Who of you all Dares to fight against my stainless honor?
DIE BRABANTISCHEN EDLEN: Keiner von uns! Wir streiten nur fü dich.	NOBLES OF BRABANT: No, Frederick, no; we only fight for you.
FRIEDRICH: Und, König, du! Gedenskt du meiner Dienste, wie ich im Kampf die wilden Dänen schlug?	FREDERICK: And you my King, remember the service Which I have done against the savage Dane?
KÖNIG: Wie schlimm, liess' ich von dir daran mich mahnen! Gern geb' ich dir der höchsten Tugend Preis; in keiner andern Huth als in der deinen möcht' ich die Lande wissen. Gott allein Soll jetzt in dieser Sache noch entscheiden!	KING: Of that surely you need not remind me; Most willingly your high deserts I grant. In other hands than yours, you may believe me, Would I not see this country. Heaven alone Shall give judgment in this weighty cause.
ALLE MÄNNER: Zum Gottesgericht! Zum Gottesgericht! Wohlan!	ALL THE MEN: Yes heaven shall decide. Be it so.
KÖING: Dich frag' ich, Friedrich, Graf von Telramund! Willst du durch Kampf auf Leben and auf Tod im Gottesgericht vertreten deine Klage?	KING: (draws his sword and thrusts it into the ground). Answer me, Frederick, Count of Telramund: Will you refer this accusation, in combat fought for life and death, to Heaven's high decree?
FRIEDRICH: Ja!	FREDERICK: Yes.
KÖNIG: Und dich nun frag' ich, Elsa von Brabant: Willst du, dass hier auf Leben and auf Tod im Gottesgericht ein Kampe für dich streite?	KING: And you too answer, Elsa of Brabant: Would you, in combat fought for life and death, A champion before high Heaven should now defend you?
ELSA: Ja!	ELSA: Yes.
KÖNIG: Wen kiesest du zum Streiter!	KING: Who do you name as you champion?
FRIEDRICH: Vernehmet jetzt den Namen ihres Buhlen!	FREDERICK: Now you'll hear The name of him she dotes on.
DIE BRABANTISCHEN EDLEN: Merket auf!	NOBLEMEN OF BRABANT: All attend.
ELSA: Des Ritters will ich wahren, er soll mein Streiter sein!— Hört, was dem Gottgesandten ich biete für Gewähr: In meines Vaters Landen die Krone trage er; Mich glücklich soll ich preisen, Nimmt er mein Gut dahin,—Will er Gemahl mich heissen, Geb' ich ihm, was ich bin!	ELSA: Believe me, I will take no other for my champion. Mark, he whom Heaven shall send me will gain a rare reward Here, in my father's country, the crown is his to wear. To yield him my possessions will be my dearest pride, And should he deign to wed me, lo! I will be his bride.
DIE MÄNNER: Ein schöner Preis, stünd' er in Gottes Hand! Wer um ihn stritt', wohl setzt' er schweres Pfand.	CHORUS: A splendid offer does the damsel make. Who plays this game plays for a heavy stake.
KÖNIG: Im Mittag hoch steht schon die Sonne: So ist es Zeit, dass nun der Ruf ergeh'.	KING: The sun at noon's height is shining: It is therefore time to send the summons forth. (The Herald advances with the four trumpeters, whom he places outside the circle towards the four cardinal points. Trumpets sound.)

DER HEERRUFER: Wer hier im Gotteskampf zu streiten kam für Elsa von Brabant, der trete vor!

ALLE MÄNNER: Ohn' Antwort ist der Ruf verhallt.

FRIEDRICH: Gewahrt, ob ich sie fälschlich schalt?
Auf meiner Seite bleibt das Recht.

ALLE MÄNNER: Um ihre Sache steht es schlecht.

ELSA: Mein lieber König, lass dich bitten, noch einen Ruf an meinen Ritter, wohl weilt er fern und hört' ihn nicht.

KÖNIG: Noch einmal rufe zum Gericht!
(Der Heerrufer wiederholt den Aufruf.)

HERALD: Wer hier im Gotteskampf zu streiten kam für Elsa von Brabant, Der trette vor!

ALLE MÄNNER: In düst'rem Schweigen richtet Gott.

ELSA: Du trugest zu ihm meine Klage, zu mir trat er auf dein Gebot;
o Herr, nun meinem Ritter sage, dass er mir helf' in meiner Noth!
Lass mich ihn seh'n, wie ich ihn sah, Wei ich ihn sah, sei er mir nah'.
(Die auf einer Erhöhung dem Ufer am nächsten Stehenden gewahren in der Ferne einen Nachen, von einem Schwane gezogen, auf dem Flusse allmählig sich nähern; in dem Nachen steht ein Ritter.)

DIE MÄNNER: Seht! seht! welch' seltsam Wunder! wie?
Ein Schwan, ein Schwan zieht einen Nachen dort heran!—
Ein Ritter drin hoch aufgerichtet steht; wie glänzt sein Waffenschmuck! das Aug' vergeht Vor solchem Licht!—Seht! näher kommt er an!
An einer gold'nen Kette zieht der Schwan!

HERALD: He who in sight of Heaven comes here to fight
For Elsa of Brabant, step forth at once!
(A long pause.)

CHORUS: The sound has died away without response.

FREDERICK: (pointing to Elsa's increasing anxiety.) See! you see, the charge is not repelled.
My cause is proved the cause of right.

ALL THE MEN: The accusation seems too true.

ELSA: (approaching the King). My King and master, I implore you—
One summons more to call my champion;
Too far was he to hear the first.

KING: The summons shall be heard again.
(The summons is repeated; a long pause.)

HERALD: He who in sight of Heaven comes here to fight
For Elsa of Brabant, step forth at once!

ALL THE MEN: By this dull silence Heaven decides.

ELSA: (kneeling). You gave to him my supplication;
He came to me by your decree.
Great Heaven! oh, order now my champion
To lend his aid and set me free.
Even as I saw him once before,
Oh, let him now appear one more.
(Those who stand on an elevation nearest the river perceive in the distance a boat, drawn by a swan, gradually approaching; a knight is standing in the boat.)

MEN: (first a few, then more, as they approach the river). See! there!
Behold a wonder!
How's a swan?
It draws a boat, and in it is a man.
Yes, see him! there he stands, a gallant knight;
My eyes he blinds, his armor is so bright.
See! he approaches!
With a chain of gold
The swan would bring him here.
Behold! behold!
(Most of the persons assembled have hastened towards the river. The King surveys the scene from his elevated seat. Frederick, who listens with astonishment, and Ortrud, who looks gloomily towards the background, remain in front; likewise Elsa, who listens with rapture to the above description, but does not venture to look around.)

DRITTE SCENE

(Während des Folgenden kommt der Schwan mit dem Nachen vollends am Ufer an: Lohengrin steht darin.)

ALLE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN:
Ein Wunder! ein Wunder! ein Wunder ist gekommen!
Ha, unerhörtes, nie gesch'nes Wunder!
Gegrüsst! gegrüsst, du gottgesandter Held!

LOHENGRIN: Nun sei bedankt, mein lieber Schwan!
Zieh durch die weite Fluth zurück
Dahn, woher mich trug dein Kahn,
Kehr' wieder nur zu unserm Glück!
Drum sei getreu dein dienst gethan!
Leb' wohl, leb' wohl, mein lieber Schwan!
(Der Schwan wendet den Nachen und schwimmt den Fluss zurück.)

DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Wie fasst uns selig süsses Grauen!
Welch' holde Macht hält uns gebannt!—
Wie ist er schön und hehr zu schauen, den solch' ein Wunder trug an's Land!

LOHENGRIN: Heil König Heinrich! segenvoll mög' Gott bei deinem Schwerte stehen!
Ruhmreich und gross dein Name soll von dieser Erde nie vergeh'n!

KÖNIG: Hab' Dank! erkenn' ich recht die Macht, die dich in dieses land gebracht, so kommst du uns von Gott gesandt?

LOHENGRIN: Zum Kampf für eine Magd zu steh'n, der schwere Klage angethan, bin ich gesandt: nun lasst mich seh'n, ob ich zurecht sie treffe an!—
So sprich denn, Elsa von Brabant!
Wenn ich zum Streiter dir ernannt, willst du wohl ohne Bang' und Grau'n dich meinem Schutze anvertrau'n?

ELSA: Mein Held! mein Retter!
Nimm mich hin!
Dir geb' ich alles, was ich bin!

SCENE III

(During the following, the swan reaches the bank with the boat, in which stands Lohengrin, leaning on his sword, with his helmet on his head, his shield on his shoulder, and a small golden horn at his side.)

ALL THE MEN AND WOMEN: A wondrous sight! a wondrous sight!
We hail you, you heaven-appointed knight!
(Elsa, looking around, utters a wild shriek of joy at the sight of Lohengrin, on whom Frederick gazes speechless. Ortrud, who has previously retained her haughty attitude, is stricken with terror when she beholds Lohengrin and the swan. As Lohengrin dismisses the boat, the people, absorbed in expectation, suddenly become silent.)

LOHENGRIN: Now down the stream, departing, float;
Dear swan, I take my leave of you.
Go, seek the spot from where came the boat;
When you return bring joy to me.
See you are faithful to the end.
Farewell, dear swan, trusty friend.
(The swan departs with the boat, descending the river. Lohengrin looks after it mournfully.)

CHORUS: (all). What ecstasies confound us!
That noble knight with spells has bound us, who came a stranger to our land.

LOHENGRIN: (solemnly advancing, makes obeisance to the King). Hail, royal Henry! to your sword may gracious Heaven accord its aid!
Renowned and great your name shall be,
And never from this earth shall fade.

KING: My thanks!
I recognize the power that bound you to this enterprise.
You are by Heaven's own mission here.

LOHENGRIN: As champion to a noble maid whom slander has dared to blight, I come, and all will soon confess the cause that I espouse is right.
So Elsa, speak: if me they choose to be your champion—will refuse, free from all sense of fear or pride, to me your safety to confide?

ELSA: (who until now has looked at him, entranced, sinks at this feet) My knight, my champion, as I live, all,
All I freely give to you.

LOHENGRIN: Wenn ich im Kampfe für dich siege, willst du, dass ich dein Gatte sei?

ELSA: Wie ich zu deinen Füssen liege, geb' ich dir Leib und Seele frei.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, soll ich dein Gatte heissen, soll Land und Leut' ich schirmen dir, soll nichts mich wieder von dir reissen, musst Eines du geloben mir:
Nie sollst du mich befragen, noch Wissen's Sorge tragen, woher ich kam der Fahrt, noch wie mein Nam' und Art?

ELSA: Nie, Herr, sol mir die Frage kommen.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa! hast du mich wohl vernommen?
Nie sollst du mich befragen, noch Wissen's Sorge tragen, woher ich kam der Fahrt, noch wie mein Nam' und Art!

ELSA: Mein Schirm! mein Engel! mein Erlöser, der fest an meine Unschuld glaubt!
Wie gäb' es Zweifels Schuld, die grösser, als die an dich den Glauben raubt?
Wie du mich schirmst in meiner Noth, So halt' in Treu' ich dein Gebot.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, ich liebe dich!

DER KÖNIG, DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Welch' holde Wunder muss ich seh'n?
Ist's Zauber, der mir angethan?
Ich fühl' das Herze mir vergeh'n,
Schau' ich den wonniglichen Mann.

LOHENGRIN: Nun hört! euch Volk und Edlen mach ich kund: frei aller Schuld ist Elsa von Brabant.
Dass falsch dein Klagen, Graf von Telramund,
Durch Gottes Urtheil werd' es dir bekannt!

BRABANTISCHE EDLE: (erst einige, dann immer mehrere zu Friedrich.) Steh' ab vom Kampf, wenn du ihn wagst, zu siegen nimmer du vermagst!
Ist er von höchster Macht geschüzt, sag', was dein tapf'res Schwert dir nützt?
Steh' ab! wir mahnen dich in Treu'!
Dein harret Unsieg, bitt're Reu'!

FRIEDRICH: Viel lieber todt als feig!
Welch' Zaubern dich auch hergeführt, Fremdling, der mir so kühn erscheint, dein stolzes Droh'n mich nimmer rührt, da ich zu lügen nie vermeint.
Den Kampf mit dir drum nehm' ich auf, und hoffe Sieg nach Rechtes Lauf!

LOHENGRIN: If in the fight I prove victorious, Elsa, will you become my wife?

ELSA: Yes, as I'm lying before you feet, freely I give to you my life.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, should I become your husband—
Should nothing break the ties that bind us— Should I defend your land and people— One promise, Elsa, you must make.
These questions ask me never, nor think upon them ever: From where I came—What is my rank or name.

ELSA: These questions never I'll ask, believe me.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, you must not deceive me.
These questions ask me never,
Nor think upon them ever:
From where I came—
What is my rank or name.

ELSA: My shield—my angel—my preserver.
Who hold that I am free from guilt,
No power of doubt could be sufficient
To shake my firm belief in you.
As my protector do you stand,
So do I honor your command.

LOHENGRIN: (raising her and clasping her to his bosom). Elsa, my heart is yours!

KING AND OTHERS: Is this a dream? What must I think?
The magic must amaze my soul;
I feel my heart within me sink
When on that noble form I gaze.

LOHENGRIN: (having confided Elsa to the King, advances solemnly to the center). Now hear! To all assembled be it known
That Elsa of Brabant from guilt is free!
Count Frederick, falsely she's accused by you!
By Heaven's own judgment will the truth be shown.

CHORUS: Risk not the fight, our counsel is well meant;
And if you slight it, you'll repent.

FREDERICK: (after a long hesitation, suddenly decides). I'll rather die than yield.
Whatever spells have brought you here,
Stranger, you, with the front so bold,
Since I a falsehood never have told,
Therefore with you I'll gladly fight,
And victory sure will wait on right.

LOHENGRIN: Nun, König, ordne unsern Kampf!

KÖNIG: So tretet vor, zu drei für jeden Kämpfer, und messet wohl den Ring zum Streite ab!
(Drei sächsische Edle treten für Lohengrin, drei brabantische für Friedrich vor; sie messen mit feierlichem Schritte den Kampfplatz aus und stecken ihn durch ihre Speere ab.)

DER HEERRUFER: Nun höret mich, und achtet wohl, den Kampf hier keiner stören soll!
Dem Hage bleibet abgewandt, denn wer nicht wahrt des Friedens Recht, der Freie büss' es mit der Hand, mit seinem Haupt büss'es der Knecht!

ALLE MÄNNER: Der Freie büss' es mit der Hand, mit seinem Haupt büss' es der Knecht!

DER HEERRUFFER: Hört auch, ihr Strengen vom Gericht!
Gewahrt in Treue Kampfespflicht!
Durch bösen Zaubers List und Trug stört nicht des Urtheils Eigenschaft!
Gott richtet euch nach Recht und Fug, drum trauet ihm, nicht eurer Kraft!

LOHENGRIN UND FRIEDRICH: Gott richte mich nach Recht und Fug, drum trau' ich Ihm, nicht meiner Kraft!

DER KÖNIG: Mein Herr und Gott, nun ruf' ich Dich, dass Du dem Kampf zugegen sei'st!
Durch Schwertes Sieg ein Urtheil sprich, das Trug und Wahrheit klar erweist.

DER KÖNIG, DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUN: Des Reinen Arm gieb Heldenkraft, des Falschen Stärke sei erschlafft; so hilf uns, Gott, zu dieser Frist, Weil uns're Weisheit Einfalt ist!

ELSA UND LOHENGRIN: Du kündest nun dein wahr Gericht, Mein Herr und Gott, drum zag' ich nicht.

FRIEDRICH: Ich geh' in Treu' vor Dein Gericht!
Herr Gott, verlass' mein' Ehre nicht!

ORTRUD: Ich baue fest auf seine Kraft,
Die, wo er kämpft, ihm Sieg verschafft.

ALLE MÄNNER: Des Reinen Arm gieb Heldenkraft, des Falschen Stärke sei erschlafft; so künde uns Dein wahr Gericht, du Herr und Gott, nun zö'gre nicht!
(Auf das Zeichen des Heerrufers fallen die Heerhörner mit einem langen Kampfrufe ein. Kampf Lohengrin's und Friedrich's.)

LOHENGRIN: King Henry, now arrange the fight.

KING: Advance, then, forward—three for either champion,
And for the combat measure well the ring.
(Three Saxons advance for Lohengrin; three of Brabant for Frederick. With solemn steps they measure the ground, and mark it off with three spaces.)

HERALD: Let all give ear to my words—
None with this fight must interfere.
Outside the lines be sure you stand.
If freemen, forfeit with the hand;
You who the law shall disobey,
If serfs, you with your heads shall pay.

ALL THE MEN: The freeman forfeit with his hand,
Forfeit the serf with head shall pay.

HERALD: Valiant champions, hear me too!
To honor's laws be firm and true;
Let no base witchcraft or deceit
The ends of justice now defeat.
May gracious Heaven protect the right,
In Heaven confide, not human might.

LOHENGRIN AND FREDERICK: May gracious Haven protect the right!
In Heaven I trust, not human might.

KING: (who has solemnly advanced into the middle). Heaven in prayer your aid I seek!
Preside over this assembly
Now let the sword your judgment speak,
That by your will we may abide.

KING AND CHORUS: Oh, let the arm of right be strong,
And feeble be the arm of wrong.
Oh help us now in our distress,
Our wisdom is but foolishness.

ELSA AND LOHENGRIN: Soon your just decree will be known.
Almighty Judge, I trust in you!

FRIEDRICH: I bow before your high decree,
Almighty Judge, give me strength!

ORTRUD: The victory must belong to him,
In every fight his arm is strong.

(At a signal from the Herald the trumpets sound for the combat. The King, drawing his sword, strikes it twice against his shield. At the first stroke Lohengrin and Frederick take their positions; at the second they draw their swords; at the third they commence the encounter. After several violent passages, Lohengrin strikes Frederick to the ground.)

LOHENGRIN: Durch Gottes Sieg ist jetzt dein Leben mein: Ich schenk' es dir! mög'st du der Reu es weih'n!

ELSA: O fänd' ich Jubelweisen, die deinem Ruhme gleich, die, würdig dich zu preisen, an höchstem Lobe reich!
In dir muss ich vergehen, vor dir schwind' ich dahin!
Soll ich mich selig sehen, nimm alles was ich bin!

LOHENGRIN: Den Sieg hab' ich erstritten durch deine Rein' allein!
Nun soll, was du gelitten, dir reich vergolten sein!

FRIEDRICH: Weh! mich hat Gott geschlagen, durch ihn ich sieglos bin!
Am Heil muss ich verzagen, mein' Ehr' und Ruhm ist hin.

ORTRUD: Wer ist's, der ihn geschlagen, durch den ich machtlos bin?
Sollt' ich vor ihm verzagen, Wär' all' mein Hoffen hin?

DER KÖNIG, DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Ertöne, Siegesweise, dem Helden laut zum Preise!
Ruhm deiner Fahrt!
Preis deinem Kommen!
Heil deiner Art, Schützer der Frommen!
Dich nur besingen wir, dir schallen uns're Lieder!
Nie kehrt ein Held gleich dir in diese Lande wieder.

DER VORHANG FÄLLT.

ZWEITER AUFZUG

ERSTE SCENE

(In der Burg von Antwerpen. In der Mitte des Hintergrundes der Palast (Ritterwohnung), die Kemenate (Frauenwohnung) im Vordergrunde links; rechts im Vordergrunde die Pforte des Münsters; ebenda im Hintergrunde das Thurmthor Friedrich und Ortrud.)

FRIEDRICH: Erhebe dich, Genossin meiner Schmach?
Der junge Tag darf hier uns nicht mehr seh'n.

ORTRUD: Ich kann nicht fort: hierher bin ich gebannt.
Aus diesem Glanz des Festes uns'rer Feinde lass saugen mich ein furchtbar tödlich Gift, das uns're Schmach und ihre Freuden ende!

FRIEDRICH: Du fürchterliches Weib! was bannt mich noch in deine Näh'? warum lass ich dich nicht allein, und fliehe fort, dahin, dahin,—Wo mein Gewissen Ruhe wieder fände?
Durch dich musst' ich verlieren mein' Ehr', all mein Ruhm: nie soll mich Lob mehr zieren, Schmach ist mein Heldenthum!
Die Acht ist mir gesprochen, Zertrümmert liegt mein Schwert: mein Wappen ist zerbrochen, verflucht mein Vaterherd!
Wohin ich nun mich wende, Gefehmt, gefloh'n bin ich: dass ihn mein Blick nicht schände, flieht selbst der Räuber mich. O hätt' ich Tod erkoren, da ich so elend bin!
Mein' Ehr' hab' ich verloren, mein' Ehr', mein' Ehr' ist hin!

ORTRUD: Was macht dich in so wilde Klage doch vergeh'n?

FRIEDRICH: Das mir die Waffe selbst geraubt, mit der ich dich erschlüg!

ORTRUD: Friedricher Graf von Telramund! warum misstrau'st du mir?

FRIEDRICH: Du fragst? war's nicht dein Zeugniss, deine Kunde, die mich bestrickt, die Reine zu verklagen?
Die du im düst'ren Wald zu Haus, logst du mir nicht, von deinem wilden Schlosse aus die Unthat habest du verüben seh'n?
Mit eig'nen Augen, wie Elsa selbst den Bruder im Weiher dort ertränkt?
Umstricktest du mein stolzes Herz durch die Weissagung nicht, bald würde Radbod's alter Fürstenstamm von neuem grünen und herrschen in Brabant?
Bewogst du so mich nicht, von LOHENGRIN: (holding his sword at Frederick's throat). To me your life by God's decree is given.

I take it not—go, make your peace with Heaven!
(The King leads Elsa to Lohengrin; she sinks enraptured on his bosom. Immediately after Frederick's fall the Saxon, Thuringian, and Brabant nobles have resumed their swords. The circle is broken up with general acclamations.)

CHORUS: Hail! hail! hail!

ELSA: I'd sing a song of praises
Equal to your worth.
Your name I'd send resounding
Through all the spacious earth.
I feel as nothing before you,
Right noble as you are
I love you—I adore you—
Oh, take me to your heart!

LOHENGRIN: Wrong could not triumph over you
So innocent you are
Pure bliss now lies before you,
To cheer your aching heart.

FREDERICK: Ruined, disgraced, defeated!
Oh, Heaven, my foe you are!
My downfall is completed,
My glories all depart.

ORTRUD: Must thoughts of high ambition, depart like empty dreams?
If I would shun perdition, be still, my sinking heart!

KING AND CHORUS: We sing to you—we praise you,
To highest honor raise you
Stranger, we here greet you delighted;
Wrong you have righted,
We gladly greet you here.
You, you we sing alone! Your name shall live in story,
Oh, never will be one to rival you in glory.
(The Saxons raise Lohengrin on their shield; the men of Brabant raise Elsa on that of the King. Both are carried amid loud acclamations. Curtain falls.)

END OF THE FIRST ACT.

ACT II

SCENE I

(In the fortress of Antwerp. In the middle of the background the Pallas or abode of the knights; to the left the Kemenate or abode of the women; in the foreground, to the right, the entrance of the Minster; in the background the gate of the town. Night. The windows of the Pallas are brightly illuminated; the sound of horns and trumpets is heard. On the steps before the Minster sit Frederick and Ortrud, poorly clad. Ortrud keeps her eyes fixed on the windows of the Pallas; Frederick looks at the ground. A long silence. Frederick suddenly rises.)

FREDERICK: Arouse quickly, companion of my shame,
Let the dawn of morning not see us here.

ORTRUD: (not moving). Here I am bound—I cannot stir from here.
Here from the luster of those hated revels would I imbibe a poison that would end at once our shame and all their joys forever.

FREDERICK: You fiend in woman's form, what is it thus—
Thus binds me to your presence? It were well far that I should leave you and flee away, where troubled conscience might at last repose.
Through you my stainless honor
Is changed to deadly shame.
The lips that once would praise me,
Blacken my ancient name.
The ban is over me spoken.
My sword lies in pieces,
My escutcheon is stained—
A thing that all despise.
Wherever I may turn,
All from my presence flee;
Even robbers feel polluted,
Chance they to gaze on me.
Through you my stainless honor
Has become deadly shame,
The lips once would praise me
Blacken my ancient fame.
The ban is over me spoken, &c. (to despise).
Oh, life has lost its value,
Ah, would that I were dead!
My honor's gone—my honor—
And with it all is fled.
(Throws himself wild with rage on the ground. Music heard again from the Pallas.)

ORTRUD: (after a pause). Why do you waste your strength on frantic rage like this?

FREDERICK: To think that they have taken the sword that else
Had you laid at my feet.

ORTRUD: No, Frederick, Count of Telramund, why this distrust in me?

FREDERICK: Can you ask when I, misled by you
By your deceit ensnared accused that maiden?
Did you not say that, in the gloomy wood,
Looking from out the castle of your sires,
You saw her perpetrate the hideous deed?
With your own eyes you saw Elsa drowning
Her brother in the pool; and did you not
With prophecies rouse pride within my heart?
Soon, you said, Radbod's ancient

Elsa's Hand, der reinen, abzusteh'n, und dich zum Weib zu nehmen, weil du Radbod's letzter Spross?

ORTRUD: Ha, wie tödlich du mich kränkst!—
Dies alles, ja! ich sagt' und zeugt' es dir.

FRIEDRICH: Und machtest mich, des' Name hochgeehrt, des' Leben aller schönsten Tugend Preis, zu deiner Lüge schändlichen Genossen?

ORTRUD: Wer log?

FRIEDRICH: Du!—hat nicht durch sein Gericht Gott mich dafür geschlagen?

ORTRUD: Gott?

FRIEDRICH: Entsetzlich!
Wie tönt aus deinem Mund furchtbar der Name!

ORTRUD: Ha, nennst du deine Feigheit Gott?

FRIEDRICH: Ortrud!

ORTRUD: Willst du mir droh'n? mir, einem Weibe—droh'n?
O Feiger! hättest du so grimmig ihm gedroht, der jetzt dich in das Elend schickt, wohl hättest Sieg statt Schande du erkauft!—
Ha, wer ihm zu entgetgnen wüsst', der fänd' ihn schwächer als ein Kind!

FRIEDRICH: Je schwächer er, Desto gewalt'ger kämpfte Gottes Kraft.

ORTRUD: Gottes Kraft? ha! ha!—
nur einen Tag gieb hier mir Macht, und sicher zeig' ich dir, Welch schwacher Gott es ist, der ihn beschützt.

FRIEDRICH: Du wilde Seherin! wie willst du doch Geheimnissvoll den Geist mir neu berücken?

ORTRUD: Die Schwelger strecken sich zur üpp'gen Ruh'. Setz' dich zur Seite mir! die Stund' ist da, wo dir mein Seherauge leuchten soll.—
(Friedrich nähert sich ihr.)
Weisst du, wer dieser Held, den hier Ein Schwan gezogen an das Land?

FRIEDRICH: Nein!

ORTRUD: Was gäbst du drum, es zu erfahren, wenn ich dir sag', ist er gezwungen zu nennen, wie sein Nam' und Art, All seine Macht zu

royal trunk
Would bud anew—give rulers to Brabant.
Did you not induce me to reject
Young Elsa's hand, unspotted as it was,
And choose you as the last of Radbod's line?

ORTRUD: How bitter are your words!
I own it. Yes. All this I said to you.

FREDERICK: And made me, whose name was once revered,
Whose steps from honor's path had never strayed,
The base accomplice of your shameless falsehood?

ORTRUD: Falsehood?

FREDERICK: Even so. Had not the charge been false,
Heaven would not have shamed me!

ORTRUD: Heaven?

FREDERICK: Oh, hateful!
From lips like these the name of Heaven sounds evil.

ORTRUD: Ah, "Heaven" you called your cowardice.

FREDERICK: Ortrud!

ORTRUD: Would you threaten me—me, a weak woman me?
Ah, coward! if so fiercely you had menaced
Him who has brought you to this misery,
Conquest instead of shame would have been your lot.
Those who encounter him properly will find
He's weaker than a child.

FREDERICK: If he was weak,
More certain is it Heaven put forth its strength.

ORTRUD: You think so?
Ha, ha, give me the power
But for a single day, and I will plainly show
How feeble is the Heaven in which he trusts.

FREDERICK: Audacious sorceress, do you attempt, by secret arts once more to madden my soul?

ORTRUD: (pointing to the Pallas, which is now dark.) The revelers are wrapped in deep repose.
Come, sit near to me; the hour is come
When my prophetic eye shall give you light.
(Frederick approaches her.)
Come, do you know the stranger knight
Who was brought here by a swan?

FREDERICK: No.

ORTRUD: What would you give to learn the truth—
The mighty truth, that, if compelled

Ende ist, Die mühevoll ihm ein Zauber leiht?

FRIEDRICH: Ha! dann begriff' ich sein Verbot?

ORTRUD: Nun hör'!
Niemand hat hier Gewalt ihm das Geheimniss zu entreissen.
Als die, der er so streng verbot. Die Frage je an ihn zu thun.

FRIEDRICH: So gält' es, Elsa zu verleiten, dass sie die Frag' ihm nicht erliess'?

ORTRUD: Ha, wie begreifst du schnell und wohl!

FRIEDRICH: Doch wie soll das gelingen?

ORTRUD: Hör'! Vor allem gilt's, von hinnen nicht zu flieh'n: drum schärfe deinen Witz!
Gerechten Argwohn ihr zu wecken, tritt vor, klag' ihn des Zauber's an, durch den er das Gericht getäuscht!

FRIEDRICH: Ha, Trug und Zaubers List!

ORTRUD: Missglückt's so bleibt ein Mittel der Gewalt.

FRIEDRICH: Gewalt!

ORTRUD: Umsonst nicht bin ich in geheimsten Küsten tief erfahren; drum achte wohl, was ich dir sage!
Jed' Wesen, das durch Zauber stark, wird ihm des Leibes kleinstes Glied entrissen nur, muss sich alsbald Ohnmächtig zeigen, wie es ist.

FRIEDRICH: Ha, sprachst du wahr!

ORTRUD: O hättest du im Kampf nur einen Finger ihm, Ja, eines Fingers Glied entschlagen, der Held—er war in deiner Macht!

FRIEDRICH: Entsetzlich, ha! was lässet do mich hören?
Durch Gottes Arm geschlagen wähnt ich mich,— Nun liess durch Trug sich das Gericht bethören, durch Zauber's List verlor mein' Ehre ich!
Doch meine Schande könnt' ich rächen?
Bezeugen könnt' ich meine Treu'?
Des Buhlen Trug, ich könnt' ihn brechen, und meine Ehr' gewönn' ich neu?—
O Weib, das in der Nacht ich vor mir seh'!
Betrügst du jetzt mich noch, dann weh' dir, weh'!

ORTRUD: Ha, wie du rasest!—ruhig und besonnen!
So lehr' ich dich der Rache süsse Wonnen.

His name and station to reveal,
The vaunted strength at once would cease,
Which to a magic spell he owes?

FREDERICK: Ha! then his words I understood.

ORTRUD: Attend! Here no one has the power
To pluck the secret from his breast
Excepting her whom he forbade
About the mystery to ask.

FREDERICK: I see now.
Elsa must be lured, in spite of all, to question him.

ORTRUD: My meaning you have fathomed well.

FREDERICK: Yet how effect our purpose?

ORTRUD: Hear!
It much imports we do not leave
This place, so sharpen well your wits,
That you may fill her with distrust.
Step forth! charge him with sorcery,
With warping justice by deceit.

FREDERICK: Yes, sorcery and fraud.

ORTRUD: At worst we still can gain our end by force.

FREDERICK: By force?

ORTRUD: Believe me, not in vain I have learned the darkest science; therefore attend to what I say.
He who is made through magic strong, if from his body even the smallest part is torn, at once in all his weakness must appear.

FREDERICK: Do you speak the truth?

ORTRUD: Oh, had you but cut off a finger from his hand,
Or even a finger's joint, for certain
That knight would now be in your power!

FREDERICK: It is fearful!
Oh, I thought I was defeated because its aid great Heaven denied. Now must I hear the royal judge was cheated, that magic arts have overthrown my pride, I can recover my lost repute; make good the loss that I deplore, my hated victor triumph over, and be my honored self once more?
O wife! who through the night this light can show, if you deceive me, woe to you—woe!

ORTRUD: No, how you rave! Calmness, I implore you, so all the joys of vengeance I will teach you.

ORTRUD UND FRIEDRICH: Der Rache Werk sei nun beschworen aus meines Busens wilder Nacht.
Die ihr in süssem Schlaf verloren, wisst, dass für euch das Unheil wacht!

ZWEITE SCENE

(Elsa ist auf dem söller der Kemenate erschienen.—Friedrich und Ortrud.)

ELSA: Euch Lüften, die mein Klagen so traurig oft erfüllt, euch muss ich dankend sagen, wie sich mein Glück enthüllt.

ORTRUD: Sie ist es!

FRIEDRICH: Elsa.

ELSA: Durch euch kam er gezogen, ihr lächeltet der Fahrt; auf wilden Meereswogen habt ihr ihn treu bewahrt.

ORTRUD: Der Stunde soll sie fluchen, in der sie jetzt mein Blick gewahrt!

ELSA: Zu trocknen meine Zähren hab' ich euch oft gemüht: wollt Kühlung nun gewähren der Wang' in Lieb' erglüht!

ORTRUD: Hinweg!
Entfern' ein Kleines dich von mir!

FRIEDRICH: Warum?

ORTRUD: Sie ist für mich—ihr Held gehöre dir!
(Friedrich entfernt sich in den Hintergrund.)
Elsa!

ELSA: Wer ruft?—
Wie schauerlich und klagend ertönt mein Name durch die Nacht?

ORTRUD: Elsa!
Ist mein Stimme dir so fremd?—
Willst du die Arme ganz verläugnen, die du in's fernste Elend schick'st?

ELSA: Ortrud! bist du's?—was machst du hier Unglücklich Weib?

ORTRUD: . . . Unglücklich Weib?
Wohl hast du recht mich so zu nennen! In ferner Einsamkeit des Waldes, wo still und friedsam ich gelebt,— Was that ich dir? was that ich dir?
Freudlos, das Unglück nur beweinend, das lang belastet meinen Stamm, was that ich dir? was that ich dir?

ELSA: Um Gott, was klagest du mich an?
War ich es, die dir Leid gebracht?

ORTRUD: Wie könntest du fürwahr mir neiden das Glück, dass mich zum Weib erwählt der Mann, den du so gern verschmäht?

BOTH: A sense of joy comes over me creeping, dark thoughts are raging in my breast;
You who are sleeping in happiness soon will be startled from your rest.

SCENE II

(Elsa, in a white dress, appears on the balcony of the Kemenate, which she leans over. Frederick and Ortrud sit opposite on the steps of the Minster.)

ELSA: Oh breezes, who so often heard tales of my distress, grateful, the joy that fills me I will confess to you.

ORTRUD: It is Elsa!

FREDERICK: Elsa!

ELSA: Through you he floated safely—you checked the billows wild, in vain was all their fury, when you smiled on his course.

ORTRUD: How often will she curse The hour at which she sees me?

ELSA: I begged you often in sorrow, to dry a falling tear; now cool the burning blushes that on my cheeks appear.

ORTRUD: Away! retire some distance here.

FREDERICK: But why?

ORTRUD: She is for me—her champion is for you.
(Frederick withdraws to the background.)
(In a plaintive voice.)
Elsa.

ELSA: Who calls?
Why fearfully and sadly resounds my name thus through the night?

ORTRUD: Elsa, so strange appears my voice, and can you thus repel the wretch whom you have brought to misery?

ELSA: Ortrud!
Is it you?
What are you doing here, you hapless one?

ORTRUD: "You hapless one!"
You named me rightly now indeed.
In yonder forest's deep recesses I passed my days in solitude;
How have I harmed you? How have I harmed you?
Joyless, bewailing the misfortunes so long inflicted on my race.
How have I harmed you? How have I . . . .

ELSA: Good Heaven!
What lay you to my charge?
Were you brought to misery by me?

ORTRUD: To think that you could look with envy on me because the man despised by you—preferred me for his wife?

ELSA: Allgüt'ger Gott, was sol mir das?

ORTRUD: Musst' ihn unsel'ger Wahn bethören, dich Reine einer Schuld zu zeih'n, von Reu' ist nun sein Herz zerrissen, zu grimmer Buss' ist er verdammt.

ELSA: Gerechter Gott!

ORTRUD: O du bist glücklich!—
Nach kurzem, unschuldsüssem Leiden, siehst lächelnd du das Leben nur; von mir darfst selig du dich scheiden, mich schickst du auf des Todes Spur.—
Dass meines Jammers trüber Schein nie kehr' in deine Feste ein.

ELSA: Wie schlecht ich deine Güte priese, Allmächt'ger, der mich so beglückt, wenn ich das Unglück von mir stiesse,
Das sich vor mir im Staube bückt!—
O nimmer!
Ortrud! harre mein!
Ich selber lass' dich zu mir ein.
(Sie geht eilig in die Kemenate zurück.)

ORTRUD: Entweihte Götter! helft jetzt meiner Rache!
Bestraft die Schmach, die hier euch angethan!
Stärkt mich im Dienste eurer heil'gen Sache,
Vernichtet der Abtrünnigen schnöden Wahn!
Wodan! dich Starken rufe ich!
Freia!
Erhab'ne, höre mich!
Segnet mir Trug und Heuchelei
Dass glücklich meine Rache sei!
(Elsa und zwei Mägde, welche Lichte tragen, treten auf.)

ELSA: Ortrud? wo bist du?

ORTRUD: Hier, zu deinen Füssen!

ELSA: Hilf Gott! so muss ich dich erblicken, die ich in Stolz und Pracht nur sah!
Es will das Herze mir ersticken, seh' ich so niedrig dich mir nah.—
Steh' auf! o spare mir dein Bitten! Trug'st du mir Hass, verzieh' ich dir; was du schon jetzt durch mich gelitten, das, bitt' ich dich, verzeih' auch mir!

ORTRUD: O habe Lohn für so viel Güte!

ELSA: Der morgen nun mein Gatte heisst, anfleh' ich sein liebreich Gemüthe, dass Friedrich auch er Gnad' erweist.

ORTRUD: Du fesselst mich in Dankes Banden.

ELSA: All-gracious Heaven, what can you mean?

ORTRUD: Beguiled by some insane illusion, you innocent, he charged with guilt.
This heart now melts with deep contrition—
How heavy is his punishment!

ELSA: Avenging powers!

ORTRUD: Yes, you are happy.
Your hours of short-lived grief are ended.
Life wears for you a smiling face.
You heedlessly can cast me from you, to trace death's never-failing path.
Thus never will my sorrow, never darken the threshold of your door.

ELSA: How ill should I repay the bounties,
Kind Heaven, of your surpassing grace,
If when the wretched bent before me I drove them hence with scornful face.
I cannot—Ortrud, say no more, I will open the door for you myself.
(Retires into the Kemenate.)

ORTRUD: (springing from the steps with wild delight). You gods! now slighted, I am calling on you.
Would you remain forever in the shade?
Your cause is mine, you deities appalling.
Ah! check the progress of the renegade. Wodan, ever great and strong,
Freia, once sung in many a song,
Give your assistance to deceit—
My vengeance then will be complete.
(Elsa and two servants, with candles, enter from the lower door of the Kemenate.)

ELSA: Ortrud, where are you?

ORTRUD: (kneeling). Here behold me prostrate.

ELSA: Arise!
Thus must I see you kneeling, you whom I know to be so great, so proud?
It would move a heart devoid of feeling, to see your head so lowly bow'd.
Arise.
All wrong you have committed—free pardon now for all. You are not scorned but deeply pitied; in turn forgive me for your woes, ORTRUD: For this compassion Heaven reward you!

ELSA: He who tomorrow calls me bride,
Like me shall regard you with pity, and Frederick shall forgive beside.

ORTRUD: What gratitude can ever repay you?

ELSA: In Früh'n lass mich bereit dich seh'n!
Geschmückt mit prächtigen Gewanden, sollst du mit mir zum Münster gehen.
Dort harre ich des Helden mein, vor Gott sein Eh'gemahl zu sein.

ORTRUD: Wie kann ich solche Huld dir lohnen, da machtlos ich und elend bin?
Soll ich in Gnaden bei dir wohnen, stets bleib' ich nur die Bettlerin.
Nur eine Kraft ist mir gegeben, sie raubte mir kein Machtgebot; durch sie vielleicht schütz' ich dein Leben, bewahr' es vor der Reue Noth.

ELSA: Wie meinst du?

ORTRUD: Wohl dass ich dich warne, zu blind nicht deinem Glück zu trau'n; dass nicht ein Unheil dich umgarne, lass mich für dich zur Zukunft schau'n.

ELSA: Welch' Unheil?

ORTRUD: Konntest du erfassen, Wie dessen Art so wundersam, der nie dich möge so verlassen, wie er durch Zauber zu dir kam!

ELSA: Du Aermste kannst wohl nie ermessen, wie zweifellos mein Herze liebt!
Du hast wohl nie das Glück besessen, das sich uns nur durch Glauben giebt!
Kehr' bei mir ein! lass mich dich lehren, wie süss die Wonne reinster Treu'!
Lass zu dem Glauben dich bekehren: Es giebt ein Glück, das ohne Reu'!

ORTRUD: (für sich). Ha! dieser Stolz, es soll mich lehren, wie ich bekämpfe ihre Treu'; gen ihn will ich die Waffen kehren, durch ihren Hochmuth werd' ihr Reu'!
(Elsa führt Ortrud in die Kemenate, die Mägde leuchten voran.—Friedrich tritt aus dem Hintergrunde hervor.)

FRIEDRICH: So zieht das Unheil in dies Haus!—
Vollführe, Weib, was deine List ersonnen, dein Werk zu hemmen fühl' ich keine Macht!
Das Unheil hat mit meinem Fall begonnen,— nun stürzet nach, die mich dahin gebracht!
Nur eines seh' ich mahnend vor mir steh'n: der Räuber meiner Ehre soll vergeh'n?

DRITTE SCENE

(Der Tag bricht vollends an. Thürmer blasen ein Morgenlied, von einem entfernteren Thurme wird geantwortet.—Dann schreiten die vier Heerhornbläser aus dem Palast und blasen den Königsruf, worauf sie wieder zurückgehen.)

ELSA: When first the morning begins to glow
In costly ornaments array yourself;
Then with me to the Minster go,
Where I shall await the hero,
Whom Heaven has deigned with me to mate.

ORTRUD: What fitting homage can I show you?
So poor and weak, you know well a wretch am I too far below you, though in your favor I may dwell.
Of one small power have none bereft me. One power unweakened still I have, can use it still while it is left me, perhaps to save you from sorrow.

ELSA: What do you mean?

ORTRUD: Gentle Elsa, mind, although the present seems so fair, you must not let its brightness blind you, your future wealth must be my care.

ELSA: What threatens?

ORTRUD: Can you fathom ever how wondrous must his magic be who never could leave you maiden—never—as he by magic came to you?

ELSA: (shrinks from Ortrud and then regards her with pity). Poor creature! You can never measure the depth of bliss in trusting hearts; never can you understand the pleasure which faith, and faith alone imparts.
Come, enter here—come, I beseech you, and learn from me the purest joy.
Yes, I will teach you true happiness—a happiness without alloy.

ORTRUD: (to herself). Ah, hateful pride! Yet it shall teach me the way to mar this purest joy.
Her words unwittingly beseech me the bliss she boasts of to destroy.
(Elsa leads Ortrud into the Kemenate, lighted by the servants. The day has begun to dawn. Frederick comes forward.)

FREDERICK: Thus mischief enters yonder house.
The game, my wife, you craftily are winning.
The work you have to do I cannot stop.
The mischief, with my base defeat beginning, now on my foes with force shall drop.
Of all before me, this I see alone—the murderers of my honor are undone.

SCENE III

(Broad daylight. Warder gives morning signal, which is answered from a distant tower. Servants enter from the interior of the fortress. They dip pails into a well and carry them into the Pallas. The four trumpeters then come out of the Pallas, and, after sounding the royal summons, retire. Frederick has concealed himself behind a buttress of the Minster. From the gates of the fortress and through the town gate nobles of Brabant and retainers advance to the front of the Minster and greet each other.)

(Fredrich hat sich hinter einem Mauervorsprung am Münster verborgen.—Aus dem Burghofe und durch das Thurmthor kommen nun brabantische Edle und Mannen vor dem Münster zusammen.)

DIE EDLEN UND MANNEN: In Früh'n versammelt uns der Ruf, gar viel verheisset wohl der Tag!
Der hier so hehre Wunder schuf, manch neue That vollbringen mag.
(Der Heerrufer schreitet mit den vier Heerhornbläsern aus dem Palast heraus.)

DER HEERRUFER: Des Königs Wort und Will' thu' ich euch kund, Drum achtet wohl, was euch durch mich er sagt!
In Bann und Acht ist Friedrich Telramund, weil untreu er den Gotteskampf gewagt: wer sein noch pflegt, wer sich zu ihm gesellt, nach Reiches Recht derselben Acht verfällt.

DIE MÄNNER: Fluch ihm! dem Ungetreuen, den Gottes Urtheil traf!
Ihn soll der Reine scheuen, es flieh' ihn Ruh' und Schlaf!

DER HEERRUFER: Und weiter kündet euch der König an, dass er den fremden gottgesandten Mann, den Elsa zum Gemahle sich ersehnt, mit Land und Krone von Brabant belehnt.
Doch will der Held nicht Herzog sein genannt, ihr sollt ihn heissen: Schützer von Brabant.

DIE MÄNNER: Hoch der ersehnte Mann, Heil ihm, den Gott gesandt. Treu sind wir unterthan dem Schützer von Brabant.

DER HEERRUFER: Nun hört, was Er durch mich euch künden lässt!
Heut' feiert er mit euch sein Hochzeitsfest; doch morgen sollt ihr kampfgerüstet nah'n, zur Heeresfolg' dem König unterthan.
Er selbst verschmäht der süssen Ruh' zu pflegen, Er führt euch an zu hehren Ruhmes Segen!

DIE MÄNNER: Zum Streite säumet nicht, führt euch der Hehre an!
Wer muthig mit ihm ficht, dem lacht des Ruhmes Bahn.
Von Gott ist er gesandt zur Grösse von Brabant!
(Während der Heerrufer wieder in den Palast zurückgeht, treten im Vordergrunde vier Edle zusammen.)

DER ERSTE EDLE: Nun hört! dem Lande will er uns entführen?

NOBLES AND RETAINERS: The early summons we obey.
How bright with promise seems the day!
Oh he who could such honor gain, fresh glory surely will attain!
(Herald, with his four trumpeters, advances from the Pallas to the elevation in front of it. The royal summons is again sounded.)

HERALD: I now proclaim the King's august decree!
Hear with respect, then, what he says through me: Frederick, the Count of Telramund, is banned, who faithlessly in sight of Heaven could stand.
If any dare consort with him at all, on him, by ancient law, the ban shall fall.

ALL THE MEN: Our curse upon the traitor whom Heaven has overthrown!
Let good men all avoid him, to him be rest unknown.
(Trumpets sound again.)

HERALD: And further, solemnly the King proclaims that he, the stranger Heaven-appointed, names the lady Elsa's spouse by royal grant, to hold the land and Dukedom of Brabant.
As Duke he will not be, by royal grant he bears the title, Guardian of Brabant.

ALL THE MEN: Hail!
Heaven-appointed! hail! whom God grants to us: Loyal and true, we hail you Guardian of Brabant.
(Trumpets sound again.)

HERALD: To this as well now give attention all.
He holds today his wedding festival.
Tomorrow's dawn will bring sterner duties, with him you'll join the forces of the King. All soft delight in days of peril spurning, you will follow him, earning deathless glory.

CHORUS: We follow, matchless knight, wherever you may lead.
Sword will light the way to many a noble deed.
Yes!
Heaven through you will grant new glory to Brabant.
(While the men are occupied with each other, and when the Herald has retired into the Pallas, four nobles of Brabant advance.)

FIRST NOBLE: You hear how from our country he will take us!

DER ZWEITE: Gen einen Feind, der uns noch nie bedroht?

DER DRITTE: Solch' kühn Beginnen sollt' ihm nicht gebühren!

DER VIERTE: Wer wehret ihm, wenn er die Fahrt gebot?

FRIEDRICH: (unter sie tretend). Ich.

DIE VIER EDLEN: Ha! wer bist du?
Friedrich! seh' ich recht?
Du wagst dich her, zur Beute jedem Knecht?

FRIEDRICH: Gar bald will ich wohl weiter noch mich wagen!
Vor euren Augen soll es leuchtend tagen!
Der euch so kühn die Heerfahrt angesagt, der sei von mir des Gottestrug's beklagt.

DIE VIER EDLEN: Was hör' ich!
Rasender, was hast du vor?
Verlor'ner du, hört dich des Volkes Ohr!
(Sie drängen Friedrich bei Seite. Edelknaben treten auf.)

VIER EDELKNABEN: Mach Platz für Elsa, unsere Frau!
Die will in Gott zum Münster geh'n.

VIERTE SCENE

(Ein langer Zug von Frauen in reichen Gewändern schreitet aus der Kemenate dem Münster zu.)

DIE EDLEN UND MANNEN: (während des Aufzuges). Gesegnet soll sie schreiten, die lang' in Demuth litt!
Gott möge sie geleiten und hüten ihren Schritt!—
Sie naht, die Engelgleiche, von keuscher Gluth entbrannt!
Heil dir, du Tugendreiche!
Heil Elsa von Brabant!
(Elsa ist im Zuge aufgetreten; Ortrud folgt.)

SECOND NOBLE: Against the men who never were our foes?

THIRD NOBLE: A bad beginning! Would he make us bondsmen?

FOURTH NOBLE: But who will dare oppose his mandate?

FREDERICK: (coming forward and somewhat uncovering his face.) I!

ALL FOUR: Ha, who are you?
Frederick—No, ah, No.
Here you will be a prey to every knave.

FREDERICK: You soon will know to what extent I dare;
Soon the truth will shine brightly before your eyes
Soon I will declare him an impostor!

ALL FOUR: What did you say?
Take care—take care.
Beware of the people's wrath.
(They lead Frederick aside and carefully hide him from the people. Pages appear on the balcony of the Kemenate, descend towards the Pallas, and summon the men.)

FOUR PAGES: Make way, make way! our Lady Elsa comes, and will proceed to the Minster.
(They make a broad passage through the men, who readily give way, and clear the steps of the Minster, where they take their stand.)

SCENE IV

(A long train of ladies, richly clad, advances from the interior of the Kemenate to the balcony, and then descends towards the Pallas, which winds to the foreground to reach the Minster.)

NOBLES AND RETAINERS: May blessings shower upon you, who could endure such woes!
May saints watch kindly over you, and make your pathway sure.
She comes, the maid angelic, to Heaven a suppliant for days by grief unchecked.
Hail, Elsa of Brabant!
(Elsa, magnificantly attired, has advanced in the procession; among the last ladies who follow her is Ortrud, also richly clad, from whom the rest shrink with ill-concealed scorn, so that she appears to be almost alone, her face betraying the most violent anger. When Elsa, amid loud acclamations, is about to set her foot on the first step of the Minster, Ortrud breaks from her ranks, places herself on the steps before Elsa, and compels her to retreat.)

ORTRUD: Zurück, Elsa! nicht länger will ich dulden, dass ich gleich einer Magd dir folgen soll!
Den Vortritt sollst du überall mir schulden, vor mir dich beugen sollst du demuthvoll!

DIE EDELKNABEN UND DIE MÄNNER: Was will das Weib?

ELSA: Um Gott! was muss ich seh'n?
Welch' jäher Wechsel ist mit dir geschehn?

ORTRUD: Weil eine Stund' ich meines Werth's vergessen, glaubst du, ich müsste dir nur kriechend nah'n?
Mein Leid zu rähen will ich mich vermessen. Was mir gebührt, das will ich nun empfah'n.

ELSA: Weh! liess ich durch dein Heucheln mich verleiten, die diese Nacht sich jammernd zu mir stahl?
Willst du nun in Hochmuth vor mir schreiten, du, eines Gottgerichteten Gemahl?

ORTRUD: Wenn falsch Gericht mir den Gemahl verbannte, war doch sein Nam' im Lande hochgehrt; als aller Tugend Preis man ihn nur nannte, gekannt, gefürchtet war sein tapf'res Schwert.
Der deine, sag', wer sollte hier ihn kennen, vermagst du selbst den Namen nicht zu nennen?

MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Was sagt sie?
Ha! was thut sie kund?—
Sie lästert! wehret ihrem Mund!

ORTRUD: Kannst du ihn nennen? kannst du uns es sagen, ob sein Geschlecht, sein Adel wohl bewährt?
Woher die Fluthen ihn zu dir getragen, wann und wohin er wieder von dir fährt?
Ha, nein! wohl brächte ihm es schlimme Noth.
Der kluge Held die Frage drum verbot!

MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Ha! spricht sie wahr? welch' schwere Klagen!—
Sie schmähet ihn! darf sie es wagen?

ELSA: Du Lästerin! Ruchlose Frau!
Hör', ob ich Antwort mir getrau'!—
So rein und edel ist sein Wesen, so tugendreich der hehre Mann, dass nie des Unheils soll genesen, wer seiner Sendung zweifeln kann!
Hat nicht durch Gott im Kampf geschlagen Mein theurer Held den Gatten dein?
Nun sollt nach Recht ihr alle sagen,
Wer kann da nur der Reine sein?

MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Nur er! nur er! dein Held allein!

ORTRUD: Back, Elsa, back, nor to precede me endeavor, no menial was I born to follow you.
The right to lead the way I never forfeit.
Humbly bowed before me your head shall be.

PAGES AND MEN: What does she seek?

ELSA: (shocked). By Heaven! but this is strange; I cannot understand this sudden change.

ORTRUD: Although I came to you, disgracing my rank, do not think to make me your humble slave.
Now I seek vengeance! and the blot effacing, I claim and mean to take my right.

ELSA: Ah, did a wily hypocrite deceive me, when shedding piteous tears, she came to me?
How can you dare with insolence to grieve me—
You, you whose husband Heaven has marked with shame?

ORTRUD: Although injustice now has overthrown him, here was my husband adored by all hearts.
As honor's brightest flower all here have known him— have known, have feared his keen, resistless sword.
Your bridegroom—ah! of him, proud Elsa, boast not, a stranger here, whose very name you do not know.

CHORUS: What does she mean?
Ha, what does she say?
She's raving!
Stop this blaspheming.

ORTRUD: Oh, nothing you know—no he has not taught you—whether his race is noble, without stain, nor when the waters brought you his assistance, whether and when they'll bear him here again.
Oh, no! surely your champion had strong motives when he sternly forbade any question.

MEN AND WOMEN: How fierce her words!
How?
Does she speak truly?
Was ever heard a tongue so unruly?

ELSA: Injurious dame, those taunts forbear; hear, this my answer plainly hear!
He's pure and noble past all measure.
That soul shall never taste of pleasure who dares to doubt his mission.
He before Heaven's tribunal fighting her husband bravely overthrew.
Say, then, your voices all uniting, whom you consider pure and true.

MEN AND WOMEN: He—he is pure and true.

ORTRUD: Ha! diese Reine deines Helden, wie wäre sie so bald getrübt, müsst' er des Zaubers Wesen melden, durch den hier solche Macht er übt!
Wagst du ihn nicht darum zu fragen, so glauben alle wir mit Recht, du müssest selbst in Sorge zagen, um seine Reine steh' es schlecht!

DIE FRAUEN: Helft ihr vor der Verruchten Hass!

MÄNNER: Macht Platz! macht Platz! der König naht!

FÜNFTE SCENE

(Der König, Lohengrin, die sächsischen und brabantischen Grafen und Edlen sind aus dem Palast herausgeschritten.)

DIE MÄNNER: Heil!
Heil dem König!
Heil dem Schützer von Brabant!

KÖNIG: Was für ein Streit?

ELSA: Mein Herr, mein Gebieter!

LOHENGRIN: Was giebt's?

KÖNIG: Wer wagt es hier, den Kirchengang zu stören?

DES KÖNIGS GEFOLGE: Welcher Streit, den wir vernahmen?

LOHENGRIN: Was seh' ich! das unsel'ge Weib bei dir?

ELSA: Mein Retter! schütze mich vor dieser Frau!
Schilt mich, wenn ich dir ungehorsam war!
In Jammer sah ich sie vor dieser Pforte, aus ihrer Noth nahm ich sie bei mir auf: nun sieh', wie furchtbar sie mir lohnt die Güte, sie schilt mich, dass ich dir zu sehr vertrau'!

LOHENGRIN: Du fürchterliches Weib! steh' ab von ihr!
Hier wird dir nimmer Sieg!—
Sag', Elsa mir!
Vermocht' ihr Gift sie in dein Herz zu giessen?
(Elsa birgt ihr Gesicht an seiner Brust.)
Komm! lass in Freude dort die Thränen fliessen!

FRIEDRICH: O König!
Trugbethörte Fürsten! haltet ein!

DIE MÄNNER: Was will der hier?
Verfluchter, weich' von hinnen!

KÖNIG: Wag'st du zu trotzen meinem Zorn?

FRIEDRICH: O hört mich an!

ORTRUD: Though pure and noble seems your lover, to foul disgrace would he be brought did he the magic spells discover by which such wonders he has wrought.
Come, then—if you dare not question him, this only can we think, be sure, to hear the simple truth you care not, or do not deem his soul so pure.

WOMEN: Oh, shield her from this woman's hate.

MEN: Make room, make room—here comes, the king!

SCENE V

(The King, Lohengrin, the Saxon and Brabant nobles, all magnificantly clad, advance from the Pallas. Lohengrin and the King press their way through the throng in the foreground.)

MEN: Hail, hail, King Henry! hail, Guardian of Brabant!

KING: What means this strife?

ELSA: (falling on Lohengrin's bosom). My lord—oh, my preserver!

LOHENGRIN: What is it?

KING: Who is it dares to stand before the Minster?

KING'S ATTENDANTS: From where comes this strife?
Its sound has reached us.

LOHENGRIN: Oh, monstrous!
That ill-omened form by you!

ELSA: My champion!
Shield me now against my foe.
Blame me if I disobeyed your commands. I saw her weeping here before this portal, and sought to save her from her misery.
Behold, how ill she now requites my kindness—upbraids me for my confidence in you!

LOHENGRIN: (looking sternly at Ortrud). Away from her at once, vile sorceress!
Here you will miss your aim.
Dear Elsa, say—say, has the venom descended to your heart?
(She hides her face against his bosom. Raising her hand and pointing to the Minster.)
Come, there the purest joy shall be your sorrow ended.
(As Lohengrin, with Elsa, is proceeding to the Minster, Frederick appears on the steps before the ladies and pages, who shrink from him with horror.)

FREDERICK: King Henry, much deluded monarch, stay a while.

ALL THE MEN: Accursed one!
Quit our presence!

KING: Dare you to defy my wrath?

FREDERICK: Hear me out!

DIE MÄNNER: Hinweg! du bist des Todes, Mann!

FRIEDRICH: Hört mich, dem grimmes Unrecht ihr gethan!
Gottes Gericht, es ward entehrt, betrogen, durch eines Zaubers List seid ihr belogen!

DIE MÄNNER: Greift den Verruchten! Hört, er lästert Gott!

FRIEDRICH: Den dort im Glanz ich vor mir sehe, den klag' ich des Betruges an!
Wie Staub vor Gottes Hauch verwehe die Macht, die er durch List gewann!—
Wie schlecht ihr des Gerichtes wahrtet, das doch die Ehre mir benahm, da eine Frag' ihr ihm erspartet als er zum Gotteskampfe kam.
Die Frage nun sollt ihr nicht wehren, dass sie ihm jetzt von mir gestellt:—
Nach Namen, Heimath, Stand und Ehren frag' ich ihn laut vor aller Welt.—
Wer ist er, der an's Land geschwommen, geführt von einem wilden Schwan?
Wem solche Zauberthiere frommen, des' Reinheit achte ich für Wahn. Nun soll der Klag' er Rede stehen:
Vermag er's, so geschah mir Recht,—Wenn nicht, so sollet ihr ersehen, um seine Tugend steh' es schlecht!

DER KÖNIG UND DIE MÄNNER: Welch' schwere Klage! was wird er entgegnen?

LOHENGRIN: Nicht dir, der so vergass der Ehren, hab' Noth ich Rede hier zu steh'n!
Des Bösen Zweifel darf ich wehren, vor ihm wird Reine nicht vergeh'n.

FRIEDRICH: Darf ich ihm nicht als würdig gelten, dich ruf' ich, König, hochgeehrt!
Wird er auch unadlig schelten, dass er die Frage dir verwehrt?

LOHENGRIN: Ja, selbst dem König darf ich wehren, und aller Fürsten höchstem Rath!
Nicht dar sie Zweifels Last beschweren, sie sahen meine gute That.
Nur Eine ist's, der muss ich Antwort geben: Elsa—
Elsa!—wie seh' ich sie erbeben!—
In wildem Brüten muss ich sie gewahren, hat sie bethört des Hasses Lügenmund?
O Himmel! schirme sie vor den Gefahren!
Nie werde Zweifel dieser Reinen kund!

FRIEDRICH UND ORTRUD: In wildem Brüten darf ich sie gewahren!
Der Zweifel keimt in ihres Herzens

ALL THE MEN: Away! You're a condemned man!

FREDERICK: Hear me, to whom have done you grievous wrong.
Heaven's arbiters, you are disgraced and cheated; by this vile sorcerer justice was defeated.

ALL THE MEN: Seize the outcast!
Hark! how he blasphemes!

FREDERICK: He who so proudly lords it over me, he is a sorcerer, I declare, and scatter even as dust before me a power attained by means unfair.
Your duty was for him neglected.
Although you branded me with shame, one question had the truth detected before we to the trial came.
In your default I now will task him, the course of right you dare not stop.
His station—name—I plainly ask him here what they are allowed to say.
(General emotion.) Who was it, cruising on our river, drawn only by a wild swan?
A knight, using such strange familiars can scarcely be an honest man.
Let him give me an answer.
Does he comply?
Then his cause is right.
If not, you plainly will perceive his honor does not look too bright.

KING AND MEN: The charge is heavy; how will he refute it?

LOHENGRIN: I need not give answer to you. So stained are you with foul disgrace.
I heed not the doubts of evil hearts those purest honor never efface.

FREDERICK: If I am infected with disgrace, Great King, to you I will appeal.
Question him yourself—you'll be respected,
He'll not conceal the truth from you.

LOHENGRIN: Should all the noble knights about me, should even King Henry give command—I'd not reply; you need not doubt me.
My worth is proved by this right hand.
To one alone all—all, without dissembling—Elsa—no, how is it you are trembling?
Within her heart already doubt is dwelling; has deceit's vile tongue overthrown her trust?
Oh guard her Heaven!
insidious foes repelling. Nor to her soul let doubt be ever known.

ORTRUD AND FREDERICK: Within her heart already doubt is dwelling.
I know the thoughts that pain her

Grund; der mir zur Noth in dieses Land gefahren, er ist besiegt, wird ihm die Frage kund!

DER KÖNIG UND ALLE MÄNNER: Welch' ein Geheimniss muss der Held bewahren, bringt es ihm Noth, so wahr't es treu sein Mund.
Wir schirmen ihn, den Edlen, vor Gefahren; durch seine That ward uns sein Adel kund.

ELSA: Was er verbirgt, wohl brächt' es ihm Gefahren, vor aller Welt spräch' es hier aus sein Mund:—
Die er errettet, weh' mir Undankbaren.
Verrieth' ich ihn, dass hier es werde kund.—
Wüsst' ich sein Loos, ich wollt' es treu bewahren: im Zweifel doch erbebt des Herzens Grund!

DER KÖNIG: Mein Held! entgegne kühn dem Ungetreuen!
Du bist zu hehr, um, was er klagt, zu scheuen!

DIE MÄNNER: Wir steh'n zu dir! es soll uns nie gereuen, dass wir der Helden Preis in dir erkannt.
Reich' uns die Hand; wir glauben dir in Treuen, dass hehr dein Nam', auch wenn er nicht genannt.

LOHENGRIN: Euch Helden soll der Glaube nimmer gereuen, Werd' Euch mein Nam' und Art auch nie genannt!

FRIEDRICH: (heimlich zu Elsa). Vertraue mir! lass dir ein Mittel heissen, das dir Gewissheit schafft.

ELSA: Hinweg von mir!

FRIEDRICH: Lass mich das kleinste Glied ihmn nur entreissen, des Fingers Spitze, und ich schwöre dir,
Was er dir hehlt, sollst frei du vor dir seh'n, dir treu, soll nie er dir von hinnen geh'n!

ELSA: Ha, nimmermehr!

FRIEDRICH: Ich bin dir nah' zur Nacht—
Ruf'st du, ohn' Schaden ist es schnell vollbracht.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, mit wem verkehrest du?—
Zurück von ihr, Verfluchte!
Dass nie mein Auge je euch wieder bei ihr seh'!
Elsa, erhebe dich!
In deiner Hand, in deiner Treu' liegt alles Glükes Pfand, lässt nicht des Zweifels Macht dich ruh'n?
Willst du die Frage an mich thun?

well we soon shall rise, our foes with glory quelling; the secret told, he is at once overthrown.

KING AND MEN: Still rests the secret dwelling in his bosom.
Nothing he would hide his lips shall ever own.
We stand by him, all threatening danger quelling. Nobility by deeds like his is shown.

ELSA: Some dreadful ill might he incur by telling the secret which of right is his alone.
She whom he rescued, tempters base repelling, will ever let that secret rest unknown.
Still, I knew all—be still, thought repelling!
Within my heart the power of doubt I own.

KING: Whatever the traitor says, undaunted hear him.
Noblest of knights, you have no cause to fear him.

MEN: (crowding round Lohengrin). We stand by you, and be assured that we will never forget our true allegiance. Give us your hand—we cling to you forever, revere your name, although we know it not.

LOHENGRIN: This trust, my friends, you will regret it never, although you do not know my name and station.
(While Lohengrin, surrounded by the men, has retired towards the background, Frederick, unobserved, bends down to Elsa, who in her perplexity has remained in the foreground.)

FREDERICK: (secretly, to Elsa.) Confide in me—one plan that will securely give certainty, I'll tell.

ELSA: Away from me!

FREDERICK: Let him but lose the smallest limb—then surely,
Though but a finger—finger's joint it be,
All he conceals, he will confide, to you,
He ever will faithfully with you abide.

ELSA: Ha, never more!

FREDERICK: At night I shall be near, call me—it is done—you need fear no mischief.

LOHENGRIN: (suddenly comes forward). Elsa, with whom were you conversing?
(Elsa, with a look of pain, turns away from Frederick, and sinks at Lohengrin's feet.) Away from her, you traitor, and never let me behold you near my bride!
Elsa, my love, look up.
You hold no less within your grasp

ELSA: Mein Retter, der mir Heil gebracht!
Mein Held, in dem ich muss vergeh'n! Hoch über alles Zweifels Macht . . . soll meine Liebe steh'n!

LOHENGRIN: Heil dir, Elsa! nun lass voran uns geh'n!

DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN:
Seht! seht!
Er ist von Gott gesandt!
Heil ihm!
Heil Elsa von Brabant!

DER VORHANG FÄLLT.

DRITTER AUFZUG

ERSTE SCENE

(Eine einleitende Musik schildert das prächtige Rauschen des Hochzeitsfestes. Als der Vorhang aufgeht, stellt die Bühne das Brautgemach dar.)

ELSA, LOHENGRIN, DER KÖNIG, MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: (Brautlied der Männer und Frauen.)
Treulich geführt ziehet dahin, wo euch der Segen der Liebe bewahr'!
Siegreicher Muth, Minnegewinn
Eint euch durch Treue zum seligsten Paar.
Streiter der Tugend, ziehe voran!
Zierde der Jugend, schreite voran!
Rauschen des Festes seid nun entronnen, Wonne des Herzens sei euch gewonnen!
Duftender Raum, zur Liebe geschmückt Nehm' euch nun auf, dem Glanze entrückt.
Treulich geführt ziehet nun ein, wo euch der Segen der Liebe bewahr'!
Siegreicher Muth, Minne so rein than all our happiness.

To doubt's dark power are you a slave.
Do you crave to know my secret?

ELSA: My champion in the cause of right—
You whom I must call my savior—doubt may exert its utmost might, love triumphs over all.
(Falls on his bosom; organ and bells in the Minster.)

LOHENGRIN: Bless you, Elsa! now we will proceed.

ALL: Heaven does grant to us this boon.
Hail, Elsa of Brabant!
Heaven ever surely guard you—may blessing shower upon you.
Hail, Elsa of Brabant!
(The King conducts Lohengrin on his right, Elsa on his left, up the steps of the Minster. Elsa's glances fall upon Ortrud, who raises her hand with a threatening attitude. Terror-stricken, she clings to Lohengrin, and as they are about to enter the Minster the curtain falls.)

END OF THE SECOND ACT.

ACT III

SCENE I

(Introductory music expresses the merriment of the wedding festival. The curtain rising, discovers the bridal chamber. In the center of the background a richly adorned bed; by an open bay window a couch. At each side of the background are open doors. The bridal procession, accompanied by instruments and voices, enters the room in this order: at the right door the ladies enter, leading Elsa; at the left the King and nobles, leading Lohengrin, both being preceded by pages with lights. When they have reached the center of the stage, the King leads Lohengrin to Elsa. They embrace.)

MEN AND WOMEN: (Bridal Song). Guided by us—thrice happy pair—enter this chamber; love invites you.
All that is brave—all that is fair—love, now triumphant, forever unites.
Champion of virtue, boldly advance; flower of all beauty, gently advance.
Now the loud mirth of reveling is ended.
Night, bringing peace and calm bliss, has descended.
Fanned by the breath of happiness, rest, closed to the world, by love only blessed.
(Pages divest Lohengrin of his upper garment, and take off his

eint euch in Treue zum seligsten Paar.

ACHT FRAUEN: Wie Gott euch selig weihte, zu Freuden weih'n euch wir; in Liebesglück's Geleite denkt lang der Stunde hier!
(Brautlied, gesungen während des Fortgehens.)

MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Treulich bewacht bleibet zurück, wo euch der Segen der Liebe bewahr'!
Siegreicher Muth, Minne und Glück
Eint euch in Treue zum seligsten Paar.
Streiter der Tugend, bleibe daheim!
Zierde der Jugend, bleibe daheim!
Rauschen des Festes seid nun entronnen, Wonne des Herzens sei euch gewonnen!
Duftender Raum, zur Liebe geschmückt, nahm euch nun auf, dem Glanze entrückt.
Treulich bewacht bleibet zurück,
Wo euch der Segen der Liebe bewahr'!
Siegreicher Muth, Minne und Glück eint euch in Treue zum seligsten Paar.
(In immer weiterer Ferne verhallt der Gesang.)

ZWEITE SCENE

(Elsa und Lohengrin.)

LOHENGRIN: Das süsse Lied verhallt; wir sind allein, zum ersten Mal allein, seit wir uns sah'n; nun sollen wir der Welt entronnen sein, kein Lauscher dar des Herzens Grüssen nah'n.—
Elsa, mein Weib: du süsse, reine Braut!
Ob glücklich du, das sei mir nun vertraut!

ELSA: Wie wär'ich kalt, mich glüklich nur zu nennen, besitz' ich aller Himmel Seligkeit!
Fühl' ich zu dir so süss mein Hertz entbrennen, athme ich Wonnen, die nur Gott verleiht!

LOHENGRIN: Vermagst du, Holde! glücklich dich zu nennen, giebst du auch mir des Himmels Seligkeit!
Fühl' ich zu dir so süss mein Herz entbrennen, athme ich Wonnen, die nur Gott verleiht!—
Wie hehr erkenn' ich uns'rer Liebe Wesen!
Die nie sich sah'n, wir hatten uns geahnt: war ich zu deinem Streiter sword, which they lay on the couch; the ladies take off Elsa's upper garment. During the following, eight ladies walk slowly around Lohengrin and Elsa.)

EIGHT LADIES: May Heaven watch over you ever, and happy be your lot!
Oh, may this hour be never through days of joy forgot.
(The King embraces Lohengrin and Elsa. The pages give a signal for departure. The men go off to the right, the women to the left, singing as follows:)

GENERAL CHORUS: Stay alone, thrice happy pair, here in the chamber, which love gently lights.
All that is brave—all that is fair—love, now triumphant, forever unites.
Champion of virtue, here you'll remain—
Flower of all beauty, here you'll remain.
Now the loud mirth of reveling is ended.
Night, bringing peace and calm bliss, is descended.
Fanned by the breath of happiness, rest, closed to the world, by love only blessed.
(When all have left, the doors are closed from without; the song is heard in the distance.)

SCENE II

(Elsa has fallen on Lohengrin's bosom; he conducts her to the couch where they both sit.)

LOHENGRIN: The song has died away—we are alone, who never were alone since first we met.
Now the heart can own its inmost feelings, and forget that there is an outer world.
Elsa, my wife, my bride, do you repine, or are you happy that you now are mine?

ELSA: "Happy!"
That word cannot measure my transport
Unless I think of heavenly happiness!
Oh, when I look on you—my heart's own treasure—
I can feel joys that mortals never possess.

LOHENGRIN: And sure the word well can measure your transport if I partake that heavenly happiness.
Oh, when I look on you my heart's own treasure, joys can I feel that mortals never possess.
Our hearts are by some sacred power affected.
We never had met, yet each the other knew.

auserlesen, hat Liebe mir zu dir den Weg gebahnt.
Dein Auge sagte mir dich rein von Schuld, mich zwang dein Blick zu dienen deiner Huld.

ELSA: Doch ich zuvor schon hatte dich geseh'n, in sel'gem Traume warst du mir genaht: als ich nun wachend dich sah vor mir steh'n, erkannt'ich, dass du kamst auf Gottes Rath.
Da wollte ich vor deinem Blick zerfliessen, gleich einem Bach unwinden deinen Schritt, als eine Blume, duftend auf der Wiesen, wollt' ich entzückt mich beugen deinem Tritt.
Ist dies nur Liebe? Wie soll ich es nennen, dies Wort, so unaussprechlich wonne voll, Wie, ach! dein Name, den ich nie darf kennen, bei dem ich nie mein Höchstes nennen soll!

LOHENGRIN: Elsa!

ELSA: Wie süss mein Name deinem Mund entgleitet!
Gönnst du denn deinen holden Klang mir nicht?
Nur, wenn zur Liebesstille wir geleitet, Sollst du gestatten, dass mein Mund ihn spricht.

LOHENGRIN: Mein süsses Weib!

ELSA: —einsam, wenn Niemand wacht;
Nie sei der Welt er zu Gehör gebracht!

LOHENGRIN: Athmest du nicht mit mir die süssen, Düfte?
O wie so hold berauschen sie den Sinn!
Geheimnissvoll sie nahen durch die Lüfte,— fraglos geb' ihrem Zauber ich mich hin.—
So ist der Zauber, der mich dir verbunden, als ich zuerst, du Süsse, dich ersah; nicht brauchte deine Art ich zu erkunden, dich sah mein Aug' — mein Herz begriff dich, wie mir die Düfte hold den Sinn berücken, nah'n sie mir gleich aus räthselvoller Nacht:
So musste deine Reine mich entzücken, traf ich dich auch in schwerer Schuld Verdacht.

ELSA: Ach, könnt' ich deiner werth erscheinen!
Müsst' ich nicht bloss vor dir vergeh'n!
Könnt' ein Verdienst mich dir vereinen, dürft' ich in Pein für dich mich seh'n!
Wie du mich trafst vor schwerer Klage, O, wüsste ich auch dich in Noth!
Dass muthvoll ich ein Mühen trage, kennt'ich ein Sorgen, das dir droht!—
Wär' das Geheimniss so geartet, das aller Welt verschweigt dein Mund?

If I to be your champion were selected, It was love that guided me with purpose true; your eye proclaimed that you were free from guilt, your speaking glance claimed from me all homage.

ELSA: In blissful dreams one night, when sleep stole over me, I plainly saw you in my presence stand as to my waking eyes, you stood before me; thus did I know you came by God's command.
I wished your glance had melted me, that flowing, about your steps I might a streamlet wind; I wished to be a flower amid the growing green, to find only my death beneath your feet. Is this merely love?
Words can give me language,
That all its hidden sweetness will reveal?
Your name I'd gladly join with it, believe me; but you will ever conceal that from me.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa!

ELSA: How sweetly my name sounds when spoken by you,
Yet may I never hear the sound of yours!
Surely some day my fetters will be broken, your name I then shall whisper—you are mine!

LOHENGRIN: My dearest wife!

ELSA: Only when none are near—
None must the soft confession hear.

LOHENGRIN: (pointing towards the window). Do you not breathe, as I, that wealth of sweetness, where the rapt senses, drunk with pleasure, bask?
It is brought by mysterious gales in their fleetness; tasting the fragrance, I ask nothing further.
Such is the spell which has bound me to you.
Thus, when first I saw you, lovely as you are, those eyes decided—nothing could then confound me.
Your face alone at once convinced my heart,
Even as those sweet odors fire me with rapture, though through the murky shades of night they rise, so did your innocence inspire me with love, when you were crushed with heavy lies.

ELSA: Ah, worthy of you could you find me, I would gladly undergo anything.
Would some desert to me could bind you, that my devotion you could know!
From deadly perils you have freed me; ah, were you in some deep distress, though I am feeble, you might heed me, did I guess some coming danger.
What can the secret be that you may never tell its fearful import?
Perhaps some harm it would bring—oh, ever I'll guard it well

Vielleicht, dass Unheil dich erwartet, würd' es den Menschen offen kund?
O wär' es so! und dürft' ich's wissen, dürft' ich in meiner Macht es seh'n, durch Keines Droh'n sei mir's entrissen, für dich wollt' ich zum Tode geh'n!

LOHENGRIN: Geliebte!

ELSA: O mach' mich stolz durch dein Vertrauen, dass ich in Unwerth nicht vergeh'!
Lass dein Geheimniss mich erschauen, dass, wer du bist, ich offen seh'!

LOHENGRIN: Ach, schweige, Elsa!

ELSA: Meiner Treue enthülle deines Adels Werth!
Woher du kamst, sag' ohne Reue,— durch mich sei Schweigens Kraft bewährt!

LOHENGRIN: Höchstes Vertrau'n hast du mir schon zu dauken, da deinem Schwur ich Glauben gern gewährt; wirst nimmer du vor dem Gebote wanken, hoch über alle Frau'n dünkst du mich werth!—
An meine Brust, du Süsse, Reine!
Sei meines herzens Glühen nah'!
Dass mich dein Auge sanft bescheine, in dem ich all mein Glück ersah!
O, gönne mir, dass mit Entzücken ich deinen Athem sauge ein!
Lass fest, ach! fest an mich dich drücken, dass ich in dir mög' glücklich sein!
Dein Lieben muss mir hoch entgelten für das, was ich um dich verliess; kein Loos in Gottes weiten Welten wohl edler als das meine hiess'.
Böt' mir der König seine Krone, ich dürfte sie mit Recht verschmäh'n:
Das einz'ge, was mein Opfer lohne, muss ich in deiner Lieb' erseh'n!
Drum wolle stets den Zweifel meiden, dein Lieben sei mein stolz Gewähr; denn nicht komm' ich aus Nacht und Grau'n, aus Glanz und Wonne komm' ich her.

ELSA: Hilf Gott! was muss ich hören'
Welch Zeugniss gab dein Mund!
Du wolltest mich bethören,— nun wird mir Jammer kund!
Das Loos, dem du entronnen, es war dein höchstes Glück: du kamst zu mir aus Wonnen, und sehnest dich zurück!
Wie soll ich Aermste glauben, dir g'nüge meine Treu'?
Ein Tag wird dich mir rauben
Durch deiner Liebe Reu!

LOHENGRIN: Halt' ein, dich so zu quälen!

ELSA: Was quälest du mich doch?
Soll ich die Tage zählen, die du mir bliebest noch?
In Sorg' um dein Verweilen verwithin my heart.

Think not, my love, if I could share it, feeling it in my heart secure, a menace from my lips could tear it;
No!
I could endure death for you.

LOHENGRIN: Beloved!

ELSA: Oh, let me be flattered by your trust, thinking you do not spurn my love
Be all the mist that hides you scattered—yourself to know, ah, let me learn.

LOHENGRIN: Be silent, Elsa.

ELSA: Yes, confiding in me, reveal your noble self, from where have you come?
Say, hiding nothing—
These lips will ever seal with silence.

LOHENGRIN: No, Elsa, no, all confidence you owe me; unshrinking I gave credence to your vow, that question never to ask.
You know little of me, if, through a woman's words, you're wavering now.
Let me press you against my bosom, give ear to this beating heart; look fondly on me; let me bless you, all pure and gentle as you are!
Yes, when I enfold you in my arms, the breath you breathe let me taste.
Let me but feel, while still I hold you, that happiness is mine at last.
Your love will give me full recompense for all that I have left—have lost.
Let heaven bereave me of other gifts if I can boast that you are mine!
Although the King should proffer his crown, it would not repay my sacrifice, and I should rightly spurn his offer.
You, you alone are past all price, doubt must wither within your bosom, cast all dark suspicion aside.
From night and grief I did not come, I came from joy and noblest pride.

ELSA: Oh, Heaven! what have you told me?
What are you forced to own?
Your aim was to deceive me, but now the worst is known!
The joys that you have quitted you think upon with pain, you hope soon to leave me, and taste of them again.
Ah, me! how can I trust you?
You do not love me alone!
One day will take you from me—with you will all be gone.

LOHENGRIN: Do not afflict yourself like this, love.

ELSA: No, you afflict me.
The days am I to number that near me you will be?
With ceaseless growing anguish my blüht die Wange mir; dann wirst du mir enteilen, im Elend bleib' ich hier!

LOHENGRIN: Nie soll dein Reiz entschwinden, blieb'st du von Zweifel rein!

ELSA: Ach! dich an mich zu binden wie sollt' ich mächtig sein?
Voll Zauber ist dein Wesen, durch Wunder kamst du her:—
Wie sollt' ich da genesen?
Wo fand ich dein' Gewähr?—
Hörtest du nichts? vernahmst du kein Kommen?

LOHENGRIN: Elsa?

ELSA: Ach nein!—doch dort! der Schwan! der Schwan!
Dort kommt er auf der Wasserfluth geschwommen . . .
Du rufest ihm,—er zieht herbei den Kahn!—

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, halt' ein! beruh'ge deinen Wahn!

ELSA: Nichts kann mir Ruhe geben,
Dem Wahn mich nichts entreisst,
Als—gelt' es auch mein Leben!—
Zu wissen—wer du seist!

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, was willst du wagen?

ELSA: Unselig holder Mann, hör'! was ich dich muss fragen!
Den Namen sag' mir an!

LOHENGRIN: Halt' ein!

ELSA: Woher die Fahrt?

LOHENGRIN: Weh' dir!

ELSA: Wie deine Art?

LOHENGRIN: Weh' uns, was thatest du!
(Freidrich und die vier brabantischen Edlen brechen mit gezücktem Schwerte herein.)

ELSA: Rette dich! dein Schwert! dein Schwert!
(Lohengrin streckt Friedrich, da er nach ihm ausholt, mit einem Streiche todt zu Boden. Den entsetzten Edlen entfallen die Schwerter, sie stürzen zu Lohengrins Füssen auf die Kniee.)

LOHENGRIN: Weh'! nun ist all unser Glück dahin!

ELSA: Allewiger! erbarm' dich mein!

LOHENGRIN: Tragt den Erschlag'nen vor des Königs Gericht!
(Die Edlen nehmen Friedrichs Leiche auf und entfernen sich mit ihr. Lohengrin läutet an einem Glockenzuge: vier Frauen treten ein.)

cheek will fade away; then, ruthless, you will leave me in sorrow to decay.

LOHENGRIN: Your charms will never fade, love, while you from doubt are pure.

ELSA: No chains have I to bind you, to hold you mine secure.
There's magic in your presence—through magic are you here.
Ah, nothing can quell my sorrow!
What torment must I fear!
(Suddenly stricken with terror.)
Do you hear nothing?
My senses do not wander.

LOHENGRIN: Elsa!

ELSA: It is nothing; but there I see the swan—I see him floating on the waters yonder.
You called him—he brings the boat to you!—

LOHENGRIN: Elsa, free your mind from those strange fancies.

ELSA: No, nothing can cure this madness—
Nothing cheer this bursting heart—
Nothing till, though life it cost me, you tell me who you are.

LOHENGRIN: Nay, Elsa, I implore you—

ELSA: Oh, madness! oh, despair!
You whom I love too fondly, your name at once declare.

LOHENGRIN: Wait!

ELSA: From where have you come?

LOHENGRIN: Ah, me!

ELSA: Where is your home?

LOHENGRIN: Ah, me! What have you done?
(Elsa, who stands before Lohengrin, sees through the door Frederick and the four Brabant nobles, as they burst in with drawn swords.)

ELSA: (shrieks). Save yourself—the sword—the sword!
(She has hurriedly handed the sword to Lohengrin, who quickly draws it, and with one blow strikes Frederick lifeless to the ground. The four nobles kneel to Lohengrin in turn. Elsa falls senseless.)

LOHENGRIN: Despair! now all our happiness is fled.
(Raises Elsa and places her gently on the couch.)

ELSA: (faintly). Oh, mighty Heaven! Oh, pity me!
(Day gradually dawns. At a sign from Lohengrin, the nobles rise.)

LOHENGRIN: Lift up the corpse, and bear it to the King.
(The nobles raise Frederick's body and take it off through a door. Lohengrin rings a bell. Four ladies enter.)
Before the King prepare to take her,

Sie vor den König zu geleiten, schmückt Elsa, meine süsse Frau!
Dort will ich Antwort ihr bereiten,
Dass sie des Gatten Art erschau'.
(Er entfernt sich, Die Frauen, geleiten Elsa ab.)
(Ein zusammenfallender Vorhang schliesst im Vordergrunde die ganze Scene. Wie aus dem Burghofe herauf hört man Heerhörner einen Aufruf blasen.)

DRITTE SCENE

(Als der Vorhang in die Höhe gezogen wird, stellt die Bühne wieder die Aue am Ufer der Schelde, wie im ersten Aufzuge, dar. Von verschiedenen Seiten gelangt nach und nach der brabantische Heerbann auf die Scene. Als die Brabanter alle eingetroffen sind, zieht König Heinrich mit seinem Heerbann ein.)

DIE BRABANTER: Hoch König Heinrich!
König Heinrich Heil!

DER KÖNIG: Habt Dank, ihr Lieben von Brabant!
Wie fühl' ich stolz mein Herz entbrannt, find' ich in jedem deutschen Land so kräftig reichen Heerverband!
Nun soll des Reiches Feind sich nah'n, wir wollen tapfer ihn empfahn: aus seinem öden Ost daher soll er sich nimmer wagen mehr!
Für deutsches Land das deutsche Schwert!
So sei des Reiches Kraft bewährt!

ALLE MÄNNER: Für deutsches Land das deutsche Schwert!
So sei des Reiches Kraft bewährt!

KÖNIG: Wo weilt nun der, den Gott gesandt zum Ruhm, zur Grösse von Brabant?
(Die vier brabantischen Edlen bringen auf einer Bahre Friedrichs verhüllte Leiche getragen und setzen sie in der Mitte der Bühne nieder.)

ALLE: Was bringen die? was thun sie kund?
Die Mannen sind's des Telramund.

KÖNIG: Wen führt ihr her? was soll ich schau'n?
Mich fasst bei eurem Anblick Grau'n!

DIE VIER EDLEN: So will's der Schützer von Brabant: wer dieser ist, macht er bekannt.
(Elsa, mit Gefolge von Frauen, tritt auf.)

let her wear her choicest garments,
I will make her some fitting answer,
and let her know the rank I bear.
(Exit sorrowfully through a door to the right).

SCENE III

(A pair of curtains falling, the whole stage concealed. The sound of horns is heard. When the curtains are withdrawn, the plain of the Scheldt is seen as in the First Act. The Brabant army enters on both sides, each division led by a Count, whose standard-bearer plants his banner in the ground. Around these banners the adherents of the several leaders assemble. Boys bear the shields and spears of the Counts, squires lead the horses aside. When all the Brabant force has arrived, the King enters with the Saxons and Thuringians.)

MEN OF BRABANT: (saluting the king). Hail! hail, King Henry, hail!

KING: (starting under the oak).
Good subjects of Brabant, it is well;
I feel my bosom swell with pride.
May I in every German land
Find such a true and loyal band.
Now let the enemy appear.
We're well prepared to see him near.
Henceforward, from his desert plain will he not think to stir again.
The German sword for German land!
Thus will the realm in safety stand.

ALL THE MEN: The German sword, etc.

KING: Where does he linger whom God grants a boon of glory to Brabant?
(The four nobles bring Frederick's body covered over on a bier, which they set down in the center. All look anxiously.)

CHORUS: (Men). What bring they here?
What would they say?
They are the men of Telramund.

KING: What must I see?
Whom do you bring here?
Your look forebodes some evil near.

FOUR NOBLES: Brabant's new lord will have it so. Him whom we bear you soon will know.
(Elsa, followed by a long train of ladies, advances with tottering steps to the foreground.)

DIE MÄNNER: Seht! Elsa naht, die tugendreiche!
Wie ist ihr Antlitz trüb' und bleiche!

DER KÖNIG: Wie soll ich dich so traurig seh'n!
Muss dir so nah' die Trennung geh'n?

STIMMEN: Macht Platz dem Helden von Brabant!

ALLE MÄNNER: Heil!
Heil dem Helden von Brabant!
(Lohengrin ist aufgetreten.)

KÖNIG: Heil deinem Kommen, theurer Held!
Die du so treulich riefst in's Feld, die harren dein in Streites Lust, von dir geführt des Sieg's bewusst.

DIE BRABANTER: Wir harren dein in Streites Lust, von dir geführt, des Sieg's bewusst.

LOHENGRIN: Mein Herr und König, lass dir melden, die ich berief, die kühnen Helden, zum Streit sie führen darf ich nicht!

ALLE MÄNNER: Hilf Gott! welch' hartes Wort er spricht!

LOHENGRIN: Als Streitgenoss bin nicht ich hergekommen, als Kläger sei ich jetzt von euch vernommen! Zum ersten klage laut ich vor euch Allen, und frag' um Spruch nach Recht und Fug:
Da dieser Mann mich nächtens überfallen, sagt, ob ich ihn mit Recht erschlug?

DER KÖNIG UND ALLE MÄNNER: Wie deine Hand ihn schlug auf Erden, soll dort ihm Gottes Strafe werden!

LOHENGRIN: Zum and'ren aber sollt ihr Klage hören: denn aller Welt nun klag' ich laut, dass zum Verrath an mir sich liess bethören die Frau, die Gott mir angetraut.

ALLE MÄNNER: Elsa! wie mochte das gescheh'n. Wie konntest so du dich vergeh'n.

LOHENGRIN: Ihr hörtet Alle, wie sie mir versprochen, dass nie sie wollt' erfragen wer ich bin? Nun hat sie ihren theuren Schwur gebrochen, treulosem Rath gab sie ihr Herz dahin zu lohnen ihres Zweifels wildem Fragen sei nun die Antwort länger nicht gespart:
Des Feindes Drängen durft' ich sie versagen, nun muss ich künden, wie mein Nam' und Art.
Jetzt merket wohl, ob ich den Tag muss scheuen: Vor aller Welt, vor König und vor Reich Enthülle mein Geheimniss ich in Treuen. So hört,

ALL THE MEN: See, Elsa comes—that lady peerless, surely her face is pale and cheerless.

KING: (meeting Elsa, leads her to a high seat opposite his own).
From where comes that heavy, mournful look?
Cannot bear the hour of parting?
(Elsa cannot look at him.)

VOICES: Make way, make way—the hero of Brabant!

ALL: Hail! the hero of Brabant.
(The King has resumed his seat beneath the oak, Lohengrin enters, armed as in the First Act, with a solemn mournful air.)

KING: Hail! hail! we bid you welcome all; those whom you did to battle call wait here with anxious hearts for you, they know you lead to victory.

ALL THE MEN: We wait with anxious hearts for you we know you lead to victory.

LONHENGRIN: My King and master, though so gladly I summoned them, I tell you sadly, this force I may not—cannot lead.

ALL THE MEN: Oh! Heaven! We hear sad words indeed.

LONHENGRIN: As your ally I have not come before you, as judges now to hear me, I implore you, so, firstly, say, am I exempted from crime?
I claim your sentence as my due.
This man, by night, attempted to take my life; say whether I rightly slew him.
(Uncovers the body, from which all turn with abhorrence.)

KING AND MEN: Even as your hand on earth did smite him, will Heaven for evil deeds requite him.

LONHENGRIN: One other wrong remains yet to be righted.
The truth before the world I speak.
She whom in wedlock Heaven to me has plighted—
My wife, was lured to break her vow.

KING AND MEN: Elsa, what have you done wrong?
Elsa, this is a heavy charge.

LONHENGRIN: You heard her promise—plainly was it spoken; her vow—that she would never ask my name.
Know, then, that sacred promise has been broken.
She yielded when a wily tempter came; her mad suspicion now shall be rewarded.
I'll wait no more to give an answer; the menace of a foe I disregarded; but now my name and station I declare.
I deem not shrink, stealing, from broadest daylight, before the ob ich an Adel euch nicht gleich!

ALLE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN:
Welch' Unerhörtes muss ich nun erfahren!
O könnt'er die erzwung'ne Kunde ersparen!

LOHENGRIN: In fernem Land, unnahber euren Schritten, liegt eine Burg, die Monsalvat genannt; ein lichter Tempel stehet dort in Mitten, so kostbar, wie auf Erden nichts bekannt:
Drim ein Gefäss von wunderthät'gem Segen wird dort als höchstes Heiligthum bewacht, es ward, dass sein der Menschen reinste pflegen, herab von einer Engelschaar gebracht.
Alljährlich naht vom Himmel eine Taube, um neu zu stärken seine Wunderkraft:
Es heisst der Gral, und selig reinster Glaube ertheilt durch ihn sich seiner Ritterschaft.
Wer nun dem Gral zu dienen ist erkoren, den rüstet er mit überird'scher Macht: an dem ist jedes Bösen Trug verloren, wenn ihn er ersieht, weicht dem des Todes Nacht.
Selbst wer von ihm in ferne Land' entsendet, zum Streiter für der Tugend Recht ernannt, dem wird nicht seine heil'ge Kraft entwendet, bleibt als sein Ritter dort er unerkannt:
So hehrer Art doch ist des Grales Segen, enthüllt—muss er des Laien Auge flieh'n; des Ritters drum sollt Zweifel ihr nicht hegen, erkennt ihr ihn, dann muss er von euch zieh'n.
Nun hört, wie ich verbot'ner Frage lohne!
Vom Gral ward ich zu euch daher gesandt: mein Vater Parzival trägt seine Krone, sein Ritter ich—bin Lohengrin genannt.

ALLE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN:
Hör' ich so seine höchste Art bewähren, entbrennt mein Aug' in heil'gen Wonnezähren.

ELSA: Mir schwankt der Boden! welche Nacht!
O Luft! Luft der Unglücksel'gen!

LOHENGRIN: O Elsa! was hast du mir angethan?
Als meine Augen dich zuerst ersah'n, zu dir fühlt' ich in Liebe mich entbrannt, und schnell hatt' ich ein neues Glück erkannt:
Die hehre Macht, die Wunder meiner Art, die Kraft, die mein Geheimniss mir bewahrt, wollt' ich dem Dienst des reinsten Herzens weih'n:—

King—before you all I stand, the secret I so long have kept, revealing. Hear then! Is one above me in the land?

KING AND OTHERS: What wondrous secret in his heart is hidden? If only to reveal it never he had been bidden.

LONHENGRIN: On distant shores, which you will never visit, rises Mount Monsalvat as on a throne; there stands a temple, which is bright forever; as glorious, nothing on earth was ever known. In this a vessel, wondrous powers possessing, is kept, a treasure precious beyond cost.
That men, unstained, may guard it as a blessing, it was brought to earth by an angelic host.
Once every year a dove, descending from heaven, settles, and thus its marvelous strength renews.
It is called the "Grail."
This, to its voteries lending its virtue, does through them pure faith diffuse.
He whom the Grail to be its servant chooses, it ever arms with more than earthly might.
Opposed to him, deceit its magic loses; his piercing glance can scatter shades of night.
Through distant countries still in his possession, the chosen one retains his matchless power.
For innocence to fight against oppression tarries he, while his name remains unknown.
The Grail is in its essence pure and holy, and from all common eyes must be concealed; to doubt its strength is arrogance and folly.
Its champions leave, if once their name's revealed, now hear.
The chosen one suspicion scorns.
Sent here by the Holy Grail, I came, its knight;—my father now its crown adorns Great Percival—and Lohengrin's my name.

KING AND OTHERS: Wondrous secret!
His sacred mission knowing, I feel my eyes with holy joy overflowing.

ELSA: The ground is rocking; it is night.
Give aid to me, unhappy!
(She nearly falls. Lohengrin catches her in his arms.)

LONHENGRIN: Oh, Elsa, hapless Elsa!—what have I done?
When first your face had shone, before my glance, I felt how love for you grew within me; I felt a happiness I never knew.
The wondrous power which lives, in my order, the strength which to my arm my secret gives, on one pure heart I purposed to bestow—
Why—why did you strive to know

Was rissest du nun mein Geheimniss ein?
Jetzt muss ich, ach! von dir geschieden sein!

DER KÖNIG. ALLE MÄNNER:
Weh'! Wehe! musst du von uns zieh'n?
Du hehrer, gottgesandter Mann!
Soll uns des Himmels Segen flieh'n,
Wo fänden dein wir Tröstung dann?

ELSA: Mein Gatte! nein! ich lass' dich nicht von hinnen!
Als Zeuge meiner Busse bleibe hier!
Nicht darfst du meiner bitt'ren Reu' entrinnen; dass du mich züchtigst, liege ich vor dir!

LOHENGRIN: Ich muss! Ich muss! ich muss, mein süsses Weib!
Schon zürnt der Gral, dass ich ihm ferne bleib'!

ELSA: Bist du so göttlich, als ich dich erkannt, sei Gottes Gnade nicht aus dir verbannt!
Büsst sie in Jammer ihre schwere Schuld, nicht flieh' die Aermste deiner Nähe Huld!
Verstoss mich nicht, wie gross auch mein Verbrechen!

LOHENGRIN: Nur eine Strafe giebt's für dein Vergehen! Ach, mich wie dich trifft herbe Pein!
Getrennt, geschieden sollen wir uns sehen, dies muss die Strafe, dies die Busse sein!

DER KÖNIG UND DIE EDLEN: O bleib'! O zieh' uns nicht von dannen!
Des Führers harren deine Mannen.

LOHENGRIN: O König, hör'! ich darf dich nicht geleiten!
Des Grales Ritter, habt ihr ihn erkannt, wollt' er in Ungehorsam mit euch streiten, ihm wäre jede Manneskraft entwandt!
Doch, grosser König! lass mich dir weissagen: dir Reinem ist ein grosser Sieg verlieh'n!
Nach Deutschland sollen noch in fernsten Tagen des Ostens Horden siegreich niemals zieh'n!
(Vom Hintergrunde her verbreitet sich der Ruf: Der Schwan! der Schwan! Man sieht auf dem Flusse den Schwan mit dem Nachen anlangen.)

DIE MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Der Schwan! der Schwan!
Seht dort ihn wieder nah'n!

ELSA: Entsetzlich! ha! der Schwan! der Schwan!

LOHENGRIN: Schon sendet nach dem Säumigen der Gral.—
Mein lieber Schwan!
Ach! diese letzte, traurige Fahrt, wie gern hätt' ich sie dir gespart!
In einem Jahr, wenn deine Zeit im Dienst zu Ende sollte geh'n,—dann durch des Grales Macht befreit, my secret?

Oh, now I must forever go from you.

KING AND ALL THE MEN: Woe—woe! from us must you be torn—you for our chief by Heaven designed?
Heaven's blessing will with be borne.
What consolation can we find?

ELSA: Forever will I cling—I will not leave you; to witness my contrition, tarry here.
Think not with false repentance I deceive you; on me inflict a punishment severe.

LONHENGRIN: My wife, my love, no longer plead in vain; the Grail is angered that I so long remain.

ELSA: Your nature is divine—I know it well; therefore within your heart must mercy dwell, if every sin through penitence is less.
Oh, with your presence now the culprit bless.
My crime was great, yet leave me not thus lonely.

LONHENGRIN: The crime you only dared to perpetrate; but I must share the punishment with you.
Although we shall be separate, still shall each the other see.
(Elsa falls with a shriek to the ground.)

KING AND NOBLE MEN: (surrounding Lohengrin). Oh, stay!
Your men implore; in mercy heed them.
They beg you will lead them to victory.

LONHENGRIN: No, hear me, King;
I'm forbidden to aid you,
Champions of the Grail can never act in disobedience.
Their names no longer hidden, gone is their strength and surely they must fail.
Still let me tell you what my soul presages: Henry, you hold victory in your hand!
The Eastern hordes, even in remotest ages, shall never be conquerors in the German land.
(The swan appears with the boat.)

VOICES: The swan—the swan again!
The swan, I see it plain!

ELSA: Oh, heavens!
Oh, the swan!

LONHENGRIN: Too long I tarry—the Grail has sent for me. (Goes to the brook.)
Beloved swan!
Ah! You have brought mournful tidings.
Never I thought to see you so soon.
After a year slowly has past—wollt' ich dich anders wieder seh'n!—

O Elsa! nur ein Jahr an deiner Seite hätt' ich als Zeuge deines Glücks ersehnt!
Dann kehrte, selig in des Grals Geleite, dein Bruder wieder, den du tot gewähnt.—
Kommt er dann heim, wenn ich ihm fern im Leben, dies Horn, dies Schwert, den Ring sollst du ihm geben!
Dies Horn soll in Gefahr ihm Hülfe schenken, in wildem Kampf dies Schwert ihm Sieg verleiht:
Doch bei dem Ringe soll er mein gedenken, der einstens dich aus Schmach und Noth befreit!
Leb' wohl! leb' wohl! leb' wohl! mein süsses Weib!
Leb' wohl! mir zürnt der Gral, wenn ich noch bleib'.

KÖNIG, MÄNNER UND FRAUEN: Weh'! weh'! du edler holder Mann!
Welch' herbe Noth thust du uns an!
(Ortrud tritt auf.)

ORTRUD: Fahr' heim! fahr' heim, du stolzer Helde!
Dass jubelnd ich der Thörin melde,
Wer dich gezogen in dem Kahn!
Das Kettlein hab' ich wohl erkannt,
Mit dem das Kind ich schuf zum Schwan:
Das war der Erbe von Brabant!

ALLE: Ha!

The period of your slavery— then by the Grail released at last, I hoped my swan again to see.
(Turns mournfully to Elsa.) Oh, Elsa, till a single year had ended,
Had I remained, your joy I should have seen, then your lost brother, by the Grail defended, to you yet living would have been restored.
If he returns, you will receive him alone. This sword—this horn — this ring—rare presents give him.
His arm will conquer when the sword he raises; the horn will aid him in an hour of need.
As for the ring, whenever he gazes on it he'll think on one who freed you from danger.
Farewell—farewell—I must away!
Farewell—the Grail forbids my stay.
(Elsa clasps him convulsively, till at last, her strength failing, she sinks into the arms of her ladies, to whom Lohengrin confides her. He then approaches the river.)

KING AND CHORUS: Woe—woe! of knights the best—the chief, how do you melt our hearts with grief!
(Ortrud, coming to foreground, stands before Elsa, exulting.)

ORTRUD: Go home—go home— in all your glory; I'll tell your bride a wondrous story.
Who drew you in the boat here?
That chain, attached by me with care—that chain, which at a glance I knew, changed this Dukedom's heir to a swan.
Hence by the swan your knight is carried.

ALL: Ha!

ORTRUD: Dank, dass den Ritter du vertrieben!
Nun giebt der Schwan ihm Heimgeleit: der Held, wär' länger er geblieben, den Bruder Hätt' er auch befreit.

ALLE: Abscheulich' Weib! ha, welch' Verbrechen
Hast du in frechem Hohn bekannt!

ORTRUD: Erfahrt, wie sich die Götter rächen, von deren Huld ihr euch gewandt!
(Lohengrin senkt sich, dicht am Strande, zu einem stummen Gebete feierlich auf die Kniee. Plötzlich erblickt er eine weisse Taube sich über dem Nachen, senken: mit lebhafter Freude springt er auf und löst dem Schwane die Kette, worauf dieser sogleich untertaucht: an seiner Stelle erscheint ein Jüngling—Gottfried.)

LOHENGRIN: Seht da den Herzog von Brabant!
Zum Führer sei er euch ernannt!
(Er springt schnell in den Nachen, welchen die Taube an der Kette fasst und sogleich fortführt.—Gottfried ist nach vorn geschritten. Alle brabantischen Edlen senken sich vor ihm auf die Kniee.—)

ELSA: Mein Gatte!
Mein Gatte!
(Sie erblickt Lohnengrin bereits in der Ferne, von der Taube im Nachen gezogen. Alles bricht bei diesem Anblicke in einen jähen Wehruf aus. Elsa gleitet in Gottfrieds Armen entseelt langsam zu Boden.)

DER VORHANG FÄLLT.

ORTRUD: Thanks, you have served me well indeed. The knight, if longer he had tarried, your brother from the spell would have freed.

CHORUS: Base sorceress, with exultation, can you confess a crime so vile?

ORTRUD: The ancient gods, with indignation, thus punish human faithlessness.
(Lohengrin, about to enter the boat, has stopped at the sound of Ortrud's voice, and listens attentively. He now falls on his knees and prays in silence. Suddenly a white dove descends over the boat. Lohengrin arises enraptured, and takes the chain from the swan, which sinks. In its place appears the youth Godfrey.)

LONHENGRIN: Accept the boon which Heaven grants—the Duke, the ruler of Brabant!
(He springs rapidly into the boat, which the dove draws off by the chain. Ortrud, at the sight of Godfrey, falls with a shriek. Elsa looks with rapture on her brother, who advances and makes obeisance to the King. All the nobles of Brabant kneel before him. Elsa again looks towards the river.)

ELSA: My husband!
My husband!
(Lohengrin is seen in the distance. All utter a wail of lamentation. Elsa, in Godfrey's arms sinks lifeless to the ground. Curtain falls.)

THE END.

Tristan und Isolde (1865)

MUSIC & LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act music drama, set to a libretto by the composer, premiered at the Hoftheater in Munich on June 10, 1865. The story begins in Isolde's tent, which is on the deck of Tristan's ship. He is sailing from Ireland to Cornwall to escort Isolde, daughter of the king of Ireland, to marry King Marke of Cornwall, Tristan's uncle. Isolde orders Brangaene, her attendant, to bring Tristan to her in order to renew the act of homage he paid before they set sail. Kurwenal, Tristan's loyal groom, is amused and says that Tristan would pay no homage as he killed Morold, the man Isolde loved. Isolde is angry and tells Brangaene how she once spared Tristan's life. Isolde once healed the wounds of a man who gave his name as Tantris. The splinter from Morold's wound matched his sword, and thus she discovered that Tantris was in fact Tristan, the man who killed her lover and sent her his severed head. She was about to kill Tristan to avenge Morold's death, but his pleading look stopped her. She cured him with her magic potions and said nothing. Once he fully recovered, he left with the promise never to see her again. He did not keep his promise, and he came back to ask the King of Cornwall for permission to marry her. She loves him but feels he has betrayed her; she decides that they will both take poison and die. Kurwenal declares that they are near to the coast of Cornwall. He brings Tristan to her, and she tells Tristan that he is a coward, declaring she healed him only to seek her revenge once he was fully restored to health. Tristan offers his sword in order for her to kill him, but she instead suggests that they share a drink together. He knows that this drink will contain poison but agrees. They drink together, but Brangaene has used a love potion instead of poison, and they come together passionately as the ship reaches Cornwall. At King Marke's castle, Isolde, now married to the King, waits for Tristan to come with Brangaene. Tristan's signal to approach safely is the torch by her door being extinguished. Brangaene thinks that Melot, King Marke's knight, is up to something, and Isolde herself puts out the lamp. The lovers throw themselves into each other's arms and sing to the night, protector of their love. Brangaene keeps watch for them at the top of a tower and warns them of the impending dawn, but they ignore the warning. She screams, and Kurwenal rushes in to warn Tristan that a hunting party, led by the King, is approaching. Melot in fact arranged this hunt as part of his plan to entrap Tristan and Isolde. The King reproaches them, and she promises her lover that she will follow him wherever he goes. Melot then wounds Tristan. Kurwenal guards Tristan at his castle at Kareol in Brittany. A shepherd' s lament mourns that no ship has been seen yet. Tristan awakens, curses the light and that Isolde has chosen to stay where the light remains, and collapses once again. The shepherd's pipes announce that Isolde's ship has finally arrived. Tristan rips off the bandages covering his wound and rises to meet her in rapture. He dies as she enfolds him in her arms. King Marke and Melot arrive on another ship. Kurwenal kills Melot and is also fatally wounded, dying alongside Tristan. King Marke had come to grant pardon to the lovers as he found out about Brangaene' s deception, but it is too late. Isolde sings the famous Liebestod in mourning for her lover and collapses in death upon his lifeless corpse.

■ ERSTE AKT

(Zeltartiges Gemach auf dem Vorderdeck eines Seeschiffes, reich mit Teppichen behangen, beim Beginn nach dem Hintergrunde zu gänzlich geschlossen; zur Seite führt eine schmale Treppe in den Schiffsraum hinab.)

ERSTE SCENE

(Isolde auf einem Ruhebett, das Gesicht in die Kissen gedrükt.—Brangaena, einen Teppich zurückgeschlagen haltend, blickt zur Seite über Bord.)

STIMME EINES JUNGEN SEEMANNES (aus der Höhe, wie vom Maste her, vernehmbar).

Westwärts
schweift der Blick,

■ ACT I

(A pavilion erected on the deck of a ship, richly hung with tapestry, quite closed in at back at first. A narrow hatchway at one side leads below into the cabin.)

SCENE I

(Isolda on a couch, her face buried in the cushions.—Brangaena holding open a curtain, looks over the side of the vessel.)

THE VOICE OF A YOUNG SAILOR (from above as if at the masthead).

Westward
surges slip,

Ostwärts streicht das Schiff.
Frisch weht der Wind
der Heimath zu:—
mein Irische Kind,
wo weilest du?
Sind's deiner Seufzer Wehen,
die mir die Segel blähen?
Wehe, wehe, du Wind!
Weh, ach, wehe, mein Kind!
Irische Maid, du wilde, minige
Maid.

ISOLDE: (jäh auffahrend). Wer
wagt mich zu höhnen?—
(Sie blickt verstört um sich.)
Brangäne, du?—
Sag', wo sind wir?

BRANGAENE: (an der Öffnung).
Blaue Streifen
stiegen im Westen auf;
sanft und schnell
segelt das Schiff;
auf ruhiger See vor Abend
erreichen wir sicher das Land.

Eastward speeds the ship.
The wind so wild
blows homeward now;
my Irish child,
where do you wait?
Say, must our sails be weighed,
Filled by your sighs unabated?
Waft us, wind strong and wild!
Woe ah, woe for my child!
O Irish maid!
my winsome, marvellous maid!

ISOLDA: (starting up suddenly).
What wight dares insult me?
(she looks around in agitation.)
Brangaena, ho!
Say, where do we sail?

BRANGAENA: (at the opening).
Bluish stripes are stretching along the west; swiftly sails
the ship to shore;
if restful the sea by evening
we shall readily set foot on land.

ISOLDE: Welches Land?

BRANGAENE: Kornwalls grünen Strand.

ISOLDE: Nimmermehr!
Nicht heut', nicht morgen!

BRANGAENE: Was hör' ich? Herrin! Ha!
(Lässt den Vorhang zufallen, und eilt bestürzt zu Isolde.)

ISOLDE: (wild vor sich hin). Entartet' Geschlecht, unwerth der Ahnen!
Wohin, Mutter,
vergabst du die Macht,
über Meer und Sturm zu gebieten?
O zahme Kunst
der Zauberin,
die nur Balsamtränke noch brau't!
Erwache mir wieder,
kühne Gewalt,
herauf aus dem Busen,
wo du dich barg'st!
Hört meinen Willen,
zagende Winde!
Heran zu Kampf
und Wettergetös', zu tobender Stürme
wüthendem Wirbel!
Treibt aus dem Schlaf
dies träumende Meer, weckt aus dem Grund
seine grollende Gier;
zeigt ihm die Beute,
die ich ihm biete;
zerschlag' es, dies trotzige Schiff,
des zerschellten Trümmer verschling's!
Und was auf ihm lebt,
den wehenden Athem,
den lass' ich euch Winden zum Lohn!

BRANGAENE: (im äussersten Schreck, um Isolde sich bemühend). O weh'!
Ach! Ach!
Des Übels, das ich geahnt!—
Isolde! Herrin!
Theures Herz!
Was barg'st du mir so lang?
Nicht eine Thräne
weintest du Vater und Mutter;
kaum einen Gruss
den Bleibenden botest du:
von der Heimath scheidend
kalt und stumm,
bleich und schweigend
auf der Fahrt,
ohne Nahrung,
ohne Schlaf,
starr und elend,
wild verstört,— wie ertrugs ich's
so dich sehend,
nichts dir mehr zu sein,
fremd vor dir zu steh'n?
O, nun melde
was dich müh't!
Sage, künde
was dich quält.
Herrin Isolde,
trauteste Holde!
soll sie werth sich dir wähnen,
vertraue nun Brangänen!

ISOLDA: What land?

BRANGAENA: Cornwall's verdant strand.

ISOLDA: Never more!
Today nor tomorrow!

BRANGAENA: What do you mean, mistress? say!
(she lets the curtain fall and hastens to Isolda.)

ISOLDA: (with wild gaze). A fainthearted child, false to your fathers!
Ah, where, mother,
has given your might
that commands the wave and the tempest?
O subtle art
of sorcery,
for mere leech-craft followed too long!
Awake in me once more,
power of will!
Arise from your hiding
within my breast!
Hark to my bidding,
fluttering breezes!
Arise and storm
in boisterous strife!
With furious rage
and hurricane's hurdle waken the sea
from slumbering calm;
rouse up the deep
to its devilish deeds!
Show it the prey
which gladly I proffer!
Let it shatter this too daring ship and enshrine in ocean each shred!
And woe to the lives!
Their wavering death-sighs
I leave to you winds, as your lot.

BRANGAENA: (in extreme alarm and concern for Isolda). Out, alas!
Ah, woe!
I've ever dreaded some ill!—
Isolda! mistress!
Heart of mine!
What secret do you hide?
Without a tear,
You've left your father and mother, and gave scarce a word
of farewell to friends, leaving home you stood cold and still!
pale and speechless
on the way,
rejecting food,
bereft of sleep,
stern and wretched,
wild, disturbed;
how it pains me
so to see you!
We seem friends no more,
being estranged.
Make me partner
in your pain!
Tell me freely
all your fears!
Lady, you hear,
sweetest and dearest;
if you take me for a true friend,
O make me your confidant!

ISOLDE: Luft! Luft!
Mir erstickt das Herz!
Öffne! Öffne dort weit!
(Brangaene zieht eilig die Vorhänge in der Mitte auseinander.)

ZWEITE SCENE

(Man blickt dem Schiff entlang bis zum Steuerbord, über dem Bord hinaus auf das Meer und den Horizont. Um den Hauptmast in der Mitte ist Seevolk, mit Tauen beschäftigt, gelagert; über sie hinaus gewahrt man am Steuerbord Ritter und Knappen, ebenfalls gelagert; von ihnen etwas entfernt Tristan, mit verschränkten Armen stehend, und sinnend in das Meer blickend; zu Füssen ihm, nachlässig ausgestreckt Kurwenal.—Vom Maste her, aus der Höhe, vernimmt man wieder den Gesang des Jungen Seemanns.)

DER JUNGE SEEMAN: (Auf dem Maste, unsichtbar). Frisch weht der Wind
der Heimath zu:—
mein Irische Kind,
mein Irische Kind,
wo weilest du?
Sind's deiner Seufzer Wehen,
die mir die Segel blähen?—
Wehe! Wehe, du Wind
Weh'! Ach wehe, mein Kind!

ISOLDE: (deren Blick sogleich Tristan fand, und starr auf ihm geheftet bleibt, dumpf für sich).
Mir erkoren.—
mir verloren.—
hehr und heil
kühn und feig—;
Todgeweihtes Haupt!
Todgeweihtes Herz!—
(unheimlich lachend)
Was hälst von dem Knechte?

BRANGAENE: (ihrem Blicke folgend). Wen meinst du?

ISOLDE: Dort den Helden,
Der meinem Blick
den seinen birgt,
in Scham und Scheue abwärts schaut:—
sag', wie dünkt er dich!

BRANGAENE: Frägst du nach Tristan, theure Frau, dem Wunder aller Reiche,
dem hochgepries'nen Mann,
dem Helden ohne Gleiche,
des Ruhmes Hört und Bann?

ISOLDE: (sie verhöhnend). Der zagend vor dem Streiche sich flüchtet wo er kann, weil eine Braut er als Leiche für seinen Herrn gewann!—
Dünkst es dich dunkel,
mein Gedicht?
Frag' ihn denn selbst,
den freien Mann,
ob mir zu nah'n er wagt?
Der Ehren Gruss
und zücht'ge Acht

ISOLDA: Air! air!
or my heart will choke!
Open! open there wide!
(Brangaena hastily draws the center curtains apart.)

SCENE II

(The whole length of the ship is now seen, down to the stern, with the sea and horizon beyond. Round the mainmast sailors are ensconced, busied with ropes; beyond them in the stern are groups of knights and attendants, also seated; a little apart stands Tristan folding his arms and thoughtfully gazing out to sea; at his feet Kurvenal reclines carelessly. From the mast-head above is once more heard the voice of the Young Sailor.)

THE YOUNG SAILOR: (at the mast-head invisible). The wind so wild blows homewards now;
my Irish child,
where do you wait?
Say, must our sails be weighed,
filled by your sighs unabated?
Waft us, wind strong and wild!
Woe, ah woe for my child!

ISOLDA: (whose eyes have at once sought Tristan and fixed stonily on him—gloomily). Once beloved—now removed—brave and bright, coward knight!—
Death-devoted head!
Death-devoted heart!—
(laughing unnaturally)
Do you think highly of this knight?

BRANGAENA: (following her glance). Who do you mean?

ISOLDA: There, that hero who from my eyes
averts his own:
in shrinking shame
he shuns my gaze
Say, how hold you him?

BRANGAENA: Mean you Sir Tristan, lady mine?
Extolled by every nation,
his happy country's pride,
the hero of creation,— whose fame's so high and wide?

ISOLDA: (jeeringly). In shrinking trepidation his shame he seeks to hide,
While to the king, his relation.
he brings the corpse-like bride!—
Seems it so senseless
what I say?
Go ask him,
our gracious host,
dare he approach my side?
No courteous heed or loyal care does

vergisst der Herrin
der zage Held,
dass ihr Blick ihn nur nicht erreiche—
den Kühnen ohne Gleiche!
O, er weiss
wohl warum!—
Zu dem Stolzen geh', meld' ihm der Herrin Wort:
meinem Dienst bereit
schleunig soll er mir nah'n.

BRANGAENE: Soll ich ihn bitten, dich zu grüssen?

ISOLDE: Befehlen liess'
dem Eigenholde
Furcht der Herrin
ich, Isolde.
(Auf Isolde's gebieterischen Wink entfernt sich Brangaene, und schreitet das Deck entlang dem Steuerbord zu, an den arbeitenden Seeleuten vorbei. Isolde, mit starrem Blicke ihr folgend, zieht sich rücklings nach dem Ruhebett zurück, wo sie während des Folgenden bleibt, das Auge unabgewandt nach dem Steuerbord gerichtet.) KURWENAL: (der Brangaene kommen sieht, zupft, ohne sich zu erheben, Tristan am Gewande). Hab' Acht, Tristan!

Botschaft von Isolde.

TRISTAN: (auffahrend). Was ist?—Isolde?—
(Er fasst sich schnell, als Brangaene vor ihm anlangt und sich verneigt.)
Von meiner Herrin?—
Ihr gehorsam was zu hören
meldet höfisch
mir die traute Magd?

BRANGAENE: Mein Herre Tristan,
dich zu sehen
wünscht Isolde,
meine Frau.

TRISTAN: Grämt sie die lange Fahrt, die geht zu End';
eh' noch die Sonne sinkt,
sind wir am Land:
was meine Frau mir befehle,
treulich sei's erfüllt.

BRANGAENE: So mög' Herr Tristan zu ihr geh'n:
das ist der Herrin Will'.

TRISTAN: Wo dort die grünen Fluren dem Blick noch blau sich färben, harrt mein König
meiner Frau:
zu ihm sie zu geleiten
bald nah' ich mich der Lichten; Keinem gönnt' ich diese Gunst.

this hero turns towards his lady;
but to meet her his heart is daunted,
the knight so highly vaunted!
Oh! he knows
well the cause!
To the traitor go,
bearing his lady's will!
As my servant bound,
straightaway should he approach!

BRANGAENA: Shall I beseech him to attend you?

ISOLDA: No, order him.
pray, understand it:—
I, Isolda
do command it!
(at an imperious sign from Isolda Brangaena withdraws and timidly walks along the deck towards the stern, past the working sailors. Isolda, following her with fixed gaze, sinks back on the couch, where she remains seated during the following, her eyes still turned sternward.)

KURVENAL: (observing Brangaene's approach, plucks Tristan by the robe without rising). Beware, Tristan!
Message from Isolda!

TRISTAN: (starting). What is it?—
Isolda?—
(he quickly regains his composure as Brangaena approaches and curtsies to him.)
What would my lady?
I her liegeman,
gladly will listen
while her loyal woman tells her will.

BRANGAENA: My lord, Sir Tristan, Dame Isolda
must speak
with you at once.

TRISTAN: Is she worn with travel?
The end is near;
No, before the set of sun
We shall see land
All that your mistress commands me, trust me, I shall mind.

BRANGAENA: That you, Sir Tristan,
go to her.—
this is my lady's wish.

TRISTAN: Where those green meadows in distance dim are mounting, waits my sovereign
for his mate:
to lead her to his presence
I'll wait upon the princess;
it is an honor
all my own.

BRANGAENE: Mein Herre Tristan,
höre wohl:
deine Dienste
will die Frau.
dass du zur Stell' ihr nahtest,
dort wo sie deiner harrt.

TRISTAN: Auf jeder Stelle wo ich steh', getreulich dien' ich ihr,
der Frauen höchster Ehr'.
Liess' ich das Steuer
jetzt zur Stund',
wie lenkt' ich sicher den Kiel
zu König Marke's Land?

BRANGAENE: Tristan, mein Herre, was höhnst du mich?
Dünkt dich nicht deutlich die thör'ge Magd,
hör' meiner Herrin Wort!
So, hiess sie, sollt' ich sagen:—
befehlen liess'
dem Eigenholde
Furcht der Herrin
sie, Isolde.

KURWENAL: (aufspringend).
Darf ich die Antwort sagen ingend?

TRISTAN: Was wohl erwidertest du?

KURWENAL: Das sage sie
Der Frau Isold'.—
Wer Kornwall's Kron'
und England's Erb'
an Irland's Maid vermacht, der kann der Magd
nicht eigen sein,
die selbst dem Ohm er schenkt.
Ein Herr der Welt
Tristan der Held!
Ich ruf's: du sag's, und grollten mir tausend Frau Isolden.
(Da Tristan durch Gebärden ihm zu wehren sucht, und Brangaene entrüstet sich zum Weggehen wendet, singt Kurwenal der zögernd sich Entfernenden mit höchster Stärke nach.)
"Herr Morold zog
zu Meere her,
in Kornwall Zins zu haben;
ein Eiland schwimmt
auf ödem Meer,
da liegt er nun begraben!
Sein Haupt doch hängt
im Iren-Land,
als Zins gezahlt
von Engeland.
Hei! unser Held Tristan!
Wie der Zins zahlen kann!"
(Kurwenal, von Tristan fortgescholten, ist in den Schiffsraum des Vorderdecks hinabgestiegen. Brangaene, in Bestürzung zu Isolde zurückgekehrt, schliesst hinter sich die Vorhänge, während die ganze Mannschaft aussen sich hören lässt.)

ALLE MAENNER: "Sein Haupt doch hängt
im Iren-Land,
als Zins gezahlt

BRANGAENA: My lord, Sir Tristan,
listen to me;
this one thing
my lady wills,
that you at once attend her,
there where she waits for you.

TRISTAN: In any station
where I stand
I truly serve only her,
the pearl of womanhood.
If I unheeding
left the helm,
how might I pilot her ship
in surety to King Mark?

BRANGAENA: Tristan, my master,
Why do you mock me?
Do my words seem obscure to you?
listen to my lady's words;
thus, look you, she has spoken:
"Go order him,
and understand it,
I—Isolda—
do command it.

KURVENAL: (springing up). May I make her an answer?

TRISTAN: What would you wish to reply?

KURVENAL: This should she say
to Dame Isolda:
"Though Cornwall's crown and England's isle
for Ireland's child he chose, his own by choice
she may not be;
he brings the king his bride.
A hero-knight
Tristan is called!
I've said, nor care to measure your lady's high displeasure."
(while Tristan seeks to stop him, and the offended Brangaena turns to depart, Kurvenal sings after her at the top of his voice, as she lingeringly withdraws.)
"Sir Morold toiled
over mighty wave
the Cornish tax to levy;
In desert isle
was dug his grave,
he died of wounds so heavy.
His head now hangs
in Irish lands.
Sole were-gild won
at English hands.
Bravo, our brave Tristan!
Let his tax take who can!"
(Kurvenal, driven away by Tristan's chidings, descends into the cabin. Brangaena returns in discomposure to Isolda, closing the curtains behind her, while all the men take up the chorus and are heard without.)

KNIGHTS AND ATTENDANTS:
"His head now hangs
in Irish lands,
sole were-gild won

von Engeland.
Hei! unser Held Tristan!
Wie der Zins zahlen kann!"

DRITTE SCENE

(Isolde und Brangaene allein, bei vollkommen wieder geschlossenen Vorhängen. Isolde erhebt sich mit verzweiflungsvoller Wuthgebärde. Brangaene ihr zu Füssen stürzend.)

BRANGAENE: Weh'! Ach, wehe!
dies zu dulden!

ISOLDE: (dem furchtbarsten Ausbruche nahe, schnell sich fassend). Doch nun von Tristan:
genau will ich's vernehmen.

BRANGAENE: Ach, frage nicht!

ISOLDE: Frei sag's ohne Furcht.

BRANGAENE: Mit höf'schen Worten
wich er aus.

ISOLDE: Doch als du deutlich mahntest?

BRANGAENE: Da ich zur Stell' ihn zu dir rief:
wo er auch steh',
so sagte er,
getreulich dien' er ihr,
der Frauen höchster Ehr',
liess' er das Steuer
jetzt zur Stund',
wie lenkt' er sicher den Kiel
zu König Marke's Land?

ISOLDE: (schmerzlich bitter).
"Wie lenkt" er sicher den Kiel
zu König Marke's Land"— den Zins ihm auszuzahlen, den er aus Irland zog!

BRANGAENE: Auf deine eig'nen Worte,
als ich ihm die entbot
liess seinen Treuen Kurwenal—

ISOLDE: Den hab' ich wohl vernommen, kein Wort das mir entging.
Erfuhrst du meine Schmach, nun höre, was sie mir schuf.—
Wie lachend sie
mir Lieder singen,
wohl könnt' auch ich erwiedern:
von einem Kahn,
der klein und arm
an Irland's Küste schwamm;
darinnen krank
ein siecher Mann
elend im Sterben lag.
Isolde's Kunst
ward ihm bekannt;
mit Heil-Salben
und Balsamsaft
der Wunde, die ihn plagte, getreulich pflag sie da.
Der "Tantris"
mit sorgender List sich nannte,
als "Tristan"
Isold' ihn bald erkannte, da in des Müss'gen Schwerte

at English hands.
Bravo, our brave Tristan!
Let his tax take who can!"

SCENE III

(Isolda and Brangaena alone, the curtain being again completely closed. Isolda rises with a gesture of despair and wrath. Brangaena falls at her feet.)

BRANGAENA: Ah! an answer
so insulting!

ISOLDA: (checking herself on the brink of a fearful outburst). How now? of Tristan? I'd know if he denies me.

BRANGAENA: Ah! question not!

ISOLDA: Quick, say without fear!

BRANGAENA: With courteous phrase
he foiled my will.

ISOLDA: But when you requested him here?

BRANGAENA: When I had straightaway bid him come,
wherever he stood,
he said to me,
he truly served only you,
the pearl of womanhood;
if he unheeded
left the helm
how could he pilot the ship
in surety to King Mark?

ISOLDA: (bitterly). "How could he pilot the ship
in surety to King Mark!"
And wait on him with were-gild from Ireland's island won!

BRANGAENA: As I gave out the message
and in your very words,
thus spoke his henchman Kurvenal—

ISOLDA: Heard I every sentence?
it all has reached my ear.
If you have learned my disgrace now hear too from where it has grown.
How scoffingly
they sing about me!
Could I requite them quickly!
What of the boat
so bare and frail,
that floated by our shore?
What of the broken
stricken man,
feebly extended there?
Isolda's art
he gladly owned;
with herbs, simples
and healing salves
the wounds from which he suffered she nursed in skilful wise.
Though "Tantris"
The name that he took
as "Tristan"
Isolda soon knew him,
when in the sick man's keen blade eine Scharte sie gewahrte, darin genau

sich fügt' ein Splitter, den einst im Haupt
des Iren-Ritter,
zum Hohn ihr heimgesandt, mit kund'ger Hand sie fand.—
Da schrie's mir auf
aus tiefstem Grund;
mit dem hellen Schwert
ich vor ihm stund,
an ihm, dem Über-Frechen,
Herrn Morold's Tod zu rächen.
Von seinem Bette
blickt' er her,— nicht auf das Schwert, nicht auf die Hand,— er sah' mir in die Augen.
Seines Elendes
jammerte mich;
das Schwert—das liess ich fallen:
die Morold schlug, die Wunde, sie heilt' ich, dass er gesunde, und heim nach Hause kehre,— mit dem Blick mich nicht mehr beschwere!

BRANGAENE: O Wunder! Wo hatt' ich die Augen?
Der Gast, den einst
ich pflegen half—?

ISOLDE: Sein Lob hörtest du eben:—
"Hei! Unser Held Tristan!"—
Der war jener traur'ge Mann!— Er schwur mit tausend Eiden mir ew'gen Dank und Treue
Nun hör' wie ein Held
Eide hält!—
Den als Tantris
unerkannt ich entlassen,
als Tristan
kehrt er kühn zurück
auf stolzem Schiff
von hohem Bord,
Irland's Erbin
begehrt er zur Eh'
für Kornwall's müden König, für Marke, seinen Ohm.
Da Morold lebte,
wer hätt' es gewagt,
uns je solche Schmach zu bieten?
Für der zinspflichtigen
Kornen Fürsten
um Irland's Krone zu werben?
O wehe mir!
Ich ja war's,
die heimlich selbst
die Schmach sich schuf!
Das rächende Schwert,
statt es zu schwingen,
machtlos liess ich's fallen:—
nun dien' ich dem Vasallen.

BRANGAENE: Da Friede, Sühn' und Freundschaft von Allen ward beschworen
wir freuten uns All' des Tag's;
wie ahnte mir da,
dass dir, es Kummer schüf?

ISOLDE: O blinde Augen!
Blöde Herzen!
Zahmer Muth,
verzagtes Schweigen!

she perceived a notch had been made,
which did fit
a splinter broken
in Morold's head,
the mangled token
sent home in hatred rare;
this hand did find it there.
I heard a voice
from distance dim;
with the sword in hand
I came to him.
Full well I willed to slay him,
for Morold's death to pay him.
But from his sick bed
he looked up
not at the sword,
not at my arm—
his eyes on mine were fastened, and his feebleness
softened my heart:
the sword—dropped from my fingers.
Though Morold's steel had maimed him
to health again I reclaimed him!
When he has homeward wended
my emotion then might be ended.

BRANGAENA: O wondrous! Why could I not see this?
The guest I sometimes helped to nurse—?

ISOLDA: His praise briskly they sing now:—
"Bravo, our brave Tristan!"—
he was that distressful man.
A thousand protestations of truth and love he prated.
Hear how a knight
fealty knows!—
When as Tantris
unforbidden he'd left me,
as Tristan
boldly back he came,
in stately ship
from which in pride
Ireland's heiress
in marriage he asked for Mark, the Cornish monarch, his kinsman worn and old.
In Morold's lifetime dared any have dreamed to offer us such an insult?
For the tax-paying Cornish prince
to presume to court Ireland's princess!
Ah, woe is me!
It was I who for myself
did shape this shame!
with death-dealing sword should I have stabbed him;
weakly it escaped me:—

BRANGAENA: When peaceful truce and friendship were sworn by both the peoples,
how joyful we were that day!
How could I foresee the pain it would bring to you?

ISOLDA: Oh! eyes, how blinded!
Heart, how timid!
Courage weak!
A futile silence!

Wie anders phahlte Tristan aus,
was ich verschlossen hiehlt!
Die schweigend ihm das Leben gab, vor Feindes des Rache ihn schweigend barg;
was stumm ihr Schutz zum Heil ihm schuf,
mit ihr gab er es preis!
Wie siegprangend heil und hehr,
laut und hell wies er auf mich;
"Das wär' ein Schatz,
Mein Herr und Ohm;
Wie dünkt euch die zur Eh'?
Die schmucke Irin hol' ich her;
mit Steg und Wegen wohlbekannt ein Wink, ich flieg' nach Iren-land;
Isolde, die ist eueu!
mir lacht das Abenteuer!
Fluch dir, Verruchter!
Fluch deinem Haupt!
Rache, Tod!
Tod uns Beiden!

How bravely poured this Tristan forth,
What I had never breathed!
She who by silence gave him life,
from foes by silence she kept him safe;
the silent care that wrought his weal to her he dared reveal!
How masterful, brave and bold,
turned he all eyes on me!
"A treasure she, my liege and cousin;
what think you of her for a bride?
This Irish jewel will I bring;
for every stock and stone I know;
a nod, and I'll fly to Ireland;
Isolda is your own, Sire!
I would I might be gone, Sire!"
now serfdom I have shaped me.
Curse him, the villain!
Curse on his head!
Vengeance! Death!
Death for me too!

BRANGAENE: (mit ungestümer Zärtlichkeit sich auf Isolde stürzend). O Süsse! Traute!
Theure! Holde!
Gold'ne Herrin!
Lieb' Isolde!
Hör' mich! Komme!
Setz' dich her!—
(Sie zieht Isolde allmählich nach dem Ruhebett.)
Welcher Wahn?
Welch' eitles Zürnen?
Wie magst du dich bethören,
nicht hell zu seh'n noch hören!
Was je Herr Tristan
dir verdankte,
sag', konnt' er's höher lohnen,
als mit der herrlichsten der Kronen?
So dient' er treu
dem edlen Ohm,
dir gab er der Welt
begehrlichsten Lohn
dem eig'nen Erbe,
echt und edel,
entsagt' er zu deinen Füssen,
als Königin dich zu grüssen.
(Isolde wendet sich ab.)
und warb er Marke,
dir zum Gemahl,
wie wolltest du die Wahl doch schelten,
muss er nicht werth dir gelten?
Von edler Art
Und mildem Muth,
wer gliche dem Mann
an Macht und Glanz?
Dem ein hehrster Held
so treulich dient,
wer möchte sein Glück nicht theilen,
als Gattin bei ihm weilen?

BRANGAENA: (throwing herself upon Isolda with impetuous tenderness). Isolda! lady!
loved one! fairest!
sweet perfection!
mistress rarest!
Hear me! come now,
sit here.—
(gradually draws Isolda to the couch.)
What a whim!
what causeless railing!
How came you so wrong-minded and by mere fancy blinded?
Sir Tristan gives you
Cornwall's kingdom;
then, were he your debtor,
how could he reward you better?
His noble uncle
serves him so;
think too what a gift
on you he'd bestow!
With honor unequalled
all he's heir to
at your feet he seeks to shower, to make you a queenly dower.
(Isolda turns away.)
If wife he'd make you to King Mark
why do you complain like this?
Is he not worth your gaining?
Of royal race
and mild of mood, who passes King Mark
in might and power?
If a noble knight
like Tristan serves him, who would not but feel elated,
to be so fairly mated.

ISOLDE: (starr vor sich hinblickend). Ungeminnt den hehrsten Mann
stets mir nah' zu sehen,— wie könnt' ich die Qual bestehen!

ISOLDA: (gazing vacantly before her). Glorious knight!
And I must languish near him ever loveless!
How can I support such anguish?

BRANGAENE: Was wähnst du Arge?
Ungeminnt?—
(Sie nähert sich Isolden schmeichelnd und kosend.)
Wo lebte der Mann.
der dich nicht liebte?
Der Isolden säh,
und in Isolden
selig nicht ganz verging'?
Doch, der dir erkoren,
wär' er so kalt,
zög' ihn von dir
ein Zauber ab, den Bösen wüsst' ich bald zu binden
ihn bannte der Minne Macht.—
(Mit geheimnissvoller Zutraulichkeit ganz nah zu Isolden.)
Kennst du der Mutter
Künste nicht?
Wähnst du, die Alles
klug erwägt,
ohne Rath in fremdes Land
hätt' sie mit dir mich entsandt?

BRANGAENA: What's this, my lady?
You are loveless?
(approaching coaxingly and kissing Isolda.)
Where lives there a man who would not love you?
Who could see Isolda
And not sink
at once into blessed bondage?
And if even it could be any were cold,
did any magic draw him from you
I'd bring the false one back to bondage,
And bind him in links of love.—
(secretly and confidentially, close to Isolda.) Mind you not your mother's arts?
Think you that she who'd mastered those would have sent me over the sea, without assistance for you?

ISOLDE: (düster). Der Mutter Rath gemahnt mich recht;
willkommen preis' ich ihre Kunst:—
Rache für den Verrath,—
Ruh' in der Noth dem Herzen!—
Den Schrein dort bring' mir her.

ISOLDA: (darkly). My mother's counsel—
I mind correctly,
and highly her magic arts I hold:—
Vengeance they wreak for wrongs, rest give to wounded spirits.—
That casket bear here.

BRANGAENE: Er birgt, was Heil dir frommt.
(Sie holt eine kleine goldne Truhe herbei, öffnet sie, und deutet auf ihren Inhalt.)
So reihte sie die Mutter, die mächt'gen Zaubertränke.
Für Weh' und Wunden
Balsam hier;
für böse Gifte
Gegen-Gift:—
(Sie zieht ein Fläschchen hervor.) den hehrsten Trank,
ich halt' ihn hier.

BRANGAENA: It holds a balm for you.
(she brings forward a small golden coffer, opens it, and points to its contents.)
Your mother placed inside it her subtle magic potions.
There's salve for sickness or for wounds,
and antidotes
for deadly drugs.—
(she takes a bottle.)
The most helpful drink
I hold in here.

ISOLDE: Du irr'st, ich kenn' ihn besser;
ein starkes Zeichen schnitt ich ihm ein: — der Trank ist's, der mir frommt.
(Sie ergreift ein Fläschchen und zeigt es.)

ISOLDA: Not so, I know a better.
I make a mark
to know it again—
I would drain this drink.
(seizes flask and shows it.)

BRANGAENE: (entsetzt zurückweichend). Der Todestrank!
(Isolde hat sich vom Ruhebett erhoben, und vernimmt jetzt mit wachsendem Schrecken den Ruf des Schiffsvolkes:)

BRANGAENA: (recoiling in horror.) The drink of death!
(Isolda has risen from the sofa and now hears with increasing dread the cries of the sailors:)

RUF DES SCHIFFSVOLKES: (von aussen). "He! ha! ho! he!
Am Untermast
die Segel ein!
He! ha! ho! he!"

VOICES OF THE CREW: (without). "Ho! heave ho! hey!
Reduce the sail!
The mainsail in!
Ho! heave ho! hey!"

ISOLDE: Das deutet schnelle Fahrt.
Weh' mir! Nahe das Land!

ISOLDA: Our journey has been swift.
Woe's me! Near to the land!

VIERTE SCENE

(Durch die Vorhänge tritt mit Ungestüm Kurwenal herein.)

KURWENAL: Auf, auf! Ihr Frauen!
Frisch und froh!
Rasch gerüstet!
Fertig, hurtig und flink!—
Und Frau Isolden
sollt' ich sagen
von Held Tristan,
meinem Herrn:—
vom Mast der Freude Flagge sie wehe lustig in's Land;
in Marke's Königsschlosse
mach' sie ihr Nahen bekannt.
Drum Frau Isolde
bät' er eilen,
für's Land sich zu bereiten,
dass er sie könnt' geleiten.

ISOLDE: (nachdem sie zuerst bei der Meldung in Schauer zusammengefahren, gefasst und mit Würde). Herrn Tristan bringe meinen Gruss, und meld' ihm was ich sage.—
Sollt' ich zur Seit' ihm gehen,
vor König Marke zu stehen,
nicht möcht' es nach Zucht
und Fug gescheh'n,
empfing' ich Sühne
nicht zuvor
für ungesühnte Schuld:
drum such' er meine Huld.—
(Kurwenal macht eine trotzige Gebärde.)
Du merke wohl
und meld' es gut!—
Nicht wollt' ich mich bereiten, an's Land ihn zu begleiten;
nicht werd' ich zur Seit' ihm gehen,
vor König Marke zu stehen,
begehrte Vergessen
und Vergeben nach Zucht und Fug
er nicht zuvor
für ungebüsste Schuld:—
die böt' ihm meine Huld.

KURWENAL: Sicher wisst, das sag' ich ihm:
nun harrt, wie er mich hört!
(Er geht schnell zurück.)

FÜNFTE SCENE

ISOLDE: (eilt auf Brangaene zu und umarmt sie heftig). Nun leb' wohl, Brangäne!
Grüss' mir die Welt, grüsse mir Vater und Mutter!

BRANGAENE: Was ist's! Was sinnst du?
Wolltest du fliehen?
Wohin sollt' ich dir folgen?

ISOLDE: (schnell gefasst). Hörtest du nicht?
Hier bleib' ich;
Tristan will ich erwarten.—
Treu befolg',
was ich befehl',

SCENE IV

(Kurvenal boisterously enters through the curtains.)

KURVENAL: Up, up, you ladies!
Look alert!
Straight bestir you!
Loiter not—here is the land!—
To dame Isolda
says the servant of Tristan,
our hero true:—
Behold our flag is flying!
it waves landwards aloft:
in Mark's ancestral castle
may our approach be seen.
So, dame Isolda,
he prays to hasten,
for land straight to prepare her,
that he may bear her there.

ISOLDA: (who has at first cowered and shuddered on hearing the message, now speaks calmly and with dignity). My greeting take to your lord
and tell him what I say now:
Should he assist me to land and to King Mark would he hand me, unmeet and unseemly
were his act,
the while my pardon
was not won for trespass black and base:
So bid him seek my grace.
(Kurvenal makes a gesture of defiance.)
Now mark me well
This message take:—
I won't prepare myself,
that he to land may bear me;
I will not by him be landed,
nor unto King Mark be handed before granting forgiveness and forgetfulness, which it seems that he should seek:—
for all his trespass base
I tender him my grace.

KURVENAL: Be assured,
I'll bear your words:
we'll see what he will say!
(he retires quickly.)

SCENE V

ISOLDA: (hurries to Brangaena and embraces her vehemently).
Now farewell, Brangaena!
Greet every one,
Greet my father and mother!

BRANGAENA: What now? what do you mean?
Would you flee?
And where must I then follow?

ISOLDA: (checking herself suddenly). Here I remain:
heard you not?
Tristan will I await.—
I trust in you
to aid in this:

den Sühne-Trank
rüste schnell,— du weisst, den ich dir wies.

BRANGAENE: Und welchen Trank?

ISOLDE: (entnimmt dem Schreine das Fläschchen). Diesen Trank!
In die gold'ne Schale
giess' ihn aus;
gefüllt fasst sie ihn ganz.

BRANGAENE: (voll Grausen das Fläschchen empfangend.) Trau' ich dem Sinn?

ISOLDE: Sei du mir treu!

BRANGAENE: Der Trank—für wen?

ISOLDE: Wer mich betrog.

BRANGAENE: Tristan?

ISOLDE: Trinke mir Sühne.

BRANGAENE: (zu Isolde's Füssen stürzend). Entsetzen! Schone mich Arme!

ISOLDE: (heftig). Schone du mich,
untreue Magd!
Kennst du der Mutter
Künste nicht?
Wähn'st du, die Alles
klug erwägt,
ohne Rath in fremdes Land
hätt' sie mit dir mich entsandt?
Für weh' und wunden gab sie Balsam;
Für böse Gifte
Gegen-Gift;
für tiefstes Weh',
für höchstes Leid—
gab sie den Todes-Trank.
Der Tod nun sag' ihr Dank!

BRANGAENE: (kaum ihrer mächtig). O tiefstes Weh'!

ISOLDE: Gehorchst du mir nun?

BRANGAENE: O höchstes Leid!

ISOLDE: Bist du mir treu?

BRANGAENE: Der Trank?

KURWENAL: (eintretend). Herr Tristan
(Brangaene erhebt sich erschrocken und verwirrt; Isolde sucht mit furchtbarer Anstrengung sich zu fassen.)

ISOLDE: (zu Kurwenal). Herr Tristan trete nah.

SECHSTE SCENE

(Kurwenal geht wieder zurück, Brangaene, kaum ihrer mächtig, wendet sich in den Hintergrund. Isolde, ihr ganzes Gefühl zur Entscheidung zusammenfassend, schreitet langsam, mit grosser Haltung, dem Ruhebett zu, auf dessen Kopfende sich stützend sie den Blick fest dem Eingange zuwendet.)
(Tristan tritt ein, und bleibt ehrerbietig am Eingange stehen.)

prepare the true cup of peace:
you mind how it is made.

BRANGAENA: What do you mean?

ISOLDA: (taking a bottle from the coffer). That it is!
From the flask go pour
this filter out;
that golden goblet it will fill.

BRANGAENA: (filled with terror receiving the flask). Trust I my wits?

ISOLDA: Will you be true?

BRANGAENA: The drink—for whom?

ISOLDA: He who betrayed!

BRANGAENA: Tristan!

ISOLDA: Truce he'll drink with me.

BRANGAENA: (throwing herself at Isolda's feet). O horror! Pity your handmaid!

ISOLDA: Pity me, your false-hearted maid!
Do you not mind
my mother's arts?
You think that she
who'd mastered those would have sent you over the sea without assistance for me?
A salve for sickness
she offers
and antidotes
for deadly drugs:
for deepest grief
and woe supreme gave she the draught of death.
Let Death now give her thanks!

BRANGAENA: (scarcely able to control herself). O deepest grief!

ISOLDA: Now, will you obey?

BRANGAENA: O woe supreme!

ISOLDA: Will you be true?

BRANGAENA: The drink?

KURVENAL: (entering). Sir Tristan!
(Brangaena rises, terrified and confused. Isolda strives with immense effort to control herself.)

ISOLDA: (to Kurvenal). Sir Tristan may approach!

SCENE VI

(Kurvenal retires again. Brangaena, almost beside herself, turns up the stage. Isolda, mustering all her powers of resolution, walks slowly and with dignity towards the sofa, by the head of which she supports herself, turning her eyes firmly towards the entrance.)
(Tristan enters, and pauses respectfully at the entrance.)

TRISTAN: Begehrt, Herrin, was ihr wünscht.

ISOLDE: Wüsstest du nicht was ich begehre,
da doch die Furcht,
mir's zu erfüllen,
fern meinem Blick dich hielt?

TRISTAN: Ehr-Furcht
hielt mich in Acht.

ISOLDE: Der Ehre wenig
botest du mir:
mit off'nem Hohn
verwehrtest du Gehorsam meinem Gebot.

TRISTAN: Gehorsam einzig
hielt mich in Bann.

ISOLDE: So dankt' ich Geringes
deinem Herrn,
rieth dir sein Dienst
Un-Sitte
gegen sein eigen Gemahl?

TRISTAN: Sitte lehrt wo ich gelebt:
zur Brautfahrt
der Brautwerber
meide fern die Braut.

ISOLDE: Aus welcher Sorg'?

TRISTAN: Fragt die Sitte!

ISOLDE: Da du so sittsam,
mein Herr Tristan,
auch einer Sitte
sei nun gemahnt:
den Feind dir zu sühnen,
soll er als Freund dich rühmen.

TRISTAN: Und welchen Feind?

ISOLDE: Frag' deine Furcht!
Blut-Schuld
schwebt zwischen uns.

TRISTAN: Die ward gesühnt.

ISOLDE: Nicht zwischen uns.

TRISTAN: Im off'nen Feld vor allem Volk
ward Ur-Fehde geschworen.

ISOLDE: Nicht da war's wo ich Tantris barg,
wo Tristan mir verfiel.
Da stand er herrlich,
hehr und heil
doch was er schwur,
das schwur ich nicht:—
zu schweigen hatt' ich gelernt.
Da in stiller Kammer
krank er lag,
mit dem Schwerte stumm
ich vor ihm stund,
schwieg—da mein Mund,
bannt'—ich meine Hand,
doch was einst mit Hand
und Mund ich gelobt, das schwur ich schweigend zu halten.
Nun will ich des Eides walten.

TRISTAN: Was schwurt Ihr, Frau?

ISOLDE: (schnell). Rache für Morold.

TRISTAN: (mässig). Müh't Euch die?

TRISTAN: Demand, lady, what you will.

ISOLDA: While knowing not what my demand is,
were you afraid
still to fulfill it,
fleeing my presence instead?

TRISTAN: Honor
Held me in awe.

ISOLDA: You have shown
Scant honor to me;
for, unabashed,
you withheld
obedience to my call.

TRISTAN: Obedience it was forbade me to come.

ISOLDA: But I owe little
Your lord, I think,
if he allows ill manners
to his own promised bride.

TRISTAN: In our land
it is the law
that he who fetches home the bride
should stay afar from her.

ISOLDA: On what account?

TRISTAN: It is the custom.

ISOLDA: Being so careful,
my lord Tristan,
another custom
can you not learn?
Of enemies make friends:
for evil acts make amends.

TRISTAN: Who is my foe?

ISOLDA: Find in your fears!
Blood-guilt
gets between us.

TRISTAN: That was absolved.

ISOLDA: Not between us.

TRISTAN: In open field,
Before all the folk our old feud was abandoned.

ISOLDA: It was not there
I held Tantris hid
when Tristan was laid low,
He stood there brawny,
bright and brave;
but in his truce
I took no part:
my tongue its silence had learnt,
When in chambered stillness
he lay sick with the sword I stood before him, stern;
silent—my lips,
motionless—my hand.
But that which my hand
and lips had once vowed,
I swore in stealth to adhere to:
now my desire I'm near to.

TRISTAN: What have you sworn?

ISOLDA: (quickly). Vengeance for Morold!

TRISTAN: (quietly). Do you mind that?

ISOLDE: (lebhaft). Wag'st du mir Hohn?—
Angelobt war er mir,
der hehre Irenheld;
seine Waffen hatt' ich geweiht,
für mich zog er in Streit.
Da er gefallen,
fiel meine Ehr';
in des Herzens Schwere
schwur ich den Eid,
würd' ein Mann den Mord nicht sühnen, wollt' ich Magd mich des' erkühnen.—
Siech und matt
in meiner Macht,
warum ich dich da nicht schlug, das sag' dir selbst mit leichtem Fug:—
ich pflag des Wunden, dass den heil Gesunden
rächend schlüge der Mann, der Isolden ihn abgewann.—
Dein Loos nun selber
magst du dir sagen:
da die Männer sich all' ihm vertragen, wer muss nun Tristan schlagen?

TRISTAN: (bleich und düster, reicht ihr sein Schwert hin). War Morold dir so werth, nun wieder nimm das Schwert,
und führ' es sicher und fest,
dass du nicht dir's entfallen lässt.

ISOLDE: Wie sorgt' ich schlecht
um deinen Herren;
was würde König Marke sagen, erschlüg ich ihm den besten Knecht,
der Kron' und Land ihm gewann,
den aller treu' sten Mann?
Dunkt dich so wenig,
was er dir dankt,
bringst du die Irin ihm als Braut,
das er nicht schölte,
schlüg' ich den Werber,
der Urfehde Pfand so treu ihm liefert zur Hand?
Wahre dein Schwert!
Da einst ich's schwang,
als mir die Rache
im Busen rang,
als dein messender Blick
mein Bild sich stahl, ob ich Herrn Marke
taug' als Gemahl:
das Schwert—da liess ich's sinken.
Nun lass' uns Sühne trinken!—
(Sie winkt Brangaene. Diese schaudert zusammen schwankt und zögert in ihrer Bewegung. Isolde treibt sie durch gesteigerte Gebärde an. Als Brangaene Bereitung des Tranks sich anlässt, vernimmt man den Ruf des Schiffsvolkes.) SCHIFFSVOLK: (von aussen). Ho!

he! ha! he!
Am Obermast
die Segel ein!
Ho! he! ha! he!

TRISTAN: (aus finst'rem Brüten auffahrend). Wo sind wir?

ISOLDA: (animated). Do you dare to flout me?—
Was he not my betrothed, that noble Irish knight?
For his sword a blessing I sought;
for me only he fought.
When he was murdered
no honor fell.
In that heartfelt misery
my vow was framed;
if no man remained to right it,
I, a maid, must requite it.—
Weak and maimed,
when might was mine,
why at your death did I pause?
You shall know the secret cause.—
Your hurts I tended that, when sickness ended,
you should fall by some man,
as Isolda's revenge should plan.
But now attempt your fate to foretell me: your fate
if their friendship all men do sell to you, what foe can seek to fell you?

TRISTAN: (pale and gloomy, offers her his sword). If you so loved this lord, then lift once more my sword,
nor refrain from your purpose,
let the weapon not fail again.

ISOLDA: How ill a turn I'd do your master!
How, think you now, King Mark would take it,
if I should slay his foremost man,
who won him kingdom and rights,
the best of all his knights?
Do you think his thanks to you are so small,
you who have brought me as his bride,
he'd not be angered,
slew I the wooer,
who brings him so good a pledge of truce to the Feud?
Put up your sword
which I once swung,
when vengeful rancor
wrung my bosom
when your masterful eyes did ask me straight

whether King Mark
might seek me for mate.
The sword harmless descended.—
Drink, let our strife be ended!
(Isolda beckons Brangaena. She trembles and hesitates to obey. Isolda commands her with a more imperious gesture. Brangaena sets about preparing the drink.)

VOICES OF THE CREW: (without). Ho! heave ho! hey!
Reduce the sail!
The foresail in!
Ho! heave ho! hey!

TRISTAN: (starting from his gloomy brooding). Where are we?

ISOLDE: Hart am Ziel.
Tristan, gewinn' ich Sühne?
Was hast du mir zu sagen?

TRISTAN: (düster). Des Schweigens Herrin
heisst mich schweigen:
fass' ich, was sie verschwieg, verschweig' ich, was sie nicht fasst.

ISOLDE: Dein Schweigen fass' ich, weichst du mir aus.
Weigerst du Sühne mir?
(Neue Schiffsrufe. Auf Isolde's ungeduldigen Wink reicht Brangaene ihr die gefüllte Trinkschale.)

ISOLDE: (mit dem Becher zu Tristan tretend, der ihr starr in die Augen blickt). Du hörst den Ruf?
Wir sind am Ziel:
in kurzer Frist
stehn wir—
(mit leisem Hohne.)
vor König Marke.
Geleitest du mich,
dünkt dich's nicht lieb,
darfst du so ihm sagen:
Mein Herr und Ohm,
sieh' die dir an:
ein sanft'res Weib
gewannst du nie.
Ihren Angelobten erschlug
ich ihr einst,
sein Haupt sandt' ich ihr hein,
die Wunde, die seine Wehr mir schuf,
die hat sie hold geheilt;
mein Leben lag in ihrer Macht:
das schenkte mir die milde Magd, und ihres Landes Schand' und Schmach die gab sie mit darein, dein Eh' gemahl zu sein.
So guter Gaben holder Dank schuf mir ein süsser Sühntrank;
bot mir ihre Huld zu suhnen alle Schuld."

SCHIFFSRUF: (aussen). Auf das Tau!
Anker ab!

TRISTAN: (wild auffahrend). Los den Anker!
Das Steuer dem Strom!
Den Winden Segel und Mast!
(Er entreisst Isolden ungestüm die Trinkschale.)
Wohl kenn' ich Irlands
Königin,
und ihrer Künste
Wunderkraft:
den Balsam nützt' ich,
den sie bot;
den Becher nehm' ich nun,
dass ganz ich heut' genese!
Und achte auch
des Sühne-Eid's,
den ich zum Dank dir sage.—
Tristan's Ehre—
höchste Treu':
Tristan's Elend—
kühnster Trotz.
Trug des Herzens;
Traum der Ahnung:
ew'ger Trauer
einz'ger Trost,
Vergessens güt'ger Trank!
Dich trink' ich sonder Wank.
(Er setzt an und trinkt.)

ISOLDE: Betrug auch hier?
Mein die Hälfte!—
(Sie entwindet ihm den Becher.)
Verräther, ich trink' sie dir!
(Sie trinkt. Dann wirft sie die Schale fort.—Beide, von Schauer erfasst, blicken sich mit höchster Aufregung, doch mit starrer Haltung, unverwandt in die Augen, in deren Ausdruck der Todestrotz bald der Liebesgluth weicht.—Zittern ergreift sie. Sie fassen sich krampfhaft an das Herz,—und führen die Hand weiter an die Stirn.—Dann suchen sie sich wieder mit dem Blicke, senken ihn verwirrt, und heften ihn von Neuem mit steigender Sehnsucht auf einander.)

ISOLDE: (mit bebender Stimme). Tristan!

TRISTAN: (überströmend). Isolde!

ISOLDE: (an seine Brust sinkend). Treuloser Holder!

TRISTAN: Selgiste Frau!— (Er umfasst sie mit Gluth. Sie verbleiben in stummer Umarmung.)

ALLE MAENNER: (aussen). Heil!
Heil!
König Marke!
König Marke, Heil!

BRANGAENE: (die, mit abgewandtem Gesicht, voll Verwirrung und Schauder sich über Bord gelehnt hatte, wendet sich jetzt dem Anblick des in Liebesumarmung versunkenen Paares zu, und stürzt händeringend, voll Verzweiflung, in den Vordergrund). Wehe!
Wehe!
Unabwendbar
ewige Noth
für kurzen Tod!
Thör'ger Treue
trugvolles Werk
blüht nun jammernd empor!
(Sie fahren verwirrt aus der Umarmung auf.)

TRISTAN: (verwirrt). Was träumte mir von Tristan's Ehre?

ISOLDE: Was träumte mir
von Isolde's Schmach?

TRISTAN: Du mir verloren?

ISOLDE: Du mich verstossen?

TRISTAN: Trügenden Zaubers tückische List!

ISOLDE: Thörigen Zürnens eitles Dräu'n!

TRISTAN: Isolde! Süsseste Maid!

ISOLDE: Tristan! Trautester Mann!

ISOLDA: Near to shore.
Tristan, is warfare ended?
Have you word to offer?

TRISTAN: (darkly). Concealment's mistress makes me silent:
I know what she conceals,
conceal too, more than she knows.

ISOLDA: Your silence is nothing but feigning.
Will you still deny friendship?
(renewed cries of the Sailors.)
(at an impatient sign from Isolda Brangaena hands her the filled cup.)

ISOLDA: (advancing with the cup to Tristan, who gazes immovably into her eyes). You hear the cry?
The shore's in sight:
(with slight scorn.)
we must long
stand by King Mark together.
And you lead me then,
were it not well,
if you could thus greet him:
"My lord and king,
look well on her:
a more tender wife
you could never win.
Her betrothed lover I slew,
of a truth,
his head I sent her home;
the wounds his weapons wrought on me,
she graciously did heal;
my life within her hand was laid;
she gave it to me,
this merciful maid;
and all her country's slights and shame,
she let them go, as well,
with you as queen to dwell.
Such goodly gifts I have to thank with her a draught of truce I drank;
that pardon for me won,
for all the wrong I'd done."

SAILORS: (without). Haul the warp!
Anchor down!

TRISTAN: (starting wildly).
Down with the anchor!
Her stern to the stream!
The sails a-weather the mast!
(he takes the cup from Isolda.)
I know the Queen
of Ireland well, unquestioned are
her magic arts:
the balsam cured me
which she brought;
now bid me quaff the cup,
that I may quite recover.
Heed to my all-
atoning oath,
which in return I tended.
Tristan's honor—
highest truth!
Tristan's anguish—
brave distress!
Traitor spirit,
dawn-illumined!
Endless trouble's
only truce!
Oblivion's kindly draught,
with rapture you are quaffed!
(he lifts the cup and drinks.)

ISOLDA: Betrayed even here?
I must halve it!—
(she wrests the cup from his hand.)
Betrayer, I drink to you!
(She drinks, and then throws away the cup. Both, seized with shuddering, gaze with deepest emotion, but immovable demeanor, into one another's eyes, in which the expression of defiance to death fades and melts into the glow of passion. Trembling seizes them, they convulsively clutch their hearts and pass their hands over their brows. Their glances again seek to meet, sink in confusion, and once more turn with growing longing upon one another.)

ISOLDA: (with trembling voice). Tristan!

TRISTAN: (overpowered). Isolda!

ISOLDA: (sinking upon his breast). Beloved traitor!

TRISTAN: Divine woman!
(He embraces her with ardor. They remain in a silent embrace.)

ALL THE MEN: (without). Hail!
Hail!
Hail our monarch!
Hail to Mark, the king!

BRANGAENA: (who, filled with confusion and horror, has leaned over the side with averted face, now turns to behold the pair locked in their close embrace, and rushes to the front, wringing her hands in despair).
Woe's me! Woe's me!
Endless misery
I have wrought
instead of death!
Dire the deed
of my dull fond heart;
it cries aloud to heaven!
(they start from their embrace.)

TRISTAN: (bewildered). What troubled dream of Tristan's honor?

ISOLDA: What troubled dream
Of Isolda's shame?

TRISTAN: Have I then lost you?

ISOLDA: Have I repulsed you?

TRISTAN: Fraudulent magic, framing deceit!

ISOLDA: Folly and anger's idle threats!

TRISTAN: Isolda! Sweetest of maids!

ISOLDA: Tristan! Truest of men!

BEIDE: Wie sich die Herzen wogend erheben, wie alle Sinse wonnig erbeben!
Sehnender Minne
schwellendes Blühen, schmachtender Liebe
seliges Glühen!
Jach in der Brust
jauchzende Lust!
Isolde! Tristan!
Tristan! Isolde!
Welten entronnen
du mir gewonnen!
Du mir einzig bewusst,
höchste Liebes-Lust!

SIEBENTE SCENE

(Die Vorhänge werden weit auseinander gerissen. Das ganze Schiff ist von Rittern und Schiffsleuten erfüllt, die jubelnd über Bord winken, dem Ufer zu, des man, mit einer hohen Felsenburg gekrönt, nahe erblickt. Tristan und Isolde bleiben, in ihrem gegenseitigen Anblick verloren, ohne Wahrnehmung des um sie Vorgehenden.)

BRANGAENE: (zu den Frauen, die auf ihren Wink aus dem Schiffsraum heraufsteigen).
Schnell den Mantel,
den Königsschmuck!
(Zwischen Tristan und Isolde stürzend.)
Unsel'ge! Auf!
Hört wo wir sind.
(Sie legt Isolden, die es nicht gewahrt, den Mantel um.)

ALLE MAENNER: Heil! Heil!
König Marke!
König Marke, Heil!

KURWENAL: (lebhaft herantretend). Heil Tristan!
Glücklicher Held!—
Mit reichem Hofgesinde
dort auf Nachen
naht Herr Marke.
Hei! wie die Fahrt ihn freut,
dass er die Braut sich freit!

TRISTAN: (in Verwirrung aufblickend). Wer naht?

KURWENAL: Der König!

TRISTAN: Welcher König?
(Kurwenal deutet über Bord. Tristan starrt wie sinnlos nach dem Lande.)

ALLE MAENNER: (die Hüte schwenkend). Heil! König Marke!

ISOLDE: (in Verwirrung, zu Brangaene). Was ist's? Brangäne!
Ha! welcher Ruf?

BRANGAENE: Isolde! Herrin!
Fassung nur heut'!

ISOLDE: Wo bin ich? Leb' ich?
Ha, welcher Trank?

BOTH: Ah! how our hearts are heaving and swelling!
How every sense is throbbing and thrilling!
Languishing passion,
longing and growing,
love ever yearning,
loftiest glowing!
Rapture confessed
rides in each breast!
Isolda! Tristan!
Tristan! Isolda!
World, I can shun you
my love is won me!
You are my thought, all above:
highest delight of love!

SCENE VII

(The curtains are now drawn wide apart; the whole ship is covered with knights and sailors, who, with shouts of joy, make signs over towards the shore which is now seen to be quite near, with castle-crowned cliffs. Tristan and Isolda remain absorbed in mutual contemplation, perceiving nothing that is passing.)

BRANGAENA: (to the women, who at her bidding ascend from below). Quick—the mantle!
the royal robe!—
(rushing between Tristan and Isolda.)
Up, hapless ones!
See where we are!
(she places the royal mantle on Isolda, who notices nothing.)

ALL THE MEN: Hail! Hail!
Hail our monarch!
Hail to Mark the king!

KURVENAL: (advancing gaily).
Hail, Tristan,
knight of good fortune!
Behold King Mark approaching, in a bark
with brave attendance.
Gladly he stems the tide,
coming to seek his bride.

TRISTAN: (looking up in bewilderment). Who comes?

KURVENAL: It is the king!

TRISTAN: What king do you mean?
(Kurvenal points over the side. Tristan gazes stupefied at the shore.)

ALL THE MEN: (waving their hats). Hail to King Mark!
All hail!

ISOLDA: (bewildered). What is it, Brangaena?
What are those cries?

BRANGAENA: Isolda—mistress!
Compose yourself!

ISOLDA: Where am I! living?
What was that drink?

BRANGAENE:
(verzweiflungsvoll). Der Liebestrank!

ISOLDE: (starrt entsetzt auf Tristan). Tristan!

TRISTAN: Isolde!

ISOLDE: Muss ich leben?
(Sie stürzt ohnmächtig an seine Brust)

BRANGAENE: (zu den Frauen).
Helft der Herrin!

TRISTAN: O Wonne voller Tücke!
O Trug geweihtes Glücke!

ALLE MAENNER: (Ausbruch allgemeinen Jauchzens). Heil dem König!
Kornwall, Heil!
(Leute sind über Bord gestiegen, andere haben eine Brücke ausgelegt, und die Haltung Aller deutet auf die soeben bevorstehende Ankunft der Erwarteten, als der Vorhang schnell fällt.)

■ ZWEITE AKT

(Garten mit hohen Bäumen vor dem Gemache Isolde's, zu welchem, seitwärts gelegen, Stufen hinaufführen. Helle, anmuthige Sommernacht. An der geöffneten Thüre ist eine brennende Fackel aufsgesteckt. Jagdgetön.)

ERSTE SCENE

(Brangaene, auf den Stufen am Gemach, späht dem immer entfernter vernehmbaren Jagdtrosse nach. Zu ihr tritt aus dem Gemach, feurig bewegt, Isolde.)

ISOLDE: Hörst du sie noch?
Mir schwand schon fern der Klang.

BRANGAENE: (lauschend). Noch sind sie nah':
deutlich tönt's daher.

ISOLDE: (lauschend). Sorgende Furcht
beirrt dein Ohr;
dich täuscht des Laubes
säuselnd Getön',
das lachend schüttelt der Wind.

BRANGAENE: Dich täuscht deines Wunsches Ungestüm, zu vernehmen was du wähnst:—
ich höre der Hörner Schall.

ISOLDE: (lauschend). Nicht Hörnerschall tönt so hold;
des Quelles sanft
rieselnde Welle
rauscht so wonnig daher;
wie hört' ich sie,
tos'ten noch Hörner?
Im Schweigen der Nacht
nur lacht mir der Quell:
der meiner harrt
in schweigender Nacht,

BRANGAENA: (despairingly).
The love-potion!

ISOLDA: (staring with horror at Tristan). Tristan!

TRISTAN: Isolda!

ISOLDA: Must I live, then?
(falls fainting upon his breast.)

BRANGAENE: (to the women.).
Look to your lady!

TRISTAN: O rapture fraught with cunning!
O fraud with bliss over-running!

ALL THE MEN: (in a general burst of acclamation). Hail to King Mark!
Cornwall, hail!
(People have clambered over the ship's side, others have extended a bridge, and the aspect of all indicates the immediate arrival of the expected ones, as the curtain falls.)

■ ACT II

(A Garden before Isolda's chamber which lies at one side and is approached by steps. Bright and pleasant summer night. At the open door a burning torch is fixed. Sounds of hunting heard.)

SCENE I

(Brangaena, on the steps leading to the chamber, is watching the retreat of the still audible hunters. She looks anxiously back into the chamber as Isolda emerges in ardent animation.)

ISOLDA: Yet do you hear?
I lost the sound some time ago.

BRANGAENA: (listening) Still do they stay: clearly ring the horns.

ISOLDA: (listening). Fear but deludes your anxious ear;
by sounds of rustling leaves
you are deceived,
aroused by laughter of winds.

BRANGAENA: You are deceived
by wild desire,
and but hear as would your will:—
I still hear the sound of horns.

ISOLDA: (listens). No sound of horns were so sweet:
yonder fountain's soft murmuring current moves so quietly here.
If horns yet brayed,
how could I hear that?
In still night alone
it laughs in my ear.
My loved one hides
in darkness unseen:

als ob Hörner noch nah' dir schallten,
willst du ihn fern mir halten?

BRANGAENE: Der deiner harrt—
O hör' mein Warnen!—
Dess' harren Späher zur Nacht.
Weil du erblindet
wähnst du den Blick der Welt er
blödet für euch?
Da dort an Schiffes Bord,
von Tristan's bebender Hand, die bleiche Braut
kamm ihrer mächtig,
König Marke empfing,
als Alles verwirrt auf die Wankende sah,
der güt'ge König
mild besorgt
die Mühen der langen Fahrt, die du littest,
laut beklagt:
ein Einz'ger war's,
ich achtet' es wohl,
der Tristan fasst' ins Auge;
mit böslicher List
lauern dem Blick
sucht' er in seiner Miene
zu finden, was ihm diene.
Tückish lauschend treff' ich ihn oft:
der heimlich euch umgarnt,
vor Melot seid gewarnt.

ISOLDE: Mein'st du Herrn Melot?
O wie du dich trüg'st!
Ist er nicht Tristan's treuester Freund?
Muss mein Trauter mich meiden
dann weilt er bei Melot allein.

BRANGAENE: Was mir ihn verdächtig, macht dir ihn theuer.
Von Tristan zu Marke
ist Melot's Weg:
dort sä't er üble Saat.
Die heut' im Rath
dies nächtliche Jagen
so eilig schnell beschlossen einem edlern Wild,
als dein Wähnen meint,
gilt ihre Jägers-List.

ISOLDE: Dem Freunde zu lieb erfand diese List
aus Mit-Leid
Melot der Freund:
nun willst du den Treuen schelten?
Besser als du
sorgt er für mich;
ihm öffnet er,
was du mir sperr'st;
o spar' mir des Zögerns Noth!
Das Zeichen, Brangäne!
O gieb das Zeichen!
Lösche des Lichtes letzten Schein!
Dass ganz sie sich neige,
winke der Nacht!
Schon goss sie ihr Schweigen durch Hain und Haus;
schon füllt sie das Herz
mit wonnigem Graus:
o lösche das Licht nun aus!
Lösche den scheuchenden Schein!
Lass' meinen Liebsten ein!

would you hold from my side my dearest?
deeming that horns you hear?

BRANGAENA: Your loved one hid—oh heed my warning!—
for him a spy waits by night.
And, you blinded,
to you, the eyes of all are watching on you!
That day when there on board,
from Tristan's tremulous hands
King Mark received his quite fainting, pale and passionless bride:
when all were aghast and gazing on
you,
the gracious monarch's kind concern laid the blame to weariness, of the way you had journeyed.
But there was one,
I noted it well,
who had eyes only for Tristan;
with hostile design
lowered his look;
so did he then observe him,
to find whatever might serve him.
Listening often
I light upon him:
he lays a secret snare.
Of Melot, oh beware!

ISOLDA: Mean you Sir Melot?
O, how you mistake!
Is he not Tristan's
trustiest friend?
May my true love not meet me,
with none but Melot he stays.

BRANGAENA: What moves me to fear him
makes you his friend then?
Through Tristan to Mark's side is Melot's way:
he sows suspicion's seed.
And those who have so suddenly decided,
today on a night-hunt
a far nobler game
than is guessed by you taxes their hunting skill.

ISOLDA: For Tristan's sake was this scheme contrived by means of Melot, in truth:
now would you decry his friendship!
He serves Isolda
better than you,
his hand gives help
which yours denies:
what need of such delay?
The signal, Brangaena!
O give the signal!
Tread out the torch's trembling gleam,
that night may envelop
all with her veil.
Already her peace reigns over hill and hall,
her rapturous awe
the heart does enthrall;
allow then the light to fall!
Let but its dread luster die!
Let my beloved draw near!

BRANGAENE: O lass' die warnende Zünde!
Die Gefahr lass' sie dir zeigen!—
O wehe! Wehe!
Ach mir Armen!
Des unseligen Tranks!
Dass ich untreu
einmal nur
der Herrin Willen trog!
Gehorcht' ich taub und blind, dein—Werk
war dann der Tod:
doch deine Schmach,
deine schmählichste Noth,
mein—Werk
muss ich Schuld'ge es wissen!

ISOLDE: Dein—Werk?
O thör'ge Magd!
Frau Minne kenntest du nicht?
Nicht ihrer Wunder Macht?
Des kühnsten Muthes
Königin,
des Welten-Werdens
Walterin,
Leben und Tod
sind ihr unterthan,
die sie webt aus Lust und Leid,
in Liebe wandelnd den Neid.
Des Todes Werk
nahm ich's vermessen zur Hand,
Frau Minne hat
meiner Macht es entwandt:
die Todgeweihte
nahm sie in Pfand,
fasste das Werk
in ihre Hand;
wie sie es wendet
wie sie es endet,
was sie mir küret,
wohin mich führet,
ihr ward ich zu eigen:—
nun lass' mich gehorsam zeigen!

BRANGAENE: Und musste der Minne
tückischer Trank
des Sinnes Licht dir verlöschen;
darfst du nicht sehen,
wenn ich dich warne:
nur heute hör',
o hör' mein Flehen!
Der Gefahr leuchtendes Licht—nur heute! heut'!—
die Fackel dort lösche nicht!

ISOLDE: Die im Busen mir die Gluth entfacht, die mir das Herze
brennen macht,
die mir als Tag
der Seele lacht,
Frau Minne will,
es werde Nacht,
dass hell sie dorten leuchte,
wo sie dein Licht verscheuchte.—
(Sie geht zu der Thür und nimmt die Fackel herab.)
Zur Warte du!
Dort wache treu.
Die Leuchte—
wär's meines Lebens Licht,— lachend
sie zu löschen zag' ich nicht.
(Sie wirft die Fackel zur Erde, wo sie allmälig verlöscht. Brangaene wendet sich bestürzt ab, um auf

BRANGAENA: The light of warning suppress not!
Let it remind you of peril!—
Ah, woe's me! Woe's me!
Fatal folly!
The fell power of that potion!
That I framed
a fraud for once
your order to oppose!
Had I been deaf and blind,
Your work
were then your death:
but your distress,
your distraction of grief,
my work
has contrived them, I own it!

ISOLDA: Your—act?
O foolish girl!
Love's goddess do you not know?
nor all her magic arts?
The queen who grants
unquailing hearts,
the witch whose will
the world obeys,
life and death
she holds in her hands,
which of joy and woe are woven?
She works hate into love.
The work of death
I took into my own hands;
Love's goddess saw
and gave her good commands.
The death-condemned
she claimed as her prey, planning our fate
in her own way.
How she may bend it,
how she may end it,
what she may make me,
wheresoever take me,
still hers I am solely;
so let me obey her wholly.

BRANGAENA: And if by the artful love-potion's lures
your light of reason is ravished, if you are reckless
when I would warn you.
This once, oh, wait
and weigh my pleading!
I implore, leave it alight!—
The torch! the torch!
O put it not out this night!

ISOLDA: She who causes
my bosom's throes, whose eager fire
within me glows, whose light upon
my spirit flows,
Love's goddess demands that night should close;
that brightly she may reign
and shun the vain torchlight.
(she goes up to the door and takes down the torch.) Go watch without—
keep wary guard!
The signal!—
and were it my spirit's spark, smiling
I'd destroy it and hail the dark!
(she throws the torch to the ground where it slowly dies out. Brangaena turns away, dis- einer äusseren Treppe die Zinne zu ersteigen, wo sie langsam verschwindet. Isolde lauscht und späht, zunächst schüchtern, in einen Baumgang. Von wachsendem Verlangen bewegt, schreitet sie dem Baumgang näher, und späht zuversichtlicher. Sie winkt mit einem Tuche, erst seltener, dann häufiger, und endlich, in leidenschaftlicher Ungeduld, immer schneller. Eine Gebärde des plötzlichen Entzückens sagt, dass sie den Freund in der Ferne gewahr geworden. Sie streckt sich höher, und höher, und um besser den Raum zu übersehen, eilt sie zur Treppe zurück, von deren oberster Stufe sie dem Herannahenden zuwinkt. Als er eintritt, springt sie ihm entgegen.)

ZWEITE SCENE

TRISTAN: Isolde! Geliebte!

ISOLDE: Tristan! Geliebter!
(Stürmische Umarmungen Beider, unter denen sie in den Vordergrund gelangen.)

BEIDE: Bist du mein?
Hab' ich dich wieder?
Darf ich dich fassen?
Kann ich mir trauen?
Endlich! Endlich!
An meiner Brust!
Fühl' ich dich wirklich?
Bist du es selbst?
Dies deine Augen?
Dies dein Mund?
Hier deine Hand?
Hier dein Herz?
Bin ich's? Bist du's?
Halt' ich dich fest?
Ist es kein Trug?
Ist es kein Traum?
O Wonne der Seele!
O süsse, hehrste,
kühnste, schönste,
seligste Lust!
Ohne Gleiche!
Überreiche!
Überselig!,
Ewig! Ewig!
Ungeahnte,
nie gekannte,
überschwänglich
hoch erhab'ne!
Freude-Jauchzen!
Lust-Entzücken!
Himmel-höchstes
Welt-Entrücken!
Mein Tristan!
Mein' Isolde!
Tristan!
Isolde!
Mein und dein!
Immer ein!
Ewig, ewig ein!

TRISTAN: Das Licht! Das Licht!
O dieses Licht!
Wie lang' verlosch es nicht!
Die Sonne sank,

turbed, and mounts an outer flight of steps leading to the roof, where she slowly disappears. Isolda listens and peers, at first shyly, towards an avenue. Urged by rising impatience, she then approaches the avenue and looks more boldly. She signs with her handkerchief, first slightly, then more plainly, waving it quicker as her impatience increases. A gesture of sudden delight shows that she has perceived her lover in the distance. She stretches herself higher and higher, and then, to look better over the intervening space, hastens back to the steps, from the top of which she signals again to the oncomer. As he enters, she springs to meet him.)

SCENE II

TRISTAN: (rushing in). Isolda! Beloved!

ISOLDA: Tristan! Beloved!
(passionate embrace, with which they come down to the front.)

BOTH: Are you mine?
Do I behold you?
Do I embrace you?
Can I believe it?
At last! At last!
Here on my breast!
Do I then clasp you?
Is it your own self?
Are these your eyes?
These your lips?
Here your hand?
Is it here your heart?
Is it you,
held in my arms?
Am I duped?
Is it a dream?
O rapture of spirit!
O sweetest, highest,
fairest, strongest,
holiest bliss!
Endless pleasure!
Boundless treasure!
Never to sever!
Never! Never!
Unconceived,
unbelieved,
overpowering
exaltation!
Joy-proclaiming,
bliss-outpouting,
high in heaven,
earth ignoring!
Tristan mine!
Isolda mine!
Tristan!
Isolda!
Mine alone!
Yours alone!
Ever all my own!

TRISTAN: The light! The light!
O but this light,
how long it was let to burn!
The sun had sunk,

der Tag verging;
doch seinen Neid
erstickt' er nicht;
sein scheuchend Zeichen
zündet er an,
und steckt's an der Liebsten Thüre, dass ich nicht zu ihr führe.

ISOLDE: Doch der Liebsten Hand
löschte das Licht.
Wes' die Magd sich wehrte, scheut' ich mich nicht:
in Frau Minne's Macht und Schutz
bot ich dem Tage Trutz.
Doch es rächte sich
der verscheuchte Tag;
mit deinen Sünden
Raths er pflag:
was dir gezeigt
die dämmernde Nacht,
an des Taggestirnes Königsmacht
musstest du's übergeben, um einsam
in oder Pracht
schimmernd dort zu leben.—
Wie ertrug ich's nur?
Wie ertrag' ich's noch?

TRISTAN: O! nun waren wir
Nacht-geweihte:
der tückische Tag,
der Neid-bereite,
trennen konnt' uns sein Trug,
doch nicht mehr täuschen sein Lug.
Seine eitle Pracht,
seinen prahlenden Schein
verlacht, wem die Nacht
den Blick geweih't:
seines flackernden Lichtes
flüchtige Blitze blenden nicht mehr
uns're Blicke.
Wer des Todes Nacht
liebend erschau't,
wem sie ihr tief
Geheimniss vertraut,
des Tages Lügen,
Ruhm und Ehr',
Macht und Gewinn,
so schimmernd hehr,
wie eitler Staub der Sonnen sind sie vor dem zerronnen.
In des Tages eitlem Wähnen bleibt ihm ein einzig Sehnen, das Sehnen hin
zur heil'gen Nacht,
wo ur-ewig,
einzig wahr
Liebeswonne ihm lacht.
(Tristan zieht Isolde sanft zur Seite auf eine Blumenbank nieder, senkt sich vor ihr auf die Knie und schmiegt sein Haupt in ihren Arm.)

BEIDE: O sink' hernieder, Nacht der Liebe,
gieb Vergessen,
dass ich lebe;
nimm mich auf
in deinen Schoss, löse von
der Welt mich los!
Verloschen nun
die letzte Leuchte;
was wir dachten,

the day had fled;
but all their spite
not yet was sped:
the scaring signal
they lit, before my beloved one's dwelling,
repelling my swift approach.

ISOLDA: Your beloved one's hand lowered the light,
for Brangaena's fears
in me roused no fright:
while Love's goddess gave me aid,
sunlight a mock I made.
But the light its fear
and defeat repaid;
with your misdeeds
a league it made.
What you did see
in shadowing night,
to the shining sun
of kingly might must you straightaway surrender, that it should exist in bright bonds of empty splendor.—
Could I bear it then?
could I bear it now?

TRISTAN: O now were we devoted to night,
the dishonest day
bloated with envy,
lying, could not mislead,
though it might part us indeed.
Its pretentious glows
and its glamoring light are scouted by those who worship night.
All its flickering gleams
in flashes outblazing, blind us no more
where we are gazing.
Those who boldly survey death's night,
those who have studied
her secret way,
the daylight's falsehoods—
rank and fame,
honor and all
at which men aim—to them are no more matter than dust which sunbeams scatter,
In the daylight's visions thronging only abides one longing;
we yearn to hasten
to holy night,
where, unending,
only true,
Love extends delight!
(Tristan draws Isolda gently aside to a flowery bank, sinks on his knee before her and rests his head on her arm.)

BOTH: Oh night of rapture, rest up on us!
lift our lives'
remembrance from us,
let us but abide with you
from the world,
oh, set us free!
Extinguished in
the twilight's streaming
All our doubting

was uns dachten,
all' Gedenken,
all' Gemahnen,
heil'ger Dämm'rung
hehres Ahnen
löscht des Wähnens Graus
Welt-erlösend aus.
Barg im Busen
uns sich die Sonne, leuchten lachend
Sterne der Wonne.
Von deinem Zauber
sanft umsponnen,
vor deinen Augen
süss zerronnen,
Herz an Herz dir,
Mund an Mund,
Eines Athems
einiger Bund;—
bricht mein Blick sich wonn'-erblindet,
erbleicht die Welt
mit ihrem Blenden:
die mir der Tag
trügend erhellt,
zu täuschendem Wahn
entgegengestellt,
selbst—dann
bin ich die Welt,
Liebe-heiligstes Leben,
Wonne-hehrstes Weben,
Nie-Wieder-Erwachens
wahnlos
hold bewusster Wunsch.
(Tristan und Isolde versinken wie in gänzliche Entrücktheit, in der sie, Haupt an Haupt auf die Blumenbank zurückgelehnt, verweilen.)

BRANGAENE: (unsichtbar, von der Höhe der Zinne). Einsam wachend in der Nacht,
wem der Traum
der Liebe lacht,
hab' der Einen
Ruf in Acht,
die den Schläfern
Schlimmes ahnt,
bange zum
Erwachen mahnt.
Habet Acht!
Habet Acht!
Bald entweicht die Nacht.

ISOLDE: Lausch', Geliebter!

TRISTAN: Lass' mich sterben!

ISOLDE: (allmälig sich ein wenig erhebend). Neid'sche Wache!

TRISTAN: (zurückgelehnt bleibend). Die erwachen!

ISOLDE: Doch der Tag
muss Tristan wecken?

TRISTAN: (ein wenig das Haupt erhebend).
Lass' den Tag
dem Tode weichen!

ISOLDE: Tag und Tod
mit gleichen Streichen
sollten uns're
Lieb erreichen?

all our doubting
all our memories,
all our fancies,
sacred twilight's
soft advances
bid vain fears to cease,
from the world release.
Hide our hearts away
sunlight's streaming,
bliss would bloom from stars' tender beaming.
To your enchantment
we surrender
beneath your gaze
So wondrous tender,
Heart to heart,
and lip to lip.
Each the other's breath we sip;
Blissful beams
our eyes are binding,
abashed is earth
with radiance blinding;
Lit by the daylight's dazzling heat
Undaunted by falsehoods which we defy.
You are my world,
I am yours.
Cherished visions achieving Never daunted by daylight's beam be our undying dream.
(Tristan and Isolda sink into oblivious ecstasy, reposing on the flowery bank close together.)

BRANGAENA: (from the turret, unseen). Long I watch alone by night:
You enwrapped
in love's delight, heed my boding
voice correctly,
I forewarn you
woe is near;
waken to
my words of fear,
Have a care!
Have a care!
Swiftly night does wear on!

ISOLDA: Listen, beloved!

TRISTAN: Let me die!

ISOLDA: (slowly raising herself a little). Envious watcher!

TRISTAN: (remaining in reclining position). I'll never waken.

ISOLDA: But the day must dawn and rouse you?

TRISTAN: (raising his head slightly). Let the day surrender to Death!

ISOLDA: Day and Death will both engender feud against our passion tender.

TRISTAN: (zieht Isolde, mit bedeutungsvoller Gebärde, sanft an sich). So stürben wir, um ungetrennt,
ewig einig,
ohne End',
ohn' Erwachen,
ohne Bangen,
namenlos
in Lieb' umfangen,
ganz uns selbst gegeben,
der Liebe nur zu leben.

ISOLDE: (wie in sinnender Entrücktheit zu ihm auf blickend). So stürben wir, um ungetrennt—

TRISTAN: Ewig einig—

ISOLDE: Ohne End'—

TRISTAN: Ohn' Erwachen—

ISOLDE: Ohne Bangen—

TRISTAN: Namenlos
in Lieb' umfangen—

ISOLDE: Ganz uns selbst gegeben,
der Liebe nur zu leben!
(Isolde neigt, wie überwältigt, das Haupt an seine Brust.)

BRANGAENE: (wie vorher). Habet Acht
Habet Acht!
Schon weicht dem Tag die Nacht.

TRISTAN: (lächelnd zu Isolde geneigt). Soll ich lauschen?

ISOLDE: Lass' mich sterben!

TRISTAN: Muss ich wachen?

ISOLDE: Nie erwachen!

TRISTAN: Soll der Tag
noch Tristan wecken?

ISOLDE: Lass' den Tag
dem Tode weichen!

TRISTAN: Des Tages Dräuen
trotzen wir so?

ISOLDE: (mit wachsender Begeisterung). Seinen Trug ewig zu fliehn.

TRISTAN: Sein dämmernder Schein
verscheuchte uns nie?

ISOLDE: (mit grosser Gebärde ganz sich erhebend).
Ewig währ' uns die Nacht!
(Tristan folgt ihr, sie umfangen sich in schwärmerischer Begeisterung.)

BEIDE: O süsse Nacht!
Ew'ge Nacht!
Hehr erhab'ne,
Liebes-Nacht!
Wen du umfangen,
Wem du gelacht,
wie—wär' ohne Bangen
aus dir er je erwacht?
Wie es fassen?
Wie sie lassen,
diese Wonne,
fern der Sonne,
fern der Tage
Trennungs-Klage?
Ohne Wähnen

TRISTAN: (drawing Isolda gently towards him with expressive action). O might we then die together,
each the other's
own to always!
never fearing,
never waking,
blessed delights
of love partaking,—
each to each be given,
our heaven in love alone!

ISOLDA: (gazing up at him in thoughtful ecstasy). O might we then die together!

TRISTAN: Each the other's—

ISOLDA: Own for always,—

TRISTAN: Never fearing—

ISOLDA: Never waking—

TRISTAN: Blessed delights
of love partaking—

ISOLDA: Each to each be given;
in love alone our heaven.
(Isolda, as if overcome, droops her head on his breast.)

BRANGAENA VOICE: (as before).
Have a care!
Have a care!
Night yields to daylight's glare.

TRISTAN: (bends smilingly to Isolda). Shall I listen?

ISOLDA: (looking fondly up at Tristan). Let me die!

TRISTAN: Must I waken?

ISOLDA: Nothing shall wake me!

TRISTAN: Must not daylight
dawn, and rouse me?

ISOLDA: Let the day to Death surrender!

TRISTAN: May thus the day's evil threats be defied?

ISOLDA: (with growing enthusiasm). From its slavery let us fly.

TRISTAN: And shall we not dread its dawn?

ISOLDA: (rising with a grand gesture). Night will shield us for always!
(Tristan follows her; they embrace in fond exaltation.)

BOTH: O endless Night!
blissful Night!
glad and glorious lover's Night!
Those whom you held,
lapped in delight,
how could even the boldest
unmoved endure your flight?
How to take it,
how to break it,—
joy existent,
sunlight distant.
Far from mourning,
sorrow-warning,
fancies spurning,

sanftes Sehnen
ohne Bangen
süss Verlangen,
ohne Wehen
hehr Vergehen,
ohne Schmachten
hold Umnachten;
ohne Scheiden,
ohne Meiden,
traut allein,
ewig heim,
in ungemess'nen Räumen
übersel'ges Träumen.
Du Isolde,
Tristan ich,
nicht mehr Tristan,
nicht Isolde;
ohne Nennen,
ohne Trennen,
neu Erkennen,
neu Entbrennen;
endlos ewig
ein-bewusst:
heiss erglühter Brust
höchste Liebes-Lust!

DRITTE SCENE

(Brangaene, stösst einen gellenden Schrei aus. Tristan und Isolde bleiben in verzückter Stellung. Kurwenal stürzt mit entblösstem Schwert herein.)

KURWENAL: Rette dich, Tristan!
(Er blickt mit Entsetzen hinter sich in die Scene zurück. Marke, Melot und Hofleute (in Jägertracht) kommen aus dem Baumgange lebhaft nach dem Vordergrunde und halten entsetzt der Gruppe der Liebenden gegenüber an. Brangaene kommt zugleich von der Zinne herab, und stürzt auf Isolde zu. Diese, von unwillkürlicher Scham ergriffen, lehnt sich mit abgewandtem Gesichte auf die Blumenbank. Tristan, in ebenfalls unwillkürlicher Bewegung, streckt mit dem einen Arme den Mantel breit aus, so dass er Isolde vor den Blicken der Ankommenden verdeckt. In dieser Stellung verbleibt er längere Zeit, unbeweglich den starren Blick auf die Männer gerichtet, die in verschiedener Bewegung die Augen auf ihn heften.—Morgendämmerung.)

TRISTAN: Der öde Tag—zum letzten Mal!

MELOT: (zu Marke). Das sollst du,
Herr, mir sagen,
ob ich ihn recht verklagt?
Das dir zum Pfand ich gab,
ob ich mein Haupt gewahrt?
Ich zeigt' ihn dir
in off'ner That:
Namen und Ehr'
hab' ich getreu
vor Schande dir bewahrt.

softly yearning,
fear expiring,
sweet desiring!
Anguish flying,
gladly dying;
no more pining,
night-enshrining,
never divided,
whatever happens,
side by side
still abide in realms of space unmeasured, vision blessed and treasured!
You Isolda,
Tristan I;
no more Tristan,
no more Isolda.
Never spoken,
never broken.
newly sighted,
newly lighted,
endless ever
all our dream:
in our bosoms gleam
love delights supreme!

SCENE III

(Brangaena utters a piercing cry. Tristan and Isolda remain in their absorbed state. Kurvenal rushes in with drawn sword.)

KURVENAL: Save yourself, Tristan!
(He looks fearfully off behind him. Mark, Melot, and courtiers, in hunting dress, come swiftly up the avenue and pause in the foreground in consternation before the lovers. Brangaena at the same time descends from the roof and hastens towards Isolda. The latter in involuntary shame leans on the flowery bank with averted face. Tristan, with an equally unconscious action, stretches his mantle wide out with one arm, so as to conceal Isolda from the gaze of the newcomers. In this position he remains for some time, turning a changeless look upon the men, who gaze at him in varied emotion. The morning dawns.)

TRISTAN: The dreary day—its last time comes!

MELOT: (to Mark). Now say to me,
my sovereign,
was my impeachment just?
I staked my head thereon;
now is the pledge redeemed?
Behold him in the very act:
I have faithfully saved honor and fame from shame for you!

MARKE: (nach tiefer Erschütterung, mit bebender Stimme). Thatest du's wirklich?
Wähnst du das?—
Sieh ihn dort,
den treu'sten aller Treuen:
blick' auf ihn,
den freundlichsten der Freunde;
seiner Treue frei'ste That traf mein Herz
mit feindlichstem Verrath.
Trog mich Tristan,
sollt' ich hoffen,
was sein Trügen
mir getroffen, sei durch Melot's Rath
redlich mir bewahrt?

TRISTAN: (krampfhaft heftig).
Tage-Gespenster!
Morgen-Träume—
täuschend und wüst—
entschwebt, entweicht!

MARKE: (mit tiefer Ergriffenheit). Mir—dies?
Dies—, Tristan, mir?—
Wohin nun Treue,
da Tristan mich betrog?
Wohin nun Ehr'
und echte Art,
da aller Ehren Hort,
da Tristan sie verlor?
Die Tristan sich
zum Schild erkor, wohin ist Tugend
nun entflohn,
da meinen Freund sie flieht,
da Tristan mich verrieth?
(Tristan senkt langsam den Blick zu Boden; in seinen Mienen ist, während Marke fortfährt, zunehmende Trauer zu lesen.)
Wozu die Dienste
ohne Zahl,
der Ehren Ruhm,
der Grösse Macht,
die Marken du gewannst,
musst' Ehr' und Ruhm, Grösse und Macht,
musste die Dienste
ohne Zahl
der Marke's Schmach bezahlen?
Dünkte zu wenig
dich sein Dank,
dass was du erworben,
Ruhm und Reich,
er zu Erb' und Eigen dir gab?
Dem kinderlos einst
schwand sein Weib,
so liebt' er dich,
dass nie auf's Neu'
sich Marke wollt' vermählen.
Da alles Volk
zu Hof und Land
mit Bitt' und Dräuen
in ihn drang,
die Königin dem Reiche,
die Gattin sich zu kiesen;
da selber du
den Ohm beschwor'st,
des Hofes Wunsch,
des Landes Willen
gütlich zu erfüllen:
in Wehr gegen Hof und Land,
in Wehr selbst gegen dich,

MARK: (deeply moved, with trembling voice). Have you preserved them?
You say so?
See him there,
the truest of all true hearts!
Look on him
the faithfulest of friends,
His offense,
so black and base,
fills my heart
with anguish and disgrace.
Tristan, traitor,
what hope stays
that the honor
he betrays;
should by Melot's account
rest to me indeed?

TRISTAN: (with convulsive violence). Daylight phantoms—morning visions empty and vain—
Away! Begone!

MARK: (in deep emotion). This—blow.
Tristan, to me?
Where now has truth fled,
if Tristan can betray?
Where now are faith
and friendship fair,
when from the fount of faith,
my Tristan, they are gone?
The buckler Tristan
once did wear,
where is that shield
of virtue now?
When from my friends it flies,
and Tristan's honor dies?
(Tristan slowly lowers his eyes to the ground. His features express increasing grief while Mark continues.)
Why have you done noble service and honor, fame and potent might amassed for Mark, your king?
Must honor, fame,
power and might,
must all your noble
service done
be paid with Mark's dishonor?
Seemed the reward
too slight and scant that what you have won him—realms and riches—
you are the heir unto, all?
When childless he once lost once a wife,
he loved you so that never again
did Mark desire to marry.
When all his subjects,
high and low,
demands and prayers,
on him did press
to choose himself a consort—
a queen to give the kingdom, when you yourself
urged your uncle that what the court and country pleaded well might be conceded,
opposing high and low,
opposing even yourself,

mit Güt' und List
weigert' er sich,
bis, Tristan, du ihm drohtest für immer zu meiden Hof und Land,
würdest du selber
nicht entsandt,
dem König die Braut zu frei'n,
Da liess er's denn so sein.—
Dies wunderhehre Weib, das mir dein Muth erwarb,
wer durft' es sehen,
wer es kennen,
wer mit Stolze
sein es nennen,
ohne selig sich zu preisen?
Der mein Wille
nie zu nahen wagte,
der mein Wunsch
Ehrfurcht-scheu entsagte die so herrlich hold erhaben mir die Seele
musste laben,
trotz—Feind und Gefahr, die fürstliche Braut
brachtest du mir dar.
Die kein Himmel erlöst,
warum—mir diese Hölle?
Die kein Elend sühnt,
warum—mir diese Schmach?
Den unerforschlich
furchtbar tief
geheimnissvollen Grund, wer macht der Welt ihn kund?

TRISTAN: (das Auge mitleidig zu Marke erhebend). O König, das kann ich dir nicht sagen;
und was du frägst,
das kannst du nie erfahren.—
(Er wendet sich seitwärts zu Isolde, welche die Augen sehnsüchtig zu ihm aufgeschlagen hat.) Wohin nun Tristan scheidet, willst du, Isold', ihm folgen?
Dem Land, das Tristan meint, der Sonne Licht nicht scheint;
es ist das dunkel
nächt'ge Land,
daraus die Mutter
einst mich sandt',
als, den im Tode
sie empfangen,
im Tod' sie liess
zum Licht gelangen,
Was, da sie mich gebar,
ihr Liebes-Berge war,
das Wunderreich der Nacht, aus der ich einst erwacht,— das bietet dir Tristan,
dahin geht er voran.
Ob sie ihm folge
treu und hold,
das sag' ihm nun Isold'.

ISOLDE: Da für ein fremdes Land der Freund sie einstens warb, dem Un-holden
treu und hold,
musst' Isolde folgen.
Nun führst du in dein Eigen,
dein Erbe mir zu zeigen;
wie flöh' ich wohl das Land,
das alle Welt umspannt?
Wo Tristan's Haus und Heim, with kindly cunning

still be refused, till, Tristan, you threatened forever to leave
both court and land
if you received no command
to woo a bride for the king:
then so he let you do.—
This wondrous lovely wife, your might for me did win,
who could behold her,
who address her,
who in pride
and bliss possess her,
but would bless his happy fortune?
She whom I have paid respect to ever whom I owned,
yet possess her never—she, the princess proud and peerless, lighting up
my life so cheerless,
despite foes,—without fear,
the fairest of brides
you brought me here.
Why in hell must I bide,
without hope of a heaven?
Why endure disgrace
unhealed by tears or grief?
The unexplained,
unpenetrated
cause of all these woes,
who will to us disclose?

TRISTAN: (raising his eyes pitifully towards Mark). O monarch! I—may not tell you, truly;
what do you ask remains for always unanswered.—
(he turns to Isolda, who looks tenderly up at him.)
Where is Tristan going now, will you, Isolda, follow?
The land that Tristan means has no gleams of sunlight;
it is the dark
abode of night,
from where I first came forth to light,
and she who bore me
there in anguish,
gave up her life,
nor long did languish;
She only looked on my face,
then sought this resting place.
This land where Night reigns, where Tristan once had lain now there offers he your faithful guide to be.
So let Isolda straight declare
if she will meet him there.

ISOLDA: When to a foreign land before you did invite,
to you traitor,
resting true,
did Isolda follow.
Your kingdom now is showing,
where surely we are going!
Why should I shun that land
by which the world is spanned?
For Tristan's house and home da kehr' Isolde ein:

auf dem sie folge
treu und hold,
den Weg nun zeig' Isold'!
(Tristan neigt sich langsam über sie und küsst sie sanft auf die Stirn. Melot fährt wüthend auf.)

MELOT: (das Schwert ziehend).
Verräther! Ha!
Zur Rache, König!
Duldest du diese Schmach?

TRISTAN: (zieht sein Schwert und wendet sich schnell um). Wer wagt sein Leben an das meine?
(Er heftet den Blick auf Melot.)
Mein Freund war der, er minnte mich hoch und theuer:
um Ehr' und Ruhm
mir war er besorgt wie Keiner.
Zum Uebermuth
trieb er mein Herz:
die Schaar führt' er,
die mich gedrängt,
Ehr' und Ruhm mir zu mehren, dem König dich zu vermählen.—
Dein Blick, Isolde,
blendet' auch ihn:
aus Eifer verrieth
mich der Freund
dem König, den ich verrieth.—
(Er dringt auf Melot ein.)
Wehr' dich, Melot!
(Als Melot ihm das Schwert entgegenstreckt, lässt Tristan das seinige fallen und sinkt verwundet in Kurwenal's Arme. Isolde stürzt sich an seine Brust Marke hält Melot zurück.—Der Vorhang fällt schnell.)

Isolda will make her own.
The road whereby
we have to go
I pray you quickly show!—
(Tristan bends slowly over her and kisses her softly on her forehead. Melot starts furiously forward.)

MELOT: (drawing his sword). Villain! Ha! Vengeance, Monarch.
Say, will you suffer such scorn?

TRISTAN: (drawing his sword and turning quickly round).
Who's he will set his life against mine?
(casting a look at Melot.)
This was my friend;
he told me he loved me truly:
my fame and honor
he upheld more than all men.
With arrogance
he filled my heart,
and led on those who prompted me
fame and power to augment me by wedding you to our monarch.—
Your glance, Isolda, glamored him thus;
and, jealous, my friend
played me false to King Mark, whom I betrayed.—
(he sets on Melot.)
Guard yourself Melot!
(Melot presents his sword. Tristan drops his own guard and sinks wounded into the arms of Kurvenal. Isolda throws herself upon his breast. Mark holds Melot back. The curtain falls quickly.)

■ DRITTE AKT

Burggarten.

(Zur einen Seite hohe Burggebäude, zur anderen eine niedrige Mauerbrüstung von einer Warte unterbrochen; im Hintergrunde das Burgthor. Die Lage ist auf felsiger Höhe anzunehmen; durch Oeffnungen blickt man auf einen weiten Meereshorizont. Das Ganze macht den Eindruck der Herrenlosigkeit, übel gepflegt, hie und da schadhaft und bewachsen.)

ERSTE SCENE

(Im Vordergrunde, an der inneren Seite, liegt Tristan unter dem Schatten einer grossen Linde, auf einem Ruhebett schlafend, wie leblos ausgestreckt. Zu Häupten ihm sitzt Kurwenal, in Schmerz über ihn hingebeugt, und sorgsam seinem Athem lauschet. Von der Aussenseite hört man einen Hirtendes blasen.)

■ ACT III

A Castle Garden.

(At one side high castellated buildings, on the other a low breastwork interrupted by a watch tower; at back the castle-gate. The situation is supposed to be on rocky cliffs; through openings the view extends over a wide sea horizon. The whole gives an impression of being deserted by the owner, badly kept, and here and there dilapidated and overgrown.)

SCENE I

(In the foreground, in the garden, lies Tristan sleeping on a couch under the shade of a great lime-tree, stretched out as if lifeless. At his head sits Kurvenal, bending over him in grief and anxiously listening to his breathing. From without comes the mournful sound of a shepherd's pipe.)

(Der Hirt erscheint mit dem Oberleibe über der Mauerbrüstung und blickt theilnehmend herein.)

HIRT: Kurwenal! He!—
Sag', Kurwenal!—
Hör' dort, Freund!
Wacht er noch nicht?

KURWENAL: (wendet ein wenig das Haupt nach ihm und schüttelt traurig mit dem Kopf). Erwachte er, wär's doch nur
um für immer zu verscheiden, erschien zuvor
die Aerztin nicht,
die einz'ge, die uns hilft?
Sah'st du noch nichts?
Kein Schiff noch auf der See?—

HIRT: Eine and're Weise
hörtest du dann,
so lustig wie ich sie kann.
Nun sag' auch ehrlich,
alter Freund:
was hat's mit uns'rem Herrn?

KURWENAL: Lass' die Frage;— du kannst's doch nie erfahren.—
Eifrig späh',
und siehst du das Schiff,
dann spiele lustig und hell.

HIRT: (sich wendend, und mit der Hand über'm Auge nach dem Meer ausspähend). Oed' und leer das Meer!—
(Er setzt die Schalmei an den Mund und entfernt sich blasend.)

TRISTAN: (bewegungslos, dumpf). Die alte Weise—was weckt sie mich?
(Er schlägt die Augen auf und wendet das Haupt ein wenig.)
Wo bin ich?

KURWENAL: (freudig erschrocken auffahrend). Ha!—die Stimme!
Seine Stimme!—
Tristan! Herr!
Mein Held! Mein Tristan!

TRISTAN: (mit Anstrengung).
Wer—ruft mich?

KURWENAL: Endlich! Endlich!
Leben! O Leben—
süsses Leben—meinem Tristan neu gegeben!

TRISTAN: (matt). Kurwenal!— du?
Wo—war ich?—
Wo—bin ich?

KURWENAL: Wo du bist?
In Frieden, sicher und frei!
Kareol, Herr:
Kennst du die Burg
der Väter nicht?

TRISTAN: Meiner Väter?

KURWENAL: Schau dich nur um!

TRISTAN: Was erklang mir?

KURWENAL: Des Hirten Weise, die hörtest du wieder;
am Hügel ab
hütet er deine Heerde.

TRISTAN: Meine Heerde?

(Presently, the shepherd comes and looks in with interest, showing the upper half of his body over the wall.)

SHEPHERD: Kurvenal, ho!— Say, Kurvenal,— tell me, friend!
Does he still sleep?

KURVENAL: (turning a little towards him and shaking his head sadly). If he awoke it would be but for evermore to leave us, unless we find
the lady-leech;
alone can she give help.—
Did you see anything?
No ship yet on the sea?

SHEPHERD: Quite another ditty then would I play
as merry as ever I may.
But tell me truly,
trusty friend,
why languishes our lord?

KURVENAL: Do not ask me;—
for I can give no answer.
Watch the sea,
if sails come in sight
play a sprightly melody.

SHEPHERD: (turns around and scans the horizon, shading his eyes with his hand). The sea appears blank!
(he puts the reed pipe to his mouth and withdraws, playing.)

TRISTAN: (motionless—faintly).
The tune so well known—
why wake to that?
(opens his eyes and slightly turns his head).
Where am I?

KURVENAL: (starting in joyous surprise.) Ha!—who is speaking?
It is his voice!—
Tristan! loved one!
My lord! my Tristan!

TRISTAN: (with effort). Who—calls me?

KURVENAL: Life—at last—
O thanks be to heaven!—
sweetest life unto my Tristan newly given!

TRISTAN: (faintly). Kurvenal!—
you?
Where—was I?—
Where—am I?

KURVENAL: Where are you?
In safety, tranquil and sure!
It is Kareol.
Do you not know
Your father's halls?

TRISTAN: This my father's?

KURVENAL: Look around.

TRISTAN: What woke me?

KURVENAL: The herdsman's ditty have you heard, doubtless;
he heeds your herds
above on the hills there.

TRISTAN: Have I herds, then?

KURWENAL: Herr, das mein' ich!
Dein das Haus,
Hof und Burg.
Hof und Burg.
Das Volk, getreu
dem trauten Herrn,
so gut es konnt',
hat's Haus und Heerd gepflegt das einst mein Held zu Erb' und Eigen
an Leut' und Volk verschenkt, als Alles er verliess,
in ferne Land' zu ziehn.

TRISTAN: In welches Land?

KURWENAL: Hei! nach Kornwall;
kühn und wonnig
was sich da Glückes,
Glanz und Ehren
Tristan hehr ertrotzt!

TRISTAN: Bin ich in Kornwall?

KURWENAL: Nicht doch: in Kareol.

TRISTAN: Wie kam ich her?

KURWENAL: Hei nun, wie du kam'st?
Zu Ross rittest du nicht;
ein Schifflein führte dich her:
doch zu dem Schifflein hier auf den Schultern
trug ich dich; die sind breit, die brachten dich dort zum Strand.
Nun bist du daheim zu Land,
im echten Land,
im Heimat-Land
auf eig'ner Weid' und Wonne, im Schein der alten Sonne, darin von Tod und Wunden
du selig sollst gesunden
(Er schmiegt sich an Tristan's Brust.)

TRISTAN: Dünkt dich das,— ich weis es anders,
doch kann ich's dir nicht sagen.
Wo ich erwacht,
weilt' ich nicht;
doch wo ich weilte,
das kann ich dir nicht sagen.
Die Sonne sah' ich nicht, nicht sah' ich Land noch Leute;
doch was ich sah,
das kann ich dir nicht sagen.
Ich war—
wo ich von je gewesen,
wohin auf je ich gehe:
im weiten Reich
der Welten Nacht.
Nur ein Wissen
dort uns eigen:
göttlich ew' ges
Ur-Vergessen,— wie schwand mir seine Ahnung!
Sehnsücht'ge Mahnung
nenn' ich dich,
die neu dem Licht
des Tag's mich zugetrieben?
Was einzig mir geblieben?
Ein heiss-inbrünstig Lieben,
aus Todes-Wonne-Grauen
jagt mich's, das Licht zu schauen das trügend hell und golden noch dir, Isolden, scheint!
Verfluchter Tag

KURVENAL: Sir, I say it!
Yours are court,
castle—all,
To you yet true,
your trusty folk,
as best they might,
have held your home in guard:
the gift which once your goodness gave to your serfs and vassals here, when going far away to dwell in foreign lands.

TRISTAN: What foreign land?

KURVENAL: Why! in Cornwall;
where cool and able,
all that was brilliant,
brave and noble,
Tristan, my lord, lightly took.

TRISTAN: Am I in Cornwall?

KURVENAL: No, no; in Kareol.

TRISTAN: How did I come here?

KURVENAL: Hey now! how you came?
You rode no horse:
a vessel bore you across.
But on my shoulders
down to the ship
you had to ride: they are broad,
they carried you to the shore.
Now you are at home once more;
your own land,
your native land;
all loved things now are near you,
unchanged the sun will cheer you.
The wounds from which you languish here all shall end their anguish.
(he presses himself to Tristan's breast.)

TRISTAN: You think so!
I know it is not so,
but this I cannot tell you.
Where I awoke
never I was,
but where I wandered
I indeed cannot tell you.
The sun I could not see,
nor country fair, nor people;
but what I saw
I indeed cannot tell you.
It was—the land from which I once came and where I shall return:
the endless realm
of earthly night.
One thing only
there possessed me:
blank, unending,
all—oblivion.—
How faded all forebodings?
O wistful goadings!—
Thus I call
the thoughts that all toward light of day have pressed me.
What only yet does rest me,
the love-pains that possessed me,
from blissful death's affright
now drive me toward the light, which, deceitful, bright and golden,

mit deinem Schein
Wach'st du ewig
meiner Pein?
Brennt sie ewig,
diese Leuchte,
die selbst Nachts
von ihr mich scheuchte?
Ach, Isolde!
Süsse! Holde!
Wann—endlich,
wann, ach wann
löschest du die Zünde,
dass sie mein Glück mir künde?
Das Licht, wann löscht es aus?
Wann wird es Nacht im Haus?

KURWENAL: (nach grosser Erschütterung aus der Niedergeschlagenheit sich aufraffend). Der einst ich trotzt', aus Treu' zu dir,
mit dir nach ihr
nun muss ich mich sehnen!
Glaub' meinem Wort,
du sollst sie sehen,
hier—und heut'—
den Trost kann ich dir geben, ist sie nur selbst noch am Leben.

TRISTAN: (sehr matt). Noch losch das Licht nicht aus, noch ward's nicht Nacht im Haus.
Isolde lebt und wacht,
sie rief mich aus der Nacht.

KURWENAL: Lebt sie denn,
so lass' dir Hoffnung lachen.—
Muss Kurwenal dumm dir gelten, heut' sollst du ihn nicht schelten.
Wie todt lag'st du seit dem Tag,
da Melot, der Verruchte,
dir eine Wunde schlug.
Die böse Wunde,
wie sie heilen?
Mir thör'gem Manne
dünkt' es da,
wer einst dir Morold's Wunde schloss,
der heilte leicht die Plagen
von Melot's Wehr geschlagen.
Die beste Aerztin
bald ich fand:
nach Kornwall hab' ich ausgesandt:
ein treuer Mann
wohl über's Meer
bringt dir Isolden her.

TRISTAN: (ausser sich). Isolde kommt!
Isolde naht!—
(Er ringt gleichsam nach Sprache.)
O Treue! hehre,
holde Treue!
(Er zieht Kurwenal an sich und umarmt ihn.)
Mein Kurwenal,
du trauter Freund,
du Treuer ohne Wanken,
wie soll dir Tristan danken?
Mein Schild, mein Schirm
in Kampf und Streit;

round you Isolda, shines.
Accurséd day
with cruel glow!
Must you always
wake my woe?
Must your light
be burning forever,
even by night
to sever our hearts?
Ah, my fairest,
sweetest, rarest!
When will you—
when, ah, when—
let the torchlight dwindle,
so that my bliss may kindle?
The light, how long it glows!
When will the house repose?
(his voice has grown fainter and he sinks back gently, exhausted.)

KURVENAL: (who has been deeply distressed, now quickly rouses himself from his dejection). I once defied, through faith in you,
the one for whom
now with you I'm yearning.
Trust in my words,
you soon shall see her face to face.
My tongue gives that comfort,
If on the earth still she lives.

TRISTAN: (very feebly). Yet the beacon's spark burns;
yet the house is not dark.
Isolda lives and wakes:
her voice through darkness breaks.

KURVENAL: Lives she still,
then let new hope delight you,
If foolish and dull you hold me,
this day you must not scold me.
You lay as dead
since that day
when that accurséd Melot
so foully wounded you:
Your wound was heavy:
how to heal it?
Your simple servant
there thought that she who once closed Morold's wound with ease the hurt could heal you that Melot's sword did deal you.
I found the best of leeches there,
to Cornwall have I sent for her:
a trusty serf
sails over the sea,
bringing Isolda to you.

TRISTAN: (transported). Isolda comes!
Isolda nears!
(he struggles for words.)
O friendship! high and holy friendship!
(draws Kurvenal to him and embraces him.)
O Kurvenal,
your trusty heart,
my truest friend I rank you!
However can Tristan thank you?
My shelter and shield
in fight and strife;
in weal or woe

zu Lust und Leid
mir stets bereit:
wen ich gehasst,
den hasstest du;
wen ich geminnt,
den minntest du.
Dem guten Marke,
dient ich ihm hold,
wie warst du ihm treuer als Gold!
Musst' ich verrathen
den edlen Herrn,
wie betrogst du ihn da so gern!
Dir nicht eigen,
einzig mein,
mitleidest du wenn ich leide:—
nur—was ich leide,
das—kannst du nicht leiden!
Dies furchtbare Sehnen,
das mich zehrt;
dies schmachtende Brennen,
das mich zehrt;
wollt' ich dir's nennen,
konntest du's kennen,— nicht hier würdest du weilen;
zur Warte müsstest du eilen,
mit allen Sinnen
sehnend von hinnen
nach dorten trachten und spähen, wo ihre Segel sich blähen;
wo vor den Winden,
mich zu finden,
von der Liebe Drang befeuert, Isolde zu mir steuert!—
es naht, es naht
mit muthiger Hast!
Sie weht, sie weht,
die Flagge am Mast
Das Schiff, das Schiff!
Dort streicht es am Riff!
Siehst du es nicht?
Kurwenal, siehst du es nicht?
(Als Kurwenal um Tristan nicht zu verlassen, zögert, und dieser in schweigender Spannung nach ihm blickt, ertönt, wie zu Anfang, die klagende Weise des Hirten.)

KURWENAL: (niedergeschlagen).
Noch ist kein Schiff zu seh'n!

TRISTAN: (hat mit abnehmender Aufregung gelauscht, und beginnt nun mit wachsender Schwermuth). Muss ich dich so versteh'n, du alte, ernste Weise,
mit deiner Klage Klang?—
Durch Abendwehen
drang sie bang,
als einst dem Kind
des Vaters Tod verkündet:
durch Morgengrauen
bang und bänger,
als der Sohn
der Mutter Loos vernahm.
Da er mich zeugt' und starb,
sie sterbend mich gebar,
die alte Weise
sehnsuchts bang
zu ihnen wohl
auch klagend drang,
die einst mich frug,
und jetzt mich frägt,
zu welchem Loos erkoren
ich damals wohl geboren?

you're mine for life.
Those whom I hate
you hate too;
those whom I love
you love too.
When good King Mark
I followed of old,
you were to him truer than gold.
When I was false
to my noble friend,
to betray too you did descend.
You are selfless,
solely mine;
you feel for me
when I suffer.
But—what I suffer,
you cannot feel for me!
This terrible yearning in my heart,
this feverish burning's cruel smart,—
did I but show it,
could you but know it,
no time here would you tarry,
to watch from tower you would hurry;
with all devotion
viewing the ocean,
with eyes impatiently spying,
there, where her ship's sails are flying.
Before the wind she drives to find me;
on the wings of love she nears.—
Isolda steers here!—
she nears, she nears,
so boldly and fast!
It waves, it waves.
the flag from the mast!
Hurra! Hurra!
She reaches the bar!
Do you not see?
Kurvenal, do you not see?
(as Kurvenal hesitates to leave Tristan, who is gazing at him in mute expectation, the mournful tune of the shepherd is heard, as before.)

KURVENAL: (dejectedly). Still is no ship in sight.

TRISTAN: (has listened with waning excitement and now recommences with growing melancholy). Is this the meaning then, your old pathetic ditty,
of all your sighing sound?—
On evening's breeze
it sadly rang
when, as a child,
my father's death-news chilled me:
through morning's mist
it stole more sadly,
when the son
his mother's fate was taught, when they who gave me breath both felt the hand of death to them came also through their pain
the ancient ditty's
yearning strain,
which asked me once
and asks me now
which was the fate before me to which my mother bore me?—
What was the fate?—

Zu welchem Loos?—
Die alte Weise
sagt mir's wieder:
mich sehnen—und sterben.
Nein! ach nein!
So heisst sie nicht!
Sehnen! Sehnen!
Im Sterben mich zu sehnen vor Sehnsucht nicht zu sterben!
Die nie erstirbt,
sehnend nun ruft
um Sterbens Ruh'
sie der fernen Ärztin zu.
Sterbend lag ich stumm im Kahn,
der Wunde Gift dem Herzen nah':
Sehn sucht klagend klang die Weise;
den Segel blähte der Wind
hin zu Irlands Kind.
Die Wunde, die sie hielend schloss, riss mit dem Schwert sie wieder los;
das Schwert dann aber liess sie sinken;
den Gift trank gab sie mir zu trinken:
wie ich da hoffte ganz zu gennsen da war der sehrendste Zauber erlesen:
dass nie ich sollte sterben,
mich ew'ger Qual vererben!
Der Trank! der Trank!
der furchtbare Trank!
Wie vom Herz zum Hirn
er wüthend mir drang!
Kein Heil nun kann,
kein süsser Tod je mich befrein'
von der Sehnsucht Noth, nirgends, ach nirgends find' ich Ruh':
mich wirft die Nacht dem Tage zu um ewig an meinen Leiden
der Sonne Auge zu weiden.
O dieser Sonne sengender Strahl, wie brennt mir das Hirn
seine glühende Qual!
Für dieser Hitze heisses Verschmachten,
ach, keines Schattens kühlend Umnachten!
Für diese Schmerzen schreckliche Pein, welcher Balsam sollte mir
Lind'rung verleihn?
Den furchtbaren Trank,
der der Qual mich vertraut,
ich selbst, ich selbst, ich hab' ihn gebraut!
Aus Vaters Noth und Mutter Weh, aus Liebes Thränen eh' und je,
aus Lachen und Weinen,
Wonnen und Wunden
hab' ich des Trankes Gifte gefunden!
Den ich gebraut,
der mir geflossen,
den Wonne schlürfend je ich genossen,
verflucht sei, furchtbarer Trank!
Verflucht, wer dich gebraut!
(Er sinkt ohnmächtig zurück.)

KURWENAL: (der vergebens Tristan zu mässigen suchte, schreit entsetzt auf). Mein Herre! Tristan!—
Schrecklicher Zauber!—

The strain so plaintive
now repeats it:—
for yearning—and dying!
No! Ah no!
It means not that!
Longing! Longing!
To die while I am longing,
yet live for very longing.
What does not die,
lovingly calls,
my death to ease,
my Isolda over the seas.
Dying and adrift I lay,
the poisoned wound was near my heart:
wistful wailed that strain of sorrow;
the winds our courses beguiled,
far to Ireland's child.
The wound that she had closed and healed,
she with sword again revealed,
that sword then seh let fall to save me;
until the poisoned draught she gave me;
and when there with I hoped to restore me,
I found a fevering magic was over me,
that death would find me never,
but life in pain forever!
That drink! that drink!
that terrible drink!
How from breast to brain I burned
as I drank!
No care can cure,
no death regain for me my freedom
from wistful pain;
nowhere, ah nowhere is there rest;
for I'm by night to daylight cast,
for yes while my woe does wound me,
the sunlight shines around me!
O yonder sunlight's withering beam,
it burns my brain with the glow of its gleam!
This hateful heat does wither and burn me
no shadows cool where to I can turn me!
Of this deep ache, this anguish of pain,
never balsam's virtue will heal me again!
The terrible drink,
that my life has inbued with pain,
by me, by me was it brewed!
Of father's grief, of mother's cry,
of lovers' tears from one and one,
from you and from wounds,
laughter and sorrow,
Did I that potion's poison borrow!
Such was by brew,
such to me slipped it,
Such filled with rapture ever I sipped it;
I curse you, horrible drink!
Cursed he, who brewed and drank!
(he falls back senseless.)

KURVENAL: (who has been vainly striving to calm Tristan cries out in terror). My master! Tristan!—
Frightful enchantment!—

O Minne-Trug!—
O Liebes-Zwang!
Der Welt holdester Wahn,
wie ist's um dich gethan!
Hier liegt er nun,
der wonnige Mann,
der wie Keiner geliebt und geminnt:
nun seht, was von ihm
sie Dankes gewann,
was je sich Minne gewinnt!
(Mit schluchzender Stimme.)
Bist du nun todt?
Lebst du noch?
Hat dich der Fluch entführt?—
(Er lauscht seinem Athem.)
O Wonne! Nein!
Er regt sich! Er lebt!—
Wie sanft er die Lippen rührt!

TRISTAN: (sehr leise beginnend). Das Schiff—siehst du's noch nicht?

KURWENAL: Das Schiff? Gewiss, das naht noch heut';
es kann nicht lang' mehr säumen.

TRISTAN: Und drauf Isolde, wie sie winkt—
wie sie hold
mir Sühne trinkt?
Siehst du sie?
Siehst du sie noch nicht?
Wie sie selig,
hehr und milde
wandelt durch
des Meer's Gefilde?
Auf wonniger Blumen
sanften Wogen
kommt sie licht
an's Land gezogen:
sie lächelt mir Trost
und süsse Ruh';
sie führt mir letzte
Labung zu.
Isolde! Ach, Isolde!
wie schön bist du!—
Und Kurwenal, wie?
Du säh'st sie nicht?
Hinauf zur Warte,
du blöder Wicht,
was so hell und licht ich sehe,
dass das dir nicht entgehe.
Hörst du mich nicht?
Zur Warte schnell!
Eilig zur Warte!
Bist du zur Stell'?
Das Schiff, das Schiff!
Isolden's Schiff—
du musst es sehen,
musst es sehen!
Das Schiff—säh'st du's noch nicht?
(Während Kurwenal noch zögernd mit Tristan ringt, lässt der Hirt von aussen die Schalmei ertönen.)

KURWENAL: (freudig aufspringend). O Wonne! Freude!
(Er stürzt auf die Warte und späht aus.)
Ha! Das Schiff!
Von Norden seh' ich's nah'n.

TRISTAN: Wusst' ich's nicht?
Sagt' ich es nicht?
Dass sie noch lebt,
noch am Leben mir webt.
Die mir Isolde

O love's deceit!
O passion's power!
Most sweet dream beneath the sun,
see the work you have done!—
Here he lies now,
the noblest of knights,
with his passion all others above:
behold! What reward
his ardor requites;
the one sure reward of love!
(with sobbing voice.)
Are you then dead?
Do you not live?
Have you succumbed to the curse?
(he listens for Tristan's breath.)
O rapture! No!
He still moves! He lives!
and gently his lips are stirred.

TRISTAN: (very faintly). The ship—is it yet in sight?

KURVENAL: The ship? Be sure it will come today:
it cannot tarry longer.

TRISTAN: On board Isolda,— see, she smiles—
with the cup
that reconciles.
Do you see?
Do you see her now!
Full of grace
and loving mildness, floating over
the ocean's wildness?
Lightly lifted,
by billows of flowers
gently toward
the land she's drifted.
Her look brings ease
and sweet repose;
her hand one last relief bestows.
Isolda! Ah, Isolda!
How sweet you are!—
And Kurvenal, why!—
what ails your sight?—
Away, and watch for her,
foolish wight.
What I see so well and plainly,
let not your eye seek vainly,
Do you not hear?
Away, with speed!
Haste to the watchtower!
Will you not heed?
The ship, the ship!
Isolda's ship!—
You must discern it,
must perceive it!
The ship—do you see it?—
(while Kurvenal, still hesitating, opposes Tristan, the Shepherd's pipe is heard without, playing a joyous strain.)

KURVENAL: (springing joyously up). O rapture! Transport!
(he rushes to the watchtower and looks out.)
Ha! the ship!
From northward it is nearing.

TRISTAN: So I knew,
so I said!
Yes, she yet lives,
and gives life to me.
How could Isolda

einzig enthält,
wie wär' Isolde
mir aus der Welt?

KURWENAL: (jauchzend). Hahei!
Hahei!
Wie es muthig steuert!
Wie stark das Segel sich bläht!
Wie es jagt! Wie es fliegt!

TRISTAN: Die Flagge? Die Flagge?

KURWENAL: Der Freude Flagge am Wimpel lustig und hell.

TRISTAN: Heiaha! Der Freude!
Hell am Tage
zu mir Isolde.
Isolde zu mir!—
Siehst du sie selbst?

KURWENAL: Jetzt schwand das
Schiff
hinter dem Fels.

TRISTAN: Hinter dem Riff?
Bringt es Gefahr?
Dort wüthet die Brandung,
scheitern die Schiffe.—
Das Steuer, wer führt's?

KURWENAL: Der sicherste Seemann.

TRISTAN: Verrieth er mich?
Wär' er Melot's Genoss?

KURWENAL: Trau' ihm wie mir!

TRISTAN: Verräther, auch du!
Un-seliger!
Siehst du sie wieder?

KURWENAL: Noch nicht.

TRISTAN: Verloren!

KURWENAL: Haha! Heiahaha!
Vorbei! Vorbei!
Glücklich vorbei!
In sich'ren Strom
steuert zum Hafen das Schiff.

TRISTAN: (jauchzend). Heiaha!
Kurwenal!
Treuster Freund!
All' mein Hab' und Gut
vererb' ich noch heut'.

KURWENAL: Sie nahen im Flug.

TRISTAN: Siehst du sie endlich?
Siehst du Isolde?

KURWENAL: Sie ist's! Sie winkt.

TRISTAN: O seligstes Weib!

KURWENAL: Im Hafen der Kiel!—
Isolde—ha!
mit einem Sprung
springt sie vom Bord zum Strand.

TRISTAN: Herab von der Warte!
Müssiger Gaffer!
Hinab! Hinab
an den Strand!
Hilf ihr! Hilf meiner Frau!

KURWENAL: Sie trag' ich herauf:
trau' meinen Armen!
Doch du, Tristan,
bleib' mir treulich am Bett! (Er eilt fort.)

from this world be free, which only holds
Isolda for me?

KURVENAL: (shouting). Ahoy!
Ahoy!
See her bravely tacking!
How full the canvas is filled!
How she darts! how she flies!

TRISTAN: The pennon? the pennon?

KURVENAL: A flag is floating at mast-head,
joyous and bright.

TRISTAN: Aha! what joy!
Now through the daylight comes my Isolda.
Isolda, oh come!
Can you see her herself?

KURVENAL: The ship is shut from me by rocks.

TRISTAN: Behind the reef?
Is there not risk!
Those dangerous breakers have often shattered ships.—
Who steers the helm?

KURVENAL: The steadiest seaman.

TRISTAN: Does he betray me?
Is he Melot's ally?

KURVENAL: Trust him like me.

TRISTAN: A traitor you, too!—
O caitiff!
Can you not see her?

KURVENAL: Not yet.

TRISTAN: Destruction!

KURVENAL: Aha! Halla-halloa!
they clear! they clear!
Safely they clear!
Inside the surf
steers now the ship to the strand.

TRISTAN: (shouting in joy.) Hallo-ho! Kurvenal!
Trustiest friend!
All the wealth I own
today I bequeath you.

KURVENAL: With speed they approach.

TRISTAN: Now do you see her?
Do you see Isolda?

KURVENAL: It is she! she waves!

TRISTAN: O divine woman!

KURVENAL: The ship is at land!
Isolda!—ha!—
With but one leap lightly she springs to land!

TRISTAN: Descend from the watchtower,
indolent gazer!
Away! away
to the shore!
Help her! help my beloved!

KURVENAL: In a moment she shall
come;
Trust in my strong arm!
But you, Tristan,
hold yourself tranquilly here!
(he hastens off.)

TRISTAN: (in höchster Aufregung auf dem Lager sich mühend). O, diese Sonne!
Ha, dieser Tag!
Ha, dieser Wonne
sonnigster Tag!
Jagendes Blut,
jauchzender Muth!
Lust ohne Maassen,
freudiges Rasen:
auf des Lagers Bann
wie sie ertragen?
Wohlauf und daran,
wo die Herzen schlagen!
Tristan, der Held,
in jubelnder Kraft hat sich vom Tod emporgerafft!
(Er richtet sich hoch auf.)
Mit blutender Wunde
bekämpft' ich einst MoroIden:
mit blutender Wunde
erjag' ich mir heut' Isolden.
(Er reisst den Verband der Wunde auf.)
Hahei! Mein Blut,
lustig nun fliesse!
(Er springt vom Lager herab und schwankt vorwärts.)
Die mir die Wunde
auf ewig schliesse, sie naht wie ein Held,
sie naht mir zum Heil:
vergehe die Welt
meiner jauchzenden Eil'!
(Er taumelt nach der Mitte der Bühne.)

ISOLDE: (von aussen). Tristan!
Tristan! Geliebter!

TRISTAN: (in der furchtbarsten Aufregung). Wie hör' ich das Licht!
Die Leuchte—ha!
Die Leuchte verlischt!
Zu ihr! Zu ihr!

ZWEITE SCENE

(Isolde eilt athemlos herein, Tristan, seiner nicht mächtig, stürzt sich ihr schwankend entgegen. In der Mitte der Bühne begegnen sie sich; sie empfängt ihn in ihren Armen.)

ISOLDE: Tristan! ha!

TRISTAN: (sterbend zu Isolden aufblickend). Isolde!—
(Er stirbt.)

ISOLDE: Ich bin's, ich bin's—süssester Freund!
Auf! noch einmal!
Hör' meinen Ruf!
Achtest du nicht?
Isolde ruft:
Isolde kam,
mit Tristan treu zu sterben.—
Bleibst du mir stumm!
Nur eine Stunde,—
nur eine Stunde
bleibe mir wach!
So bange Tage
wachte sie sehend,

TRISTAN: (tossing on his couch in feverish excitement). O sunlight glowing, glorious ray!
Ah, joy-bestowing
radiant day!
Bounds my blood,
boisterous flood!
Infinite gladness!
Rapturous madness!
Can I bear to lie
couched here in quiet?
Away, let me fly
to where hearts run riot!
Tristan the brave,
exulting in strength,
has torn himself
from death at length.
(he raises himself erect.)
All wounded and bleeding
Sir Morold I defeated;
all bleeding and wounded
Isolda now shall be greeted.
(he tears the bandage from his wound.)
Ha, ha, my blood!
Merrily flows it.
(he springs from his bed and staggers forward.)
She who can help
my wound and close it,
she comes in her pride,
she comes to my aid.
Be space defied
let the universe fade!
(he reels to the center of the stage.)

ISOLDE: (without). Tristan! Tristan! Belovéd!

TRISTAN: (in frantic excitement).
What! hails me the light?
The torchlight—ha!—
The torch is extinct!
I come! I come!

SCENE II

(Isolde hastens breathlessly in. Tristan, delirious with excitement, staggers wildly towards her. They meet center of the stage; she receives him in her arms where he sinks slowly to the ground.)

ISOLDA: Tristan! Ah!

TRISTAN: (turning his dying eyes on Isolda). Isolda!—
(he dies.)

ISOLDA: It is I, It is I—dearly beloved!
Wake, and once more
hark to my voice!
Isolda calls.
Isolda comes,
with Tristan true to perish.—
Speak onto me!
But for one moment,
only one moment
open your eyes!
Such weary days
I waited and longed,
that one single hour

um eine Stunde
mit dir noch zu wachen.
Betrügt Isolden,
betrügt sie Tristan um dieses einz'ge
ewig-kurze
letzte Welten-Glück?—
Die Wunde—wo?
Lass sie mich heilen,
dass wonnig und hehr
die Nacht wir theilen.
Nicht an der Wunde,
an der Wunde stirb mir nicht!
Uns beiden vereint
erlösche das Lebenslicht!—
Gebrochen der Blick!
Still das Herz?
Treuloser Tristan,
mir diesen Schmerz?
Nicht eines Athems
flücht'ges Weh'n?
Muss sie nun jammernd
vor dir steh'n,
die sich wonnig dir zu vermählen
muthig kam über Meer?
Zu spät! Zu spät!
Trotziger Mann!
Straf'st du mich so mit hartestem Bann?
Ganz ohne Huld
meiner Leidens-Schuld?
Nicht meine Klagen
darf ich dir sagen?
Nur einmal, ach!
Nur einmal noch!—
Tristan—ha!
horch'—er wacht!
Geliebter—
Nacht!
(Sie sinkt bewusstlos über der Leiche zusammen.)

DRITTE SCENE

(Kurwenal was sogleich hinter Isolde zurückgekommen; sprachlos in furchtbarer Erschütterung hat er dem Auftritte beigewohnt und bewegungslos auf Tristan hingestarrt. Aus der Tiefe hört man jetzt dumpfes Getümmel und Waffengeklirr. Der Hirt kommt über die Mauer gestiegen.)

HIRT: (hastig und leise sich zu Kurwenal wendend). Kurwenal!
Hör'!
Ein zweites Schiff.
(Kurwenal fährt heftig auf, und blickt über die Brüstung, während der Hirt aus der Ferne erschüttert auf Tristan und Isolde sieht.)

KURWENAL: Tod und Hölle!
(In Wuth ausbrechend.)
Alles zur Hand!
Marke und Melot
hab' ich erkannt.—
Waffen und Steine!
Hilf mir! An's Thor!
(Er springt mit dem Hirt an das Thor, das Beide in der Hast zu verrammeln suchen.)

I might awaken you.
Am I betrayed then?
Deprived by Tristan
of this our solitary,
swiftly fleeting,
final earthly joy?—
His wound, though—where?
Can I not heal it?
The rapture of night
O let us feel it!
Not of your wounds,
not of your wounds must you expire!
Together, at least,
let fade life's enfeebled fire!—
How lifeless his look!— still his heart!—
Dared he to deal me
such a smart?
Stayed is his breathing's
gentle tide!
Must I be wailing
at his side,
who, in rapture coming to seek him,
fearless sailed over the sea?
Too late, too late!
Desperate man!
Casting on me
this cruelest ban!
Comes no relief
for my load of grief?
Silent he keeps
while I am weeping?
But once more, ah!
But once again!—
Tristan!—ha!
he wakens—hark!
Beloved—
Dark!
(she sinks down senseless upon his body.)

SCENE III

(Kurvenal, who reentered close behind Isolda, has remained by the entrance speechless and petrified, gazing motionless on Tristan. From below is now heard the dull murmur of voices and the clash of weapons. The Shepherd clambers over the wall.)

SHEPHERD: (coming hastily and softly to Kurvenal). Kurvenal!
Hear!
Another ship!
(Kurvenal starts up in haste and looks over the rampart while the Shepherd stands apart, gazing in consternation on Tristan and Isolda.)

KURVENAL: Fiends and furies!
(in a burst of anger.)
All are at hand!
Melot and Mark
I see on the strand,—
Weapons and missiles!—
We must guard the gate!
(he hastens with the Shepherd to the gate, which they both try quickly to barricade.)

DER STEUERMANN: (stürzt herein). Marke mir nach mit Mann und Volk!
Vergeb'ne Wehr!
Bewältigt sind wir.

KURWENAL: Stell' dich, und hilf'!—
So lang' ich lebe, lugt mir Keiner herein!

BRANGAENE'S STIMME: (aussen, von unten her). Isolde, Herrin!

KURWENAL: Brangäne's Ruf?
(Hinabrufend.)
Was such'st du hier?

BRANGAENE: Schliess' nicht, Kurwenal!
Wo ist Isolde?

KURWENAL: Verräth'rin auch du?
Weh' dir, Verruchte!

MELOTS STIMME: (von aussen).
Zurück, du Thor!
Stemm' dich dort nicht!

KURWENAL: (wüthend auflachend). Heiaha dem Tag, da ich dich treffe!
(Melot, mit gewaffneten Männern, erscheint unter dem Thor. Kurwenal stürzt sich auf ihn und streckt ihn zu Boden.) Stirb, schändlicher Wicht!

VIERTE SCENE

MELOT: Wehe mir!—Tristan!
(Er Stirbt.)

BRANGAENE: (noch ausserbalb). Kurwenal! Wüthender?
Hör', du betrügst dich.

KURWENAL: Treulose Magd!—
(Zu den Seinen.)
Drauf! Mir nach!
Werft sie zurück!
(Sie kämpfen.)

MARKE: (ausserhalb). Halte, Rasender!
Bist du von Sinnen?

KURWENAL: Hier wüthet der Tod.
Nichts and'res, König,
ist hier zu holen:
willst du ihn kiesen, so komm!
(Er dringt auf Marke und dessen Gefolge ein.)

MARKE: Zurück, Wahnsinniger!

BRANGAENE: (hat sich seitwärts über die Mauer geschwungen, und eilt in den Vordergrund).
Isolde! Herrin!
Glück und Heil!—
Was seh' ich, ha!
Lebst du? Isolde! (Sie müht sich um Isolde.)

MARKE: (mit seinem Gefolge hat Kurwenal mit dessen Helfern vom Thore zurückgetrieben und dringt herein). O Trug und Wahn!
Tristan, wo bist du?

THE STEERSMAN: (rushing in).
Mark and his men.
have set on us:
defense is in vain!
We're overpowered.

KURVENAL: Stand to and help!—
While lasts my life
I'll let no foe enter here!

BRANGAENA'S VOICE: (without, calling from below). Isolda! Mistress!

KURVENAL: Brangaena's voice!
(falling down.)
What want you here?

BRANGAENA: Open, Kurvenal!
Where is Isolda?

KURVENAL: Do you come with foes?
Woe to you, false one!

MELOT'S VOICE: (without).
Stand back, fool!
Do not bar the way!

KURVENAL: (laughing savagely). Hurrah for the day on which I confront you!
(Melot, with armed men, appears under the gateway. Kurvenal falls on him and cuts him down.)
Die, damnable wretch!

SCENE IV

MELOT: Woe's me!—Tristan!
(he dies.)

BRANGAENA: (still without).
Kurvenal! Madman!
O hear—you are making a mistake!

KURVENAL: Treacherous maid!
(to his men.)
Come! Follow me!
Force them below!
(they fight.)

MARK: (without). Hold, you frantic man!
Are your senses lost?

KURVENAL: Here ravages Death!
Nothing else, O king,
is here to behold!
If you would earn it, come on!
(he sets upon Mark and his followers.)

MARK: Away, rash maniac!

BRANGAENA: (has climbed over the wall at the side and rushes to the front). Isolda! lady.
Joy and life!—
What sight's here—ha!
You live, Isolda!
(she goes to Isolda's aid.)

MARK: (who with his followers has driven Kurvenal and his men back from the gate and forced his way in). O wild mistake!
Tristan, where are you?

KURWENAL: (schwer verwundet, schwankt vor Marke her nach dem Vordergrund). Da liegt er—da—hier, wo ich liege—!
(Er sinkt zu Tristan's Füssen zusammen.)

MARKE: Tristan! Tristan!
Isolde! Weh'!

KURWENAL: (nach Tristan's Hand fassend). Tristan! Trauter!
Schilt mich nicht,
dass der Treue auch mit kommt!
(Er stirbt.)

MARKE: Todt denn Alles!
Alles todt?
Mein Held! Mein Tristan!
Trautester Freund?
Auch heute noch
musst du den Freund verrathen?
Heut', wo er kommt
dir höchst Treu' zu bewähren!
Erwach'! Erwach'!
Erwache meinem Jammer,
du treulos treuester Freund!
(Schluchzend über die Leichen sich herabbeugend.)

BRANGAENE: (die in ihren Armen Isolde wieder zu sich gebracht). Sie wacht! Sie lebt!
Isolde, hör'!
Hör' mich, süsseste Frau!
Glückliche Kunde
lass' mich dir melden:
vertrautest nicht Brangänen?
Ihre blinde Schuld
hat sie gesühnt;
als du verschwunden,
schnell fand sie den König:
des Trankes Geheimniss erfuhr er kaum,
als mit sorgender Eil'
in See er stach,
dich zu erreichen,
dir zu entsagen,
dich zuzuführen dem Freund.

MARKE: Warum, Isolde,
warum, mir das?
Da hell mir ward enthüllt,
was zuvor ich nicht fassen konnt', wie selig, das ich den Freund
frei von Schuld da fand!
Dem holden Mann
dich zu vermählen,
mit vollen Segeln
flog ich dir nach:
doch Unglückes
Ungestüm,
wie erreicht es, wer Frieden bringt?
Die Aernte mehrt' ich dem Tod:
der Wahn häufte die Noth!

BRANGAENE: Hörst du uns nicht?
Isolde! Traute!
Vernimmst du die Treue nicht?

KURVENAL: (desperately wounded, totters before Mark to the front.) He lies—there—here, where I lie too.—
(sinks down at Tristan's feet.)

MARK: Tristan! Tristan!
Isolda! Woe!

KURVENAL: (trying to grasp Tristan's hand). Tristan! true lord!
Chide me not that I try to follow you! (he dies.)

MARK: Dead together!—
All are dead!
My hero Tristan!
truest of friends,
must you again
be a traitor to your king?
Now, when he comes,
another proof of love to give you!
Awaken! awaken!
O hear my lamentation,
You faithless, faithful friend!
(kneels down sobbing over the bodies.)

BRANGAENA: (who has revived Isolda in her arms). She wakes! she lives!
Isolda, hear!
Hear me, mistress beloved!
Tidings of joy
I have to tell you;
O listen to Brangaena!
My thoughtless fault I have atoned;
after your flight
I went to the king:
the love potion's secret
he scarcely had learned when with sedulous haste
he put to sea,
that he might find you,
nobly renounce you,
and give you to your love.

MARK: O why, Isolda,
Why this to me?
When clearly was disclosed
what before I could not fathom, what joy was mine to find my friend was free from fault!
In haste to wed
you to my hero
with flying sails
I followed your track:
but however can happiness
overtake the swift course of woe?
More food did I make for Death:
more wrong grew in mistake.

BRANGAENA: Do you not hear?
Isolda! Lady!
O try to believe the truth!

ISOLDE: (die nichts um sich her vernommen, heftet das Auge mit wachsender Begeisterung auf Tristan's Leiche). Mild und leise wie er lächelt, wie das Auge
hold er öffnet:
seht ihr, Freunde,
seh't ihr's nicht?
Immer lichter
wie er leuchtet, wie er minnig
immer mächt'ger,
Stern-umstrahlet
hoch sich hebt:
seht ihr Freunde,
seh't ihr's nicht?
Wie das Herz ihm
muthig schwillt,
voll und hehr
im Busen quillt:
wie den Lippen
wonnig mild,
süsser Athem
sanft entweht:—
Freunde, seht—
fühlt und seht ihr's nicht!—
Höre ich nur
diese Weise, die so wunder-
voll und leise,
Wonne klagend,
Alles sagend,
mild versöhnend
aus ihm tönend,
in mich dringet,
auf sich schwingt,
hold erhallend
um mich klinget?
Heller schallend,
mich umwallend,
sind es Wellen
sanfter Lüfte?
Sind es Wogen
wonniger Düfte?
Wie sie schwellen,
mich umrauschen,
soll ich athmen,
Soll ich lauschen?
soll ich schlürfen,
untertauchen,
süss in Düften
mich verhauchen?
In dem wogenden Schwall,
in dem tönenden Schall,
in des Welt-Athems
wehendem All—ertrinken—versinken—unbewusst—höchste Lust!
(Isolde sinkt wie verklärt in Brangaene's Armen sanft auf Tristan's Leiche.—Grosse Rührung und Entrücktheit unter den Umstehenden. Marke segnet die Leichen.—Der Vorhang fällt langsam.)

ENDE

ISOLDA: (unconscious of all around her, turning her eyes with rising inspiration on Tristan's body). Mild and softly he is smiling;
how his eyelids sweetly open!
See, oh comrades,
Do you not see how he beams ever brighter—
how he rises ever radiant
steeped in starlight,
borne above?
Do you not see how his heart
with lion zest, calmly happy
beats in his breast?
From his lips
in heavenly rest sweetest breath
he softly sends.
Listen, friends!
Do you hear and feel not?
Am I alone hearing strains so tender
and endearing?
Passion swelling,
all things telling,
gently bounding,
from him sounding,
in me pushes,
upward rushes trumpet tone
that around me gushes.
Brighter growing,
over me flowing,
are these breezes
airy pillows?
Are they balmy beauteous billows?
How they rise
and gleam and glisten!
Shall I breathe them?
Shall I listen?
Shall I sip them,
dive within them,
to my panting
breathing win them?
In the breezes around,
in the harmony sound,
in the world's driving whirlwind be drowned—
and, sinking,
be drinking—
in a kiss,
highest bliss!
(Isolda sinks, as if transfigured, in Brangaena's arms upon Tristan's body. Profound emotion and grief of the bystanders. Mark invokes a blessing on the dead. Curtain.)

THE END

Die Meistersinger Von Nürnberg (1868)

The Master Singers of Nuremberg

MUSIC AND LIBRETTO BY RICHARD WAGNER

This three-act opera, set to a libretto by the composer, was first performed at the Hoftheater in Munich on June 21, 1868. Walther von Stolzing, a young knight, sights Eva, daughter of the jeweler Pogner, at the church of St. Katherine in Nuremberg on the eve of the feast of St. John. He asks if she is betrothed. She is not, but her father intends that she marry the winner of the Meistersingers' competition. Eva can refuse the winner, but she must marry a meistersinger. Eva falls in love with Walther, who is not a Meistersinger, and Walther begs the Meistersingers to allow him to join the guild. They ask him if he knows the rules. Although David, beau to Eva's friend Magdalene, has tried to teach him, Walther tells them he has learned everything from the birds, waterfalls, breezes and Walther von de Vogelweide's poetry. Beckmesser, also in love with Eva, is designated to record all of the competitors' mistakes. Walther sings a passionate song about spring, but his song doesn't follow the rules and is rejected. Hans Sachs, the shoemaker/poet, is sitting outside his workshop, contemplating Walther's beautiful singing. Eva asks him to find out what went wrong with Walther's mastersong, but she doesn't understand his explanation. Sachs overhears Walther and Eva discussing their plans to elope. Beckmesser comes to serenade Eva. The lovers hide themselves behind a tree. Beckmesser botches his serenade, with Sach's help, waking the neighbors and getting into a brawl. The lovers try to escape again, but Sachs stops them. Walther tells Sachs of his dream; Sachs writes down the words, and together they create a gorgeous mastersong. Beckmesser finds the mastersong, written in Sachs' hand, and, thinking it's a poem written by Sachs to win Eva's hand, he steals it. At the tournament, Beckmesser sings first, to the jeering of the crowd. Sachs explains the song's origins and asks Walther to sing. Walther is offered the Meistersingers' crown and Eva's hand in marriage; although his inclination is to refuse the prize in remembrance of his earlier rejection, Sachs tells him he must respect art's traditions. Walther is admitted to the guild; Eva gives Walther's crown to Sachs, who is proclaimed chief of the Meistersingers.

■ ACT I

(Die Bühne stellt das Innere der Katharinenkirche in schrägem Durschnitt dar; von dem Hauptschiff sind nur noch die letzten Reihen der Kirchenstuhlbänke sicthbar; den Vordergrund nimmt der freie Raum vor dem Chor ein; dieser wird später durch einen; Vorhang gegen das Schiff zu gänzlich abgeschlossen.

Beim Aufzug hört man, unter Orgelbegleitung, von der Germeinde den letzten Vers eines Chorales, mit welchem der Nachmittagsgottesdienst zur Einleitung des Johannisfestes schliesst, singen.)

CHORAL DER GEMEINDE: Dazu dir der Heiland kam, willig deine Taufe nahm,
weihte sich dem Opfertod,
gab er uns des Heils Gebot:
dass wir durch dein' Tauf' uns weih'n,
seines Opfers werth zu sein.
Edler Täufer,
Christ's Vorläufer!
Nimm uns freundlich an,
dort am Fluss Jordan.

(Während des Chorales und dessen Zwischenspielen entwickelt sich, vom Orchester begleitet, folgende pantomimische Scene.

In der letzten Reihe der Kirchstühle sitzen Eva und Magdalene; Walther V. Stolzing steht, in einiger Entfernung; zur Seite an eine Säule gelehnt, die Blicke auf Eva heftend. Eva kehrt sich wiederholt seitwärts nach dem Ritter um, und erwiedert seine bald dringend bald zärtlich durch Gebärden sich ausdrückenden Bitten und Bethereuerungen schüchtern und verschämt, doch seelendvoll und ermuthigend. Magdalene unterbricht sich öfters im Gesang, um Eva zu zupfen und zur Vorsicht zu mahnen—Als der Coral zu Ende ist, und, während eines längeren Orgelnachspieles die Gemeinde dem Hauptausgange sich zuwendet, um allmählich die Kirche zu verlassen, tritt Walther an die beiden

■ ACT I

(The scene represents the interior of St. Catherine's church, in oblique section; only the last few rows of pews in the nave are visible: the foreground is the open space before the choir; this is afterwards shut off by a black curtain from the nave.

As the curtain rises, the people are singing, to organ accompaniment, the last verse of a Chorale, which concludes afternoon service on the vigil of the Feast of St. John.)

HYMN OF THE CONGREGATION: When to thee our Saviour went
To receive thy Sacrament,
Ere His sacrifice divine,
We were giv'n salvation's sign,
That through Baptism we might prove Worthy of His death and love.
Interceder,
Christ's preceder!
Take us gently o'er
Unto Jordan's shore.

(During the Chorale and its interludes the following dumb-show takes place, accompanied by the orchestra:—

In the last pew are seated Eva and Magdalena: Walter V. Stolzing is leaning against the pillar at a little distance, his eyes fixed on Eva. Eva turns repeatedly towards the knight and answers his now importunate, now tender glances of entreaty and passion, shyly and modestly, but tenderly and encouragingly. Magdalena often breaks off her singing to give Eva a reproving nudge. When the hymn is ended and while, during a long postlude on the organ, the congregation is gradually leaving by the principal door, Walter advances hastily towards Eva and her companion, who have also risen from their seats and turned to go.)

Frauen, welche sich ebenfalls von ihren Sitzen erhoben haben und dem Ausgange sich zuwenden wollen, lebhaft heran.)
WALTHER: (leise, doch feurig zu Eva). Verweilt!—Ein Wort! Ein einzig Wort!	WALTER: (softly but ardently to Eva). Oh, stay!—One word, I beg you!
EVA: (sich rasch zu Magdelane wendend). Mein Brusttuch! Schau! Wohl liegt's im Ort?	EVA: (quickly turning to Magdalena). My kerchief! It is on the seat.
MAGDALENE: Vergesslich Kind! Nun heisse es: such'! (Sie kehrt nach den Sitzen zurück.)	MAGDALENA: Forgetful child! Now, here's a hunt! (goes back to the pew.)
WALTHER: Fräulein! Verzeiht der Sitte Bruch! Eines zu wissen, Eines zu fragen, was nicht müsst' ich zu brechen wagen? Ob Leben oder Tod? Ob Segen oder Fluch? Mit einem Worte sei mir's vertraut:— mein Fräulein, sagt—	WALTER: Maiden, forgive if I affront— One thing to ask you, one to discover, What rules would I not dare pass over! Is life for me or death?—Is bliss for me or bane? Let your answer be clothed in one word: Fair maiden, say—
MAGDALENE: (zurückkommend). Hier ist das Tuch.	MAGDALENA: (returning). Here it is again!
EVA: O weh! die Spange!	EVA: Alack! my scarf pin! . . .
MAGDALENE: Fiel sie wohl ab? (Sie geht, am Boden suchend, wieder zurück.)	MAGDALENA: Did it fall out? (She goes back, searching on the ground.)
WALTHER: Ob Licht und Lust, oder Nacht und Grab? Ob ich erfahr', wonach ich verlange, ob ich vernehme, wovor mir graut.— Mein Fräulein, sagt . . .	WALTER: Is it light and laughter, or gloom and doubt? Can I attain the aim I approach to, Or must I hear the syllable loathed— Fair maiden say—
MAGDALENE: (wieder zurückkommend). Da ist auch die Spange.— Komm', Kind! Nun hast du Spang' und Tuch. O weh! da vergass ich selbst mein Buch! (Sie kehrt wieder um.)	MAGDALENA: (returning again). I have found the brooch too! Come, child, here's pin and kerchief, look! Good lack! if I've not forgot my book! (goes back once more.)
WALTHER: Dies eine Wort, ihr sagt mir's nicht? Die Sylbe, die mein Urtheil spricht? Ja, oder: Nein!—ein flücht'ger Laut: mein Fräulein, sagt, seid ihr schon Braut?	WALTER: This single word, you do not speak it— This syllable that casts my lot? Say Yes or No—it is quickly mouthed: Fair maiden, say, are you betrothed?
MAGDALENE: (die bereits zurückgekommen, verneigt sich vor Walther). Sieh da, Herr Ritter? Wie sind wir hochgeehrt: mit Evchen's Schutze habt ihr euch gar beschwert? Darf den Besuch des Helden ich Meister Pogner melden?	MAGDALENA: (who has returned again, curtsies to Walter). Sir Knight, your servant! This is a compliment! Our Eva's escort Do you then represent? Pray, Master Pogner is it Your worship seeks to visit?
WALTHER: (leidenschaftlich). Betrat ich doch nie sein Haus!	WALTER: (sorrowfully). Would I never his house had seen!
MAGDALENE: Ei! Junker! Was sagt ihr da aus! In Nürnberg eben nur angekommen, war't ihr nicht freundlich aufgenommen?	MAGDALENA: Hey day sir! why, what do you mean? When to Nuremberg first you wended Was not his friendly hand extended?
Was Küch' und Keller, Schrein und Schrank euch bot, verdient' es keinen Dank?	The bed and board, the dishes, drinks He gave deserve some thanks, I think?
EVA: Gut Lenchen! Ach! das meint er ja nicht. Doch wohl von mir wünscht er Bericht— wie sag' ich's schnell?—Versteh' ich's doch kaum!— Mir ist, als wär' ich gar wie im Traum!— Er frägt,—ob ich schon Braut?	EVA: Good Lena! Pray! He did not mean it so: He is only eager to know— How shall I say?—I scarce comprehend— His words nearly suspend my senses He asks—about my choice!
MAGDALENE: (sich scheu umsehend). Hilf Gott! Sprich nicht so laut! Jetzt lass' uns nach Hause gehn; wenn uns die Leut' hier sehn!	MAGDALENA: (looking about apprehensively). Oh please! subdue your voice! Come directly home with me: Just suppose the folks should see!
WALTHER: Nicht eher, bis ich Alles weiss!	WALTER: Not yet, till I know my fate!
EVA: 's ist leer, die Leut' sind fort.	EVA: They're gone, there's no one near.
MAGDALENE: Drum eben wird mir heiss!— Herr Ritter, an andrem Ort! (David tritt aus der Sacristei ein und macht sich darüber her, dunkle Vorhänge, welche so angebracht sind, dass sie den Vordergrund der Bühne nach dem Kirchenschiff zu schräg abschliessen, aneinander zu ziehen.)	MAGDALENA: That's why I'm in a state! Sir knight, pray try elsewhere! (David enters from the sacristy and busies himself with drawing together dark curtains which are so disposed as to close off the foreground of the stage from the nave.)
WALTHER: Nein! Erst dies Wort!	WALTER: No, your reply!
EVA: (Magdalene haltend). Dies Wort?	EVA: (holding Magdalena). Reply?
MAGDALENE: (die sich bereits umgewendet, erblickt David, hält an und ruft zärtlich für sich). David? Ei! David hier?	MAGDALENA: (who has turned away, perceives David, pauses and calls tenderly aside). David! Why, can it be?
EVA: (drängend). Was sag' ich? Sag' du's mir!	EVA: (urgently). What answer? Speak for me!
MAGDALENE: (mit Zerstreutheit, öfters nach David sich umsehend). Herr Rilter, was ihr die Jungfer fragt, das ist so leichtlich nicht gesagt: fürwahr ist Evchen Pogner Braut—	MAGDALENA: (distracted in her attention, looking around repeatedly at David). Chevalier, what you ask of this maid To answer is no easy task: She is betrothed, you might expect—
EVA: (schnell unterbrechend). Doch hat noch Keiner den Bräut'gam erschaut.	EVA: (quickly interrupting). But none has seen the bridegroom elect.
MAGDALENE: Den Bräut'gam wohl noch Niemand kennt, bis morgen ihn das Gericht ernennt, das dem Meistersinger ertheilt den Preis—	MAGDALENA: The groom will not be known Until tomorrow by trial shown, When a Master Singer receives the prize—
EVA: (wie zuvor). Und selbst die Braut ihm reicht das Reis.	EVA: (as before). And my own hand his bay wreath ties.
WALTHER: Dem Meistersinger?	WALTER: A Master Singer?
EVA: (bang). Seid ihr das nicht?	EVA: (timidly). Are you not one?
WALTHER: Ein Werbgesang?	WALTER: A trial-song?
MAGDALENE: Vor Wettgericht.	MAGDALENA: Done before judges.
WALTHER: Den Preis gewinnt?	WALTER: Who wins the prize?
MAGDALENE: Wen die Meister meinen.	MAGDALENA: It is for them to choose one.
WALTHER: Die Braut dann wählt?	WALTER: The bride will choose—?

EVA: (sich vergessend). Euch, oder Keinen! (Walther wendet sich, in grosser Aufregung auf und abgehend, zur Seite.)	EVA: (forgetting herself). You, or else no one. (Walter turns aside in great perturbation, pacing up and down).
MAGDALENE: (sehr erschrocken). Was! Evchen! Evchen! Bist du von Sinnen?	MAGDALENA: (greatly shocked). Why, Eva! Eva! Are you insane?
EVA: Gut' Lene! hilf mir den Ritter gewinnen!	EVA: Good Lena! Help me to gain my lover!
MAGDALENE: Sah'st ihn doch gestern zum ersten Mal?	MAGDALENA: Yesterday first did you see his face.
EVA: Das eben schuf mir so schnelle Qual, das ich schon längst ihn im Bilde sah:— sag', trat er nicht ganz wie David nah'?	EVA: Kindled my love at so swift a pace, Having his portrait so often in sight. Say, is he not quite like David?
MAGDALENE: Bist du toll? Wie David?	MAGDALENA: Are you mad? Like David?
EVA: Wie David im Bild.	EVA: The picture, I mean.
MAGDALENE: Ach! meinst du den König mit der Harfen und langem Bart in der Meister Schild?	MAGDALENA: Oh! he with the harp and long flowing beard, As on the Master's seen escutcheon?
EVA: Nein! der, dess' Kiesel den Goliath warfen, das Schwert im Gurt, die Schleuder zur Hand, von lichten Locken das Haupt umstrahlt, wie ihn uns Meister Dürer gemalt.	EVA: Nay! he Goliath with pebble overthrowing, With sword at side and sling in hand, Light locks around his head like rays, As Master Albrecht Dürer portrays.
MAGDALENE: (laut sufzend). Ach, David! David!	MAGDALENA: (sighing loudly). Ah, David, David!
DAVID: (der hinausgegangen und jetzt wieder zurückkommt, ein Lineal im Gürtel und ein grosses Stück weisser Kreide an einer Schnur in der Hand schwenkend.) Da bin ich! Werr ruft?	DAVID: (who has gone out now returns with a rule stuck in his girdle and swinging in his hand a large piece of chalk tied to a string). Here am I! who calls?
MAGDALENE: Ach, David! Was ihr für Unglück schuft! (Für sich.) Der liebe Schelm! wüsst' er's noch nicht? (Laut.) Ei, seht! da hat er uns gar verschlossen?	MAGDALENA: Ah, David! what ill befalls through you! (to himself.) The darling rogue! he know it too! (aloud.) Why, look! he's shut us all up inside here!
DAVID: (zärlich au Magdalene). In's Herz euch allein!	DAVID: (tenderly to Magdalena). But you in my heart!
MAGDALENE: (bei Seite). Das treue Gesicht!— (Laut.) Mein sagt! Was treibt ihr für Possen?	MAGDALENA: (aside). His face is so true! (aloud.) Come say! what frolic's to be tried here?
DAVID: Behüt es; Possen? Gar ernste Ding'! Für die Meister heir richt' ich den Ring.	DAVID: Forbid it! Frolic? A serious thing! For the Masters I'm preparing the ring.
MAGDALENE: Wie? Gäb' es ein Singen?	MAGDALENA: What! Will there be singing?
DAVID: Nur Freiung heut': der Lehrling wird da losgesprochen; der nichts wider die Tabulatur verbrochen; Meister wird, wen die Prob' nicht reu't.	DAVID: A mere trial: That Prentice wins his enfranchisement Who never gained for breach of the rules chastisement; He who passes is Master here.

MAGDALENE: Da wär' der Ritter ja am rechten Ort.— Jetzt, Evchen, komm', wir müssen fort.	MAGDALENA: Then the knight has dropped on the proper spot.— Now, Eva, come, we ought to trot.
WALTHER: (schnell sich zu den Frauen wendend). Zu Meister Pogner lasst mich euch geleiten.	WALTER: (quickly turning to them). To Master Pogner let me escort you.
MAGDALENE: Erwartet den hier: er ist bald da. Wollt ihr euch Evchen's Hand erstreiten, rückt Ort und Zeit das Glück euch nah.' (Zwei Lehrbuben kommen dazu und tragen Bänke.) Jetzt eilig von hinnen!	MAGDALENA: Await his approach; he'll be here soon. If to win our Eva you seek, Both time and place are opportune. (The Prentices enter bearing benches.) Quick! bid us adieu!
WALTHER: Was soll ich beginnen?	WALTER: What must I do?
MAGDALENE: Lasst David euch lehren die Freiung begehren.— Davidchen, hör', mein lieber Gesell, den Ritter bewahr' hier wohl zur Stell'! Was Fein's aus der Küch' bewahr' ich für dich: und morgen begehr' du noch dreister, wird heut' der Junker hier Meister. (Sie drängt fort.)	MAGDALENA: Let David supply all The facts of the trial.— David, my dear, just heed what I say! You must induce Sir Walter to stay. I'll sweep the larder and Keep the best for you! Tomorrow rewards shall fall faster If this young knight is made Master. (She hurries towards the door.)
EVA: (zu Walther). Sch' ich euch wieder?	EVA: (to Walter). When shall I see you?
WALTHER: (feurig). Heut' Abend, gewiss!— Was ich will wagen, wie könnt' ich's sagen? Neu ist mein Herz, neu mein Sinn, neu ist mir Alles, was ich beginn'. Eines nur weiss ich, Eines begreif' ich: nit allen Sinnen euch zu gewinnen! Ist's mit dem Schwert nicht, muss es gelingen, gilt es als Meister euch zu ersingen Für euch Gut und Blut! Für euch Dichter's heil'ger Muth!	WALTER: (ardently). This evening, for sure! What use declaring How great my daring? New is my heart, new my mind, New to my senses is all I find, One thing I spring to, One thing I cling to: Sustaining the hours Of winning your hand Though to obtain you my sword avails not, As Master Singer surely I'll not fail. For you gold untold! For you, Poet's courage bold!
EVA: (mit grosser Wärme.) Mein Herz, sel'ger Gluth, für euch liebesheil'ge Huth!	EVA: (with great warmth). My heart's secret fold For you Loving heed will hold!
MAGDALENE: Schnell heim, sonst geht's nicht gut:	MAGDALENA: Quick home, or I shall scold!
DAVID: (Walther messend). Gleich Meister? Oho? viel Muth! (Magdalene zieht Eva rasch durch die Vorhänge fort.) (Walther hat sich, aufgeregt und brütend, in einem erhöhten, kathederartigen Lehnstuhl geworfen, welchen zuvor zwei Lehrbuben, von der Wand ab, mehr nach der Mitte zu gerückt hatten.) (Noch mehrere Lehrbuben sind eingetreten: sie tragen und richten Bänke, und bereiten Alles (nach der unten folgenden Angabe) zur Sitzung der Meistersinger vor.)	DAVID: (measuring Walter). A Master! Oho! you're bold! (Magdalena pulls Eva quickly away through the curtains.) (Walter, disturbed and brooding, has thrown himself upon a raised ecclesiastical armchair which two Prentices had just moved away from the wall to the middle of the stage.) (More Prentices enter: they bring and arrange benches and prepare everything (during the following dialogue) for the sitting of the Master Singers.)
ERSTER LEHRBUBE: David, was stehst?	FIRST PRENTICE: David, why skulk?

ZWEITER LEHRBUBE: Grief' an's Werk!

DRITTER LEHRBUBE: Hilf uns richten das Gemerk!

DAVID: Zu eifrigst war ich vor euch allen: nun schafft für euch; hab' ander Gefallen!

ZWEITER LEHRBUBE: Was der sich dünkt!

DRITTER LEHRBUBE: Der Lehrling Muster!

ERSTER LEHRBUBE: Das macht, weil sein Meister ein Schuster.

DRITTER LEHRBUBE: Beim Leisten sitzt er mit der Feder.

ZWEITER LEHRBUBE: Beim dichten mit Draht und Pfriem.

ERSTER LEHRBUBE: Sein' Verse schreibt er auf rothes Leder.

DRITTER LEHRBUBE: (mit der entsprechenden Gebärde). Das, dächt' ich, gerbten wir ihm!
(Sie machen sich lachend an die fernere Herrichtung.)

DAVID: (nachdem er den sinnenden Ritter eine Weile trachtet, ruft sehr stark:) "Fanget an!"

WALTHER: (verwundert aufblickend). Was soll's?

DAVID: (noch stärker). "Fanget an!"—So ruft der "Merker," nun sollt ihr singen:—wisst ihr das nicht?

WALTHER: Wer ist der Merker?

DAVID: Wisst ihr das nicht?
War't ihr doch nie bei 'nem Sing-Gericht?

WALTHER: Noch nie, wo die Richter Handwerker.

DAVID: Seid ihr ein "Dichter?"

WALTHER: Wär ich's doch!

DAVID: Waret ihr "Singer?"

WALTHER: Wüsst' ich's noch?

DAVID: Doch "Schulfreund" war't ihr, und Schüler zuvor?

WALTHER: Das klingt mir alles fremd vor'm Ohr.

DAVID: Und so grad'hin wollt ihr Meister werden?

WALTHER: Wie machte das so grosse Beschwerden?

DAVID: O Lene! Lene!

WALTHER: Wie ihr doch thut!

DAVID: O Magdalene!

WALTHER: Rathet mir gut!

DAVID: Mein Herr! der Singer Meister-Schlag gewinnt sich nicht in einem Tag.
In Nüremberg der grösste Meister, mich lert die Kunst Hans Sachs;
schon voll ein Jahr mich unterweis't er, dass ich als Schüler wachs'.
Schuhmacherei und Poeterei, die lern' ich da all einerlei:

